START

Microfilmed By:

NORTHEAST DOCUMENT
CONSERVATION CENTER
Andover, MA 01810

July 1994

Camera Operator:
John Sullivan

MASTER NEGATIVE NUMBER:
BSO-56-051

MICROFILMED
August 1993 - April 1994

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA SCRAPBOOK MICROFILMING PROJECT

Funded in part by

THE NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR THE HUMANITIES

Grant No. PS-20709-93

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA MICROFILMING PROJECT

A Cooperative Project Between the Boston Symphony Orchestra Archives and the Boston Public Library (August 1993 - April 1994)

The Microfilming Project incorporates two collections of scrapbooks housed in two separate repositories. The first set of scrapbooks (80 volumes) resides within the Allen A. Brown Collection of the Boston Public Library (BPL) Music Department. Their call number is M.125.5. The second set of scrapbooks (132 volumes) resides within the Press Clippings collection of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (BSO) Archives. They have the designation Pres 56.

The BPL scrapbooks begin with the founding of the BSO in 1881 and continue, through 79 seasons, to 1960. Articles consist mainly of reviews and feature stories from Boston and New York newspapers. Occasionally, magazine articles and press releases are also included. The scrapbooks cover most aspects of the BSO.

The BSO scrapbooks run from 1889, the Orchestra's 9th season, to 1973. In addition to local reviews and features, the volumes contain articles culled from national and international publications. The scrapbooks document, in detail, all aspects of the BSO: The Symphony Orchestra (including subscription concerts, tours, and trips), the Boston Pops, the Tanglewood Festival, the Tanglewood Music Center, and Symphony Hall.

The two sets of scrapbooks have been filmed as two separate entities. Researchers wanting to look at specific seasons or subjects must examine both sets of films to ensure full coverage.

The scrapbooks do not represent the complete holdings of either location on the subject of the BSO.

Requests for positive microfilm copies of individual rolls, or of film sets, should be directed to the respective repository:

Music Department
Boston Public Library
Post Office Box 286
Boston, MA 02117

Boston Symphony Orchestra Archives
Symphony Hall
Boston, MA 02115

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA SCRAPBOOKS

1889 - 1973

132 VOLUMES

Source: Boston Symphony Orchestra Archives

FINDING AID

Boston Symphony Orchestra Scrapbooks
(Series 56, Sub-Series 1)

Source: Press Office (Office of the Public Relations Director)

The BSO scrapbooks comprise part of one series in the BSO Archives. Series 56, Press Clippings, is divided by format into 3 sub-series: 1) Scrapbooks, 1889-1973 (132 volumes); 2) Loose Clippings, 1931-1991 (9 record cartons); and 3) Oversize Newspapers and Journals, 1919-1979 (1 oversize box). Each sub-series is arranged chronologically.

The scrapbooks contain concert notices and reviews, record reviews, and feature articles. Early scrapbooks may also contain programs, tickets, and subscription orders. Materials are organized by concert season into the following categories: BSO (including tours); Kneisel Quartet (and later Boston Symphony Chamber Players); Boston Pops (referred to in early years as Promenade concerts); and Tanglewood (including the Tanglewood Music Center, the Tanglewood Festival, Tanglewood-on-Parade, and the Fromm Festival of Contemporary Music).

Reviews and articles cover a wide range of subjects: Founder H.L. Higginson; BSO conductors, players, trustees, and other personnel; guest artists and composers; BSO and Pops performances and recordings; U.S. and overseas tours; BSO/Cecilia Society joint performances; open rehearsals; and special events connected to anniversary celebrations and fundraising.

Feature stories document changes in the size, composition, and location of the orchestra. Topics include the hiring of women and minorities; the unionization of players; controversies (such as the internment of conductor Karl Muck during World War II); the sale of the old Music Hall; and the construction of Symphony Hall and other structures (such as the Koussevitsky Music Shed at Tanglewood).

Reproductions of the materials in the collection may not be made without permission from the Boston Symphony Orchestra Archives.

GUIDE TO CONTENTS

Institution: BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Series Name: PRESS CLIPPINGS
Series Number: 56
Series Dates: 1889-1991

Sub-series Name: SCRAPBOOKS
Sub-series Number: 1
Sub-series Dates: 1889-1973

VOLUME LISTING

VOL	TITLE	DATES
1	BSO	1889-1890
2	BSO Kneisel Quartet	1890-1891
3	BSO	1891-1892
4	Promenade (Pops)	1892
5	BSO Kneisel Quartet	1892-1893
6	BSO Kneisel Quartet	1893-1894
7	BSO Kneisel Quartet	1894-1895
8	BSO	1895-1896
9	Promenade (Pops)	1895-1896
10	BSO	1896-1897
11	BSO	1897-1898
12	Promenade (Pops)	1897-1898
13	BSO	1898-1899
14	BSO	1899-1900
15	Pops	1899-1900
16	BSO	1900-1901
17	BSO	1901-1902
18	Pops	1901-1903
19	BSO	1902-1903
20	BSO	1903-1904
21	BSO	1904-1905
22	Pops	1904-1905
23	BSO	1905-1906
24	BSO	1906-1907
25	BSO	1907-1908
26	BSO	1908-1909
27	BSO Pops	1909-1910
28	BSO Pops	1910-1911
29	BSO Advertisements	1910-1911
30	BSO Pops	1911-1912
31	BSO Pops	1912-1913
32	BSO Pops	1913-1914
33	BSO Pops	1914-1915
34	BSO Pops	1915-1916
35	BSO Pops	1916-1917
36	BSO Pops	1917-1918
37	Karl Muck	1918
38	BSO Pops	1918-1919
39	BSO Pops	1919-1920
40	BSO Advertisements	1919-1920
41	BSO Pops	1920-1921
42	BSO Pops	1921-1922
43	BSO BSO Advertisements Pops Advertisements	1922-1923
44	BSO Pops	1922-1924
45	BSO Pops	1924
46	BSO BSO Advertisements Pops Advertisements	1924-1926
47	BSO Pops	1925-1926
48	BSO Advertisements Pops Advertisements	1926-1927
49	BSO Pops	1926-1928
50	BSO	1928
51	BSO Pops	1928-1929
52	BSO Pops U.S. Tour	1929-1930
53	BSO	1930-1931
54	BSO Pops	1931-1932
55	BSO Pops	1932-1933
56	BSO	1933-1934
57	BSO	1934-1935
58	BSO	1935-1936
59	BSO	1936-1937

VOL	TITLE	DATES
60	Pops
	Tanglewood	1936-1937
61	BSO	1937
62	BSO	1937-1938
63	Pops
	Tanglewood	1938
64	BSO	1938-1939
65	Pops
	Tanglewood	1939
66	BSO	1939-1940
67	Tanglewood	1939-1941
68	BSO
	Pops	1940
69	BSO	1940-1941
70	Tanglewood	1940-1944
71	BSO	1941-1942
72	BSO	1942-1943
73	BSO	1943-1944
74	BSO
	Pops
	Tanglewood	1944-1945
75	BSO
	Pops
	Tanglewood	1945-1946
76	BSO
	Pops
	Tanglewood	1946-1947
77	Tanglewood	1947-1948
78	BSO	1947-1949
79	Tanglewood	1949-1950
80	BSO	1949-1951
81	Tanglewood	1950-1951
82	BSO
	Pops	1951-1952
83	BSO
	Pops	1952-1953
84	Tanglewood	1952-1953
85	BSO	1953-1955
86	Tanglewood	1953-1954
87	Tanglewood	1954-1955
88	BSO
	Pops	1955-1956
89	Tanglewood	1955-1956
90	Tanglewood	1955-1956
91	European Tour	1956
92	European Tour	1956-1957
93	BSO
	Pops	1956-1957
94	Tanglewood	1957
95	BSO	1957-1958
96	BSO
	Pops	1958-1959
97	BSO	1958-1959
98	Tanglewood	1958-1959
99	Tanglewood	1959
100	BSO
	Pops	1959-1960
101	Tanglewood	1959-1960
102	Far Eastern Tour	1959-1960
103	BSO
	Pops	1960-1961
104	Tanglewood	1961
105	BSO
	Pops	1961-1962
106	Tanglewood	1962
107	BSO
	Pops	1962-1963
108	Tanglewood	1963
109	BSO
	Pops	1963-1964
110	Tanglewood	1963-1964
111	BSO
	Pops	1964-1966
112	Tanglewood	1965
113	BSO 85th Anniversary	1965
114	BSO
	Pops	1965-1966
115	Tanglewood	1966
116	BSO
	Pops	1966-1967
117	Tanglewood	1967
118	BSO
	Pops	1967-1968
119	Tanglewood	1968-1969
120	BSO
	Pops	1968-1969
121	Tanglewood	1969
122	BSO
	Pops	1969-1970
123	Tanglewood	1970
124	BSO
	Pops	1970-1971
125	Tanglewood	1971
126	BSO
	Pops	1971-1972
127	European Tour	1970-1971
128	European Tour	1971
129	Tanglewood	1972
130	BSO
	Pops	1972-1973
131	Tanglewood	1973
132	BSO
	Pops	1973-1974

MATERIALS NOT FILMED

SUB-SERIES NUMBER	SUB-SERIES NAME	SUB-SERIES DATES
2	Loose Clippings	1931-1991
3	Oversize Newspapers and Journals	1919-1979

COPYRIGHT STATEMENT

The copyright law of the Unites States - Title 17, United States Code - concerns the making of photocopies or other reproductions of copyrighted material.

Under certain conditions specified in the law, libraries and archives are authorized to furnish a photocopy or other reproduction. One of these specified conditions is that the photocopy or other reproduction is not to be "used for any purpose other than private study, scholarship, or research." If a user makes a request for, or later uses, a photocopy or reproduction for purposes in excess of "fair use," that user may be liable for copyright infringement.

This institution reserves the right to refuse to accept a copy order if, in its judgment, fulfillment of the order would involve violation of the copy-right law.

TECHNICAL DATA

IMAGE PLACEMENT: [✓ IA] IB IIA IIB

REDUCTION RATIO: 14X

FILM STOCK:

Kodak
IMAGELINK™ HQ
MICROFILM
35 mm x 30.5 m · 100 ft
Sp 425
DEVELOP BEFORE 05/1996
1461-0341-012-06
CAT 840 3594
04-08

REEL 51

Volume 87

Tanglewood

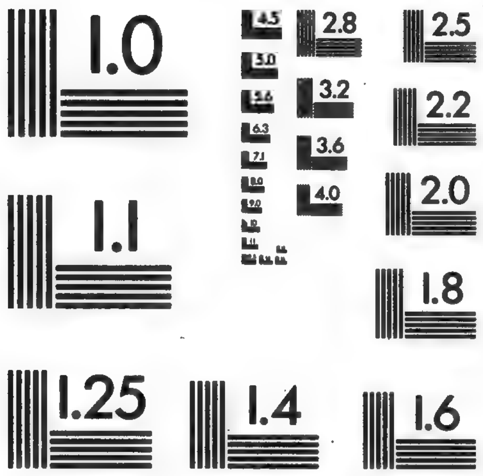
1954 - 1955

PM-MGP 13"x18"
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm



ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

2.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

2.5 mm

A5

A4

A3

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P

1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

MULTIPLE EXPOSURES
DUE TO COLOR VARIATIONS AND OVERLAPPING MATERIAL

VOLUME 87

Tanglewood

1954 - 1955

TANGLEWOOD

1954-5 (early)

NATIONAL FLAT BACK SCRAP BOOKS

NATIONAL Made in U.S.A.

FULL DUCK COVER, MANILA PAPER

Without Index, Ruling, Paging or Title

NUMBER	THICKNESS	SIZE
1032	72 Leaves	12⅝ × 10⅛
1033	72 Leaves	15 × 10
1034	100 Leaves	15 × 10
1036	90 Leaves	16 × 11⅝
1038	150 Leaves	16 × 11⅝
1039	90 Leaves	18 × 13
1041	150 Leaves	18 × 13
1042	150 Leaves	25 × 20

To duplicate this book Order Number indicated by arrow

Eagle - August 9

Brenda Lewis, Broadway Star, To Make Tanglewood Debut

BSO To Honor Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith and Other Berkshire Symphonic Festival Trustees at Friday Night's Benefit

Brenda Lewis

TANGLEWOOD—Arthur Fiedler, who will direct the Boston Pops Orchestra in a typical pops program at Tanglewood on Parade Friday night in the Music Shed, will arrive in Lenox Wednesday from San Francisco, and will be the guest of Mrs. Isabel Whipple of Cliffwood St., Lenox.

Tickets Going Well

The box office at Tanglewood reports a good advance sale of tickets for the event which is held annually for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. Holders of box seat tickets and reserved seats will be entitled to attend a performance of opera in the formal gardens. Those buying general admission tickets will not be admitted to the grounds until the demonstrations start at 6. Included in the demonstrations will be the Berkshire Music Center's student symphony orchestra, chorus, chamber music and opera departments as well as the Tanglewood Study Group.

Before the Pops concert opens after intermission, the Boston Symphony Orchestra will honor the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc., in recognition of the 20th anniversary of the Festival, founded in 1934 by the Berkshire organization, headed by Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Stockbridge.

To Present Scroll

Dr. Lewis Perry, honorary chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, will present Miss Robinson Smith a leather scroll, printed by Miss June Kimball, art critic of The Eagle. The document, from the Boston Symphony, will thank Miss Robinson Smith, "as leader of the original enterprise and the trustees of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc,, for their vision and efforts."

In addition to the Festival president, other members of the board of trustees invited by Henry B. Cabot, president of the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, to the ceremony are: Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Dwight of Stockbridge, Mr. and Mrs. William Felton Barrett of Great Barrington, Dr. and Mrs. James Phinney Baxter III and Prof. and Mrs. Philip Marshall Brown of Williamstown, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Crane of Dalton, Mr. and Mrs. Laurence R. Connor of Pittsfield, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Franz and Mrs. Charles C. Griswold of Stockbridge, Mrs. John Bross Lloyd of Lee, Mrs. John C. Lynch of Stockbridge, Mrs. Arthur F. Schermerhorn of Lenox, Mr. and Mrs. Myron Taylor of Locust Valley, L.I., Mr. and Mrs. Robert K. Wheeler of Great Barrington.

Schippers To Conduct

In addition to the Pops concert, other features on the program will be the appearances of Brenda Lewis, Broadway star, who will sing with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Thomas Schippers conducting.

Star of Broadway's recent musical, "The Girl in Pink Tights," Miss Lewis also starred in "The Merry Widow" with Jan Kiepura, "Secret du Suzanne," as Birdie in Marc Blitzstein's opera, "Regina," and toured the nation in the Strauss operetta "The Gypsy Baron."

Medicine and not music was to be Miss Lewis' career when she enrolled at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia, but after a short apprenticeship with the Philadelphia Opera Company she made her debut as the Marshallin in "Der Rosenkavalier." Although only 19 she received great critical acclaim and moved on to Broadway, opera and concert engagements.

During one season she sang six different leading opera roles in Rio de Janeiro, with the Pro Arte Opera Company in Cuba, and with the Central City Opera Festival. An honorary citizen of Montreal because of her successive appearances there in opera, Miss Lewis has also starred in light opera with the St. Louis Municipal Opera Company and summer music theaters in Kansas City, Dallas, Memphis, Birmingham and Chicago.

When she appears with Mr. Schippers and the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Miss Lewis will sing the final scene from Richard Strauss' "Salomé" which she has sung with the New York City Opera Company at Manhattan's City Center.

Miss Lewis, who successfully combines a busy professional career with running a home and rearing a family in New Rochelle, N.Y., will make her first appearance at Tanglewood at the gala concert. In addition to the final scene from "Salomé," the first half of the program includes Bizet's Symphony in C.

Music

Boston Orchestra at Best In Sunday Afternoon Concert

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE BOSTON Symphony Orchestra gave one of its eloquent performances yesterday afternoon in the great Shed at Tanglewood in the next to last weekend of the Berkshire Festival. Charles Munch, the musical director of the orchestra, molded his program in one of his most expressive appearances on that stage. The program began with Gluck's solemn overture to "Alceste" and then proceeded to the Beethoven violin concerto in which Zino Francescatti was the soloist. Munch gave the long introduction a spaciousness which augured and prepared for the magnificence of Francescatti's performance.

Receding to an ascetic classicism and simplicity after the glamorous cadenza the soloist was profoundly impressive. He achieved the same effectiveness in the short statement in the slow movement which follows the many embellishments which open that section. But the support he received from the orchestra under Munch was exceptional. The tuttis had a substance and understanding rarely revealed in this concerto.

The Brahms second symphony also benefited from the same majestic force. Munch took an unhurried tempo, one which permitted him to expand on many episodes and details, one which gave meaning to Brahms' admonition "ma non troppo." He lingered fondly whenever possible in the first three movements and only indulged in unbridled reckless spirit in the last movement. It is no more possible to set a metronome on this Brahms and draw from it all that it contains than it is possible to set a speedometer at a constant speed through a beautiful country side and enjoy all the beauty and the views as they come into sight. We like to dwell on the choice scenery in both instances. Munch did it in one of his most expansive moods.

• • •

SATURDAY NIGHT the whole program was devoted to less often heard Berlioz: the Royal Hunt and Storm from "The Trojans," "Summer Nights" for soprano and orchestra in which Eleanor Steber was the soloist, and the "Te Deum" for three choruses, orchestra with organ and tenor. [illegible] David Poleri was the soloist.

The participants in the "Te Deum" were the most numerous ever used in the Shed. The Festival chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke De Varon, was augmented by a children's chorus of 40 boys from Camp Mah-Kee-Nac and a chorus of 40 girls from Indian Hill Music Workshop. The decibels produced in the concluding total tone production must have exceeded anything hitherto reached at Tanglewood but it was what Munch asked and the response was complete.

A lot of listening Saturday night rewarded the audience with nuggets of value and precious assaying but there were stretches during the evening when the music was not high above mediocre, no matter how strenuously Munch exhorted the orchestra. The organ and orchestra alternate in the introduction with stentorian proclamations of a single chord. The ensuing six sections are of varying interest. Mr. Polieri did not have his only solo until the fifth, "Te ergo quaesumus" when his particular timbre was a pleasant contrast and relief to the surrounding tonal volume.

Miss Steber was most appreciated in those songs where the dramatic content of the music did not persuade her to dissipate her voice in operatic mannerisms. "Le spectre de la rose" and "Sur les lagunes" called for sustained tone, often in Miss Steber's low registers, of which she has ample resources. She used her voice with more telling effect here and she was enthusiastically recalled.

---

left for an alibi . . . We'll go along with the Lenox Selectmen in their plea for proper dress on the town streets until and if the '[illegible]' Di[illegible] are adopted by Tanglewood visitors [illegible] book, shorts and [illegible]ters [illegible]ble to flour bags . . . The jump in Tanglewood attendance in the past two weeks is considered by the analysts as indicating that a lot of people haven't gotten the word that the "big" season is now six weeks long . . . •

Motel Guest Sought As 'Sheet Snatcher'

State p[illegible] are [illegible]ng for a Rhode Isl[illegible] man w[illegible] charged with stealing two be[illegible] during a brief Berk[illegible] sta[illegible] Lenox motel.

A warrant names Manuel Dias of Pawtucket [illegible] the suspect in the lost linen c[illegible] He was believed to have been attending [illegible] at Tanglewood.

Pawtucket authorities were contacted but failed to shed any light on the whereabouts of the alleged sheet snatcher.

BUFFALO, N. Y.
NEWS
JUL 23 1954

Making Stage Debut In Tanglewood Opera

EVE RUBIN

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 23. — Nine-year-old Eve Rubin, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Mitchell I. Rubin, 242 Depew Ave., Buffalo, will make her stage debut in the role of Beth, the younger daughter, in Aaron Copland's opera, "The Tender Land." The opera will have its New England premiere Aug. 2 and 3 at the Berkshire Music Center here.

The Rubin family is summering at Stockbridge Bowl, Mass.

The Stebers Enjoy an Afternoon Concert

Manos

Eleanor Steber, Metropolitan Opera soprano, who was the soloist Saturday night with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, took members of her family to yesterday afternoon's Festival concert in the Music Shed. In front row of Miss Steber's box are her nephews, William, George and Charles Steber; second row, left to right, Mrs. William Steber Jr., Miss Steber and the soloist's mother, Mrs. William Steber; standing, Miss Steber's brother and her father.

[2]

Music

Carol Honors Kreisler at Lenox Concert

By SALLY WILLEKE

LAST EVENING the Lenox Library Assn. presented Norman Carol, violinist, at Sedgwick Hall, Lenox, in a recital honoring the distinguished violinist Fritz Kreisler. Mr. Carol chose his program completely from compositions and transcriptions by Kreisler, whose great [illegible] inspired this special tribute.

THE [illegible] opened with "Variations [illegible] Theme by Corelli" proj[illegible] classic vein, the sup[illegible] of the formidable [illegible] stops and chord passages displaying secure left hand technique and authoritative bowing. In the Mazurka, a transcription from Chopin, and the celebrated Melodie from Gluck's opera "Orpheus," there was rich warmth of tone, especially in the Gluck with its poignant lament "I have lost my Eurydice." De Falla's Danse Espagnole offered an abundant opportunity to reveal Mr. Carol's fine technical equipment. But, alas, the resonance of the auditorium somewhat blurred and clouded the brilliance of his performance in several instances. This difficulty he surmounted, as well as the problem of the humid atmosphere, always unfriendly to string instruments, for he invested the de Falla with gay insouciance and irresistible sparkle that took the audience by storm.

* * *

A GROUP of beloved Kreisler favorites made up the second half of the concert, "The Old Refrain," "Schon Rosmarin," "Liebesfreud," "Liebeslied," and "Tambourin Chinois." These melodies pour out the spirit of old Vienna. Here the young artist dedicated himself with telling effect to recreating the compelling warmth, the infectious gaiety and the effervescence of the music. The audience voiced its approval and enjoyment with enthusiastic applause, demanding many recalls and two encores, "Gavotte" and "Praeludium" by Bach. Abba Bogin at the piano gave sensitive accompaniments.

Koussevitzky Memorial Fund Committee Increases Goal

$15,000 Is Aim For Scholarships To Tanglewood Center

A committee of 21 Berkshire County residents who have organized to create a Koussevitzky memorial fund yesterday increased the goal from $5,000 to $15,000.

Meeting at a Dutch-treat luncheon at the Country Club of Pittsfield, the committee decided on the increase upon the advice of Leonard Bernstein's lawyer. Income from the $15,000 fund will provide an annual full scholarship for conductors at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood.

A total of $3,195 already has been realized from 85 donors, and letters will be sent out asking for contributions. All interested persons are invited to send checks to Paul K. Fodder of the Agricultural National Bank. Pittsfield

Instigated by Mrs. Crane

Sparked by Mrs. William M. Crane of Richmond, the committee was formed at a meeting at the home of Mrs. Shaun Kelly, also of Richmond, and is unique in that it has no chairman.

Mrs. Crane's interest in the Boston Symphony Orchestra [illegible] back to 1897, when she had her first season ticket to the Boston concerts. Since then, she has been a subscriber in Boston, [illegible] and Lenox. She saw Koussevitzky for the first time [illegible] 1924, at the Paris Opera House. Soon after that, he was suggested as BSO conductor in which capacity he served for a quarter of a century. The conductor's scholarship is to honor the memory of Koussevitzky and to further the work he loved.

[illegible] donors' lists for the Koussevitzky memorial fund at a meeting yesterday at the Cou[illegible] Club of Pittsfield are Mrs. Shaun Kelly of Richmond, Mrs. John H. Rice and Mrs. William M. Crane of Richmond. Mrs. Kelly has collected $1,000 of the $3,195 already realized toward the $15,000 goal. Mrs. Rice's interest in the BSO dates back to her great-grandfather, William Fobes Gavel of Salem, a stockbroker and mathematician who played the flute with BSO members at musical evenings at his home. Idea for the fund was sparked by Mrs. Crane. Mrs. Rice is a violinist, and Mrs. Kelly a pianist.

SCHOLARSHIP CHECK is signed by [illegible] H. Rice, a member of the Koussevitzky memorial fund committee, at right, while Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky and Norman Carol, violinist, look on. The $5,000 check, to establish a conductor's scholarship at Tanglewood, was presented to Mrs. Koussevitzky during last night's concert by Mr. Carol at Sedgwick Hall.

Hanover Sun
Aug. 7

With an anticipated attendance of 120,000 at its twenty-four concerts — six chamber music programs by visiting ensembles and eighteen concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra — an expected 10,000 next Friday at Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center (the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra); and a predicted 45,000 patrons at the 40-odd concerts and demonstrations by various departments of the school, the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., concludes its 1954 schedule in the coming week. 175,000 persons will have helped shatter records, and prove the popularity of Music Director Charles Munch's decision this year to enlarge the annual summer Festival in the hills of western Massachusetts within the scope of its previous six-week framework.

The sixth and final week of Festival concerts comprises a recital by Zino Francescatti, violinist, of Brahms and Bach sonatas, on Wednesday evening in the Theater-Concert Hall; Jean Morel conducting the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of [illegible], Mozart, Ravel and Richard Strauss, on Thursday evening in the Theater-Concert Hall; a symphonic program of works by Brahms, Piston, Ravel and Saint-Saens, with Charles Munch conducting the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, on Saturday evening in the Music Shed; and Mr. Munch leading the Boston Symphony in Hector Berlioz' massive "Requiem," in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, with David Poleri, tenor, and chorus, Sunday in the Music Shed.

HICKORY, N. C.
RECORD
JUL 24 1954

Grandfather Home Day Scheduled On August 8

The annual Grandfather Home Day at Rumple Memorial Presbyterian church at Blowing Rock is scheduled to open this year at 11 o'clock, Sunday morning, August 8, when a group of accomplished artists will present a program of sacred music for the benefit of Grandfather Home for Children at Banner Elk.

As he has done for many years, David Ovens of Charlotte, who is spending the summer at Blowing Rock, has handled arrangements for this event and will be in charge of the program

Mr. Ovens describes this year's artists as stars who will make this the finest program given in the history of Grandfather Home Day. There are four young singers with excellent voices and training who have been heard several times at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Massachusetts. They are: Rosalind Elias (lower right), Robert Rue, John McCollum (lower left), and Saramae Endich (upper left). Stuart Ross, a brilliant accompanist and soloist, will be on the program for the seventh year. The sixth artist will be Miss Margaret Vance of Blowing Rock, talented organist.

Long Record of Service

Grandfather Home is operated by the Edgar Tufts Memorial Association, which is headed by the Rev. Fletcher Nelson as president. It was established in the early days of this century and has a long record of service in behalf of orphaned children. One hundred boys and girls live at the Home.

Blowing Rock Day for the institution was begun 36 years ago and was, at first, directed by the late Dr. James I. Vance, pastor of First Presbyterian Church of Nashville, Tennessee. After his death, Mr. Ovens took over the responsibility of the day and he has handled it with such success that Grandfather Home has received each year a substantial amount of money for use in its operations. Other units operated by the Edgar Tufts Memorial Association are Lees-McRae College and Grace Hospital, also at Banner Elk.

Miss Elias has studied in Rome and sung at La Scala in Milan, the San Carol Opera House in Naples, and the May Festival in Florence. She was a winner of the Metropolitan auditions of the air and will sing at the Met in the 1954-55 season.

Wide Experience

Mr. Rue's experience includes appearances with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, the role of Nick Shadow in "The Rake's Progress" conducted by Stravinsky in Boston, and that of the Count in the Western Hemisphere premiere of Strauss' opera, "Capriccio."

Mr. McCollum received approval of critics after his New York recital in Town Hall and has sung leading roles with the New York Philharmonic, Boston Symphony New York Oratorio Society, and the Handel and Haydn Society of Boston.

Miss Endich is described by Mr. Ovens as one of the most important discoveries of the Berkshire Music Festival, who has won real success in opera and in concert with the Boston Symphony.

Larry Walker of Charlotte will be master of ceremonies for the concert which the artists will present at the Blowing Rock Country Club a 9 o'clock, Friday night, August 6, for the benefit of Blowing Rock hospital.

DAYTON, OHIO
NEWS
JUL 25 1954

"PRINCE CHARMING" WAKES FIDDLE
Zino Francescatti Is An Expert

Francescatti Says Violin Is Like Sleeping Beauty

By W. G. ROGERS

NEW YORK, July 24.—(AP)—"A violin is like the fairy-tale leeping Beauty; it needs a Prince harming to wake it up."

So said Zino Francescatti by way f explaining that there's somehing more to a Stradivarius than tradivarius. Mrs. Francescatti ut it in her words:

"A violin is like a wine: if it's ood at the start, it's still better fter aging."

Monsieur and Madame, both beng violinists, speak with equal uthority, though Mrs. Francescatt no longer plays concerts. "One n the family is enough," she says.

Her husband is one of the best waker uppers of violins, and he has been hailed by the experts here and abroad as a splendid Prince Charming in this professional field.

* * *

ONE OF HIS last official acts, as e quit the concert platform for a ong summer-time rest in his home n the Berkshires, in Monterey, Mass., was to sit for this interview. 'Sit," however, is hardly the word for this distinguished artist who, being southern as well as French, may sit but does not often sit still. And his fingers are agile from talking, I am sure, no less than from fingering the violin.

He plays the "Hart" Stradivarius. Some months ago he was invited to Genoa to play the Stradivarius which Paganini—teacher of the teacher of Francescatti's father—had bequeathed to the Italian city. It was long unused, and needed working in:

"It had dried up, as a pair of shoes left in a closet dries up."

* * *

STARTING from that, Francescatti discussed that ever popular and mystifying subject: the secret of the greatness of a violin.

"Some people think it's the varnish, or they call it Stradivarius. But the fact is, in my opinion, that a violin becomes good after it is played on by good violinists. Note that the great violins usually bear the name of the great violinists who used them.

"Just as a violin looks better from much use, and takes on a richer patina from the constant rub of fingers, so it sounds better from much use."

Then was a Stradivarius great when it was first made?

"Yes, of course it was great, but greater after it had been in use a couple of centuries. There may be some 'Stradivarius' making violins today whose instruments we think are good but which can be proven great only a couple of centuries hence.

* * *

"A VIOLIN needs to have its merits brought out, or coaxed from it. You have to take your violin and clean it and care for it and love it.

"I have a young friend who is a remarkable musician but on his violin he cannot play harmonics. He can play them on mine. They're in mine. Mine knows what's expected of it."

Francescatti likes New York, its soaring buildings and its unforgetable skyline. He likes Boston, which reminds him of French cities. And he likes Monterey, which is near Tanglewood, so that if he's with fellow musicians all winter on tour, he's surrounded by fellow musicians, even by the entire Boston Symphony, during the Berkshire Music Festival in the summer.

Born in Marseilles just under 50 years ago, he made his first public appearance when he was five, and his American debut in 1939.

Toledo BLADE
July 25

tics Is Out

Tanglewood Lists Berlioz

Special to The Blade

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 24 — This is a Berlioz year at the Berkshire Music Festival here, and the fourth week will be distinguished by a performance of the symphony, "Romeo et Juliette" July 31 in the Music Shed.

Charles Munch and the full Boston Symphony Orchestra will be augmented by the Festival Chorus and the following soloists: Beatrice Krebs, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Nicolo Moscona, bass.

The week also will contain the American premiere of a string quartet by Ernest Bloch (No. 4), to be played Wednesday evening, July 28, by the Griller String Quartet. This chamber series on Wednesday evenings will take place in the Theater-Concert Hall.

ADE

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
(Boston Symphony Orchestra, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.)

Thursday: Theater Concert Hall. Morel conducting; Rossini, overture to "Scala di Seta"; Mozart, Symphony in B-flat (K. 319); Ravel, suite "Ma Mere L'Oye"; Strauss, "Der Berger als Edelmann."

Saturday: The Shed, Munch conducting; Wagner, "A Faust Overture"; Piston, Symphony No. 4; Ravel, piano concerto, Nicole Henriot; Saint-Saens, Symphony No. 3 (organ).

Sunday: 2:30 p.m., The Shed, Munch conducting; Berlioz's "Grand Mass for the Dead." Soloists and chorus.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.
STANDARD-TIMES
JUL 25 1954

String Quartet to Offer Chamber Music Concert

Special to The Standard-Times

LENOX, July 24—The fourth week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, offers varied program to music lovers. There will be a program of chamber music by the Griller String Quartet, including the first U. S. performance of Ernest Bloch's "Quartet No. 4," on Wednesday night in the theater-concert hall. A program of Roussel, Ibert and Mozart performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Charles Munch on the podium, and Doriot Anthony as flute soloist, will be offered Friday night in the theater-concert hall.

Berlioz' dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet," with Beatrice Krebs, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone, and the Festival Chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center with the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be conducted by Dr. Munch, on Saturday night in the Music Shed. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Richard Burgin as guest conductor and Ruth Posselt as violin soloist, in a program of William Schuman, Vaughan Williams, Khatchaturian and Sibelius, will be heard on Sunday afternoon.

Northampton (Mass.) Gazett

UST 6, 1954.

Tanglewood Parade Week From Today

Thomas Schippers, who conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first half of the gala evening concert at the Berkshire Music Center's annual "Tanglewood on Parade", Friday, August 13, is a "musical revelation in himself" said the Paris press, and London agreed that "Thomas Schippers was a born conductor" when the twenty-three-year-old American made his first European tour in 1951.

For his conducting debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Schippers conducts Bizet's Symphony in C major and the final scene from Richard Strauss' opera "Salome", with Brenda Lewis of the Metropolitan Opera and the Broadway stage as soloist; in the concert's second half Arthur Fielder leads The Boston Pops Orchestra for the first time in Tanglewood's Music Shed.

Making his debut in his native Kalamazoo, Michigan, at the age of six, Mr. Schippers was official organist at St. Luke's Episcopal Church when he was eleven, and at the First Reformed Church at the age of fourteen. After concertizing in other mid-western cities as pianist and organist he enrolled at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia and New York's Juilliard School of Music.

Mr. Schippers—at seventeen—was chosen by Eugene Ormandy as one of the five finalists in a conductor's contest to direct the Philadelphia Orchestra in the Academy of Music. The same season he conducted New York's Lemonade Opera Co., in the first United States production of Haydn's "Man in the Moon," as well as Kurt Weill's "Down in the Valley" and Mendelssohn's "The Stranger."

Foss To Conduct At Lenox Tonight

Lukas Foss who appeared as piano soloist earlier in this year's Berkshire Festival makes his debut of the season tonight at 8:30 in the theatre-concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox. Conducting a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players, Mr. Foss will have pianist Seymour Lipkin as soloist in Mozart's Piano Concerto in B flat major. Regina Sarfaty, Jefferson Morris and McHenry Boatwright will be soloists in the New England premiere of Igor Stravinsky's "Pulcinella" and Mr. Foss conducts excerpts from Mozart's opera "Idomeneo" for the program's second half with Marvin Worden, Miss Sarfaty, Charlotte Holloman and Theresa Green as soloists.

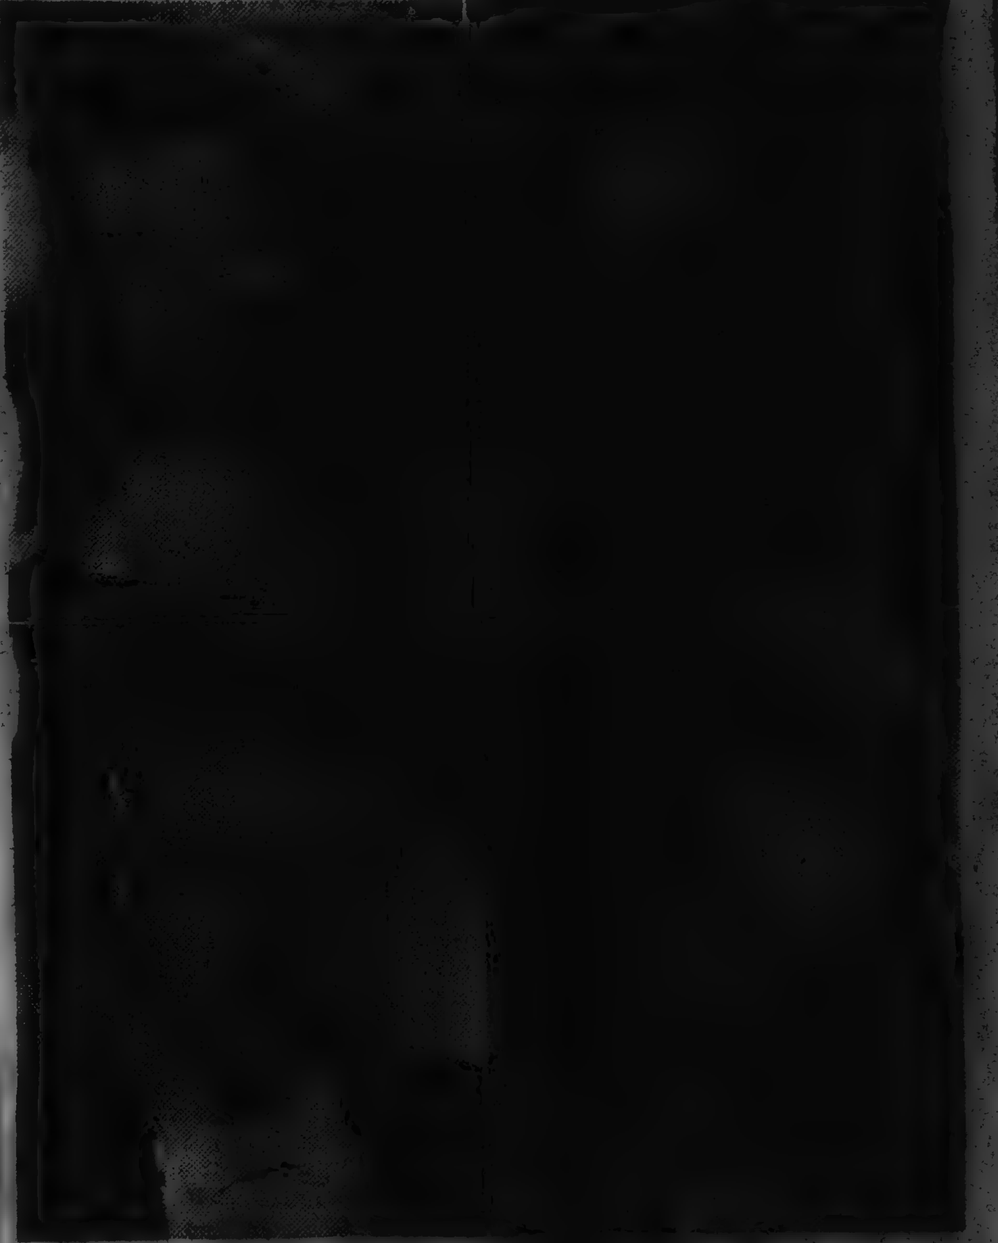
Head of the Study Group Department at the Berkshire Music Center and associate professor of music at the University of California in Los Angeles, Mr. Foss came to this country in 1937 at the age of 15 where he enrolled at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. From the earliest days of Tanglewood he has been a popular figure at the Center, as a conductor-pupil of the late Serge Koussevitsky, as official pianist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1944 and faculty member since 1946. The young American composer-conductor-pianist won the Pulitzer Scholarshipp when he was only twenty. His compositions brought him a Fulbright Fellowship, the Herblit Award of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Prix de Rome. In 1945 he won a Guggenheim Fellowship, the youngest composer ever to be so honored, and a citation from the New York Music Critics' Circle for "The Prairie," his cantata for chorus, solo voices and orchestra. He has appeared as piano soloist or had compositions performed by the Boston Symphony, the New York Philharmonic, the Los Angeles and Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestras, the CBS and New York City Symphony Orchestras.

IN THE COUNTRY

Berkshire Festival—Final performances of the season by the Boston Symphony—Thursday, Aug. 12, at 8:30: Jean Morel conducting the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra. . . . ¶ Friday, Aug. 13, at 6: The annual "Tanglewood on Parade" program, including offerings by the various student departments of the Berkshire Music Center, a lawn party, a concert by the Boston Symphony (conducted by Thomas Schippers, with Brenda Lewis, soprano) and the Boston Pops (conducted by Arthur Fiedler), door prizes, and waltzing on the lawn. For the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. . . . ¶ Saturday, Aug. 14, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting, with E. Power Biggs, organ. . . . ¶ Sunday, Aug. 15, at 2:30: Charles Munch conducting Berlioz's "Requiem," in a memorial concert for Serge Koussevitzky, with David Poleri, tenor; two choruses; and four brass bands. (Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.)

HICKORY, N. C.
RECORD
JUL 24 1954

Grandfather Home Day Scheduled On August 8



The annual Grandfather Home Day at Rumple Memorial Presbyterian church at Blowing Rock is scheduled to open this year at 11 o'clock, Sunday morning, August 8, when a group of accomplished artists will present a program of sacred music for the benefit of Grandfather Home for Children at Banner Elk.

As he has done for many years, David Ovens of Charlotte, who is spending the summer at Blowing Rock, has handled arrangements for this event and will be in charge of the program.

Mr. Ovens describes this year's artists as stars who will make this the finest program given in the history of Grandfather Home Day. There are four young singers with excellent voices and training who have been heard several times at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Massachusetts. They are: Rosalind Elias (lower right), Robert Rue, John McCollum (lower left), and Saramae Endich (upper left). Stuart Ross, a brilliant accompanist and soloist, will be on the program for the seventh year. The sixth artist will be Miss Margaret Vance of Blowing Rock, talented organist.

Long Record of Service

Grandfather Home is operated by the Edgar Tufts Memorial Association, which is headed by the Rev. Fletcher Nelson as president. It was established in the early days of this century and has a long record of service in behalf of orphaned children. One hundred boys and girls live at the Home.

Blowing Rock Day for the institution was begun 3[illegible] years ago and was, at first, directed by the late Dr. James I. Vance, pastor of First Presbyterian Church of Nashville, Tennessee. After his death, Mr. Ovens took over the responsibility of the day and he has handled it with such success that Grandfather Home has received each year a substantial amount of money for use in its operations. Other units operated by the Edgar Tufts Memorial Association are Lees-McRae College and Grace Hospital, also at Banner Elk.

Miss Elias has studied in Rome and sung at La Scala in Milan, the San Carol Opera House in Naples an[illegible] May Festival in Florence. Sh[illegible] winner of the Metropolitan auditions of the air and will s[illegible] at the Met in the 1954-55 season.

Wide Experience

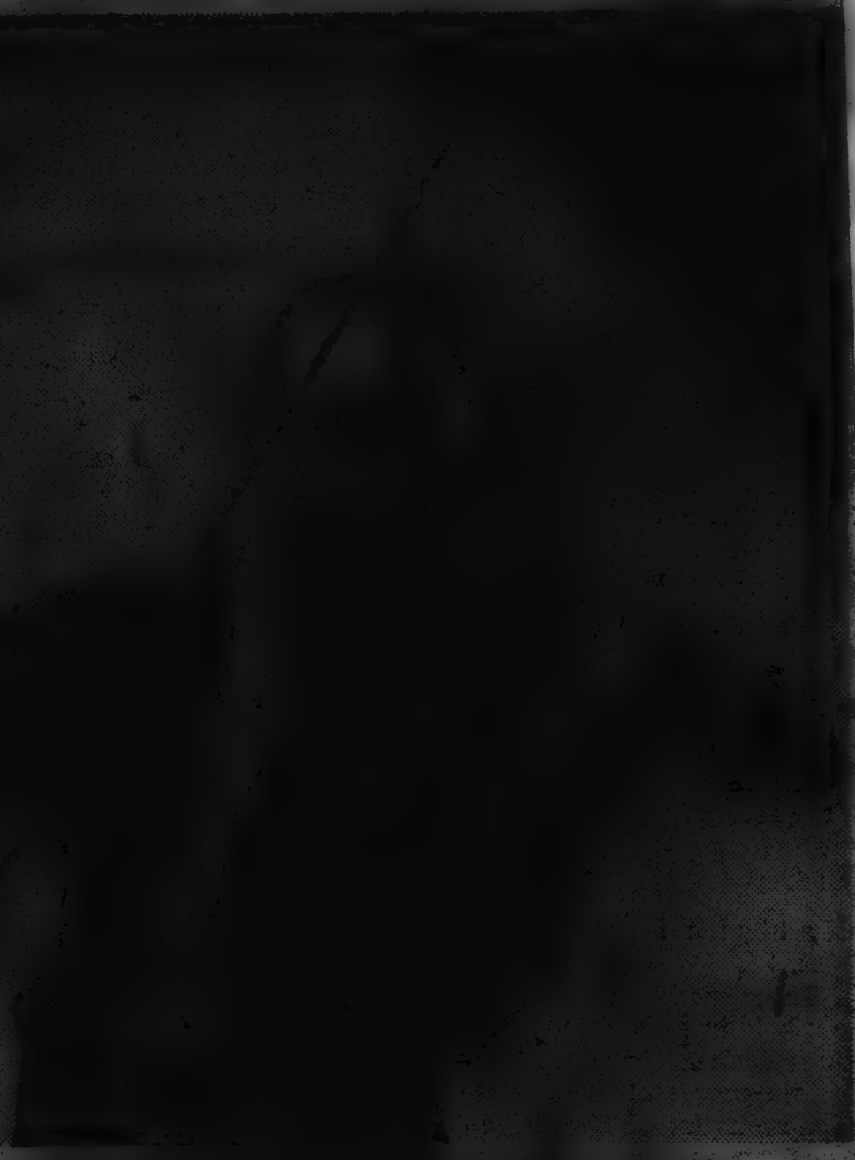
[illegible] Rue's experience includes [illegible]ances with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, the role of Nick [illegible] in "The Rake's Progress" [illegible] by Stravinsky in Boston, [illegible] of the Count in the [illegible] Hemisphere premiere of S[illegible] opera, "Capriccio."

[illegible] McCollum received approval of critics after his New York recital in Town Hall and has sung leading roles with the New York Philharmonic, Boston Symphony, New York Oratorio Society, and the Handel and Haydn Society of Boston.

Miss Endich is described by Mr. Ovens as one of the most important discoveries of the Berkshire Music Festival, who has won real success in opera and in concert with the Boston Symphony.

Larry Walker of Charlotte will be master of ceremonies for the concert which the artists will present at the Blowing Rock Country Club a 9 o'clock, Friday night, August 6, for the benefit of Blowing Rock hospital.

JUL 25 1954



"PRINCE CHARMING" WAKES FIDDLE
Zino Francescatti Is An Expert

Francescatti Says Violin Is Like Sleeping Beauty

By W. G. ROGERS

NEW YORK, July 24. — (AP) — "A violin is like the fairy-tale Sleeping Beauty; it needs a Prince Charming to wake it up."

So said Zino Francescatti by way of explaining that there's something more to a Stradivarius than Stradivarius. Mrs. Francescatti put it in her words:

"A violin is like a wine: if it's good at the start, it's still better after aging."

Monsieur and Madame, both being violinists, speak with equal authority, though Mrs. Francescatti no longer plays concerts: "One in the family is enough," she says.

Her husband is one of the best waker uppers of violins, and he has been hailed by the experts here and abroad as a splendid Prince Charming in this professional field.

* * *

ONE OF HIS last official acts, as he quit the concert platform for a long summer-time rest in his home in the Berkshires, in Monterey, Mass., was to sit for this interview. "Sit," however, is hardly the word for this distinguished artist who, being southern as well as French, may sit but does not often sit still. And his fingers are agile from talking, I am sure, no less than from fingering the violin.

He plays the "Hart" Stradivarius. Some months ago he was invited to Genoa to play the Stradivarius which Paganini—teacher of the teacher of Francescatti's father—had bequeathed to the Italian city. It was long unused, and needed working in:

"It had dried up, as a pair of shoes left in a closet dries up."

* * *

STARTING from that, Francescatti discussed that ever popular and mystifying subject: the secret of the greatness of a violin.

"Some people think it's the varnish, or they call it Stradivarius. But the fact is, in my opinion, that a violin becomes good after it is played on by good violinists. Note that the great violins usually bear the name of the great violinists who used them.

"Just as a violin looks better from much use, and takes on a richer patina from the constant rub of fingers, so it sounds better from much use."

Then was a Stradivarius great when it was first made?

"Yes, of course it was great, but greater after it had been in use a couple of centuries. There may be some 'Stradivarius' making violins today whose instruments we think are good but which can be proved great only a couple of centuries hence.

* * *

"A VIOLIN needs to have its merits brought out, or coaxed from it. You have to take your violin and clean it and care for it and love it.

"I have a young friend who is a remarkable musician but on his violin he cannot play harmonics. He can play them on mine. They're in mine. Mine knows what's expected of it."

Francescatti likes New York, its soaring buildings and its unforgettable skyline. He likes Boston, which reminds him of French cities. And he likes Monterey, which is near Tanglewood, so that if he's with fellow musicians all winter on tour, he's surrounded by fellow musicians, even by the entire Boston Symphony, during the Berkshire Music Festival in the summer.

Born in Marseilles just under 50 years ago, he made his first public appearance when he was five, and his American debut in 1939.

Toledo BLADE
July 25

tics Is Out

Tanglewood Lists Berlioz

Special to The Blade

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 24 — This is a Berlioz year at the Berkshire Music Festival here, and the fourth week will be distinguished by a performance of the symphony, "Romeo et Juliette" July 31 in the Music Shed.

Charles Munch and the full Boston Symphony Orchestra will be augmented by the Festival Chorus and the following soloists: Beatrice Krebs, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Nicolo Moscona, bass.

The week also will contain the American premiere of a string quartet by Ernest Bloch (No. 4), to be played Wednesday evening, July 28, by the Griller String Quartet. This chamber series on Wednesday evenings will take place in the Theater-Concert Hall.

Toledo BLADE
August 8

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

(Boston Symphony Orchestra, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.)

Thursday: Theater Concert Hall, Morel conducting; Rossini, overture to "Scala di Seta"; Mozart, Symphony in B-flat (K. 319); Ravel, suite "Ma Mere L'Oy"; Strauss, "Der Berger als Edelmann."

Saturday: The Shed, Munch conducting; Wagner, "A Faust Overture"; Piston, Symphony No. [illegible]; Ravel, piano concerto, Nicole Henriot; Saint-Saens, Symphony No. 3 (organ).

Sunday: 2:30 p.m., The Shed, Munch conducting; Berlioz's "Grand Mass for the Dead." Soloists and chorus.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.
STANDARD-TIMES
JUL 25 1954

String Quartet to Offer Chamber Music Concert

Special to The Standard-Times

LENOX, July 24—The fourth week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, offers varied program to music lovers. There will be a program of chamber music by the Griller String Quartet, including the first U. S. performance of Ernest Bloch's "Quartet No. 4," on Wednesday night in the theater-concert hall. A program of Roussel, Ibert and Mozart performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Charles Munch on the podium, and Doriot Anthony as flute soloist, will be offered Friday night in the theater-concert hall.

Berlioz' dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet," with Beatrice Krebs, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone, and the Festival Chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center with the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be conducted by Dr. Munch, on Saturday night in the Music Shed. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Richard Burgin as guest conductor and Ruth Posselt as violin soloist, in a program of William Schuman, Vaughan Williams, Khatchaturian and Sibelius, will be heard

---

Northampton Gazette

UST 6, 1954.

Tanglewood Parade Week From Today

Thomas Schippers, who conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first half of the gala evening concert at the Berkshire Music Center's annual "Tanglewood on Parade", Friday, August 13, is a "musical revelation in himself" said the Paris press, and London agreed that "Thomas Schippers was a born conductor" when the twenty-three-year-old American made his first European tour in 1951.

For his conducting debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Schippers conducts Bizet's Symphony in C major and the final scene from Richard Strauss' opera "Salome", with Brenda Lewis of the Metropolitan Opera and the Broadway stage as soloist; in the concert's second half Arthur Fiedler leads The Boston Pops Orchestra for the first time in Tanglewood's Music Shed.

Making his debut in his native Kalamazoo, Michigan, at the age of six, Mr. Schippers was official organist at St. Luke's Episcopal Church when he was eleven, and at the First Reformed Church at the age of fourteen. After concertizing in other mid-western cities as pianist and organist he enrolled at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia and New York's Juilliard School of Music.

Mr. Schippers—at seventeen—was chosen by Eugene Ormandy as one of the five finalists in a conductor's contest to direct the Philadelphia Orchestra in the Academy of Music. The same season he conducted New York's Lemonade Opera Co., in the first United States production of Haydn's "Man in the Moon," as well as Kurt Weill's "Down in the Valley" and Mendelssohn's "The Stranger."

Foss To Conduct At Lenox Tonight

Lukas Foss who appeared as piano soloist earlier in this year's Berkshire Festival makes his debut of the season tonight at 8:30 in the theatre-concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox. Conducting a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players, Mr. Foss will have pianist Seymour Lipkin as soloist in Mozart's Piano Concerto in B flat major. Regina Sarfaty, Jefferson Morris and McHenry Boatwright will be soloists in the New England premiere of Igor Stravinsky's "Pulcinella" and Mr. Foss conducts excerpts from Mozart's opera "Idomeneo" for the program's second half with Marvin Worden, Miss Sarfaty, Charlotte Holloman and Theresa Green as soloists.

Head of the Study Group Department at the Berkshire Music Center and associate professor of music at the University of California in Los Angeles, Mr. Foss came to this country in 1937 at the age of 15 where he enrolled at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. From the earliest days of Tanglewood he has been a popular figure at the Center, as a conductor-pupil of the late Serge Koussevitzky, as official pianist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1944 and faculty member since 1946. The young American composer-conductor-pianist won the Pulitzer Scholarshipp when he was only twenty. His compositions brought him a Fulbright Fellowship, the Herblit Award of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Prix de Rome. In 1945 he won a Guggenheim Fellowship, the youngest composer ever to be so honored, and a citation from the New York Music Critics' Circle for "The Prairie," his cantata for chorus, solo voices and orchestra. He has appeared as piano soloist or had compositions performed by the Boston Symphony, the New York Philharmonic, the Los Angeles and Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestras, the CBS and New York City Symphony Orchestras.

New Yorker
August 14

IN THE COUNTRY

Berkshire Festival—Final performances of the season by the Boston Symphony—Thursday, Aug. 12, at 8:30: Jean Morel conducting the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra. . . . ¶ Friday, Aug. 13, at 6: The annual "Tanglewood on Parade" program, including offerings by the various student departments of the Berkshire Music Center, a lawn party, a concert by the Boston Symphony (conducted by Thomas Schippers, with Brenda Lewis, soprano) and the Boston Pops (conducted by Arthur Fiedler), door prizes, and waltzing on the lawn. For the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. . . . ¶ Saturday, Aug. 14, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting, with E. Power Biggs, organ. . . . ¶ Sunday, Aug. 15, at 2:30: Charles Munch conducting Berlioz's "Requiem," in a memorial concert for Serge Koussevitzky, with David Poleri, tenor; two choruses; and four brass bands. (Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.)

Various Ways Of Showing Approval

July 25
New Haven Register

The practice of applauding performers probably goes back to the first activities of the human species. Approval of a performance has always involved some audible recognition on the part of an audience. In fact, applause today has become an integral part of performance. If you have ever attended a concert, such as occasional programs of religious music where no applause is permitted, you have had the feeling that something was missing.

An interesting article on the subject appears in the August issue of Good Housekeeping magazine. We learn of the various ways of showing approval (and disapproval) in various countries. For instance, audiences in Spanish opera houses applaud by whistling. In provincial French towns, listeners stamp their feet. During the 18th Century, gentlemen struck their walking sticks against the seats as a sign of applause. In ancient India, snapping the fingers of one hand meant mild enthusiasm while snapping the fingers of both hands amounted to an ovation, according to the article.

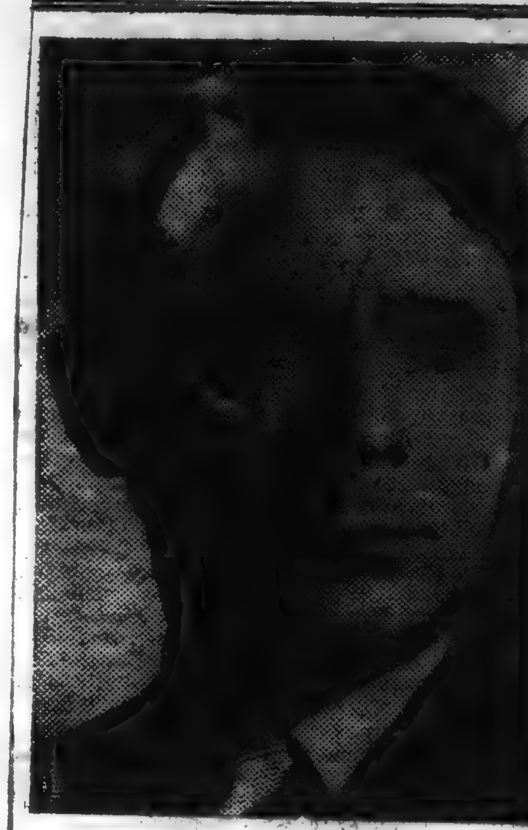
American audiences of today are usually quite decorous about likes and dislikes in the concert hall. If we don't like a performance, we just "sit on our hands." But this is not so in Italy where listeners come prepared, just in case! According to the writer of the article, overripe oranges, tomatoes, and even old shoes are thrown on stage — and Italian audiences still hiss!

The etiquette of when and when not to applaud is somewhat illogical, says the article writer though this fact is known to any concertgoer. Why should it be considered bad form to applaud between the movements of a symphony but perfectly all right to applaud between the movements of a concert?

The article states, that despite what people say, the claque still exists at the Metropolitan Opera House. This is the professional group hired by certain singers to applaud at the right times. The practice is of French origin and began in Paris around 1820. It became a highly organized business embracing the official laughter, weeper, and tickler who was supposed to charm those around him.

The article writer says, that barring slight restraints, audiences should applaud when and where they feel like it. "Applause helps the enjoyment of the music and certainly, we owe a demonstration of gratitude to the artist."

AUFBAU August 6 (over) 11



Charles Munch,
der hervorragende französische Dirigent, der jetzt als Nachfolger des verstorbenen Serge Kussevitzky das Boston Symphony Orchestra und die Musikfestspiele in Tanglewood, Mass., leitet.

Höhepunkte in Tanglewood

Von Artur Holde

Tanglewood, im August.

Die milde, harmonische Schönheit der Berkshire-Landschaft bereitet den Besucher des Musikfestes innerlich wohltuend auf die ihm bevorstehenden Eindrücke vor, sobald er das herrliche, gepflegte Gelände Tanglewoods betritt. Das äussere Arrangement der Veranstaltungen hat sich zum Vorteil der Hörer durch einen engeren Zusammenschluss der Hauptkonzerte auf drei aufeinanderfolgende Tage des Wochenendes geändert. Zwei grosse Aufführungen finden am Sonnabend und Sonntag in der "Shed" statt, während alle Instrumentalmusik kleinerer Besetzung, Kammermusik und Oper dem Theatersaal vorbehalten ist. Die innere Struktur der Programme des Boston Symphony Orchestra und des "Music Center" und der Charakter ihrer Veranstaltungen ist durch den Wechsel der leitenden Persönlichkeiten seit Koussevitzkys Heimgang stark beeinflusst worden: Die Konzerte sind diesmal in den Händen von drei französischen Dirigenten, Charles Munch, als Gesamtleiter, Pierre Monteux und Jean Morel als den Gästen, und sie geben ihrer Neigung für die Musik ihres Heimatlandes deutlichen Ausdruck. Der 150. Geburtstag von Hector Berlioz, 1953, ist für Munch noch besonderer Anlass zur Ausbreitung eines grossen Teils der wichtigsten Werke des Meisters über die Progamme. Debussy, Saint-Saëns, Ravel, Franck, Roussel, Ibert erhalten mit den Klassikern und einigen Modernen wie Strauss, Sibelius, Strawinsky, Prokofieff, Martinu, Bloch, Toch, Piston einen durch Affinität der Dirigenten jeweils begründeten Raum. Das diesmal von F[illegible] Cohen überwachte Opera [illegible] begab sich mit [illegible] von Toch und [illegible] in die Problem[illegible] Komödie ab[illegible] an dieser Stel[illegible] Mit einer neuen[illegible] Oper "The Tende[illegible] Copland steht diese [illegible] des "Music Center" [illegible] einem Vorposten [illegible] Schaffens. Allen Aufführungen ist der das Alte respektierende, dem Neuen wohlgesinnte Geist eigen, der Tanglewood zu einem Kennwort für die Musikkultur des Landes und zum Vorbild für andere gleichen Zielen zustrebende Unternehmen, sogar über die Vereinigten Staaten hinaus, gemacht hat.

Einakter von Hindemith, Toch und Vecchio

Zu den interessantesten Aufführungen gehören seit Jahren die mit Schülern des "Music Center" unternommenen Opernaufführungen. Auch diesmal wurden in erstaunlich kurzer Zeit darstellerisch und musikalisch höchst anspruchsvolle Bühnenwerke lebendig und abgerundet präsentiert. Die Frage, ob Paul Hindemiths Farce "There and Back" ("Hin und Zurück") eine glückliche Wahl für eine Studienanstalt dieser Art ist, wäre vielleicht sogar vom Komponisten offengelassen worden. Bei der Uraufführung in Baden-Baden, 1927, konnte diese schnell hingeworfene Ausklan

---

32—Waterbury American, Mo

26,650 At Tanglewood For Concerts

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 9 —The fifth week of the Berkshire Musical Festival which brought Zino Francescatti, violin soloist, to the largest audience of the season, piled up a total of 26,650 music lovers in the three concerts of the week end.

Yesterday's concert, heard by 12,700 brought the largest audience of the season for a beautiful concert of Beethoven's "Violin Concerto in D major" and Brahms' "Symphony No. 2" conducted by Charles Munch. Saturday evening's concert brought an all-Berlioz program to 10,700 persons who heard Eleanor Steber, David Poleri, and William Friso Frank as soloists and the festival chorus.

Following close upon that delightful concert on Friday evening, heard by 3,350 music lovers, an overflow that had twice as many listeners on the grounds as there were in the filled music hall, Saturday's night performance was another in the 150th anniversary series being presented at Tanglewood to honor Berlioz.

Seymour Lipkin, guest pianist, gave a moving and finished performance of the Mozart "Piano Concerto in B-flat major" Friday night. Lukas Foss, conducting that concert in which a number of the students of the school appeared as soloists in Stravinsky's "Pulcinella" and in excerpts from Mozart's opera "Idomeneo", showed that he had masterly control of orchestra and singers. He is a new conductor with the orchestra who undoubtedly will be seen more frequently in the future, judging by the excellence of his work that evening.

There were beautiful solo parts by Mr. Francescatti at the Sunday performance. It was a brilliant performance in which orchestra, soloist and conductor worked together to give one of the finest performances of the season. Mr. Francescatti will be heard again on Wednesday evening.

nday, August 9, 1954

The Brahms symphony which brought the fifth week's program to a close was especially pleasing in the third movement. Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra were greeted with an ovation as the final notes were played.

This week will bring the Festival to its end but not before Tanglewood on Parade, for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, presents its variety program Friday evening and Mr. Munch leads the orchestra in programs on Saturday night and Sunday afternoon. The final program Sunday afternoon will present Berlioz' "Requiem" in memory of Serge Koussevitzky who conducted the orchestra for many years and was the spiritual father of the Music Center.

S. M.

Waterbury Republican 8/10/54

26,650 Hear Violinist At Tanglewood

(Special to The Republican)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 9 —The fifth week of the Berkshire Musical Festival which brought Zino Francescatti, violin soloist, to the largest audience of the season, piled up a total of 26,650 music lovers in the three concerts of the week end.

Sunday's concert, heard by 12,700 brought the largest audience of the season for a beautiful concert of Beethoven's "Violin Concerto in D major" and Brahms' "Symphony No. 2" conducted by Charles Munch. Saturday evening's concert brought an all-Berlioz program to 10,700 persons who heard Eleanor Steber, David Poleri, and William Friso Frank as soloists and the festival chorus.

Following close upon that delightful concert on Friday evening, heard by 3,350 music lovers, an overflow that had twice as many listeners on the grounds as there were in the filled music hall, Saturday's night performance was another in the 150th anniversary series being presented at Tanglewood to honor Berlioz.

Seymour Lipkin, guest pianist, gave a moving and finished performance of the Mozart "Piano Concerto in B-flat major" Friday night. Lukas Foss, conducting that concert in which a number of the students of the school appeared as soloists in Stravinsky's "Pulcinella" and in excerpts from Mozart's opera "Idomeneo", showed that he had masterly control of orchestra and singers. He is a new conductor with the orchestra who undoubtedly will be seen more frequently in the future, judging by the excellence of his work that evening.

There were beautiful solo parts by Mr. Francescatti at the Sunday performance. It was a brilliant performance in which orchestra, soloist and conductor worked together to give one of the finest performances of the season. Mr. Francescatti will be heard again on Wednesday evening.

The Brahms symphony which brought the fifth week's program to a close was especially pleasing in the third movement. Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra were greeted with an ovation as the final notes were played.

This week will bring the Festival to its end but not before Tanglewood on Parade, for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, presents its variety program Friday evening and Mr. Munch leads the orchestra in programs on Saturday night and Sunday afternoon. The final program Sunday afternoon will present Berlioz' "Requiem" in memory of Serge Koussevitzky who conducted the orchestra for many years and was the spiritual father of the Music Center.

S. M.

Times - Aug 7
THE HARTFORD T

Tanglewood Thrills To Foss Concert

By EVANS CLINCHY

Tanglewood — The Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra put on a program last night in the Theater-Concert Hall that was delightfully adventurous and one that was played and sung very close to perfection.

And if you'd like to hold your breath and gasp a little, this best of the Bach-Mozart programs so far was not conducted by Charles Munch or Pierre Monteux or any of the big leaguers, but by Lukas Foss. To top it all off, Mr. Foss and his extraordinary program of Mozart and Stravinsky drew the largest Friday night crowd of the season — some 3,350 people.

Mozart and Stravinsky may sound like an odd pairing at first glance for what was supposed to be a concert of classic music. But in this case it isn't odd at all, for the Stravinsky piece was his complete music for the ballet "Pulcinella." It is written and delightfully so, in a somewhat baroque style drawn from Pergolesi, and thus fitted in perfectly with what was primarily a Mozart evening.

* * *

MR FOSS — and it appears that he is as brilliant a conductor as he is a pianist — conducted this spry blend of the ancient and the spicy modern with just the right touch of levity. There is a great deal of mock seriousness to it, but Mr. Foss kept it all light and gay, and that was just what he should have done.

For the Mozart section of the evening, Mr. Foss chose the B Flat Major Piano Concerto (K 450) and some exciting excerpts from the somewhat neglected opera "Idomeneo."

Seymour Lipkin was the piano soloist in the concerto. Mr. Foss and his orchestra played exquisitly, and Mr. Lipkin played with great technical dexterity if little real feeling. The performance was marked, however, by the soloist's excessive mannerisms.

*

"IDOMENEO" [illegible] unalloyed delight [illegible] to last. Mozart was quite capable of writing routine orchestral music, but all his operas are lavishly filled with gorgeous sound. The libretto is pretty terrible, and therefore perhaps the opera is justly neglected as a stage piece, but as a concert item it make splended listening.

Mr. Foss, at least two fine soloists and a very good chorus filled the performance with zing, bang and beauty. Marvin Worden, a clear fluent tenor made a singing Idomeneo, and Therest Green as Elektra reveal a soprano of surpassing purity and velvet tone.

But it was essentially Mr. Foss' evening. His conducting could hardly have been surpassed for vividness, intensity and pure splendour of sound.

Northampton Gazette Mon Aug 9/54

Near Record Crowds At Two Tanglewood Concerts

Enthusiasm and thrilling performances were the order of the last two days at the Berkshire Music Festival in Tanglewood. Near record crowds, 10,600 on Saturday night and 12,700 Sunday afternoon, swarmed into the beautiful grounds and Shed to hear the music of Berlioz, Gluck, Beethoven and Brahms. Saturday evening the twentieth program of the season was devoted entirely to the works of Hector Berlioz.

Evidence of this composer's tremendous talent in orchestral innovation and dynamic possibility was obvious in the three offerings of the evening. The largest work was the last on the program, "Te Deum" for three choruses, with orchestra and organ. Willem Frank was at the organ and the young Italian singer, David Poleri, sang the tenor solo.

The enthusiasm of the audience was aroused to high pitch by the amazing spirit and magni- by the Festival Chorus, slightly ficent volume of sound produced but charmingly reinforced by a children's chorus from Camp Mahkeenac and Indian Hill, and the full power of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Charles Munch, Festival director, quite literally whipped the massed forces before him into the magnificently conceived climaxes of this festive work. It was a trifle disconcerting to follow the conducting of two men at the same time as was necessary. Hugh Ross, conductor and director of choral work at Tanglewood, was seated in front of the combined choral groups at the rear of the platform and gave, to the children's groups especially, the cues and dynamic direction needed to insure their continued support in the proper places. He followed Mr. Munch precisely, but watching both men at once was a visual distraction. Eleanor Steber was the soloist for the song cycle "Summer Nights" for soprano and orchestra. The orchestra provided an extremely sympathetic and understanding background for the sensitive and beautiful singing of the artist. Her high notes were exquisite and the expressiveness of the lower register in her voice will be remembered.

Sunday afternoon will also stand out as a memorable occasion. The highlight was the impressively exceptional artistry of Zino Francescatti in the playing of Beethoven's "Violin Concerto" in D Major. Jascha Heifetz, the world renowned violinist, once remarked that he would walk miles to see and hear Mr. Francescatti play. Many thousands came for hundreds of miles yesterday to hear him and were handsomely rewarded. The D Major Concerto is a magnificent one on any program, but it was a joy as played under the sensitive baton of Mr. Munch, with the outstanding interpretation given by the soloist. Mr. Munch was so carried away with the beauty of the work that he unconsciously sang out on one of the most lovely of the phrases in the second movement.

Gluck's "Overture to Alceste" which opened the program is an unusually sombre dark-hued introduction to an opera. It was interesting as a forerunner of operatic overtures from Don Giovanni to Brahms' Tragic Overture. Brahms' "Symphony No. 2 in D Major" rounded out a perfect afternoon of the best in musical offering. This symphony abounds with mellifluous phrases and as played by the Boston Symphony, whose string section is so much to be admired, it was singularly moving.

Dark clouds threatened to open up during the first half of the program and throngs of music lovers and sun worshippers felt it wise to move into the shelter of the Shed, but the storm bided its time and did not interfere further with a truly unforgettable experience.—F.M.R.

TANGLEWOOD TRAIL: The bass violinst of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, instrument atop his shoulder, trudges his way to the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., where the Berkshire Music Festival tonight begins its final week.

! Aug. 8 N.Y. Journal-Am.

'Culture' Takes the Short Cut

By MILES KASTENDIECK

AS A SIGN of the times we now have the "Listener's Digest" in music, courtesy of RCA Victor. It consists of ten extended-play "45" records and a "45" automatic record player. Its purpose is to make available classical music that will be "inexpensive, friendly, short, and easy-to-enjoy."

In introducing this musical counterpart of book condensations and magazine digests so popular today, Victor hopes to create "a vast new audience for good music" and possibly double the record industry's present annual volume of $225,000,000.

As a commercial undertaking, this is commendable enterprise. As an educational one, it has a certain practical value. As an aesthetic one, it is deplorable.

For School Use

Like Victor's earlier "Heart of the Symphony" and "Heart of the Concerto" condensations, the "Listener's Digest" may be well suited for school and college use.

Here the time-element set by the length of a class often precludes listening to whole works or even parts of works in one sitting. Whether the "standard brand" of selections is altogether desirable in these circumstances is, however, another matter.

"As a guide and a short cut for others who have avoided classical music because they haven't the time to develop their listening ear without some assistance", the "Listener's Digest" ventures into debatable territory.

Digests of magazine articles, condensations of the news, etc! do fit into today's tempo of living. Even digests of novels have an informative purpose.

By its very nature, music falls outside these categories; it might almost qualify as a solace to the increased tempo of life, even as a therapy. At this point the theory of the short-cut falters.

The idea that a "sample" of a great work whets the appetite for getting acquainted with the whole work does not hold true in magazine and book digests. Does it follow that the opposite holds true in music?

Hearing the excerpts from Berlioz's "Romeo and Juliet" has left many music lovers content even after hearing the score in its entirety.

Not Too Wise

If such is the nature of the work itself, hearing almost 15 minutes of Beethoven's Fifth Symphony instead of 32 minutes could suffice for an uninitiated listener.

Though painstaking care has gone into the digesting, perhaps the selection of such standard works has not been too wise.

Music is a different medium of expression; it is questionable whether popularization of classical music can be forced.

12—Mon., Aug. 9, 1954 ★ New York Journal-American

At Tanglewood:

Berlioz in All His Grandeur

'Te Deum' Dominates Fine Concert by Munch

By MILES KASTENDIECK

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 9.—Charles Munch dug into Berlioz with enkindling earnestness in the Saturday night Berkshire Festival concert devoted entirely to his music. Only one of the three works performed was at all familiar. Thus the crowd of 10,600 had the experience of discovery as well as of enjoyment.

Dominating the program was the "Te Deum." This work has been seldom performed and was interpreted by Munch for the first time in this country.

It is formidable music. From the stunning opening measures to the overwhelming finale, it represents Berlioz at his finest. He marshals three choruses, a huge orchestra, and the organ with an ingenuity and an originality that transcend his grandiose manner. The music has grandeur and religious fervor as well.

Childen's Choruses

Munch conducted with all the fervor of a zealous advocate of this music. The festival chorus supplemented by children's choruses from neighboring camps had been admirably prepared by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon. To facilitate the performance, Ross conducted the children, achieving a unanimity of effect quite impressive.

The impact of a full-throated chorus made the opening "Te Deum Laudamus" thrilling. Willem Frisco Frank as organist played a vital role in the second movement. David Poleri sang the tenor solo most appealingly. The combined forces made the "Judex" memorable. It was worth the trip to Tanglewood just to hear this work alone.

Unfamiliar also was the song cycle "Summer Nights" which Eleanor Steber sang with more conscious art than consummate artistry. It may not be easy to vary the sameness of mood characteristic of these six songs, but the expression of more inner conviction would have helped. Her exceptional voice sounded quite lovely, worthy of the quality of the songs.

First Rate Program

The program began with the familiar "Royal Hunt and Storm" from the opera "The Trojans." It ushered in one of the outstanding concerts of the festival.

Gluck, Beethoven and Brahms found Munch and the Boston Symphony on the main line of repertory for yesterday's concert in the music shed. A profoundly moving performance of the overture to Gluck's "Alceste" opened the program.

Zino Francescatti played the Beethoven Violin Concerto with a sense of artistry and beauty so compelling that the Audience was completely absorbed in the performance.

The concert ended with Brahms' 2d Symphony.

N.Y. Post Aug. 9

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Berlioz 'Te Deum' at Tanglewood

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 9—The Berlioz 'Te Deum,' which climaxed Saturday night's program here of the Berkshire festival, proved to be, as anticipated, rousing in impact and gigantic if not entirely profound in inspiration. There were, however, several sections of moving beauty and the cumulative effect was impressive.

Rarely heard in this country, and termed formidable, Babylonian and colossal by the composer, the work closed the fourth all-Berlioz program featured during the festival. The emphasis on Berlioz this season has been in commemoration of the 150th anniversary of the composer's birth, Dec. 11, 1803.

Berlioz once wrote to Liszt regarding a contemplated performance of the work, that it was especially suited for "a great festival," and certainly it roused Saturday's audience of 10,600 to long and prolonged demonstrations of approval.

This was understandable, particularly in view of the magnificent re-creation given it by the Boston Symphony and assisting retinue under the aegis of Charles Munch.

When I mention that the composer asked for a chorus of 800 when he scored the work, a number he was not even able to supply himself when he conducted the first performance from manuscript in 1855, you w[illegible]ealize that I use the wor[illegible]nue" with purpose. The cu[illegible] event included a group of about 300 comprising the regular festival chorus; 40 boys from neighboring camp Mah-Kee-Nac, and 44 girls from Indian Hill music workshop. David Poleri, tenor and Willem Frisco Frank, organist, were the collaborating soloists.

Ross Also Conducts

During the "Te Deum," the audience was a bit startled to note two conductors instead of one, officiating on-stage. Munch, obviously remained on his podium, but Hugh Ross from the rear of the platform took care of the three choruses he had trained with impressive authority as well. Up[illegible] questio[illegible] Ross explained a[illegible]ward [illegible] was necessary [illegible] order [illegible] precision and [illegible] especially from the sing[illegible] youngsters, who ranged in a[illegible] from 9 to 13.

Steber Sings "Summer Nights"

Preceding the intermission, Metropolitan Opera soprano, Eleanor Steber, sang six songs appropriate to the occasion and season, collectively entitled "Summer Nights," a cycle which Berlioz originally wrote for voice and piano and later orchestrated himself. As with the "Te Deum," considerable interest in these resides, not only in the vocal portion but in the imaginative and picturesque orchestration which was played with exquisite sensitivity by the Bostonians. Both Miss Steber and Poleri performed with expert musicianship and vocal skill.

The remarkable vocal aptitude as well as beauty of voice which Poleri has demonstrated this season at Tanglewood on the two occasions I have heard him here makes me wonder why he is not given more important assignments in our own city.

Yesterday afternoon's concert, featuring Zino Francescatti, violinist, as soloist in the Beethoven D Major Concerto with Munch on the podium, closed the fifth week of the festival. The final set of concerts begins Wednesday night with Francescatti again featured in a chamber music program with Arthur Balsam at the piano. The festival concludes Sunday afternoon with a performance of the Berlioz Requiem to be given in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

This Week At TANGLEWOOD

BRENDA LEWIS, lovely star of opera and Broadway, will sing the final scene from Strauss' "Salome" with the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Thomas Schippers at the gala Tanglewood on Parade in the Music Shed, Friday, August 13 at 8:30 p. m. Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will share the program.

TUESDAY, Aug. 10 (tonight):
  8:30 p. m. in the Theatre
    Opera Scenes and Chorus
    (Free to Friends)
WEDNESDAY, AUG. 11:
  8:30 p. m. in the Theatre
    Festival Concert
    Francescatti and Balsam
    Violin and Piano
THURSDAY, AUG. 12:
  8:30 p. m. in the Theatre
    Festival Concert
    Chamber Orchestra
    Jean Morel, conducting
FRIDAY, AUG. 13:
TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE
6 to 7 p. m.: Student Orchestra, Opera, and Chamber Music performances.
  7 to 8 p. m.: Picnic supper, student chorus concert.
  8:15 p. m. in the Shed:
    Boston Symphony Orchestra
    - and -
    Boston Pops Orchestra
11 p. m.: drawing for door prizes and waltzing on the lawn.
SATURDAY, AUG. 14:
  10 a. m. in the Shed
    Boston Symphony Rehearsal
  3:00 p. m. in the Shed
    Student Symphony Orchestra
    (Free to Friends)
  8:30 p. m. in the Shed
    Festival Concert
    Boston Symphony Orchestra
    Charles Munch, conducting
SUNDAY, AUG. 15:
  10 a. m., Chamber Music Hall
    Chamber Music, Dept. I
    (Free to Friends)
  2:30 p. m. in the Shed
    Festival Concert
    Boston Symphony Orchestra
    Charles Munch, conducting
    Berlioz - "Requiem"
  In memory of Serge Kousseuitzky

New Lebanon "Echo"
August 10

Leisure Well Earned

Nearly 40 years of service with any organization is no mean accomplishment. When it is served with such an organization as the famous Boston Symphony Orchestra, and includes 20 years as the manager of that venerable organization, it is an accomplishment doubly worthy of notice. That is the achievement of George E. Judd, who retires Sept. 1, after one of the busiest careers in the musical life of the country.

Mr. Judd, with his characteristic modesty that has been noted in his association with the orchestra all his years, refused to allow any special ceremony to be made of his official farewell to the symphony and to Tanglewood. He asked that he be included as a third retiring member of the orchestra when the group honored two of its members at a luncheon.

Under George E. Judd's direction, the Boston Symphony Orchestra—a million and a half dollar operation—added luster to its status as one of the leading orchestras in the United States. During his tenure it became part of the annual Berkshire Festival in the hills of Western Massachusetts, where as many as 175,000 music-lovers from all parts of the country have enjoyed its offerings. In the summer of 1952, under his guidance, the orchestra made its first tour of Europe, and, in the spring of 1953, its first coast-to-coast tour.

Mr. Judd recently negotiated contracts with the National Broadcasting Co. for the Boston Symphony to replace the NBC Symphony of Arturo Toscanini next season on weekly Saturday night broadcasts. In his 20 years at its helm he scheduled the Boston Symphony to play a longer season than any other orchestra. It is the only one to maintain a music school of its own.

After so many years of arranging the orchestra's bookings, scheduling its tours, negotiating salaries, and recording contracts, supervising transportation, dealing with union, guest conductors, soloists, and the daily details of running Symphony Hall in Boston and Tanglewood, none will deny Mr. Judd his right to retire. On his newly acquired farm in Cannonsville, New York, he will devote his act[illegible] hereafter to floriculture. The m[illegible] lovers of western Connecticut [illegible] have been privileged through the [illegible] hear his orchestra

Waterbury American
August 10, 1954

TOLEDO, OHIO
BLADE
JUL 25 1954

Tanglewood Lists Berlioz

Special to The Blade

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 24 — This is a Berlioz year at the Berkshire Music Festival here, and the fourth week will be distinguished by a performance of the symphony, "Romeo et Juliette" July 31 in the Music Shed.

Charles Munch and the full Boston Symphony Orchestra will be augmented by the Festival Chorus and the following soloists: Beatrice Krebs, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Nicolo Moscona, bass.

The week also will contain the American premiere of a string quartet by Ernest Bloch (No. 4), to be played Wednesday evening, July 28, by the Griller String Quartet. This chamber series on Wednesday evenings will take place in the Theater-Concert Hall.

[6]

Phone CH 9-8211 Hartford Times - August 9 T

Berlioz 'Te Deum' Played at Tanglewood

By GEORGE W. STOWE
Special to The Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass. — The most amazing feature of the Berlioz Festival this Summer at Tanglewood has been the cumulative interest on the part of concertgoers. Each successive program dedicated to the French composer seems to have drawn a larger crowd, with Saturday's audience of 10,600 constituting a record high for the season.

And to such a consecrated and indefatigable Berliozian as Dr. Munch it must have been a source of gratification that this huge throng was attracted, not by such staples as the "Fantastic" Symphony or the "Romeo and Juliet," but by a program that consisted of such unfamiliar and rarely-performed works as the "Royal Hunt and Storm" from the "Trojans," the "Summer Nights" song cycle, and the powerful "Te Deum."

* * *

IT HAS BECOME fashionable to extol Berlioz the symphonist and in the same breath to deny his talent in writing for the voice. This myth was effectively shattered Saturday night by the performance of his "Summer Nights," an exquisite cycle of songs for soprano and orchestra with texts by Theophile Gautier.

In subtlety of expression and evanescent coloration they are the legitimate forerunners of the French art songs of Debussy, Faure, and others of the impressionistic school. "Absence" is the best known of the six, but others equally persuasive include the haunting "On the Lagoons" and the dramatic "Specter of the Rose."

* * *

NO SMALL CREDIT must go to Eleanor Steber, the soloist, who sang with faultless control and an ethereal warmth that we have never known her to display heretofore. That her voice is a dramatic soprano made the accomplishment doubly remarkable.

The "Royal Hunt and Storm" music from Berlioz' Virgilian opera, "The Trojans," has its artistic counterpart in the Love Music from "Romeo and Juliet." Both represent the apotheosis of the "grand passion," a situation which impelled the composer to resort to symphonic rather than vocal terms. Surpassing tenderness and contrasting "storminess" were realized in the interpretation of Mr. Munch and the Bostonians.

But both these works were only a prelude to the sonoral grandeur of the "Te Deum," which is so seldom given in this country as to be practically unknown. Its affinity to the better-known "Requiem" is undoubted, but this is the creation of a more mature artisan, a more concise expression — but certainly no less powerful.

THE ONLY SOLOIST is a tenor but the choral and instrumental requirements are stupendous. The composer's specifications were only partially met Saturday night, although there was the Festival Chorus of 200 voices on stage and a children's chorus of 80 voices to augment it. But such resources were more than sufficient to impress the audience with the manumentality of this conception.

There are moments of quiet expression, as in the Te Ergo with the tenor solo capably handled by David Poleri, but the over-all effect is of concretic and awesome power. And the concluding Judex crederis rises to an inexorable point of sound and majesty that can only become anticlimactic before it is over.

Berlioz must be accepted or rejected on his own terms. For those who prefer a grandiose rather than a beatific hymn of praise this is the final word.

Beethoven Concerto

Zino Francescatti, the distinguished French violinist, was guest soloist with the Boston Symphony under Charles Munch Sunday afternoon and it must be reported that his performance of the Beethoven Concerto was the shining ornament in a program that also included Gluck and Brahms.

* * *

AFTER ALL the pyrotechnics have been spent and the brilliant showpieces exploited it is soul-satisfying to return to the solid virtues of Beethoven's essay in this form. All its parts belong to a homogenous whole and it speaks with nobility directly to the heart. Such simplicity can only arise from unspeakable depths.

Mr. Francescatti's conception of the concerto is admirable in its breadth and tonal warmth. In his hands its technical difficulties seem hardly existent because they are subordinated to the architectural considerations of its design. One could ask no more of a Beethoven interpretation.

Brahms' Second Symphony has the reputation of being his most genial experiment in this medium. This is not the lighthearted affability of Mozart or the earthly jocularity of Beethoven but something so Olympian that it sometimes seems disassociated with ordinary human beings.

* * *

MR. MUNCH does not exactly carry on the tradition of Koussevitsky in his Brahms. There is less suavity and more dynamic thrust to its contours under the Frenchman. And there is no doubt that the final Allegro con spirit moves along with more alacrity under Munch than it did for his predecessor. How do you like your Brahms?

Gluck's Overture to "Alceste" came through to us with a classical purity and restraint that could well be an exemplar for all performances.

For the statistical record Sunday's concert was, by far, the most popular of the season; 12,700 were in attendance.

Widow, 83, Airs Protest

GLOBE

Tanglewood Wooing Ires Music Lover

Aug 10

LENOX, Aug. 10 (UP)—An elderly widow whose ancestors came over on the Mayflower bristled with Puritan indignation today at lovemaking at the long-haired Tanglewood musical concerts.

Mrs. Charles F. Bassett's blueblood dander was ruffled because of the "perfectly horrid goings-on" under the skies while the famed Boston Symphony Orchestra is playing.

"The things I've seen on the lawns at Tanglewood. . . . It's repulsive," said Mrs. Bassett, whose hedge-fronted estate Sundrum overlooks the Episcopal Church in this Berkshire Hills community of about 3000.

And Mrs. Bassett blames out-of-towners. She said these "outsiders" take the attitude: "Well, we'll show these hicks how to have fun and be free. These people (Lenox residents) need to be shown what freedom means."

Mrs. Bassett, a dignified 83, said she is descended from the Mayflower Pilgrims, including William Brewster and Gov. William Bradford of the Plymouth Bay colony.

Couples petting is all right—in its place, Mrs. Bassett allowed. "But why don't they do it in privacy? They absolutely have no decency."

Mrs. Bassett's complaints were brought to the attention of the Selectmen. But the board said it has no jurisdiction over Tanglewood because it is private property.

However, the board acted on another thing that has disturbed Mrs. Bassett—the scanty attire worn by men and women on Lenox streets. She said she was "disgusted" by the "lack of clothes on old and young."

The board voted to tack up signs "respectfully requesting" people to dress properly when they go window shopping or when they run down to the store for a can of milk.

Board chairman R. Harry Barnes said "we don't object to Bermuda shorts. But a lot of people are wearing these Bikini-type bathing suits."

And after all, he chuckled, "we're 100 miles or more from the seashore."

Barnes said the selectmen can't enforce the request but merely seek everybody's cooperation. He said the signs will be nailed up this week in public places.

Mrs. Bassett said she feared Lenox would get the reputation of being an "open town" if a halt were not called to the partial nudity on the streets and the woo-pitching with Wagner at Tanglewood.

Tanglewood Petting Scored

Traveler (Boston) Aug. 10

By STANTON BERENS

LENOX (UP)—An elderly widow whose ancestors came over on the Mayflower bristled with Puritan indignation today at "indecent" love-making at the long-haired Tanglewood musical concerts.

Mrs. Charles F. Bassett's blue-blood dander was ruffled because of the "perfectly horrid goings-on" under the skies while the famed Boston Symphony Orchestra is playing.

"The things I've seen on the lawns at Tanglewood . . . it's repulsive, wicked, indecent," said Mrs. Bassett, whose hedge-fronted estate "Sundrum" overlooks the Episcopal church in this Berkshire Hills community of about 3,000.

And Mrs. Bassett blames out-of-towners. She said these "outsiders take the attitude: 'Well, we'll show these hicks how to have fun and be free. These people (Lenox residents) need to be shown what freedom means."

Mrs. Bassett, a dignified 83, said she is descended from five Mayflower Pilgrims, including William Brewster and Gov. William Bradford of the Plymouth Bay Colony.

Couples petting is all right—in its place, Mrs. Bassett allowed. "But why don't they do it in privacy? They absolutely have no decency."

Mrs. Bassett's complaints were brought to the attention of the board of selectmen. But the board said it has no jurisdiction over Tanglewood because it is private property.

However, the board acted on another thing that has disturbed Mrs. Bassett—the scanty attire worn by men and women on Lenox streets. She said she was "disgusted" by the "lack of clothes on old and young."

The board voted to tack up signs "respectfully requesting" people to dress properly when they go window shopping or when they run down to the store for a can of milk.

Tangle at Tanglewood

Boston Herald

Berkshire Grand Dame Hits Public Petting at Festival

Aug 11

LENOX, Aug. 10—A very old lady of Mayflower ancestry today protested that when the Boston Symphony plays at world-famed Tanglewood so do young lovers in a manner which she said is "repulsive."

Mrs. Carolyn F. Bassett, 83, a widow who traces her lineage to both Brewster and Bradford of the Plymouth plantation, said flatly that there are "perfectly horrid goings-on" at the summer music festival.

But Mrs. Bassett made it clear that she is no Puritan bluestocking. She does not object to petting as long as it's private petting and she does not object to Bermuda shorts.

What she objects to is unprivate petting, bare midriffs and short shorts.

Mrs. Bassett, widow of Charles F. Bassett, owns a handsome hedge-fronted estate, "Sundrum," in this lovely Berkshire town and her protests did not go unnoticed by the selectmen.

R. Harry Barnes, chairman of selectmen, told The Boston Herald that they have no jurisdiction over Tanglewood since it's a private estate and, as a matter of fact, they have no power to forbid wearing shorts on the streets of Lenox.

(Continued on Page Eight)

But tonight, he said, the selectmen posted notices in the public library, the town hall and the post office which said this:

THERE'S NO LAW

"The selectmen respectfully request that all people be properly dressed when appearing on the streets of Lenox."

Asked how they could put any teeth into that, Mr. Barnes sighed and said: "We can't. There's no law. We hope, however, to incorporate a law into the bylaws at the next town meeting."

But that will be in the winter and it's the summer people who are outraging Mrs. Bassett.

100 MILES FROM SHORE

She declared that their attitude is like this:

"Well, we'll show these hicks how to have fun and be free."

Her complaint took in the whole town of Lenox as well as Tanglewood when she said: "I'm disgusted by the lack of clothes on both old and young."

Chairman Barnes said—with an occasional chuckle—that Lenox doesn't mind Bermuda shorts but it does get a little pop-eyed at Bikini bathing suits.

"We are, he noted, "at least 100 miles from the seashore."

As for Mrs. Bassett's protest, Barnes said: "She wrote us a very friendly letter."

In Boston, the Boston Symphony did not comment.

Springfield Union - August 12

Lenox May Prohibit Brief Wear of Summer Visitors

Proposal to Be Made at Next Town Meeting After Protests Over Tanglewood Patrons

Lenox, Aug. 11—A proposal to restrict the amount of bare flesh exposed by summer visitors will be put before the next annual town meeting Feb. 18, it was indicated today by R. Harry Barnes, chairman of the Board of Selectmen.

Polite Requests to Be Made

Meanwhile, music lovers in town for the last week of the Tanglewood concerts will be politely requested by two on-duty constables to go home and change if their attire is considered too brief, Barnes revealed.

Barnes said the matter came to a head in a recent letter to the selectmen from Mrs. Charles F. Bassett of Kemble St., objecting to public petting, bare midriffs and short shorts. Oral complaints have been received from a number of other Lenox residents, he added.

Yesterday the chairman posted notices in the Post Office, Town Hall and library "respectfully requesting" visitors to refrain from wearing bathing apparel or other very brief clothes on the town streets.

"After all," he said today, "this isn't a seaside resort. Some of the worst offenders," he added, "are the ones who shouldn't even wear long shorts."

Townspeople will be requested to set a good example for the summer visitors, for the brief remainder of the Tanglewood season, said Barnes.

"It's been in our minds a long time to do something about it," he declared. "We were going to do something about it next year anyway."

Mrs. Bassett's letter protested that there were "perfectly horrible goings on" among people visiting the music festival.

Mrs. Bassett and Barnes agreed, however, that there is nothing wrong in wearing Bermuda shorts or long slacks.

Private Property

Noting that Tanglewood is private property and out of the town's jurisdiction, Barnes declared:

"I should think it would be a helluva lot better to [illegible] around (at Tanglewood) in [illegible] than to wear a skirt."

Tanglewood officials served notice today that, aside from "polite suggestions," they would take no action to regulate the dress of their visitors. Said one spokesman:

"We sell music. If their own standards and tastes aren't up to our level all they can do is [illegible] cold stares." He [illegible] 10 college students, [illegible] as guides, are authorized to suggest traditional concert wear.

"But we couldn't stand there with a tape measure deciding who was fit to enter," said the official. "We've always invited people to come informally, with blankets and babies," he added. "It would be foolish to turn away people who have driven 150 miles to attend a concert."

A student at the Tanglewood music school was firm in his opposition to "bathing beauties." "It's too much like attending a football game," he said. "I don't think bathing beauties mix with serious music."

"Last week," he added, "one lady showed up at a concert in a bathing suit."

FINAL CHAMBER MUSIC CONCERT AT TANGLEWOOD

Zino Francescatti, Arthur Balsam Give Rewarding Performance

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 11—This is the final week of the Berkshire Music Festival and musically it may be the most rewarding. Tonight the final chamber music concert was given by Zino Francescatti and Arthur Balsam before an audience of 2000 persons who braved below 60 degree temperatures to hear these distinguished musicians.

The addition of this chamber music series to the program this year has been a great success. Audiences have consistently filled the theater-shed and spread outside. The performances have been of high standard. It is to be hoped that this series will become a permanent part of the festival.

Johannes Brahms wrote three sonatas for violin and piano. Two were heard tonight, the A Major, Opus 100 and the D Minor, Opus 108. Between these two Mr. Francescatti played the Bach "Suite in C Major" unaccompanied.

One heard tonight great performances. The collaboration between violinist and pianist was expert. The violin Sonata in A Major is a work brimful of melody and entrancing rhythms. The andante is a case in point with its lyricism alternating with sprightly dance rhythm. The two artists provided a deeply moving and [illegible] performance. Each phrase was [illegible] moulded and colored.

Mr. Francescatti's performance of the Bach Suite [illegible] unaccompanied violin [illegible] display of [illegible] yet it had a depth and feeling which removed it from the "display" ranks. The fugue was particularly arresting, the inner voices emerging crystal clear. The final allegro was tossed off in true bravura fashion. The audience shouted its approval as it called the violinist back some half dozen times.

If the violin Sonata in D Minor lacks the spirit of youth, it does have the virtues of a fine introspective and experienced composer. This work is far less turbulent than earlier works revealing the Brahms [illegible]. Its lovely adagio [illegible] from one who was [illegible] in his wisdom and [illegible] final movement reveals [illegible] gypsy airs which intrigued Brahms throughout his life. We heard a fully revealing performance from the two fine artists. It was deeply felt and intimate, perhaps a definitive performance.

Tomorrow night Jean Morel will lead the chamber orchestra through a program which will include the overture to "LaScala di Sera"; Mozart's Symphony No. 33 in B Flat, "Mother Goose," by Ravel and Strauss' "Suite from the music for Der Burger Als Edelmann."

The Lively Arts

By Milton R. Bass

IT'S PRETTY HARD to please everybody. In fact, it's practically impossible to please anybody. If you do a column on television, someone always makes it a point to say, "I never read about television." If you write about the movies, someone else feels duty bound to come over and inform you that "I never go to the movies."

But if you happen to write a piece on Tanglewood, God love you, look out below, the dam has burst, take to the boats, women and children last. For then every Tom-Cat-in-a-Hurry, people who ordinarily refuse to admit they read the paper, let alone the column, makes it a point to remark how "hoity toity some writers are getting." The worst kind of snob is the anti-snob.

* * *

THERE WAS A NAZI play just before the war in which the hero remarked, "When I hear the word culture, I immediately reach for my pistol." And the German audiences stood up and cheered. There is some quirk in the baser instincts of mankind that makes it effeminate, weak, peculiar, to appreciate the manifestations of the higher nature of mankind. This guilt complex is dominant in Western culture (excuse me), and it must be admitted that the victims have brought a great deal of it on themselves.

For a certain phonyness has attached itself to the whole group because of the phonies who have leeched on to the act. The play's the thing and reality hides behind the scenery, the masks, the costumes and the lines written by somebody else.

* * *

IT IS HARD to say how many people go to Tanglewood solely to hear the music and how many go solely to go to Tanglewood. But even the most optimistic approach to the question would indubitably end up being pessimistic. The almost-hysterical reaction to the music is almost frightening at times and you can't help being almost disgusted when you observe it. It's almost enough to almost drive you into the camp of the snobbish anti-snobs.

The situation was brought home with a vengeance after the Saturday night and Sunday afternoon concerts at Tanglewood. The compulsion-to-clap, the need to show that "this cat has been sent, gone, cooled" was vividly demonstrated near the end of the Berlioz "Te Deum." This florid number uses umpteen choristers, a souped-up orchestra with an organ behind it, and an imported tenor to lend class. You can't help but be slightly stirred when all of these elements are delivering at maximum power, challenging the gods on Olympus with the intensity of their projection. It may not be great music in the last analysis, but it's exciting.

* * *

BUT THE MAJORITY of the audience Saturday night, moved by the clash of the cymbals, the bang of the drums, the cry of the Valkyries, was determined to show that it knew how "great" the music was, how magnificent the performance, how green was the valley. So they started to applaud at what they thought was the final boomp and they came in eight bars too early. While poor Chuck Munch was knocking himself out to bring everybody home safe, sound and on time, the cognoscenti were applauding and yelling loud enough to drown out Berlioz as he piled climax upon climax. They realized their mistake just as the piece ended and their applause ceased with the musicians. What should have been the Jovian climax to a dramatically colorful performance fizzled to a fuzzy finale. The applause started up again when everybody realized the final end had arrived, but the emotional intensity was lost, the one fine moment had slipped by. And just because everybody wanted to show what a hot-shot music lover he was.

* * *

MUSIC IS THE least discursive of the arts. You don't need years of background and training in order to appreciate its beauty or emotion. There are some who say it helps to have some knowledge of the finer points in order to better appreciate the finer points, but there is much validity in the playwright's statement that music "hath charms to soothe the savage breast, To soften rocks, or bend a knotted oak." Great music causes a stasis, a soothing, a softening, a bending.

Therefore, as it did on Sunday afternoon, it comes as a mild shock to have people break the mood of a symphony by applauding between movements or going berserk at the conclusion of a piece that should leave you quietly exalted, clean and refreshed, inwardly moved. It was the jitterbugs who almost finished jazz. It is the leaping, screaming, mitt-banging, revivalists who could turn Tanglewood into a state prison forest camp.

Francescatti Donates Services To Music Center This Evening

Eagle Aug. 11

TANGLEWOOD — Violinist Zino Francescatti, who was soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra Sunday afternoon, will donate his services to the Berkshire Music Center at his second Berkshire Festival appearance tonight at 8:30 in the theater-concert hall. This is the final recital of the popular chamber music series which Music Director Charles Munch incorporated into the Festival this year to replace the programs formerly sponsored by the late Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge.

Accompanied by pianist Artur Balsam, who is making four appearances this summer at South Mountain, Pittsfield, Mr. Francescatti will play the Brahms Violin Sonata in A major, Bach's Suite in C major for unaccompanied violin and the Brahms Violin Sonata in D minor.

Concert Tomorrow

The Boston Symphony Orchestra concert normally held on Friday of each week will be played tomorrow to make way for the annual Tanglewood on Parade Friday. Jean Morel, acting head of the Berkshire Music Center's orchestra department, will be guest conductor. For his all-orchestral program, Mr. Morel has chosen Rossini's Overture to "Scala di Seta"; Mozart's Symphony No. 33; the Ravel "Mother Goose" suite; and Richard Strauss' suite from the music for "Der Durger als Edelmann."

Jean Morel, who first conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the July 24 Festival concert, is head of the orchestra department at the Juilliard School of Music in New York. Coming to the United States by way of a conducting career in his native France and South America, Mr. Morel has been associated with the New York City Opera Company and has been guest conductor of many major American symphony orchestras.

Tickets for these and the final weekend's Festival concerts, on Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon when Charles Munch will conduct the Boston [illegible] chestra, may be [illegible] telephoning the box [illegible] Lenox. Tickets of general admission to the Tanglewood lawns will be sold before each concert.

Veterans Attend Tanglewood Concert

Fifteen patients from the Northampton Veterans Hospital were guests at the Sunday concert at Tanglewood.

Following the concert they were given a [illegible] lunch at Mr. and Mrs. Ra[illegible] O'Connell's boat house on Onot[illegible] Lake. Transportation for the pat[illegible] was furnished by the Berkshire County Red Cross through [illegible] Pittsfield Yellow Cab Co.

Members of the Red Cross entertainment and supply service made arrangements for the veterans' annual Tanglewood visit.

Manos

ARTS PATRON Julius Fleischmann, Cincinnati industrialist, at Sunday afternoon's Berkshire Festival concert with his family and friends. Left to right are Mrs. Charles Fleischmann, his daughter-in-law; Mr. Fleischmann and his sister, Mrs. Benjamin E. Tate; and, back, Mrs. Richard Tiner and Mrs. Robert L. Black, all of Cincinnati. Mr. Fleischmann was largely responsible, through his Fairfield Foundation, in making possible the Boston Symphony Orchestra's European tour in 1952, when it performed at the Congress for Cultural Freedom's festival of the arts in Paris and elsewhere.

$1,000 Realized At Benefit for Israeli Children

More than $1,000 was realized at the third annual Music for Israel concert, attended by about 500, last night at the Jewish Community Center.

Although final figures still are not available, the amount is expected to total slightly less than last year, according to Mrs. Carl J. Wildman, chairman.

The program included compositions by Lukas Foss and Leonard Bernstein. Artists were Mr. Foss and Ralph Berkowitz, piano; Jean Bedetti, cello; Walter Rubin, clarinet; Richard Burgin, violin; and Catherine Akos, mezzo-soprano. Miss Akos, formerly with the Budapest Royal Opera Company, sang for the first time in English in this country at last night's concert.

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky spoke briefly on Music for Israel, a project of Children [illegible] Palestine Inc., the Christian-Jewish Committee for the rescue of Jewish refugee children and their rehabilitation in Israel. Mrs. Koussevitzky, together with Mrs. Bruce Crane and Mr. Bernstein, were honorary chairmen.

Tanglewood Student From Tokyo, Japan, To Appear on TV

A composing student from Tokyo, Japan, who is studying at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, will be interviewed by Bob Stone tomorrow on television. The program, "Rollin' With Stone," will be heard from 1:30 to 2 over WRGB, Schenectady.

Tossi Ichiyangi, one of the almost 400 students at the center, will discuss activities there. With him will be Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, widow of the school's founder and chairman of the annual program to benefit the school, Tanglewood on Parade, which will be held on Friday.

Mac Morgan Will Draw Prizes At Tanglewood Parade Friday

TANGLEWOOD — Mac Morgan, well known baritone of concert, opera and radio, who resides in Stockbridge, will draw door prizes at Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, at Tanglewood Friday night.

The Music Shed concert features Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in their first Tanglewood appearance, and the BSO conducted by Thomas Schippers, with Brenda Lewis as soprano soloist. Drawings for door prizes will follow.

Mac Morgan

Former Student Here

A former Tanglewood student who has appeared frequently on Berkshire Festival programs, Mr. Morgan hails from Texas. He has appeared as the star for two seasons on the weekly national radio program, "Highways in Melody." Last year he toured with Boris Goldovsky's New England Opera Company.

The door prize committee for "Tanglewood on Parade" is headed by Mrs. Bruce Sanborn of Lenox.

Prizes Listed

Door prizes include an RCA-Victor high fidelity console, a GE refrigerator, donated by the Pittsfield GE, a 45 RCA-Victor phonograph with an album of nine records donated by Sammy Vincent, a season ticket for two for 1955 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, a package of records which includes Hector Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet" and "The Damnation of Faust," and a barbecue grill.

Also offered are two "Evenings in the Berkshires." The winners will each receive a colorful Calypso skirt from Calypso of Bermuda, Lenox. One winner will get two tickets to Jacob's Pillow and the other winner two tickets to the Berkshire Playhouse. Dinners for two are being given by the Morgan House in Lee and Avaloch in Lenox to complete the "Evenings in the Berkshires."

Two gourmet's tours of Berkshire County and New York State complete the list of door prizes. Dinners for two have been donated by Les Pyrenees, Canaan, N.Y.; the Crane Inn, Dalton; the Williams Inn, Williamstown, and Chef Karl's, Lenox. The second tour winner will dine at Elm Court, Lenox; the Egremont Tavern, South Egremont, and the 1896 House, Williamstown.

Is Slack Policy Too Taut?

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

After nearly two weeks of highly inclement weather in the Berkshires, I determined to attend the Friends' student concert of last Thursday night in the good, sensible attire I have so frequently observed upon the Tanglewood lawns.

This means slacks: Not noticeable slacks, not tight slacks; just warm ones. You can therefore imagine my incredulity when, after inspecting my husband's tickets, a sort of Harvard sophomore cast his bulk before us, gazed sadly at me and stated: "We'll have to do something about this." My husband politely said he'd already tried, whereupon the chap pointed airily at my slacks and said: "It's these, you see."

We were then referred to his colleague who presented me with a sort of denim apron which would have accommodated the Shoemaker's Prodigious Wife—or even the Shoemaker—but it was nothing but an eye-catcher at Lenox.

"We'll look much nicer this way, won't we," smiled the colleague.

The Friends is a wonderful association; the students seems to be highly competent musicians and, I suppose, even Harvard sophomores graduate; but, it's highly unsuitable for any of these to arbitrate how nice "we" should look at their concerts. Stifling the urge to sit in the front row and flap my wrap at the first violinist I huddled in the shadows, ignoring the raised monocles and scratched berets.

After all, I might have been concealing a case of poison ivy, a heavy shin bandage or a wooden leg. So, this is a plea for tolerance on the part of the Friends, the Harvard sophomores or whomever is responsible for this prissy policy.

I humbly suggest they "judge not" etc. and return these aprons to the Boston Museum.

(Mrs.) NANCY BRACH.
74 South Munn Ave.,
East Orange, N.J.

WHATEVER HAPPENED last summer to clear the Shed at Tanglewood of sparrows nested in the girders we don't know and (shudder) can't find out. But it was permanent. Not a chirp has competed this season with Berlioz, Brahms or Beethoven.

BOSTON, MASS.
EVENING GLOBE
JUN 22 1954

BECAME SINGER BY ACCIDENT—Back Bay baritone McHenry Boatwright, 28, stands with Charles Munch, conductor of Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Baritone Strives for Opera

Ex-Elevator Operator Rising Back Bay Singer

By B. MARSHALL DAMES

By riding people up in an elevator, a Back Bay baritone was able to ride himself up in the field of music.

McHenry Boatwright, 28, of 13 Albermarle st., furthered his career at the New England Conservatory of Music by driving an elevator in the Earle Building, Boston.

Within 12 months, from May '53 to May '54, he won five national singing contests which included being voted the best male singer of 1953 at the Chicagoland Music Festival, Chicago and sang with five major symphony orchestras as a featured soloist, during his senior year at the Conservatory.

"Being chosen the most outstanding graduate of the class of '54 which entitled me to be the featured soloist during the Conservatory's Night At The Pops was my greatest thrill," the tall muscular baritone said. "I have heard the applause of many audiences but the admiration and cheers from fellow classmates and teachers does something to an individual that just can't be put in words," he remarked. His selection was "Vision Fugitive" from Massenet's opera "Herodiade."

Singer by Accident

Boatwright, during the Fall, appeared as soloist in the Boston Garden at a dinner in honor of President Eisenhower. He was the recipient of the Marian Anderson award, the Lotta Crabtree scholarship, the Pi Kappa Lambda scholarship at the conservatory, which is the Phi Beta Kappa of the music world; the Michaels Music Memorial award, and the Chicagoland Festival award.

Ironically, this ex-elevator operator who has sung with the Boston, Chicago and New York Symphony Orchestras actually aspired to be a classical pianist, but became a singer by accident.

"A person's future is determined by unpredictable incidents," the Back Bay baritone said in a museful tone. "Take my case, for instance. I went to Roxbury to sing as a "fill-in" at a wedding, and the next thing I knew I was persuaded to sing at a luncheon where Ruth Seanor, a Boston music teacher, was present. That day when I began singing at the luncheon I never dreamed that within a few years I would be hailed as a rising opera star."

Miss Seanor told Boatwright that singing was his calling. "I explained to her," he said, "that all of my funds were expended, but she was very encouraging and refused to take excuses. We made an agreement whereby I would accompany her students and she would give me singing lessons, an agreement I will cherish for life." Previously he had sung with the Robert Gould Shaw House as an amateur and for fun.

A singer in the Boatwright household is no novelty because his sister, Mrs. Valeria Howard, a soprano, was a participant in the Chicagoland's Music Festival in 1951.

During his two-year Army stint in India, Boatwright entertained troops as a pianist-singer. "I played on the King Cole "kick," crooning and playing, because the fellows loved King Cole. While entertaining the boys Boatwright was able to raise more than $15,000 for the N.A.A.C.P. through his daily radio program, which was beamed over a radius of 3000 miles. Since that initial contact with the radio he has appeared on the Chicago Theatre of the Air, The Enchanted Hour and Ed Sullivan's "Toast of the Town."

Boatwright made several appearances at the Berkshire Music Center last Summer and most recently has appeared in the New England Opera Theatre's performance of Debussy's "Pellas and Melisande," conducted by Boris Goldovsky, at which time he made his opera debut. He was hailed as a "very promising opera star" by Otis Drayton, president of the Handel and Hayden Society.

He is currently being tutored by Frederick Jogel, tenor, of the Metropolitan Opera, "a goal I have set for myself," he said.

Reminiscing over milestones in his meteoric rise from elevator-jockey to opera singer, Boatwright said, "When Charles Munch informed me I was selected to join the Boston Symphony Orchestra in recording the Summation of the "Damnation of Faust," by Berlioz, for RCA-Victor, I was speechless. I had to pinch myself to see if I was awake!"

With a diploma in piano and a degree in music, Boatwright enters the world of music to make a mark for himself. "My long-view plans include singing at the "Met," but currently I have made arrangements to tour the country with Salome, sing with the New England Opera Theatre, and a few guest appearances at the Berkshire Music Center," the Back Bay baritone concluded.

Daily Hamp Gazette
Aug. 12

Large Audience Hears Violinist At Tanglewood

We broke a precedent last night at Tanglewood and went backstage after the concert and obtained the signature of that remarkable musician and violinist, Zino Francescatti. Assisted sympathetically at the Baldwin piano by Artur Balsam, Mr. Francescatti completely amazed and enthralled the 2,000 persons fortunate enough to obtain tickets to this concert which had been sold out days in advance. Acquiring this autograph was in the nature of a small attempt to pay homage to one of the relatively few truly great violinists, who is acknowledged by other top violinists to have arrived. Mr. Francescatti donated his services last night to the Berkshire Music Center and was also the soloist last Sunday afternoon with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

From the beautiful opening theme of Brahms' Sonata in A Major to the last exacting phrase of Brahms' D Minor Sonata, Mr. Francescatti gave a stirring performance. In the first Sonata the wonderful sweeping phrases and inspired intertwining of violin and piano provided a marvelous wealth of composition for the combined talents of the two artists. Mr. Balsam has been playing with Mr. Francescatti for almost twenty years and is admirably equipped to be the tasteful frame for the exquisite work of art which is the playing of Mr. Francescatti. This may be a mixed metaphor but it is only to point up the fact that though an excellent acocmpanist, Mr. Balsam does not have the spirit or the same living, breathing oneness with his instrument as does the violinist, is to self effacing, to stand out as more than a "frame."

In the A Major Sonata we first heard the wonderful sustaining power of Mr. Francescatti's bow. In the second movement there is a high D which he held with rare tonal beauty through at least three bowings witout a single audible break, which literally made one gasp.

He played next an unaccompanied Suite in C Major by J. S. Bach which is wholly and most assuredly a violinist's piece. Someone asked if Bach really thought that a violinist could be found who could master it, and the fact is that they had to go to France to find one. Mr. Francescatti, also a Frenchman, though being French could hardly be said to be a factor in his complete understanding of the work, was incredibly the master. It is a technical tour de force, a composition lacking in appeal to the layman, but teeming with challenge to the virtuoso. About Brahms' D Minor Violin Sonata, much the same remarks may be made as for the A Major. It is not so lyric or so sprightly, is a more mature work, but it gave, in the second, Adagio movement, a marvelous smoothly flowing musical line in the lower registers which Mr. Francescatti played with consummate richness and tonal purity, a singing resonance which the most ravishing contralto voices in the world would envy.

This was the last of the Wednesday Chamber concerts and an auspicious close to a most successful season.—F.M.R.

August 5

MILLBROOK ROUND TABLE

Arthur Fiedler and Boston Pops Orchestra At Tanglewood Aug. 13

Arthur Fiedler, bringing the 92-piece Boston Pops Orchestra to play for the first time in Tanglewood's Music Shed on Friday, August 13, as the star attraction of the gala concert of Tanglewood on Parade, the day-long annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, announces a program of popular symphonic music.

John Phillip Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever" March will open the Pops section of the Music Shed concert after intermission. A suite from the lively operetta music of Jacques Offenbach, culled for the ballet "Gaite Parisienne," will follow, then Maurice Ravel's popular "Bolero."

Two Fiedler specialties will complete the announced part of the program, a symphonic arrangement by Hayman of the well-known television commercials, called "TViana," and the Merrick-Bennett "Look Sharp-Be Sharp" Gilette razor theme of radio and TV. It is expected that there will be encores of the type that have endeared audiences for 70 years to the Boston Pops.

Tanglewood on Parade's concert starts at 8:15 p.m. with Thomas Schippers, former student of the Berkshire Music Center, conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Bizet's Symphony in C, followed by the final scene from the Richard Strauss opera, "Salome," with Broadway and Metropolitan Opera star Brenda Lewis as soprano soloist.

Simultaneous demonstrations of the student symphony orchestra, student chamber music, and student opera will go on respectively in the Music Shed, Chamber Music Hall, and Theatre-Concert Hall on Tanglewood's big day, commencing at 6:00 p.m. A special attraction for holders of box seats and tickets in the reserved sections of the Music Shed is a program of outdoor opera in the formal gardens, at 4:00 p.m.

Waterbury (Conn) American
August 12

Francescatti Thrills Crowd At Tanglewood

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 12—One of the finest concerts in more than 15 years of listening at Tanglewood, home of the Berkshire Music Festival, was given by Zino Francescatti, violinist, with Arthur Balsam, pianist, before 2,000 listeners last evening.

The two artists presented Brahms' "Violin Sonata in A Major" and his "Violin Sonata in D Minor" with such beauty that the audience in the little concert hall with some 700 music-lovers scattered about the grounds was speechless and sat as though glued to their seats.

The most spectacular and memorable part of the evening, though, was the performance of Francescatti in the Bach "Suite in C major" (unaccompanied). This was one of the most brilliant performances ever heard at Tanglewood. Mr. Francescatti's tone was flawless, his fingering was something to watch from the fifth row where we sat. Brought back again and again at its completion by an audience which included Fritz Kreisler this was an incredible performance. At times we had to look at the artist to make sure we were not listening to an orchestra's whole string section. His tone was rich and deep and drawn as thin as gossamer."

The "bravos" at the conclusion of the performance were well deserved by both artists. It was minutes before any one in the audience so much as stirred.

Mr. Francescatti's performance last evening followed close upon a thrilling performance he gave on Sunday when he played with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the shed before an audience of 12,700.

Friday night the annual Tanglewood-on-Parade concert will be presented for the benefit of the musician's pension fund. Saturday and Sunday the last concerts of this season will be presented.

SM.

Aug 9 Herald

MUSIC

Berkshire Festival

By ELINOR HUGHES

LEE, Aug. 8—After some highly erratic weather, including more rain than the grass needed or the Berkshire Festival favored, Tanglewood was favored this past week-end with bright skies, cool breezes and everything to make a perfect 48 hours of musical enjoyment, including some splendid performances of new and familiar musical works, and audience attendance was encouragingly high.

Friday night, for instance, there was an all-time record attendance for the concert of Stravinsky and Mozart music conducted by Lukas Foss in the Theater Concert Hall (3350 persons attended, in the hall and on the grass outside), and Saturday night the all-Berlioz program, at which Eleanor Steber was the soloist, drew close to 11,000. This afternoon, the combination of balmy sunshine and a program devoted to Brahms, Beethoven and Gluck, with Zino Francescatti as soloist, appeared to have drawn even more.

COMEDY INTERLUDE

No untoward incident marred the week-end concert, and the one comedy interlude afforded much amusement: Mr. Charles Munch, following Miss Steber from the stake after the performance of Berlioz's song cycle, "Summer Nights," trod on the train of her gown and tore off a panel of blue chiffon. Nothing daunted, Miss Steber took her curtain call waving the panel like a gay little flag.

Frivolities aside, this week-end has been interesting especially for the amount of unfamiliar works presented at Tanglewood for the first time. For example, on Friday evening. Lukas Foss conducted Stravinsky's "Pulcinella" ballet music with song in one act, a work never before performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and practically never anywhere with soloists. There is no record of any stage performance of this work since 1935, and it certainly has not been done in Boston within the past 30 years.

The musical score is witty and charming, an ingenious and sophisticated mingling of the styles of Stravinsky and Pergolesi, from whose themes the Russian composer based much of the work. The three singers, Regina Safarty, Jefferson Morris and McHenry Boatwright, sang with style and good diction. Exactly what they sang about, said the program whas not important.

BRILLIANT PERFORMA

The same evening also w nessed an eloquent and som times brilliant performance the Mozart Piano Concerto i B-flat major by Seymour Lipkin, and exerpts from Mozart's "Idomeneo," sung by the Festiva Chorus and four soloists, Marvin Worden, Regina Safarty, Charlotte Hollman and Theresa Green. The Italian text was used, and the chorus sang exceptionally well, with feeling and intelligence. Of the soloists, the handsome Miss Theresa Green as Elektra was by far the most impressive.

Saturday night's program introduced two Berlioz works t Tanglewood, the "Summe Nights" song cycle for sopran and orchestra, and the Te Deum, for three choruses, full orchestra, tenor soloist and organ. The songs, sung by Miss Steber fo the first time with the Bosto Symphony Orchestra, are alte nately gay and melancholy, pla ful and passionate. I can't h but feel that they, like most songs, are too intimate for huge a place as the Music S and while Miss Steber's voic amply full to be heard thro out the vast outdoor audito much of the shading is los the words were largely i ible. The orchestral a paniment, largely by strin woodwinds, is melodious a creet.

The Te Deum, another g choral work only once given in the United States, had never been done before at Tanglewood or by the Boston Symphony. It is a vast affair, originally designed for 800 voices and 1000 musicians, plus organ and tenor soloist. The Berkshire Festival Chorus combined with children's chorus from a nearby camp, performed heroically and often with great effect.

So huge a composition is bound much of the time to sound lik a harmonious roar with th words indistinguishable, but th less massive choruses, Dignare Domine, and Tibi Omnes Angel were very beautiful and mos feelingly sung. David Poleri handled the tenor solo capably and Willem Friso Frank was the excellent organized.

For the contribution of Mr. Charles Munch as director and co-ordinator, there can only be praise, and wonder; nor should we forget the invaluable work of Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon for their training of the choral groups.

This afternoon concert included the seldom heard, but sombrely beautiful, overture to Gluck's "Alceste" Beethoven's Violin Concerto in D major, Op. 61, and Brahms' Symphony No. 2. This was a long program, excellently performed by the orchestra and especially by Mr. Francescatti, whose handling of the Beethoven concerto was as feeling as it was brilliant.

The audiences throughout were not only very large, but exceptionally enthusiastic Bra vos were frequent and well deserved.

August 10, 1954

32 SYRACUSE HERALD-JOURNAL, Tuesday,

Syracusans in "Tanglewood" . . . The Misses Victoria Gorcoff, left, 219 Marian dr., and Jane Snyder, 816 Maryland av., enrolled in Berkshire Music Center courses. Miss Gorcoff, soprano, is a member of the Center's Choral department. Miss Snyder is enrolled in a choral group. Miss Gorcoff is an active member of Syracuse Civic Morning Musicals, Inc.

[9]

~~Berkshire Courier~~

Price: Ten Cents.

Berkshire Festival Enters Fifth Week

Francescatti Is Violin Soloist Sunday Afternoon

Is Featured on Boston Symphony Program of Gluck, Beethoven and Brahms. — All-Berlioz Program Honors 150th Birth Anniversary Year on Saturday.

The fifth week-end of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood in Lenox opens with a program of Stravinsky and Mozart performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Lukas Foss guest conductor, and Seymour Lipkin piano soloist, on Friday evening in the Theatre-Concert Hall. On Saturday an all-Berlioz program by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, conducting, includes Tanglewood premieres of the "Summer Nights" song cycle with Eleanor Stever as soprano soloist and of the "Te Deum" with David Poleri as tenor soloist and Willem Frisco Frank, organ soloist, in the Music Shed. Sunday afternoon the Boston Symphony Orchestra will offer a program of Gluck, Beethoven and Brahms in the Music Shed with Mr. Munch conducting, and Zino Francescatti as violin soloist.

Mr. Foss, a teacher of composition, who heads the Tanglewood study group division of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra chamber orchestra in its first performance of "Pulcinella," ballet with song in one act, by Igor Stravinsky, after Pergolesi, with Regina Sarfaty, soprano; Jefferson Morris, tenor; McHenry Boatwright, bass, as soloists. Another Tanglewood premiere on this program will be the excerpts from Mozart's opera, "Idomeneo" (which had its American premiere by the Berkshire Music Center's opera department at Tanglewood in 1947), with soloists Marvin Worden, tenor, and Theresa Green, Regina Sarfaty and Charlotte Holloman, sopranos; 50 voices of the Festival chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, supplemented by 18 boys from Indian Hill Workshop, Stockbridge, trained by David L. Buttolph and Harold Aks.

Mr. Munch's Saturday evening Festival concert, one of his programs this summer in honor of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of Hector Berlioz, will mark first performances by the Boston Symphony Orchestra of the six "Summer Nights" songs after Theophile Gautier which Miss Steber has previously performed with the New York Symphony Orchestra. The "Te Deum," also to be given its first performance by the Boston Symphony, will have the assistance of the Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross, 40 boys, aged nine to 13, from Camp Mah-Kee-Nac at neighboring Stockbridge Bowl, and 44 girls, aged 13 to 19, from Indian Hill Music Workshop at Stockbridge.

Evening concerts are at 8:30 p. m., the Sunday afternoon concert at 2:30 p. m. In the event of rain the Friday evening concert will be moved to the Music Shed.

An added attraction for Festival patrons is the organ recital at 3:00 p. m., Saturday in the Music Shed, by E. Power Biggs, with admission free to Friends of the Bekrshire Music Center, those who support the summer school of music of the Boston Symphony by voluntary contributions.

The final week of Festival concerts will offer a sonata program of Brahms and Bach by Zino Francescatti, violinist, with Artur Balsam at the piano on Wednesday, August 11; the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra, Jean Morel guest conductor, in a program of Rossini, Mozart, Ravel and Richard Strauss Thursday, August 12; Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in symphonic music of Brahms, Piston, Ravel and Saint-Saens, Saturday, August 14; and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Munch conducting, in Berlioz's "Requiem," in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, with David Poleri, tenor, as soloist, and the Festival Chorus, Sunday, August 15. Friday, August 13, is the annual "Tanglewood on Parade," gala concert for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, with Thomas Schippers conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Brenda Lewis, as soprano soloist; Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops Orchestra.

MAMARONECK, N. Y.
TIMES

JUL 24 1954

WEEK AT LENOX

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Scharack of 335 Claflin Avenue, Mamaroneck, are spending a week at the Music Inn, Lenox, Mass., and attending concerts at the Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewo

---

Festival Will Close Best Year Sunday

175,000 Will Have Attended Tanglewood Events

Jean Morel Conducts Chamber Music Orchestra Tonight.— "Tanglewood on Parade" Set for Friday.—Munch Will Lead Symphony In Final Concerts This Week-end.

With an anticipated attendance of 120,000 at its 24 concerts—six chamber music programs by visiting ensembles and 18 concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra—an expected 10,000 next Friday at "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center; and a predicted 45,000 patrons at the 40-odd concerts and demonstrations by various departments of the school, the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, concludes its 1954 schedule this week-end. A total of 175,000 persons will have helped shatter records, and prove the popularity of Music Director Charles Munch's decision this year to enlarge the annual summer Festival within the scope of its previous six-week framework.

Zino Francescatti, violinist, gave a recital of Brahms and Bach sonatas last evening in the Theatre-Concert Hall; Jean Morel will conduct the chamber music orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of Rossini, Mozart, Ravel and Richard Strauss tonight in the Theatre-Concert Hall. A symphonic program of works by Brahms, Piston, Ravel and Saint-Saens, with Charles Munch conducting the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, is set for Saturday evening in the Music Shed; and Mr. Munch will lead the Boston Symphony in Hector Berlioz's massive "Requiem," in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, with David Poleri, tenor, and chorus, Sunday in the Music Shed.

Jean Morel, who heads the orchestra and conducting department of the Music Center this summer, makes his second appearance on the podium for a Festival concert, featuring two works new to Tanglewood audiences, the Overture to "Scala di Seta" (The Silken Ladder), the short opera Rossini composed at the age of 20, and Richard Strauss' suite "Der Buger als Edelmann" (Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme) arranged from his incidental music to Boliere's play. Mr. Munch's Saturday evening concert also has two Tanglewood premieres, Walter Piston's Symphony No. 4, commissioned by the University of Minneapolis in 1951, and Saint-Saens' Symphony No. 3, in which E. Power Biggs is organ soloist.

When Hector Berlioz's "Requiem," which had its Tanglewood premiere in 1952, is repeated as the Festival's final concert Sunday, again under Mr. Munch's direction, it will conclude the conductor's performance this summer in their complete form of "The Damnation of Faust," "Romeo and Juliet," the "Harold in Italy" and "Fantastic" Symphonies, the "Summer Nights" song cycle, and the "Te Deum," in commemoration of the 150th anniversary of the birth of the French composer. The majestic "Requiem" will have the assistance of David Poleri, tenor soloist, a chorus of 200 voices of students of the choral and opera departments of the Berkshire Music Center augmented by the chorus of the Springfield Symphony Orchestra, and four brass bands totalling 36 players.

Evening concerts are at 8:30 p. m., the Sunday afternoon concert at 2:30 p. m. In the event of rain the Thursday evening chamber orchestra program will be moved to the Music Shed.

Week-end music lovers are invited to subscribe to "Tanglewood on Parade" on Friday. The annual benefit for the orchestra's music school, now completing its twelfth season, which provides opportunity for ensemble performance and musical instruction under expert musicians for some 400 students from 35 states in the United States and 12 foreign lands, is from 6:00 p. m. to 11:00 p. m. It will commence with demonstrations by all departments— student symphony orchestra, chamber music, chorus and opera, followed by a gala concert in the Music Shed and concluding with the drawing of door prizes and waltzing on the lawn. Thomas Schippers will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in symphonic music of Bizet and the final scene of Strauss' "Salome," with Brenda Lewis as soloist; and Arthur Fiedler will lead the Boston Pops Orchestra in a typical program.

Berkshire Courier
Aug. 12

All-Bach Program Set for Tanglewood

Hugh Ross, Charles Munch Will Conduct

Several "First" Performances At Berkshire Festival Scheduled for This Week-end. — Pierre Monteux Guest Conductor and Vera Franceschi Piano Soloist on Saturday.

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood in Lenox comprises an all-Bach program, including a cantata conducted by Hugh Ross and two suites performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Music Director Charles Munch, on Friday evening in the Theatre-Concert Hall; a program of Debussy and Franck performed by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor and Vera Franceschi as piano soloist, on Saturday evening in the Music Shed; and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Munch conducting, and Leo Smit as piano soloist, in a program of Debussy, Copland and Berlioz, on Sunday afternoon in the Music Shed.

First performances at Tanglewood will be given of the Bach Cantata No. 93, "Wer nur den lieben Gott," with soloists and students of Department II (choral) and Department IV (opera) of the Berkshire Music Center assisting, July 16; excerpts from "St. Sebastian" by Claude Debussy, and of Cesar Franck's "Les Djinns" for piano and orchestra, July 17; of Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto July 28. Piano soloists Vera Franceschi and Leo Smit wall also make their Tanglewood debuts.

The third week of festival concerts will offer The Zimbler Sinfonietta in chamber music of Vivaldi, Stravinsky and Rossini on Wednesday, July 21; the Boston Symphony Orchestra chamber orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, in a program of Handel and Haydn, including Haydn's "Nelson" Mass which Hugh Ross will lead on Friday, July 23; Jean Morel conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in selections by Weber, Prokofieff, Liszt and Elgar, with Nicol Henriot as piano soloist on Saturday, July 24; and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, in symphonic music of Berlioz and Ernst Toch, with William Primrose as viola soloist.

During the coming week all five departments of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, now in its twelfth six-week session at Tanglewood, will be in full operation. Friends of the music school who make a voluntary contribution for its support are invited to the following student performances; Sunday morning chamber music programs by Department I students (10:00 a. m., July 18, Chamber Music Hall); Sunday evening composers' forum by Department III students (8:30 p. m., July 18, Chamber Music Hall); symphony concert by the student orchestra of Department 1 (8:30 p. m., July 15, Music Shed).

July 15
Berkshire Courier

August 12

ROTARIANS TOLD OF SYMPHONY GROWTH

George Judd Is Speaker at Local Club's Weekly Meeting

Some of the history of symphonic music and of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which makes its summer home at Tanglewood in Lenox, were outlined for members of the Great Barrington Rotary Club by George Judd, business manager of the orchestra, at the club's weekly luncheon yesterday at St. James' parish rooms.

Symphony music and orchestras have had their greatest growth in the present century, Mr. Judd said. In 1900 there were only seven symphony orchestras in the United States, compared with 700 today, of which 30 are professional organizations. Today the sale of tickets to symphony orchestra concerts exceeds those to professional baseball games, Mr. Judd revealed.

In the 73 years since the Boston Symphony orchestra was founded i has played the works of 650 composers, he said. About 550 musician have played with the orchestra, which has about three replacements pe year. Mr. Judd expressed the hop that institutions such as the Bosto Symphony never would succumb governmental subsidy, saying the could not possibly serve the public they do today.

Burton H. Morrell, president, a nounced that the Great Barringto club would stage its annual golf tou nament for clubs in the 291st Rotar District at the Wyantenuck Countr Club on September 22.

July 22 (BC)

Festival Will Offer Haydn Mass Friday

Ross Will Conduct "Nelson" Mass in D Minor

Is First Performance of Work At Tanglewood.— Ernst Toch's Symphony No. 2 Also to Have Premiere In Berkshires.—Primrose to Be Viola Soloist Sunday Afternoon.

The third week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood in Lenox, comprises a program of Handel and Haydn, including a Haydn Mass conducted by Hugh Ross, performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Music Director Charles Munch on the podium, on Friday evening in the Theatre-Concert Hall; a program of Prokofieff, Liszt, Richard Strauss and Elgar performed by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Jean Morel as guest conductor, Nicole Henriot as piano soloist, on Saturday evening in the Music Shed; and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Munch conducting, and William Primrose as viola soloist, in a program of Berlioz and Toch, on Sunday afternoon in the Music Shed.

Among Tanglewood premiers during the week is the Haydn "Nelson" Mass in D Minor, No. 3, Friday, with soloists and the Festival Chorus from students of Department II (choral) and Department IV (opera) of the Berkshire Music Center assisting. The Symphony No. 2 of Austrian-American composer Ernst Toch, guest teacher of composition this summer at Tanglewood, which Charles Munch introduced to the United States in Boston and New York with the Boston Symphony in the 1952-53 season, will also be performed for the first time at Tanglewood; it is dedicated to Albert Schweitzer. Nicole Henriot played last at Tanglewood in 1952, and William Primrose was an instructor in the chamber music department of the Berkshire Music Center in 1947.

The first of two Saturday afternoon organ recitals by E. Power Biggs will be given in the Music Shed at 3:00 p. m. this Saturday.

Evening concerts are at 8:30 p. m., the Sunday afternoon concert at 2:30 p. m. In the event of rain the Friday evening concert will be moved to the Music Shed. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the spacious Tanglewood lawns, are placed on sale on the day of the performance, and Festival patrons are invited to a public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday at 10:00 a. m., for a nominal charge for the benefit of the Orchestra Pension Fund.

The fourth week of festival concerts will offer The Griller String Quartet in chamber music of Mozart, Bloch, Quartet No. 4, premiere, and Beethoven Wednesday, July 28; the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, in a program of Roussel, Ibert and Mozart with Doriot Anthony as soloist Friday, July 30; Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Berlioz's dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet" in its complete form, with John McCollum and Nicola Moscona as soloists, Saturday, July 31; and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Richard Burgin conducting, in symphonic music of William Schuman, Vaughan Williams, Khatchaturian and Sibelius, with Ruth Posselt as violin soloist, Sunday, August 1.

Berkshire Courier
Aug. 12

TO CONDUCT "POPS"

ARTHUR FIEDLER

Mr. Fiedler will conduct the first appearance of The Boston Pops Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, at the gala Tanglewood on Parade—the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center—Friday at 8:30 p. m. Mr. Fiedler and his Pops will share a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Thomas Schippers with Brenda Lewis as soprano soloist.

Arthur Fiedler and Boston Pops Booked

"Tanglewood On Parade" Set for August 13

Noted Conductor Will Fly From West Coast to Take Part In Program.—Brenda Lewis and Thomas Schippers to Be Starred.—Latter Graduate of Berkshire Music Center.

Tanglewood will be On Parade Friday, August 13. The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, which attracted 8500 persons last summer, is in aid of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music, now in its 12th season in conjunction with the six-week Berkshire Festival. Festivities, from 6:00 p. m. to 11:00 p. m., include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper, a gala evening concert, followed by drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

For the first time in the great Tanglewood Music Shed, The Boston Pops Orchestra will perform, with Arthur Fiedler, celebrating his 25th year as its conductor, on the podium. Through its annual seasons in Symphony Hall and at the Esplanade concerts on the Charles river mall in Boston, its extensive tours, and the mediums of recordings, radio and television, probably more people have heard the Pops and Arthur Fiedler than any other orchestra or conductor in history. Mr. Fiedler is now conducting the Art Commission Pop Concerts in San Francisco's Civic Auditorium, and will fly to the Berkshires for "Tanglewood on Parade" and return to California immediately.

The first half of the concert program will feature Thomas Schippers, a distinguished young alumnus of the Berkshire Music Center where he was a student in 1948, conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of Bizet and Richard Strauss. Still in his early twenties, Mr. Schippers won national acclaim when, at the age of nineteen, he made his debut on the podium with Gian-Carlo Menotti's opera, "The Consul." Since then he has conducted classical and contemporary operas with equal distinction during several seasons with the New York City Opera Company, including the world premiere on April 1 last of Aaron Copland's "The Tender Land," which will have its New England premiere by Tanglewood's opera department on August 2 and 3. Mr. Schippers has also conducted the Philadelphia, NBC and Lewisohn Stadium orchestras.

Soloist on Mr. Schipper's half of "Tanglewood on Parade" concert will be Brenda Lewis, celebrated young star of opera and musical comedy, in the final scene from Richard Strauss "Salome." When she sang this taxing role with the New York City Opera Company, critic Olin Downes of The New York Times wrote: "She held the audience breathless. Her interpretation was distinguished throughout by remarkable intelligence, dramatic intensity and taste. Masterly."

Seats for "Tanglewood on Parade" are now on sale at the Tanglewood box office, and may be reserved by telephone. Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky is chairman of the "Tanglewood on Parade" committee; Mrs. Bruce Sanborn of Lenox and Mrs. John H. Rice of Pittsfield are vice-chairmen; Miss Margo Miller of Pittsfield is secretary. Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Glendale is chairman of the committee for the sale of boxes, with Mrs. Thomas D. Perry, Jr., as vice-chairman. Mrs. Sanborn is also heading the committee for door prizes, which will be awarded to lucky ticket-holders after the concert.

A program of Roussel, Ibert and Mozart will be performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Music Director Charles Munch on the podium, and Dorothy Anthony as flute soloist, on Friday evening in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood. Berlioz's dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet," with Beatrice Krebs, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone, and the Festival Chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center with the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, will be presented on Saturday evening in the Music Shed. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Richard Burgin as guest conductor and Ruth Posselt as violin soloist, will be heard in a program of William Schuman, Vaughan Williams, Khatchaturian and Sibelius, on Sunday afternoon in the Music Shed. This is the fourth week of the Berkshire music festival.

Berkshire Benefit Takes Place Tonight

"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center (the summer school of musi operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra) at Tanglewood, Lenox, begins at 6 tonight with simultaneous sessions of the student orchestra, opera department and chamber music students, followed by a concert of the choral department at 7 p.m.

Berk. Courier July 8 Price: Ten Cents

THE HAPPY FIDDLER OF FIDDLETOP

Photo by Tassone

Rene Zino Francescatti, the renowned violinist, whose talented hands are more accustomed to playing the violin, takes time out from his musical duties to engage in the more prosaic duties of gardening at his home, Fiddletop, in Monterey. He finds hoeing the Francescatti garden rather relaxing after his strenuous concert tours.

Perched on a knoll in Monterey, and swept by the Berkshire breezes, is a modern 10-room comfortable looking home, commanding a fine view of the surrounding hills. The name of it is "Fiddletop," and an appropriate one too, for it is the country home of one of the world's foremost violinists, Zino Francescatti. What would draw such outstanding musicians to the Berkshires? Well, for one thing the area has become one of the music centers of the world, made so by the annual festival at Tanglewood. The late Albert Spalding maintained Aston Magna, his country home, on Berkshire Heights, and Fritz Kreisler, another noted violinist, spends much time in Stockbridge. But aside from the fact that the musicians are close to "their work" at Tanglewood, the beauty of the Berkshire Hills is an attraction in themselves, as Maestro Francescatti brought out during a pleasant interview with the Courier correspondent recently. Monterey is a long ways from Marseilles, France, where Zino Francescatti was born, and grew up in the musical atmosphere that predominated his home.

You readers will probably wonder what kind of a person is Mr. Francescatti, considered the foremost exponent of the works of the great Nicola Paganini, the man who changed the "fiddle" to a violin. People have the general impression that the master artists of the music world are inclined to be temperamental, aloof of the more prosaic things in life, sporting long hair, and possessed with the happy faculty of creating a mild volcano when something goes wrong, like the striking of a sour note. Then they are pictured as breaking batons, tearing the music scores or weeping unashamedly. Now whether musicians act this way or not is a matter of conjecture, but such is not the case with the Monterey virtuoso.

For he gives clear evidence that he enjoys life to the utmost and also whatever he happens to be doing, playing the violin or donning a pair of grease and dirt stained trousers and driving his tractor, or working in his garden at Fiddletop. You can sense that in the way he speaks; his mannerisms, which are typically continental, aided so by the fact that he is of Italian and French extraction. His face in the matter of seconds can express moods as quickly as he can change a tune on his violin. It can be a picture of deep seriousness in one second and suddenly be one of keen delight when something pleases him no end. And he has the typical Latin gestures to emphasize his remarks. He has a fine command of English fired in the rapid style of the French language. His sentences can be very short too, and his favorite way of expressing something that didn't turn out too well, is the sound "pff-t," and tosses his hands in a hopeless gesture.

Musical Background

Music is Monsieur Francescatti's life and love, and it can readily be seen why it is so, and why he is considered the violinist best able to express the works of Paganini. His father was Fortunato Francescatti, a gentleman from Verona, son of a lawyer, who had a strong penchant for playing the violin. His name means just what it sounds like—fortunate, but he was called Renato for short. As a young violinist he went to France where he came famous as a soloist, and led many of the big orchestras in that country. He had studied under Bazzini and Camillo Sivori, two of the outstanding violinists of their day. Sivori was a pupil of Paganini, and in fact his only pupil. The great maestro took a liking to Camillo and taught him all the skill that he knew on the violin. The elder Francescatti, in turn, learned the technique from Sivori, and in turn taught it to his son. So that it has been handed down in family style, so to speak.

The present-day virtuoso takes great delight in telling the life of his father. For after he had made a name for himself as a musician, the elder Francescatti went to Marseilles where he decided to make his home. Marseilles was not a city cultured in music especially, being better known as a great seaport city. But here Signor Francescatti found the place he was looking for. As a musician he was without peer in Marseilles, and then too, it gave him the opportunity to pursue his other loves, like etching in wood, painting, collecting various and sundry articles, and writing. He settled here too, for the reason there was a large Italian population and he felt pretty much at home.

Signor Francescatti had a great interest in everything in life. He would go down to the docks where the big ships came in, bringing with them animals from all parts of the world. These fascinated him so much that he would buy monkeys, huge turtles weighing 400 pounds, lizards, and practically everything that came through the port. These he would take to his home, where he had a miniature zoo in his yard. The upper story of his home would house the various animals he had collected. He was a happy and confirmed bachelor. Some of his friends who were great musicians would come to call on him and try to persuade him to leave that city and go to Paris where he would make much more money than he would in Marseilles. But Signor Francescatti was happy where he was, and money, he reasoned, could not give him the happiness that he enjoyed in the teeming city of Marseilles.

In fact he was so satisfied with life that he gave little thought to romance until in his 44th year, when the beautiful 15-year-old Ernesta Feraud came to him as a violin pupil. She had won the conservatory award and decided to study under the great Maestro Francescatti. Ernesta came from an old Marseilles family, which traced its lineage back for centuries, way back to antiquity. If Signor Francescatti had been impervious to the charms of the French belles for many years, he finally found his match in the beautiful Ernesta, for when she was 17 she and her violin teacher were married and lived very happily together. She, like her husband, was a great lover of music. But she had no aspirations to play in concert halls or tour the continent. She was contented to play the violin for her own enjoyment, and to make a home for her husband and family. She often participated with chamber music groups around her city. Even today she practices diligently, as does her son.

First Shed Concert Is Set for Saturday

"The Damnation of Faust" Is Scheduled for Opening

Director Charles Munch Will Lead 104-Piece Boston Symphony Orchestra.—All-Beethoven Program With Claudio Arrau As Piano Soloist, Planned for Sunday Afternoon.

The seventeenth Berkshire Festival since concerts were inaugurated in the hills of Western Massachusetts in 1934, the fifteenth since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first participated, started six weeks of 24 concerts last night in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, with an all-Beethoven program of chamber music, featuring Claudio Arrau, pianist, and the Bel Arte string Trio.

Tomorrow at 8:30 p. m. in the Theatre-concert Hall, Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in an all-Bach program, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist.

For the first time in Berkshire Festival history, Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts will be given commencing this week-end, July 10 at 8:30 p. m. and July 11 at 2:30 p. m. in the Music Shed. Mr. Munch will lead the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday evening in the first Tanglewood presentation of Hector Berlioz's "The Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society directed by G. Wallace Woodworth participating, and soloists Eleanor Steber (Marguerite), David Poleri (Faust), Martial Singher (Mephistopheles) and Donald Gramm (Brander).

On Sunday afternoon guest conductor Pierre Monteux will conduct the full Boston Symphony in an all-Beethoven program, with Claudio Arrau as piano soloist, the occasion marking the thirtieth anniversary of Mr. Arrau's first appearance with the orchestra which was then under the baton of Mr. Monteux.

Since 1938 when the 6000-seat Music Shed was erected on the Tanglewood estate where Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest a century ago, open on three sides so the music might spill out to the thousands who listen to it on the grass under the stars, the Berkshire Festival has attracted increasingly large crowds from all over Eastern U. S. and Canada until last summer all attendance records were broken, with an average of 10,200 at each shed concert.

To accommodate its growing crowds of music lovers, the 1954 Berkshire Festival has been increased in scope within its six-week framework: twelve shed concerts instead of last year's nine, on Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons; the popular Bach-Mozart concerts, which last summer were concentrated in the Festival's first three week-ends, this year are to be held each Friday evening; and a new series has been inaugurated of six Wednesday evening chamber music programs, a total of 24 concerts in all. On Saturday morning, July 10, at 10:00 a. m., the Boston Symphony will hold the first of six weekly open rehearsals, for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund, to which the public is invited for a nominal admission.

The music shed concerts in 1954 will honor the 150th anniversary season of the birth of Hector Berlioz by performing complete versions of this composer's principal works. In addition to the opening Shed concert's Tanglewood premiere of "The Damnation of Faust," a masterpiece lasting two and a half hours and seldom heard in its entirety, Mr. Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the "Fantastic Symphony" (July 18); the Overture to "Beatrice and Benedick" and the symphony "Harold in Italy," with William Primrose as viola soloist (July 25); the dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet" in its complete form with the Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center, and John McCollum and Nicola Moscana as soloists (July 31); the Overture to "Benvenuto Cellini," "Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans," the song cycle "Summer Nights" with Eleanor Steber as soloist, and the "Te Deum" with the Festival Chorus and David Poleri, soloist (August 7); concluding the Festival with the "Requiem" in memory of Serge Koussevitzky again with the Festival Chorus and David Poleri, soloist (August 15).

The first week's Berkshire Festival programs are:

Friday, July 9, 8:30 p. m., Treatre Concert Hall, Chamber Orchestra Bach—Brandenburg Concertos No. 1 in F; No. 2, in F, with the following soloists from the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Doriot Anthony, flute Harold Gomberg, oboe; Roger Voisin trumpet; Richard Burgin, violin; No. 3, in G, strings; No. 5, in D, with the following soloists: Lukas Foss, piano Miss Anthony, flute; Mr. Burgin, violin; No. 6, in B-flat, strings. Charles Munch, conductor.

Saturday, July 10, 8:30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra: Berlioz: "The Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Chorale Society, directed by G. Wallace Woodworth, and soloists Eleanor Steber, soprano (Marguerite), David Poleri, tenor (Faust), Martial Singher, baritone (Mephistopheles) and Donald Gramm, bass-baritone (Brander). Charles Munch, conductor.

Sunday, July 11, 2:30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra: Beethoven: Overture to "Leonore," No. 3; Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emporer"), with Claudio Arrau as soloist; Symphony No. 5. Pierre Monteux, conductor.

Busy Tanglewood Program Today

Aug. 13

Special to the Herald Tribune

LENOX, Mass. Aug. 12.—The complete program has been announced for tomorrow's "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit at Tanglewood for the Berkshire Music Center. The Tanglewood Study Group will open a two-hour demonstration at 2 p. m. in the Barn, one of the Center's buildings. Gounod's opera "The Physician in Spite of Himself," will have a performance at 4 p. m. in Tanglewood's formal gardens; this is open only to purchasers of reserved and box seats for the evening concert.

After a fanfare at 5:45, there will be three simultaneous demonstrations of the Centers activities. A student orchestra will play works of Bizet, Mozart, Lalo and Wagner in the Music Shed; scenes from "Tosca" and "La Boheme" and Hindemith's short opera, "There and Back" will be performed in the Theater-Concert Hall, and chamber music by Brahms, Kodaly, John Kennedy, Copland, Poulenc, Leonard Bernstein and Richard Maxfield will be heard in the Chamber Music Hall. A student chorus will sing music by Gesualdo, Hassler, Peter Re, Karl Kohn, Vaughan Williams, Dvorak, Benjamin Britten, Norman Dello Joio and Offenback during the supper interval beginning at 7 p. m.

In the evening concert beginning at 8:15, as announced, the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Thomas Schippers will play Bizet's Symphony in C and the finale of Richard Strauss' "Salome," with Brenda Lewis as solist, and Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra in a characteristic program. Drawing for door prizes waltzing on the lawn and a jam session will follow.

Generally speaking, even in the best ears a corporation's profits are much ss than its wage costs. And in any cases they are much less than s tax payments.—Attleboro (Mass.) un.

CLEVELAND, OHIO
PLAIN DEALER

JUL 25 1954

Massachusetts Is Steeped in Founding Americana

Reaching back into history, Massachusetts the birthplace of the nation, has become a favored "past-time" for hundreds of thousands of visitors.

The Bay State is a blending of a series of anachronisms. On the one hand the modern is apparent from the time the visitor arrives over highway, by airline, fast train or even by ship. On the other hand the state is a rich repository of Americana, literally a living museum, of dwellings, the artifacts and the daily wherewithal by which the founding fathers of the nation lived.

The state's 1,800-mile coastline offers every type of sea shore vacation including pool-still bathing beaches or vigorous boiling surf. Sand dunes rim picturesque fishing villages where one may troll from a boat or fish from surf or even fish from bridges or docks for a variety of game fish.

Clear across on the western side of the state the Berkshire Hills rear their verdant heights to form a cultural center, the highlight of which is the annual world-renowned Tangelwood concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. This year they will be held from Wednesday through Aug 15.

In the center of the state on either side of the Connecticut River, which bisects the state from southern to northern borders, is the rich Pioneer Valley whose lakes and streams, wooded hills and fertile valleys offer boating, swimming and other inland diversion. It also boasts a fossil bed of dinosaur tracks.

Old Sturbridge Village, a recreated Colonial community, is in the central section. The North Shore has Gloucester with its heritage of schooners.

Cape Cod, Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket have individual attractions. In Boston, with its historical shrines, may be found Bunker Hill, and Faneuil Hall, the Old North Church, Paul Revere's birthplace and the proud "Old Ironsides." Other landmarks are Plymouth, "America's Home Town;" Concord and Lexington, the House of Seven Gables and Old Deerfield Village.

Accommodations are varied and include hotel, inn, guest homes, motels and tourist courts.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.
POST

JUL 26 1954

Music Group Members Visit Tanglewood

Eight members of the Music department of the Southport Woman's club spent Saturday at the Berkshire Music festival in Tanglewood, Mass. They attended a morning rehearsal of the Boston symphony and an afternoon organ recital by E. Power Biggs.

Those who went were Mrs. Leonard A. Beadle, Mrs. Paul Parks, Mrs. Ralph L. Talbot, Mrs. F. S. Grandin, Mrs. William Kennedy, Mrs. John P. Heumann, and Mrs. Ruth Childs Pillsbury.

HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES

JUL 24 1954

Trumpeter Wins with Jitterbug

GREEN JITTERBUG plug used by Roger Voisin, first trumpeter of Boston Symphony, snags 5¾ pound large-mouth bass, 20 inches long, in Stockbridge Bowl, fishing from wharf near his newly acquired Summer cottage.—[Berkshire Eagle Photo.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE

JUL 22 1954

Chinese Priest Will Preach at St. Stephen's Sunday

The Rev. Roland Koh

The Rev. Roland Koh, rector of St. Mary's Episcopal Church in Hongkong, China, will preach at the 10 a.m. service in St. Stephen's Episcopal Church Sunday morning. The announcement was made today by the Rev. Malcolm W. Eckel, rector of St. Stephen's.

Mr. Koh is visiting in this country prior to attending the Anglican Congress in Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 4-13. The congress, the first of its kind in the history of the Episcopal Church, will be held in the diocese of Minnesota which is headed by Bishop Stephen Keeler, formerly of St. Stephen's Church.

McHenry Boatwright, a member of the Tanglewood opera department, will be soloist for the service. He will sing, "O Divine Redeemer," by Gounod. Mr. Boatwright was soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in "The Damnation of Faust," by Berlioz. In 1954, he won the Chicago music award.

A native of Sandakan, British North Borneo, Mr. Koh received his higher education in Hongkong. He became a priest in the Episcopal church in 1941. He was the first Chinese priest in the history of the church in China to wark as student chaplain in a non-Christian university in China, the National Sun Yat-sen University. He worked there from 1941 to 1946.

Mr. Koh is the author of two books: "The Writings of St. Luke," in English, and "Does God Care for Me?" in Chinese. On his return to the East, Mr. Koh will be

---

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE

JUL 13 1954

Exhibit Of Noted Sculptor's Works At Tanglewood

Continuing the weekly exhibitions of art in the reception room at the main gate of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Franc Epping of Lenox will have a showing of her sculpture. The exhibit, which opened Monday and continues through Sunday, July 18, will be Miss Epping's second Tanglewood showing.

A private teacher in Lenox and director of the Sculpture Workshop, Miss Epping is responsible for the annual outdoor exhibit of Berkshire sculptors in the Lenox library gardens.

Franc Epping's sculptures on display at Tanglewood include "Michael and the Dragon," in metal; a head, in Berkshire soapstone; "Young David," in walnut; "Martyr," in hornbeam; and "Maya," in cherrywood.

Miss Epping received her training at the Otis Art Institute, Los Angeles, and at the Corcoran Art Gallery in Washington, D.C. Included in her European studies has been work with both Bernhard Bleeker and Joseph Wackerle in Munich, Germany.

Several public buildings in the United States contain examples of her work including the post offices at Oakmont, Pa.; Alexander City, Ala.; and the Institute of Science, Jackson Park, Chicago. Exhibitions in various sculptural media have been seen at the Metropolitan Museum in New York; the Pennsylvania Academy, Philadelphia, and the New York World's Fair.

The Tanglewood exhibitions, changing weekly during the Berkshire Festival season, are arranged through the cooperation of Stuart Henry, director of the Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield, of which Miss Epping is a member.

Springfield UNION

LD, MASS., FRIDAY, AUGUST 13, 1954

'PARADE' LEADS LAST WEEK END IN LENOX MUSIC

Benefit for Berkshire Music Center Given Tonight At Tanglewood

"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center (the summer school of music operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra) at Tanglewood, Lenox, begins at 6 p. m. tonight with simultaneous sessions of the student orchestra, opera department and chamber music students, followed by a concert of the choral department at 7 p. m.

Schippers to Conduct

Former Tanglewood student Thomas Schippers conducts the first half of the gala concert in the Music Shed beginning at 8.15 p. m. Leading the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the first time, Schippers has programmed Bizet's Symphony in C and the final scene from Richard Strauss' opera "Salome" with Brenda Lewis as soloist. After intermission Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra play for the first time in Tanglewood's Music Shed.

Festival patrons may attend a public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday at 10 a. m. in the Music Shed.

For the Music Shed concert Saturday at 8.30 p. m. Charles Munch has chosen Brahms' "Tragic Overture," Walter Piston's Symphony No. 4, Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin" and the Saint-Saens Symphony No. 3, E. Power Biggs organ soloist.

Dedicated to the memory of the late Serge Koussevitzky, first director of the Berkshire Music Center and musical director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for 25 years, Munch will conduct the seldom-heard Berlioz "Requiem" at the final festival concert at 2.30 p. m. Sunday in the Music Shed. Tenor soloist will be David Poleri; the chorus of 200 choral and opera students from the Berkshire Music Center, trained by Hugh Ross and James Aliferis, will be augmented by a chorus of 50 voices from the Springfield Symphony Orchestra and four brass bands totaling 36 players.

Friends of the Berkshire Music Center may bear two student events during the final week end: Seymour Lipkin of the faculty and four student conductors will lead the student orchestra at 3 p. m. Saturday in the Music Shed; and at 10 a. m.; on Sunday, a concert of chamber music in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

MOREL CONDUCTS FINAL PROGRAM AT TANGLEWOOD

Leads Chamber Orchestra In Another Satisfying Concert

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 12—Jean Morel conducted the chamber orchestra tonight in the final concert of the season, offering a program that ranged from Rossini to Strauss and included Mozart and Ravel. As has been the case this season the chamberorchestra concert was one of the highlights of the week. It seems to us that the chamber music concerts and the chamberorchestra concerts have been more satisfying than the week-end shed concerts with their succession of Berlioz performances.

Vigorous Conductor

Mr. Morel opened the program tonight with a fine-grained performance of the overture to Rossini's opera "La Scala Di Seta" or "The Silken Ladder." Then followed a sturly, somewhat brusque performance of Mozart's "Symphony No. 33 in B-Flat" K. 319. Mr. Morel conducts with a deal of vigor and a considerable amount of Gallic gesturing. But the orchestra goes pretty much its own way—which is usually the right way.

Ravel's "Mother Goose" suite proved the ideal interpretive vehicle for the conductor. In this suite Ravel has painted with lavish colors. Its melodic content is of exquisite texture and there may be found a wide variety of moods and spirit. For example, there is the grave and lovely "Pavane of the Sleeping Beauty"; the sprightly "Hop O' My Thumb" and the delicate nuances of the conversation between beauty and the beast. Mr. Morel sensed the charm of the suite and offered a sensitive and convincing interpretation. He was fortunate in having so fine an orchestra at his command.

This suite as conducted by Serge Koussevitzky was long a famous work in the repertoire.

Big Program Today

The program concluded with another and equally lovely suite which Strauss wrote. It is based on Moliere's "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme." This music cultivates the style of Lully and even borrows from the music the composer had written for the original performance of "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme" in 1670 when Lully acted the part of Mufti. The performance was notable for its grace, spirit and balance.

"Tanglewood On Parade" is scheduled for tomorrow with something doing every minute from 4 o'clock on. There will be operatic, and orchestral performances, chamber music and even dancing.

VALATIE, N.Y
ROUGH NOTES
7/9/54

Monteaux Will Conduct BSO At Tanglewood

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, comprises an evening of chamber music by The Albeneri Trio on Wednesday evening, July 14, in the Theatre-Concert Hall; an all-Bach program, including a Cantata conducted by Hugh Ross and two suites performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Music Director Charles Munch, on Friday evening, July 16, in the Theatre-Concert Hall; a program of Debussy and Franck performed by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor and Vera Franceschi as piano soloist, on Friday evening, July 17, in the Music Shed; and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Munch conducting, and Leo Smit as piano soloist, in a program of Debussy, Copland and Berlioz, on Sunday afternoon, July 18, in the Music Shed.

Evening concerts are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon concert at 2:30 p.m.

CLEVELAND, OHIO
PLAIN DEALER
JUL 25 1954

Massachusetts Is Steeped in Founding Americana

Reaching back into history, Massachusetts the birthplace of the nation, has become a favored "past-time" for hundreds of thousands of visitors.

The Bay State is a blending of a series of anachronisms. On the one hand the modern is apparent from the time the visitor arrives over highway, by airline, fast train or even by ship. On the other hand the state is a rich repository of Americana, literally a living museum, of dwellings, the artifacts and the daily wherewithal by which the founding fathers of the nation lived.

The state's 1,800-mile coastline offers every type of sea shore vacation including pool-still bathing beaches or vigorous boiling surf. Sand dunes rim picturesque fishing villages where one may troll from a boat or fish from surf or even fish from bridges or docks for a variety of game fish.

Clear across on the western side of the state the Berkshire Hills rear their verdant heights to form a culturai center, the highlight of which is the annual world-renowned Tangelwood concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. This year they will be held from Wednesday through Aug 15.

In the center of the state on either side of the Connecticut River, which bisects the state from southern to northern borders, is the rich Pioneer Valley whose lakes and streams, wooded hills and fertile valleys offer boating, swimming and other inland diversion. It also boasts a fossil bed of dinosaur tracks.

Old Sturbridge Village, a recreated Colonial community, is in the central section. The North Shore has Gloucester with its heritage of schooners.

Cape Cod, Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket have individual attractions. In Boston, with its historical shrines, may be found Bunker Hill, and Faneuil Hall, the Old North Church, Paul Revere's birthplace and the proud "Old Ironsides." Other landmarks are Plymouth, "America's Home Town;" Concord and Lexington, the House of Seven Gables and Old Deerfield Village.

Accommodations are varied and include hotel, inn, guest homes, motels and tourist courts.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.
POST
JUL 26 1954

Music Group Members Visit Tanglewood

Eight members of the Music department of the Southport Woman's club spent Saturday at the Berkshire Music festival in Tanglewood, Mass. They attended a morning rehearsal of the Boston symphony and an afternoon organ recital by E. Power Biggs.

Those who went were Mrs. Leonard A. Beadle, Mrs. Paul Parks, Mrs. Ralph L. Talbot, Mrs. F. S. Grandin, Mrs. William Kennedy, Mrs. John P. Heumann, and Mrs. Ruth Childs Pillsbury.

HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
JUL 24 1954

Trumpeter Wins with Jitterbug

GREEN JITTERBUG plug used by Roger Voisin, first trumpeter of Boston Symphony, snags 5¾ pound large-mouth bass, 20 inches long, in Stockbridge Bowl, fishing from wharf near his newly acquired Summer cottage.—[Berkshire Eagle Photo.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
JUL 22 1954

Chinese Priest Will Preach at St. Stephen's Sunday

The Rev. Roland Koh

The Rev. Roland Koh, rector of St. Mary's Episcopal Church in Hongkong, China, will preach at the 10 a.m. service in St. Stephen's Episcopal Church Sunday morning. The announcement was made today by the Rev. Malcolm W. Eckel, rector of St. Stephen's.

Mr. Koh is visiting in this country prior to attending the Anglican Congress in Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 4-13. The congress, the first of its kind in the history of the Episcopal Church, will be held in the diocese of Minnesota which is headed by Bishop Stephen Keeler, formerly of St. Stephen's Church.

McHenry Boatwright, a member of the Tanglewood opera department, will be soloist for the service. He will sing, "O Divine Redeemer," by Gounod. Mr. Boatwright was soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in "The Damnation of Faust," by Berlioz. In 1954, he won the Chicago music award.

A native of Sandakan, British North Borneo, Mr. Koh received his higher education in Hongkong. He became a priest in the Episcopal church in 1941. He was the first Chinese priest in the history of the church in China to wark as student chaplain in a non-Christian university in China, the National Sun Yat-sen University. He worked there from 1941 to 1946.

Mr. Koh is the author of two books: "The Writings of St. Luke," in English, and "Does God Care for Me?" in Chinese. On his return to the East, Mr. Koh will be loaned to the diocese of Singapore to take charge of work among the Chinese in Kula Lumpur in Malaya.

Continuing the weekly exhibitions of art in the reception room at the main gate of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Franc Epping of Lenox will have a showing of her sculpture. The exhibit, which opened Monday and continues through Sunday, July 18, will be Miss Epping's second Tanglewood showing.

A private teacher in Lenox and director of the Sculpture Workshop, Miss Epping is responsible for the annual outdoor exhibit of Berkshire sculptors in the Lenox library gardens.

Franc Epping's sculptures on display at Tanglewood include "Michael and the Dragon," in metal; a head, in Berkshire soapstone; "Young David," in walnut; "Martyr," in hornbeam; and "Maya,"in cherrywood.

Miss Epping received her training at the Otis Art Institute, Los Angeles, and at the Corcoran Art Gallery in Washington, D.C. Included in her European studies has been work with both Bernhard Bleeker and Joseph Wackerle in Munich, Germany.

Several public buildings in the United States contain examples of her work including the post offices at Oakmont, Pa.; Alexander City, Ala.; and the Institute of Science, Jackson Park, Chicago. Exhibitions in various sculptural media have been seen at the Metropolitan Museum in New York; the Pennsylvania Academy, Philadelphia, and the New York World's Fair.

The Tanglewood exhibitions, changing weekly during the Berkshire Festival season, are arranged through the cooperation of Stuart Henry, director of the Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield, of which Miss Epping is a member.

Springfield UNION

LD, MASS., FRIDAY, AUGU[illegible] 13, 1954

'PARADE' LEADS LAST WEEK END IN LENOX MUSIC

Benefit for Berkshire Music Center Given Tonight At Tanglewood

"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center (the summer school of music operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra) at Tanglewood, Lenox, begins at 6 p. m. tonight with simultaneous sessions of the student orchestra, opera department and chamber music students, followed by a concert of the choral department at 7 p. m.

Schippers to Conduct

Former Tanglewood student Thomas Schippers conducts the first half of the gala concert in the Music Shed beginning at 8.15 p. m. Leading the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the first time, Schippers has programmed Bizet's Symphony in C and the final scene from Richard Strauss' opera "Salome" with Brenda Lewis as soloist. After intermission Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra play for the first time in Tanglewood's Music Shed.

Festival patrons may attend a public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday at 10 a. m. in the Music Shed.

For the Music Shed concert Saturday at 8.30 p. m. Charles Munch has chosen Brahms' "Tragic Overture," Walter Piston's Symphony No. 4, Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin" and the Saint-Saens Symphony No. 3, E. Power Biggs organ soloist.

Dedicated to the memory of the late Serge Koussevitzky, first director of the Berkshire Music Center and musical director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for 25 years, Munch will conduct the seldom-heard Berlioz "Requiem" at the final festival concert at 2.30 p. m. Sunday in the Music Shed. Tenor soloist will be David Poleri; the chorus of 200 choral and opera students from the Berkshire Music Center, trained by Hugh Ross and James Aliferis, will be augmented by a chorus of 50 voices from the Springfield Symphony Orchestra and four brass bands totaling 36 players.

Friends of the Berkshire Music Center may bear two student events during the final week end: Seymour Lipkin of the faculty and four student conductors will lead the student orchestra at 3 p. m. Saturday in the Music Shed; and at 10 [illegible] m.; on Sunday, a concert of chamber music in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

MOREL CONDUCTS FINAL PROGRAM AT TANGLEWOOD

Leads Chamber Orchestra In Another Satisfying Concert

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 12—Jean Morel conducted the chamber orchestra tonight in the final concert of the season, offering a program that ranged from Rossini to Strauss and included Mozart and Ravel. As has been the case this season the chamberorchestra concert was one of the highlights of the week. It seems to us that the chamber music concerts and the chamberorchestra concerts have been more satisfying than the week-end shed concerts with their succession of Berlioz performances.

Vigorous Conductor

Mr. Morel opened the program tonight with a fine-grained performance of the overture to Rossini's opera "La Scala Di Seta" or "The Silken Ladder." Then followed a sturly, somewhat brusque performance of Mozart's "Symphony No. 33 in B-Flat" K. 319. Mr. Morel conducts with a deal of vigor and a considerable amount of Gallic gesturing. But the orchestra goes pretty much its own way—which is usually the right way.

Ravel's "Mother Goose" suite proved the ideal interpretive vehicle for the conductor. In this suite Ravel has painted with lavish colors. Its melodic content is of exquisite texture and there may be found a wide variety of moods and spirit. For example, there is the grave and lovely "Pavane of the Sleeping Beauty"; the sprightly "Hop O' My Thumb" and the delicate nuances of the conversation between beauty and the beast. Mr. Morel sensed the charm of the suite and offered a sensitive and convincing interpretation. He was fortunate in having so fine an orchestra at his command.

This suite as conducted by Serge Koussevitzky was long a famous work in the repertoire.

Big Program Today

The program concluded with another and equally lovely suite which Strauss wrote. It is based on Moliere's "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme." This music cultivates the style of Lully and even borrows from the music the composer had written for the original performance of "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme" in 1670 when Lully acted the part of Mufti. The performance was notable for its grace, spirit and balance.

"Tanglewood On Parade" is scheduled for tomorrow with something doing every minute from 4 o'clock on. There will be operatic, and orchestral performances, chamber music and even dancing.

VALATIE, N.Y
ROUGH NOTES
7/9/54

Monteaux Will Conduct BSO At Tanglewood

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, comprises an evening of chamber music by The Albeneri Trio on Wednesday evening, July 14, in the Theatre-Concert Hall; an all-Bach program, including a Cantata conducted by Hugh Ross and two suites performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Music Director Charles Munch, on Friday evening, July 16, in the Theatre-Concert Hall; a program of Debussy and Franck performed by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor and Vera Franceschi as piano soloist, on Friday evening, July 17, in the Music Shed; and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Munch conducting, and Leo Smit as piano soloist, in a program of Debussy, Copland and Berlioz, on Sunday afternoon, July 18, in the Music Shed.

Evening concerts are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon concert at 2:30 p.m.

ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION
JUL 27 1954

Variety Keynotes 1954 Tanglewood Concerts

By EDGAR S. VAN OLINDA

Variety seems to be the keynote of the 1954 series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood with Berlioz coming into his own in honor of his 150th birthday. Guest conductors seem to emerge from behind every fine elm tree on the spacious lawns on the property of the orchestra and the school. Pierre Monteux, Hugh Ross and Jean Morel have had their moments but for this reviewer, Charles Munch, the regular conductor, seems to have that dynamic personality which places the music under his direction on a high and exciting plane, not always attained by his coadjutors.

Saturday night's program was conducted by Jean Morel and proved to be one of the outstanding events so far this season. Prokofieff was represented by his Sixth Symphony and Liszt by his E-Flat piano concerto, admirably played by the distinguished French piano virtuoso, Nicole Henroit. The final panel was the playing of Sir Edward Elgar's interesting and provocative "Enigma" variations, coupled with the colorful "Don Juan" tone poem by Richard Strauss.

SUNDAY CONCERT

Sunday afternoon's concert brought the world's greatest viola player, William Primrose, in his well known performance of Berlioz's travelogue, "Harold in Italy." He invested the work with warmth, a great variety of tone color, vibrant tone and human sentiment.

Ernest Toch's Second Symphony, with the composer in the audience and called to the podium at the conclusion of the work, was more a demonstration of the possibilities of a modern orchestra than a piece of music destined for immortality. Mr. Munch brought out every nuance, mood, accent of the work which, in the last analysis could be labeled: "Bombastic." Mr. Toch had a few weak moments when he allowed a melody to seep forth, but for this reviewer, we prefer less provocative music — something that leaves a good taste in the mouth at the conclusion. However, it appealed tremendously to the younger element of the audience as the enthusiastic applause made apparent. There was less demonstration from the staid, old New England box holders who were brought up on Bach, Beethoven and Brahms.

HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM
JUL 26 1954

14,960 Persons At Tanglewood Over Weekend

The Berlioz anniversary which is being celebrated at Tanglewood this season reached a high point Sunday afternoon when William Primrose, the great violist appeared with the Boston Symphony orchestra to play the 'Harold in Italy" Symphony. Mr. Primrose is a perfectionist, as is the orchestra with which he played. The results produced an ovation from an audience of some 7200 people.

Also on the Sunday afternoon program conducted by Charles Meunch was the Overture to 'Beatrice and Benedick" by Berloiz, and Toch's Symphony No. 2. The latter, a composition completed in 1951 by Ernest Toch of the Berkshire Music Center faculty, was a welcome addition to the Festival program, which includes few contemporary works.

On Saturday night the big contribution which the Center is making to present day music was also demonstrated when Jean Morel, brilliant French conductor who teaches at the center, led the orchestra in a stunning presentation of Prokofieff's Sixth Symphony. Another young star appeared that night in the person of Nicole Henroit, whose powerful playing of the Liszt First Piano Concert was memorable. The program also boasted the Strauss 'Don Juan." There was an attendance of 7760 at this concert.

Tanlewood programs for the current week include the Griller String Quartet, which will play in the Theater Concert hall Wednesday evening, and a chamber orchestra concert Friday night with Charles Munch conducting. This program will feature Doroit Anthony in Ibert's Flute Concerto, and will also include Roussel's "The Spider's Feast, Mozart's Serenade for Eight Winds, and Mozart's 'Paris" Symphony.

Saturday night the Berlioz, dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet" will be conducted by Charles Munch and on Sunday Richard Burgin, Boston Symphony concert master, will conduct a program of works by Prokofieff. Dvorak. and Sebelius.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
JUL 26 1954

15,000 at Music Festival; 3 One-Act Operas Tomorrow

The 1954 Berkshire Music festival at Tanglewood passed the halfway mark over the weekend, with almost 15,000 persons at the big shed for concerts on Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon.

Three One-Act Operas

The program for this week, in addition to the four regular concerts, will be highlighted tomorrow evening by the presentation of three one-act operas by the Berkshire Music Center's opera department.

Conductor Jean Morel, pianist Nicole Henriot and violist William Primrose were guest artists with the Boston Symphony over the week-end.

Mr. Morel conducted the Saturday evening program, during which Miss Henriot was heard as soloist in the Concerto for Pianoforte in E flat Major, No. 1, by Liszt. Other works on the program were Prokofieff's Symphony No. 6, Strauss' "Don Juan" tone poem, and Elgar's "Enigma" Variations, Opus 36.

Yesterday afternoon Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony, led the orchestra in a program continuing the cycle of Berlioz performances, commemorating the 150th anniversary of the composer's birth. Included on the program were his Overture to "Beatrice and Benedick" and "Harold in Italy," with Mr. Primrose playing the viola solo in the latter piece. The other work on the program was Toch's Symphony No. 2, Opus 73.

Tomorrow Night

Tomorrow night's special performance will include three rarely-heard one-act operas, two of them having their Tanglewood premieres. The performance, at 8:30 o'clock in the theater-concert hall, is open to those who support the summer school of music of the Boston symphony by joining the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music center. All seats are reserved.

The three operas are Orazio Vecchi's "L'Amfiparnaso," a madrigal opera composed in 1594, a five-part unaccompanied choral setting; "There and Back," a musical sketch by Paul Hindemith, given once before at Tanglewood in 1940, when the composer was guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music center, and "The Princess and the Pea," a musical fairy tale Ernst Toch, guest teacher of composition this summer at the Center. The Toch opera is based a Hans Christian Andersen tal

The regular series of concert for this, the fourth week of the Tanglewood season, will get underway Wednesday evening, again in the theater-concert hall, with a program of chamber music by the Griller String Quartet, including the first U. S. performance of Ernest Bloch's Quartet No. 4. On Friday evening in the same building a program of Roussel, Ibert and Mozart will be performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston symphony, with Mr. Munch on the podium and Doriot Anthony as flute soloist.

Next Saturday Night

On Saturday evening in the big shed, Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," with Beatrice Krebs, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone and the Festival chorus along with the full Boston Symphony will be presented, with Mr. Munch again conducting. Final event of the series will be Sunday afternoon in the big shed, when Richard Burgin will be guest conductor and Ruth Posselt violin soloist, in a program of William Schuman, Vaughan Williams, Khatchaturian and Sibelius.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
UNION-STAR
JUL 26 1954

String Quartet Is Tanglewood Music Feature

Bloch Composition Will Be Offered In U. S. First Time

LENOX, Mass., July 26 — The Griller String Quartet will open the fourth week of this year's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. in the Theater-Concert Hall.

The United States premiere of Bloch's "Quartet No. 4" will be a feature of the program which will include quartets by Mozart and Beethoven.

A program by a chamber orchestra, directed by Charles Munch, Friday at 8:30 p.m. in the Theater-Concert Hall, will include Roussel's "Spider's Feast," Mozart's "Serenade for Eight Winds" and Ibert's "Flute Concerto."

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Munch, on Saturday at 8:30 p.m. will offer in the music shed Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet."

The program Sunday at 2:30 p.m. by the Boston Symphony will include Schuman's "American Festival Overture," Vaughan Williams' "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis," Khatchaturian's "Violin Concerto" with Ruth Posselt as soloist, and Sibelius' "Symphony No. 2." Richard Burgin will conduct.

Students of the Berkshire Music Center tomorrow at 8:30 p.m. will present three seldom heard one-act operas: Vecchi's "L'Amparnaso," Hindenmith's "There and Back" and Tochi's "The Princess and the Pea."

Other student concerts during the week will be a symphony program Thursday at 8:30 p.m., a chamber music program Sunday at 10 a.m. and a composers' forum program Sunday at 8:30 p.m. Contributors to the school have been invited to the student performances.

---

46 MUSIC

Berkshire Fest Winding to Biggest Season, With $350,000 Gate Seen

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 10.

The Berkshire Festival, at nearby Tanglewood, is winding up its 17th season next Sunday (15), with new attendance and boxoffice marks in prospect. Fest, now recognized as the most important and distinguished summer longhair event in America, had its best weekend of the season with a 10,600 attendance last Saturday (7) and 12,700 on Sunday (8). It's biggest weekend—the finale—is still to come, with about 30,000 expected.

Last year's fest set a record with 118,000 patrons and a $311,600 take. Attendance this year should be near 150,000, while the take may exceed $350,000. Threats of rain kept crowds down in early weeks, but this seems to have been overcome later.

Success of the fest proves the wisdom of the decision by music director Charles Munch and manager George E. Judd to enlarge the setup this season, bringing the full Boston Symphony Orchestra here for six weekends of concerts instead of three. Other new development, which followed as a corollary, was the incorporation of chamber music concerts into the regular festival as a major feature. The new six-week setup has paid off boxofficewise, while music—and artisticwise the fest has maintained its rep and standing, and added new patrons.

This week's final events comprise a sonata program by violinist Zino Francescatti tomorrow night (Wed.), a Saturday concert by the full BSO, and the Sunday windup, when Berlioz's Requiem will be done, with orch, soloists and chorus. In addition, Friday will witness the annual Tanglewood on Parade feature, with the BSO and various departments of the Berkshire Music Center participating. Thomas Schippers will conduct the BSO, Arthur Fiedler will be guest as batoneer of the Boston Pops, and Brenda Lewis will sing the title role in the final scene from "Salome."

Judd, who have been an official of the Boston symph for 40 years and its manager since 1935, as well as the fest's manager, is retiring from both posts Sept. 1. Thomas D. Perry Jr., assistant manager of the orch, is replacing Judd.

HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM
JUL 26 1954

Music Everywhere

Those hundreds who had such a good time listening to the band concert over at Pulaski park yesterday and perhaps finding the beauty of the river stilled to a pond above the dam and the encircling mountains in harmony with the music, were part of some millions seeking the stimulus of music.

Over at Tanglewood ten thousand people were listening to the great Boston Symphony orchestra. At New York's Lewisohn stadium 15,000 people revelled in a "Vienna" concert with the program given to the great music that has been born in that now broken city.

In Salzburg the whole city and 10,000 foreign music lovers literally stormed the castled hills for the largest attendance since that fateful year when Hitler broke loose and the gathered guests had to be rescued from the situation. It is recalled that President Roosevelt's mother was in the beleaguered, music loving, city.

The festival, which lasts until September, attracts one of the most interesting audiences in the world of music. All the nations of the world were represented Sunday in the thrilling opening with trumpets thrilling from the hills and towers and then the magnificent chorusing of the Austrian national anthem. Encircling Salzburg are four large camps manned by American youth, who have to be slowed up for the festival period because the music lovers need the restaurant and sidewalks.

They make a great social event of the festival with royalty and wealth and the rank and file gathered under the spell [illegible] quite in the mood of our Holyoke hundreds who were harmonized by their own City band on the banks of their own river. Music is the universal language. All peoples speak it. All peoples understand it.

HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM

JUL 27 1954

Fiedler To Lead At Tanglewood Benefit Program

Tanglewood will be on parade Friday, Aug. 13. The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music center, which attracted 8500 persons last summer, is in aid of the Boston Symphony orchestra's summer school of music, now in its 12th season in conjunction with the six-week Berkshire festival. Festivities, from 6 p.m. to 11 p.m., include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper, a gala evening concert, followed by dancing on the lawn.

For the first time in the Music shed, the Boston Pops orchestra will perform, with Arthur Fiedler, celebrating his 25th year as its conductor, on the podium. Mr. Fiedler is now conducting the Art Commission Pop Concerts in San Francisco's Civic auditorium, and will fly to the Berkshires for "Tanglewood On Parade" and return to California immediately.

The first half of the concert program will feature Thomas Schippers, a distinguished young alumnus of the Berkshire Musi center, conducting the Boston Symphony orchestra in a pro gram of Bizet and Richar Strauss. Still in his early twenties, Mr. Schippers won nationa

---

PROVIDENCE, R. I.
JOURNAL

AUG 1 - 1954

Musicals Offered In Two Theaters

THE summer theaters hereabouts will go predominatingly operatic this week with two of them presenting bills consisting of the latest in American musicals and a revival of the champion of them all, "Oklahoma!" The week will also be marked by the return of Tallulah to these shores, which many might consider a grand opera of sorts.

Being tried out as a possible Broadway attraction is an unusual program of two one-act operas at the Somerset Playhouse, Leonard Bernstein's "Trouble in Tahiti" and "The Thirteen Clocks," by James Thurber. Alice Ghostley and Richard Eastham are the stars.

At the Newport Casino Theater Sara Stamm will present Rodgers and Hammerstein's prize winning "Oklahoma!" for an exclusive engagement in this area. Now released for the first time for Summer stock, the musical will have in its cast several who have appeared in the Broadway, London and National companies.

Miss Bankhead, who was in Newport early last month will bring her successful comedy, "Dear Charles," to Matunuck's Theater-by-the-Sea for a second Rhode Island engagement.

Bernstein-Thurber Operas

Cheryl Crawford is the producer of the double operatic bill which Fred and Martha Miller will offer this week at their Somerset Playhouse. The production comes here from a week's engagement at the Westport Country Playhouse in Connecticut and is being considered for Broadway.

James Thurber's "The Thirteen Clocks," a fairy tale, was originally presented in a dramatization last winter over ABC-TV, and was described as the finest show of the year. In the cast were Basil Rathbone, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Roberta Peters, John Raitt and Russell Nype.

After reading the television script, Miss Crawford asked Fred Sadoff to make an adaptation for the stage. Mark Bucci did the musical score and with Thurber provided the lyrics. Miss Crawford thought it would make a wonderful evening if a companion piece could be found. Sadoff came up with the suggestion of Leonard Bernstein's one-acter, "Trouble in Tahiti," which he had seen on television last year.

The Bernstein work was commissioned by the Berkshire Festival for the American Musical Theaters—a truly American opera. That's how the noted pianist, conductor and composer came to write it. Bernstein, who has conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra here and other leading orchestras in this country and abroad, has won world eminence in many fields.

His wide versatility as a composer ranges from his "Jeremiah" Symphony to such works in the "popular" field as "On the Town" and "Wonderful Town," both Broadway hits.

David Brooks directed "Trouble in Tahiti" for Miss Crawford and the cast will star Alice Ghostley and Richard Eastham. Miss Ghostley, who will also appear in "The Thirteen Clocks," was an overnight sensation in "New Faces," playing in the Broadway, road and movie versions of the revue.

Eastham returned recently from his first movie role in which he competes with Donald O'Connor for the heart and hand of Marilyn Monroe, in Irving Berlin's musical, "There's No Business Like Show Business." He first won critical attention as the frequent substitute for Ezio Pinza in "South Pacific."

Constance Brigham, Fred Sadoff and Martin Balsam will be associated with Miss Ghostley in the cast of "The Thirteen Clocks."

Experienced Surrey Riders

As the Curly and Laurey of the Newport Casino Theater's "Oklahoma!" Stokely Gray and Lois Berrodin have had considerable previous experience oh-ing the territory's beautiful mornin', riding the fringed surrey and having people talk about them being in love.

Gray, a native of Tennessee, made a personal hit in the London production of "Oklahoma!" and was in the original Broadway company. His other New York appearances have included "Carnival in Flanders," in television's "Excursion" and radio roles in "Theater Guild on the Air." He also attended New York's Juilliard Graduate School of Music. As a World War II pilot he flew 30 combat missions.

While a student at Chestnut Hill College, Miss Berrodin came to the attention of Fred Mann, president of Robin Hood Dell in Philadelphia. Following his advice she took up vocal studies with Estelle Liebling. Her first professional singing was in the operettas and musical comedies staged at New Jersey's Paper Mill Playhouse. Later she was chosen by Richard Rodgers for the National Company of "Oklahoma" and was featured as Laurey in the television debut of the musical on Omnibus. Another National Company graduate is Janice Samarie's Ado (I Can't Say No) Annie.

Joseph Leon, cast as the peddler Ali Hakim, spent two summers as stage manager at the Casino Theater some years ago. His last New York job was with Tom Ewell in the current hit, "The Seven Year Itch," preceding which were "Bell, Book and Candle," "Twelfth Night," "Richard III" and "With a Silk Thread." He wound up a series of movie chores last year in "Vice Squad," with Edward G. Robinson and Paulette Goddard.

Jimmy Tarbutton, who has the role of Will Parker, is considered one of the most promising young dancers in show business today. Among his previous Broadway shows are "Finian's Rainbow," "Paint Your Wagon," "Flahooley" and "Buttrio Square." Other Oklahomans are Edith Gresham, Kayton Nesbitt, Warren Kemmerling, Paula Lloyd and Robert Lindgren who did the choreography.

Charles Atkin staged the production and the sets are by Francis M. Mahard Jr. Dennis Blood is musical director and, with Robert Drum, will provide a two-piano accompaniment.

If the theatergoer needs a refresher course in the remarkable career of the initial Rodgers-Hammerstein collaboration a few notes may be in order. Based on Lynn Riggs' play, "Green Grow the Lilacs," it was a smash hit of the 1942-43 Broadway season, playing 2,248 consecutive performances.

Its general staging, including notably the Agnes de Mille ballets, started a revolution in the deportment of American musicals. Alfred Drake and Celeste Holm were among those in the original cast who have become stars.

Since its Broadway run and while succeeding Rodgers and Hammerstein works were, and some still are, having their day (South Pacific, Allegro, Carousel and the last, Me and Juliet) "Oklahoma" has seldom, if ever, been off the boards here and abroad. This summer it is being released for the first time in stock and a movie version is underway.

One of the most extraordinary things about the score is the rate at which the song hits pour forth in the first act. They start at the rise of the curtain with "Oh, What a Beautiful Mornin'" and continue straight through "The Surrey with the Fringe on the Top," "Kansas City," "I Can't Say No," "Many a New Day," "It's a Scandal, It's an Outrage" and "People Will Say."

Picture on the Wall

By a circuitous route that took her to other summer theaters since her earlier visit at Newport, Tallulah Bankhead returns to the Rhode Island seaside trail for a week's stahd in her current vehicle, "Dear Charles," at Matunuck.

What with breaking records in the former London hit comedy and a role which critics have found is right up her alley, it has been decided definitely that "Dear Charles" will do for Miss Bankhead on Broadway where the star is scheduled to open her fall season Sept. 22. There'll be several more stops along the summer circuit between now and then.

Her role in "Dear Charles" is that of an unconventional French authoress with three lovers in the past and three children in the present, all of whom look upon the portrait over the mantlepiece, referred to as Dear Charles, as a representation of their father.

In that they are mistaken and are soon involved in the unraveling of parental complications. Brooks Atkinson, of the New York Times, saw the play in London last year and called it "completely delightful" and a "skillfully written piece of ironical nonsense."

In London Miss Bankhead has held sway in "The Green Hat," "Her Cardboard Lover," "They Knew What They Wanted," "The Gold-Diggers" and "Let Us Be Gay". in New York in "The Little Foxes," "The Skin of Our Teeth" and "Private Lives." Her fame has also spread as mistress of ceremonies on radio's "The Big Show" and as autobiographer in the best-seller titled simply "Tallulah."

KENTUCKIANS AT TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., for the summer music school maintained by the Boston Symphony in connection with its Berkshire Festival, include Isabelle Clore, bassoonist,, left, 1609 S. Third; Harvey Davis, Lexington, working on choral conducting; Mrs. Dwight Townes, Jr., Newburg Road, chorus leader at the Berkshire Music Center.

Courier Journal
Louisville

SHARON, CONN
NEWS
7/29/54

TENOR SOLOIST

John McCollum is tenor soloist in the dramatic symphony, "Romeo And Juliet" by Berlioz, which the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, will perform with Festival Chorus and soloists at the Berkshire Festival Concert of Saturday evening, July 31, at 8:30 p.m. in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Symphonies Top Big Leagues At Box Office, Judd Claims

GREAT BARRINGTON — Receipts from symphonic orchestra concerts exceed those from organized baseball, retiring Manager George Judd of the Boston Symphony Orchestra said here yesterday.

Mr. Judd told the local Rotary Club that the growth in popularity of classical music concerts was the "most phenomenal" in the whole field of entertainment.

In 1900 the United States had only seven symphony orchestras, the BSO official said, and now there are 700. This includes 30 professional symphony orchestras containing from 80 to 104 players; about 400 non-professional community orchestras; and hundreds of school orchestras.

Limits Not Reached

Despite the huge growth, however, only about 4 per cent of the people in the United States listen to symphonic music, Mr. Judd said. Observing that in his 40 years with the Boston Symphony he had seen the public double itself three times, he pointed to the tremendous field for expansion.

The BSO is not the oldest symphony orchestra, since it was founded in 1881 and the New York Philharmonic Symphony was founded in 1843, but it was the first to employ musicians on a full-time professional basis. Mr. Judd said that since 1881 the Boston Symphony has had 10 conductors and has hired and fired 530 players. Turnover is about three players per year.

The orchestra has played about 2,100 compositions by 650 composers and has had 750 solo guest artists. It now plays about 200 concerts a year, including the 30-week winter season, the Esplanade concerts and Tanglewood.

$1,500,000 Budget

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's activities are big business, Manager Judd noted. The BSO has a budget of 1½ million dollars a year, of which about one million dollars comes from ticket sales, about $200,000 from record royalties and about $45,000 from an endowment fund. A deficit of about $200,000 is made up by the Friends of the Boston Symphony Orchestra comprising about 6,000 people.

Mr. Judd said the musicians are paid with 47 checks for 46 weeks of work and are given a six-week vacation. The minimum salary for a member of the orchestra is $5,800, and about one-quarter of the players receive this amount.

During the winter there are about four rehearsals for each program. At Tanglewood, there is usually only one rehearsal per program, but much of the preliminary rehearsing has been done in Boston.

Mr. Judd said much of the revenue goes to musicians' pensions, building up of the endowment funds, helping to finance FM Station WGBH in Symphony Hall, Boston, and maintaining the Berkshire Music Center here.

Music Center Unprofitable

The Music Center is expensive, the BSO manager said. If it were not for the school, the Boston Symphony would show a profit on its Tanglewood operations. However, Mr. Judd pointed out, the work done by the Music Center justifies its expense.

More than 10 per cent of the personnel of the 30 symphony orchestras in the country have attended the Music Center, he said. It is the only school in the country run by an orchestra for musicians, conductors and choral groups. Despite the orchestra's annual deficit, the manager is not in favor of governmental subsidy of the arts. He urged his listeners to oppose the so-called Howell Bill, which would subsidize cultural activities. Private gifts are a much better system, Mr. Judd said.

New Plan Advocated

The speaker remarked that there had been a few complaints about the new six-week schedule at Tanglewood, but he believed it was superior to the old schedule of three weekends of concerts in the theater-concert hall and three weekends of concerts in the great Shed. He advised his listeners to wait a few years before deciding against the new plan.

Cold weather and concentration upon the music of Hector Berlioz, whose 150th anniversary is marked this season, cut attendance this year, Mr. Judd said. He felt, however, that attendance would jump next summer, when Beethoven's music would be featured.

The manager emphasized that the orchestra must continue to present new works as well as the old favorites, in order to extend music appreciation and foster musical creativity.

Tanglewood Parade Program

TANGLEWOOD—The complete program for Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, which will be held tomorrow afternoon and evening, was announced today. Featured at the evening performance in the Music Shed will be Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops Orchestra; Brenda Lewis, Broadway soprano soloist and the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Thomas Schippers conducting.

The program follows:

2:00-4:00 p.m.—Open to all. Demonstration by Tanglewood Study Group in the Barn.

4:00 p.m.—Opera (Students of Department IV), Formal Garden (for box-holders and reserved seat patrons only).

THE PHYSICIAN IN SPITE OF HIMSELF
(Le Medecin Malgre Lui)
Comic Opera after Moliere by Charles Gounod (1858); Libretto by Jules Barbier and Michael Carre; Adaptation and English translation by Morton Siegel.

CAST

Geronte
Malcolm Bernstein (Baltimore, Md.)
Lucinde
Ann Tierney (Binghamton, N.Y.)
Leandre . Bernard Barr (Brooklyn, N.Y.)
Sganarelle
Thomas Stewart (San Saba, Tex.)
Martine
Emeline De Vita (Watertown, Mass.)
Valere . John Hornor (Cambridge, Mass.)
Jacqueline
Regina Sarfaty (Brooklyn, N.Y.)
Lucas
Alvin Edmonson (New York, N.Y.)
At the Piano: Samuel Krachmalnick
Produced and staged by Morton Siegel
Setting: John Blankenchip; Costumes and Make-up: Leo Van Witsen; Technical Director and Stage Manager: Thomas DeGaetani.

5:45 p.m.—Fanfare, by Karl Kohn, performed by students of Department I; and Welcome, Ralph Berkowitz, Dean, Berkshire Music Center, on the porch of the main house.

6:00 p.m.—Simultaneous demonstrations by orchestra, opera, chamber music and composition departments of Berkshire Music Center:

MUSIC SHED

Short symphonic works
Orchestra (Department I students)
"L'Arlesienne" Suite No. 1 .... Bizet
Henry Janiec (Passaic, N.J.), conductor
Symphony in D major, "Haffner" ... Mozart
Paul Vermel (New York, N.Y.) conductor
"Symphonie Espagnol" for Violin and Orchestra, No. 21 .... Lalo
Samuel Krachmalnick (New York, N.Y.) conductor
William de Pasquale (Philadelphia, Pa.) violin
Excerpts from Act III, "Die Meistersinger" .... Wagner
Samuel Krachmalnick (New York, N.Y.) conductor

THEATER-CONCERT HALL

Opera and Opera Scenes
(Department IV students)
Scene from Act I, "Tosca" .... Puccini
Tosca
Emma Goldman (New Orleans, La.)
Mario Cavaradossi
Marvin Worden (New York, N.Y.)
Angelotti
Lorenzo Malfatti (Pittsburgh, Pa.)
At the piano, Eve Queler
Scene from Act III, "La Boheme" ... Puccini
Mimi .. Phyllis Murphy (Bement, Ill.)
Marcello
Lorenzo Malfatti (Pittsburgh, Pa.)
Rodolfo
Alvin Edmonson (New York, N.Y.)
Musetta
Ann Tierney (Binghamton, N.Y.)
At the piano, Emanuel Balaban
"There and Back" (Hin und zuruck), Op. 45a .... Hindemith
Text by Marcellus Schiffer, English translation by Marion Farquhar, performed by students of the Associate Division:
Robert . Harold Johnson (Chicago, Ill.)
Helene ... Gloria Carl (Ottawa, Ohio)
Aunt Emma Helen Zimbler (Omaha, Neb.)
The Doctor
Raphael Bigar (Omaha, Neb.)
The Orderly
Herbert Gibson (Danville, Ill.)
Maid ..... Margaret Laver (Erie, Pa.)
Sage
Marvin Worden (New York, N.Y.)
At the piano, Leonard Sarason
Staged by Morton Siegel
Setting and Lighting: John Blankenchip
Costumes and Make-up: Leo Van Witsen

CHAMBER MUSIC HALL

Concert of Chamber Music by Departments I and IV, and Compositions by Department III.
Der Schmied; Meine Liebe ist Grun ... Brahms
Three Szekely Ballads and Songs from Transylvania .... Kodaly
Catherine Weiss-Akes (Toronto, Can.), soprano
Tan Crone ('sHertogenbosch, Netherlands), piano
Sonata for Piano in One Movement
John Kennedy (Huntington, L.I.)
The composer at the piano
Sonata for Violin and Piano .. Copland
Stanley Dombrowski (Export, Pa.) violin
Tan Crone ('sHertogenbosch, Netherlands), piano
Quatre Poemes de Guillaume ... Poulenc
Lamentation (finale, "Jeremiah" Symphony) .... Leonard Bernstein
Beatrice Krebs (New York, N.Y.) contralto
Tan Crone ('sHertogenbosch, Netherlands), piano
Six Little Pieces for Pianoforte, Four Hands
Richard Maxfield (Bellevue, Wash.)
With the composer and Tossi Ichiyanagi (Tokyo, Japan)
at the pianos
Quintet for Strings and Piano in F minor .... Brahms Tiberius Klausner (New York, N.Y.) and Stanley Dombrowski (Export, Pa.), violins; Endel Kalam (Boston, Mass.), viola; Evalyn Steinbock (Brooklyn, N.Y.), cello; Gilbert Kalish (New York, N.Y.), piano.

7:00 p.m.—Picnic Supper, during Concert by Chorus (Department II students), Main House Porch:

Madrigal .... Gesualdo
Saul Lilienstein (Brooklyn, N.Y.), conductor
Madrigal .... Hassler
Morton Gold (Roxbury, Mass.), conductor
Songs of Nature .... Dvorak
John McKay (St. Paul, Minn.), conductor
Three Shakespeare Songs ... Vaughan Williams
Ruth O'Keefe (Springfield, Mass.), conductor
The Mad Song
Peter Re (Belgrade, Me.)
Winter's Song .... Karl Kohn
Peter Re, conductor
Three Choruses from "Elizabeth and Essex" .... Britten
JanToon DeJong (Hamilton, N.Y.), conductor
Sweet Sunny; Somebody's Coming ... Dello Joio
Beggar's Canon .... Offenbach
Lorna Cooke De Varon, conductor

8:15 p.m.—Music Shed. Gala Concert:

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Thomas Schippers, Conductor
Symphony in C .... Bizet
"Salome" (Final Scene) .... Strauss
Brenda Lewis, Soprano, soloist

Presentation to Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, Berkshire Symphonic Festival, Inc., by Dr. Lewis Perry, Honorary Chairman, Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

BOSTON POPS ORCHESTRA
Arthur Fiedler, Conductor
March, "Stars and Stripes Forever" ... Sousa
Suite from "Gaite Parisienne" ... Offenbach
Bolero .... Ravel
Tviana .... Arr. by Hayman
"Look Sharp—Be Sharp" ... Merrick-Bennett

11:00 p.m.—Drawing for door prizes by Mac Morgan, Stockbridge, concert baritone.

11.15 p.m.—Waltzing on the Lawn (by the Main House).

11:30 p.m.—Jam session, Porch, Main House
Joe Bushkin (New York), piano; Michael Colgrass (Brookfield, Ill.), drums; Julius Ilku (Ames, Iowa), double bass.

Francescatti, Balsam Excel In Chamber Series Finale

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FINAL PROGRAM of the season in the chamber music series at Tanglewood was played last night in the theater-concert hall by Zino Francescatti and Artur Balsam. The program consisted of the Bach C major sonata for violin solo and Brahms sonatas for violin and piano in A major and D minor.

With an artist of Mr. Francescatti's eminence it seems redundant to return to elementary details but a violin has rarely been made to produce a resonance to match that which he produced in the Bach sonata. Because of his very obvious complete penetration of the music he gave every note its proper and due relative value. His bow bit tellingly at every point and with every pressure. The result was an expansive and noble Bach, a revelation of sonority and majesty.

* * *

TO MAINTAIN a clarity and preserve the line in the adagio so lucidly was Mr. Francescatti's superlative achievement. No one since Bach has found any combinations of the factors of the violin that will demand more of the performer than what this sonata requires both on the fingerboard and of the bow. The whole six sonatas are a monument in writing for the instrument that is a peak that has not been excelled. Every violin student sufficiently advanced makes the acquaintance of these sonatas as the literature and public speaking student gets to know the Hamlet soliloquy, but no more get to a competence to ably present the one than the other.

Thus for any violinist in the audience there was the greater gratification as he heard, or more properly, possibly, felt the pieces of this intricate slow movement go into place so perfectly and with such tone and perspective. The tremendous fugue was a continuation of Mr. Francescatti's elevated vein. His fingers accrued strength as he proceeded until, near the end, the swift moving notes were a succession of individual gems brilliantly shining as they passed with the speed of a comet.

* * *

IN THE PIANO sonatas, Francescatti had the marvelous collaboration of Mr. Balsam. The fitting of each part into the ensemble was due in no unequal measure to the pianist. It needed but the first few bars of the "Meistersinger" motive of the A major sonata to discern what comprehension was to be applied to the execution of these great works. Francescatti generously and chivalrously insisted that his retiring colleague share the triumphal response accorded them by an audience which filled the hall and the stage.

These sonatas are in the repertory of every performer on the instruments and the roster of those who have played them on the platforms of this vicinity would read like pages of "Who's Who in Music," but the distinction of these performances last night was the coordination of the two instruments. The success of this feature of the evening is shared equally by the artists but the responsibility which Balsam assumed was on the plane of his illustrious confrere. No one left the theater at the conclusion of the D minor but remained to participate in a frenzied outburst of enthusiasm.

A Fitting Gesture

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

How much more time must elapse before a tangible memorial to the late Serge Koussevitzky is established in Tanglewood? To be sure, Tanglewood itself, the school in particular, is his everlasting monument. It was he who dreamed and fashioned it, whose imaginative and creative powers helped to develope it, idead upon idea, moulding it as an institution without equal. Yet nowhere is there mention of his name to identify his great contribution.

Those of us who have come to Tanglewood year after year, feel his spirit everywhere. But for the thousands who stream to Tanglewood today, and tomorrow, will the name Serge Koussevitzky soon be obliterated?

Monuments need not be of marble, although a bust of Koussevitzky in the formal gardens at Tanglewood might be better comprehended and more appropriate than the present abstractions there. There has been news of a Koussevitzky memorial scholarship fund being established. This is a token manifestation of public acknowledgment and gratitude and should be generously supported. But it is only a token.

I believe it fitting and generous-minded for the administration to name the school, the Serge Koussevitzky Berkshire Music School. Thus the memory of the man and his great work would be known to all the students who benefit by the realization of his dreams for them.

ETHEL S. COHEN.
88 Central Park West,
New York, N.Y.

LURE OF THE Berkshires, Tanglewood dept.: Several members of the Harvard Glee Club, who sang in the Berlioz "Damnation of Faust" at the opening Shed concert, July 10, so fell in love with the setup that they returned three weeks later to hear how the Music Center chorus would carry on in Berlioz's "Romeo and Juliet." The Harvard-Radcliffe singers consider "Romeo" standard repertoire having recorded it for Victor with the BSO as well as the "Damnation." One Harvard singer, John Giffen of Atlanta, Ga., who has just completed his freshman year, asked and was permitted to sing in the Tanglewood chorus for the "Romeo" performance. And this Sunday afternoon, he is again to sing as a ringer in the Music Center chorus for the Berlioz "Requiem," although he has had to learn the part from scratch.

—o—

PROGRESS: The U.S. steel industry can produce 1,500 pounds of steel per person in the country every year. But what the deuce would you do with it?

RICHARD V. HAPPEL.

Faith vs Slacks in Lenox

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

Although Mrs. Bassett's letter to the Lenox Selectmen is making front-page news, I understand from what I hear around our office that the Boston Symphony has decided to remain aloof in the current annual controversy over clothing worn in Lenox and at Tanglewood. As a summer employe of the orchestra, charged with assisting in the business of collecting some funds from our "Friends" at Tanglewood, it seems to me my observations, while private in point of view, might be of interest.

The lady who objected last week to a "Harvard sophomore" asking what could be done about her slacks, was, so far as I can remember from the occasion, the only one who has objected to the policy in any way we have heard about. Many others, ignorant of the custom at Friends concerts, willingly and jovially donned the well-worn wrap-around skirts we provide.

People do learn, and with much spirit and interest in Tanglewood, they do abide by our hope and trust that they will come properly dressed.

In fact, the manager feels that the proportion of offenders is decreasing, though the problem seems a little more acute because of the greater numbers of people who come through the gates now.

But more important, behind all one sees and hears at Tanglewood has been the gentle, creative, forward-looking personality of George Judd. His policies and moves are all calculated to bring music to anyone who will listen. The music, feels Mr. Judd, will strike deeper within these people than anything else, and will do more to transform their conduct and their whole personalities than any poor attempt we could make with regulations or signs.

I think it is correct to represent Mr. Judd as believing that the transforming power of great music is in itself the greatest deterrent to unbecoming conduct, or to careless dress that we could put forth at the Music Center.

One might take issue with him when it comes to some of the inflexible, sometimes ignorant, people who come to the gates. But if the present fame and quality of the Boston Symphony's music are any index, we must not overlook this man's deep faith in music and the people who care enough about it to buy a ticket and listen. This kind of faith will continue to restrain the management at Tanglewood from any direct action, if my surmise is correct.

EDWARD W. M[illegible]LS.
Lenox.

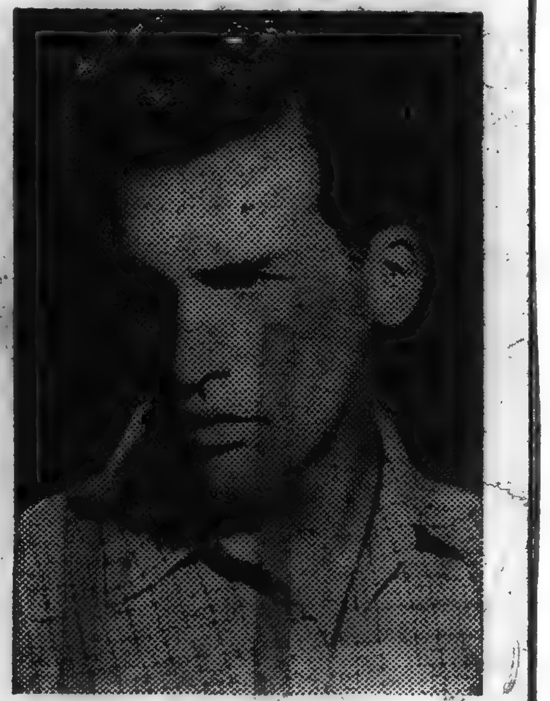
Eagle — August 12

agle August 12

FEATURED in tomorrow's opera department production at 4 p.m. of "Le Medecin Malgre Lui" during Tanglewood on Parade will be, from left to right, Naomi Farr, Ann Tierney, Bernard Barr and Alvin Edmonson. Performance will be in the gardens for box-holders and those with reserved seats.

STRATFORD, CONN
NEWS
7/29/54

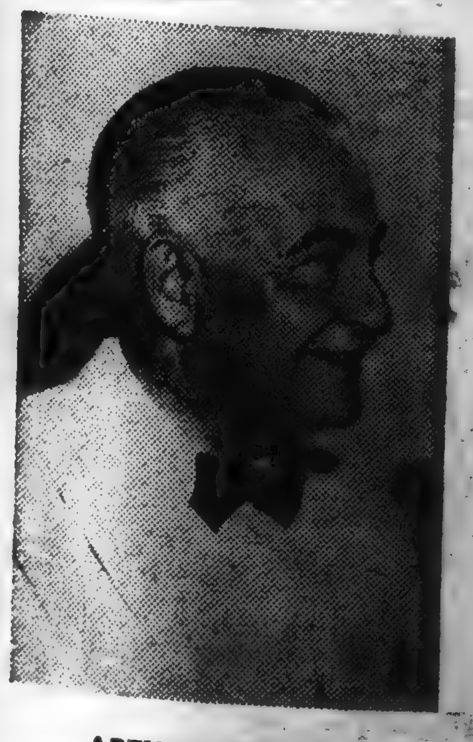
BRENDA LEWIS



THOMAS SCHIPPERS

ARTHUR FIEDLER

TANGLEWOOD TRIO: Taking prominent parts in "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music at Lenox, Mass., are: Brenda Lewis, lovely star of opera and Broadway; Thomas Schippers, former student of the Music Center; and Arthur Fiedler, conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra. Mr. Fiedler will conduct the first appearance of the Boston Pops in the Tanglewood Music Shed, and Mr. Schippers will conduct the Boston Symphony in a program of Bizet and Richard Strauss with Miss Lewis as soprano soloist. "Tanglewood on Parade" will be held on Friday, August 13, with events scheduled from 6 to 11 p.m.



ARTHUR FIEDLER

Taking prominent parts in "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music at Lenox, Mass., are: Brenda Lewis, lovely star of opera and Broadway; Thomas Schippers, former student of the Music Center; and Arthur Fiedler, conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra. Mr. Fiedler will conduct the first appearance of the Boston Pops in the Tanglewood Music Shed, and Mr. Schippers will conduct the Boston Symphony in a program of Bizet and Richard Strauss with Miss Lewis as soprano soloist. "Tanglewood on Parade" will be held on Friday, August 13, with events scheduled from 6 to 11 p.m.

ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION
JUL 29 1954

Around the Town:

'Lot of Water Has Gone Over Reavyville Falls'

By EDGAR S. VAN OLINDA

A lot of water has flowed over the falls in the city known as Reavyville, but which Rudy Roulier, the mayor, rules as Cohoes, since a young fellow by the name of Bill Monahan alternately roasted and froze, depending upon the season, on the rear platform of a White Line trolley car as they hit that bit of open country, called "The Prairie" which lays between the Collar City and the Spindle City when he was a conductor for the United Traction Company. Bill, today, as if you didn't know, is the genial boniface of the half-way house to the Berkshire Music Festival, the beautiful hostelry called "The Pillars."

Now we don't know whether or not Bill can tell the difference between a Beethoven sonata or a Tchaikowsky symphony, but he sure knows his Alma Gluck records as his large collection of his favorite singer will attest. For the uninitiate and those born too late, Miss Gluck was the popular Victor recording artist of her day and generation. Her duet, "Whispering Hope" with Louise Homer is a collector's item. And Bill has it, wrapped in flannel.

KNOWN TO ALL

Bill Monahan is known to all and sundry as "The Squire of Lebanon Valley," dispensing hospitality, wit and good humor to weary travelers along Route 20. But he can't take all the credit. His charming missus, quietly efficient, from the days when he ran the Bluebird oasis on the Lake George Road until they acquired their present menage, is around the several rooms of the inn when not out in the garden supervising the beautiful flower gardens which surround the property.

And you'll meet a lot of interesting people over at "The Pillars." For instance, there are Dottie and Ray Barker, the couple from Pittsfield who came over for dinner one day and stayed on-for nine years setting up housekeeping in one of Bill's attractive cottages. Ray is an executive of the G. E. Company over in Pittsfield. And you may see a former great favorite from Albany, Nina Foran, who worked for the State, living quietly in the neighborhood with her mother. Or Mrs. Ransom H. Gillette, widow of the late General and prominent Albany barrister.

KNOWN A FAR

But one person who is omnipresent is Noel Vincent Tully, ray-toter extraordinary whom Bill inherited when he took ver the place. "Tully" as he is known far and wide was "in ervice" with the Tiffany family of New York for 18 years efore heading for the Berkshires.

Yes Sir! A lot of water has passed over the Cohoes Falls nd over the mahogany at Bill Monahan's establishment throughut the years. The Cohoes falls may dry up during the Summer onths, but Bill goes on like Tennyson's brook. If you want to heck up on the characters who were contemporary with late Mike Smith before that Cohoes worthy hung up his 10-gallon White Stetson for good, a couple of years ago, Bill Monahan is he fellow who can put you straight—and will—on the slightest rovocation.

COURIER
PITTSBURGH, PA.
JUL 31 1954

STUDENT ARTISTS — Negro students from New York and other parts of the country are studying on scholarships at the Berkshire Music Center, Lenox, Mass. Shown securing the autographs of baritone Fred Thomas of New York and Eve Jessye of Lawrence, Mass., both well-known musicians, are seated: Mrs. Charlotte Holloman, East Elmhurst, L. I.; Benjamin Patterson, Turtle Creek, Pa.; Reri Lorraine Grist, New York City, and Joseph Moore, Detroit. Standing, left to right, are Emma Goldman, New Orleans; Mr. Thomas, Harold Johnson, Chicago; Herbert Boatright, Boston; Miss Jessye and Theresa Green, Baltimore.

g'le August 12

e Medecin Malgre Lui" rney, Bernard Barr and ose with reserved seats.

ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION
JUL 29 1954

Around the Town:

'Lot of Water Has Gone Over Reavyville Falls'

By EDGAR S. VAN OLINDA

A lot of water has flowed over the falls in the city known as Reavyville, but which Rudy Roulier, the mayor, rules as Cohoes, since a young fellow by the name of Bill Monahan alternately roasted and froze, depending upon the season, on the rear platform of a White Line trolley car as they hit that bit of open country, called "The Prairie" which lays between the Collar City and the Spindle City when he was a conductor for the United Traction Company. Bill, today, as if you didn't know, is the genial boniface of the half-way house to the Berkshire Music Festival, the beautiful hostelry called "The Pillars."

Now we don't know whether or not Bill can tell the difference between a Beethoven sonata or a Tchaikowsky symphony, but he sure knows his Alma Gluck records as his large collection of his favorite singer will attest. For the uninitiate and those born too late, Miss Gluck was the popular Victor recording artist of her day and generation. Her duet, "Whispering Hope" with Louise Homer is a collector's item. And Bill has it, wrapped in flannel.

KNOWN TO ALL

Bill Monahan is known to all and sundry as "The Squire of Lebanon Valley," dispensing hospitality, wit and good humor to weary travelers along Route 20. But he can't take all the credit. His charming missus, quietly efficient, from the days when he ran the Bluebird oasis on the Lake George Road until they acquired their present menage, is around the several rooms of the inn when not out in the garden supervising the beautiful flower gardens which surround the property.

And you'll meet a lot of interesting people over at "The Pillars." For instance, there are Dottie and Ray Barker, the couple from Pittsfield who came over for dinner one day and stayed on for nine years setting up housekeeping in one of Bill's attractive cottages. Ray is an executive of the G. E. Company over in Pittsfield. And you may see a former great favorite from Albany, Nina Foran, who worked for the State, living quietly in the neighborhood with her mother. Or Mrs. Ransom H. Gillette, widow of the late General and prominent Albany barrister.

KNOWN A FAR

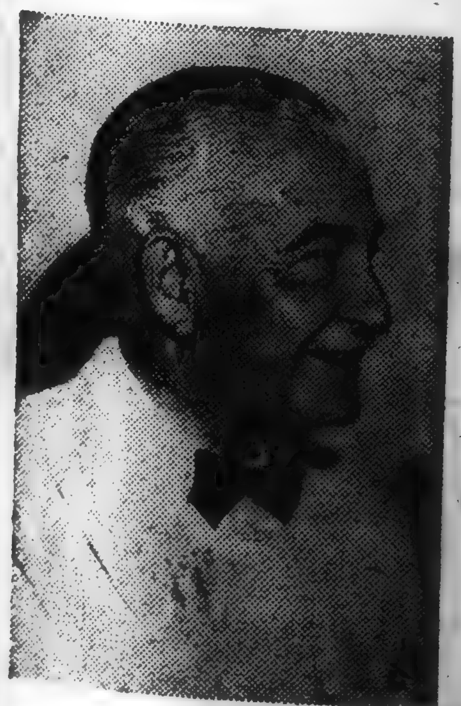
But one person who is omnipresent is Noel Vincent Tully, ray-toter extraordinary whom Bill inherited when he took ver the place. "Tully" as he is known far and wide was "in ervice" with the Tiffany family of New York for 18 years efore heading for the Berkshires.

Yes Sir! A lot of water has passed over the Cohoes Falls nd over the mahogany at Bill Monahan's establishment throughut the years. The Cohoes falls may dry up during the Summer onths, but Bill goes on like Tennyson's brook. If you want to heck up on the characters who were contemporary with late Aike Smith before that Cohoes worthy hung up his 10-gallon White Stetson for good, a couple of years ago, Bill Monahan is he fellow who can put you straight—and will—on the slightest rovocation.

FAIRFIELD, CONN
NEWS
7/23/54

BRENDA LEWIS

THOMAS SCHIPPERS



ARTHUR FIEDLER

TANGLEWOOD TRIO: Taking prominent parts in "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music at Lenox, Mass., are: Brenda Lewis, lovely star of opera and Broadway; Thomas Schippers, former student of the Music Center; and Arthur Fiedler, conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra. Mr. Fiedler will conduct the first appearance of the Boston Pops in the Tanglewood Music Shed, and Mr. Schippers will conduct the Boston Symphony in a program of Bizet and Richard Strauss with Miss Lewis as soprano soloist. "Tanglewood on Parade" will be held on Friday, August 13, with events scheduled from 6 to 11 p.m.

COURIER
PITTSBURGH, PA.
JUL 31 1954

STUDENT ARTISTS — Negro students from New York and other parts of the country are studying on scholarships at the Berkshire Music Center, Lenox, Mass. Shown securing the autographs of baritone Fred Thomas of New York and Eva Jessye of Lawrence, Mass., both well-known musicians, are seated: Mrs. Charlotte Holloman, East Elmhurst, L. I.; Benjamin Patterson, Turtle Creek, Pa.; Reri Lorraine Grist, New York City, and Joseph Moore, Detroit. Standing, left to right, are Emma Goldman, New Orleans; Mr. Thomas, Harold Johnson, Chicago; Herbert Boatright, Boston; Miss Jessye [illegible] Theresa Green, Baltimore.

[16]

Weather Gives a Break To Tanglewood 'Parade'

Dr. Lewis Perry

The weatherman peeked down on the Berkshires today and decided to give the area a break for tonight's Tanglewood on Parade program which is expected to draw a crowd of more than 10,000.

Fair and cool tonight, with the lowest temperature 45 to 50 degrees, was the prediction from the weather bureau, with an added report that it will be generally fair and warmer over the weekend when the 1954 Berkshire Festival draws to a close.

Everything is in readiness for tonight's gala show, being held for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the school operated at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Features Galore

There will be features galore. Holders of reserved seats and box tickets will be admitted to the grounds at 4 this afternoon for the opera, "The Physician in Spite of Himself," to be given in the formal gardens. At 5:45 the "Fanfare," by Karl Kohn will be performed by the students of Department 1, followed by a welcome by Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Music Center, on the porch of the main house.

Simultaneously demonstrations by all groups at the Center will open at 6, with events scheduled in the Music Shed, theater-concert hall, and the chamber music hall.

The lawn party will follow at 7 with a concert by the Festival chorus on the porch of the main house, while hundreds of people enjoy picnic suppers on the spacious terrace of the Tanglewood property.

At 8:15 the scene will shift back to the Music Shed where the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Thomas Schippers conducting, will give the first half of the evening's program, featuring Brenda Lewis, popular Broadway star, formerly of the Metropolitan and New York City operas who will sing the final scene of Strauss' "Salome."

Ceremony at Intermission

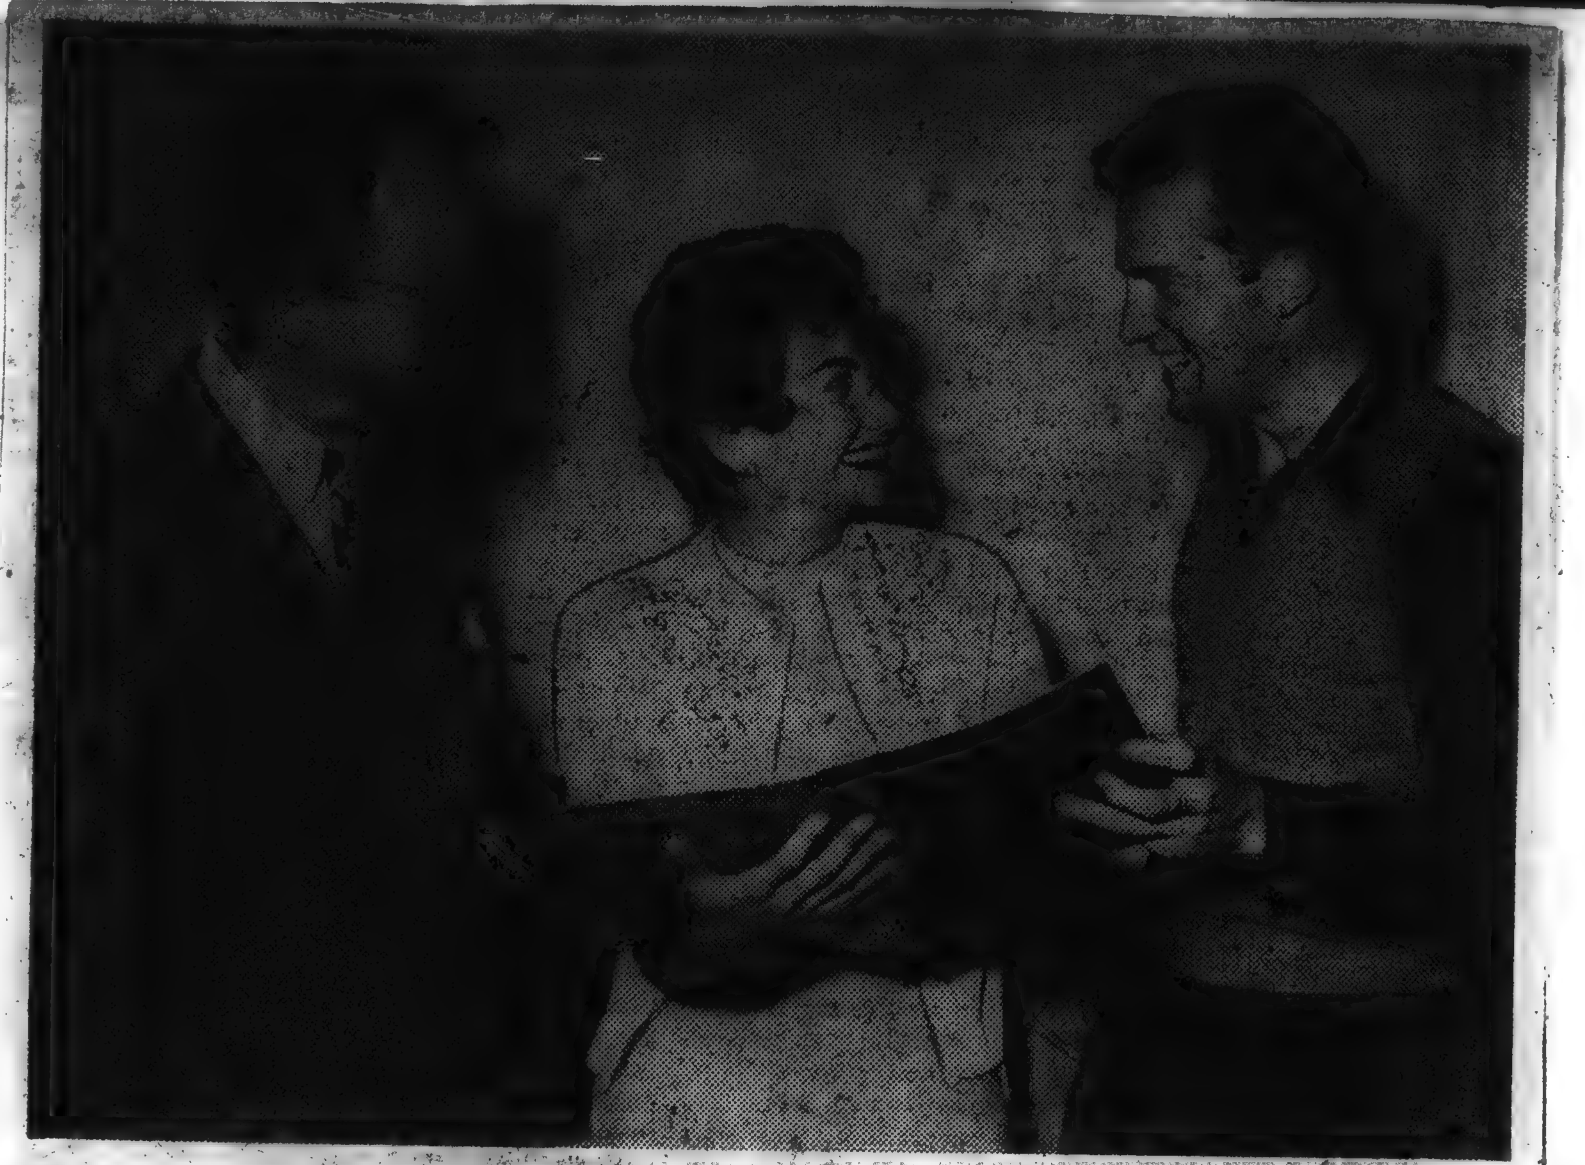
Following intermission, the Boston Symphony Orchestra trustees will honor Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Stockbridge, president of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc., in recognition of the 20th anniversary of the Festival which was founded by the Berkshire organization 20 years ago. Dr. Lewis Perry, honorary chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, will present Miss Robinson Smith an illuminated leather scroll.

In the box section will be the other trustees of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival along with Mayor Robert T. Capeless of Pittsfield, the County Commissioners and Selectmen of the neighboring towns of Lee, Lenox and Stockbridge.

After presentation of the scroll, Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra in a typical pops program, the first ever heard at Tanglewood.

Mac Morgan, well known concert baritone of Stockbridge, will draw door prizes immediately after the concert.

The evening will wind up with waltzing on the lawn, near the main house, and a jam session featuring Joe Bushkin, internationally famous jazz pianist, who is spending the summer in Richmond.



Manos

WELCOME TO STARS of Tanglewood on Parade is extended by Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager-elect of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Brenda Lewis of Broadway stage and Metropolitan Opera will sing the final scene from the Strauss "Salome," and Thomas Shippers, Tanglewood student in 1948, will conduct the BSO in a program of Bizet and Strauss. Program will begin at 8:15 tonight.

Eagle - August 13, 1954

Music

Numbers New to BSO Repertory Played by Morel at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD.

HALF OF the program conducted by Jean Morel last night in the theater-concert hall was new to the repertory of Tanglewood: Rossini's overture to his "Ladder of Silk" and a suite from Richard Strauss' music to Moliere's play, "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme." Mozart's symphony no. 33 in B flat and Ravel's children's pieces to "Mother Goose" completed the list.

It was a happy juxtaposition to place the Mozart with its sparse wind instrumental uses but delightful piquancy before the Ravel which has much expanded woodwind requirements from piccolo down to contrabassoon in addition to horns, celetsta, harp and mild percussion. It is in the use of these additional instruments that Ravel's music acquires such wondrous texture and in which Morel saw to it that every fiber was spun to brace and support the others.

The suite as played last night went through the metamorphosis from original piano duet to ballet and then to this concert version. Its charm is enhanced by its very simplicity. The first public performance was by a duo of young pianists aged 6 and 10, to whom Ravel had dedicated it. It makes use of every device in Ravel's endless book and every one effective and with a purpose and point. For instance, little Hop o' My Thumb loses his way in measures which successively accrue an additional beat until, up to a reasonable limit, he is far, far away. And the solo violin, with sliding ascending harmonics, is obviously the bird come for the bread crumbs.

* * *

THE MOZART SYMPHONY plays itself and Morel heightened its fascination by good choice of tempi and clear contrasts of color. It seemed as if he meddled overmuch, however, several times in hushing and subduing certain sections. The cello line should have been more audible in the andante to give a basis for the violins to do their rhythmic vagaries, and there is a difference between playing firmly but softly and a shush observed. And in the last four bars of the final allegro, the striking ending without a suggestion of a retard have benefitted by the cellos again being given their head.

The Strauss suite is surprisingly good fun. Most of the tunes have been lifted from the music of Lully of nearly 300 years ago. Strauss applied his own wit and skill in adjusting it to more recent days but it is a happy combination of salon, dance, cafe-concert, and every type and manner of music which Strauss could dash off much as E. B. White could do a New Yorker article. There are many opportunities for solo instruments and Richard Burgin, concertmaster, and Samuel Mayes, solo cello, were only two among many who were heard with a keen enjoyment.

* * *

MORE L HAD disposed his orchestra in an unorthodox seating. Strauss wrote individual parts for each individual string player; six violins, four violas, four violoncellos and two double-basses, and so Morel placed them where they would combine to best advantage. Thus there were violins to the conductor's three sides, and the other strings in unaccustomed places, playing or resting while their neighbors were doing the contrary. This was a wonderfully relaxing part of a program which had been undemanding but highly rewarding for the audience, and Morel deserves an accolade for enlarging our acquaintance with such charming new friends.

Tanglewood Tales

Monteux To Appear With Opera Company

Pierre Monteux, who led two Festival concerts at Tanglewood this summer, has been announced as musical director of the San Francisco Opera Company's staged production of Arthur Honegger's "Joan of Arc at the Stake," its U.S. premiere in this form, on Oct. 15 and 21. Film star Dorothy McGuire will portray Joan. Mr. Monteux was conductor of the San Francisco Symphony for 17 years, and will be returning to the coast city for the first time since he shared with Charles Munch the 1953 tour to the West Coast of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Chamber Music Concert Sunday

The final chamber music concert by the members of Department 1 of the Berkshire Music Center will be given Sunday morning at 10 in the theater-concert hall. The concert is open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

The program:

Sextet for Clarinet, String Quartet, and piano .... Juan Orrego Salas
Sonata: Allegro non troppo.
Diferencias (variations).
Scherzo: Allegretto.
Recitative, contrapunto y fuga.
Constance Field, violin; Phyllis Skoldberg, violin; Joseph Pietropaolo, viola; Scheherazade, three poems for voice and Grande, clarinet; Gilbert Kalish, piano.

Quintet for harp and strings (In memoriam: Charles Ives). Barney Childs Fourth Movement: Dance II and Conclusion.
William dePasquale, violin; Barbara Fraser, violin; Joseph Pietropaolo, viola; Evalyn Steinbock, violoncello; Elyze Yockey Ilku, harp.

Sextet for String Quartet, Harp and Timpani .... Michael Sahl
First Movement: Fast, relaxed.
William dePasquale, violin; Barbara Fraser, violin; Joseph Pietropaolo, viola; Evalyn Steinbock, violoncello; Jill Bengelsdorf, harp; Michael Colgrass, timpani.

Octet in E-flat major, Opus 20. Mendelssohn Allegro moderato, ma con fuoco.
Andante.
Scherzo: Allegro leggierissimo.
Presto.
Tiberius Klausner, violin; Bira Fenster, violin; Stanley Dombrowski, violin; Miriam Wexler, violin; Endel Kalam, viola; Carlos Quian, viola; Camilla Heller, violoncello; Michael Grebanier, violoncello.

Student Orchestra Concert in Shed

The sixth concert by the student orchestra of Department 1 of the Berkshire Music Center, open to Friends of the Center, will be given tomorrow afternoon at 3 in the Music Shed.

The program follows:

Morceau Symphonique, from Redemption, Franck
Henry Janiec, Conductor.
First Symphony .... Barney Childs
II. Calm.
Harry Kruger, Conductor.
Scheherazade, three poems for voice and orchestra .... Ravel
I. Asie.
Ann English, soprano.
Samuel Krachmalnick, Conductor.
Two Nocturnes .... Debussy Nuages.
Fetes.
Samuel Krachmalnick, Conductor.
Overture to The Flying Dutchman, Wagner
Paul Vermel, Conductor.
INTERMISSION.
Presentation of awards by Aaron Copland.
Symphony No. 6, in F major, Opus 68, Pastoral .... Beethoven
Awakening of serene impressions on arriving in the country: Allegro ma non troppo.
Scene by the brookside: Andante molto moto.
Jolly gathering of country folk: Allegro; in tempo d'allegro: Thunderstorm; Tempest: Allegro.
Shepherd's song: Gladsome and thankful feelings after the storm: Allegretto.
Seymour Lipkin, Conductor.

TANGLEWOOD—Lenox, Mass.
LAST WEEK!
Berkshire Festival
BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

TONIGHT (6-11)—TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE
BRENDA LEWIS in Finale of Strauss' "Salome"
ARTHUR FIELDER & BOSTON POPS ORCHESTRA
Reserved Seats $3, $4; Unreserved $2.50

TOM'W EVE: Charles Munch, Cond. (Shed)
SUN. AFT: Charles Munch, Cond.; Berlioz' "Requiem"
Public Rehearsal Sat. 10 AM. Admission $1.00
Reserved Seats $2.50 - $6.50—Adm. $2.00

Address TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD
LENOX, MASS. Phone Lenox 600
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

TANGLEWOOD—Lenox, Mass.
LAST TWO DAYS!
TONIGHT—Charles Munch, Cond. (Shed)
TOM'W AFT.—Berlioz' "Requiem"
Berkshire Festival
BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
Reserved Seats $2.50-$6.50; Adm. $2.00
LENOX, MASS. Phone Lenox 600
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

N.Y. Times Aug. 14, 1954

BERKSHIRE SERIES ENDS A DAY EARLY

Friday Night Chamber Music Programs Conclude With Brilliant Work by Morel

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 12—The Friday night series of chamber orchestra concerts at Tanglewood ended tonight—that is, Thursday. This was no typographical error. Since "Tanglewood On Parade," the five-ring circus put on by the student body of the Berkshire Music Center, takes place Friday, the closing chamber orchestra event was moved up a day.

Jean Morel, who taught conducting at Tanglewood this summer, gave an exhibition of his own command of this art Thursday. Conducting a Boston Symphony Orchestra ensemble, he gave meticulous, often brilliant, performances of works by Rossini, Mozart, Ravel and Strauss.

To consider the program backward, because that was the order of excellence in the interpretations, Mr. Morel closed the concert with a jubilant reading of a suite from Strauss' "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme" music. This music is not played as often as the tone poems, but it has a wit and a flavor that belong to the mood of such works as "Rosenkavalier." Mr. Morel, who is evidently a man with a subtle sense of humor, gave a bouncing, luminous reading of this score, and the Boston players responded to his every wish to make the music go with a joyous freshness.

Had Force and Vitality

Still moving backward, let us consider Ravel's "Mother Goose" suite, which ended the first half. Here again was a score Mr. Morel felt in his bones. He had the orchestra project its delicate colors with precision; at the same time the music did not become attenuated in spirit. It had force and vitality.

Preceding Ravel was Mozart's Symphony No. 33 in B flat (K. 319). Mr. Morel and his musicians gave it a transparent reading, light in style and yet full of implicit feeling. One could have wished for just a shade more virility, but Mr. Morel could easily justify his approach.

The evening began with Rossini's "La Scala Di Seta" overture. All in all, a graceful, brightly textured occasion marred only by the rain earlier in the day that kept the lawnsitters away, but the moon was there to shine benignly on those brave enough to take a chance on Berkshire's capricious weather.

17

Symphony Chorus Will Sing Tomorrow at Tanglewood

Fifty members of the chorus of the Springfield Symphony will leave Springfield today to go to Lenox for the final rehearsal of the Berlioz "Requiem", which they will sing with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Festival Chorus at Tanglewood, the home of the Berkshire Festival. The rehearsal, which will be open to the public, will be the last in a series of nine for the local people.

Means 1000-Hours Work

Going into the performance with the world-famous orchestra and chorus are better than a thousand hours' work—each rehearsal lasts about three hours—better than 3000 miles travel—the round trip to Tanglewood is ninety miles—and, according to one chorister, "tons of mental energy." The energy has been burned up in perfecting the thousands of details which go into the two-hour performance.

One of those details is the Latin word "Rex." "Rex," which means "King" in Latin, when stretched out over two bars of music isn't just "Rexsssss." According to James Aliferis, assistant Festival choral director—the bald, pleasant tyrant who has been directing the rehearsals at Tanglewood—it is "Rreeeeex." Mr. Aliferis makes the chorus say and sing "R-r-e-e-e-e-e-x." until it comes out to his satisfaction.

At the rehearsals also is Hugh Ross, a thin, twinkling Englishman who is choral director at Tanglewood. Mr. Ross spends most of his time cocking an experienced ear at the sections of the chorus and saying such things to individual singers as "You have a lovely voice. Why don't you sing out?"

He was responsible for one of the high spots of the long series of rehearsals. In last Sunday night's session, the first at Tanglewood, he said to the group as the clock neared nine that rehearsals had been planned to run from 7 'til 9, but that, since so much was to be done that, in his words, "We'll stay as long as we can."

The battle-wise choristers, who well knew that they would be singing as long as the director had strength to wave a baton at them, detected a certain humorous understatement and showed their merriment, whereupon Mr. Ross remarked to the further delight of the group that one of the joys of a Britisher working in the United States was that you said the most ordinary things and everyone laughs like anything.

Musical Variety, Picnics, Warm Night Delight 10,050 at Tanglewood-On-Parade

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 13—Everything and everyone combined to make this Tanglewood-on-Parade a huge success. In the first place the weather was perfect, the best weather of the entire festival, in fact. Then there were all the resources of the Berkshire Music Center on view and lastly a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Thomas Schippers, with soprano Brenda Lewis giving an impassioned performance of the final scene from Strauss' "Salome." Finally, the audience was as enthusiastic as it was large. It is estimated at 10,050 people, the largest attendance in five years.

Hear Opera, Symphony

We came early in the afternoon and managed to hear a variety of representations. The opera department put on the comic opera "The Physician in Spite of Himself" by Gounod. This was given in the garden. Later, other members of the department were heard. The excerpts included the love duet ly. Richard Maxfield's "Six little from act one of "Tosca" by Puccini; the Addie from the third act of "La Boheme" and a repeat performance of Hindemith's "Hin und Zuruck" or "There and Back." We heard some fine voices, remembering particularly the Tosca of Emma Goldman and the Cavaradossi of Marvin Worden.

A bit later we heard Beatrice Krebs sing the lamentation from Leonard Bernstein's "Jeremiah" symphony. She sang it magnificent-pieces for pianoforte, four hands" was played by the composer and Tessi Ichiyanagi, a student from Tokyo, Japan. For good measure, we heard a fine performance of the Brahms "Quintet for strings and piano in F Minor."

It was worth coming to "Tanglewood-on-Parade" just to watch the people enjoying themselves. There were literally thousands of picnic parties going on, ranging from a solitary man eating his fare while seated on a tree stump, to an elaborate party equipped with table cloth, cutlery and quantities of food.

Shed Is Jammed

The evening concert found the shed jammed. Thomas Schippers is a young conductor with great vitality and considerable audience appeal. He opened the program with a fine performance of the "Symphony in C" by Bizet. There was a real solidity to the opening movement. A nice comprehension of the oriental flavor of the adagio and a spirited and brilliant performance of the finale. Not a symphony of heavy weight, it is a symphony that makes for good listening.

Brenda Lewis gave an impassioned account of Salome as she sang the final scene of this opera. It is a cruel task for a singer and surely one of the most difficult of operatic roles. Miss Lewis has a huge voice, some might liken it to a silver-toned trumpet. Mr. Schippers did not spare her at all, but the combined effect was thrilling.

The concert then turned to lighter entertainment and on stage came Arthur Fiedler, now observing his 25th year as conductor of the Boston "Pops" orchestra, to lead this orchestra through a typical program. He started off with "Stars and Stripes Forever." Then came a suite from Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne" and the "Bolero" by Ravel. An arrangement by Haymann called "Tviana" and the theme song "Look sharp — be sharp" completed the program. It was all received with boundless enthusiasm.

Gift to Miss Smith

During intermission, Dr. Lewis Perry, honorary chairman of the friends of the Berkshire Center, in one of those graceful speeches for which he is noted, presented Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, organizer of the first 1934 festival, with an illuminated leather scroll.

Miss Smith responded as follows:

"It gives me a very deep sense of gratification to accept this scroll from the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on behalf of the members of the board of trustees of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival and all of those citizens of this country who so generously gave their time, effort and enthusiasm to make possible this great musical event.

"It was 20 years ago this summer that Dr. Henry Hadley conceived this idea of "music under the moon" and the machinery was set in motion.

"Eighteen years ago, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with its outstanding conductor, Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, joined forces with the Boston Symphonic Festival. From that time on, musical history has been written, giving the Berkshire Symphonic Festival national and international importance."

UNION,
Aug 14

FINAL CONCERTS TONIGHT, SUNDAY AT TANGLEWOOD

12,000 Expected as Munch Directs; Springfield Chorus to Sing

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Music Director, conducting, gives the final pair of concerts of its enlarged 1954 Berkshire Festival, tonight at 8.30 p. m. and tomorrow afternoon, at 2.30 p. m. in the huge Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox. If attendance figures of last summer, when 25,000 persons attended the final brace of concerts, can be considered a guage and if fair weather prevails for the more than 12,000 persons which will hear the music on the spacious lawns outdoors, all records will be shattered in this 17th summer of symphonic music in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the 15th since the Boston Symphony Orchestra participated.

All Symphonic Program

Tonight's program is all symphonic, with Mr. Munch leading the 104-piece Boston Symphony in Brahms' "Tragic Overture," Walter Piston's Symphony No. 4, Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin" and the Saint-Saens Symphony No. 3 with E. Power Biggs as organ soloist.

The concluding concert, in memory of late Serge Koussevitzky, who died in 1951 after 25 years as Music Director of the Boston Symphony, will be the last of a number of programs devoted this summer to rarely-heard music of Hector Berlioz, given in their complete form in observance of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of the French composer. Mr. Munch will lead the orchestra in the "Requiem" which had its Tanglewood premiere two summers ago. It will have the assistance of David Poleri, tenor soloist; a chorus of 200 voices of students of the choral and opera departments of the Berkshire Music Center (the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood) trained by Hugh Ross and James Aliferis, augmented by a chorus of 50 voices of the chorus of the Springfield Symphony Orchestra; and four bras bands, totalling 36 players.

General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the Tanglewood lawns, are placed on sale on the day of the performance. Festival patrons are invited to a public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra today at 10 in the Music Shed, at the nominal charge of $1, for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

This week-end concludes also the activities of the Berkshire Music Center, which has presented some 40 concerts and demonstrations by students of its orchestra, chamber music, chorus, opera and amateur study group departments in this, its 12th six-week session. At Saturday's final concert by the student symphony orchestra in the Music Shed at 3 p. m., composer Aaron Copland, assistant director of the music school, will announce scholarships and prize awards. Sunday morning at 10 a. m., in the Chamber Music Hall, is the final program of chamber music by students of the school's Department I (orchestra). These two events are open to members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, who may attend through voluntary contributions to the school.

Tickets are available at the Tanglewood box office for the final Shed concerts, and reservations may be made by telephoning Lenox (Mass.) 600.

'Tanglewood on Parade' Heard Under Bright Sky

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 13.—"Tanglewood on Parade," the Berkshire Music Center's annual panorama of talent and skill, took place today under a bright sky and in a holiday mood. Starting at 2 in the afternoon, Tanglewood's student activities were opened for the public to inspect, and by the day's end every department had been awarded a chance to haul out its wares and display under the most favorable circumstances.

To cap the event, tonight's concert was climaxed by the first Tanglewood appearance of the famed Boston Pops Orchestra, under the direction of Arthur Fiedler. A gay host of works including Raval's "Bolero," Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever" and Hayman's arrangement of TV commercials was the program offering. Previously, Thomas Schippers had conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Bizet's Symphony in C Major and the final scene from Strauss' "Salome" with Brenda Lewis in the title role.

6 P. M. Barrage

During the afternoon, visitors to America's renowned festival locale were offered an opportunity to hear the opera department in Gounod's "The Physician in Spite of Himself"; and, at 6 o'clock, a simultaneous barrage of features was held in every available auditorium on the grounds. Within two hours there were an orchestral concert led by student conductors, a program of chamber music and works by student composers, a group of opera scenes and a concert by members of Tanglewood's Chorus. In all, a bird's-eye view of the Berkshire Music Center's formidable facilities and curriculum.

Last night's concert in the Theater-Concert Hall, featuring members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Jean Morel, was compounded of major distinctions and minor failures. Beginning with Rossini's bumptious and whimsical overture to "La Scala di Seta," the program then turned its sights on Mozart's rarely heard Symphony No. 33, in B Fla, K. 319, Ravel's "Mother Goose" suite, and, as the grand finale, Richard Strauss' music for Moliere's "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme."

Rossini Overture

The "Silken Ladder" overture, heard with an orchestra of chamber size approximating Rossini's own, leaps like a trout and makes lovely sounds. All of its vivacity, its swirling elegance and brio, were apparent in Mr. Morel's buoyant reading.

Buoyant also, and sunny as well, was the conductor's interpretation of Mozart's Symphony No. 33, a work cast into semi-obscurity by the perfection of Mozart's later efforts in the form. On this occasion there was, in addition, the considerable advantage of hearing the composer through a Frenchman's ears. As the French—and Mr. Morel in particular—perform him, Mozart's soulfulness shrinks a mite, but his polish and glitter, his sparkle and verve, are made immeasurably brighter. He is asked to dance and lark, to dispel sad thoughts. And while slow movements are thus liable to lose some of their potency and passion, the outer ones take on a festival flavor, and revel effortlessly in their own high spirits.

Fairy Tales in Tune

Ravel's "Mother Goose" suite, on the other hand, is a wide-eyed and tender colection of fairy tales set to tune. It is a gentle piece, nostalgic and gossamer, and it wants much in the way of sentiment and flexibility to make its point. These several graces, however, were largely absent from Mr. Morel's performance. Supplanting them were strictness and severity and a rigidity of tempo and rhythm that robbed the numbers of their naive charm. Stern and unsmiling, then, was this "Mother Goose." And she is no friend when encountered with a frown.

Strauss' music for the "Bourgeois Gentilhomme" has, owing to it incessant waltzes, a tendency to grow kittenish and coy. As much as he was able, Mr. Morel minimized these aspects of the score by concentrating on its rollicking orchestration and piquancy of detail. But even the stamina and thrust of his rendition failed to conceal the work's looseness of structure and glaring archness of theme.

COURANT

AUG 1 - 1954

All-Berlioz Program Slated at Tanglewood

An all-Berlioz program Saturday night at 8:30 o'clock will highlight this week's events at the Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Overture to "Benevenuto Cellini", the "Royal Hunt And Storm" from "The Trojans", "Summer Nights" with Eleanor Steber, soprano as soloist, and the Te Deum, with the Festival Chorus and soloists.

The week will begin with the Kroll String Quartet, Wednesday night at 8:30. the ensemble will play Haydns "Lark" Quartet, th play Haydn's "Lark" Quartet, the Hindemith Quartet, Opus 22, no. 3 and Ravel's Quartet in F.

Friday evening, Lukas Foss will conduct members of the Boston Symphony in the theater-concert hall program. This will offer Stravinsky's "Pulcinella" complete, the Mozart Piano Concerto in B Flat (K450), with Seymour Lipkin as soloist and excerpts from Mozart's "Idomeneo", with chorus and soloists.

The Sunday afternoon, August 8 program at 2:30 o'clock, lists Glueck's Overture to "Alceste", Beethoven's Violin Concerto with Zino Francescatti and Brahms Second Symphony. Mr. Munch will conduct.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.
JOURNAL

AUG 1 - 1954

Berkshire Festival in Full Swing

By RUTH TRIPP

LENOX, MASS.—The Berkshire Festival is in full swing. Tanglewood bustles with the well-organized series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, 12 in the shed and six in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Six concerts of chamber music and innumerable programs by the students at the Berkshire Music Center make an exciting schedule no matter at what point you pick up the thread.

With the third week of the Festival well along, I went first to hear the concert of Friday, July 23. Charles Munch conducted the first half, a steady, reassuring presentation of Handel's Concerto Grosso for String Orchestra, Op. 6, No. 4, followed by a spirited parade of Haydn's "Military" Symphony, No. 100 in G. major. The precision with which all the square corners were turned gave it considerable aplomb. The gay trio of percussion instruments, bass drum, cymbals and triangle, added a novel touch for the era in which it was written

Hugh Ross Is Conductor

The feature of the program was Haydn's Mass No. 3 in D minor, called the "Nelson" in honor of the victory of Lord Nelson at the Battle of the Nile. Hugh Ross conducted the Festival Chorus, orchestra and quartet of solo voices in a thrilling performance. Free, florid writing for the voices, beautiful contrasting sections for the instruments and an exuberant melodic line for soprano, made the hearing of this music a memorable experience.

Naomi Farr, as soprano soloist accomplished her assignment with distinction. The bass part, sung by Thomas Stewart, was artistic. Haydn required less for this voice. Contralto and tenor sung by Beatrice Krebs and Marvin Worden, fitted in as they were called for and the entire production added luster to the already distinguished list of accomplishments by Hugh Ross. There were three striking sections where the chorus came in unaccompanied with a pianissimo tone of exquisite quality. For me the "Dona nobis pacem" was uplifting.

Jean Morel conducted the Saturday evening program in the shed. He was a thin, shy youth of 20, playing piano accompaniments for the opera class at Fontainebleau, when I first met him. At Tanglewood, it was good to see him take the podium with all the confidence required and to hear the artistry, now mature, with which he commanded the musicians before him.

Prokofieff's Sixth

We heard Prokofieff's Sixth Symphony, Op. 111 interpreted with clarity and finesse. Many of the favorite idioms of the composer were there and as they were displayed, pleasant recollections of other works by Prokofieff flashed back to the listeners. Nicole Henriot, a favorite in Providence, played a brilliant performance of the Liszt Concerto, No. 1 in E flat major. Accuracy, strength, in fact all the attributes of virtuosity have always been apparent in the playing of this young artist. Here we heard an added quality of warmth and intimacy which endeared her playing to the audience. She and the conductor were recalled many times.

The concert finished with the ardent "Don Juan" Tone Poem by Richard Strauss, played with more than the usual amount of ardor. A sensitive, beautifully contrasted reading of the Elgar, "Enigma" Variations, closed the program and again, the conductor was given an ovation.

The largest throng gathers for the Sunday concerts. The day was an ideal example of Berkshire weather. At the morning worship of the Lenox Congregational Church, (in the churchyard of which Serge Koussevitzky is buried), a choral work was presented to honor the 80th anniversary of the late founder of the Berkshire Center. Hugh Ross conducted a chorus of 30 voices, a cantor, two clarinets, two bassoons, two trumpets, three trombones and organ in a wonderful presentation of the Organum Triplum, "Descendit" by Perotinus, a composer who was cantor in Notre Dame Cathedral in Paris when it was built in 1198. The pedal point by the brass and organ tones, the flowing Gregorian line of the chorus and the stark, solitary intonation by the cantor moved along to a splendid climax where the brass instruments suddenly separated and went in contrary motion to each other.

This work had its first presentation in America this year at the Center. After service, the group went to Koussevitzky's grave and sang Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," a work which was commissioned by Koussevitzky. There was a wonderful feeling of past and present, old world and new and, from it all, one gained a confident feeling of serene continuity in spite of upheaval.

Biggs in Organ Recital

E. Power Biggs gave a splendid organ recital Saturday afternoon in the shed. His works were chosen from the music he likes best to play, Handel, Couperin, Vivaldi and Byrd. He gave a beautiful interpretation of Franck's Prelude, Fugue and Variation.

Many famous people came on Sunday afternoon. In the audience were Fritz Kreisler, now with snowy white hair; Mlle. Henriot, as pretty at close range as she is on stage; Gertrude Robinson Smith, one of the bulwarks of the Berkshire Festival and many others. It was especially pleasing to have M. and Mme. Jean Bedetti seated just in front of us and good to recall other pleasant meetings with him. He comes back from the University of Miami to teach at Tanglewood each summer and except for a little added girth, he is the same friendly, modest person who was a familiar figure in the first cellists chair of the Boston Symphony for so many seasons.

Dr. Munch gave a breath-taking performance of the Berlioz "Harold in Italy" Symphony. William Primrose was viola soloist and his playing reached a high level of artistry. Tone color in every degree of intensity brought the voice of his viola to us with eloquence which was moving. The acoustic properties of the shed were never more taxed than by his delicate pianissimo tone. Yet, it carried everywhere.

Further brilliance of writing by Berlioz was heard in the Overture to "Beatrice and Benedict" and Dr. Munch has made a notable contribution to musical history at Tanglewood by his inspired interpretations of this Berlioz music.

The afternoon closed with the Toch Symphony No. 2, Op. 73, a work which could be called controversial. It is modern writing as I like it. Plenty of evidence of craftsmanship, great imagination in the use of material and a closely knit fabric of sound which seems to me, at least, completely integrated. Ernst Toch was present and the audience gave him his due in hearty applause. Mr. Toch is teaching composition at the center this season.

Tuesday brought us the triple bill by the opera and orchestra departments of the Center. The first staged performance in America of "L'Amfiparnaso," by Orazio Vecchi proved to be one of the most entrancing productions I've ever seen. It was written in 1594 and the beautiful unaccompanied vocal score in five parts was sung to perfection by two madrigal groups ably conducted by Hugh Ross.

The action, in pantomime, was high comedy played on and around the lower slopes of Parnassus by a Commedia dell' Arte group. They were a rowdy lot and one of the wonders of this season is how Hugh Ross, during the merry play, could have kept not one, but two, madrigal groups smoothly singing the immortal music of the muses who dwell on the heights.

Scenery was brought on as it was required. Costumes were exquisite and we were kept informed about the action by little pages who came in with silken banners suitably inscribed.

Hindemith's Opera

Hindemith's 10-minute opera, "Hin und Zuruck" was staged as it would have been in 1927. The transition from Parnassus, including its buffoonery, was a rapid one. We found much to laugh at in the fast moving pace of the ludicrous situations of this witty work. A bit of the Charleston, a pocket flask, and a murder, (complete with ambulance orderly) were the high spots of the action. The plot then reverses itself and is played backwards chiefly to prove the point that in either direction, things can be slightly crazy. But we all had such fun meantime! This performance was staged and executed with skill which exceeded that of a first performance I saw here with Hindemith conducting.

The final one-act opera was written by Ernst Toch, a member of the composition faculty at the center. "The Princess and the Pea" is adapted from the fairy tale by Hans Christian Andersen and we heard a delightful English version written by Marion Farquhar. Costumes and scenery were beautifully executed and the difficult music was accomplished successfully. The action of the plot was descriptively assisted by the instruments and altogether, this was delightful fantasy.

The work of the opera and orchestral departments of Tanglewood have added another outstanding bill to a list which has become by now, an important one. Frederick Cohen, assisted by Elsa Kahl and Morton Seigel were production staff. Scenery was by John Blankenchip and costumes by Leo Van Witsen. Conductors were Samuel Krachmalnick, for the Hindemith opera, and Paul Vermel for the Toch work.

Tanglewood Tales

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky has accepted the chairmanship of an international committee which will pay honor to the great Finnish composer, Jan Sibelius, on the occasion next year of his 90th birthday, which falls on Dec. 8, 1955. Through the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, the committee will endow a composer's scholarship to the Berkshire Music Center for the summer of 1955 to a young Finnish composer, and arrangements are being made with other schools like the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N.Y., and the Curtis School of Music in Philadelphia for the winner to be enabled to continue his studies in America at the end of his stay in Tanglewood. Details became known at last Sunday's Berkshire Festival concert when the Boston Symphony performed Sibelius' Symphony No. 2.

Francis Robinson, assistant manager in charge of boxoffice and press of New York's Metropolitan Opera, was a Tanglewood visitor this weekend, a guest of William M. Judd at Meadowlark in Glendale. Mr. Robinson was press representative at Tanglewood in 1947 and 1948.

Plouffe

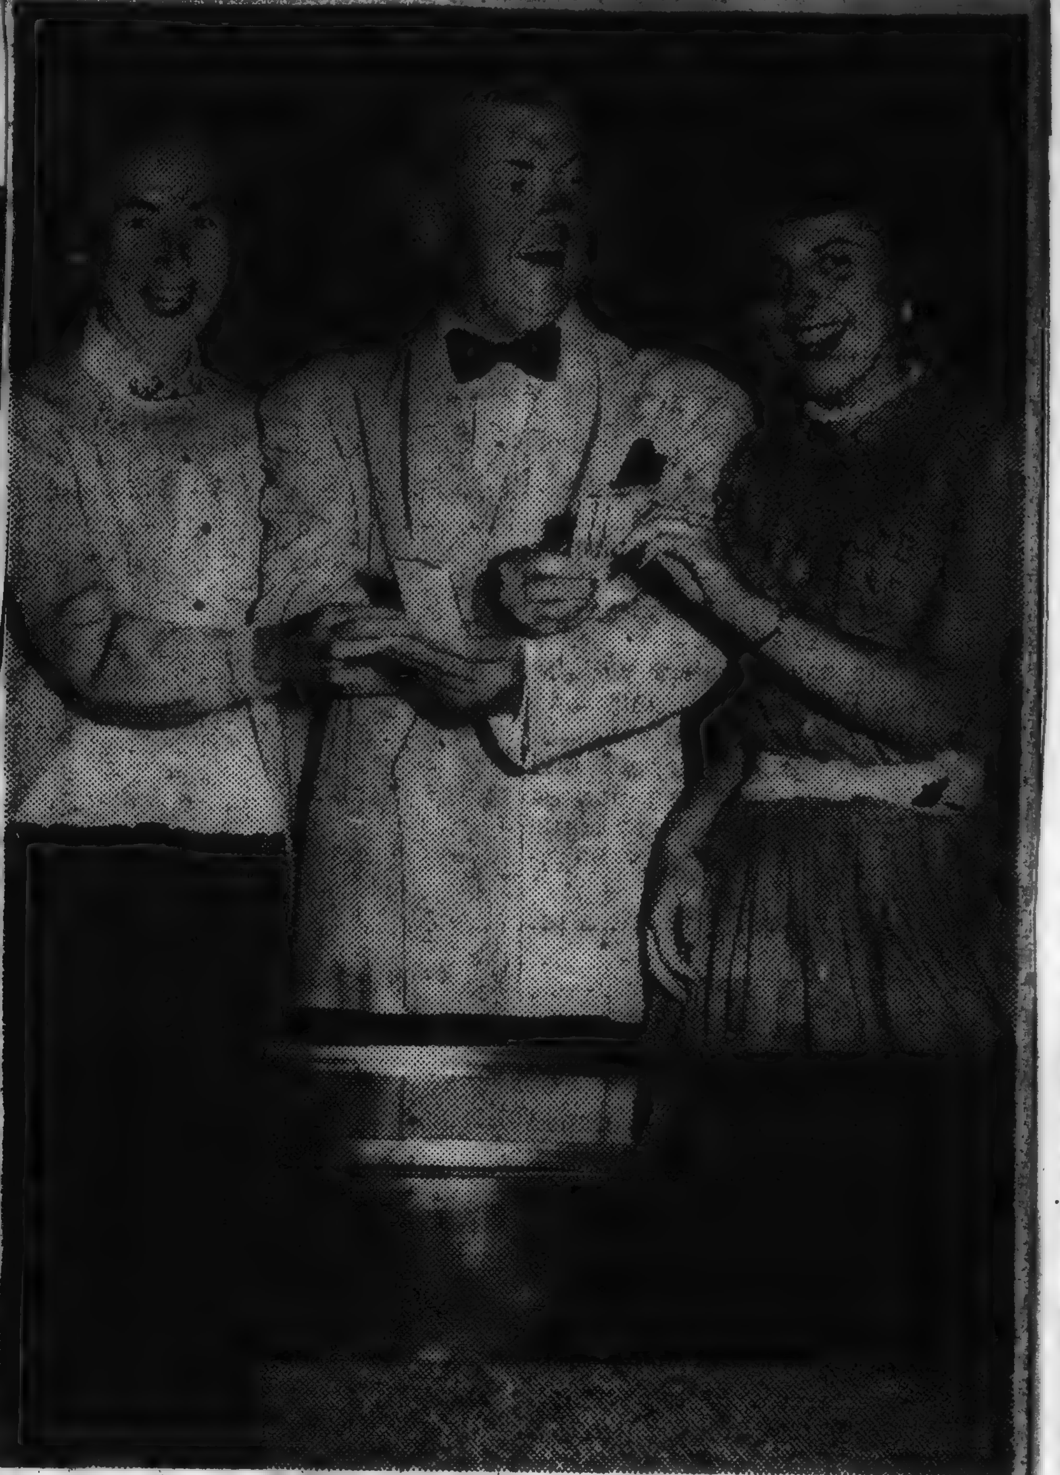
OVATION from the huge crowd at Tanglewood on Parade is being acknowledged by Brenda Lewis, Broadway star, who sang the final scene from Strauss' "Salome," with Thomas Schippers conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Plouffe

RECOGNITION for her leadership in establishing the Berkshire Symphonic Festival 20 years ago was given by the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra last night to Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Stockbridge, Festival president, who is being presented a leather scroll by Dr. Lewis Perry, honorary chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Tanglewood Goes on Parade

OPERA LOVERS attending the student opera performance to formally open the Tanglewood on Parade program yesterday afternoon filled the benches to overflowing. The weather was ideal.



Plouffe

A PRIZE SWITCH is being made here by the winners of the two top prizes awarded after the concert in the Music Shed. Miss Marion Schotten of Ludlow, left, who won the RCA-Victor phonograph, swapped her prize with Miss Roberta Goldberg of Malden, who won a Hotpoint refrigerator, donated by the GE. Miss Schotten wanted the refrigerator for her mother, who already owned a phonograph. Miss Goldberg, the owner of two refrigerators, was happy to make the switch being supervised by Mac Morgan, well-known baritone of Stockbridge, who drew the prizes.

TRIUMPHAL DEBUT of Arthur Fiedler with the Boston Pops Orchestra is shared with the concertmaster of the Pops, Krips, at the conclusion of the second half of the Tanglewood on Parade program which highlighted the benefit event last nig

ALBERT SCHWEITZER, the noted humanitarian, left, whose brother is married to the sister of Charles Munch, right, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be honored on his 80th birthday, Jan. 14, 1955, when Mr. Munch and the BSO will commemorate the first performance of a new orchestral work by Lukas Foss at Symphony Hall in Boston. Here, Mr. Schweitzer congratulates Mr. Munch following a concert the BSO director conducted with the French National Radio Orchestra in Strasbourg last summer.

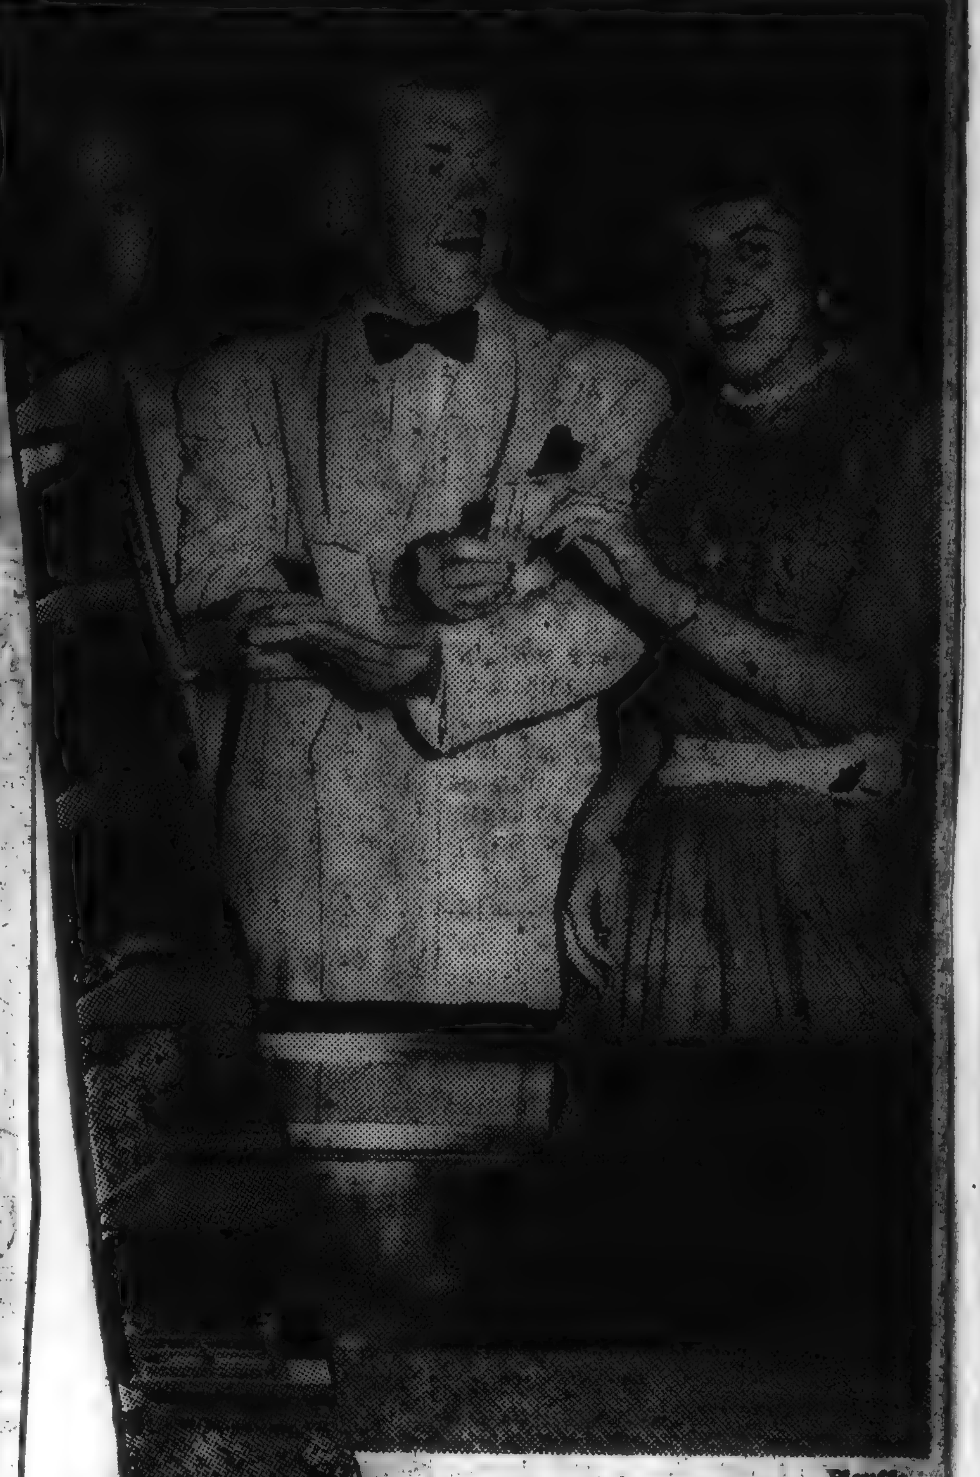
[illegible]

OUTDOOR SETTING for the opera, "The Physician in Spite of Himself," was the formal garden at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon during the performance given by students of the Berkshire Music Center.

Tanglewood Goes on Parade

Manos

OPERA LOVERS attending the student opera performance to formally open the Tanglewood on Parade program yesterday afternoon filled the benches to overflowing. The weather was ideal.



Plouffe

RSHIPPER
Scagliarini start agon Wheels Rest ed structure is on eing made here by the winners of the he concert in the Music Shed. Miss ft, who won the RCA-Victor phono-Miss Roberta Goldberg of Malden,

, donated by the GE. Miss Schot-her mother, who already owned a owner of two refrigerators, was eing supervised by Mac Morgan, well-of Stockbridge, who drew the prizes.

Plouffe

TRIUMPHAL DEBUT of Arthur Fiedler with the Boston Pops Orchestra is shared with the concertmaster of the Pops, Alfred Krips, at the conclusion of the second half of the Tanglewood on Parade program which highlighted the benefit event last night.

ondary to se vice in the m cks served eac over has no liqu service. Soda ort at no char the number of Eastover's ave.

ZER, the noted humanitarian, left, sister of Charles Munch, right, con-Orchestra, will be honored on his hen Mr. Munch and the BSO will mance of a new orchestral work by all in Boston. Here, Mr. Schweitzer con-ollowing a concert the BSO director conducted tional Radio Orchestra in Strasbourg last summer.

Manos

OUTDOOR SETTING for the opera, "The Physician in Spite of Himself," was the formal garden at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon during the performance given by students of the Berkshire Music Center.

Tomorrow

Tanglewood

Chamber Music, Theater-Concert Hall, 10 a.m. Dept. I. Friends program.

Boston Symphony Orchestra, Shed, 2:30 p.m. Charles Munch, conductor. In memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

"Requiem" with Festival Chorus and soloist — Berlioz

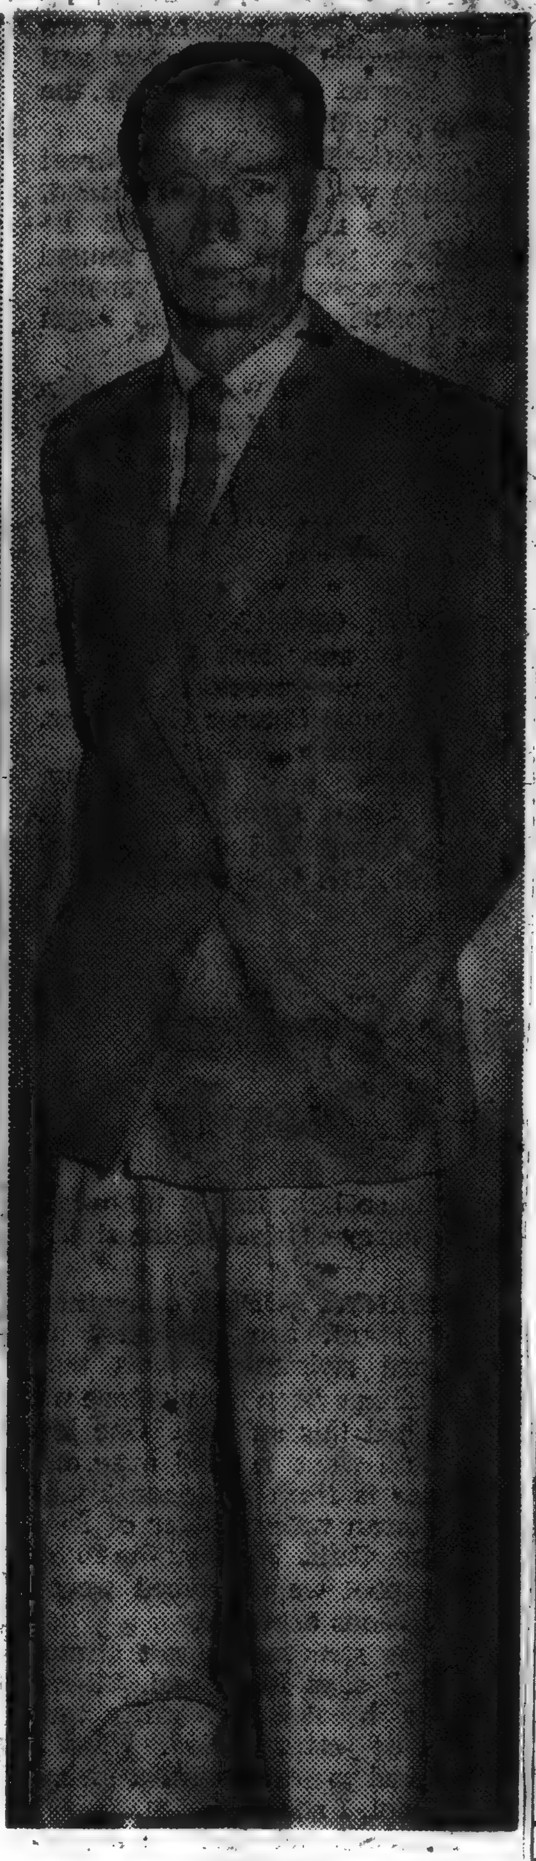
—The Berkshire Evening Eagle, Saturday, Aug. 14, 1954

Berkshire Music Cal

Plus Nearby Summer Theaters and the

Verse-Writing Victor Conquers an Old Adage

Koussevitzky
He inspired verses



Sakharoff
He writes tributes

By Lee Goerlach

THE OLD ADAGE "no man is a hero to his valet" is disproved by Victor Sakharoff, valet for Serge Koussevitzky, late conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

For 23 years Victor "doubled in brass" for the great conductor as chauffeur, gardener, and handyman. He became fisherman and chef in the Berkshires, catching perch in Stockbridge Bowl and cooking them himself to suit the maestro.

* * *

SELF-APPOINTED poet laureate for the great conductor, Victor still writes a poem, in Russian, for each of Koussevitzky's birthdays. The poem, this year titled "Meteor," loses much in translation but the first two verses reflect the writer's ability, his admiration for his late leader and his appreciation of the honors still bestowed on Koussevitzky by visitors to Tanglewood.

In lightning-like path, flaming,
A meteor in "Tanglewood" fell,
Did not die out, like others, burrowing,
But with holy light blazed.
There they erected around it temples
And worshippers of glorious works
Gathered to burn incense
From near and distant lands.

* * *

VICTOR, a native of Russia, was a toolmaker in France before working for Dr. Koussevitzky. He had been trained as a singer and fled his homeland after the October Revolution.

"At that time Dr. Koussevitzky wintered in the United States and spent his summers in France," Victor says.

"I wrote him a letter, asking him about a job, when he was visiting outside Paris. He called me and wanted to see me."

* * *

VICTOR GOT the valet's job mostly on the strength of his ability to make pelmene, a Siberian dish. He always drove Dr. Koussevitzky to the concerts and stood by to help him change his shirt during intermission. "By that time his shirt looked as though it had been dipped in a bucket of water," says Victor. Victor wiled away his spare moments by writing poetry. Many of his poems have been published abroad.

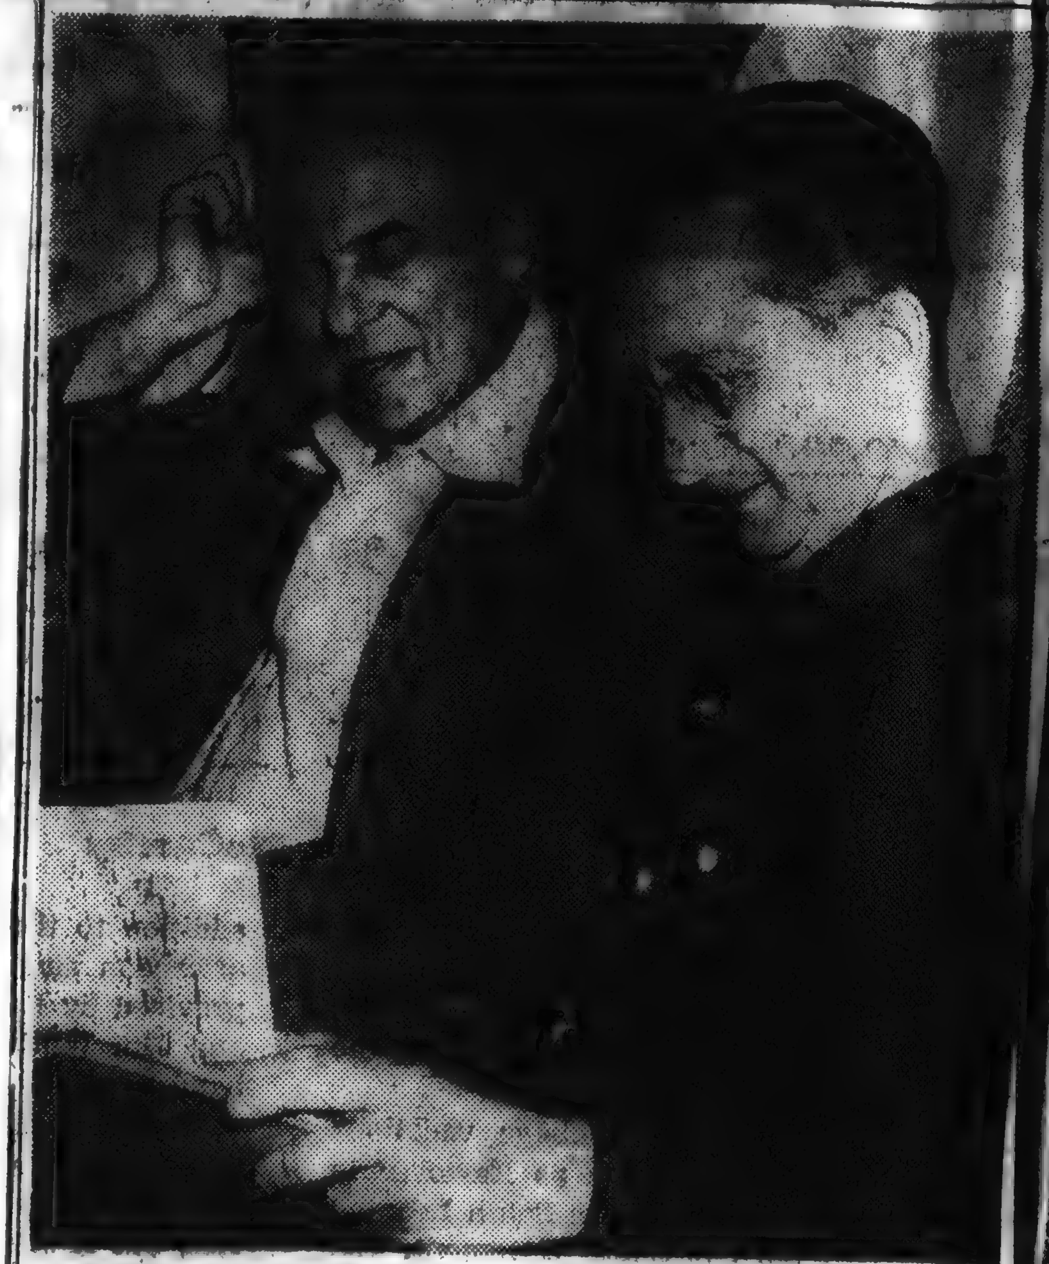
"Koussevitzky always had time to help young musicians and composers," Victor says.

"For example," he added, "at Lenox, when Dorothy Maynor first sent word to him, wondering if he had time to listen to her, Dr. Koussevitzky said, 'I will find time'."

* * *

"HE SAW HIMSELF in every young person who came to Tanglewood," Victor continued. "He loved young people, particularly the gifted ones and never tried to keep them away. And he loved to build—talent, orchestras, programs of new music. He founded the Berkshire Music Center to build good music."

Victor is now employed by the late conductor's widow, Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky.



CONCERTMASTERS of the Boston Symphony Orc and Boston Pops Orchestra, Richard Burgin, left, and Alfred look over a score to be performed at the Berkshire Music Fe

Weather Holds Up in Coun For Weekend Festival Fina

All Attendance Records Shattered Going Into Final Series—All Symphonic Concer Tonight; Koussevitzky Memorial Tomorr

TANGLEWOOD—The 1954 Berkshire Festival, with two concerts to go, has broken all existing records for attendance this year, following a change in the weather which promises to be fair again tonight and tomorrow afternoon for the concluding concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Charles Munch conducting.

May Top 150,000

Before going into the final week of concerts, attendance at the Festival events reached about 110,000, compared to the 117,000 record set last year for the whole series of programs. With 10,050 attending the Tanglewood on Parade benefit last night and another 5,000 at the two "small concerts" in the theater concert hall Wednesday and Thursday evenings, the attendance is already over 125,000 for this season and may top 150,000 before the Festival season winds up tomorrow afternoon.

Tonight's Program

Tonight's program is all symphonic, with Mr. Munch leading the 104-piece Boston Symphony in Brahms' "Tragic Overture," Walter Piston's Symphony No. 4, Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin" and the Saint-Saens Symphony No. 3 with E. Power Biggs as organ soloist.

The concluding concert, in memory of late Serge Koussevitzky, who died in 1951 after 25 years as music director of the Boston Symphony, will be the last of a number of programs devoted this summer to rarely-heard music of Hector Berlioz, given in their complete form in observance of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of the French composer.

'Requiem' Tomorrow

Mr. Munch will lead the orchestra in the "Requiem" which had its Tanglewood premiere two summers ago. It will have the assistance of David Poleri, tenor soloist; a chorus of 200 voices of students of the choral and opera departments of the Berkshire Music Center, trained by Hugh Ross James Aliferis, augmented by chorus of 50 voices of the cho of the Springfield Symphony chestra; and four brass bands, taling 36 players.

Music Center Closing

This weekend concludes also the activities of the Berkshire Music Center, which has presented some 40 concerts and demonstrations by students of its orchestra, chamber music, chorus, opera and amateur study group departments in this, its 12th six-week session. At this afternoon's final concert by the student symphony orchestra in the Music Shed at 3, composer Aaron Copland, assistant director of the music school, announced scholarships and prize awards. Tomorrow morning at 10 in the Chamber Music Hall, the final program of chamber music by students of the school's Department I (Orchestra) will be given. The event is open to members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, who may attend through voluntary contributions to the school.

Mrs. Fiedler Daughter of Former Lee Resident

LEE—Mrs. Arthur Fiedler, wife of the conductor of last night's Tanglewood on Parade pop concert, is the daughter of a former Lee resident.

He was Dr. John Bottomley Jr., son of one of Lee's early paper manufacturers. According to Assessor Edward W. Gibbons of Lee, who remembers the family, they used to live in a house on Franklin St. which was later torn down to make way for the old Greenock Inn.

In an 1885 gazetteer, John Bottomley Sr. was listed as a retired papermaker owning seven houses and lots in Lee, 125 acres of land in Tyringham and a house and lot in Pittsfield. The younger John Bottomley left Lee to become a surgeon in Boston. Mrs. Fiedler is the former Ellen Bottomley.

otography: From Flute to Camera •

y Bill Tague

A LUTE AND a camera have very ittle in common it seems, but n interest in both of th e instru- men made a hap combina- tion hat led Gu anos to his esent oc- cup n of staff ph ogra- ph r Tangle- wo As a bud- din musician, 19- ar-old Ma- no wanted to be ne a stu- de of the Tanglewood music sch l to further his flute work. his photographic back- g nd, which began in junior hi school, proved more inter- e ng to the Tanglewood man- ment, and he accepted their r to become the youngest n ever to hold the staff pho- rapher's job there.

* * *

HE MAY BE the youngest but 's also one of the best, as any- e can tell from his pictures, ich appear almost daily in e Eagle and other publica- ons served by the Tanglewood blicity bureau. An excellent hibit of Manos photographs ken at Tanglewood is current- on view in the glass reception ilding at the main gate.

'Gus' is actually a nickname ut he prefers it to Constantinos, hich is too long for a credit ne. His home is in Columbia, .C., where he is entering his unior year at the University of outh Carolina, majoring in ournalism. The last three summers he has been head photographer at Brevard Music Festival in North Carolina, starting at the precocious age of 16.

* * *

MANOS practically lives, eats and sleeps photography. Using two Leicas for all but a tiny fraction of his pictures (he has a Rolleiflex but is going to sell it), he begins at 9 a.m. and often goes until the wee hours of the following morning, photographing students, conductors, guests and anything else that seems promising for publicizing Tanglewood.

His favorite lens is an 85 mm Nikkor F 2 which he obtained for a song from a friend in the service in Japan. He has two others, the 50 mm Nikkor F 1.4 and the 35 mm Leica Summaron wide angle.

Without the aid of darkroom assistant James L. Cusato, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Cusato of 6 Lexington Pkwy., Manos ouldn't put out the prints as he pes. Much time is consumed, for example, by spotting dust specks, one of the hazards in 35 mm photography.

* * *

THE DARKROOM is rather primative, being roughly the size of two closets, but it works. Manos uses only Plus X film, which is developed in FR Super X-33 or the speed demon Primicrol. He says the latter developer gives four times the film speed. He keeps one Leica loaded for use with it, and the other for the FR developer. The enrlarger is a Leitz Focomat. Prints are made on single weight, glossy Varigam paper developed in Dektol and dried without ferrotyping. Negatives are cut in strips of six frames and are contact printed for inspection before enlarging.

Despite the hectic, seven-day-a-week grind, Manos is bearing up well and loves the work. His only regret is that his flute is gathering dust.

* * *

MANY OF THE Mathew Brady portaits on exhibition at the Berkshire Museum were enlarged from hand-coated wet plates which were found stored in a barn in Oswego, N.Y., not long ago. Despite their age—they were wrapped in newspapers dated 1866 and 1874—the plates were nearly free of defects and were successfully enlarged on Ansco Brovira paper. As the plates were quite contrasty, No. 1 grade paper was used.

Brady took his portaits in a Washington, D.C., studio with illumination from a skylight which was controlled by various shades and reflectors. Exposures were based solely on previous experience, as photoelectric meters or other guides were then still a figment of the future.

Gus Manos

SOFTLY, PLEASE, motions Boston Symphony Orchestra Conductor Charles Munch during rehearsal in Tanglewood theater-concert hall. Taken by Manos with an 85 mm Nikker F2 lens on his Leica, using existing light. Exposure was 1/30 sec. at F2.8. Plus X film speed was quadrupled by developing in Primricol.

---

7 Get Music Center Scholarships

Manos

The Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship Award was won jointly by student conductors, Paul Vermel, seated at left, of New York, formerly of Paris, and Samuel Krachmalnick, right, of New York. Both have led the student orchestra at Tanglewood concerts this season. With the guidance of Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, center, and residents of Berkshire County, a committee headed by Mrs. William M. Crane, second from left, of Richmond, and Mrs. John H. Rice, seated at right, of Pittsfield, $5,000 of a $15,000 fund has been raised to establish the scholarship as a memorial to the late BSO music director and founder of the Busic Center.

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE GREAT SHED at Tanglewood, already venerable with honors and memories in its 16th year and the 20th of Berkshire Festivals, added more last night when it served as the hub of the gay, hilarious and unrestrained celebration of Tanglewood on Parade, the annual exhibit of all e activities of the famous insti- tion.

The largest audience ever to tend a similar event on these ounds was favored by ideal ather and started to arrive rly in the afternoon. By 6 lock there were already thou- nds in the shed to hear Ralph rkowitz, dean of the Berkshire sic Center, the school estab- hed by Serge Koussevitzky and intained during the six weeks concerts with a faculty of Bos- Symphony Orchestra men, ex- d them a gracious welcome.

* * *

THE STUDENT orchestra yed a program which may ll have caused those early on lawn and at their picnic kets to look up not a few es to see if it was not the ntor organization already on ge. At evening concert time ormer Center pupil, young mas Schippers, returned for first time since his student s to lead the Boston Sym- ony Orchestra in the Bizet mphony and the final scene m Strauss' "Salomé."

The symphony was brisk and ric and the exact choice for an dience filled in varying degrees of satiety with sandwiches and potato chips. The role of Salomé was sung by strikingly beautiful Brenda Lewis.

Looking vividly like the Henri egnault painting of the charac- she was portraying, Miss Lewis sang with dramatic vitality.

* * *

HER VIBRANT voice, amply powerful under ordinary conditions, could not compete with inconsiderate Schippers, who seemed to be mouthing her words and giving her several glances but never ceasing to exhert his orchestra, nor to temper it. Strauss' voluptuous music was expansively played, but Schippers did a rare job of artistic discourtesy, to say the least.

After an intermission and a slight shuffle of seats and players, during which the orchestra now became the Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler, their well-known conductor, appeared to lead them in one of the most exciting and contagiously happy hours on that stage, or any, for that matter.

It would be difficult to determine which selections pleased us most. The thrilling marches, the Offenbach suite from "Gaité Parisienne," or the hilarious musical jokes like "TViana" or the final "The Glow Worm Turns."

* * *

NO COMEDIAN in any medium of entertainment ever stirred up more pure fun. If anyone ever contended that a pencil, or words, or gestures and facial expressions are needed to express wit, he should have been at Tanglewood last night. Everyone of the thousands within hearing "got" the subtle asides, the irrelevant musical remarks and the sly references. In all the wonderfully boisterous hour, few of us were aware with what skill Fiedler was leading and with what mirror-like accuracy to his indications the orchestra was playing and reflecting his musical savoir-faire and remarkable sense of humor.

Tanglewood Parade Sets Record; iedler, Pops Orchestra a Hit

By MILTON R. BASS

LENOX—Like a horde of army worms, 10,050 ravenous music lovers devoured everything but the grass at the 12th annual Tanglewood on Parade yesterday afternoon and evening, and helped celebrate the 20th anniversary of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival. A record gate of $23,981 was taken in for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center.

Miss Robinson Smith Honored

Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Stockbridge, president of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc., was honored by the trustees of the Boston Symphony following the intermission for her untiring efforts 20 years ago to make "music under the moon" a permanent part of the community's life. Dr. Lewis Perry, honorary chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, presented Miss Robinson Smith an illuminated scroll and praised her fortitude and forbearance in dealing with "deficits, thunderstorms and temperamental artists."

Scorning a microphone, Miss Robinson Smith accepted the scroll on behalf of all those "who so generously gave their time, effort and enthusiasm to make possible this great musical event." She said that musical history has been written since the Boston Symphony and Dr. Serge Koussevitzky joined forces with the Berkshire Symphonic Festival 18 years ago.

Trustees Who Have Died

She said she felt it was "appropriate at this time to pay heartfelt tribute to our loyal and faithful trustees who have died, and who because of their confidence in this fine community project, gave us the courage, inspiration and determination to carry on."

She referred, she said, to William L. Bull, Norvill H. Busey Jr., Mrs. Carlos M. De Heredia, Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, Mrs. Henry A. Francis, Dr. Henry Hadley, Mrs. Andrew H. Hepburn, John C. Lynch, Mrs. Elizabeth C. T. Miller, Miss Mary Parsons, Edward S. Rogers, Albert Spalding, Milton B. Warner, and Serge Koussevitzky, who though not a trustee, was the animator who made for the success of many phases of the present festival.

The huge crowd started drifting in at 2 yesterday afternoon to watch demonstrations by the Tanglewood Study Group in the barn. By 4 o'clock several hundred were present to see the opera "The Physician in Spite of Himself" which was given in the formal garden for box and reserved seat holders.

Many Activities

When Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Music Center, gave the speech of welcome after the "Fanfare" at 5:45, the crowd had grown from several hundred to several thousand. At 6 these people scattered all over the area to listen to the demonstrations given by all the groups at the Center. There were short symphonic works by the student orchestra in the big shed, opera scenes in the theater-concert hall, and several works in the chamber music hall.

Shortly after 7 a.m. the hundreds who had watched the musical events joined all those on the lawn who had already started their picnic suppers. There were pairs, groups, rows and bunches scattered all over the lawn with meals ranging from elaborate five-course affairs to a single sandwich wrapped in waxed paper. There were all manners and sorts of liquid refreshments and enough ice cubes were available to sink the Lusitania all over again.

Campers and Peaches

There were the usual camp groups with their bushel baskets of peaches and harried counselors and several of the inns had prepared lunches for their guests in distinctive boxes and packages. Everybody seemed to be having a wonderful time and there were enough affectionate young people on the lawn to elicit 140 letters from outraged citizens of Lenox. The weather couldn't have been better and everyone was well prepared with sweaters, coats and blankets for the cool evening breezes that appeared as predicted.

Every seat was taken in the big Shed and the lawn outside was packed solid as Thomas Schippers began the main concert at 8:15 with Bizet's Symphony in C.

Door Prizes

After the concert, the audience remained in their places while Mac Morgan, concert baritone who lives in Stockbridge, drew the tickets for the door prizes. This was followed by waltzing on the lawn near the Main House, and the evening was rounded out by a jam session featuring Joe Bushkin, famous jazz pianist who is studying at Tanglewood this summer.

[22]

otography: From Flute to Camera

y Bill Tague

A UTE AND a camera have very ttle in common it seems, but n interest in both of th e instruments made a hap combination hat led Gu lanos to his esent occupation of staff p h o g r a pher for Tanglewood. As a budding musician, 19- ar-old Manos wanted to be ne a student of the Tanglewood music school to further his flute work. But his photographic background, which began in junior high school, proved more interesting to the Tanglewood management, and he accepted their er to become the youngest n ever to hold the staff photographer's job there.

* * *

HE MAY BE the youngest but 's also one of the best, as anye can tell from his pictures, hich appear almost daily in e Eagle and other publicaons served by the Tanglewood ublicity bureau. An excellent xhibit of Manos photographs ken at Tanglewood is current on view in the glass reception uilding at the main gate.

'Gus' is actually a nickname ut he prefers it to Constantinos, hich is too long for a credit ne. His home is in Columbia, .C., where he is entering his unior year at the University of outh Carolina, majoring in ournalism. The last three summers he has been head photographer at Brevard Music Festival in North Carolina, starting at the precocious age of 16.

* * *

MANOS practically lives, eats and sleeps photography. Using two Leicas for all but a tiny fraction of his pictures (he has a Rolleiflex but is going to sell it), he begins at 9 a.m. and often goes until the wee hours of the following morning, photographing students, conductors, guests and anything else that seems promising for publicizing Tanglewood.

His favorite lens is an 85 mm Nikkor F 2 which he obtained for a song from a friend in the service in Japan. He has two others, the 50 mm Nikkor F 1.4 and the 35 mm Leica Summaron wide angle.

Without the aid of darkroom assistant James L. Cusato, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Cusato of 6 Lexington Pkwy., Manos ouldn't put out the prints as he pes. Much time is consumed, for example, by spotting dust specks, one of the hazards in 35 mm photography.

* * *

THE DARKROOM is rather primative, being roughly the size of two closets, but it works. Manos uses only Plus X film, which is developed in FR Super X-33 or the speed demon Primicrol. He says the latter developer gives four times the film speed. He keeps one Leica loaded for use with it, and the other for the FR developer. The enlarger is a Leitz Focomat. Prints are made on single weight, glossy Varigam paper developed in Dektol and dried without ferrotyping. Negatives are cut in strips of six frames and are contact printed for inspection before enlarging.

Despite the hectic, seven-day-a-week grind, Manos is bearing up well and loves the work. His only regret is that his flute is gathering dust.

* * *

MANY OF THE Mathew Brady portaits on exhibition at the Berkshire Museum were enlarged from hand-coated wet plates which were found stored in a barn in Oswego, N.Y., not long ago. Despite their age—they were wrapped in newspapers dated 1866 and 1874—the plates were nearly free of defects and were successfully enlarged on Ansco Brovira paper. As the plates were quite contrasty, No. 1 grade paper was used.

Brady took his portaits in a Washington, D.C., studio with illumination from a skylight which was controlled by various shades and reflectors. Exposures were based solely on previous experience, as photoelectric meters or other guides were then still a figment of the future.

Gus Manos

SOFTLY, PLEASE, motions Boston Symphony Orchestra Conductor Charles Munch during rehearsal in Tanglewood theater-concert hall. Taken by Manos with an 85 mm Nikkor F2 lens on his Leica, using existing light. Exposure was 1/30 sec. at F2.8. Plus X film speed was quadrupled by developing in Primri

c Center Scholarships

Manos

olarship Award was won jointly by student conductors, Paul Vermel, rmerly of Paris, and Samuel Krachmalnick, right, of New York. hestra at Tanglewood concerts this season. With the guidance of , and residents of Berkshire County, a committee headed by Mrs. eft, of Richmond, and Mrs. John H. Rice, seated at right, of Pittsfield, een raised to establish the scholarship as a memorial to the late BSO director and founder of the Busic Center.

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE GREAT SHED at Tanglewood, already venerable with honors and memories in its 16th year and the 20th of Berkshire Festivals, added more last night when it served as the hub of the gay, hilarious and unrestrained celebration of Tanglewood on Parade, the annual exhibit of all he activities of the famous institution.

The largest audience ever to end a similar event on these ounds was favored by ideal ather and started to arrive rly in the afternoon. By 6 lock there were already thouds in the shed to hear Ralph kowitz, dean of the Berkshire sic Center, the school estabed by Serge Koussevitzky and intained during the six weeks concerts with a faculty of Bos Symphony Orchestra men, exd them a gracious welcome.

* * *

THE STUDENT orchestra yed a program which may ll have caused those early on lawn and at their picnic kets to look up not a few es to see if it was not the ntor organization already on e. At evening concert time ormer Center pupil, young mas Schippers, returned for first time since his student s to lead the Boston Symony Orchestra in the Bizet mphony and the final scene m Strauss' "Salomé."

The symphony was brisk and c and the exact choice for an dience filled in varying degrees of satiety with sandwiches nd potato chips. The role of alomé was sung by strikingly beautiful Brenda Lewis.

Looking vividly like the Henri egnault painting of the charac she was portraying, Miss Lewis sang with dramatic vitality.

* * *

HER VIBRANT voice, amply powerful under ordinary conditions, could not compete with inconsiderate Schippers, who seemed to be mouthing her words and giving her several glances but never ceasing to exhort his orchestra, nor to temper it. Strauss' voluptuous music was expansively played, but Schippers did a rare job of artistic discourtesy, to say the least.

After an intermission and a slight shuffle of seats and players, during which the orchestra now became the Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler, their well-known conductor, appeared to lead them in one of the most exciting and contagiously happy hours on that stage, or any, for that matter.

It would be difficult to determine which selections pleased us most. The thrilling marches, the Offenbach suite from "Gaité Parisienne," or the hilarious musical jokes like "TViana" or the final "The Glow Worm Turns."

* * *

NO COMEDIAN in any medium of entertainment ever stirred up more pure fun. If anyone ever contended that a pencil, or words, or gestures and facial expressions are needed to express wit, he should have been at Tanglewood last night. Everyone of the thousands within hearing "got" the subtle asides, the irrelevant musical remarks and the sly references. In all the wonderfully boisterous hour, few of us were aware with what skill Fiedler was leading and with what mirror-like accuracy to his indications the orchestra was playing and reflecting his musical savoir-faire and remarkable sense of humor.

Tanglewood Parade Sets Record; Fiedler, Pops Orchestra a Hit

By MILTON R. BASS

LENOX—Like a horde of a worms, 10,050 ravenous m lovers devoured everything but the grass at the 12th annual Tanglewood on Parade yesterday afternoon and evening, and helped celebrate the 20th anniversary of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival. A record gate of $23,981 was taken in for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center.

Miss Robinson Smith Honored

Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Stockbridge, president of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc., was honored by the trustees of the Boston Symphony following the intermission for her untiring efforts 20 years ago to make "music under the moon" a permanent part of the community's life. Dr. Lewis Perry, honorary chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, presented Miss Robinson Smith an illuminated scroll and praised her fortitude and forbearance in dealing with "deficits, thunderstorms and temperamental artists."

Scorning a microphone, Miss Robinson Smith accepted the scroll on behalf of all those "who so generously gave their time, effort and enthusiasm to make possible this great musical event." She said that musical history has been written since the Boston Symphony and Dr. Serge Koussevitzky joined forces with the Berkshire Symphonic Festival 18 years ago.

Trustees Who Have Died

She said she felt it was "appropriate at this time to pay heartfelt tribute to our al and faithful trustees who have died, and who because of their confidence in this fine community project, gave us the courage, inspiration and determination to carry on."

ed, she said, to William L. Bull, Norvill H. Busey Jr., Mrs. Carlos M. De Heredia, Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, Mrs. Henry A. Francis, Dr. Henry Hadley, Mrs. Andrew H. Hepburn, John C. Lynch, Mrs. Elizabeth C. T. Miller, Miss Mary Parsons, Edward S. Rogers, Albert Spalding, Milton B. Warner, and Serge Koussevitzky, who though not a trustee, was the animator who made for the success of many phases of the present festival.

The huge crowd started drifting in at 2 yesterday afternoon to watch demonstrations by the Tanglewood Study Group in the barn. By 4 o'clock several hundred were present to see the opera "The Physician in Spite of Himself" which was given in the formal garden for box and reserved seat holders.

Many Activities

When Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Music Center, gave the speech of welcome after the "Fanfare" at 5:45, the crowd had grown from several hundred to several thousand. At 6 these people scattered all over the area to listen to the demonstrations given by all the groups at the Center. There were short symphonic works by the student orchestra in the big shed, opera scenes in the theater-concert hall, and several works in the chamber music hall.

Shortly after 7 a.m. the hundreds who had watched the musical events joined all those on the lawn who had already started their picnic suppers. There were pairs, groups, rows and bunches scattered all over the lawn with meals ranging from elaborate five-course affairs to a single sandwich wrapped in waxed paper. There were all manners and sorts of liquid refreshments and enough ice cubes were available to sink the Lusitania all over again.

Campers and Peaches

There were the usual camp groups with their bushel baskets of peaches and harried counselors and several of the inns had prepared lunches for their guests in distinctive boxes and packages. Everybody seemed to be having a wonderful time and there were enough affectionate young people on the lawn to elicit 140 letters from outraged citizens of Lenox. The weather couldn't have been better and everyone was well prepared with sweaters, coats and blankets for the cool evening breezes that appeared as predicted.

Every seat was taken in the big Shed and the lawn outside was packed solid as Thomas Schippers began the main concert at 8:15 with Bizet's Symphony in C.

Door Prizes

After the concert, the audience remained in their places while Mac Morgan, concert baritone who lives in Stockbridge, drew the tickets for the door prizes. This was followed by waltzing on the lawn near the Main House, and the evening was rounded out by a jam session featuring Joe Bushkin, famous jazz pianist who is studying at Tanglewood this summer.

Maidenform Girl Should Avoid Lenox

By A. G. Rud

LENOX — That girl in the Maidenform who keeps turning up in public places had better not set foot in Lenox this weekend. The way people are feeling now, she'll be run out of town on a rail.

An undercurrent of resentment against the dress and behavior of some of the more spectacular summer visitors broke into the open last week with a public denunciation by Mrs. Charles F. Bassett and posting of a notice by the Lenox Selectmen. This week the movement gained formidable support from the authentic grande dame of Tanglewood, Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith.

* * *

MRS. BASSETT'S complaints were directed against some "perfectly horrid goings-on" on the Tanglewood lawns and the "lack of clothes" of people in the Lenox streets. A long-time Lenox resident, she blamed the situation on "outsiders" who figured they were showing the country folk "how to have fun and be free."

The town fathers, who had received other similar complaints, were disposed to agree with Mrs. Bassett about street dress, and posted notices requesting people to be properly clothed around town. They took no action on the Tanglewood charge, though, because their jurisdiction does not extend into private property (and most of Tanglewood lies across the line in Stockbridge anyway).

The Tanglewood theme was taken up vigorously, however, by Miss Robinson Smith, who sparked the festival drive two decades ago. Back at her Stockbridge home after spending the last nine summers in Paris, the former president of the Berkshire Festival took a fresh look at current Tanglewood styles and was forthrightly displeased.

* * *

MISS ROBINSON SMITH, who recalled the nights when evening dress was a common sight in the great Shed and de rigeur in the box section, was particularly pained by the abbreviated shorts on men and women. She conceded that slacks on women might be bearable in some cases, but felt that shorts simply wouldn't do.

"These people wouldn't think of going to a lawn party in shorts," she said. "Why should they wear them to a concert? After all, there's a certain beauty, a certain charm, a certain dignity in a concert which should be preserved.

"Understand, I'm not advocating full evening dress for everyone. In the early days not all wore evening dress by any means. But I do think people should change their clothes for the occasion. Pretty summer dresses for the women, a clean shirt and trousers for the men are all that's needed, really.

"Look at the program girls in their dresses or the ushers in their coats and trousers. Could anything be more attractive or more appropriate? What would it be like if Mr. Munch and the members of the orchestra came out wearing shorts and sports shirts? It seems to me they set an example which the rest of us ought to follow, out of respect to each other and out of respect to the art."

* * *

MISS ROBINSON SMITH not only declared it "a pity to lose the niceties of life," but made the additional point — perhaps most telling of all—that outlandish garb distracts the audience's attention from the main business of the meeting, the music.

With this it is hard to disagree, no matter how tolerant you are in matters of dress. To anyone who tries to experience the music, rather than just let it enter the outer ear, an audience of any kind is an evil, however necessary. But an audience wearing clothes that cry for attention make even half-listening difficult. It's like trying to comprehend a painting while a public address system blares love ballads into your ear; like watching the Celtic Ballet while someone behind you kicks out a different rhythm on the seat of your chair.

* * *

PRACTICALLY every Berkshire resident and BSO official will go along with the opinion that conspicuous attire at Tanglewood is to be deplored. When it comes to putting a stop to it, though, there's a great parting of the ways.

Some would have the town of Lenox pass an ordinance forbidding shorts and bathing suits on the streets, and would have the Festival bar short-clad visitors from the grounds during public concerts, just as they do for student concerts. Needless to say, these stern disciplinarians would also crack down on public love-making at Tanglewood, bashful or otherwise.

Another school of thought, to which the Lenox Selectmen and the Festival heads evidently belong, holds that the public has a right to dress and behave pretty much as it pleases so long as it does not indulge in "indecent exposure," immorality or disturbance of the peace. While admitting that partial nudity and garish attire are out of place here, these moderates don't care to take the forcible steps necessary to bring it to a screeching halt.

* * *

THE MODERATES have recent history on their side. Fashions in dress are growing more informal every decade, as witness the sports clothing and bathing suits of today compared with those of 30 years ago, and there's at least a chance that shorts and halters will blend right into the Tanglewood scenery 10 years years from now. In 1944, who expected to see shorts on Wall Street?

Besides this, and so long as the outcome is still in doubt, it would be preferable to err on the side of liberality. Perhaps the BSO management's hope that the music will itself exercise a moderating influence upon dress is unduly optimistic (some fine musicians are awfully sloppy customers), but it would be a worse mistake to make the concerts rule-ridden, sacred and stuffy.

So far the people who have been doing the administering have avoided falling into one of the two extreme positions — absurd prudishness or hopeless handwringing—and it would be too bad if they did. This is not to say that the problem stated by Mrs. Bassett and Miss Robinson Smith is imaginary. This is to say that the Lenox Selectmen's posted request and the BSO's effort to create an atmosphere in which good taste is effortless seem like pretty level-headed, pretty democratic, ways of dealing with it.

א קאנצערט אין די בוירקשאיר בערג. — טויזענטער מענשען אין דעם „שעד" און
אויפ'ן גראז הערען זיך צו צום קאנצערט פון דער באסטאן סימפאנישען ארקעסטער
אין טענגלעוואוד, לענאקס, מאסס. די טענגלעוואוד קאנצערטען ווערען אנגעפירט
פון טשארלז מאנש און האלטען זיך אין משך פון די צוויי זומער־מאנאטען, יולי און
אויגוסט. עס געפינט זיך דארט אויך א מוזיק און געזאנג שולע, אין וועלכער עס זיינען
פארטראטען פיל אידישע לערער
און סטודענטען.

Forward - Aug 15

A CONCERT IN THE BERKSHIRES.—Thousands of people in the shed and on the lawn listen to a concert of the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The Tanglewood festivals conducted by Charles Munch take place during the months of July and August. Tanglewood also has a music and voice school conducted by prominent Jewish composers and directors with a great number of Jewish students from Israel and other parts of the world. (

Eagle Aug 14/54

Manos

Aaron Copland, center, assistant director of the Music Center, chats with violin student, Tiberi Klausner, left, formerly of Budapest, Hungary, now of New York, who was awarded the Jasc Heifetz Award, and Camilla Heller, second from left, of Appleton, Wis., and Evalyn Steinbock, right, who shared the Gregor Piatigorsky Award.

TANGLEWOOD—Seven scholarships and cash awards were made to students of the Berkshire Music Center here, today. The prizes are given annually to outstanding students at the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with its Berkshire Festival which concludes its seventeenth and most successful summer tomorrow afternoon. Winners are chosen from among the 375 enrolled this year from 35 states and 12 foreign countries.

Tuition scholarships and cash prizes were presented at intermission of this afternoon's final concert by the student symphony orchestra, attended by some 3,000, in the Tanglewood Music Shed, by composer Aaron Copland, assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center.

Koussevitzky Memorial

Through the efforts of Tanglewood's neighboring residents of Berkshire County a committee headed by Mrs. William M. Crane of Richmond has raised $5,000 towards a $15,000 goal to establish an annual scholarship for student conductors at Tanglewood, as a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, former Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and first director of the Berkshire Music Center. Dr. Koussevitzky started the music school in 1940 and under his guidance such nationally known conductors have graduated from Tanglewood as Leonard Bernstein, Lukas Foss, Thor Johnson, Walter Hendl, Eleazar de Carvalho, Robert Zeller, Robert Whitney, Thomas Schippers and Alexander Leslie.

The Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship, now valued at $250, was awarded today jointly to student conductors Samuel Krachmalnick, of New York City, formerly of St. Louis, a second year student, and Paul Vermel, of New York, formerly of France, a student in 1949. Both have led the student orchestra in Tanglewood concerts this summer, and at today's concert Mr. Krachmalnick conducted Ravel's "Scheherazade," three poems for voice and orchestra with Ann English, soprano, and Debussy's nocturnes "Nuages" and "Fetes." Mr. Vermel was on the podium for Wagner's Overture to "The Flying Dutchman."

Other awards made today are:

Other Winners

The Jascha Heifetz Award of $250 in cash, given by the eminent violinist, went to Tiberius Klausner, 22-year-old student of the Juilliard School of Music, New York. A native of Hungary, Mr. Klausner was graduated from the Budapest Academy and won first prize at the National Conservatoire in Paris before coming to the United States.

The Gregor Piatigorsky prize, valued at $200, a gift of the 'cellist who is guest teacher of chamber music at the Berkshire Music Center, this year was divided between 'cellists Camilla Heller, Appleton, Wis., a student at the University of Michigan Music Sch and Evalyn Steinbock, Brook N.Y., who studies at Juilliard.

The Serge Koussevitzky Con sition prize, valued at $250, g by the Koussevitzky Music Fou tion for work written at Tan wood this season, went to Ro Barney Childs of Reno, Nev. composition pupil of Aaron C land. A special prize was given to Michael Sahl, a N Yorker attending Amherst Colle and student of Lukas Foss. Th prize-winning compositions, writ for harp and string quartet, will premiered here tomorrow morni at the final student chamber mus concert at 10 a.m. in the theate concert hall.

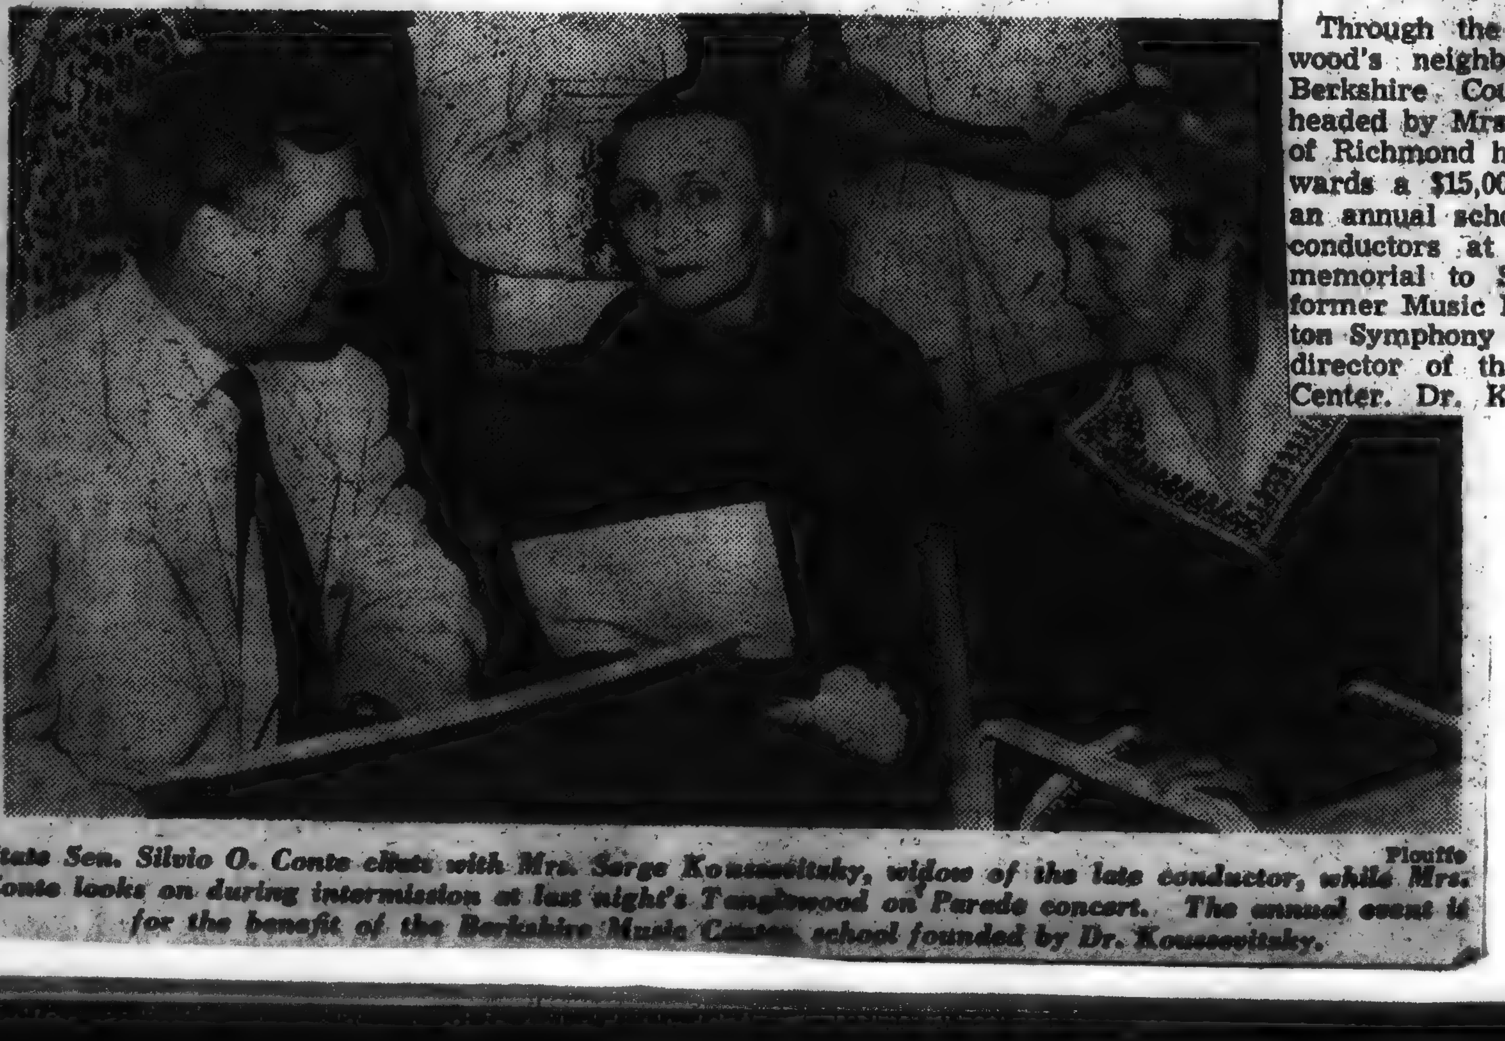
Wechsler Prize

The Wechsler Commissio valued at $300, awarded by a f mer Tanglewood pupil to "a s dent, present or past, chosen fr the composition department, fo work to be specified by the ulty," was given to Raym Wilding-White, former Berks Music Center scholar now on staff of Boston's educational r station, WGBH, who studied Jacques Ibert here in 1950 Luigi Dallapiccola in 1951. year's winner of the Wech Commission, Juan Oreggo-Sala the Facultad de Belles Artes, tiago, Chile, will have his p winning composition, scored clarinet, piano and string qua performed for the first time a morrow's chamber music con

The Selly A. Eisemann Scholarship, valued at $150, was awarded Catherine Dufford, 22, oboe student from Evansville, Ind., a student at the Eastman School of Music and member of the Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra.

The Carlotta M. Dreyfus Scholarship, of similar value, went to Phyllis Murphy, of Bement, Ill., who sang the leading soprano role this summer in the Tanglewood opera department's production of Aaron Copland's opera, "The Tender Land."

Box Occupants at Tanglewood on Pa



Plouffe

State Sen. Silvio O. Conte chats with Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, widow of the late conductor, while Mrs. Conte looks on during intermission at last night's Tanglewood on Parade concert. The annual event is for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, school founded by Dr. Koussevitzky.

Maidenform Girl Should Avoid

By A. G. Rud

LENOX — That girl in the Maidenform who keeps turning up in public places had better not set foot in Lenox this weekend. The way people are feeling now, she'll be run out of town on a rail.

An undercurrent of resentment against the dress and behavior of some of the more spectacular summer visitors broke into the open last week with a public denunciation by Mrs. Charles F. Bassett and posting of a notice by the Lenox Selectmen. This week the movement gained formidable support from the authentic grande dame of Tanglewood, Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith.

* * *

MRS. BASSETT'S complaints were directed against some "perfectly horrid goings-on" on the Tanglewood lawns and the "lack of clothes" of people in the Lenox streets. A long-time Lenox resident, she blamed the situation on "outsiders" who figured they were showing the country folk "how to have fun and be free."

The town fathers, who had received other similar complaints, were disposed to agree with Mrs. Bassett about street dress, and posted notices requesting people to be properly clothed around town. They took no action on the Tanglewood charge, though, because their jurisdiction does not extend into private property (and most of Tanglewood lies across the line in Stockbridge anyway).

The Tanglewood theme was taken up vigorously, however, by Miss Robinson Smith, who sparked the festival drive two decades ago. Back at her Stockbridge home after spending the last nine summers in Paris, the former president of the Berkshire Festival took a fresh look at current Tanglewood styles and was forthrightly displeased.

* * *

MISS ROBINSON SMITH, who recalled the nights when evening dress was a common sight in the great Shed and de rigeur in the box section, was particularly pained by the abbreviated shorts on men and women. She conceded that slacks on women might be bearable in some cases, but felt that shorts simply wouldn't do.

"These people wouldn't think of going to a lawn party in shorts," she said. "Why should they wear them to a concert? After all, there's a certain beauty, a certain charm, a certain dignity in a concert which should be preserved.

"Understand, I'm not advocating full evening dress for everyone. In the early days not all wore evening dress by any means. But I do think people should change their clothes for the occasion. Pretty summer dresses for the women, a clean shirt and trousers for the men are all that's needed, really.

"Look at the program girls in their dresses or the ushers in their coats and trousers. Could anything be more attractive or more appropriate? What would it be like if Mr. Munch and the members of the orchestra came out wearing shorts and sports shirts? It seems to me they set an example which the rest of us ought to follow, out of respect to each other and out of respect to the art."

* * *

MISS ROBINSON SMITH not only declared it "a pity to lose the niceties of life," but made the additional point — perhaps most telling of all—that outlandish garb distracts the audience's attention from the main business of the meeting, the music.

With this it is hard to disagree, no matter how tolerant you are in matters of dress. To anyone who tries to experience the music, rather than just let it enter the outer ear, an audience of any kind is an evil, however necessary. But an audience wearing clothes that cry for attention make even half-listening difficult. It's like trying to comprehend a painting while a public address system blares love ballads into your ear; like watching the Celtic Ballet while someone behind you kicks out a different rhythm on the seat of your chair.

* * *

PRACTICALLY every Berkshire resident and BSO official will go along with the opinion that conspicuous attire at Tanglewood is to be deplored. When it comes to putting a stop to it, though, parting of the
Some would Lenox pass a ding shorts a the streets, Festival bar from the gr concerts, ju student con say, these would also love-making ful or other Another which the the Festiv long, hold right to d much as it does n exposure turbance admittin and garis here, the to take sary to halt.

THE cent hi ions in inform ness th ing sui those o at leas halter Tangl years expec
Stree
Be
the wou side
BSO mu er un m cu w c

Litt
He

F Is P

CHIC but hits a man of de tournamen (Bob, a na spent mu County, wh
Benny, held
Lee and Ada

$100,000 Jac

The 127-po
next month, pick up prom winning chec
$50,000 exh
Golf's "World
Sunday.

The locker affectionately
The Mighty
Sam's par 72
those of 65 yesterda 132—a doze lation.

His 36-hole ever recorded ments started little golfer fro who smacks chance to crac hole course ma
Nelson poste

Pittsfi
In Pol

Pittsfield's po to its home gro absence, will c Farmington (Co
Crane Field, H morrow afternoo
tain Zenas Colt seeking to bre domination. Farm en Pittsfield thre
this year, once there.

Pittsfield has a one victory, three
tie. The stalema
Sunday, when Pitt

א קאָנצערט אין די בוירקשאַיר בערג. — טויזענטער מענשען אין דעם „שעד" און
אויפ׳ן גראָז הערען זיך צו צום קאָנצערט פון דער באָסטאָן סימפאָנישען אָרקעסטער
אין טענגעלוואוּד, לענאָקס, מאַסס. די טענגעלוואוּד קאָנצערטען ווערען אָנגעפירט
פון טשאַרלז מאַנש און האַלטען־זיך אין משך פון די צוויי זומער־מאָנאַטען, יולי און
אויגוסט. עס געפינט זיך דאָרט אויך א מוזיק און געזאַנג שולע, אין וועלכער עס זיינען
פאַרטראַטען פיל אידישע לערער
און סטודענטען.

Forward - Aug 15

THE BERK-

Eagle Aug 14/54

Manos

Aaron Copland, center, assistant director of the Music Center, chats with violin student, Tiberi Klausner, left, formerly of Budapest, Hungary, now of New York, who was awarded the Jasc Heifetz Award, and Camilla Heller, second from left, of Appleton, Wis., and Evalyn Steinbock, right, who shared the Gregor Piatigorsky Award.

TANGLEWOOD—Seven scholarships and cash awards were made students of the Berkshire Music er here, today. The prizes are nnually to outstanding stu- the summer school of mu- ned by the Boston Sym- tra in connection with estival which con- teenth and most tomorrow aft- chosen from d this year eign coun- cash mis- on- the music school in 1940 and under his guidance such nationally known conductors have graduated from Tanglewood as Leonard Bernstein, Lukas Foss, Thor Johnson, Walter Hendl, Eleazar de Carvalho, Robert Zeller, Robert Whitney, Thomas Schippers and Alexander Leslie.

The Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship, now valued at $250, was awarded today jointly to student conductors Samuel Krachmalnick, of New York City, formerly of St. Louis, a second year student, and Paul Vermel, of New York, formerly of France, a student in 1949. Both have led the student orchestra in Tanglewood concerts this summer, and at today's concert Mr. Krachmalnick conducted Ravel's "Scheherazade," three poems for oice and orchestra with Ann Eng- , soprano, and Debussy's noc- s "Nuages" and "Fetes." Mr. l was on the podium for s Overture to "The Flying " ards made today are:

etz Award of $250 the eminent vio- Tiberius Klausner, student of the Juilliard Music, New York. A na- Hungary, Mr. Klausner was duated from the Budapest cademy and won first prize at the National Conservatoire in Paris before coming to the United States.

The Gregor Piatigorsky prize, valued at $200, a gift of the 'cellist who is guest teacher of chamber music at the Berkshire Music Center, this year was divided between 'cellists Camilla Heller, Appleton, Wis., a student at the University of Michigan Music Sch and Evalyn Steinbock, Brook N.Y., who studies at Juilliard.

The Serge Koussevitzky Co sition prize, valued at $250, g by the Koussevitzky Music Fou tion for work written at Ta wood this season, went to Ro Barney Childs of Reno, Nev. composition pupil of Aaron C land. A special prize was given to Michael Sahl, a N Yorker attending Amherst Colle and student of Lukas Foss. Th prize-winning compositions, writ for harp and string quartet, will premiered here tomorrow morni at the final student chamber mus concert at 10 a.m. in the theate concert hall.

Wechsler Prize

The Wechsler Commissio valued at $300, awarded by a f mer Tanglewood pupil to "a s dent, present or past, chosen fr the composition department, fo work to be specified by the ulty," was given to Raym Wilding-White, former Berks Music Center scholar now on staff of Boston's educational r station, WGBH, who studied Jacques Ibert here in 1950 Luigi Dallapiccola in 1951. year's winner of the Wec Commission, Juan Oreggo-Sala the Facultad de Belles Artes, tiago, Chile, will have his p winning composition, scored clarinet, piano and string qua performed for the first time a morrow's chamber music con ert.

The Selly A. Eisemann Scholarship, valued at $150, was awarded Catherine Dufford, 22, oboe student from Evansville, Ind., a student at the Eastman School o Music and member of the Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra.

The Carlotta M. Dreyfus Scholarship, of similar value, went to Phyllis Murphy, of Bement, Ill., who sang the leading soprano role this summer in the Tanglewood opera department's production o Aaron Copland's opera, "The Ten der Land."

---

the D went a e senti at the c n McCa on the b only last up in Hear
n. John F.
the Democr ce.

* * *

NKO" mutteri of course, the tactic that has and aboveboa innocent person of evels. It is the too slow to make his foot out to trip hether the cards hav st Burns won't be t when the county co election. Regardless ances are that Jim Bur e the hardest-working an member of the Democrati

Quote

to this column
ublic interest

Box Occupants at Tanglewood on Parade

Plouffe

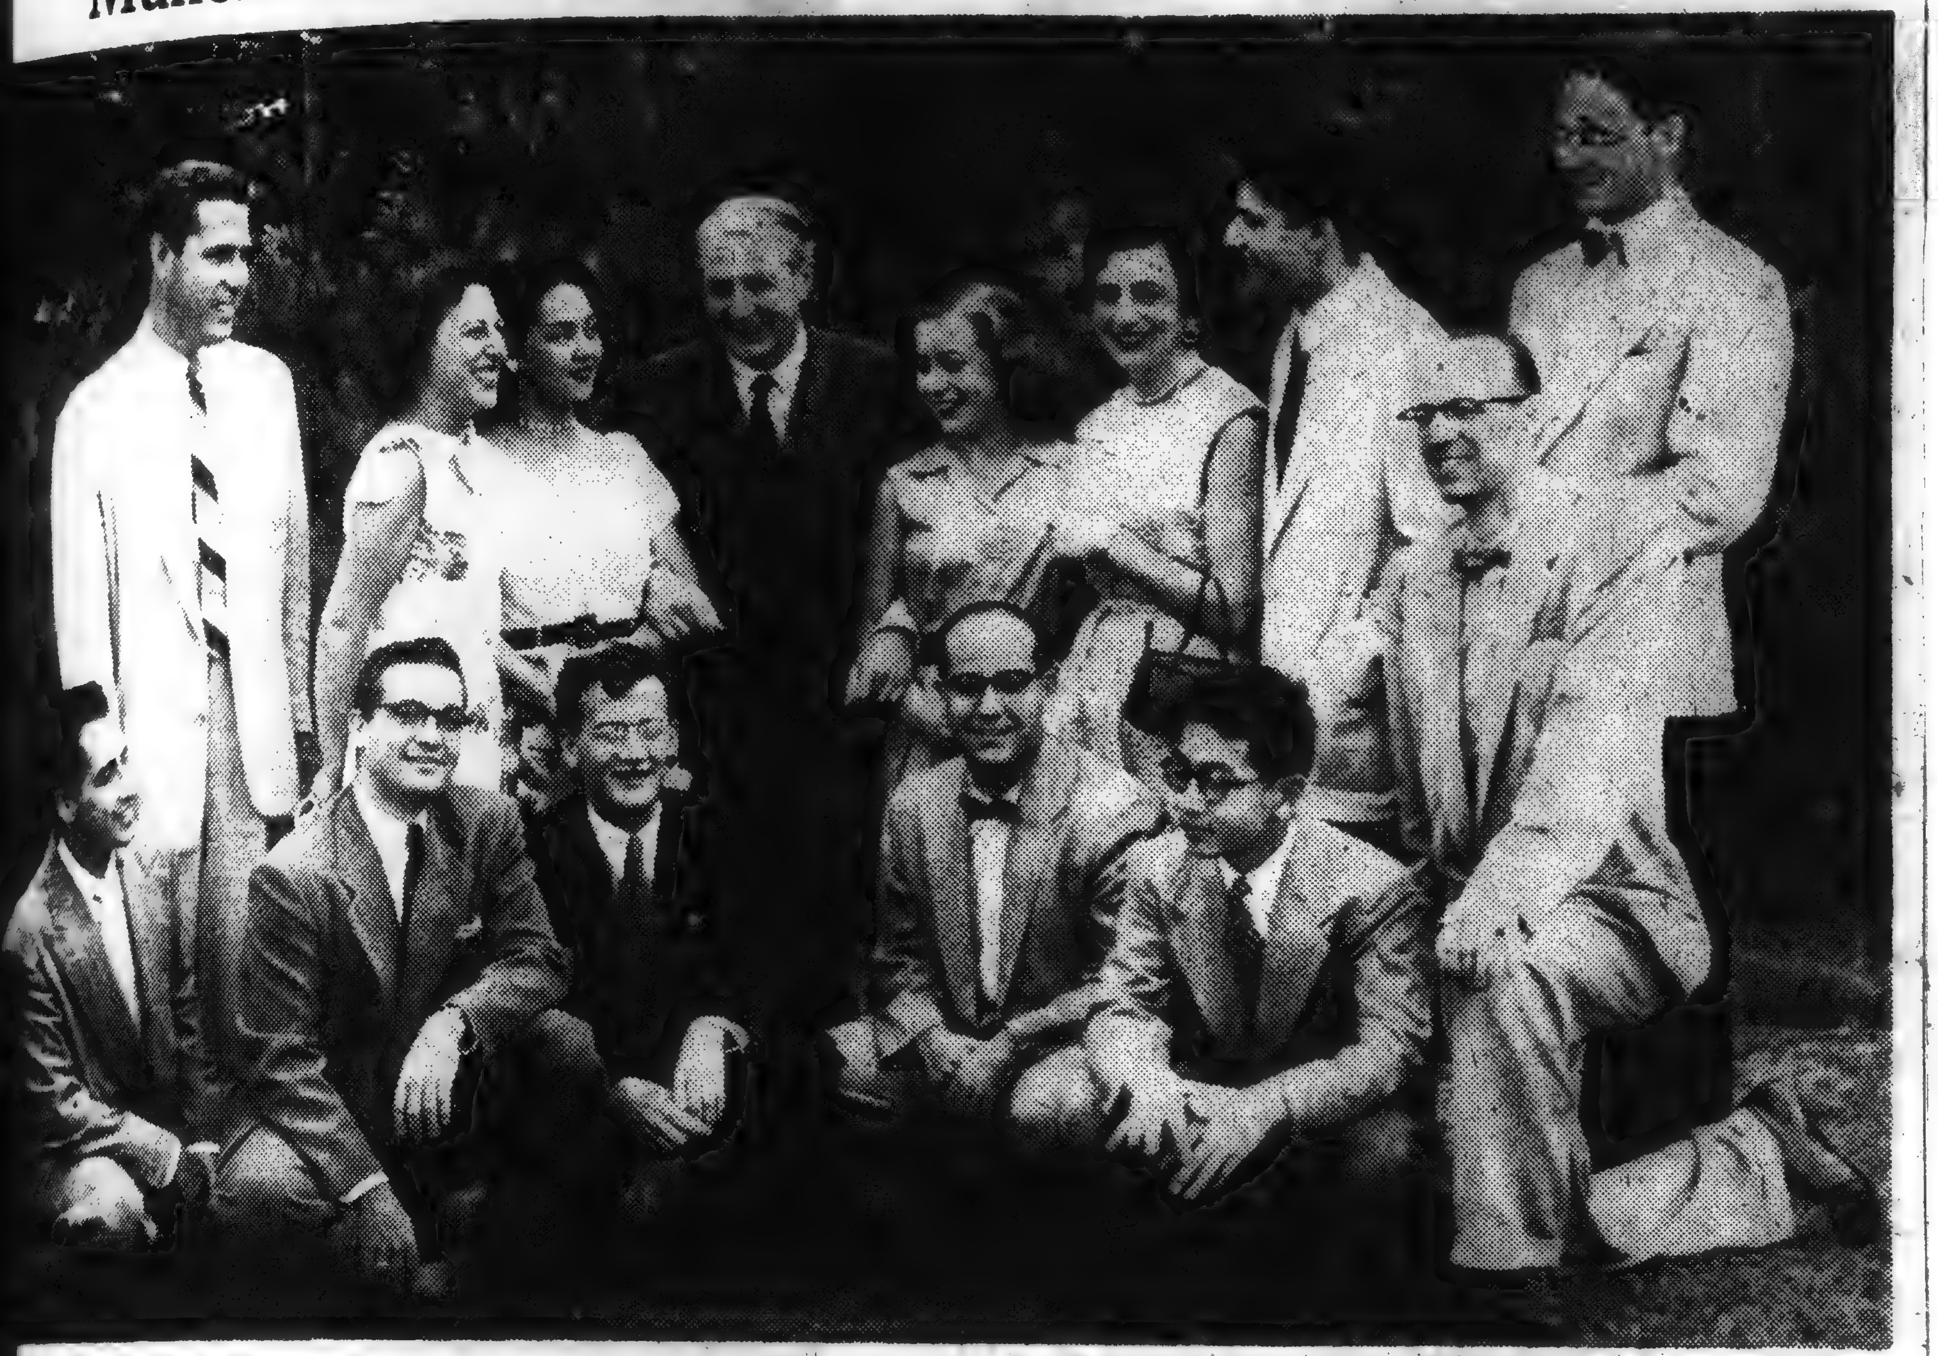
State Sen. Silvio O. Conte chats with Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, widow of the late conductor, while Mrs. Conte looks on during intermission at last night's Tanglewood on Parade concert. The annual event is for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, school founded by Dr. Koussevitzky.

[23]

TIGHT BINDING

THE SPRINGFIELD SUNDAY REPUBLICAN, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., AUGUST 15, 1954

Munch and Students at Berkshire Music Center



les Munch, director of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, shown with some of this year's 400 students—including 29 from ign lands—at the Summer School of Music. Rear row, left to right: Jean Ledon-Fedez of Havana, Cuba, violin student; Catherine z-Akos of Budapest, Hungary, now of Toronto, Can., opera student; Mrs. Lina Mathon Blanchet of Port-au-Prince, Haiti, study ip student; Mr. Munch; Adriana Crone of 'sHertogenbosch, Netherlands, piano student; Dolly Haim of Athens, Greece, piano student; rius Klausner of Hungary, now living in New York City, violin student; Stefan Grove of Cape Town, South Africa, composition stu-. Front row: Norberto De Castro of Havana, Cuba, violin student; Gonzalo Valledor of Havana, violin student; Yecheskel Rasiel of Aviv, Israel, viola student; Carlos Quian of Havana, viola student; Tossi Ichiyanagi of Tokyo, Japan, composition student; Jacques Andre Badin of Paris, France, study group student.

Second Thoughts in Music

Tanglewood Draws Largest Audiences as Season Ends

Berkshire Music Center Has Fine Chorus This Year; Opera Department Reveals Some Excellent Singing; Chamber Music Series Great Success, Adding to Artistic Luster

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, nearing its conclusion, is drawing the largest audiences of the season. Last Sunday more than 12,000 persons were on hand to hear the music of Gluck, Beethoven and Brahms, conducted by Charles Munch. ⅝ino Francescatti won a standing ovation after his playing of the Beethoven violin concerto. The night before, more than 10,000 persons had heard Eleanor Steber sing "Summer Nights" by Berlioz, not very well, and listened to the same composer's "Te Deum" conducted by Mr. Munch.

The Tender Land"

The Berkshire Music Center has had a fine chorus this season and it has participated in several concerts. The opera department has also revealed some excellent singing talent. This was evidenced in the performance of Copland's opera "The Tender Land."

While this opera may never grace the boards of the Metropolitan, it is an excellent opera for opera workshop purposes. It requires no elaborate scenery; its orchestral and vocal demands are not insurmountable and its story is credible. The Quintet which concludes the first act is worth going far to hear.

Kroll Quartet

After the disappointment in the performance of the Griller String Quartet it was pleasurable to listen to the superb playing of the Kroll String Quartet, which offered the fifth concert in the chamber music series. This series, by the way, has been a great success and has added to the artistic luster of the Festival. We hope it will be continued next season.

The Kroll Quartet gave felicitous readings of Haydn' "Quartet in D major;" Hindemith's "String Quartet No. 3 and Ravel's "String Quartet in F."

Foss Conducts

Lukas Foss happens to be one of our favorite pianist-conductors. He conducted the chamber-orchestra concert, giving a first performance at Tanglewood of Stravinsky's delightful Ballet with Song, known as "Pulcinella." The music is Pergolesi, the orchestration is Stravinsky. The result is a vital, sparkling score, rich in melody and admirably suited for concert purposes. It calls for three singers and they were Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano; Jefferson Morris, tenor, and McHenry Boatwright, bass. All are students in the Music Center. Each had good vocal equipment, particularly young Mr. Morris, who will bear watching.

Seymour Lipkin is also a pianist-conductor and he was invited by Mr. Foss to play Mozart's "Piano Concerto in B-flat major, K. 450." Mr. Foss is an outstanding interpreter of Mozart and the collaboration between the two was very fine. Mr. Lipkin plays beautifully.

Excerpts from Mozart's "Idomeneo" concluded the program. The singers were Marvin Worden, Regina Sarfaty, Charlotte Holloman and Therese Green, plus the Festival chorus. This opera has many lovely choral passages and some effective solos. It was well presented.

Berlioz Program

Saturday night Mr. Munch turned again to the music of Hector Berlioz, whose 150th anniversary is being commemorated at Tanglewood, and while this listener is getting a bit tired of Mr. Berlioz' music, it was an effective concert. Eleanor Steber, soprano, sang the lovely songs which make up the "Summer Nights" cycle. Written originally with piano accompaniment, the orchestration raises them above the standard level. Miss Steber has been singing a great deal this spring and summer and the voice sounded tired. Her personal charm and flair for the theatrical amused the audience.

A first hearing of the Berlioz "Te Deum" revealed ample reasons for its rare appearances. It calls for almost as massive orchestra resources as the "Requiem" and contains nowhere near the attention-holding material. There are fine liturgical passages, which contrast sharply with the orchestral bombast with which the work is filled. Its decibel impact is tremendous. David Poleri, tenor, sang the only solo artistically.

Sunday Concert

As noted above, more than 12,000 people were on hand Sunday to hear one of the finest concerts of the season, conducted by Charles Munch. We heard eloquent performances of Brahms' second symphony and the overture to "Alceste" by Gluck. The orchestra was in top form.

Zino Francescatti provided a splendid performance of Beethoven's single violin concerto. His tone was consistently beautiful and his phrasing a delight. The audience gave him a rising ovation.

80

Final Tanglewood Concert Of Season This Afternoon

Charles Munch Will Direct Boston Symphony in Berlioz 'Requiem,' in Memory of Koussevitzky; Springfield Orchestra Chorus Singers to Take Part, With Student at Berkshire Music Center

Lenox, Aug. 14 — The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, conducting, gives the final concert of its enlarged 1954 Berkshire Festival tomorrow afternoon at 2.30 p. m. in the huge Music Shed at Tanglewood. If attendance figures of last summer can be considered a gauge and if fair weather prevails for the many thousands of persons who can hear the music on the spacious lawns outdoors, all records will be shattered in this 17th summer of symphonic music in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the 15th since the Boston Symphony Orchestra participated.

The concluding concert, in memory of late Serge Koussevitzky, who died in 1951 after 25 years as music director of the Boston Symphony, will be the last of a number of programs devoted this summer to rarely-heard music of Hector Berlioz, given in their complete form in observance of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of the French composer.

Mr. Munch will lead the orchestra in the "Requiem," which had its Tanglewood premiere two summers ago. It will have the assistance of David Poleri, tenor soloist; a chorus of 200 voices of students of the choral and opera departments of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, trained by Hugh Ross and James Aliferis, augmented by a chorus of 50 voices of the chorus of the Springfield Symphony Orchestra; and four brass bands, totalling 36 players.

General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concert from the Tanglewood lawns, are placed on sale on the day of the performance.

Also concruded tomorrow are the activities of the Berkshire Music Center, which has presented some 40 concerts and demonstrations by students of its orchestra, chamber music, chorus, opera and amateur study group departments in this, its 12th six-week session. Tomorrow at 10 a. m. in the Chamber Music Hall, is the final program of chamber music by students of the school's Department I (Orchestra). These two events are open to members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, who may attend through voluntary contributions to the school.

Tickets are available at the Tanglewood box office for the final Shed concert.

31

At Tanglewood

DAVID POLERI

David Poleri is the tenor soloist in "Requiem" by Hector Berlioz, to be sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch, at the last concert of the 1954 Berkshire Festival in the Music Shed at Tanglewood this afternoon at 2.30. The concert is in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

Tanglewood Tales

50

Lenox, Aug. 14—Guests at Tanglewood concerts this weekend of Julius Fleischmann, Cincinnati industrialist and arts patron, are Sergei Denham, director of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo; and Richard Aldrich, of the Broadway theatrical firm of Aldrich & Myers. Mr. Denham this year is reactivating the ballet company for a coast-to-coast tour under the sponsorship of Columbia Concerts. Mr. Aldrich is producer of four Cape Cod summer theatres, the Cape Playhouse at Dennis, the Connamessett Playhouse at Falmouth, and music circuses at Hyannis and Cohasset, and with Messrs. Myers and Fleischmann will produce Tallulah Bankhead in "Dear Charles" on Broadway in the autumn.

* * *

The "Berlioz Ball," held at Wheatleigh this week by the Student Council of Berkshire Music Center summer students, netted $150 for the emergency fund which helps out needy students with dormitory fees. Entertainment was provided by Jo Popper, Brooklyn, N. Y., chorus student, folk songs; Lorenzo Malfatti, Pittsburgh, opera student, Italian folk songs; Richard Elias, Manchester, N. H., violin student, violin caricatures; Emma Goldman, New Orleans, opera student, aria from "Tosca." Music was provided by Allyn Ferguson, San Jose, Cal.; Irwin Zucker, New York; Charles Hedlund, Hingham, Mass.; Lorenzo Malfatti, at pianos; Don Bravo, Fall River, Mass., saxophone; Arthur Kerr, Baltimore, trombone; Bill Tessin, Boston, trumpet.

* * *

Juan Orrego-Salas, of the Facultad de Belles Artes, Santiago, Chile, is a Tanglewood visitor this weekend. Mr. Orrego, here for a year's study on a Guggenheim fellowship, was awarded the Samuel Wechsler Commission in 1953 for a short work suitable for performance by student ensemble, and the prize-winning composition, "Sextet for Clarinet, String Quartet and Piano," will be performed at the summer's final student chamber music concert, which will be held tomorrow in the Theatre-Concert Hall, not as customary in the Chamber Music Hall, at 10 a. m. It will be performed by Constance Field, Phyllis Skoldberg, violins; Joseph Pietrapaolo, viola; Evelyn Steinbock, cello; John Grande, clarinet; Gilbert Kalishg, piano. Mr. Oorrego lectured to Tanglewood students, faculty and staff in the concluding "Aspects of Music" informal talk last Friday in the Chamber Music Hall on the topic "The South American Musical Scene." He is music critic of his city's publication "Critico Musical," and was a Tanglewood student of composition under Aaron Copland in 1946.

* * *

Leonard Rosenman, who was awarded a commission last summer by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation to compose a one-act opera for performance at Tanglewood by the Berkshire Music Center's opera department, is in California, writing the musical score for the screen version of the John Steinbeck novel "East of Eden." Mr. Rosenman has completed his Tanglewood opera, entitled "Cipolla, the Great," an adaptation of Thomas Mann's short story, "Mario and the Magician." It is planned for Tanglewood during the summer of 1955 when Boris Goldovsky, who selected Mr. Rosenman and Louis Mennini, of Rochester, N. Y., returns to head the opera department.

* * *

Barney Childs, Rhodes Scholar at the University of California, who is spending his second summer as a composition student at Tanglewood, a pupil of Aaron Copland, was honored by having the second movement, entitled "Calm" of his first symphony performed by the Tanglewood student symphony at its final concert of the season today, with Henry Janiec, of Passaic, N. J. as conductor. A quintet for harp and strings, in memoriam to Charles Ives, also by Mr. Childs, will have its fourth movement performed at the concluding student Chamber Music concert Sunday morning.

* * *

Ann English, concert soprano of Nahant, Mass., who was a popular member of the 1953 opera department at Tanglewood, and sang in a number of student opera and symphony programs, was a guest artist on the concluding student symphony program today in the Music Shed, in Ravel's "Sheherazade," which Samuel Krachmalnick conducted.

TIGHT BINDING

THE SPRINGFIELD SUNDAY REPUBLICAN, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., AUGUST 15, 1954

Munch and Students at Berkshire Music Center

es Munch, director of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, shown with some of this year's 400 students—including 29 from n lands—at the Summer School of Music. Rear row, left to right: Jean Ledon-Fedez of Havana, Cuba, violin student; Catherine -Akos of Budapest, Hungary, now of Toronto, Can., opera student; Mrs. Lina Mathon Blanchet of Port-au-Prince, Haiti, study student; Mr. Munch; Adriana Crone of 'sHertogenbosch, Netherlands, piano student; Dolly Haim of Athens, Greece, piano student; ius Klausner of Hungary, now living in New York City, violin student; Stefan Grove of Cape Town, South Africa, composition stu- Front row: Norberto De Castro of Havana, Cuba, violin student; Gonzalo Valledor of Havana, violin student; Yecheskel Rasiel of Aviv, Israel, viola student; Carlos Quian of Havana, viola student; Tossi Ichiyanagi of Tokyo, Japan, composition student; Jacques Andre Badin of Paris, France, study group student.

Second Thoughts in Music

Tanglewood Draws Largest Audiences as Season Ends

Berkshire Music Center Has Fine Chorus This Year; Opera Department Reveals Some Excellent Singing; Chamber Music Series Great Success, Adding to Artistic Luster of Festival

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, nearing its conclusion, is drawing the largest audiences of the season. Last Sunday more than 12,000 persons were on hand to hear the music of Gluck, Beethoven and Brahms, conducted by Charles Munch. ⅝ino Francescatti won a standing ovation after his playing of the Beethoven violin concerto. The night before, more than 10,000 persons had heard Eleanor Steber sing "Summer Nights" by Berlioz, not very well, and listened to the same composer's "Te Deum" conducted by Mr. Munch.

The Tender Land"

The Berkshire Music Center has had a fine chorus this season and it has participated in several concerts. The opera department has also revealed some excellent singing talent. This was evidenced in the performance of Copland's opera "The Tender Land."

While this opera may never grace the boards of the Metropolitan, it is an excellent opera for opera workshop purposes. It requires no elaborate scenery; its orchestral and vocal demands are not insurmountable and its story is credible. The Quintet which concludes the first act is worth going far to hear.

Kroll Quartet

After the disappointment in the performance of the Griller String Quartet it was pleasurable to listen to the superb playing of the Kroll String Quartet, which offered the fifth concert in the chamber music series. This series, by the way, has been a great success and has added to the artistic luster of the Festival. We hope it will be continued next season.

The Kroll Quartet gave felicitous readings of Haydn' "Quartet in D major," Hindemith's "String Quartet No. 3 and Ravel's "String Quartet in F."

Foss Conducts

Lukas Foss happens to be one of our favorite pianist-conductors. He conducted the chamber-orchestra concert, giving a first performance at Tanglewood of Stravinsky's delightful Ballet with Song, known as "Pulcinella." The music is Pergolesi, the orchestration is Stravinsky. The result is a vital, sparkling score, rich in melody and admirably suited for concert purposes. It calls for three singers and they were Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano; Jef-

B-flat major, K. 450."

Mr. Foss is an outstanding interpreter of Mozart and the collaboration between the two was very fine. Mr. Lipkin plays beautifully.

Excerpts from Mozart's "Idomeneo" concluded the program. The singers were Marvin Worden, Regina Sarfaty, Charlotte Holloman and Therese Green, plus the Festival chorus. This opera has many lovely choral passages and some effective solos. It was well presented.

Berlioz Program

Saturday night Mr. Munch turned again to the music of Hector Berlioz, whose 150th anniversary is being commemorated at Tanglewood, and while this listener is getting a bit tired of Mr. Berlioz' music, it was an effective concert. Eleanor Steber, soprano, sang the lovely songs which make up the "Summer Nights" cycle. Written originally with piano accompaniment, the orchestration raises them above the standard level. Miss Steber has been singing a great deal this spring and summer and the voice sounded tired. Her personal charm and flair for the theatrical amused the audience.

A first hearing of the Berlioz "Te Deum" revealed ample reasons for its rare appearances. It calls for almost as massive orchestra resources as the "Requiem" and contains nowhere near the attention-holding material. There are fine liturgical passages, which contrast sharply with the orchestral bombast with which the work is filled. Its decibel impact is tremendous. David Poleri, tenor, sang the only solo artistically.

Sunday Concert

As noted above, more than 12,000 people were on hand Sunday to hear one of the finest concerts of the season, conducted by Charles Munch. We heard eloquent performances of Brahms' second symphony and the overture to "Alceste" by Gluck. The orchestra was in top form.

Zino Francescatti provided a splendid performance of Beethoven's single violin concerto. His tone was consistently beautiful and his phrasing a delight. The audience gave him a rising ovation,

---

Final Tanglewood Concert (80) Of Season This Afternoon

Charles Munch Will Direct Boston Symphony in Berlioz 'Requiem,' in Memory of Koussevitzky; Springfield Orchestra Chorus Singers to Take Part, With Student at Berkshire Music Center

Lenox, Aug. 14 — The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, conducting, gives the final concert of its enlarged 1954 Berkshire Festival tomorrow afternoon at 2.30 p. m. in the huge Music Shed at Tanglewood. If attendance figures of last summer can be considered a gauge and if fair weather prevails for the many thousands of persons who can hear the music on the spacious lawns outdoors, all records will be shattered in this 17th summer of symphonic music in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the 15th since the Boston Symphony Orchestra participated.

The concluding concert, in memory of late Serge Koussevitzky, who died in 1951 after 25 years as music director of the Boston Symphony, will be the last of a number of programs devoted this summer to rarely-heard music of Hector Berlioz, given in their complete form in observance of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of the French composer.

Mr. Munch will lead the orchestra in the "Requiem," which had its Tanglewood premiere two summers ago. It will have the assistance of David Poleri, tenor soloist; a chorus of 200 voices of students of the choral and opera departments of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, trained by Hugh Ross and James Aliferis, augmented by a chorus of 50 voices of the chorus of the Springfield Symphony Orchestra; and four brass bands, totalling 36 players.

General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concert from the Tanglewood lawns, are placed on sale on the day of the performance.

Also concruded tomorrow are the activities of the Berkshire Music Center, which has presented some 40 concerts and demonstrations by students of its orchestra, chamber music, chorus, opera and amateur study group departments in this, its 12th six-week session. Tomorrow at 10 a. m. in the Chamber Music Hall, is the final program of chamber music by students of the school's Department I (Orchestra). These two events are open to members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, who may attend through voluntary contributions to the school.

Tickets are available at the Tanglewood box office for the final Shed concert.

---

(51) At Tanglewood

DAVID POLERI

David Poleri is the tenor soloist in "Requiem" by Hector Berlioz, to be sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch, at the last concert of the 1954 Berkshire Festival in the Music Shed at Tanglewood this afternoon at 2.30. The concert is in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

Tanglewood (50) Tales

Lenox, Aug. 14—Guests at Tanglewood concerts this weekend of Julius Fleischmann, Cincinnati industrialist and arts patron, are Sergei Denham, director of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo; and Richard Aldrich, of the Broadway theatrical firm of Aldrich & Myers. Mr. Denham this year is reactivating the ballet company for a coast-to-coast tour under the sponsorship of Columbia Concerts. Mr. Aldrich is producer of four Cape Cod summer theatres, the Cape Playhouse at Dennis, the Connamessett Playhouse at Falmouth, and music circuses at Hyannis and Cohasset, and with Messrs. Myers and Fleischmann will produce Tallulah Bankhead in "Dear Charles" on Broadway in the autumn.

* * * *

The "Berlioz Ball," held at Wheatleigh this week by the Student Council of Berkshire Music Center summer students, netted $150 for the emergency fund which helps out needy students with dormitory fees. Entertainment was provided by Jo Popper, Brooklyn, N. Y., chorus student, folk songs; Lorenzo Malfatti, Pittsburgh, opera student, Italian folk songs; Richard Elias, Manchester, N. H., violin student, violin caricatures; Emma Goldman, New Orleans, opera student, aria from "Tosca." Music was provided by Allyn Ferguson, San Jose, Cal.; Irwin Zucker, New York; Charles Hedlund, Hingham, Mass.; Lorenzo Malfatti, at pianos; Don Bravo, Fall River, Mass., saxophone; Arthur Kerr, Baltimore, trombone; Bill Tessin, Boston, trumpet.

* * *

Juan Orrego-Salas, of the Facultad de Belles Artes, Santiago, Chile, is a Tanglewood visitor this weekend. Mr. Orrego, here for a year's study on a Guggenheim fellowship, was awarded the Samuel Wechsler Commission in 1953 for a short work suitable for performance by student ensemble, and the prize-winning composition, "Sextet for Clarinet, String Quartet and Piano," will be performed at the summer's final student chamber music concert, which will be held tomorrow in the Theatre-Concert Hall, not as customary in the Chamber Music Hall, at 10 a. m. It will be performed by Constance Field, Phyllis Skoldberg, violins; Joseph Pietrapaolo, viola; Evelyn Steinbock, cello; John Grande, clarinet; Gilbert Kalishg, piano. Mr. Oorrego lectured to Tanglewood students, faculty and staff in the concluding "Aspects of Music" informal talk last Friday in the Chamber Music Hall on the topic "The South American Musical Scene." He is music critic of his city's publication "Critico Musical," and was a Tanglewood student of composition under Aaron Copland in 1946.

* * *

Leonard Rosenman, who was awarded a commission last summer by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation to compose a one-act opera for performance at Tanglewood by the Berkshire Music Center's opera department, is in California, writing the musical score for the screen version of the John Steinbeck novel "East of Eden." Mr. Rosenman has completed his Tanglewood opera, entitled "Cipolla, the Great," an adaptation of Thomas Mann's short story, "Mario and the Magician." It is planned for Tanglewood during the summer of 1955 when Boris Goldovsky, who selected Mr. Rosenman and Louis Mennini, of Rochester, N. Y., returns to head the opera department.

* * *

Barney Childs, Rhodes Scholar at the University of California, who is spending his second summer as a composition student at Tanglewood, a pupil of Aaron Copland, was honored by having the second movement, entitled "Calm" of his first symphony performed by the Tanglewood student symphony at its final concert of the season today, with Henry Janiec, of Passaic, N. J. as conductor. A quintet for harp and strings, in memoriam to Charles Ives, also by Mr. Childs, will have its fourth movement performed at the concluding student Chamber Music concert Sunday morning.

* * *

Ann English, concert soprano of Nahant, Mass., who was a popular member of the 1953 opera department at Tanglewood, and sang in a number of student opera and symphony programs, was a guest artist on the concluding student symphony program today in the Music Shed, in Ravel's "Sheherazade," which Samuel Krachmalnick conducted.

SPECIAL PRIZES GO TO STUDENTS AT TANGLEWOOD

Cash Awards and Scholarships Given to Winners

Lenox, Aug. 14—Seven scholarships and cash awards were made to students of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood today. The prizes are given annually to outstanding students at the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with its Berkshire Festival which concludes its 17th and most successful summer tomorrow afternoon. Winners are chosen from among the 375 enrolled this year from 35 states and 12 foreign countires.

Tuition scholarships and cash prizes were presented at intermission of this afternoon's final concert by the student symphony orchestra, in the Music Shed, by composer Aaron Copland, assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center.

Koussevitzky Memorial

Through the efforts of Tanglewood's neighboring residents of Berkshire County a committee headed by Mrs. William M. Crane of Richmond, has raised $5000 towards a $15,000 goal to establish an annual scholarship for student conductors at Tanglewood, as a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, former music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and first director of the Berkshire Music Center. Dr. Koussevitzky started the music school in 1940 and under his guidance such nationally known conductors have graduated from Tanglewood as Leonard Bernstein, Lukas Foss, Thor Johnson, Walter Hendl, Eleazar de Carvalho Robert Zeller Robert Whitney. Thomas Schippers and Alexander Leslie.

The Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship present value $250, was awarded today jointly to student conductors Samuel Krachmalnick, of New York City, formerly of St. Louis, a second year student, and Paul Vermel, of New York formerly of France a student in 1949.

Other awards made today are:

The Jascha Heifetz Award, $250 in cash, given by the eminent violinist to Tiberius Klausner, 22-year-old student of the Juilliard School of Music, New York, a native of Hungary;

The Gregor Piatigorsky Prize, value $200, gift of the 'cellist who is guest teacher of chamber music at the Berkshire Music Center, this year divided between 'cellists Camilla Heller, Appleton, Wis., and Evalyn Steinbock, Brooklyn, N. Y.;

The Serge Koussevitzky Composition prize value $250, given by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation for work written at Tanglewood this season, to Robert Barney Childs, a composition pupil of Aaron Copland a resident of Reno, Nev. and a special prize was also given to Michael Sahl, a New Yorker attending Amherst College;

The Wechsler Commission, value $300, awarded by a former Tanglewood pupil to " a student, present or past, chosen from the composition department, for a work to be specified by the faculty," to Raymond Wilding-White, former Berkshire Music Center scholar now on the staff of Boston's educational radio station, WGBH;

The Selly A. Eisemann Scholarship, value $150, to Catherine Dufford, 22, oboe student from Evansville, Ind.; and the Carlotta M. Dreyfus Scholarship, of similar value, to Phyllis Murphy, of Bement, Ill., soprano.

Thomas D. Perry, Jr., Will Be Manager of Orchestra

Succeeds George E. Judd, Retiring From Boston Symphony Post After Nearly 40 Years; Gail Rector To Be Assistant Manager

Lenox, Aug. 14—The symphony organization which is probably better known to America than any other—the Boston Symphony Orchestra—comes under new management Sept. 1, when Thomas Doane Perry, Jr., succeeds George E. Judd who is retiring after nearly 40 years of distinguished service to the orchestra.

Explaining the job of an orchestra manager as "everything on this side of the footlights," Mr. Perry is responsible for the $1,500,000 annual operation of the orchestra which includes running Symphony Hall in Boston, business details in connection with the orchestra's tours and the annual Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

Started as Teacher

Mr. Perry, whose great-grandfather founded Doane College in Crete, Neb., and whose father is a retired engineer now living in Moorestown, N. J., was born Dec. 31, 1913, and raised in Grand Rapids, Michigan. Intending to follow the example of his mother who was a teacher of Latin, Mr. Perry enrolled at Yale in 1931 where he majored in English. He taught two years at the Sanford Academy near Wilmington, Del., before joining the staff of a Philadelphia advertising agency.

Taking charge or radio and concert activities at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia in September, 1939, "Tod" Perry met Randall Thompson, eminent American composer who then headed the conservatory. At Mr. Thompson's suggestion Perry spent the summer of 1940 as a choral student at the new Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music established that year by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, at Tanglewood.

After a two-year term as manager of two concert halls for the New England Mutual Insurance Co. in Boston and a year's service (1944) in the Medical Corps of the U. S. Navy, Mr. Perry—again on the recommendation of Randall Thompson—began his association with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, as assistant to Mr. Judd, in 1946.

Lives at Hingnam

Married to the former Helen Roberts, of Philadelphia, Tod Perry makes his home in Hingham, and is the father of two boys, aged 9 and 11. "Our boys are tremendous baseball fans," says Mr. Perry, "Little Leaguers. So far this season I have had to repair six broken windows."

Music is the foremost Perry hobby but Mr. Perry confesses to "a mild form of insanity; taking old autos apart." One of his most prized possessions was an old Rolls Royce whose engine, he claims, "was the most beautiful piece of machinery I've ever tinkered with; of course it gave us only 10 miles to the gallon, but it was superbly engineered." Disposing of the Rolls Royce in 1952 when he and Mrs. Perry went with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on its European tour, Mr. Perry now restricts his mechanical talents to maintaining a handsome 1936 convertible Ford sedan.

In addition to his duties until now as assistant manager of the Boston Symphony, he has served several summers as the executive secretary of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, now completing its 12th season. His Tanglewood duties will be taken over largely by his successor, Gail Rector, the new assistant manager of the orchestra.

In Army Four Years

Mr. Rector, born Feb. 14, 1918, in North Platte, Nebraska, received his bachelor of music degree from the University of Michigan before serving four years in the U. S. Army which included a tour of duty in New Caledonia. Since 1946 Mr. Rector, who has been on the Berkshire Music Center staff for three seasons, has been assistant to the president of the University Musical Society (the sponsoring organization of the Choral Union and May Festival) at the University of Michigan. With Mrs. Rector and their three children—Richard, 7; Ellen, 4; and Patricia, 3—Mr. Rector assumes his Symphony Hall duties on Sept. 1.

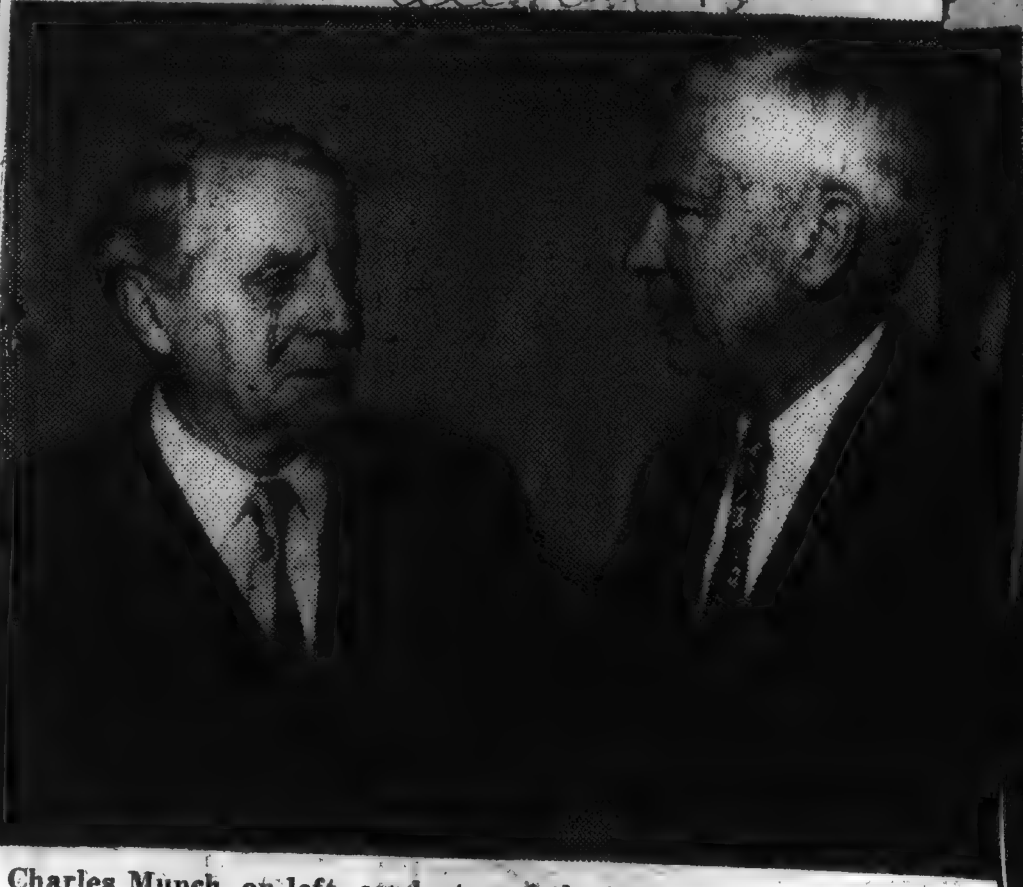
The forthcoming season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra—its 74th—finds Mr. Perry working with the most extensive symphonic operation in the country with some 200 concerts including the regular Boston season, the tours, Pops, Esplanade and Tanglewood seasons plus the national NBC Saturday night broadcasts. But he believes his job is "the most fascinating job in the world."

"I like music and people," says the new manager, "and when you're able to serve both it's very pleasant."

Springfield Union

Munch Bids Judd Goodby

August 15



Charles Munch, on left, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, says goodby to George Judd who is retiring after 40 years of service with the orchestra — 18 years of which were as manager. It was through Mr. Judd that Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, organizer of the first Berkshire Music Festival in 1934, opened negotiations to bring the Boston Symphony Orchestra to Tanglewood in 1936. The 1954 Festival closes with this afternoon's concert. Mr. Judd retires officially On Sept. 1.

10,400 AT FESTIVAL; FINALE IS TODAY

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 14 — We left the music shed tonight with the feeling that we had heard one of the finest concerts of the current Berkshire Music Festival which concludes tomorrow afternoon.

It was a dramatic performance, both as to content and performance. Seldom, this season, has Charles Munch summoned the glory of the Boston Symphony Orchestra so effectively. An estimated 10,400 persons were on hand to enjoy it with us.

The "Tragic Overture" by Brahms opened the program. This is a work most agreeable to Mr. Munch and a stunning performance was the result. The almost hysterical rebellion and contrasting reluctant resignation were set forth with admirable clarity. Brahms said of his pair of over[illegible]es, the "Tragic" and the "Ac[illegible]mic"; "One laughs, the other cr[illegible]." One sensed more of a rebel[illegible] than tears tonight.

We are told that Ravel [illegible] always interested in the s[illegible]les of other writers, wondering, [illegible]rhaps what he could do with th[illegible] same materials. He took it upon [illegible]nself to undertake a piano suite [illegible] the style of a fellow countryman, [illegible]rancois Couperin. This was in 19[illegible] but it was not until 1917 that this fragile reminder of the past was completed.

It was later orchestrated. In this work, Ravel has incarnated [illegible] very spirit of the classicism [illegible] the 18th Century, but he has d[illegible] more, he has painted it from [illegible] limitless palette of colors, vitaliz[illegible] it and made it gleam like a jewe[illegible] The Boston players are past masters in the art of evoking all the beauties of a Ravel score and the performance was a gem.

Charles Munch paid his respects to a fine American composer, Walter Piston, tonight by providing a splendid performance of his "Symphony No. 4." Mr. Piston was on hand to acknowledge the enthusiastic applause of the audience and also the orchestra members. The University of Minnesota, founded in 1851, celebrated its centennial by commissioning this symphony. It was first performed at the close of the celebration by the Minneapolis Symphony.

Mr. Piston is a skilled craftsman. He has a direct manner of expression and a deal of melodic consciousness. The second movement of the work, titled "Ballando" is rife with spirited melodies and dance-like rhythms. His handling of the brasses is wonderfully effective. The third movement, titled "Contemplative" has broad strands of melody, dark hued for the most part and texture is rich and velvety. The final movement is a bit frenetic. It surges onward with all the resources of the orchestra employed. This work will bear many hearings and it will hold the interest.

Saint-Saens composed his "Symphony in C Minor, No. 3" for the London Philharmonic Society and it was first played by that orchestra in 1886. Thus there was quite a gap between the style and lush melodies of the French composer and his contemporary counterpart, Walter Piston. Saint-Saens puts forth his message in a much more simple manner. His music soars to the heights because of its inherent beauty, but he was not afraid to employ the full resources of the orchestra and the final movement with the added full organ and piano (four hands) produces a tremendous impact Tonight E. Power Biggs was at the organ. Mr. Munch read the score with deep feeling for its emotional appeal and with full realibation of its audience appeal. It was a performance to remember.

Tomorrow marks the conclusion of the festival. The afternoon concert will be devoted to a performance of the "Grande Messe Des Morts (Requiem)" By Hector Berlioz. This performance will be in memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, founder of the festival and the Berkshire Music Center.

Munch and 'Pat' Cardillo

Pasquale Cardillo of North Adams, clarinetist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, pictured with Conductor Charles Munch at Tanglewood. It was in 1939 that Pat traveled to Lenox from North Adams for a tryout with the orchestra and gained a place with the world famous musical unit.

[25]

24 SYRACUSE HERALD-JOURNAL, Thursday, August 12, 1954

TALKING IT OVER

Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Farr Are Among Husband-Wife Teams in 'Tanglewood'

By EMMA VAN WORMER

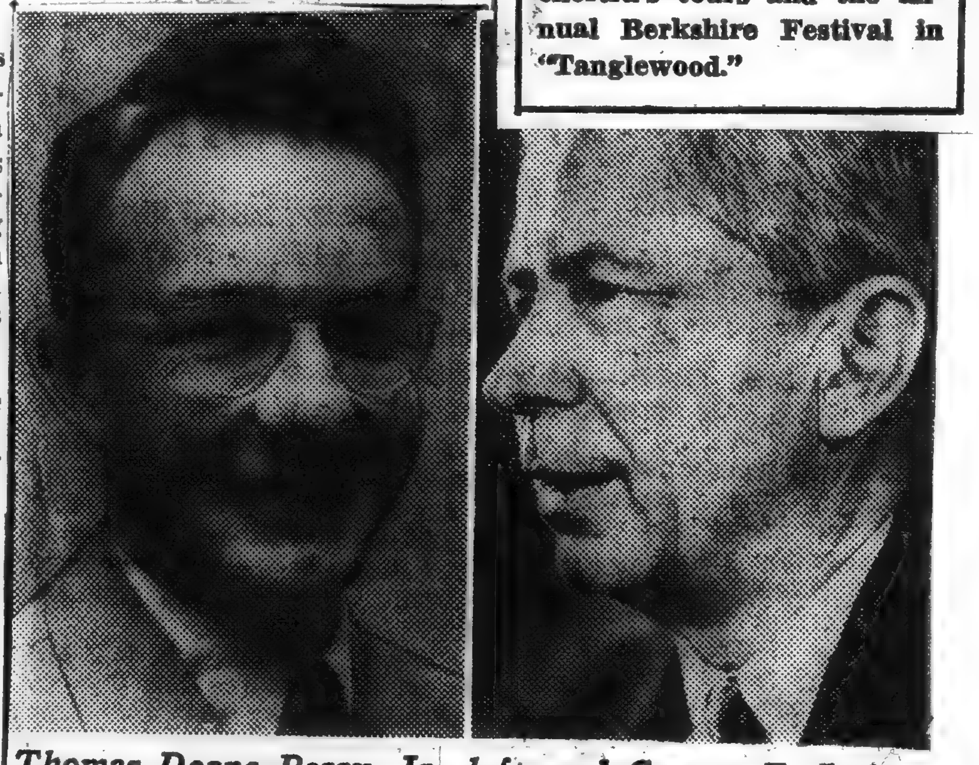
THE 200 OR MORE musicians and music lovers in attendance at the convention dinner of the New York State Federation of Music Clubs here last spring recall the recital given by Lowell and Naomi Farr, the latter a national auditions winner of Federated Music Clubs. Mr. and Mrs. Farr are among husband-wife teams studying in Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood this summer.

LOWELL FARR, a pianist is former student in the Paris Conservatoire, is working on opera coaching in the Berkshires. His wife, Naomo, a professional concert artist, a soprano, is working on advanced opera dramatics. In the convention dinner in Hotel Syracuse Farr played his wife's accompaniments in a varied program of operatic arias and songs.

Also in "Tanglewood," while Julius Ilku is studying double bass, Mrs. Ilku is working under the Boston Symphony's harpist Bernard Zinghera. Heskel Brisman, composition pupil of Ernst Toch and his wife, Rina Basin Brisman, an opera associate, are registered in the Berkshire Music Center summer session, to close Sunday. Monica and Keith MacCaffrey, brother and sister of Lenox, Mass., are students respectively of the French horn and the Study group. Rodney and Robert Pierece, twins, whose home is in Wichita, Kan., returned to "Tanglewood" for a season's study in the orchestra department.

CHORAL CONDUCTORS who are alumni of Tanglewood include James Aliferis (University of Minnesota); Jacob Avshalomoff (Columbia University,) and Lorna Cooke de Varon (New England Conservatory, Boston). Composers who have profited by summers in this center in the foothills of the Berkshires in Western Massachusetts: Norman dello Joio, Alan Hovaness, Ulysses Kay Peter Mennin, Leonard Rosenman, Louis Mennini, Ned Rorem Jurriaan Andraessen. Instrumentalists also receiving training there include Jacob Krachmalnick, concert master of the Philadelphia Orchestra; pianists Seymour Lipkin, Leonard Pennario, Constance Keene, Julius Katchen; cellist Aldo Parisot and violinist Norman Carol.

Thomas Doane Perry, Jr., who succeeds the able and justly popular George E. Judd,, retiring manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has served several summers as executive secretary of the Berkshire Music Center in "Tanglewood." Mr. Judd retires following nearly 40 years of distinguished service to the Boston Symphony, now a $1,500,000 annual operation, including running Symphony Hall in Boston, business of the orchestra's tours and the annual Berkshire Festival in "Tanglewood."



Thomas Doane Perry, Jr., left, and George E. Judd, new manager and retiring manager, respectively, of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, now in its summer home in "Tanglewood", Lenox, Mass.

New York Journal-American
2—Fri., Aug. 13, 1954 ★

Berkshire Festival:

Morel Conducts

Program Lacks Lift

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 13. — To Jean Morel fell the honor of opening the final weekend of the Berkshire Festival last night.

Having given an excellent account of his conducting abilities at a concert of the Boston Symphony in the music shed three weeks ago, he was further put to the test leading the chamber orchestra in the theater-concert hall. The shift proved revealing.

In the more exacting task of his chamber-music program, Morel courted reservations.

It could be that limited rehearsal time and damp weather worked against him, but the fact remains that the finesse expected of his performances appeared only spasmodically. For all his fine musicianship and vitality, the music seldom took flight.

Varied Program

The program was more varied than any other in this series formerly known as the Bach-Mozart concerts.

Mozart existed only by courtesy in a list of works that began with Rossini's overture to "La Scala di Seta," included Mozart's Symphony K. 319, then turned to Ravel's "Mother Goose" suite, and ended with Strauss' suite from "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme."

That light touch which all this music needed was suggested but not fully realized. The silken suavity of Rossini, the refinement of Mozart, the perfection of Ravel, and the wit of Strauss bowed to a heaviness and robustness of treatment somewhat out of character and even to coarseness in the playing.

These matters did not rob the concert of enjoyment. The program was good, the conducting firm. What I missed was the delicious quality of the music in performance. Weather conditions cut attendance to 1,650 people.

Brilliant Tanglewood Concerts End Record-Breaking Season

(Continued from First Page)

came about quite by contrivance. For it appears that the author of the charges, an 83-year-old Lenox resident, wrote a letter to the selectmen complaining that the summer people walking about the streets of her town were unsuitably dressed. A press service called her for further comment, and managed to get her going on the subject of music lovers who, with blankets stretched out under the stars before the music shed, seemed to be responding to the romantic situation more than she deemed proper.

In view of the fact that the letter-writer invariably occupies a box, it is not generally known how she researched the situation, but a hasty survey by a picked squad of monitors chosen for their ability to see in the dark revealed that the reclining music lovers were the soul of discretion.

Indeed, since they were all wraapped up in blankets—the weather here having been somewhat immoderately cool — the monitors' considered opinion was that everyone was asleep, and that it was all a tempest in a timpanum.

NOVEL SCHEME

The problem of suitable garb, however, has always gnawed away at Tanglewood officials, who some years ago hit upon the novel scheme of supplying the bare-legged (male or female) with wellow wrap-around skirts at the gate.

This was greeted with such good natured aplomb by the visitors that it is now standard procedure, resulting, for the men at least, in much comic relief. Since the skirts were limited to several score and the visitors often exceeded several thousand, bare legs are still to be seen and, in some cases for that matter, admired.

As for the blanket brigade, the management takes the unofficial view that music and romance have been associated since Babylon, that only those disposed to such entertainment bring their blankets, and that old ladies are more properly advised to sit in their boxes and not roam tripping over people who got there first.

As for more solemn matters, it may be reported that the traditional "Tanglewood on Parade," an event designed to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, was for once blessed with perfect outdoor weather. By six o'clock 5,000 people from (to judge by a quick survey of the parking area) 28 states and Hawaii, were strolling on the overpoweringly green lawns, picnicking under the mugo pines, and dropping in on the several informal musical events offered on the occasion.

POPS ORCHESTRA

These consisted of an opera (Gounod's "The Physician in Spite of Himself"), a fanfare and a simultaneous demonstration of the orchestra, opera, chamber music and composition departments of the Center.

All this was followed by a picnic supper and, at 8:15, the Gala concert featuring, for the first time at Tanglewood, Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops orchestra, who triumphed beyond imagining.

While Charles Munch occupied a box in the audience, the famed Pops maestro lifted the eaves of the shed a few inches with such familiar Pops numbers as "Stars and Stripes Forever," Ravel's "Bolero," the comical parody of TV commercials that has rocked Symphony Hall all season, and "Look Sharp—Be Sharp," not to mention a slate of encores.

If an audience—for the evening event numbering 10,500 — has been more elevated by the music at these Fesivals, it has certainly never been more entertained and amused than by this uproarious finale.

During the intermission, Dr. Lewis Perry, honorary chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, presented Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith with a leather scroll recognizing her as the leader of the original Festival enterprise here 20 years ago.

It was she who arranged for the Boston Symphony to make Tanglewood, already famous as the summer home of Nathaniel Hawthorne, its summer headquarters. The ensuing years have seen it grow from a small, more or less social series of a few selected events, to a musical festival of international significance offering more than 50 individual concerts.

MANAGER RETIRING

Regrettably enough, the man who — after Koussevitzky — was most responsible for the astonishing growth of the festival, this year retires as manager of the Boston Symphony and of the Berkshire Festival.

He is George E. Judd, who after 40 years of guiding the destinies of the orchestra, during which it completed an immensely, successful tour of Europe and anothed of the United States, retires to his new farm at Cannonsville, N. Y., to devote his time to floriculture.

Taking his place, as of Sept. 1, is his former assistant, Thomas D. Perry, Jr., a young man who has long since established himself in an organization that now operates on an overall budget of a million and a half dollars a year, almost half as much more as that maintained by the New York Philharmonic and twice as much as that of any other orchestra in the world.

Except for the unruly weather, which has clouded much of the festival but hasn't prevented an all-time record attendance, the season has been musically brilliant. Thematically it has honored the 150th anniversary of Hector Berlioz, many of whose largest works have been performed during the season. The final work of the season, Berlioz's monumental "Requiem," which requires a much augmented orchestra, a chorus, and soloists as well as four brass bands posted at each corner of the shed, will be given tomorrow afternoon to conclude the festival. At this time also, the Berkshire Music Center, composed of 375 students, disbands.

As for Tanglewood on Parade" itself, once the door prizes were distributed and the waltzing on the lawn ended, it came to a vivid conclusion with a jam session on the porch of the main house put on by jazz pianist Joe Bushkin, who thereby purged himself of the long-hair routine he has been undergoing at the center as a student. The little old lady who complained about the mores of the Tanglewood audiences could not be reached for comment on this bit of sacrilege, but another letter to the selectmen is expected presently.

World Tel + Sun
august 13

NEW Y

Music

Morel Has 2nd Turn at Tanglewood

By ROBERT BAGAR.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 13.—For the second time during the Berkshire Music Festival Jean Morel conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra, this taking place last evening in the theater-concert hall.

Mr. Morel, you may remember, took the festival by storm, as it were, at his first appearance here. And with good reason, for on that occasion—several weeks ago—he showed such sparkle and vitality and such a command of the orchestral forces—not to mention his command of the orchestral scores—that he couldn't have missed bowling over everybody.

Different Situation.

Last night, regrettably, things were slightly different, though —to be perfectly honest—not entirely of his own doing. He had put together a program of pieces consisting of the Rossini Overture to "La Scale di Seta," the Mozart Symphony No. 33, in B-flat, K. 319; the Ravel "Ma Mere l'Oye," and a suite from Richard Strauss' music to Moliere's "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme."

Of these scores the best played —by many parasangs—was the Ravel. That seems too simple a thing to say, what with Mr. Morel and Ravel being Frenchmen, and so forth, but it's all too true. For the orchestra fairly basked in this music. It loved it, as did the large audience. And it was not secret that Mr. Morel loved it.

The Rossini piece was another matter entirely. Mr. Morel had very good ideas about this light, soaring, at times gossamer music. Not always, however, did we have the good fortune to get them across. There was a lack of tonal balance between orchestra and choir, with the woodwind often entering upon the scene with a heavy tread.

Weather No Help.

Furthermore, and one may as well report this now, the weather wasn't especially good for strings. Heaviness also possessed the Mozart. And what effects Mr. Morel might have obtained—and I'm certain he could obtain them in better circumstances—went more or less by the board.

As for the concluding piece, the Strauss suite, the best I can say for the performance is that it was ragged, indeed. Perhaps it had not been rehearsed enough, I really don't know. Some excerpts came through rather cleanly and, it goes without saying, made their various points.

Frankly, this score puzzles me. Strauss doesn't appear to be completely at home in it. I know that there are pundits who inhale it like champagne air. Sorry, but I really cannot feel about it that way. It may be that writing for a smaller orchestra made the difference. But you will certainly not find here the Strauss of the "Rosenkavalier," that's certain and that's about it. All the same a very nice try.

RENSSELAER COUNTY REVIEW, RENSSELAER, N. Y., FRIDAY, AUGUST 13, 1954

THE WEEK IN NEW YORK

By ALICE C. ARMSTRONG

TROY—Summer is on the wane as the last two weeks of August start—glorious days and a full moon in the offing—an Autumn chill that may be followed by the torrid weather of last August (perish the thought)—the attendance at Saratoga Racetrack slightly under last season following the trend at all places of amusement, either money is scarce or people aren't spending—food for thought for the legislators who frequent the track that the excessive tax of New York State might be one of the reasons—the Berkshire Musical Festival concluding a glorious season at Tanglewood next Sunday with Charles Munch directing the Boston Symphony—tonight, Friday, "Tanglewood on Parade" including the Boston Pops Concert with Arthur Fiedler directing, lawn party, picnic supper, dancing on the lawn, concert in the Shed by the Boston Symphony with Brenda Lewis, Metropolitan star singing the part of a Salome in the final scene of Strauss' opera of that name, proceeds for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center.

The Summer theatres in the area in the midst of trying out new plays, "The Southwest Corner" at the Spa Theatre, Saratoga, Eva LeG

[26]

24 SYRACUSE HERALD-JOURNAL, Thursday, August 12, 1954

TALKING IT OVER

Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Farr Are Among Husband-Wife Teams in 'Tanglewood'

By EMMA VAN WORMER

THE 200 OR MORE musicians and music lovers in attendance at the convention dinner of the New York State Federation of Music Clubs here last spring recall the recital given by Lowell and Naomi Farr, the latter a national auditions winner of Federated Music Clubs. Mr. and Mrs. Farr are among husband-wife teams studying in Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood this summer.

LOWELL FARR, a pianist is former student in the Paris Conservatoire, is working on opera coaching in the Berkshires. His wife, Naomo, a professional concert artist, a soprano, is working on advanced opera dramatics. In the convention dinner in Hotel Syracuse Farr played his wife's accompaniments in a varied program of operatic arias and songs.

Also in "Tanglewood," while Julius Ilku is studying double bass, Mrs. Ilku is working under the Boston Symphony's harpist Bernard Zinghera. Heskel Brisman, composition pupil of Ernst Toch and his wife, Rina Basin Brisman, an opera associate, are registered in the Berkshire Music Center summer session, to close Sunday. Monica and Keith MacGaffrey, brother and sister of Lenox, Mass., are students respectively of the French horn and the Study group. Rodney and Robert Pierece, twins, whose home is in Wichita, Kan., returned to "Tanglewood" for a season's study in the orchestra department.

CHORAL CONDUCTORS who are alumni of Tanglewood include James Aliferis (University of Minnesota); Jacob Avshalomoff (Columbia University,) and Lorna Cooke de Varon (New England Conservatory, Boston). Composers who have profited by summers in this center in the foothills of the Berkshires in Western Massachusetts: Norman dello Joio, Alan Hovaness, Ulysses Kay Peter Mennin, Leonard Rosenman, Louis Mennini, Ned Rorem Jurriaan Andraessen. Instrumentalists also receiving training there include Jacob Krachmalnick, concert master of the Philadelphia Orchestra; pianists Seymour Lipkin, Leonard Pennario, Constance Keene, Julius Katchen; cellist Aldo Parisot and violinist Norman Carol.

Thomas Deane Perry, Jr., who succeeds the able and justly popular George E. Judd,, retiring manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has served several summers as executive secretary of the Berkshire Music Center in "Tanglewood." Mr. Judd retires following nearly 40 years of distinguished service to the Boston Sym-came about quite by contrivance. For it appears that the author of the charges, an 83-year-old Lenox resident, wrote a letter to the selectmen complaining that the summer people walking about the streets of her town were unsuitably dressed. A press service called her for further comment, and managed to get her going on the subject of music lovers who, with blankets stretched out under the stars before the music shed, seemed to be responding to the romantic situation more than she deemed proper.

Thomas Doane Perry, Jr., left, and George E. Judd, new manager and retiring manager, respectively, of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, now in its summer home in "Tanglewood", Lenox, Mass.

Brilliant Tanglewood Concerts End Record-Breaking Season

(Continued from First Page)

In view of the fact that the letter-writer invariably occupies a box, it is not generally known how she researched the situation, but a hasty survey by a picked squad of monitors chosen for their ability to see in the dark revealed that the reclining music lovers were the soul of discretion.

Indeed, since they were all wraapped up in blankets—the weather here having been somewhat immoderately cool — the monitors' considered opinion was that everyone was asleep, and that it was all a tempest in a timpanum.

NOVEL SCHEME

The problem of suitable garb, however, has always gnawed away at Tanglewood officials, who some years ago hit upon the novel scheme of supplying the bare-legged (male or female) with wellow wrap-around skirts at the gate.

This was greeted with such good natured aplomb by the visitors that it is now standard procedure, resulting, for the men at least, in much comic relief. Since the skirts were limited to several score and the visitors often exceeded seyeral thousand, bare legs are still to be seen and, in some cases for that matter, admired.

As for the blanket brigade, the management takes the unofficial view that music and romance have been associated since Babylon, that only those disposed to such entertainment bring their blankets, and that old ladies are more properly advised to sit in their boxes and not roam tripping over people who got there first.

As for more solemn matters, it may be reported that the traditional "Tanglewood on Parade," an event designed to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, was for once blessed with perfect outdoor weather. By six o'clock 5,000 people from (to judge by a quick survey of the parking area) 28 states and Hawaii, were strolling on the overpoweringly green lawns, picnicking under the mugo pines, and dropping in on the several informal musical events offered on the occasion.

POPS ORCHESTRA

These consisted of an opera (Gounod's "The Physician in Spite of Himself"), a fanfare and a simultaneous demonstration of the orchestra, opera, chamber music and composition departments of the Center.

All this was followed by a picnic supper and, at 8:15, the Gala concert featuring, for the first time at Tanglewood, Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops orchestra, who triumphed beyond imagining.

While Charles Munch occupied a box in the audience, the famed Pops maestro lifted the eaves of the shed a few inches with such familiar Pops numbers as "Stars and Stripes Forever," Ravel's "Bolero," the comical parody of TV commercials that has rocked Symphony Hall all season, and "Look Sharp—Be Sharp," not to mention a slate of encores.

If an audience—for the evening event numbering 10,500 — has been more elevated by the music at these Fesivals, it has certainly never been more entertained and amused than by this uproarious finale.

During the intermission, Dr. Lewis Perry, honorary chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, presented Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith with a leather scroll recognizing her as the leader of the original Festival enterprise here 20 years ago.

It was she who arranged for the Boston Symphony to make Tanglewood, already famous as the summer home of Nathaniel Hawthorne, its summer headquarters. The ensuing years have seen it grow from a small, more or less social series of a few selected events, to a musical festival of international significance offering more than 50 individual concerts.

MANAGER RETIRING

Regrettably enough, the man who — after Koussevitzky — was most responsible for the astonishing growth of the festival, this year retires as manager of the Boston Symphony and of the Berkshire Festival.

He is George E. Judd, who after 40 years of guiding the destinies of the orchestra, during which it completed an immensely successful tour of Europe and anothed of the United States, retires to his new farm at Cannonsville, N. Y., to devote his time to floriculture.

Taking his place, as of Sept. 1, is his former assistant, Thomas D. Perry, Jr., a young man who has long since established himself in an organization that now operates on an overall budget of a million and a half dollars a year, almost half as much more as that maintained by the New York Philharmonic and twice as much as that of any other orchestra in the world.

Except for the unruly weather, which has clouded much of the festival but hasn't prevented an all-time record attendance, the season has been musically brilliant. Thematically it has honored the 150th anniversary of Hector Berlioz, many of whose largest works have been performed during the season. The final work of the season, Berlioz's monumental "Requiem," which requires a much augmented orchestra, a chorus, and soloists as well as four brass bands posted at each corner of the shed, will be given tomorrow afternoon to conclude the festival. At this time also, the Berkshire Music Center, composed of 375 students, disbands.

As for Tanglewood on Parade" itself, once the door prizes were distributed and the waltzing on the lawn ended, it came to a vivid conclusion with a jam session on the porch of the main house put on by jazz pianist Joe Bushkin, who thereby purged himself of the long-hair routine he has been undergoing at the center as a student. The little old lady who complained about the mores of the Tanglewood audiences could not be reached for comment on this bit of sacrilege, but another letter to the selectmen is expected presently.

New York Journal-American
2—Fri., Aug. 13, 1954 ★

Berkshire Festival:

Morel Conducts

Program Lacks Lift

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 13. — To Jean Morel fell the honor of opening the final weekend of the Berkshire Festival last night.

Having given an excellent account of his conducting abilities at a concert of the Boston Symphony in the music shed three weeks ago, he was further put to the test leading the chamber orchestra in the theater-concert hall. The shift proved revealing.

In the more exacting task of his chamber-music program, Morel courted reservations.

It could be that limited rehearsal time and damp weather worked against him, but the fact remains that the finesse expected of his performances appeared only spasmodically. For all his fine musicianship and vitality, the music seldom took flight.

Varied Program

The program was more varied than any other in this series formerly known as the Bach-Mozart concerts.

Mozart existed only by courtesy in a list of works that began with Rossini's overture to "La Scala di Seta," included Mozart's Symphony K. 319, then turned to Ravel's "Mother Goose" suite, and ended with Strauss' suite from "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme."

That light touch which all this music needed was suggested but not fully realized. The silken suavity of Rossini, the refinement of Mozart, the perfection of Ravel, and the wit of Strauss bowed to a heaviness and robustness of treatment somewhat out of character and even to coarseness in the playing.

These matters did not rob the concert of enjoyment. The program was good, the conducting firm. What I missed was the delicious quality of the music in performance. Weather conditions cut attendance to 1,650 people.

World Tel + Sun
august 13

NEW Y

Music

Morel Has 2nd Turn at Tanglewood

By ROBERT BAGAR.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 13.—For the second time during the Berkshire Music Festival Jean Morel conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra, this taking place last evening in the theater-concert hall.

Mr. Morel, you may remember, took the festival by storm, as it were, at his first appearance here. And with good reason, for on that occasion—several weeks ago—he showed such sparkle and vitality and such a command of the orchestral forces—not to mention his command of the orchestral scores—that he couldn't have missed bowling over everybody.

Different Situation.

Last night, regrettably, things were slightly different, though—to be perfectly honest—not entirely of his own doing. He had put together a program of pieces consisting of the Rossini Overture to "La Scale di Seta," the Mozart Symphony No. 33, in B-flat, K. 319; the Ravel "Ma Mere l'Oye," and a suite from Richard Strauss' music to Moliere's "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme."

Of these scores the best played—by many parasangs—was the Ravel. That seems too simple a thing to say, what with Mr. Morel and Ravel being Frenchmen, and so forth, but it's all too true. For the orchestra fairly basked in this music. It loved it, as did the large audience. And it was not secret that Mr. Morel loved it.

The Rossini piece was another matter entirely. Mr. Morel had very good ideas about this light, soaring, at times gossamer music. Not always, however, did we have the good fortune to get them across. There was a lack of tonal balance between orchestra and choir, with the woodwind often entering upon the scene with a heavy tread.

Weather No Help.

Furthermore, and one may as well report this now, the weather wasn't especially good for strings. Heaviness also possessed the Mozart. And what effects Mr. Morel might have obtained—and I'm certain he could obtain them in better circumstances—went more or less by the board.

As for the concluding piece, the Strauss suite, the best I can say for the performance is that it was ragged, indeed. Perhaps it had not been rehearsed enough, I really don't know. Some excerpts came through rather cleanly and, it goes without saying, made their various points.

Frankly, this score puzzles me. Strauss doesn't appear to be completely at home in it. I know that there are pundits who inhale it like champagne air. Sorry, but I really cannot feel about it that way. It may be that writing for a smaller orchestra made the difference. But you will certainly not find here the Strauss of the "Rosenkavalier," that's certain and that's about it. All the same a very nice try.

RENSSELAER COUNTY REVIEW, RENSSELAER, N. Y., FRIDAY,

AUGUST 13, 1954

THE WEEK IN NEW YORK

By ALICE C. ARMSTRONG

TROY—Summer is on the wane as the last two weeks of August start—glorious days and a full moon in the offing—an Autumn chill that may be followed by the torrid weather of last August (perish the thought)—the attendance at Saratoga Racetrack slightly under last season following the trend at all places of amusement, either money is scarce or people aren't spending—food for thought for the legislators who frequent the track that the excessive tax of New York State might be one of the reasons—the Berkshire Musical Festival concluding a glorious season at Tanglewood next Sunday with Charles Munch directing the Boston Symphony—tonight, Friday, "Tanglewood on Parade" including the Boston Pops Concert with Arthur Fiedler directing, lawn party, picnic supper, dancing on the lawn, concert in the Shed by the Boston Symphony with Brenda Lewis, Metropolitan star singing the part of a Salome in the final scene of Strauss' opera of that name, proceeds for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center.

The Summer theatres in the area in the midst of trying out new plays, "The Southwest Corner" at the Spa Theatre, Saratoga. Eva

[26]

88 THE NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, AUGUST 15,

[From Late Editions of Yesterday's Times.]

TANGLEWOOD FETE DEFIES 13TH 'JINX'

10,000 Attend 'Parade' of Berkshire Music Center —Variety Is Keynote

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 13—Friday the thirteenth was auspicious for "Tanglewood On Parade." The sun shone in the afternoon, and the full moon and the stars brightened the night. As a result, more than 10,000 persons had the liveliest and best attended demonstration in years of Tanglewood's many-faceted activities.

More than $23,000 was realized today for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center's scholarship fund.

There was music echoing through the halls and across the rolling lawns of this gracious estate from mid-afternoon until almost midnight, beginning with an early demonstration of the Berkshire Music Center's study group and ending with a jam session presided over by Joe Bushkin, jazz pianist, who composed a jump tune for the occasion called "Tanglewood hangover."

Plenty of refreshments were around, but if one can have a hangover from an excess of music, "Tanglewood On Parade" would be the show to do it. Fortunately, there was so much variety that one could move from opera to symphony, from chamber music to choral music, from the violence and passion of "Salome" to the wonderful stride of "Stars and Stripes Forever."

Not only was the Berkshire Music Center on display, but so was the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and for the first time at Tanglewood, the Boston "Pop" group under Arthur Fiedler, who is celebrating his twenty-fifth anniversary at the head of this organization.

In addition, there was a brief ceremony commemorating the founding of the Berkshire Festival twenty years ago and a tribute to the men and women who helped to make it possible. Lewis Perry of the Boston Symphony trustees presented a plaque to Gertrude Robinson Smith, who was the founding president of the festival.

The festivities got an early impetus from a performance of Gounod's setting of Moliere's "Medecin Malgre Lui," which was presented in the formal gardens in mid-afternoon. Morton Siegel, who made the English adaptation, also staged the little piece.

Then, after a fanfare, Ralph Berkowitz, Dean of the center, invited the audience to make itself at home and to watch the various departments of the center at work. In the shed the student orchestra led by student conductors—Henry Janiec, Paul Vermel (a Frenchman whose parents came from abroad to hear him conduct), and Samuel Krachmalnick — led pieces by Bizet, Mozart, Lalo and Wagner. William De Pasquale, violinist, was the soloist in one movement of the "Symphonie Espagnole."

In the Theatre-Concert Hall the opera department presented excerpts from Puccini's "Tosca" and "Bohème" and Hindemith's one-acter, "Hin und Zurueck." In the Chamber Music Hall there was a program of songs and chamber music. John Kennedy and Richard Maxfield of this year's composition department were represented by new works, and among the performers were Catherine Akos, Mr. Kennedy, Stanley Dombrowski, Tan Crone, Beatrice Krebs, Mr. Maxfield, Tossi Ichiyanagi, Tiberius Klausner, Endel Kalam, Evalyn Steinbeck and Gilbert Kalish.

After a picnic supper on the lawn, the Boston Symphony took over. Thomas Schippers, an old Tanglewood hand though a very young man, was the guest conductor with the orchestra. He led a crisp performance of Bizet's youthful Symphony in C and a turbulent reading of the final scene from Strauss' "Salome." Brenda Lewis, who is an incandescent artist and who sang with passionate intensity, was the Salome. She brought her to life without sets or staging.

Mr. Fiedler and the Boston "Pops"—to let you in on a secret, the Boston Symphony with very few changes—took over and had the audience in a tizzy. Mr. Fiedler is a showman.

He makes things like "Stars and Stripes Forever," Offenbach or "Bolero" go like controlled lightning. No wonder he is a popular figure on the American scene. The audience roared its delight.

Then there were drawings for door prizes, waltzing on the lawn, and Joe Bushkin with his jazz. If anyone was looking for music after that, they could turn to disk jockeys, poor benighted devils.

---

34 NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, SUNDAY, AUGUST 15, 1954

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky (left) congratulating winners of the Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship—student conductors Paul Vermel (right) and Samuel Krachmalnick. Looking on are Mrs. William M. Crane (second from left) and Mrs. John R. Rice, co-chairmen of a committee raising funds for the annual scholarship.

Music Festival Awards Made

Seven scholarships and cash awards were made to students of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., yesterday. The prizes are given annually to outstanding students at the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with its Berkshire Festival which concludes its seventeenth summer this afternoon. Winners were chosen from among the 375 enrolled this year from thirty-five states and twelve foreign countries. A committee headed by Mrs. William M. Crane, of Richmond, Mass., has raised $5,000 towards a $15,000 goal to establish an annual scholarship for student conductors at Tanglewood, as a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, former music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and first director of the Berkshire Music Center. The scholarship, whose present value is $250, was awarded jointly to student conductors Samuel Krachmalnick, of New York, formerly of St. Louis, a second year student, and Paul Vermel, of New York, formerly of France, a student in 1949. Other awards made yesterday were: The Jascha Heifetz Award to Tiberius Klausner, the Gregor Piatigorsky Prize to Camilla Heller and Evalyn Steinbock, the Serge Koussevitzky Composition Prize to Robert Barney Childs, the Wechsler Commission to Raymond Wilding-White, the Selly A. Eisemann Scholarship to Catherine Dufford, and the Carlotta M. Dreyfus Scholarship to Phyllis Murphy.

Tanglewood Saturday Finale Presents Boston Symphony

By Jay Harrison

LENOX, Mass., Aug 14.—The Berkshire Music Festival entered the last phase of its present acaivity tonight with the final Saturday evening concert in Tanglewood's large Music Shed. For the event, Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program familiar to his admirers, including Brahms' "Tragic" Overture, Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin" Suite, Walter Piston's Fourth Symphony and Saint-Saens' Symphony No. 3, in C minor, Op. 78.

Last night, as a rousing climax to the Center's day-long "Tanglewood on Parade," Arthur Fiedler and the famed Boston Pops Orchestra invaded the sprawling campus and straightway proceeded to knock the props from under every staid convention known to the Festival grounds and its environs. Whistles blew, sirens honked, cymbals crashed, and an audience of over 10,000 competed with the furor on stage by going into systerical cheers and applause at the slightest provocation.

Madcap Numbers

And there were ripe reasons for the demonstrations of approval. Mr. Fiedler and his orchestra—consisting in the main of members from the Boston Symphony Orchestra—had selected for their program a series of mapcap numbers rivaling a circus in their din, variety and feverish high spirits. Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever," with the piccolos and brasses called upon to stand during their solos, started it off, and in rapid proliferation came Offenbach's "Galte Parisienne," Ravel's Bolero, and Antic Pot-Pourri by Hayman of myriad tunes from TV commercials and an arrangement of Gillette's "Look Sharp Be Sharp" refrain. Separating these pieces were a host of encores—E. Strauss' "Fast Track," "Fernando's Hideaway" and "The Glow-worn Turns"—which for sheer looniness are not likely to find anywhere an equal.

The beauty of it all was the vast abandon with which the pieces were played. No sooner had it begun, than the concert became a kind of symphonic hoe-down, with percussion cannonades and brass assaults to stir the dead. It made little difference to Mr. Fiedler and his crew whether Ravel or Ajax the Foaming Cleanser was the topic of the moment—they were all dealt with lustily, garishly, with an ear for the spectacular. Accepted in that spirit, the concert proved a hilarious venture into those regions of spoofing that vanish when the summer pop season draws to an end.

The first half of last night's concert was devoted to performances of Bizet's Symphony in C and the final scene from Strauss' "Salome," with Thomas Schippers conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Brenda Lewis as soloist. Mr. Schippers' reading emerged somewhat sensationalized, and he harried the great little work with rhythmic accents and tempos unnatural to it; but, for the most, it was a powerful performance and a gripping one. Equally stunning, though far more appropriate, was the conductor's entrance into the morbid and neurotic realms of the Strauss opera, where Mr. Schippers pulled such blazing and luminous sonorities from the orchestra that they all but swamped Miss Lewis' solo line. When she could be heard, however, it was apparent that her voice has increased in size and quality, that her pitch is neat as a pin, and that her artistry grows rapidly with the hours.

But it was, in the final analysis, really Mr. Fiedler's night. Before he began, Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith was given a plaque honoring her farsightedness, twenty years ago, in starting a music series destined to evolve into the Tanglewood Festival. And after Mr. Fiedler concluded his barnstorming, a few die-hard conservatives in the audience were seen turning faint and grasping the chairs for assistance. No wonder, It was quite a night.

THE NEW YORK TIMES,

PRIZES AWARDED AT FETE IN LENOX

Aaron Copland Officiates as Students of 6-Week Course Get Tuitions and Money

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 14—This was prize day for the Berkshire Music Center. Although there are no credits, degrees or examinations at the end of the six-week course at Tanglewood, a number of awards are available for outstanding students. These were presented this afternoon by Aaron Copland during the intermission of a concert by the student orchestra.

The newly established Kousevitzky Memorial Scholarship for conductors, financed by contributions from the people of the Berkshire area, was presented jointly to Samuel Krachmalnick of New York and Paul Vermel, young Frenchman now living in New York. The present value of the award is $250, but as the scholarship reaches its $15,000 goal, the stipend will increase.

Tiberius Klausner, 22-year-old violinist born in Hungary, received the $250 Jascha Heifetz award. Camilla Heller of Appleton, Wis., and Evalyn Steinbeck of Brooklyn, N. Y., shared the $200 Gregor Piatigorsky Prize for a 'cellist.

The Serge Koussevitzky Composition Prize of $250, presented by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, went to Robert Barney Childs of Reno, Nev. Mr. Childs was represented on this afternoon's program by the second movement of his First Symphony. A special Koussevitzky Composition Prize was given to Michael Sahl of New York.

1953 Winner Return

The Wechsler Commission of $300, awarded by Samuel Wechsler, a former Tanglewood student, was presented to Raymond Wilding-White, now of Boston. Last year's Wechsler Commission winner, Juan Oreggo-Salas of Santiago, Chile, returned this year with the score he composed. This piece, a sextet for clarinet, piano and string quartet, will be performed at tomorrow morning's final student chamber music concert.

Other prize winners this summer were:

Catherine Dufford, oboist, of Evansville, Ind.—The Selly A. Eisemann Scholarship of $150.

Phyllis Murphy of Bement, Ill., soprano—the Carlotta M. Dreyfus Scholarship of $150.

Allyn Ferguson of San Jose, Calif., pianist and composer, and Bruce Klingbell of Bay City, Mich., 'cellist—tuition scholarships from the Anne M. Gannett fund of the National Federation of Music Clubs.

Lois Lenstrohm of Reading, Pa., amateur study group—the Harden Scholarship awarded through the Wyomissing (Pa.) Institute.

Katherine Towns of Buechel, Ky., choral student—the Louisville (Ky.) Philharmonic chorus scholarship.

Myrna Bressick of Miami, Fla., opera department—Miami Opera Guild scholarship.

Ribert Simpson of Princeton, N. J., opera department — the Music Study club of Newark and Oranges scholarship.

Mary L. Dodge, University City, Mo., violist—women's association of the St. Louis Symphony Society competition.

William Keith Rogers of Charlottetown, P. E. I., composer—Canadian Government overseas scholarship.

Stefan Grove of Capetown, South Africa, and Mr. Childs—Margaret Lee Crofts scholarships for tuition.

John Kennedy of Huntington, L. I., composer; Yecheskel Rasiel of Tel Aviv, Israel, violist, and Mr. Klausner, violinist—Koussevizky Music Foundation tuition grants.

It was announced today that the Tanglewood revolving scholarship fund has benefited to the extent of $7,850 from the Wednesday night chamber music series, thanks not only to the attendance but also to the contribution of services by Zino Francescatti, Claudio Arrau, William Kroll, Ruth Posselt and Joseph De Pasquale.

There was one amusing footnote to last night's "Tanglewood On Parade" festivities that became known today. The winners of the main door prizes were Marion Schotten of Ludlow, who received a Victor phonograph, and Roberta Goldberg of Malden, who won a General Electric refrigerator. Afterwards, when they were posing for photographs they discovered that Miss Schotten had a phonograph and no refrigerator and Miss Goldberg a refrigerator but no phonograph. They swapped prizes on the spot

SCHOLARSHIP WINNERS: Samuel Krachmalnick, right, and Paul Vermel, both of New York, joint victors in the Koussevitzky Memorial scholarship competition, with Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky at the Berkshire Music Center. The young conductors, who led the student orchestra in Tanglewood concerts this season, were chosen by Aaron Copland yesterday.

[27]

BERLIOZ REQUIEM ENDS LENOX FETE

Munch Conducts Augmented Orchestra in Climax to the Season at Tanglewood

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

Special to The New York Times.

TENOR: David Poleri, who sang in yesterday's performance of the Berlioz Requiem at Tanglewood, Mass. The concert concluded the Berkshire Music Festival there.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 15—The prime subject of this summer's Berkshire Festival has been Berlioz. For the climax and conclusion of the six-week event at Tanglewood this afternoon, Charles Munch conducted the French composer's Requiem.

Not many works could provide a nobler peroration for any festival. There are a grandeur and sublimity in this Requiem that seem breath-taking to most of us earth-bound mortals. Berlioz' vision at times is as apocalyptic as Michelangelo's in "The Last Judgment."

Mr. Munch, one of the great interpreters of Berlioz in our time, has immersed himself in this music, and he is worthy to deal with it. He conducted a performance today that had the sweep and the tenderness, the pity and the majesty that Berlioz poured into it.

Choirs Augment Orchestra

Mr. Munch had large forces at his disposal. There was, to begin with, the full Boston Symphony Orchestra. At the sides there were four brass choirs, in all an added contingent of more than thirty men.

Then there was the Festival Choir drawn from the students who have been at the Berkshire Music Center this summer. From near-by Springfield came that city's Orchestra Chorus, of which Alexander Leslie is the conductor.

The massed choruses were prepared by Hugh Ross and James Aliferis of the center's staff. They sang with the cohesion of a group that might have been working together for years.

In the "Sanctus" David Poleri was the tenor soloist. Mr. Poleri has one of the fattest tenor voices around these days, and he was in the vein today. He kept under strict rein his tendency to press too hard on the fortissimos, but when he let the voice ring out it had a rich fullness.

It was a performance to remember. When credit has been given to the various elements one must return to Mr. Munch, the commanding figure of the occasion. He gave the interpretation its pace and shape. He was its heart.

Biggs is Organ Soloist

At last night's concert Mr. Munch conducted a program that included Brahms' "Tragic" Overture, Ravel's "Tonneau de Couperin," Walter Piston's Fourth symphony (and it was good and wise to have an attractive piece by an American composer on the program) and Saint-Saëns' resounding Symphony No. 3 in C minor, with which the conductor, orchestra and the organ soloist, E. Power Biggs, scored a tour de force.

The overcast skies today held down the closing concert's audience. There were nearly 9,000 here this afternoon, and it speaks well for their taste and determination that neither rain nor fog could keep them from their appointment with Berlioz. Last night when the weather was fine, there were more than 10,000 on hand. All told, Tanglewood played host to more than 135,000 paying customers this summer.

Before saying farewell to Tanglewood, it is worth mentioning the final student chamber music concert, which took place in the Theatre Concert Hall this morning. The score, written as a result of last year's Wechsler commission, was performed. It brought to light an enormously gifted young composer, Juan Orrego-Salas, of Santiago, Chile.

His sextet for clarinet, string quartet and piano is an ambitious work, more than thirty minutes long. But its resourcefulness and vitality are the notable things about it, not its length. This composer, who stdied here several years ago, seems to have what it takes to be a composer—ideas of his own, an individuality, and a deep well of feeling.

NY Times
Aug 16/54'

Aug 16/54

THE BOSTON DAILY GLOBE

Final Tanglewood Concert Pays Tribute to Koussevitsky

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, Aug. 15—The 17th Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra ended here in the music shed at Tanglewood this afternoon with a splendid—also a stupendous—performance of the Requiem of Hector Berlioz.

Charles Munch conducted; the tenor soloist was David Poleri, and the huge choral forces consisted of the Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross and James Aliferis, and the Springfield Chorus, prepared by Alexander Leslie.

The performance was in memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitsky, and a photograph of him fittingly adorned the title page of the program.

The Berlioz Requiem is, in its vast and portentous way, partly an electrifying show, with its extra brass of four groups for the tuba mirum and rex tremendae.

It is also, since Berlioz was an artist of peculiar imagination and intensity as well as a man of complications, a religious masterpiece of deep feeling.

Mr. Munch, unerringly a conductor to comprehend these blended elements, makes the most of all of them. The result is a musical manifestation which both excites you and touches your heart.

Like certain other masterworks created in homage to the dead, the Berlioz Requiem is a poetic expression in a highly organized tonal structure that unmistakably depicts the deprivation of life and as compellingly intimates the unassailable continuity of some form of life eternal. More need hardly be said.

More Than Technical Excellence

Today all upon the stage of the music shed seemed at their best. Mr. Munch's conducting showed all his finest qualities, and a controlled passion not always in evidence.

The orchestra played superbly, not alone with fine technical ensemble, but with a string tone rich and luminous and not in the least dry.

Mr. Poleri's voicing of the tenor solo was beautiful in sound and admirable in the churchly devotion with which he sang it. The choruses lacked nothing of clarity, good balance and willing response.

In the music shed Berlioz' directions that the added brass bands be placed at the four points of the compass, could hardly be met. Two of the groups were placed at extreme left and right, stage front, the others a little way into the auditorium, on either side.

The effect was not overwhelming (nor should it be, either, because of the open sides of the shed) but the arrangement served.

At the end the ovation was vociferous and sustained in which all shared. The applause was swelled by cheers. Mr. Munch singled out, as a special gesture, Leon Gorodetsky and Georges Fourel, who are retiring after a generation of service in the Boston Symphony.

Brahm's "Tragic"

The final Saturday night concert was a singularly satisfying one. It assembled Brahms' "Tragic" Overture (some very loud but dramatic tympani beats at the insistent demand of conductor Munch); Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin" which Mr. Munch and the orchestra do most excellently, though taking the prelude a little slower than I like to hear it; the Fourth Symphony of Walter Piston, which is dancy, juicy music of stature and distinction, and which won the composer, present in the audience, a hearty reception, and the C minor Symphony of Saint-Saens, which I believe will never have a finer interpretation than that by Mr. Munch. The organist for the latter was E. Power Biggs, and needless to say, his work was creditable.

The weather for this final day of the festival, was cold and rainy, thereby cutting down the audience to 8950. Ten thousand, four hundred persons were present Saturday night.

To continue with otherwise encouraging statistics, the total attendance for the six weeks of the festival was 135,775, and the total gross revenue $330,033 as against $311,600 in 1953 when the total attendance was 117,950.

This financial total breaks down in $11,274.25 paid admissions at rehearsals for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund; net benefit of $22,000 for the Berkshire Music Center from the annual "Tanglewood on Parade"; a net to the center of $7850 from the six chamber music concerts and a total in receipts for the Boston Symphony of $281,674.75.

Tanglewood Sets Turnout Record

LENOX, Aug. 15 (AP)—Tanglewood officials today reported that 135,775 persons attended the six-week Berkshire Music Festival, 16,000 more than last year's record turnout.

Today's final concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra attracted 8,950 persons, despite steady rain.

Conductor Charles Muench dedicated the concert as a memorial to his predecessor, the late Serge Koussevitzky, longtime Boston Symphony conductor, who founded the Berkshire Music Center, the school connected with Tanglewood.

A feature of the program was Berlioz's requiem with a chorus of 204 voices.

Springfield
Union
Aug 16/54

Festival Closes Honoring Memory of Koussevitsky

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. [illegible]—The 17th Berkshire Music Festival closed this afternoon with the traditional commemorative concert in memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, founder of the Berkshire Music Center and long-time conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Festival.

Today's concert attracted 8950 persons despite steady rain.

Spirit Still Felt

Tthe spirit of Dr. Koussevitzky is still felt here and it is eminently fitting that each year a great work be given in his memory. Today, Charles Munch, director of the Festival, chose to perform one of the greatest of all works, the "Requiem" by Hector Berlioz.

Had this performance been given under the aegis of Hollywood, it would have been characterized as "colossal," "stupendous". It was all of that, but it was something more. There was a wonderfully devout and reverential atmosphere, no matter how brilliant were the forces involved. There are few conductors who so thoroughly understand the Berlioz idiom as Charles Munch. The performance today was infinitely finer than given here two seasons ago.

The Festival chorus was augmented by members of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe choral group and it also included 50 members of the Springfield Symphony Chorus who had previously sung the mass under the direction of Dr. Alexander Leslie. It was a splendid chorus, capable of fine sonorities and equally effective lyric singing. We remember particularly the lovely singing of the male chorus in the "Quid Sum Miser" and the grace and delicacy of the unaccompanied prayer, in six parts, of the "Quarens Me." The "Tuba Mirum" and "Rex Tremendae" were magnificent, awe-inspiring in their intensity.

High Standard

The orchestral portions of the work were of the same high standard. The four brass choirs and full orchestra rose to great heights while meeting every demand of contrast. There was a breadth and sweep to Mr. Munch's reading and a sincere feeling for the character of the work. David Poleri sang the tenor solo with the artistry which we have come to expect from him.

So this session of the Berkshire Music Festival has come to a magnificent close. There is always an interest in attendance figures. This is the first six-week season and it has included 24 concerts divided into six chamber music concerts, six chamber-orchestra concerts, six Saturday night and six Sunday afternoon concerts by the full orchestra. Total attendance at these 24 concerts has been 135,775. Total attendance for 1953 was 117,950. Total money received amounted to $330,033. There will be a full report of attendance and receipts at a later date, but it is apparent that the six-week [illegible] was worthwhile and probably will be continued.

BERLIOZ REQUIEM ENDS LENOX FETE

Munch Conducts Augmented Orchestra in Climax to the Season at Tanglewood

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 15—The prime subject of this summer's Berkshire Festival has been Berlioz. For the climax and conclusion of the six-week event at Tanglewood this afternoon, Charles Munch conducted the French composer's Requiem.

Not many works could provide a nobler peroration for any festival. There are a grandeur and sublimity in this Requiem that seem breath-taking to most of us earth-bound mortals. Berlioz' vision at times is as apocalyptic as Michelangelo's in "The Last Judgment."

Mr. Munch, one of the great interpreters of Berlioz in our time, has immersed himself in this music, and he is worthy to deal with it. He conducted a performance today that had the sweep and the tenderness, the pity and the majesty that Berlioz poured into it.

Choirs Augment Orchestra

Mr. Munch had large forces at his disposal. There was, to begin with, the full Boston Symphony Orchestra. At the sides there were four brass choirs, in all an added contingent of more than thirty men.

Then there was the Festival Choir drawn from the students who have been at the Berkshire Music Center this summer. From near-by Springfield came that city's Orchestra Chorus, of which Alexander Leslie is the conductor.

The massed choruses were prepared by Hugh Ross and James Aliferis of the center's staff. They sang with the cohesion of a group that might have been working together for years.

In the "Sanctus" David Poleri was the tenor soloist. Mr. Poleri has one of the fattest tenor voices around these days, and he was in the vein today. He kept under strict rein his tendency to press too hard on the fortissimos, but when he let the voice ring out it had a rich fullness.

It was a performance to remember. When credit has been given to the various elements one must return to Mr. Munch, the commanding figure of the occasion. He gave the interpretation its pace and shape. He was its heart.

Biggs is Organ Soloist

At last night's concert Mr. Munch conducted a program that included Brahms' "Tragic" Overture, Ravel's "Tonneau de Couperin," Walter Piston's Fourth symphony (and it was good and wise to have an attractive piece by an American composer on the program) and Saint-Saëns' resounding Symphony No. 3 in C minor, with which the conductor, orchestra and the organ soloist, E. Power Biggs, scored a tour de force.

The overcast skies today held down the closing concert's audience. There were nearly 9,000 here this afternoon, and it speaks well for their taste and determination that neither rain nor fog could keep them from their appointment with Berlioz. Last night when the weather was fine, there were more than 10,000 on hand. All told, Tanglewood played host to more than 135,000 paying customers this summer.

Before saying farewell to Tanglewood, it is worth mentioning the final student chamber music concert, which took place in the Theatre Concert Hall this morning. The score, written as a result of last year's Wechsler commission, was performed. It brought to light an enormously gifted young composer, Juan Orrego-Salas, of Santiago, Chile.

His sextet for clarinet, string quartet and piano is an ambitious work, more than thirty minutes long. But its resourcefulness and vitality are the notable things about it, not its length. This composer, who stdied here several years ago, seems to have what it takes to be a composer—ideas of his own, an individuality, and a deep well of feeling.

TENOR: David Poleri, who sang in yesterday's performance of the Berlioz Requiem at Tanglewood, Mass. The concert concluded the Berkshire Music Festival there.

NY Times
Aug 16/54

Aug 16/54

THE BOSTON DAILY GLOBE

Final Tanglewood Concert Pays Tribute to Koussevitsky

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, Aug. 15—The 17th Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra ended here in the music shed at Tanglewood this afternoon with a splendid—also a stupendous—performance of the Requiem of Hector Berlioz.

Charles Munch conducted; the tenor soloist was David Poleri, and the huge choral forces consisted of the Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross and James Aliferis, and the Springfield Chorus, prepared by Alexander Leslie.

The performance was in memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitsky, and a photograph of him fittingly adorned the title page of the program.

The Berlioz Requiem is, in its vast and portentous way, partly an electrifying show, with its extra brass of four groups for the tuba mirum and rex tremendae.

It is also, since Berlioz was an artist of peculiar imagination and intensity as well as a man of complications, a religious masterpiece of deep feeling.

Mr. Munch, unerringly a conductor to comprehend these blended elements, makes the most of all of them. The result is a musical manifestation which both excites you and touches your heart.

Like certain other masterworks created in homage to the dead, the Berlioz Requiem is a poetic expression in a highly organized tonal structure that unmistakably depicts the deprivation of life and as compellingly intimates the unassailable continuity of some form of life eternal. More need hardly be said.

More Than Technical Excellence

Today all upon the stage of the music shed seemed at their best. Mr. Munch's conducting showed all his finest qualities, and a controlled passion not always in evidence.

The orchestra played superbly, not alone with fine technical ensemble, but with a string tone rich and luminous and not in the least dry.

Mr. Poleri's voicing of the tenor solo was beautiful in sound and admirable in the churchly devotion with which he sang it. The choruses lacked nothing of clarity, good balance and willing response.

In the music shed Berlioz' directions that the added brass bands be placed at the four points of the compass, could hardly be met. Two of the groups were placed at extreme left and right, stage front, the others a little way into the auditorium, on either side.

The effect was not overwhelming (nor should it be, either, because of the open sides of the shed) but the arrangement served.

At the end the ovation was vociferous and sustained in which all shared. The applause was swelled by cheers. Mr. Munch singled out, as a special gesture, Leon Gorodetsky and Georges Fourel, who are retiring after a generation of service in the Boston Symphony.

Brahm's "Tragic"

The final Saturday night concert was a singularly satisfying one. It assembled Brahms' "Tragic" Overture (some very loud but dramatic tympani beats at the insistent demand of conductor Munch); Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin" which Mr. Munch and the orchestra do most excellentlv, though taking the prelude a little slower than I like to hear it; the Fourth Symphony of Walter Piston, which is dancy, juicy music of stature and distinction, and which won the composer, present in the audience, a hearty reception, and the C minor Symphony of Saint-Saens, which I believe will never have a finer interpretation than that by Mr. Munch. The organist for the latter was E. Power Biggs, and needless to say, his work was creditable.

The weather for this final day of the festival, was cold and rainy, thereby cutting down the audience to 8950. Ten thousand, four hundred persons were present Saturday night.

To continue with otherwise encouraging [illegible]tics, the total attendance [illegible] six weeks of the festival [illegible] the total gross rev[illegible] against $311,600 [illegible] attendan[illegible] This [illegible] in $11[illegible] rehea[illegible] orch[illegible] fit [illegible] Mu[illegible] "T[illegible] to[illegible]

Tanglewood Sets Turnout Record

LENOX, Aug. 15 (AP)—Tanglewood officials today reported that 135,775 persons attended the six-week Berkshire Music Festival, 16,000 more than last year's record turnout.

Today's final concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra attracted 8,950 persons, despite steady rain.

Conductor Charles Muench dedicated the concert as a memorial to his predecessor, the late Serge Koussevitzky, longtime Boston Symphony conductor, who founded the Berkshire Music Center, the school connected with Tanglewood.

A feature of the program was Berlioz's requiem with a chorus of 204 voices.

Springfield Union
Aug 16/54

Festival Closes Honoring Memory of Koussevitsky

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 15—The 17th Berkshire Music Festival closed this afternoon with the traditional commemorative concert in memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, founder of the Berkshire Music Center and long-time conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Festival.

Today's concert attracted 8950 persons despite steady rain.

Spirit Still Felt

Tthe spirit of Dr. Koussevitzky is still felt here and it is eminently fitting that each year a great work be given in his memory. Today, Charles Munch, director of the Festival, chose to perform one of the greatest of all works, the "Requiem" by Hector Berlioz.

Had this performance been given under the aegis of Hollywood, it would have been characterized as "colossal," "stupendous". It was all of that, but it was something more. There was a wonderfully devout and reverential atmosphere, no matter how brilliant were the forces involved. There are few conductors who so thoroughly understand the Berlioz idiom as Charles Munch. The performance today was infinitely finer than given here two seasons ago.

The Festival chorus was augmented by members of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe choral group and it also included 50 members of the Springfield Symphony Chorus who had previously sung the mass under the direction of Dr. Alexander Leslie. It was a splendid chorus, capable of fine sonorities and equally effective lyric singing. We remember particularly the lovely singing of the male chorus in the "Quid Sum Miser" and the grace and delicacy of the unaccompanied prayer, in six parts, of the "Quarens Me." The "Tuba Mirum" and "Rex Tremendae" were magnificent, awe-inspiring in their intensity.

High Standard

The orchestral portions of the work were of the same high standard. The four brass choirs and full orchestra rose to great heights while meeting every demand of contrast. There was a breadth and sweep to Mr. Munch's reading and a sincere feeling for the character of the work. David Poleri sang the only solo with the artistry which we have come to expect from him.

So this session of the Berkshire Music Festival has come to a magnificent close. There is always an interest in attendance figures. This is the first six-week season and it has included 24 concerts divided into six chamber music concerts, six chamber-orchestra concerts, six Saturday night and six Sunday afternoon concerts by the full orchestra. Total attendance at these 24 concerts has been 135,775. Total attendance for 1953 was 117,950. Total money received amounted to $330,033. There will be a full report of attendance and receipts at a later date, but it is apparent that the six-week season was worthwhile and probably will be continued.

NY Herald-Tribune Aug 16/54

Berkshire Festival Ends

Berlioz Requiem Mass Played for Koussevitzky

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 15.—The 1954 Berkshire Music Festival concluded this afternoon with Hector Berlioz' "Grande Messe des Morts (Requiem)," presented in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, and a work which should be made, by law, a mandatory choice for all large festival endings.

Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra were augmented by several hundred musicians to fill the demands of Berlioz' mammoth score. Four brass choirs, each consisting of over ten players, sat at strategic spots in the large Music Shed; the Tanglewood Chorus, enlarged by the addition of the Springfield Orchestra Chorus, was placed behind the orchestra, while flanks of percussion players lined the areas between.

After the intermission, David Poleri, the tenor soloist, sat by Mr. Munch's side. The whole presented — even before the opening measures—a pageant and spectacle as glorious to the eye as it later proved stunning to the ear.

"Colossal" Applies

The work itself is one of the few in history to which the mildewed epithet "colossal" is not inappropriately applied. It is huge in spirit, panoramic in outlook, long in length, massive in structure.

Not only are the performing forces overwhelming and grandiose, the nature of the Requiem, its expressive fabric is also brave and trumpeting. And yet, in opposition to the general view that Berlioz is a wizard only of the loud and the raucous, the Requiem Mass is most frequently devoted to a species of quiet reverence that is equally, if not more, ennobling than all the racket and rumpus created by the combined ensembles charging at full vigor.

Somber, Austere

Fully two-thirds of it is of a nature all somber and austere, and even at crucial moments the composer's instrumental and vocal coloring is designed to avoid blatancy for its own sake. A good deal of the scoring, in fact, is a bit grey, as benefits a solemn occasion. To emphasize this condition, the Requiem has stretches of bleakness and muted lament that are almost a sonorous incarnation of despair.

All of these circumstances are glowingly understood by Mr. Munch and the matter of his performance, therefore, is a simple one to contend with. No one is going to conduct the work unless he is positive well in advance that he can wrench from the Requiem its full meaning and substance.

Impressive Closing

This Mr. Munch can and does. When assisted by a chorus trained to the hilt, as was Tanglewood's, to ring out the Latin text with magnitude and color, little stands in the way of Berlioz' stated intent. Combined, additionally, with the perfection of ensemble available to the Boston men and the vibrant singing of David Poleri, the result is bound to be consistently impressive.

Impressive indeed was yesterday's closing concert. Eight thousand nine hundred fifty listeners—the small number in a dismal rain—found it so. For their response to Mr. Munch's extraordinary job was akin in its clamor to that of the judgment day.

Last night's program, also conducted by Mr. Munch, consisted of selections familiar to Boston Symphony admirers including Brahms' Tragic Overture, Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Coueprin" Suite, Walter Piston's Symphony No. 4 and Saint-Saens' Symphony No. 3 in C Minor.

At the opening measures of the first number, in fact throughout its entire course, Mr. Munch had not yet hit his stride. Under his direction, the Brahms overture was rather coarse and explosive, with its tragic elements dissolved in an aura of pomp and circumstance. Once done with Brahms, however, he plunged headlong into the remaining pieces and delivered them with a biting zest that characterizes Mr. Munch's way with music dear to his fancy.

A Personal "Tombeau"

Aavel's "Tombeau" was presented in a highly personal and mannered reading that held its rewards in the reflection of a genuine Old World elegance and charm. From measure to measure it spoetry remained ever intact, while its bittersweet melodies were held out for fond inspection like so many charms on a bracelet. And while greater instrumental precision has been know in other Boston Symphony performes, few have captured the essence of a work with so little effort.

Mr. Piston's Fourth Symphony is a fine piece, his finest, I suspect, to date. Craft, naturally, there is in abundance, since the composer's reputation has long rested upon his ability to deal smartly with tone. But the Fourth is no mere artisan's piece. Its first movement is warmly spirited, gentle and playful; its second bounding and rhythmically vital. Even its third movement manages to remain engagingly introspective without brooding or turning sour. And the close is a big clangorous finale that brings the symphony to a whooping, forecful end. Mr. Piston, himself, was on hand to accept the generous ovation from an audience estimated at well over 10,000.

Saint-Saens' Third Symphony, which brought the evening to a roaring conclusion, is a warhorse that Mr. Munch knows how to ride. It is a display piece, neither more nor less, and for its display qualities does the conductor read it. Thus heard, the symphony becomes a study in rushing sonorities and unabashed sentiment. There is nothing small about it, nothing petty or mean. As read by Charles Munch, the work is a vast, pulsing musical organism with a life and a heart of its own.

Boston Post Aug 16/54.

Music in Review

By TUCKER KEISER

TANGLEWOOD, Aug. 15—Despite a misty, chilly day the final concert in the Berkshire Festival drew an audience of 9000 to hear a performance of the Berlioz "Requiem," a fitting climactic work in the Berlioz sesqui-centennial this summer here at Tanglewood.

Not as many listeners as is usual were seated on the grass, but the weather did not dampen the enthusiasm in the reception of thie wonderful composition.

The stereophonic "Requiem" requires a vast number of performers. There must be a tenor soloist, a huge chorus, an augmented orchestra, and four brass bands. The latter were placed one at each end of the stage and on the right and left sides of the concourse. The festival chorus was assisted by members of the Springfield orchestra chorus, trained by Alexander Leslie, and the soloist was the popular young singer, David Poleri, who has made quite a hit this season with Tanglewood audiences.

Though Berlioz demands so large a performing apparatus, the extended work is a model of classical proportions in its writing. Only in the "Dies Irae" and in the "Lacrymosa" does he employ all of the performers and this is used not so much for a shocking effect but to give a sense of power and awe in underlining the drama of the text.

The composer does not use all of the traditional text normally a part of the "grande messe des morts." He is concerned primarily with the musical values, and in consequence, repeats many passages to round out his formal scheme.

Though on occasion the "Requiem" has been used as a part of worship, the piece is not really religious in mood. It's feeling is theatrical rather than pious.

Mr. Munch led his forces with that wonderful skill which he always brings to a score of his favorite composer. The chorus responded splendidly to the conductor's demands, and at times achieved great beauty of tone. However, it was unfortunate that during the "Dies Irae," Mr. Munch allowed one pierceing trumpet to dominate the music and mar the otherwise overwhelming effect which Berlioz makes here.

But then, Mr. Munch has a great love for this penetrating sound and he, perhaps, found it stirring.

The performance of the "Requiem" was dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky, that famed conductor whose imprint remains in every department at Tanglewood.

Summer Theatres

NEWTOWN, CONN
BEE
7/2/54

Music

The Berkshire String Quartet will give Sunday afternoon concerts at Music Mountain, Falls Village, July 4 through September 5. The quartet consists of Urico Rossi, first violin; Albert Lazan, second violin; David Dawson, viola, and Fritz Magg, 'cello.

Connecticut Pops Concert at Fairfield University field, Friday evening, July 9, with Dorothy Kirsten, Metropolitan Opera soprano, and the orchestra conducted by Milton Katims, conductor of the NBC Symphony.

The Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., presents chamber music Wednesdays at 8:30 p.m., chamber orchestra Fridays at 8:30 p.m. and the Boston Symphony Orchestra Saturdays at 8:30 p.m. and Sundays at 2:30 p.m. Tickets on sale at the box office, telephone Lenox 600.

Wednesday, July 7, Claudio Arrau, piano, and The Bel Arte Trio: Beethoven, String Trio in G, Op. 9, No. 1; Piano Sonatas, Op. 79, 110, 57 ("Appassionata").

Friday, July 9: Bach, Brandenburg Concertos, Nos. 1, 2, 3, 5, 6, piano solo by Lukas Foss. Charles Munch, conductor.

Saturday, July 10: Berlioz, "The Damnation of Faust", with the Harvard Glee Club, Radcliff Choral Society and soloists. Charles Munch, conductor.

Sunday, July 11: Beethoven, Overture to "Leonore", No. 3; Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor") with Claudio Arrau, soloist; Symphony No. 5. Pierre Monteux, conductor.

Wednesday, July 14, The Albeneri Trio: Brahms, Trio in B, Op. 8; Martinu, Trio in D Minor; Beethoven, Trio in B flat, Op. 97 ("Archduke").

Friday, July 16: Bach, Cantata No. 93, "Wer nur den lieben Gott", Hugh Ross conducting; Suites Nos. 1 and 4, Charles Munch conducting.

Saturday, July 17: Debussy, Excerpts from "St. Sebastian", and "La Mer"; Franck, "Les Djinns", for piano and orchestra with Vera Franceschi as soloist, and Symphony in D Minor, Pierre Monteux, conductor.

Sunday, July 18, Debussy, "Iberia"; Copland, Piano Concerto with Leo Smit as soloist; Berlioz, "Fantastic Symphony". Charles Munch, conductor.

MINOT, N. D.
NEWS & OPTIC REPORTER
JUN 17 1954

George Sokolsky

Right Of Caesar's Ghost

I WAS SITTING in the theater at Tanglewood in the Berkshires — listening to Bach's Brandenburg concertos, five of the six of them. When I listen to Bach, I cannot think of right or left, or left of center, or any of the silly distinctions which those who are unmoved by the eternities enjoy as an exercise in adolescent intellectualism. Surely it matters little how excited one becomes about the ephemera of personalities. Hitler, Roosevelt and Stalin are dead, but history knows no end.

From behind me, I heard a pleasant feminine voice say, "There is George Sokolsky." I felt that fame had at last come to me and that I was as great as Adolphe Menjou with whom one cannot walk a sidewalk without becoming a neon sign. However, my pride was soon dissipated, for a strident, masculine voice spoke up to say:

"Now my evening is spoiled. He is to the right of Caesar's ghost."

My mind went back to Bach and I never even looked at the woman with the pleasant voice nor at the man with the strident voice. Afterward, when all the Brandenburgs were over, I thought that I might have asked him whether he wanted to take the Fifth Amendment but it was unnecessary. It was sufficiently tough for him to see one who was to the right of Caesar's ghost. It so spoiled his evening that he forgot Bach and remembered only Sokolsky. How horrible!

* * * *

PERSONALLY, I have had no acquaintance with Caesar's ghost and know nothing about his politics or sociology. Perhaps in heaven or hell, Caesar has learned more than his ghost is willing to talk about. In Shakespeare's version, the ghost is not very impressive and I had forgotten him.

Nevertheless, I could not help wondering how right one can be when he is to the right of Caesar's ghost. What does such a person believe to be true? For after all, what was the truth about man in the days of Julius Caesar is true today. The natural law is timeless, unchanging, permanent, and holds for Greek as well as Hebrew as St. Paul so wisely said it. I should imagine, although I would not know, that the essential difference between Julius Caesar and mine adversary is that Caesar wore his head bald.

Julius Caesar was a Roman politician who was scheming to turn Rome from a republic into an empire with himself upon a regal seat. Thrice he refused the crown, but he undoubtedly was fixing to get it at the right time and in the right way. There was a skinny fellow by the name of Cassius who was conspiring to undo Caesar's conspiracy. He undoubtedly involved the innocent Brutus in this deal, so that Brutus assassinated Caesar who was his close friend. This kind of a double double-cross has not been unusual in history, although nobody ever can tell us why Brutus would not have done more for Rome as Caesar's prime minister.

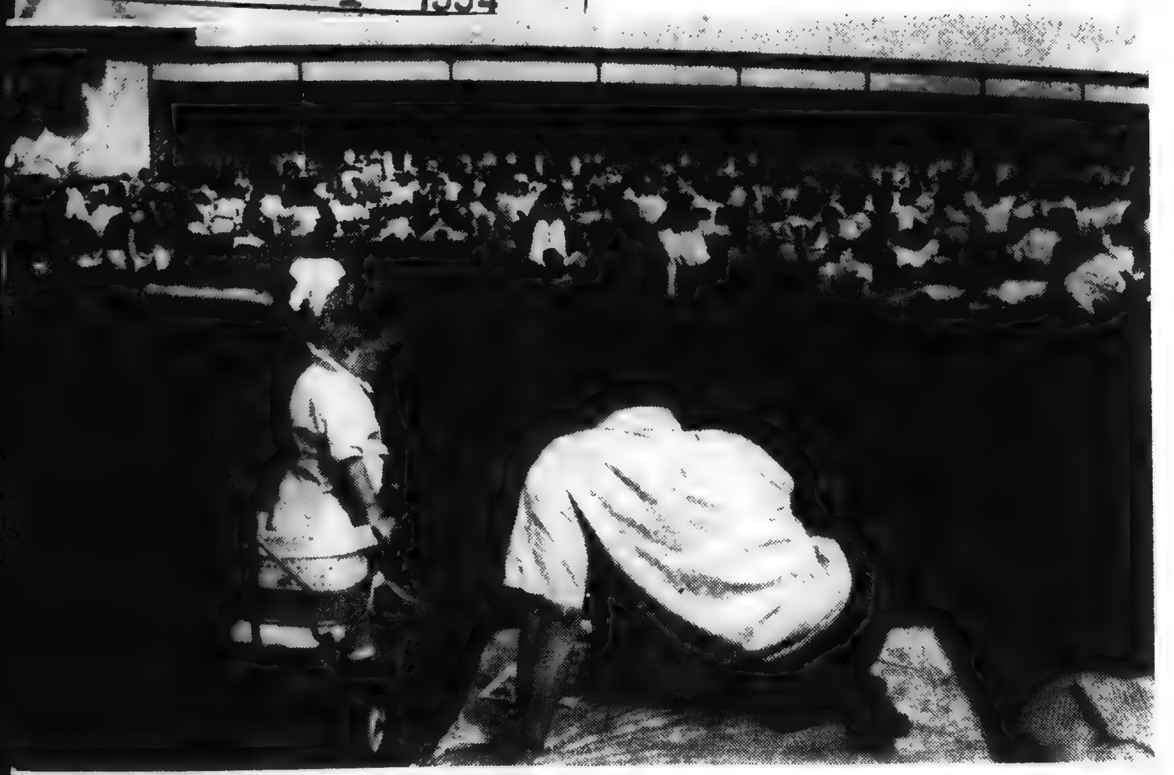
* * * *

SHAKESPEARE has Brutus say: ". . . not that I loved Caesar less, but that I loved Rome more. Had you rather Caesar were living, and die all slaves, than that Caesar were dead, to live all free men? As Caesar loved me, I weep for him; as he was fortunate, I rejoice at it; as he was valiant, I honour him; but, as he was ambitious, I slew him. . ." It sounds like the United States Senate.

Anyhow, there was a politician called Mark Antony who saw his chance and took it. He delivered a speech which would have been a credit to William Jennings Bryan, which is not surprising as my version was ghost-written by William Shakespeare who knew the business. Mark Antony got into trouble because of a dame in Egypt, and he was not the first to do that.

What I am trying to discover is how all this puts me to the right of Caesar's ghost. If the strident gentleman had said that I was a muddy thinker, as someone did in Denver, because I believe that Karl Marx's postulates on sociology, biology and history cannot be substantiated, I might have asked him to a pot of tea, to discuss the 'isms, but when he involves me with Caesar's ghost, I must decline to admit guilt by association. I never met the ghastly gentleman and cannot give testimony concerning him. (Copyright 1954)

CUE
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JUL 1 - 1954



SHED at Tanglewood seats 6,000 music lovers, but another 3,000 sit on the beautiful hill-top lawn and listen to the Boston Symphony orchestra in outdoor comfort

CULTURE is dispensed in informal manner at festival. 'Cellist Piatogorsky (left) shows an inquiring visitor some pointers

Mountains of Music

THE BERKSHIRES ARE MECCA FOR MUSIC LOVERS, OFFERING EVERYTHING FROM BACH TO BECHET

by Emory Lewis

ONCE upon a time, cultivated Americans regularly journeyed abroad to attend the summer music festivals. Now the process is being reversed. A large quota of Europeans each summer make a pilgrimage to Massachusetts' Berkshire mountains to attend the Tanglewood Music Festival. Today, the Tanglewood festival is, thanks to the pioneering efforts of the late Serge Koussevitsky, one of the most impressive assemblies of musical talent anywhere in the world.

For music in the mountains, the New Yorker need only turn his automobile radiator northward and drive—in four hours—to the gently rolling Berkshires. Here the traffic-bewildered, heat-bothered city dweller will discover quiet, tree-shaded villages like Great Barrington, Lenox and Stockbridge, where in an earlier age vacationist Herman Melville wrote "Moby Dick" and his friend Nathaniel Hawthorne completed "The House of Seven Gables."

The concerts at Tanglewood, a lovely old New England estate atop a hill and overlooking a lake, begin July 7th, end August 15th. Accent this season will be on the works of 19th-century French composer Hector Berlioz. This is fitting, for within the past decade, Berlioz has come in for a sweeping reappraisal. An earlier judgment that his works were merely the empty rhetoric of a 19th-century romantic has been discarded, and he now looms as one of the authentic music masters of the past century.

Highlight of the Tanglewood season will be the presentation July 10th of Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," never before attempted at the festival. Baritone Martial Singher, tenor David Poleri, bass-baritone Donald Gramm and soprano Eleanor Steber will be the soloists. This enormous master-work, which calls for a large chorus, will have Charles Munch conducting the full, 104-piece Boston Symphony, assisted by the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society, recently returned from their first transcontinental tour. Other Berlioz events include the "Romeo and Juliet" July 31st; the Overture to "Benevenuto Cellini," "Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans," "Summer Nights" for Soprano (Eleanor Steber) and the "Te Deum"—all on August 7th. The above are all part of the Saturday night series in the Shed.

On the Sunday afternoon series at 2:30, the festival has scheduled Berlioz' "Fantastic Symphony" July 18th; the Overture to "Beatrice and Benedick" and the "Harold in Italy Symphony" July 25th. "Harold in Italy," one of Berlioz' masterpieces, will employ William Primrose in the viola solo. Once you have heard Mr. Primrose perform this moving work, it is difficult to imagine any other interpretation. August 15th, conductor Munch and the Boston Symphony will present Berlioz' "Requiem."

This year, Tanglewood has added another innovation to its crowded music schedule. A series of Wednesday chamber music concerts will be open to the public, along with the usual Friday evening chamber orchestra sessions in the Theatre-Concert Hall. The distinguished programs include pianist Claudio Arrau and violinist Zino Francescatti, as well as the Griller and the Kroll String Quartets. The opera department will include a presentation of Aaron Copland's "The Tender Land" (which had its premiere at the City Center during the past season) and "L'Amfiparnaso," a madrigal opera composed in the 16th-century by Orazio Veechi. The opera will be given its first staged performance in America.

Tanglewood is, of course, also a summer school, with some 400 students, selected from 2,000 applicants from all over the world. The graduates, who include Leonard Bernstein and Lukas Foss, hold down jobs with every major orchestra in the nation. Numerous instrumental, choral and operatic performances of the school are open by invitation to members of the Society of Friends of the Center. A contribution to the support of the Center constitutes membership, and by such a contribution, the Tanglewood visitor can attend concerts daily. Another little-known fact: you can attend rehearsals of the Boston Symphony for $1.

You may take a picnic lunch onto the grounds. Many people picnic on the lawns surrounding the Shed. You can either bring or buy your lunch there.

Not all the music in the Berkshires is at Tanglewood. The mountains reverberate with other diverse music. At the close of the Tanglewood season, the New York Pro Musica Antiqua, from August 18th to August 29th, will present a six-concert festival of Renaissance music at the Town Hall in Lenox.

Just 30 miles from Tanglewood, near Falls Village, Connecticut, is Music Mountain. The chamber music concerts here, on a grassy hilltop surrounded by 115 acres of forest, have retained some of the intimate character reminiscent of the early days of Tanglewood. Season after season, in a long clapboard shed whose soft wood panelling has the resonance of a fine stringed instrument, the Berkshire String Quartet plays Mozart, Shubert and Brahms, as well as a spate of contemporary composers. Tab for the Sunday afternoon concerts is $2 per person. If you wish, you can listen on the lawn in the Tanglewood manner.

A half-hour's walk from Tanglewood is Music Inn, where from August 15th through September 7th the tone poems and concerti get blue and gutty. A Round-table of Jazz is conducted by Professor Marshall Stearns, includes such teachers as composer Henry Cowell (who employs the jazz idiom in his longhair music) and blues singer "Ma" Yancey. Aaron Copland, who conducts the Tanglewood Music School, is a frequent student here.

For those who want to make their own music, there's the Folk Music Workshop at the Birchwood Barn in Lenox. Sponsored by the New York Folk-Guitar Club, this group teaches the folk guitar, the classic guitar and the recorder in one-week sessions beginning July 5th. And they hold concerts by students at Sedgwick Hall in Lenox.

How to get to the Berkshires? Follow the American Automobile Association recommendations: take the Taconic State Parkway to the Millbrook turnoff, then follow Route 44 to Canaan. Route 7 in Canaan will take you to Lenox or wherever your particular inn may be.

There's a hotel around every bend, so we can only mention a few here. Call CUE's Information Department for further details. Elm Court, a luxurious former estate, is a monument of what happened when a Vanderbilt (Emily) married a Sloane (W. & J.). It's elegant and somewhat expensive. For the young and frenetic, Eastover in Lenox is more appropriate. Once a banker's estate, it is now an athletic factory equipped with swimming pool, golf range, tennis court, archery range, ball diamond. The Berkshire Inn in Great Barrington and the Red Lion Inn are a bit more staid, and they offer excellent accommodations.

For good old mountain music—whether it be do-si-do or Bessie Smith or Berlioz—the Berkshires are the place to go.

This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION
JUL 5 - 1954

TANGLEWOOD OPENS

Lenox, July 4 — On this, the 150th anniversary of the birth of Nathaniel Hawthorne who wrote Tanglewood Tales the opening exercises of the 12th season of the Berkshire Music Center were held in the theater-concert hall beneath the stately pines of Tanglewood — internationally-famous home of the Berkshire Festival.

Dr. Perry Presides

Introducing the galaxy of noted musicians and faculty members to the gathering of students and distinguished guests, Dr. Lewis D. Perry, native of neighboring Williamstown and a trustee of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, recognized the honored presence of Gertrude Robinson Smith, godmother of the Berkshire Music Festival. She was one of the originators of this gigantic enterprise in the musical world which she saw launched at the Dan Hanna Farm under a huge tent, later moved to the grounds of the old Vanderbilt Estate now known as Foxhollow School and later onto the grounds of Tanglewood. Interesting is the fact that the theater-concert hall in which she sat today was the site where the first concert at Tanglewood was likewise staged under a circus tent.

Only recently returning from Paris where she has made her residence, Mrs. Smith renewed acquaintances with Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, Hugh Ross and the popular George Judd, manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who is to retire following this year's Berkshire Festival season. Another distinguished guest in attendance this afternoon was Charles-Roux, the French consul-general.

As the retiring chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, Dr. Perry announced $30,000 gifts from Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr. The center is to receive from the Rockefeller Foundation $15,000 this year, $10,000 next year and $5000 three years from now in order to maintain this world renowned school—the only such conducted by an orchestra anywhere.

Introducing Charles Munch, director of the Berkshire Music Center and conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Dr. Perry lauded the tremendous qualities of leadership and great belief in youth as displayed by Munch and acknowledged him as the greatest conductor in the world today.

Welcoming the student body—400 strong—with representation from such foreign countries as Cuba, Japan, Korea, Holland, Greece, South Africa, Venezuela, France and Israel—Dr. Munch said in part:

"Music, more than any other art, contributes directly to the happiness of human beings. Its power lies in the fact that it reveals to us beauties that we cannot find in any other sphere.

"In the history of humanity, spiritual values are the most precious gift that is passed on from generation to generation. It is only by protecting and supporting spiritual values that we can find the road to salvation. What does it profit a man, to gain the whole world and forfeit his soul?

"Never forget that the aim of music is above all to elevate us beyond our miserable human conditions. Music will reward us a hundredfold if we try to hear its message with all our hearts and to listen to it with a kind of wonder reflected in the clear and innocent eyes of a child dazzled by the lights of a Christmas tree."

Concluding the program was the singing of Randall Thompson's Alleluah by the chorus made up of the student body of the Music Center under the direction of Hugh Ross. Following was a reception and tea for guests, faculty members and students in the formal gardens adjacent to the theater-concert hall.

CUE
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JUL 1 - 1954

SHED at Tanglewood seats 6,000 music lovers, but another 3,000 sit on the beautiful hill-top lawn and listen to the Boston Symphony orchestra in outdoor comfort

CULTURE is dispensed in informal manner at festival. 'Cellist Piatogorsky (left) shows an inquiring visitor some pointers

Mountains of Music

THE BERKSHIRES ARE MECCA FOR MUSIC LOVERS, OFFERING EVERYTHING FROM BACH TO BECHET

by Emory Lewis

ONCE upon a time, cultivated Americans regularly journeyed abroad to attend the summer music festivals. Now the process is being reversed. A large quota of Europeans each summer make a pilgrimage to Massachusetts' Berkshire mountains to attend the Tanglewood Music Festival. Today, the Tanglewood festival is, thanks to the pioneering efforts of the late Serge Koussevitsky, one of the most impressive assemblies of musical talent anywhere in the world.

For music in the mountains, the New Yorker need only turn his automobile radiator northward and drive—in four hours—to the gently rolling Berkshires. Here the traffic-bewildered, heat-bothered city dweller will discover quiet, tree-shaded villages like Great Barrington, Lenox and Stockbridge, where in an earlier age vacationist Herman Melville wrote "Moby Dick" and his friend Nathaniel Hawthorne completed "The House of Seven Gables."

The concerts at Tanglewood, a lovely old New England estate atop a hill and overlooking a lake, begin July 7th, end August 15th. Accent this season will be on the works of 19th-century French composer Hector Berlioz. This is fitting, for within the past decade, Berlioz has come in for a sweeping reappraisal. An earlier judgment that his works were merely the empty rhetoric of a 19th-century romantic has been discarded, and he now looms as one of the authentic music masters of the past century.

Highlight of the Tanglewood season will be the presentation July 10th of Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," never before attempted at the festival. Baritone Martial Singher, tenor David Poleri, bass-baritone Donald Gramm and soprano Eleanor Steber will be the soloists. This enormous master-work, which calls for a large chorus, will have Charles Munch conducting the full, 104-piece Boston Symphony, assisted by the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society, recently returned from their first transcontinental tour. Other Berlioz events include the "Romeo and Juliet" July 31st; the Overture to "Benevenuto Cellini," "Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans," "Summer Nights" for Soprano (Eleanor Steber) and the "Te Deum"—all on August 7th. The above are all part of the Saturday night series in the Shed.

On the Sunday afternoon series at 2:30, the festival has scheduled Berlioz' "Fantastic Symphony" July 18th; the Overture to "Beatrice and Benedick" and the "Harold in Italy Symphony," July 25th. "Harold in Italy," one of Berlioz' masterpieces, will employ William Primrose in the viola solo. Once you have heard Mr. Primrose perform this moving work, it is difficult to imagine any other interpretation. August 15th, conductor Munch and the Boston Symphony will present Berlioz' "Requiem."

This year, Tanglewood has added another innovation to its crowded music schedule. A series of Wednesday chamber music concerts will be open to the public, along with the usual Friday evening chamber orchestra sessions in the Theatre-Concert Hall. The distinguished programs include pianist Claudio Arrau and violinist Zino Francescatti, as well as the Griller and the Kroll String Quartets. The opera department will include a presentation of Aaron Copland's "The Tender Land" (which had its premiere at the City Center during the past season) and "L'Amfiparnaso," a madrigal opera composed in the 16th-century by Orazio Veechi. The opera will be given its first staged performance in America.

Tanglewood is, of course, also a summer school, with some 400 students, selected from 2,000 applicants from all over the world. The graduates, who include Leonard Bernstein and Lukas Foss, hold down jobs with every major orchestra in the nation. Numerous instrumental, choral and operatic performances of the school are open by invitation to members of the Society of Friends of the Center. A contribution to the support of the Center constitutes membership, and by such a contribution, the Tanglewood visitor can attend concerts daily. Another little-known fact: you can attend rehearsals of the Boston Symphony for $1.

You may take a picnic lunch onto the grounds. Many people picnic on the lawns surrounding the Shed. You can either bring or buy your lunch there.

Not all the music in the Berkshires is at Tanglewood. The mountains reverberate with other diverse music. At the close of the Tanglewood season, the New York Pro Musica Antiqua, from August 18th to August 29th, will present a six-concert festival of Renaissance music at the Town Hall in Lenox.

Just 30 miles from Tanglewood, near Falls Village, Connecticut, is Music Mountain. The chamber music concerts here, on a grassy hilltop surrounded by 115 acres of forest, have retained some of the intimate character reminiscent of the early days of Tanglewood. Season after season, in a long clapboard shed whose soft wood panelling has the resonance of a fine stringed instrument, the Berkshire String Quartet plays Mozart, Shubert and Brahms, as well as a spate of contemporary composers. Tab for the Sunday afternoon concerts is $2 per person. If you wish, you can listen on the lawn in the Tanglewood manner.

A half-hour's walk from Tanglewood is Music Inn, where from August 15th through September 7th the tone poems and concerti get blue and gutty. A Round-table of Jazz is conducted by Professor Marshall Stearns, includes such teachers as composer Henry Cowell (who employs the jazz idiom in his longhair music) and blues singer "Ma" Yancey. Aaron Copland, who conducts the Tanglewood Music School, is a frequent student here.

For those who want to make their own music, there's the Folk Music Workshop at the Birchwood Barn in Lenox. Sponsored by the New York Folk-Guitar Club, this group teaches the folk guitar, the classic guitar and the recorder in one-week sessions beginning July 5th. And they hold concerts by students at Sedgwick Hall in Lenox.

How to get to the Berkshires? Follow the American Automobile Association recommendations: take the Taconic State Parkway to the Millbrook turnoff, then follow Route 44 to Canaan. Route 7 in Canaan will take you to Lenox or wherever your particular inn may be.

There's a hotel around every bend, so we can only mention a few here. Call CUE's Information Department for further details. Elm Court, a luxurious former estate, is a monument of what happened when a Vanderbilt (Emily) married a Sloane (W. & J.). It's elegant and somewhat expensive. For the young and frenetic, Eastover in Lenox is more appropriate. Once a banker's estate, it is now an athletic factory equipped with swimming pool, golf range, tennis court, archery range, ball diamond. The Berkshire Inn in Great Barrington and the Red Lion Inn are a bit more staid, and they offer excellent accommodations.

For good old mountain music—whether it be do-si-do or Bessie Smith or Berlioz—the Berkshires are the place to go.

This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION
JUL 5 - 1954

TANGLEWOOD OPENS

Lenox, July 4 — On this, the 150th anniversary of the birth of Nathaniel Hawthorne who wrote Tanglewood Tales the opening exercises of the 12th season of the Berkshire Music Center were held in the theater-concert hall beneath the stately pines of Tanglewood — internationally-famous home of the Berkshire Festival.

Dr. Perry Presides

Introducing the galaxy of noted musicians and faculty members to the gathering of students and distinguished guests, Dr. Lewis D. Perry, native of neighboring Williamstown and a trustee of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, recognized the honored presence of Gertrude Robinson Smith, godmother of the Berkshire Music Festival. She was one of the originators of this gigantic enterprise in the musical world which she saw launched at the Dan Hanna Farm under a huge tent, later moved to the grounds of the old Vanderbilt Estate now known as Foxhollow School and later onto the grounds of Tanglewood. Interesting is the fact that the theater-concert hall in which she sat today was the site where the first concert at Tanglewood was likewise staged under a circus tent.

Only recently returning from Paris where she has made her residence, Mrs. Smith renewed acquaintances with Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, Hugh Ross and the popular George Judd, manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who is to retire following this year's Berkshire Festival season. Another distinguished guest in attendance this afternoon was Charles-Roux, the French consul-general.

As the retiring chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, Dr. Perry announced $30,000 gifts from Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr. The center is to receive from the Rockefeller Foundation $15,000 this year, $10,000 next year and $5000 three years from now in order to maintain this world renowned school—the only such conducted by an orchestra anywhere.

Introducing Charles Munch, director of the Berkshire Music Center and conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Dr. Perry lauded the tremendous qualities of leadership and great belief in youth as [illegible] by Munch and acclaimed him as the greatest conductor in the world [illegible] welcoming the student body—400 strong—with representation from such foreign countries as Cuba, Japan, Korea, Holland, Greece, South Africa, Venezuela, France and Israel—Dr. Munch said in part:

"Music, more than any other art, contributes directly to the happiness of human beings. Its power lies in the fact that it reveals to us beauties that we cannot find in any other sphere.

"In the history of humanity, spiritual values are the most precious gift that is passed on from generation to generation. It is only by protecting and supporting spiritual values that we can find the road to salvation. What does it profit a man, to gain the whole world and forfeit his soul?

"Never forget that the aim of music is above all to elevate us beyond our miserable human conditions. Music will reward us a hundredfold if we try to hear its message with all our hearts and to listen to it with a kind of wonder reflected in the clear and innocent eyes of a child dazzled by the lights of a Christmas tree."

Concluding the program was the singing of Randall Thompson's Alleluiah by the chorus made up of the student body of the Music Center under the direction of Hugh Ross. Following was a reception and tea for guests, faculty members and students in the formal gardens adjacent to the theater-concert hall.

BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE
JUN 25 1954

SOCIETY: Esplanade Concerts to Be Given but 3 Nights Weekly

By MARJORIE W. SHERMAN

A Boston musical tradition of 25 enjoyable years will be changed this Summer when its famed Esplanade concerts will be given in series, alternated with Tanglewood concerts, and extended through Aug. 10 instead of ending in July. These nightly concerts at the Hatch Memorial Shell will open on July 5 at 8:30. They will be given on Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays of each week with Arthur Fiedler and a number of guest conductors on the stand.

Members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will travel to the Berkshires every Thursday for concerts at Tanglewood, returning in time for the next week's Esplanade concerts. Donors and friends of the series, which thousands hear each year free of charge, have long been interested in extending the concerts into August because of those who are away on vacation in July.

Another innovation this year will be the doubling of daytime concerts. Three morning concerts have traditionally been given at 10:15 on Tuesdays. This season there will be six. The hour-long children's concerts cover a wide range of music, concentrating on shorter selections than those chosen for evening programs, but as popular with adults as with children.

At Tanglewood, where conductor Charles Munch will open the 1954 season on July 7 with a Beethoven program by Claudio Arrau and the Bel Arte Trio, the schedule will average nine concerts a week. In general, opera or choral programs will come on Tuesdays, chamber music on Wednesdays, student orchestra performances on Thursdays, chamber music on Fridays, orchestral programs by the Boston Symphony on Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons, student chamber orchestra recitals on Sunday mornings and composers' concerts or forums on Sunday evenings.

Some 400 students are to study under the drection of Mr. Munch and composer Aaron Copland.

Long-standing friends of the Esplanade concerts and Friends of the Berkshire Music Center constitute an overlapping list. Contributions to the Esplanade concerts range from children's dime dropped in the program boxes to checks in four figures, sent to the Merchants National Bank in Copley sq.

Among the hundreds of donors who have contributed consistently to the Esplanade fund are Mrs Philip Mather, Miss Margaret A Fish, Miss Sarah Waters, Mrs. Guy Wood, Miss Evelyn Sears, Mrs. Charles H. Flood, Allyn B. McIntyre, Mrs. Elwood Church, Miss Mary Powers, Mrs. John Leavitt, Hugh Robinson, Miss Priscilla Barclay, Mrs. Wilson Roads, Robert W. White, Kenneth Magoon, Miss Lucy Crehore, and Mrs. Edwin P. Brown.

HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM
JUL 10 1954

2700 Hear Boston Symphony At Tanglewood

Over 2700 music-lovers sat under a star-sprayed sky at Tanglewood Friday night to hear members of the Boston Symphony orchestra play five Bach Brandenburg concertos. Charles Munch conducted; the soloist was Lukas Foss.

Roger Voisin provided the high point of the evening with his well-phrased execution of the challenging "Bach trumpet" part of Concerto No. 2. An occasional false note only addea to the excitement that could be felt throughout the audience as the piccolo-thin but distinctly brass voice of the trumpet cut cleanly through lower-pitched masses of polyphony. Mr. Voisin used a specially constructed trumpet.

Lukas Foss, American pianist and composer, achieved a brilliant but soundly controlled tone i .nthe ecadenza of Concerto No. 5. Mr. Foss' precise rhythmic shadings brought out the interweaving of themes clearly, but without exaggeration. Unfortunately, he was les ssuccessful in the slow movement, where his hard, cool tone, lacked the desirable lyric quality.

The chamber orchestra grew more sure as the evening progressed, playing the last three concertos up to typically high Boston Symphony standards.

The concert was the first of six, to be held weekly at 8:30 p. m. in the Theater-Concert hall. Saturday evening at 8:30 p. m. the Boston Symphony, the Harvard Glee club and Radcliffe Coral society and four distinguished soloists will perform "The Damnation of Faust" by Berlooz. Eleanor Steber and Martial Singer will be among the soloists. — Mitch Strickler

---

BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD
JUL 11 1954

Berkshire Festival In Second Week

This afternoon in the Music Sched at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Pierre Monteux will conduct an all-Beethoven program consisting of the "Leonore" Overture, No. 3; the Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor"), with Claudio Arrau as soloist and the Symphony No. 5.

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises an evening of chamber music by the Albeneri Trio (Erich Itor Kahn, piano; Giorgio Ciompi, violin; Benar Heifitz, 'cello) on Wednesday evening in the Theatre-Concert Hall; an all-Bach program, including a Cantata conducted by Hugh Ross and two suites performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Music Director Charles Munch, on Friday evening in the Theatre-Concert Hall; a program of Debussy and Franck performed by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor and Vera Franceschi as piano soloist, on Friday evening, in the Music Shed; and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Munch conducting, and Leo Smit as piano soloist, in a program of Debussy, Copland and Berlioz, on Sunday afternoon (July 18), in the Music Shed.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN
JUL 11 1954

CLAUDIO ARRAU, pianist, plays at the Berkshire Festival program this afternoon at the Music Shed, Tanglewood, at Lenox, Mass.

THE GAZETTE, FRIDAY, JULY 9, 1954

Sight & Sound

By Thomas Archer

THE BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

One of the most successful institutions of its kind on this continent is the Berkshire Symphonic Festival given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and assistants in the pleasant Berkshire Hills, about a day's journey from Montreal through Burlington and St. Alban's to Pittsfield where you turn off to that millionaire's paradise known as Lenox. I missed the first festival when the tent blew down and the late Serge Koussevitzky delivered an ultimatum to the summer residents of Lenox that if they wanted the BSO to put on a festival for them they had to provide proper accommodation.

That was in 1937, a year later than the foundation of our own Montreal Festival. Koussevitzky's ultimatum was read, marked and inwardly digested by the Bethlehem Steel Corporation and when we arrived in a second-hand Ford in the summer of 1938, the Bethlehem miracle had already been performed. I did hear the broadcast of the concert in 1937 which wa sthe cause of this effect. The great Koussevitzky was concentrated with the BSO on a symphony in the tent when Jove, in the Disney tradition, threw down a thunderbolt in the shape of a cloudburst.

Bethlehem built The Shed which is still the last word in the summer fight against the weatherman. You can get insurance against the weatherman, and it has been tried in Montreal. But the law of averages is against it.

The Shed at Lenox, as most people know, is a remarkable contrivance. In 1938 (there may have been improvements since) it was, as I recall it, and very vividly too, a solid steel roof supported by girders, open to the air but with shutters to pull down when the weatherman really got ugly.

It cost somewhere up in the hundred thousands, but Bethlehem Steel, a big corporation, absorbed it, no doubt, in its profit and loss account. I shall never forget sitting in The Shed in the summer of 1938, a year after the tent disaster, when the grand old Koussevitzky had his reward. A summer storm was brewing from the very beginning. The final item on the program was the Sibelius Second Symphony, beautifully timed because Finland was in the news at the time as having met her financial obligations. As I recall it, the storm burst just as Koussevitzky led his men into the stirring finale with its ascending theme. It wasn't a bad storm. They didn't even have to pull down the shutters.

Tanglewood, called after the Hawthorne Estate (Scarlet Letter), was a delightful place in those days. In 1938 we motored down in our second-hand Ford, stayed at a convenient tourist home for a dollar each night. What meals we were not invited to, we filled in at a convenient diner half way between Pittsfield and Lenox.

In 1939 we were invited to house ourselves on the estate of the late Mrs. Edwards Spencer. Our mutual friend, Frances Stillman, a distant relative of Mrs. Spencer's, was looking after Mrs. Spencer's menagerie which included horses, dogs, cats and birds. We dined at the mansion at night. Mrs. Spencer, a vigorous widow of some 70-odd years, I remember as the perfect American hostess, a great lady.

Mrs. Spencer introduced us to the distinguished Edward Burlinghame Hill, a quiet man who had much to do with putting music firmly into the Harvard curriculum. In the confusion of Mrs. Spencer's homeric afternoons we managed to get in a few words as two music-lovers. That was the year I was personally introduced to Mr. Koussevitzky himself by Madame Leger, then president of the Ladies Morning Musical Club.

I met Mr. Koussevitzky a second time at Mrs. Spencer's. It was just a handshake. The third time was just before his death, when he undertook to conduct, under handicaps that I could only faintly surmise, the tour of the Israel Symphony in Canada and the United States. Fran Robinson, then of CFCF, interviewed him at a press conference in the Ritz-Carlton. He was in great form and, like most conductors, an expert in his public relations and radio timing.

Mr. Koussevitzky's chief assistants in making the Berkshire Festival a going concern were Gertrude Robinson Smith, whose father built The Shed, and George Judd Sr., who still runs the festival as manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra since Mr. Brennan (whom I met) retired in 1935.

The Berkshire Festival is still going strong as an embodiment of the idea that people want to enjoy music in summer on their holidays. Charles Munch has taken it over and is following in the footsteps of Mr. Koussevitzky.

A festival, by its name is an outstanding event of the year, meant to give good citizens a resume, as it were, of what talent they have in their own backyard. It is easy, when you have the British Arts Council behind you as the Edinburgh Festival has. It was hard as I saw when I went to millionaire's acres at Tanglewood in 1938 and 1939. But they have done the job.

Junior Symphonists Greeted by England

Tunbridge Wells, Kent, England, July 8.—(AP)—The Montreal Junior Symphony Orchestra, in Britain for the first time, tonight opened a tour of this royal spa.

Conducted by Louis Elvin, the 56 players, between the ages of 11 and 22, will perform before Princess Marie Louise, granddaughter of Queen Victoria, tomorrow at London's St. James's Palace. Later they will play at Brighton, Lincoln, Darlington, York, Stratford-on-Avon, Bristol, Bournemouth and Bexhill.

A television appearance is slated for July 13. The orchestra arrived last night at Southampton.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
JUL 11 1954

Bostonians On a Shuttle

With the Esplanade concerts in Boston and the Berkshire Festival in Lenox, the Boston Symphony Orchestra has begun a twice weekly shuttling operation.

The sixty-five musicians who take part in both series leave Boston Wednesday nights to reach Tanglewood for the Thursday afternoon rehearsals for the full orchestra's week-end festival concerts, and get back to Boston in time for the Monday night program on the bank of the Charles.

Musicians who play in the Friday night chamber orchestra concerts do not commute; twenty of them are members of the Berkshire Music Center's faculty.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN

JUL 11 1954

Maestros Meet

Charles Munch, (left), noted conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, seen welcoming his old friend Pierre Monteux to the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood. Monteux will be guest conductor in the Music Shed this afternoon, in an all-Beethoven program.

Tanglewood Topics

Lenox, July 10—Eight Berkshire Music Center students at Tanglewood this summer are disdaining the relative comforts of Wheatleigh, the male students' dormitory, for the more rugged life, and are camping on the edge of Stockbridge Bowl. Since four are tympanists, one a trombone player and another a chorus leader, they are well equipped to give a nocturnal concert of their own. In a small shack lives Norman Bernstein, of Lowell, Mass., the trombonist, a repeater from last summer. Mervin Britton, Hindsboro, Ill.; Michael Colgrass, Brookfield, Ill.; Lloyd McCausland, Milford, Mass.; and Albert Duffy, Littleton, Mass., are the tympanists, and the chorus leader is Maurice Carbonneau, of Lewiston, Me. Their neighbors in a nearby tent are two students of Ludwig and Laura Zirner of the University of Illinois, in Champaign. Harold Johnson, Chicago, and Herbert Gibson, Danville, Ill., both associates in the opera department. Two Wisconsin students are also quartered in the Barn, daytime scene of Department V Studies, William Keller of Milwaukee, and Bert Phillips, of LaCrosse, who play violin and cello respectively in the student symphony.

* *

Jordan Whitelaw, of Boston, is spending the summer at Tanglewood, tape-recording the Friday night chamber orchestra concerts, the Saturday night and Sunday afternoon full-symphony concerts of the Boston Symphony in the Berkshire Festival, for WGBH-FM, Boston, the non-commercial educational station which reaches a 60-80 mile radius and which during the past three years has broadcast in complete form live concerts from Symphony Hall of the Boston Symphony's Friday afternoon and Saturday night series. The station is cooperatively supported by the Boston Symphony, Boston College, Boston University, Harvard, M. I. T., the Museum of Fine Arts, the New England Conservatory of Music, Northeastern University and Tufts College, and broadcasts include classroom lectures, forums, drama, poetry and news.

Mr. Whitelaw, producer and scriptwriter, will offer the first Tanglewood "tape" to WGBH's members Saturday July 17, the program the Berlioz "Damnation of Faust" given at Tanglewood tonight, and the recorded series will continue until the end of September.

* * *

Two editors from Ceylon, Tori Di Souza and Horace Jam Modder, staying at the Curtis Hotel, Lenox, were Tanglewood visitors this week. Another interesting guest, visiting with Adolf Berle in Great Barrington, was Benjamin Nunez, Ambassador from Costa Rica to the United Nations.

* * *

The first of informal lectures to students at the Berkshire Music Center in a series planned by Dean Ralph Berkowitz, entitled "Aspects of Music", were given at Tanglewood this week. Lukas Foss spoke on "Listening to Music" on Monday; Aaron Copland on "Berlioz from the Composers' Viewpoint" on Friday. Lukas Foss' Musicianship Class on Wednesday heard him on the subject of "The Bach Style".

* * *

Retiring manager George E. Judd of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in recognition of the first Berkshire Festival being given 20 summers ago, spoke as one neighbor to another to the Lenox Kiwanis Club last Wednesday.

* * *

William J. Cox, assistant to the principal of the Phillips Academy at Exeter, N. H., and Chairman of the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, the organization through which interested and generous people can help support the summer music school of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will address the Pittsfield Kiwanis Club on Wednesday, July 14.

* * *

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, while on vacation last month in his native Strasbourg, France, took over the helm of his erstwhile orchestra, the French National Radio Orchestra, for a concert on June 20 in the Strasbourg Festival, at short notice, and, according to a review received this week in highyl laudatory fashion. The concert had been reserved for Soviet composer Dmitri Shostakovitch to conduct his new Tenth Symphony, which hasn't yet been performed outside of the USSR. It was canceled on short notice, and Mr. Munch, invited to fill the gap, performed the posthumous Schubert Symphony in C Major, with young French violinist Annie Jodry performing the Khatchaturian violin concerto which Ruth Posselt will perform with Richard Burgin conducting the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood on Sunday afternoon, August 1.

* * *

William Judd, elder son of retiring BSO manager George E. Judd, vacationing at "Meadowlark", the former studio of Daniel Chester French in West Stockbridge, and Miss Ruth O'Neill, both of the Judson, O'Neill & Judd division of Columbia Artists Management, New York, are attending the Tanglewood concerts this weekend. This is the bureau which manages soloist Claudio Arrau. Another Tanglewood concert guest is John Ortiz, artists' manager of The Baldwin Piano Company, New York.

* * *

Lukas Foss reveals he has been commissioned by the Schweitzer Foundation to compose an orchestral piece which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform on the 80th birthday, next January, of Albert Schweitzer, noted philosopher, physician, organist, humanitarian and exponent of Bach, who is a nephew by marriage of conductor Charles Munch. Mr. Foss is also at work on a piano piece and has titled his fairy tale opera for the National Broadcasting Company "Griffelkin."

This Clipping From
NEW HAVEN, CONN.
REGISTER

JUL 11 1954

MUSIC

Schedules Keep Musicians Hustling To Make Concerts

By GORDON E. ARMSTRONG

The enlarged and rearranged schedule of concerts at the Berkshire Music Festival this season posed a unique problem for the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The situation was even more complicated by an extension of the Esplanade concerts in Boston to August 11. The Boston Orchestra has been giving the latter popular outdoor series on the embankment of the Charles River since 1929. The problem was how to carry on both concert schedules, one at the Festival in the Berkshires and the other in Boston, at the same time.

Up to this year, there was no overlapping of the two concert series. The Esplanade concerts, conducted by Arthur Fiedler, usually concluded the last week in July and the main Shed concerts at Tanglewood were formally concentrated during the last three weeks of the Festival in August. This season, however, three Shed concerts were added and these 12 main programs were spread out over the entire six weeks of Festival activities. The chamber orchestra concerts, popularly known as the "Bach-Mozart concerts," were formerly concluded before the principal Festival concerts by the 104-man Boston Orchestra began but this year they too are being given weekly during the Festival.

The problem was solved by what is called, "Operation Shuttle," and by creating what is, in effect, three orchestras—A, B and C. "Operation Shuttle" will involve weekly commuting between Boston and Tanglewood for some 65 members of the Boston Orchestra this summer. Each of the "traveling musicians" involved in this complicated setup will cover some 1,650 miles during the current Festival. The plan has been devised as follows:

Orchestra "A" is the Chamber Orchestra of some 30-40 players who perform in the Friday evening chamber music concerts at the Festival. Twenty of these musicians are first chair players and are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer music school maintained by the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood. This chamber group rehearses on Wednesdays and Thursdays for their Friday evening concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall.

Orchestra "B" is the group of 84 musicians who are performing in the Esplanade concerts which got under way in Boston last week, as did the concerts at Tanglewood. This orchestra will play in the home town on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. Some of these musicians will leave for Tanglewood immediately after Wednesday's concert and others will leave early on Thursday morning but all must be at the Festival grounds for the first rehearsal on Thursday afternoon for the weekend's concerts.

The full Boston Symphony, which performs in the Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon Festival concerts, is known as Orchestra "C." The 65 "shuttling" members have to be back in Boston for Monday afternoon's first rehearsal for the Esplanade concerts. Some of the musicians will move their families to Tanglewood for the season and others will keep their families at home in Boston. All of the musicians will get well earned vacation at the conclusion of the Berkshire Music Festival. They will be free until the orchestra commences its 73rd season in Boston in October.

Here is the schedule for the second week of concerts at Tanglewood:

Wednesday, July 14, 8:30 p. m.—Theater-Concert Hall, Chamber Music: BRAHMS: Trio in B, Op. 8; MARTINU: Trio in D minor; BEETHOVEN: Trio in B flat, Op. 97 ("Archduke")—The Albeneri Trio (Erich Itor Kahn, piano, Giorgi Ciompi, violin; Benar Heifitz, 'cello).

Friday, July 16, 8:30 p. m.—Theater-Concert Hall, Chamber Orchestra: BACH: Cantata No. 93 "Wer nur den lieben Gott"—Hugh Ross, conductor. Suites Nos. 1 and 4—Charles Munch, conductor.

Saturday, July 17, 8:30 p. m.—Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra: DEBUSSY: Excerpts, "St. Sebastian;" FRANCK: "Les Djinns," for Piano and Orchestra—with Vera Franceschi as soloist; DEBUSSY: "La Mer;" FRANCK: Symphony in D minor—Pierre Monteux, conductor.

Sunday, July 18, 2:30 p. m.—Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra: DEBUSSY: "Iberia;" COPLAND: Piano Concerto—with Leo Smit as soloist; BERLIOZ: "Fantastic Symphony"—Charles Munch, conductor.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN

JUL 11 1954

BERLIOZ CONCERT IS HEARD BY 8500 AT TANGLEWOOD

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 10—Festivities really got under way tonight at the Berkshire Music Festival. True, there had been chamber music and chamber orchestra concerts, but tonight the concert was in the big shed, the entire Boston Symphony Orchestra was on hand and Charles Munch was conducting.

Like Old Home Day

The affair took on all the earmarks of an old home day, with people who had occupied the same seats for years greeting their neighbors and everyone looking over everyone else.

Tonight is one of those magic nights that only the Berskhires can offer. Starlight and moonlight combine to bring about a beauty that turns Tanglewood and the Stockbridge bowl into a sort of fairyland. A total of 8500 persons crowded the shed and sat about the grounds tonight.

Amid all this beauty one heard a superb performance of "The Damnation of Faust" by Hector Berlioz. This is the first work of many by this composer which will be heard during this festival in comemoration of the 150th anniversary of his birth.

Like many another composer, Berlioz was enamoured by the Goethe poem. He took from the first part only eight episodes which filled his needs and the result was an opera of tremendous force and brilliance.

For many of us the music of "The Damnation of Faust" has been limited to the orchestral excerpts so familiar in the concert halls. Thus we know the brilliant Rakoczy March, the Dance of the Sylphs and the Minuet or the Will-o'-the Wisps.

To hear the complete opera is something else all together. There are numerous wonderful moments, as, for example, the scene in Auerbach's cellar with its student choruses, and Mephisto's, "Song of the Flea"; the romantic episode on the banks of the Rhine with Mephisto's lullaby to the sleeping Faust, "Voici des roses", and the magical chorus and dance of the Sylphs. Then there is Marguerite's "Roi de Thule" aria and "Romance", and Mephisto's ironical, "Serenade", and impressive, "Invocation to Nature." All these, and more, flow in abundance in this magnificent score. Only the final scene, depicting Faust's ride to Hell with Mephisto is less than convincing.

This is a score that represents Berlioz the lyricist, rather than the flamboynant dramatist he pretended to be. The opera is rarely heard in this country although it retains its place in the operatic repertoire in France. With such singers available as Eleanor Steber, Martial Singher a[illegible]vid Poleri, it would seem that the work might be presented in its entirity in some opera house in this country.

Charles Munch has a particular affinity for the music of Berlioz. His understanding of it is profound. Tonight he had a superlative orchestra, chorus and a quarter of soloists with which to work. Martial Singher sang the role of Mephisto. Eleanor Steber was Marguerite. David Poleri sang Faust and Donald Gram sang Brander. The Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society formed the chorus.

There is much delightful choral music in the opera and it was handsomely sung by the two choruses, individually and together. They had sung the work and recorded it, so were perfectly at ease and fully aware of the requirements. One heard finely modulated, skillfully controlled singing.

Skillful Artists

Martial Singher's rather dry voice and its limitations prevented his essaying a malevolent Mephisto, but he, most of all, purveyed the spirit of the music and sang the text in incomprable style and beautiful enunciation. David Poleri revealed a tenor capable of real expressivity. He colored it skilfully and throughout the scale the voice came through the orchestra clearly. Donald Gramm sang his "Song of the Bat" spiritedly and with robust tone.

Eleanor Steber has the perfect voice of Marguerite. The beauty of her pianissimi, the warmth of the middle voice and the purity of her upper notes combine to give her resources to sing about any role she desires. The voice has grown in depth and in volume, so that her repertoire has expanded. Her musicianship is impeccable. Her singing tonight was a joy to the ear and she brought to her role just the right touch.

The symphony players were in top form. The orchestral portions of the opera were magnificently played, whether it was the blazing fury of the Hungarian March or the delicacy of the Dance of the Sylphs.

Perhaps this performance can best be described as a perfect fusion of all the forces under Mr. Munch's direction; a direction which was flexible and understanding. This was a triumph for all concerned and one of the most notable performances ever given at Tanglewood.

[32]

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN

JUL 11 1954

All-Beethoven Program At Lenox This Afternoon

Pierre Monteux to Conduct 'Leonore' Overture No. 3, 'Emperor' Concerto With Claudio Arrau as Soloist, and Symphony No. 5 at Tanglewood

Lenox, July 10—The first Sunday afternoon concert of the summer season at Tanglewood is scheduled for tomorrow, in the Music Shed at 2.30. Pierre Monteux will conduct the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all-Beethoven program, opening with the "Leonore" Overture No. 3.

This will be followed by a performance of the Piano Concerto No. 5, the celebrated "Emperor" Concerto, with the Chilean pianist, Claudio Arrau, as soloist. It is now 30 years since Mr. Arrau first appeared with the Boston Symphony, then directed by Mr. Monteux. The program will be climaxed with another Beethoven masterpiece, the majestic and impassioned Symphony No. 5.

VERA FRANCESCHI

The Albeneri Trio

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts will continue with an evening of chamber music by the Albeneri Trio (Erich Itor Kahn, piano; Giorgio Ciompi, violin; Benar Heifitz, 'cello) on Wednesday at 8.30 in the Theater-Concert Hall. An all-Bach program, including a cantata conducted by Hugh Ross and two suites performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch will be given Friday evening in the Theater-Concert Hall.

There will be a program of Debussy and Franck performed by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor and Vera Franceschi as piano soloist, on Saturday evening, in the Music Shed. Next Sunday afternoon the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Munch conducting, and Leo Smit as piano soloist, will play a program of Debussy, Copland and Berlioz, in the Music Shed.

In the event of rain the Wednesday and Friday evening concerts will be moved to the Music Shed. General admissions to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the spacious Tanglewood lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance, and Festival patrons are invited to attend a public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra next Saturday at 10 a. m., for the nominal charge of $1 for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund.

Program Changes

First performances at Tanglewood will be given Friday night of the Bach Cantata No. 93, "Wer nur den lieben Gott," with soloists and students of Dept. II (Choral) and Dept. IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center assisting; of excerpts from "St. Sebastian" by Claude Debussy, of Cesar Franck's "Les Djinns" for piano and orchestra Saturday night and of Aaron Copland's piano concerto next Sunday. Piano soloists Vera Franceschi and Leo Smit will also make their Tangelwood debuts.

Charles Munch, music director, announces changes in the concert to be played by the orchestra in the Music Shed at 2.30 p. m. on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 1.

---

sion, the ghost is not very impressive and I had forgotten him.

The Thin Man

Julius Caesar was a Roman politician who was scheming to turn Rome from a republic into an empire with himself upon a regal seat. Thrice he refused the crown, but he undoubtedly was fixing to get it at the right time and in the right way.

There was a skinny fellow by the name of Cassius who was conspiring to undo Caesar's conspiracy. He undoubtedly involved the innocent Brutus in this deal, so that Brutus assassinated Caesar who was his close friend. This kind of a double double-cross has not unusual in hisotry, although nobody ever can tell us why Brutus would not have done more for Rome as Caesar's prime minister.

Shakespeare has Brutus say:" . .not that I loved Caesar less, but that I loved Rome more. Had you rather Caesar were living, and die all slaves, than that Caesar were dead, to live all free men? As Caesar loved me, I weep for him: as he was fortunate, I rejoice at it; as he was valiant, I honour him; but, as he was ambitious, I slew him. . ." It sounds like the United States Senate.

Anyhow, there was a politician called Mark Antony who saw his chance and took it. He delivered a speech which would have been

---

BOSTON, MASS.
EVENING GLOBE

JUL 2 - 1954

Charles Munch Returns

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, arrives in New York today by Air France from Paris, and will drive to Lenox tomorrow to prepare for his duties as conductor of the 1954 Berkshire Festival, his fourth Summer as permanent conductor of the Boston Symphony and as director of the Berkshire Music Center.

MEDFORD, MASS.
MERCURY

JUL 15 1954

Medford visitors over the week end to the Berkshire Music Festival were Albert E. Richardson, 11 Woodsedge road, and his daughter, Miss Abbie Jane Richardson, who returned with enthusiastic reports of the affair at Tanglewood in Lenox . . . They heard the Boston Symphony Orchester under the baton of Charles Munch; Eleanor Steber, Metropolitan Opera soprano; and Claudio Arrau, guest pianist from South America. The Richardsons, who left Friday and returned Sunday, reported that the weather was perfect, and that standing room only was available for the concerts, highlight of the musical season in western Massachusetts . . . Rev. William Cook, new pastor of the First Methodist Church, and his family, starting on a vacation this week . . . They'll go on a camping trip in the Adirondacks for a few weeks . . . If the heat becomes unbearable, a good way to get quick, if only temporary, relief is to run cold water over your wrists and put a cold cloth on your forehead . . . Another way is to exert yourself as little as possible.

Don Ross of 10 Wagner road, a lifeguard at the MDC swimming pool in Stoneham, building up quite a reputation for himself as a lifesaver . . . He's already saved a boy and a girl at the Stoneham pool this year, and last year, when he was a lifeguard at Wright's Pond, he saved several people . . . A handy fellow

---

NEW YORK, N. Y.
WORLD-TELEGRAM & SUN

JUL 12 1954

Music

Berkshire Rolls a Pair of Bs

By ROBERT BAGAR.

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass., July 12.—Ae couple of the Bs—not usually associated with each other—Berlioz and Beethoven—took over the first two programs of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival at Tanglewood, attended by 18,550. Charles Munch conducted the French composer's "Damnation of Faust" on Saturday evening, and Pierre Monteux closed this initial session yesterday afternoon with the Beethoven Fifth Symphony.

Mr. Munch, alert and delicate, two qualities not connected with his "Bach Brandenburg" revelations of Friday night, did especially good things with the Berlioz.

He had some mghty capable assistants, or, if you will, participating artists in Eleanor Steber, Davd Poleri, Martial Singher and Donald Gramm. Although there were some inequalities in the rendition as a whole, one could, at least, bask in the glow of some fine effects at various points of the score.

Harvard Glee Club.

Not always were the solo voices clearly heard, a matter probably owing to placement on the stage. Furthermore, the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society, all very musical young people, produced a body of tone not capable of competing with the giant orchestral sound which is a must in certain pages of the work.

The second half of Berlioz's mercurial composition obtained some stunning orchestral playing, and I enjoyed hugely the singing of the soloists—when I could hear them distinctly. There was still another solo singer, McHenry Boatright, bass, who intoned agreeably the "Voice of the Earth" in the epilogue.

Yesterday afternoon's Beethoven was highlighted by Claudio Arrau's performance of the "Emperor" concerto. Sensitive, fleet, accurate, the brilliant Mr. Arrau let none of us down. Nor did Mr. Monteux, whose wise, affecting collaboration in the concerto matched the rest of his conducting elsewhere. The third "Lenore" overture and the Fifth Symphony were the other numbers.

Full Activity.

The musical activity hereabouts is at flood time. On Saturday afternoon I went to South Mountain, Pittsfield, to listen to a recital of Beethoven piano and violin sonatas. The artists were a pair of familiar workers in the vineyards—Alexander Schneider, violinist, and Artur Balsam, pianist.

They played the No. 1, in D Major (Op. 12), the No. 10 in G Major (Op. 96) and the No. 7, in C Minor (Op. 30). Beautiful ensemble, indeed. A large audience—inside and outside the concert hall—applauded noisily.

These concerts are presented by the South Mountain Assn., in collaboration with the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation and the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago. Five more are scheduled for successive Saturdays, calling for various music and performers.

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
POST

JUL 12 1954

drinking in nature and great music simultaneously.
HARRIET JOHNSON

'Damnation of Faust' Performed at Festival

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., July 12—Procuring a ticket for the concerts of the Boston Symphony, here during the Berkshire Festival, is not too difficult if you don't mind the sky for your ceiling and the grass for your chair. Thousands of adventurous music lovers understandably took advantage of the ideal weather yesterday and during the days previous to use nature's auditorium instead of the Music Shed or the Theater-Concert Hall for the excellent performances which transpired.

Although, during the four concerts which made up the initial week of the festival, more than 25,000 people heard music from indoors or out, by sunlight, by shade, by moonlight, or, for the evening chair-sitters, by electric light.

Yesterday afternoon's concert by the Bostonians in the 6,000-seat Music Shed, conducted by Pierre Monteux, was all-Beethoven with pianist Claudio Arrau, soloist in the E-Flat Major Concerto, the Fifth, popularly known as "The Emperor." The beautiful surrounding estate which houses the Shed was covered with humanity eating picnic lunches, while waiting for the music to begin.

Once it started, however, the outdoor audience was as quiet as the indoor. Monteux's way with Beethoven made the content of the music live as few conductors today are able to communicate this composer's inspiration. The immense crowd was fervent in its approbation of the concerto as well as the Fifth Symphony which closed the program.

'Damnation of Faust'

Saturday night, Charles Munch

"Fausts Verdammnis"

Aufbau 7/16/54

Festspiele in Tanglewood

Seit Koussevitzkys Tod steht Tanglewood bekanntlich unter der Leitung von Charles Muench, der mit Recht als besonderer Kenner französischer Musik gilt. Man hat die im ersten Kammerorchesterkonzert gespielten fünf Brandenburgischen Konzerte im Zusammenspiel schon besser gehört, aber dieser Eindruck war vergessen, sowie das erste Orchesterkonzert mit Berlioz' "Fausts Verdammnis" begann. Das im Grunde so zwiespältige und eigenartige Werk fand hier eine einzigartige und überwältigende Aufführung. Muench verstand es, den besonderen Zauber dieser romantischen Musik so lebendig zu machen, dass man nicht mehr danach fragte, warum Faust plötzlich in Ungarn lebt (Rakoczy Marsch) oder warum in die Traurigkeit von Gretchen am Spinnrad ein bewusst gegensätzlicher Studentenchor hereinklingen muss.

Eleonor Steber als Gretchen war zurückhaltend, David Poleri gab Faust die von Berlioz vorgeschriebene Zartheit und Lyrik, Martial Singher's Mephisto war überragend in stimmlichem und dramatischem Ausdruck.

Besondere und unvergessliche Höhepunkte waren die Orchesterzwischenspiele (Ungarischer Marsch, Tanz der Sylphen und Irrlichter), Mephistos Serenade, die Höllenfahrt und wohl ganz besonders die Chöre in Auerbachs Keller.

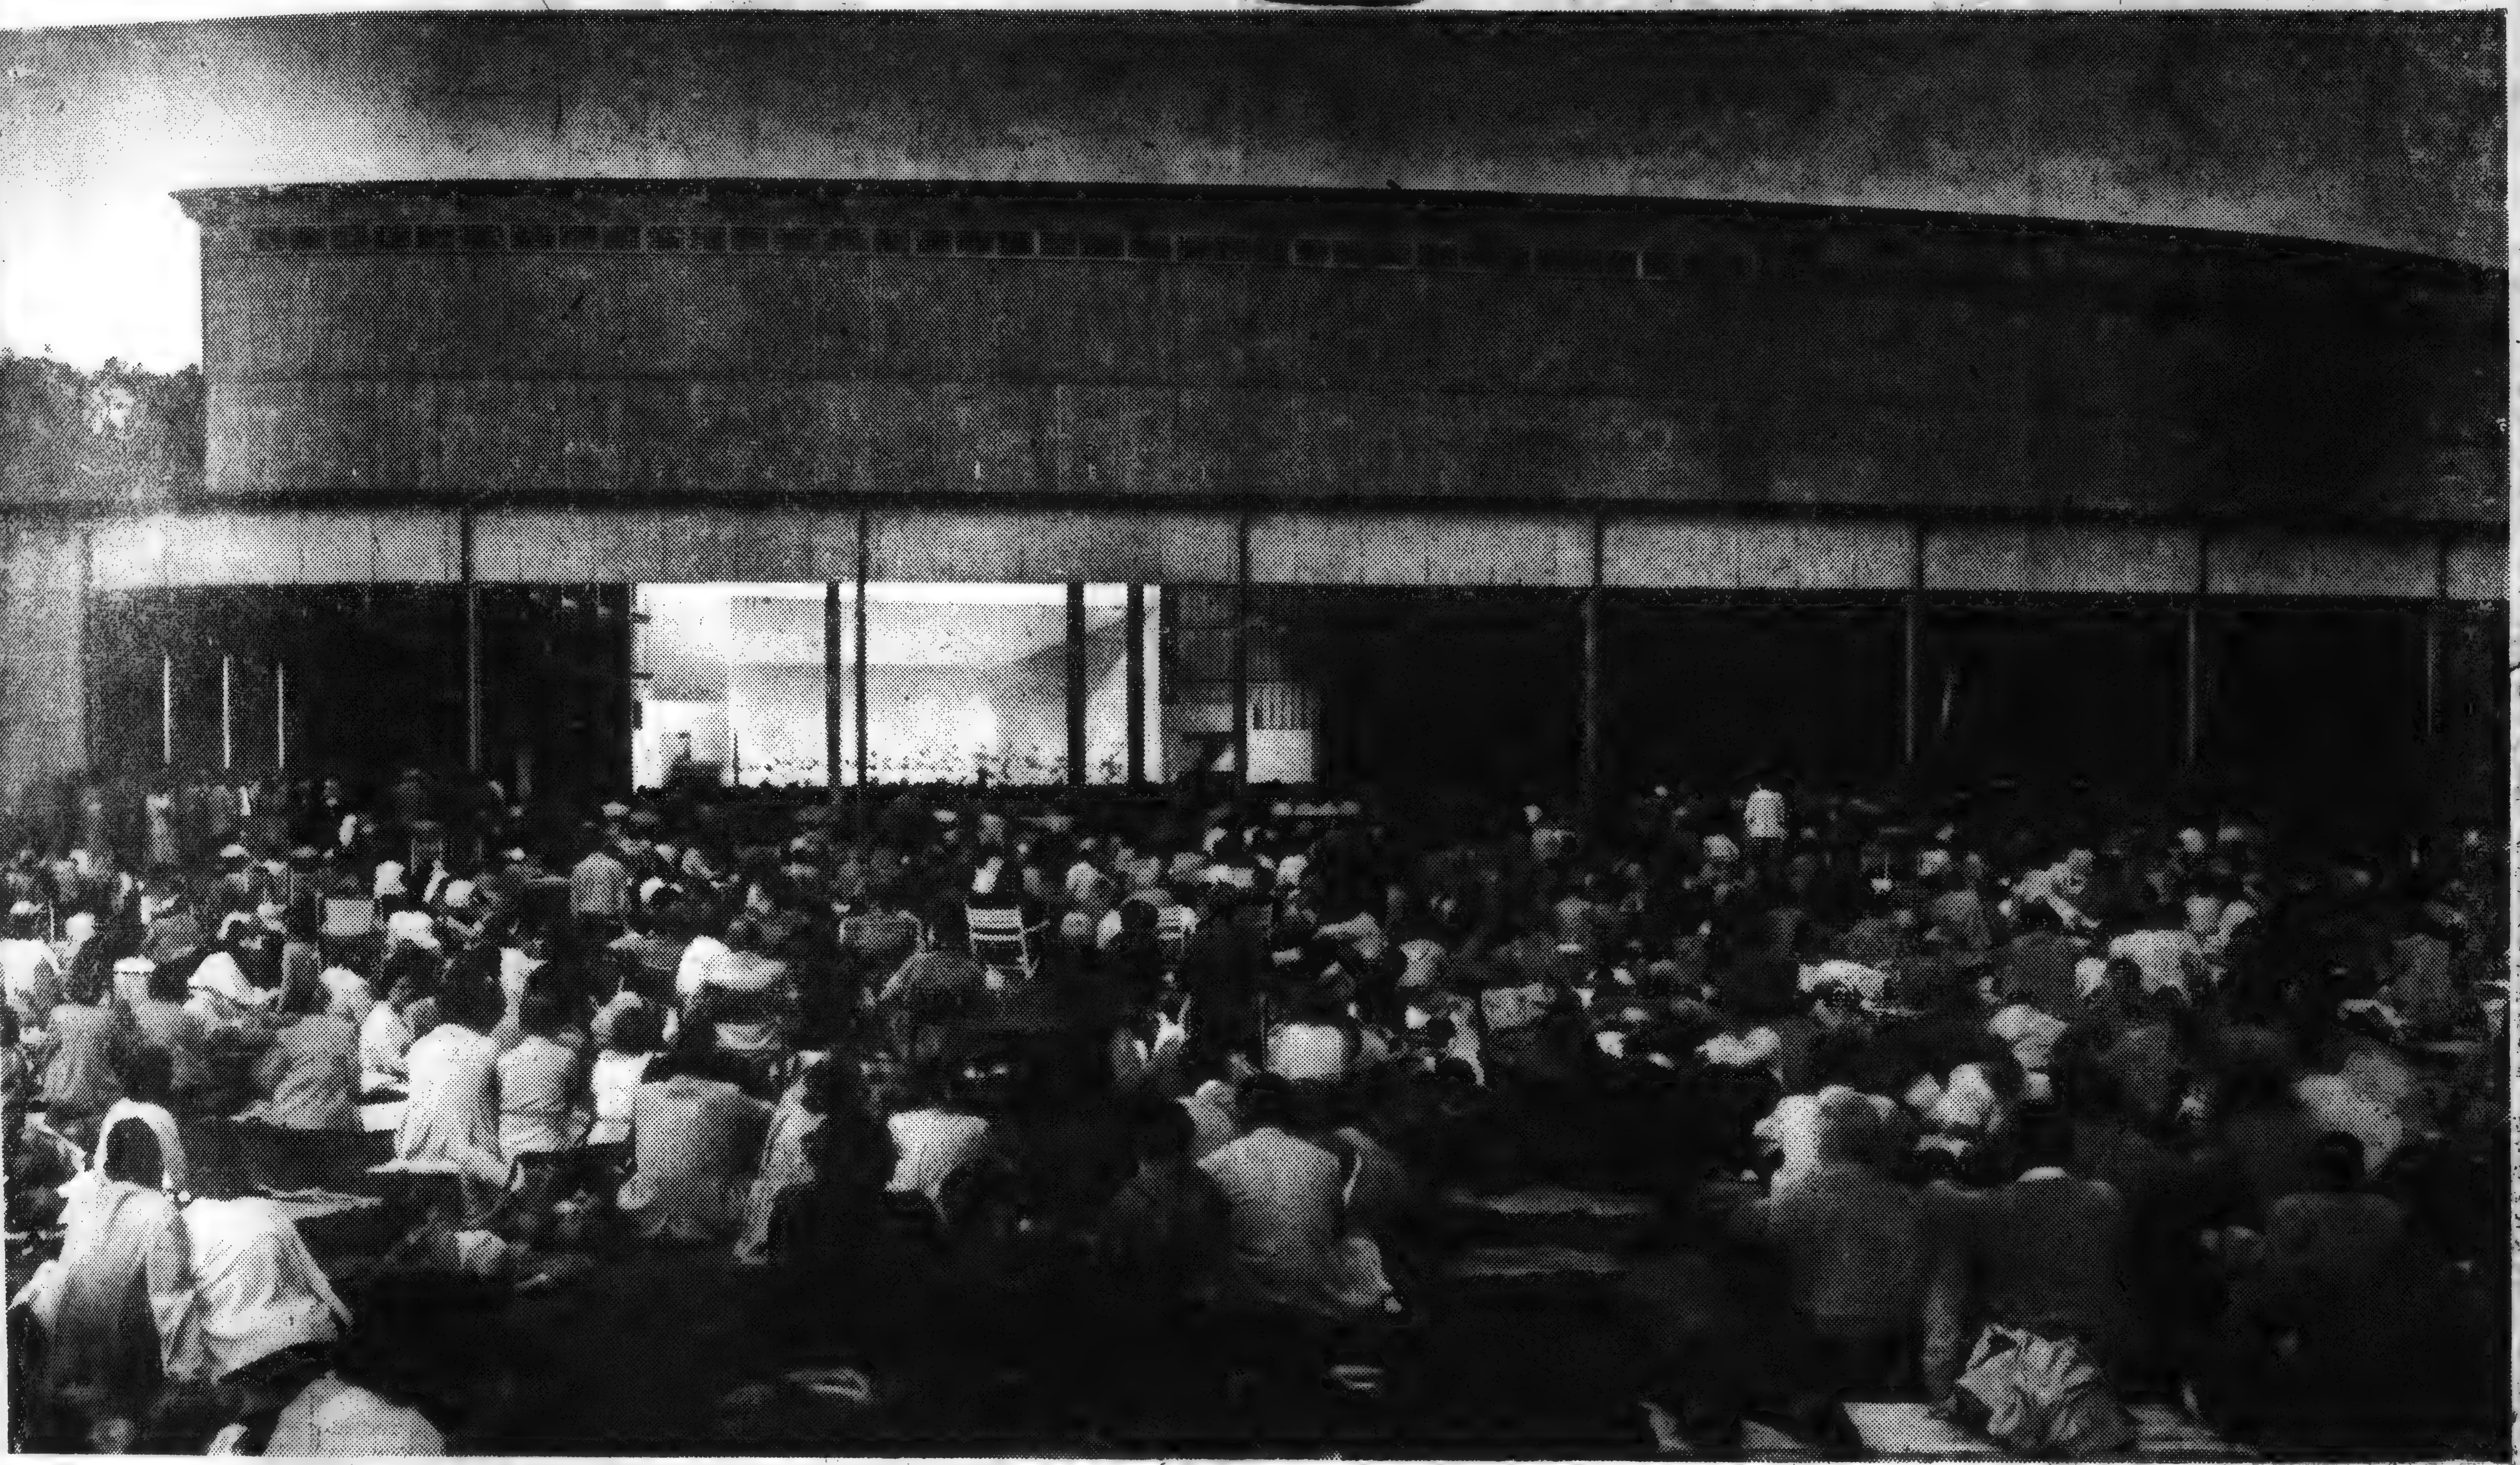
Der lang anhaltende Beifall galt vor allem Muench, der übrigens das Werk im kommenden Winter in New York zur Aufführung bringen wird.

In dem die erste Woche abschliessenden Beethovenkonzert spielte Claudio Arrau das Emperor Konzert, vielleicht nicht so monumental wie man es gewöhnt ist, dafür aber völlig durchgeistigt und abgeklärt. Wenn auch die technische Durchführung der 5. Symphonie unter Monteux nicht in allen Einzelheiten vollkommen war, so stand man doch vom ersten bis zum letzten Ton im Bann seiner meisterlichen und durchdringenden Gestaltung.

W. St.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
JUL 1 8 1954

CONCERT TIME AT TANGLEWOOD—THE BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL IS IN FULL SWING



Clemens [illegible]

An evening concert. The bandstand in the Music Shed is illuminated, and the crowd spills over on the lawn. The Boston Symphony, with Charles Munch as music director, is on hand as usual.

GARDEN CITY, KAN.
TELEGRAM
JUL 1 7 1954

THESE DAYS—

By George Sokolsky

Ghost Story

I was sitting in the theater at Tanglewood in the Berkshires — listening to Bach's Brandenburg concertos, five of the six of them. When I listen to Bach, I cannot think of right or left, or left of center, or any of the silly distinctions which those who are unmoved by the eternities enjoy as an exercise in adolescent intellectualism. Surely it matters little how excited one becomes about the ephemera of personalities. Hitler, Roosevelt and Stalin are dead, but history knows no end.

From behind me, I heard a pleasant feminine voice say, "There is George Sokolsky." I felt that fame had at last come to me and that I was a great even as Adolphe Menjou with whom one cannot walk a sidewalk without becoming a neon sign. However, my pride was soon dissipated, for a strident, masculine voice spoke up to say:

"Now my evening is spolied. He is to the right of Caesar's ghost."

How Horrible

My mind went back to Bach and I never even looked at the woman with the pleasant voice nor at the man with the strident voice. Afterwards, when all the Brandenburgs were over, I thought that I might have asked him whether he wanted to take the Fifth Amendment but it was unnecessary. It was sufficiently tough for him to see one who was to the right of Caesar's ghost. It so spoiled his evening that he forgot Bach and remembered only Sokolsky. How horrible!

Personally, I have had no acquaintance with Caesar's ghost and know nothing about his politics or sociology. Perhaps in heaven or hell, Caesar has learned more than his ghost is willing to talk about. In Shakespeare's vera credit to William Jennings Bryan, which is not surprising as my version was ghost-written by William Shakespeare who who knew the business. Mark Antony got into trouble because of a dame in Egypt, and he was not the first to do that.

What I am trying to discover is how all this puts me to the right of Caesar's ghost. If the strident gentleman had said that I was a muddy thinker, as someone did in Denver, because I believe that Karl Marx's postulates on sociology, biology and history cannot be substantiated, I might have asked him to a pot of tea, to discuss the isms, but when he involves me with Caesar's ghost, I must decline to admit guilt by association. I never met the ghastly gentleman and cannot give testimony concerning him.

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN
JUL 18 1954

MUSIC

Concerts In Sylvan Settings

By MILES KASTENDIECK

Miles Kastendieck

BIG events sometimes tend to obscure smaller events of comparable importance. So the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, which has assumed national scope, may have overshadowed the Berkshire Festivals of C[illegible]ber Music on South Mountain, Pittsfield, Mass. Yet the music on South Mountain antedates that at Tanglewood by 15 years.

Having launched its most ambitious season since 1938, the South Mountain Association is bravely continuing the musical activities fostered by the late Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, the most noted patron of chamber music in this country.

Receives Grants

It opened its 36th season on July 10 with the first program of three devoted to the piano and violin sonatas of Beethoven. They are being played by the violinist Alexander Schneider and the pianist Artur Balsam. The three other Saturday concerts offer more varied fare.

South Mountain has no endowment of any kind. It is maintained entirely through gifts and memberships.

This year it has received grants from the Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress and the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago.

The special festival of three concerts on Aug. 21 and 22 in memory of Mrs. Coolidge will be given by her son.

Such a story should inspire New Yorkers to encourage the activities of the Washington Square Association. The success of Alexander Schneider's chamber music concerts in Washington Square last August and September under the auspices of the association has led to a drive for funds to continue them.

Mrs. Coolidge underwrote the first concert last year. The other was sponsored by the American Federation of Musicians Local 802.

Real Need

Since the undertaking is a communal project (WNYC, Columbia Records, NYU, and the Park Dept. helped out) it should not be difficult to raise funds for a series of six.

Schneider feels there is a real need for live music in the Summer and that Washington Square is ideal for concerts. Since 5,000 attended the two given last year, he would appear to be right.

Whether here is a seed to be nurtured so that it will flower into a regular Summer series is for the public to determine.

If under the devoted care of Mrs. Willem Willeke the South Mountain project has been able to go ahead this year, so under the auspices of the association, there should be chamber music in Washington Square for years to come.

Already two concerts are in sight as contributions come in daily. As more people become aware of what is going on, the funds should certainly be forthcoming for the whole series.

---

conducted a brilliant interpretation of Berlioz's dramatic symphony, "The Damnation of Faust," one of several works being performed at Tanglewood this summer in honor of the birth of the composer 150 years ago. This long, extraordinary, uneven, but picturesque work, scored for four soloists and chorus in addition to the orchestra, has both its dull and inspired pages.

Munch, better than any maestro of my acquaintance, however, dramatizes Berlioz to the hilt; therefore, the composer under his aegis is a special experience. This "Damnation" had its thrilling moments aided by the remarkably good soloists: Eleanor Steber, soprano; David Poleri, tenor; Martial Singer, Baritone and Donald Gramm, bass. The Harvard and the Radcliffe Glee Clubs provided the choral portions.

The festival continues this week, Wednesday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights. Information regarding programs and tickets can be secured by communicating directly with the festival office at Tanglewood. To this reviewer, a four-hour drive or train trip seems little effort in return for the pleasure of Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, who will conduct the orchestra that afternoon, with his wife, Ruth Posselt, as violin soloist, has scheduled the program to commence with William Schuman's "An American Festival Overture," to be followed by Vaughn Williams' "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis," then by the Khatchaturian violin concerto, in which Miss Posselt will be soloist. These selections replace the previously scheduled "Chout" ballet suite of Prokofieff and the Dvorak violin concerto.

---

Previous Changes

Changes in the festival programs previously announced involve the advancement to July 24 of Nicole Henriot, French pianist, as soloist, playing the Liszt E-flat piano concerto on that program, replacing Weber's Overture to "Der Freischutz." On the concert of Aug. 14, in place of Miss Henriot's piano concerto, Mrs. Munch will conduct Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin," and Brahms' "Tragic Overture" in place of the Prelude to "Lohengrin" by Wagner.

Pierre Monteux's originally planned all-Franck concert of July 17 has had Debussy's excerpts from "St. Sebastian" and "La Mer" substituted for Franck's "Le Chasseur Maudit" and "Les Eolides."

[34]

Two Pianists Mark Debuts At Tanglewood

(Special to The Republican)

Lenox, Mass., July 19 —Two programs of 19th Century French composers with the Tanglewood debuts of two young pianists were presented before 16,200 music lovers under the batons of Pierre Monteaux and Charles Munch at the Berkshire Music Festival here over the week end.

Mr. Munch's conducting in the Berlioz "Fantastic Symphony" yesterday afternoon gave the audience of 7,700 a real treat. It was especially delightful in the waltz for the ball and in the adagio scene in the meadows. The afternoon program had started with Debussy's "Iberia," "Image" for orchestra which was colorful with its harps, castenets, and tambourine.

The Copeland "Concerto for Piano and Orchestra," the only non-French composition of the week end, presented Leo Smit, pianist, in his Tanglewood debut to the Sunday afternoon audience. Mr. Smit gave a good performance but the selection was not too happy a one. Perhaps the large number of empty seats in the shed, though the grounds were crowded, was an indication that music lovers felt the same way.

Mr. Munch's conducting in the second half of the concert, however, was a rich reward for any shortcoming in the first half of the program.

Trained In Italy

Saturday night's audience of 8,500 was treated to a beautiful performance of Cesar Franck's "Les Djinns," a symphonic poem for piano and orchestra, played by Vera Franceschi, 23-year-old pianist, making her Tanglewood debut. Trained in Italy, Miss Franceschi played at La Scala in Milan when only 14 years old. She studied in Rome on a Fulbright Fellowship, and has played with the Maggio Festival Orchestra in Florence, Italy, as well as in Dublin, Paris, and with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra.

Speaking with Madame Koussevitsky back-stage after the performance, Miss Franceschi recalled that the late Mr. Koussevitsky first heard her play in Phoenix, he told her: "You will play with me at Tanglewood." The audience was warm in its appreciation of her fine playing which took good note of the delicacy of the composition.

Pierre Monteux, conducting with apparent ease, led the Boston in Debussy's "La Mer," which was such a notable change from the "Excerpts from Le Martyre de Saint-Sebastien," which showed a lesser Debussy in the opening number. The Bostonian gave a well-liked performance in the Franck "Symphony in D minor" which concluded the Saturday program. There was haunting beauty and delicacy in the performance and finished playing in the second movement.

The third week of concerts beginning Wednesday will present Jean Morel, conductor, with Nicole Henriot, pianist, on Saturday evening and William Primrose, violist, on Sunday.

SM

Waterbury
Republican

Tues. July 20,1954

FITCHBURG, MASS.
SENTINEL

JUL 26 1954

Musical Interpretation

The language of music is universal and it has international appeal, but, like an artist's painting, it can mean different things to different people. As Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra which is being featured currently in the six-week Berkshire festival in Lenox, points out: "Enjoyment of the classics by different people comes from varied interpretations of the works of the masters."

To us, Beethoven usually means majesty and beauty (it was given to him more than to any other the ability to transmit images of heaven in musical terms); Mendelssohn, melodies like flowers and dreams; Bach, order, purity and refinement expressing highest ideals (an expert in sound patterns and structures, a designer, an experimenter and inventor); Chopin, daintiness and exquisiteness expressing always the loneliness, the haunting desire of the unsatisfied human spirit; Richard Strauss, power—pure and terrible power; Tschaikovsky, beauty in dispair and the whirling dance of life that ends always in death; Moussorgsky, the triumph of evil over human passion and hope; Mozart, heart strings vibrating with melody, blown upon by the winds of the world.

Tanglewood: Mecca for Music Lovers

Phila Eve. Bulletin

By Max de Schauensee

ONE of the most characteristic traits of human nature is to become absorbed in that which immediately surrounds us, and to become unaware of things that are taking place just beyond the horizons we have unwittingly established.

It was with this thought in mind that your reported journeyed last weekend from the Robin Hood Dell and the chic little figure of Lily Pons to arrive at the Berkshire Festival, which takes place each summer at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass.

The Berkshire Festival was the dreamchild of the late Serge Koussevitzky, then conductor of the redoubtable Boston Symphony, and while Mr. Koussevitzky has departed from our midst, it is still the Boston Symphony (now conducted by Charles Munch), which forms the nucleus and the backbone of what is without doubt the most important and distinguished of America's summer music festivals.

Lest Dell enthusiasts immediately raise a cry of protest, let it be firmly stated that the Dell concerts, like the stadium concerts in New York, and the Hollywood Bowl concerts in Hollywood, do not constitute a music festival, for which new works are commissioned, and where the approach is creative and intellectual.

Furthermore, this serious approach in contrast to one of pure enjoyment is further emphasized by the six-week summer school of music maintained at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony in connection with the Berkshire Festival concerts. Mr. Munch is the director of the Music Center, surrounded by an impressive faculty headed by the distinguished American composer, Aaron Copland.

AT MUSIC FESTIVAL in Massachusetts. Charles Munch directs the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in full summer dress, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood.

THE Tanglewood grounds in which the festival takes place provide a setting of great natural beauty with the ridges of the Berkshires stretching beyond a row of sable pine trees, while on the other side the New England countryside levels off through blue distances to Great Barrington and its evocative lake.

The grounds, with their hedge-bordered gardens, are generally studded with people — students eager to learn and absorb, college professors and their families up for a blending of intellectual pleasure and pure relaxation, figures of distinction and importance in the music world, and the trippers, whose chief reason for coming to Tanglewood is probably curiosity. However, this latter element is decidedly in the minority, for while enjoyment is a great and inevitable feature of the Tanglewood setup, make no mistake about it, most of the people up there are dead serious about music.

There are two outdoor but covered auditoriums, where the music is heard, the smaller Theatre-Concert Hall for more intimate programs, and the far larger Shed for the massive, big-scale occasions. There is generally an overflow from these buildings, and you will always find many people sitting or lying on blankets, devoutly following the music, from the many and spacious lawns of Tanglewood grounds.

Not only are the performers dedicated to an unusual degree, but so are the listeners, avid for knowledge, musical learning and solace.

IT was a pleasure to hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra on one of its home territories. Friday night the Theater-Concert Hall housed an all-Bach program, featuring five of Johann Sebastian Bach's "Brandenburg Concertos." It is unusual to hear five of these on one program.

Charles Munch was the conductor, displaying great vitality and a vigorous onward surge, which admitted of little variety of shading. In fact, the admired conductor could be charged with being heavy-handed at times.

Tanglewood

Continued From Page 7

This was especially true of the third concerto in G Major, which seemed unnecessarily hard pressed. However, the peak of the evening was reached in a superb account of the final Concerto No. 5 in D Major, which featured Lukas Foss, the greatly gifted young pianist and composer, who is a familiar figure in Tanglewood events. Mr. Foss and Mr. Munch gave an enormously vital and contagiously spirited performance of this wonderful concerto. The enthusiasm of the audience was unbridled, doubtless generated by the unquestioned gratitude it felt.

SATURDAY night's music was transferred to the Shed, where a capacity audience, among whom I spied Pierre Monteux, Claudio Arrau, Lukas Foss, Gregor Piatigorsky, Aaron Copland, Jean Paul Morel and other distinguished musicians, gathered to hear Charles Munch conduct a complete performance of Hector Berlioz' tremendous oratorio-opera, "La Damnation de Faust."

This huge work, which calls for fullest orchestra, chorus, and four soloists of superior caliber, is all too rarely heard in America, though it is considered one of Berlioz's supreme achievements in France, where it is still a very vital part of the repertoire of the Paris Opera.

Where Mr. Munch was found occasionally wanting on the preceding night, in "La Damnation," which takes two hours and forty-five minutes to unravel, the French conductor found himself on the surest ground. His enthusiasm and sympathy for the score transformed what might have been an ordinary occasion into an event, an experience.

The Boston Symphony played in virtuoso fashion and the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society, under the direction of G. Wallace Woodworth, found itself right on its mettle.

The role of Faust is the longest of the four and the most demanding. David Poleri, young Philadelphia tenor, sang the music most beautifully with a firm and flowing tone that was good to hear, and a French style not often found in Italian singers.

ELEANOR STEBER, regal in a white mink stole, has never sounded better than in Marguerite's two extended arias. Berlioz came much closer to Goethe than either Gounod or Boito in his musical depiction of the sorely-tried maiden.

Miss Steber sang her "Chanson Gothique" and her "D'amour, l'ardente flamme" with superb tone quality and just the right touch of dreamy listlessness and detachment.

Martial Singher was a capital Mephisto with the best, or rather the most authentic, style and diction of the evening. Berlioz penned some fascinating passages for Mephisto, including his cries of "Hop! . . . Hop!" during the lurid ride to Hell. Mr. Singher made the most of these striking moments.

Donald Gramm in the brief role of Brander showed a fine and resonant voice and an impressive understanding of the French idiom.

Utterly arresting was the final chorus in which the damned sing in syllables said to have been invented by Swedenborg as a language used by demons in pandemonium—"Tradioun marexil firtrudinxe burrudixe . . . Has! Has! Satan! Has! Has! Belphegor!"

The enthusiasm of the huge audience seemed to know no bounds, as it brought Mr. Munch and his soloists out, again and again, and obliged Mr. Woodworth and his chorus to arise to their feet repeatedly.

Philadelphians would do well to investigate Tanglewood. A visit there will enrich their musical experience and broaden their horizons, even to the greater enjoyment of their own concerts here.

This Week At TANGLEWOOD

July 20

New Lebanon Star

NICOLE HENRIOT, young French pianist, is guest soloist at the Berkshire Festival on Saturday evening, July 24, (8:30 p. m., Music Shed, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.) with the Boston Symphony Orchestra,... conducted by Jean Morel, in Liszt's E flat Piano Concerto.

TUESDAY: tonight July 20
  8:30 p. m. in the Theatre
    Concert of Chorus and Opera
    (Free to Friends)
WEDNESDAY, July 21:
  8:30 p. m. in the Theatre
    Festival Concert
    Zimbler Sinfonietta
THURSDAY, July 22:
  8:30 p. m. in the Shed
    Dept. I Orchestra
    (Free to Friends)
FRIDAY, July 23:
  8:30 p. m. in the Theatre
    Festival Concert
    Handel and Haydn program
    by the Chamber Orchestra
SATURDAY, July 24:
  10:00 a. m. in the Shed
    Boston Symphony Rehearsal
  3:00 p. m. in the Shed
    Organ Recital, E. Power Biggs
    (Free to Friends)
  8:30 p. m. in the Shed
    Festival Concert
    by the Boston Symphony
    Jean Morel, conducting
SUNDAY, July 25:
  10:00 a. m. in Chamber Music Hall
    Chamber Music, Dept. 1
    (Free to Friends)
  2:30 p. m. in the Shed
    Festival Concert
    by the Boston Symphony
    Charles Munch, Conducting
  8:30 p. m. Chamber Music Hall
    Composer's Forum
    (Free to Friends)

LAS VEGAS, NEV.
REVIEW-JOURNAL

JUL 21 1954

THERE'S MORE TO A PIANO THAN PLAYING

LENOX, Mass (UP) — To provide pianos for the famous musicians, singers and music students attending the Berkshire Festival here this summer, 69 of the massive instruments and an electronic organ were shipped 750 miles from Cincinnati to the festival site at Tanglewood.

Two huge trailer trucks with their heavily padded cargo make the journey in two and a half days. Since drivers, by regulation may only be on the road 10 hours a day, the trucks had to maintain a 30-mile an hour average despite occasional traffic tie-ups, stops for lunches and unpredictable weather.

Loading the pianos took 16 hours and 300 heavy double pads, collectively long enough to cover a third of an acre. Raymond Schmidt 38, a piano-moving expert, supervised a series of complicated maneuvers at the (Baldwin) factory in which the pianos are wrapped and stacked on trucks without marring the finish. They had to be tightly taped against inevitable jarring during the long trek.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
JUL 22 1954

1,450 Persons at Tanglewood 21-Piece Zimbler Sinfonietta

The 21-piece Zimbler Sinfonietta performed for the first time at the Berkshire festival in Tanglewood last evening in the third in the new and popular Wednesday evening chamber music series. There were 1,450 persons listening in the theater-concert hall and on the grounds nearby.

"The Four Seasons"

The group, consisting of players from the Boston Symphony orchestra, opened its program with "The Four Seasons" by Vivaldi, with George Zazofsky playing the violin solo and Fernando Valenti the harpsichord. The Vivaldi piece is a group of four concertos for violin and string orchestra, with an interesting mixture of naturalistic painting and musical symbolism.

Other selections on the program, well received by the audience, were Stravinsky's "Apollon Musagete", a ballet in two scenes, and Rossini's "Sonata for Violins, Cellos and Double Bass."

Mr. Zazofsky, who is concertmaster for the ensemble, was called back by the audience a half dozen times for his performance in the "The Four Seasons". The Sinfonietta, founded by Joseph Zimbler, a cellist in the Boston Symphony, was under his direction.

Tomorrow Evening

The third series of concerts will continue tomorrow evening at 8.30 o'clock in the theater-concert hall, with Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, and Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, conducting the chamber orchestra of Berkshire Symphony players. Mr. Munch will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso for Strings, Opus 6, and Haydn's "Military" symphony, while Mr. Ross will lead the orchestra, chorus and soloists in the Haydn "Nelson" mass.

A program of Prokofieff, Liszt, Richard Strauss and Elgar will be performed by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony on Saturday evening in the big shed. Jean Morel will be the guest conductor and Nicole Henriot the piano soloist.

The Sunday afternoon program, again in the big shed, will be devoted to the work of Berlioz and Toch, with Mr. Munch on the podium. William Primrose will be the viola soloist.

Next Tuesday three rarely-heard one-act operas by Vecchi, Hindemith and Toch, two of them getting their Tanglewood premieres, will be performed by students of the Berkshire Music center at 8.30 in the evening at the theater-concert hall. The performance is open to those who support the music school by joining the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music center. All seas are reserved.

LOWELL, MASS.
SUN
JUL 22 1954

MUSIC

ALFRED W. BURKE

LOWELL—It has been announced by George Ayotte, director of the Franco-American chorus, that the famous Little Trifluviens singers from Canada will present a concert in this city some time late in August. The chorus under the baton of Jean-Paul Quenty is making a goodwill tour of New England as well as several Canadian provinces.

The coming concert will in part be a musical exchange feature. The local choral group has appeared several times in Canada and are most enthused about welcoming the fine organization from across the border.

Other cities throughout New England where the singers are scheduled include Worcester, Woonsocket, R. I., Manchester, N. H. and Lewiston, Me. In April of 1955 the group will go to Europe for a series of concerts in France, Belgium, Germany, Spain, Italy and French Morocco.

Local Girl On TV

Miss Margie Largay, well known and talented vocalist, is the star of her own TV show. The young local singer, who has become one of this city's best known artists, scored a tremendous success on her program Monday evening. Her portion of the showing included popular and favorite concert selections. She is possibly the first local artist to have such a spot on the airways. Her many excellent performances in the past easily warrant the present recognition.

One of the planned expansions of the committee of the Organ Institute is concerned with choral directing and its relative subjects. The problem facing the organist-director or choral conductor has been well approached where theory and basic musicanship are concerned.

The coming session scheduled for next month will feature this medium, in a greater degree than last season. This is a most important subject and one with which every organist should be familiar.

This latest effort on the part of the Institute brings to light the newly created interest and understanding of the true place of the human voice wherever great and inspiring music is heard.

Though music itself and dancing are much separated we feel that when a fusion of both are used as a medium of developing understanding and a feeling for art it is worth talking about. Last Monday evening on TV there was a group of happy and talented young people from this city who presented a program of square dances assisted by their own accompanists.

The program, under the direction of Miss Margaret Murray of the local school system, produced one of the most delightful informal programs in a long time. This is one of the best steps forward in creating an artistic interest in the minds of school children this community has experienced in many years.

Here is something both creative and practical. Such an effort is worthy of recognition and should be expanded into other fields of art wherever possible.

The recreation division of the state of New Hampshire is this season introducing opera to local communities. At Mt. Sunapee on Saturday and Sunday evenings of this week "Pagliacci" and the "Student Prince" will be featured.

The method of presentation will be interesting and simplified in form. Experienced casts in costume will be heard. English will be used in the Italian score, and this will be the pattern in the latter which is the original. The program will be in concert form and free of all settings.

This week's art exhibit at the Berkshire Festival features the collection of lithographs from the Boston museum and the library of Congress. Presenting the collections is Ture Bengtz, Berkshire resident and head of the Bengtz school of art at Lenox school.

HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM
JUL 23 1954

TANGLEWOOD STUDENTS TO PRESENT OPERAS

Three rarely heard one-act operas, two of them Tanglewood premieres, by Vecchi, Hindemith and Toch will be performed by students of Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance at Tanglewood, Lenox, on Tuesday at 8:30 p. m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall. The performance is open to those who support the summer school of music of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by joining the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. All seats are reserved.

THE HARTFORD TIMES, SATURDAY, JULY 24, 1954

Handel, Haydn Give Tanglewood Brilliant Evening

By CARL E. LINDSTROM

Lenox, Mass. — The balancing off of intimate classics against the big shed symphonic glamor is working out to everyone's satisfaction at Tanglewood. More people are hearing more music; the festival is making more money — which it needs — incontestable virtues both.

So Friday nights you hear Bach and Mozart or, as last evening, Handel and Haydn.

You can talk about the string tone of an orchestra and look for homogeniety, richness, surface sheen or a fine edge. Any one or all of these attributes are discoverable in the Boston Orchestra's violin choir at one time or another and then you say it's the best there is. But last night I felt that it was subtlety of speech that distinguished this great orchestra.

* * *

IN HANDEL'S Fourth Concerto Grosso the quiet beginning was irresistably transporting. There were utterances of such grace and persuasion as you will not hear this side of kingdom come. Of course Handel has to write them in the first place, but it takes interpretive artists to rediscover and to give them voice. The two chords which closed the last movement but one were like a benediction.

Haydn's G Major Symphony—the one called the "Military"—and his D Minor Mass, the "Nelson" so-called, were as brilliant music as the ear is willing to accept. This represented virtuosity of a high order and a certain artistic tension. The trouble is Haydn didn't write brilliant music, and I hold Charles Munch, in the first half of the program, and Hugh Ross, who conducted the mass, accountable. mainly for overtrying.

The composer did, of course, enlist a bass drum, cymbals and triangle in this smart and high-stepping symphony, but I don't think he intended to make a don of it. Possibly Mr. Munch's dedication to Berlioz for this festival made him overzealous. As a matter of fact he covered some of the niceties with which he has worked out his blithe interpretation.

* * *

THERE IS SO MUCH bad choir and chorus singing in the world that it is a truly edifying experience to hear a crowd of schooled musicians lift up their voices in tune, in ensemble and in understanding of what they are doing. These eager disciples of Hugh Ross at Tanglewood give you just that kind of thrilling experience.

It gets into Mr. Ross' blood too, because he drives them at full speed, full tens on and full power at the time. Everything is loud, loud and fast, fast. Once in the ex-resurrexit, he called for a pianissimo and it was like shutting off the sound switch on your TV set. You saw the lips move and heard just about nothing.

This is not good for Haydn and it wasn't good for the soloists either and that was too bad because the four, Soprano Naomi Farr, Contralto Beatrice Krebs, Tenor Marvin Worden and Bass Thomas Stewart, all new to Tanglwood, were about the best so far heard there. Stewart delivered up a wonderful Tui Tollis; Miss Farr etched out the curlicues of Haydn's Fioriture beautifully; and Miss Krebs authored the most relaxed singing of the evening.

Ross has a slashing beat and almost no nuance—but how he can make people sing!

It was a brilliant evening. For my Handel, though, and especially Haydn, I like a little more elegance and natural breathing.

HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM
JUL 20 1954

Zimbler Sinfonietta At Tanglewood

The third week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood in Lenox, comprises a program of three rarely-heard selections of Vivaldi, Stravinskiy and Rossini by The Zimbler Sinfonietta on Wednesday evening in the Theatre-Concert Hall; a program of Handel and Haydn, including a Haydn Mass conducted by Hugh Ross, performed by a chamber orchestra with Director Charles Munch, on Friday evening in the Theatre-Concert Hall; a program of Prokofieff, Liszt, Richard Strauss and Elgar performed by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Jean Morel as guest conductor and Nicole Henroit as piano soloist, on Saturday evening in the Music Shed; and the Boston Eymphony Orchestra, Mr. Munch conducting, and William Primrose as viola soloist, in a program of Berlioz and Toch, on Sunday afternoon in the Music Shed.

The first of two Saturday afternoon organ recitals by E. Power Biggs will be given in the Music Shed at 3 p.m.

This Clipping From KANSAS CITY, MO.
CALL
JUL 23 1954

Negro Musical Artists Rank High At Tanglewood; Win Scholarships

By GLADYS P. GRAHAM

TANGLEWOOD, Mass. — (ANP) — The Berkshire Festival of 1954, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., is notable for the outstanding presentations honoring the 150th anniversary season of Hector Berliez. Some 400 students from all parts of the nation are enrolled for study. Among this number are brilliant tan musicians in the departments of composition, conducting, opera and chamber music.

Holding scholarships are Theresa Green, opera-dramatics, Baltimore, Md., now grooming for her role as soloist in the Bach Cantata being given on the Bach-Mozart series.

Also in the same field is McHenry Boatwright, Boston, who sang in the Damnation of Faust. Boatwright won the Chicago land Festival prize last season and was heard under the baton of Feidler.

Charlotte Holloman of Howard university and New York City, Emma Goldman of New Orleans, Herbert Gibson of Danville, Ill., an opera-associate; Harold Johnson of Chicago of the Lyric theatre, Chicago Opera company and heard in Tenderland and Fayse, are outstanding at the Berkshire Music Center.

From Detroit is the youthful Arthur LeBrew in the choral department. LeBrew is a product of Oberlin and the Manhattan School of Music. Trombonist Joseph Moore of the University of Michigan is also from Detroit.

Holder of degrees from New York university, now teaching at the Profesional children's school in New York is Coleridge-Taylor Parkinson. Reri Lorraire Grist of Queens college, N. Y., in the choral department, and Benjamin Patterson of Turtle Creek Pa., are also enrollees on Tanglewood tuition grants from the revolving scholarship fund. LeBrew was winner of the Sally A. Eiseman Scholarship last season.

Notables at the sessions to greet students in the shed were Baritone Fred Thomas of New York City and Eva Jessye and Mortician Alexander Sheppard of Lawrence, Mass.

CATSKILL, N. Y.
MAIL

JUL 27 1954

MUSIC

Boston Symphony Orchestra

The past weekend of music opened on Friday evening, July 23, with a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra devoted to the music of Handel and Haydn; the program, as usual, being presented at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., the summer home of this orchestra. The Handel Concerto Grosso for String Orchestra, Opus 6, No. 4 is a composition very reminiscent of the early 18th centuries.

The performance, under the baton of Charles Munch was an exceedingly fine one with the strings showing sumptuous tone in the slow movement and a rhythmic and technical facility which could hardly be surpassed in the allegro movements. Mr. Munch gave a vigorous reading of the Symphony in G minor, No. 100, "The Military," by Haydn, in which special emphasis was placed on the bass drum, cymbals and triangle. The symphony is filled with good-natured humor and sparkling wit, and the performance on Friday evening was entirely in keeping with the composer's full intentions.

The focal point of the evening was a performance of the Mass No. 3 in D minor ("Nelson") by Haydn, with the Festival Chorus under the direction of Hugh Ross, with Naomi Farr, soprano, Beatrice Krebs, contralto, Marvin Worden, tenor and Thomas Stewart, bass, as soloists. It is most gratifying to say that the chorus was in much better form for this performance than it was for the Bach Cantata of last week. The Mass (in many parts reminiscent of "The Creation"), was given an energetic, forceful performance, kept in the bounds of the stylistic tendencies of that era. The soloists were excellent, with special plaudits going to Naomi Farr, soprano (who carried the larger portion of the solo work) and to Thomas Stewart, bass. Both were in good voice, and sang with a great deal of confidence and conviction.

(Saturday morning, July 24th, found your music editor at a dress rehearsal of the orchestra, open to the public for the nominal fee of $1, which, incidentally, goes into the pension fund of the orchestra. The rehearsal, which takes you into the inner workings of a symphony orchestra, is scheduled for each Saturday, 10 a. m., and usually last until about noon.)

Biggs Organ Recital

At 3 p. m., Saturday, E. Power Biggs, one of America's foremost concert organists presented an organ recital in the Music Shed at Tanglewood. Mr. Biggs, working under the handicap of a rather small [illegible] organ with limited resources, provided his small, but appreciative audience, with a most diversified organ program culled from organ literature of various eras. Opening his program with Handel's Organ Concerto No. 2, Mr. Biggs again proved himself a master technician, as well as a versatile musician, as he employed the full resources of the organ in this concerto.

Page 2—CATSKILL DAILY MAIL
TUESDAY, JULY 27, 1954

The second group of works played by Mr. Biggs included "The Trophy" by Francois Couperin, the "Pavane" "The Earle of Salisbury" by William Byrd and the D Major "Trumpet Voluntary" of Henry Purcell. Handicapped by not enough stops on the organ for varied changes of tone color and ensemble, Mr. Biggs did a most admirable job of performing the "Prelude, Fugue and Variation" by Cesar Franck, although interpretatively, quite a bit was found lacking. (This, I might say, is not the blame of Mr. Biggs. The organ in the Music Shed, even when played with the orchestra, leaves much to be desired.) Mr. Biggs ended his program with a sparkling performance of the A minor Organ Concerto of Antonio Vivaldi in which an impeccable organ technique was displayed by the soloist. Mr. Biggs was most gracious, offering one of Louis Claude D'Aquin's "Noels" as an encore.

South Mountain Festival

At 4 p. m. each Saturday afternoon at South Mauntain, Pittsfield, Mass., a program of chamber music, sponsored by the South Mountain Association in cooperation with the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation and the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago, is presented. The program for July 24th was the second in the Beethoven Sonata Cycle, with the eighth, fourth, sixth and third sonatas being played by Arthur Balsam, piano and Alexander Schneider, violin. It is unusual when one finds a happy combination of two first rate musicians who perform in a carefully integrated fashion and at the same time display interpretative insight. The happy combination of these qualifications is found in Mr. Schneider and Mr. Balsam, and their cycle at South Mountain is one of the highlights of the summer music season in this area, witnessed by the overflowing attendance of Saturday afternoon.

Clarence R. Warrington, Jr.

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE

JUL 27 1954

Zimbler Sinfonietta At Music Festival

Consisting of 21 Boston Symphony Orchestra members playing historical stringed instruments valued at $90,000, the Zimbler Sinfonietta — under the direction of its founder and music director, Joseph Zimbler — plays the third of the new chamber music concert series at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., tomorrow at 8:30 p.m., in the theatre-concert hall.

A member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 'cello section, Josef Zimbler came to America from Czechoslovakia to join the orchestra in 1934. He first organized the Zimbler String Quartet and in 1945 expanded his group into the Sinfonietta in order to commission and perform new and seldom-heard works written for chamber orchestra. George Zazofsky, graduate of Philadelphia's Curtis Institute of Music and member of the Boston Symphony since 1941, is concertmaster of the Sinfonietta, with Emil Kornsand as assistant concertmaster. Mr. Kornsand joined the BSO in 1939 after playing under Toscanini in the NBC orchestra and 15 years as a member of the Berlin State Opera orchestra. Two first-chair men of the Boston Symphony also play in the Sinfonietta, principal violist, Joseph de Pasquale and Samuel Mayes, the first 'cellist.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT

JUL 29 1954

1896 House is Made One of Stops On Tanglewood Tour

The 1896 House in Williamstown is to be one of the stops on a "gastronomical tour" of Berkshire county, one of the many prizes being offered in connection with the annual Tanglewood on Parade program at Tanglewood on Aug. 13. The tour will include free dinners for two at six well-known eating establishments in the county area.

The two major prizes at the Tanglewood program will be two season tickets for the 1955 Berkshire festival and a high fidelity console phonograph. The drawing will take place after a concert in the music shed that evening by the Boston Symphony orchestra under Thomas Schippers and the Boston Pops under Arthur Fiedler.

Zimbler Sinfonietta Performs Chamber Music at Tanglewood

By GEORGE W. STOWE 7/27/54
Special to The Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass.—The third in a series of Wednesday night chamber music concerts at Tanglewood featured the Zimbler Sinfonietta, an ensemble of string players from the Boston Symphony, in a varied and unusual program at the Theater-Concert Hall.

Those who imagine that program music originated with Beethoven's "Pastoral" Symphony were probably taken aback by the explicit depiction of nature in Vivaldi's "The Four Seasons," which was performed last night. For the four concerti grossi of the composer's Opus 8 which bear this subtitle contain literal representations of such things as the twitterings of birds, thunder and lightning storms, and even the chatter of teeth in the winter cold.

But quite aside from such effects this music has an antique charm that continues to beguile the ear.

* * *

VIVALDI was a celebrated string virtuoso in his day and throughout the concerti grossi his gracious mastery of this medium is always apparent. The Zimbler Sinfonietta and its soloists, George Zazofsky, violinist, and Fernando Valenti, harpsichordist, admirably preserved the spirit of this typically 18th century music.

As a modern counterpart to the Vivaldi, there was Stravinsky's ballet suite, "Apollon Musagete," which has been called "pallid" by at least one critic. Compared to the tonal flamboyance of Petrouchka or Le Sacre it may indeed be tame, but one must remember the intent of the composer, which was a neo-classical evocation of the style of Lully.

* * *

ALEXANDER TANSMAN has spoken of the "serene tenderness" of this work and it does have a lyric warmth unusual for Stravinsky. The emphasis, however, is on the linear and melodic content and not on tonal coloration or driving rhythms, which have become the musical signature of this composer.

The concluding work was the little known Sonata for Violins, Cellos, and Double Bass by Rossini, which afforded the Sinfonietta's first desk men an opportunity to display their dexterity in numerous solo passages, if nothing else.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE

JUL 27 1954

Griller String Quartet to Be At Tanglewood

The Griller String Quartet will present a program tomorrow at 8:30 p.m. at the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The quartet, which includes Sidney Griller and Jack O'Brien, violins; Philip Burton, viola, and Colin Hampton, cello, will be making its first Tanglewood appearance.

* * *

THE PROGRAM will include the Mozart "Quartet in E flat, K. 428," the first United States performance of Ernest Bloch's "Quartet number 4" and the Beethoven "Quartet in G major, opus 18, number 2."

A program of Roussel, Ibert and Mozart will be presented Friday evening by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch. Doriot Anthony, will be the featured soloist in the Ibert "Flute Concerto." The balance of the program will consist of the "The Spider's Feast," Roussel; "Serenade for Eight Winds, K. 388" and the "Paris Symphony, K. 297," Mozart. In the event of rain the Friday evening program will be moved to the Music Shed.

* * *

WEEKEND PROGRAMS in the Shed will include Berlioz dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet" Saturday evening with Charles Munch conducting the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra. Soloists will be Beatrice Krebs, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone. The festival chorus made up of students of the Berkshire Music Center will assist.

Sunday at 2:30 p.m. Richard Burgin will serve as guest conductor of the orchestra with Ruth Posselt as violin soloist in a program of William Schuman, Vaughan Williams, Khatchaturian and Sibelius.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.
TELEGRAM

JUL 27 1954

Eight members of the Music department of the Southport Woman's club spent Saturday at the Berkshire Music festival in Tanglewood, Mass. They attended a morning rehearsal of the Boston symphony and an afternoon organ recital by E. Power Biggs.

Those who went were Mrs. Leonard A. Beadle, Mrs. Paul Parks, Mrs. Ralph L. Talbot, Mrs. F. S. Grandin, Mrs. William Kennedy, Mrs. John P. Heumann, and Mrs. Ruth Childs Pillsbury.

FALL RIVER, MASS.
HERALD NEWS

JUL 29 1954

Somerset Playhouse Stages Two Musicals Next Week

"The Thirteen Clocks" by James Thurber and "Trouble in Tahiti" by Leonard Bernstein, two one-act musicals and tryouts for possible Broadway production this Fall, will be staged at Somerset Playhouse next week.

Alice Ghostely and Richard Eastham will star in the Bernstein musical, while Miss Ghostely, Constance Brigham, Fred Sadoff and Martin Balsam will appear in the Thurber production.

"Thirteen Clocks" originally was presented in dramatic form over TV last Winter, and was so enthusiastically received, that Cheryl Crawford, producer, had Sadoff adapt it for stage production. The musical score is by Mark Bucci; lyrics by Bucci and Thurber.

The original dramatization was enacted by Basil Rathbone, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Roberta Peters, John Raitt and Russell Nype.

Bernstein, one of this country's foremost musicians, pianist and composer of note, was commissioned last year by the Berkshire Festival to write an American opera for the American musical theater. "Trouble in Tahiti" was thus written by the composer of the "Jeremiah Symphony".

Miss Ghostely, who was an overnight musical comedy sensation in "New Faces," has appeared in the New York and road company productions of the musical and in the motion picture version.

ALICE GHOSTELY

Eastham, who made "There's No Business Like Show Business" with Marilyn Monroe and Donald O'Connor in Hollywood, first gained recognition substituting for Ezio Pinza in "South Pacific."

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT

JUL 27 1954

Boston Pops to Use Big Shed During Tanglewood on Parade

The Boston Pops orchestra, with Arthur Fiedler conducting, will perform for the first time in the big shed at Tanglewood during the Tanglewood on Parade program Aug. 13.

Annual Benefit

The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music center, which attracted 8,500 persons last summer, is in aid of the Boston Symphony orchestra's summer school of music, now in its 12th season in conjunction with the Berkshire festival. Festivities, from 6 o'clock to 11 o'clock in the evening will include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper, the evening concert, awarding of prizes and finally, dancing on the lawn.

Through its annual seasons in Boston's Symphony hall and at the Esplanade concerts on the Charles River mall, its extensive tours and the mediums of recordings, radio and television, probably more people have heard the Pops and Mr. Fiedler than any other orchestra or conductor in history.

Mr. Fiedler, celebrating his 25th year as conductor, is currently leading the Art Commission Pop concerts in San Francisco's Civic auditorium, and will fly to the Berkshires for the Aug. 13 program.

Music Center Alumnus

The first half of the concert program will feature Thomas Schippers, a distinguished young alumnus of the Berkshire Music Center, conducting the Boston Symphony orchestra in a program of Bizet and Richard Strauss. Still in his early 20's, Mr. Schippers won national acclaim at the age of 19 when he made his debut on the podium with Gian-Carlo Menotti's opera, "The Consul."

Soloist on Mr. Schippers' half of the concert will be Prenda Lewis, celebrated young star of opera and musical comedy, in the final scene from Richard Strauss' "Salome." Miss Lewis made her debut with the Metropolitan Opera two years ago as Musetta in "La Boheme."

Mrs. Serge Koussevitsky, widow of the former Boston Symphony conductor, is chairman of the "Tanglewood on Parade" committee.

[37]

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
JUL 28 1954

Rare Operas at Tanglewood; Griller String Quartet Tonight

The Opera department of the Berkshire Music center last night presented three rarely-heard one-act operas in a performance in the theater concert hall at Tanglewood.

Open to "Friends"

The program, open to friends of the Berkshire Music center, was in addition to the regular schedule of weekly concerts, which gets underway this evening.

The operas presented last evening were Orazio Vecchi's "L'Amfiparnaso"; "There and Back" by Paul Hindemith, and "The Princess and the Pea" by Ernest Toch. They provided high humor for the audience, although there were some persons who did not remain through the three pieces.

Tonight the Griller String Quartet, with Sidney Griller and Jack O'Brien, violins; Philip Burton, viola and Colin Hampton, 'cello, will perform for the first time at Tanglewood in the new and popular chamber music series. The program in the theater-concert hall will include Mozart's Quartet in B flat ("Hunt"). Bloch's Quartet No. 4, which will be having its United States premiere and Beethoven's Quartet in G major, Opus 18, No. 2.

Chamber Orchestra

The weekly schedule continues Friday night with the chamber orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch playing in the theater concert hall, and on Saturday night and Sunday afternoon with concerts in the big shed by the full Boston Symphony orchestra.

It was announced today at Tanglewood that "The Tender Land," an opera by Aaron Copland on an American theme, will be performed by Center's Opera department next Monday and Tuesday.

The work is newly revised by its composer, who has been assistant director of the Berkshire Music center since the summer school of music was founded in 1940 in conjunction with the Berkshire festival. The production of the opera, being given its New England premiere, is one of the major projects of the summer for the Music center.

BOSTON, MASS.
AMERICAN
JUL 29 1954

Berkshire Programs

A program of Roussel, Ibert and Mozart performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Music Director Charles Munch on the podium, and Doriot Anthony as flute soloist, make up tomorrow evening's program in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Berlioz's dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet," with Beatrice Krebs, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone.

The festival chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center with the full 104-piece Boston Symphony orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, will be heard Saturday evening in the Music Shed. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Richard Burgin as guest conductor and Ruth Posselt as violin soloist, in a program of William Schuman, Vaughn Williams, Khatchaturian and Sibelius, will perform on Sunday afternoon in the Music Shed.

Evening concerts are at 8:30 p. m., the Sunday afternoon concert at 2:30 p. m. In the event of rain the Friday evening concert will be moved to the Music Shed. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the spacious Tanglewood lawns, are placed on sale on the day of the performance, and Festival patrons are invited to a public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday at 10:00 a. m., at the nominal charge of $1.00, for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD
JUL 29 1954

Pops at Tanglewood For Aug. 13 Benefit

Thomas Schippers, a distinguished product of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of Bizet and Richard Strauss music at the annual benefit performance for the orchestra's summer school at Tanglewood on Aug. 13.

The benefit, which attracted 8500 persons last year, also will feature a program given by the Boston Pops Orchestra, conducted by Arthur Fiedler. Fiedler, now conducting the Art Commission Pops concerts in San Francisco, will fly to the Berkshires for the "Tanglewood on Parade" concerts. It will be the Boston Pops' first appearance in the Tanglewood Music Shed.

Brenda Lewis, young star of opera and musical comedy, will be the soloist with the Symphony Orchestra, singing in the final scene of Strauss' "Salome."

WOODBURY, N. J.
TIMES & NEWS
JUL 29 1954

There's More To A Piano Than Playing

Lenox, Mass. (U.P) — To provide pianos for the famous musicians, singers and music students attending the Berkshire Festival here this summer, ~~60 of the~~ massive instruments and an electronic organ were shipped 750 miles from Cincinnati to the festival site at Tanglewood.

Two huge trailer trucks with their heavily padded cargo make the journey in two and a half days. Since drivers, by regulation, may only be on the road 10 hours a day, the trucks had to maintain a 30-mile-an-hour average despite occasional traffic tie-ups, stops for lunches and unpredictable weather.

Loading the pianos took 16 hours and 300 heavy double pads, collectively long enough to cover a third of an acre. Raymond Schmidt, 38, a piano-moving expert, supervised a series of complicated maneuvers at the (Baldwin) factory in which the pianos are wrapped and stacked on trucks without marring the finish. They had to be tightly taped against inevitable jarring during the long trek.

BOSTON, MASS.
EVENING GLOBE
JUL 29 1954

Copland Opera, "The Tender Land," "Tanglewood on Parade" at Lenox

"The Tender Land," opera by Aaron Copland on an American theme, newly revised by its composer, who has been assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center since the Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra was founded in 1940, will have its second production as the major project this Summer of the Berkshire Music Center. The New England premiere, and the first performance at Tanglewood, Lenox, will be given by students of the opera department, in the Theatre-Concert Hall, at 8:30 p. m. next Monday and Tuesday.

Applications for tickets—all seats are reserved for both performances—may be made to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, the society through which those interested in student activities at Tanglewood may support the school by voluntary contributions. Address the Friends' office, Tanglewood, or telephone Lenox 600.

Frederic Cohen, head of the opera department this Summer, had planned "The Tender Land" for Tanglewood this year before the opera was given its premiere by the New York City Opera Company, at City Center, New York, last April 1. Cohen's production will be an entirely different one from that given in New York, in line with the composer's orginal intention that his opera be produced by colleges, workshops and opera groups.

"I have revised the opera," Copland states, "in an attempt to give stronger emphasis to those dramatic motives which formerly had only lightly been sketched in." The Tanglewood production is in three acts, with three added scenes, and its period is now the Spring of 1910.

"Tanglewood on Parade" will be August 13. The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, from 6 to 11 p. m., will include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper, a gala evening concert, followed by drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

For the first time in the Tanglewood Music Shed, the Boston Pops Orchestra will perform, with Arthur Fiedler, celebrating his 25th year as its conductor, on the stand. The first half will feature Thomas Schippers, young alumnus of the Berkshire Music Center where he was a student in 1948, conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of Bizet and Richard Strauss. Soloist will be Brenda Lewis, in the final scene from Richard Strauss' "Salome."

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
EVE. NEWS
AUG 14 1954

SPRINGFIELD CHORUS SINGS AT FESTIVAL

Will Assist Munch, Boston Symphony, in Berlioz 'Requiem' at Lenox

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, conducting, gives the final pair of concerts of its enlarged 1954 Berkshire Festival, tonight at 8.30 p. m. and tomorrow afternoon at 2.30 p. m. in the huge Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox. If attendance figures of last summer, when 25,000 persons attended the final brace of concerts, can be considered a gauge and if fair weather prevails for the more than 12,000 persons who will hear the music on the spacious lawns outdoors, all records will be shattered in this 17th summer of symphonic music in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the 15th since the Boston Symphony Orchestra participated.

Tonight's program is all symphonic, with Mr. Munch leading the 104-piece Boston Symphony in Brahms' "Tragic Overture," Walter Piston's Symphony No. 4, Ra-

---

BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE
JUL 29 1954

Copland Opera, "The Tender Land," "Tanglewood on Parade" at Lenox

"The Tender Land," opera by Aaron Copland on an American theme, newly revised by its composer, who has been assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center since the Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra was founded in 1940, will have its second production as the major project this Summer of the Berkshire Music Center. The New England premiere, and the first performance at Tanglewood, Lenox, will be given by students of the opera department, in the Theatre-Concert Hall, at 8:30 p. m. next Monday and Tuesday.

Applications for tickets—all seats are reserved for both performances—may be made to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, the society through which those interested in student activities at Tanglewood may support the school by voluntary contributions. Address the Friends' office, Tanglewood, or telephone Lenox 600.

Frederic Cohen, head of the opera department this Summer, had planned "The Tender Land" for Tanglewood this year before the opera was given its premiere by the New York City Opera Company, at City Center, New York, last April 1. Cohen's production will be an entirely different one from that given in New York, in line with the composer's orginal intention that his opera be produced by colleges, workshops and opera groups.

"I have revised the opera," Copland states, "in an attempt to give stronger emphasis to those dramatic motives which formerly had only lightly been sketched in." The Tanglewood production is in three acts, with three added scenes, and its period is now the Spring of 1910.

"Tanglewood on-Parade"

"Tanglewood on Parade" will be August 13. The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, from 6 to 11 p. m., will include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper, a gala evening concert, followed by drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

For the first time in the Tanglewood Music Shed, the Boston Pops Orchestra will perform, with Arthur Fiedler, celebrating his 25th year as its conductor, on the stand. The first half will feature Thomas Schippers, young alumnus of the Berkshire Music Center where he was a student in 1948, conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of Bizet and Richard Strauss. Soloist will be Brenda Lewis, in the final scene from Richard Strauss' "Salome"

HAVERHILL, MASS.
GAZETTE
JUL 29 1954

Inn Proprietors Deny Commie Link

LENOX, Mass. (UP)—Two Lenox hotel proprietors deny an American Legion charge that their inns "cater to the faithful followers of the Communist Party."

The charge was made by Charles N. Collatos of Arlington, commander of the Massachusetts department of the Legion against Mrs. Lena Rosenberg, proprietor of Shadowood Inn and Bruno Aron, owner of Festival House.

They said their inns were used by guests who came to Lenox only to enjoy concerts at the nearby Berkshire Music Center. The 1954 music festival now is in progress.

* * * *

Collatos Wednesday urged the Massachusetts Commission on Communism to investigate the inns. He said both were used as a base for "Communist propaganda and indoctrination of the party faithful during the vacation months."

Collatos "unjustly accuses us and we have done nothing wrong," Mrs. Rosenberg said. "All we do is lodge and board our guests."

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
JUL 29 1954

1,300 Hear Griller Quartet; Miss Anthony Plays Tomorrow

The fourth weekly series of concerts in the 1954 Berkshire festival got underway last night, with the Griller String Quartet giving the first American performance of Ernest Bloch's Quartet No. 4 and two other traditional works by Mozart and Beethoven.

1,300 on Hand

There were 1,300 persons on hand in the theater-concert hall for the program, which opened with Mozart's Quartet in B flat, familiarly known as the "Hunt." The Bloch piece, written in 1953 and given its first public performance only 10 days ago by the Griller Quartet in London, followed, while Beethoven's Quartet in G major, No. 2, concluded the evening.

The critics last night were inclined to withhold judgment on the Bloch Quartet. It was pointed out that it has taken some time for general understanding of some of his other fine music.

The current series of concerts will continue tomorrow evening, again in the theater-concert hall, when the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony will perform under the direction of Charles Munch. Doriot Anthony, principal flutist in the Boston Symphony, will make her second appearance of the festival as soloist in Ibert's Flute Concerto. Earlier this season Miss Anthony was one of the soloists in the program of Bach Brandeburg Concertos.

Other Works Friday

Other works on the Friday evening program will be Roussel's "The Spider's Feast" and Mozart's Serenade for Eight Winds and "Paris" Symphony. All except the "Paris" symphony will be having their Tanglewood premieres.

On Saturday night and Sunday afternoon, the scene will shift as usual to the big shed, where the full 104-piece Boston Symphony will perform.

The Saturday night concert will continue the celebration of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of Hector Berlioz, as Mr. Munch conducts the orchestra, soloists and festival chorus in the dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet." The soloists will be Beatrice Krebs, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone.

Burgin to Conduct

Richard Burgin, associate conductor and concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, will lead the orchestra for the first time at Tanglewood on Sunday in William Schuman's "American Festival Overture," Vaughn Williams' "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis," the Sibelius Second Symphony and Khatchaturian's Violin Concerto. Ruth Posselt will be the soloist in the Khatchaturian piece.

Scheduled at the big shed this evening at 8.30 o'clock will be a symphony concert by students of the Berkshire Music Center's orchestra department. Friends of the center, the summer school of music conducted in connectio with the festival, have been vited.

CLAREMONT, N. H.
EAGLE
JUL 29 1954

Berkshire Festival In Fourth Week

LENOX, July 29—The Current (fourth) week of Berkshire festival concerts at Tanglewood, includes a program of Roussel, Ibert and Mozart performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony orchestra, with Music Director Charles Munch on the podium, and Doriot Anthony as flute soloist, on Friday evening (July 30) in the Theatre - Concert hall; Berlioz' dramatic symphony " Romeo and Juliet," with Beatrice Krebs, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone, and the Festival chorus of students of the Berkshire Music center with the full 104-piece Boston Symphony orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, on Saturday evening in the music shed; and the Boston Symphony orchestra, with Richard Burgin as guest conductor and Ruth Posselt as violin soloist, in a program of William Schuman, Vaughan Williams, Khatchaturian and Sibelius, on Sunday afternoon in the music shed.

"Romeo and Juliet," performed in its complete form by Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony orchestra in Boston (1952-53), Tanglewood (1953), New York and Washington, D. C. (1953-54), and recorded, is being repeated this summer as one of several of Berlioz' rarely-performed full-length works, in honor of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of the French composer.

Miss Posselt, Mrs. Burgin in private life, will appear on the same program with her husband for the first time in the Berkshires. The Khatchaturian Concerto she will perform in a Tanglewood premiere.

Evening concerts are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon concert at 2:30 p.m.

[38]

MONTREAL, CANADA
STAR

JUL 29 1954

At Tanglewood Festival

First American Performance Of Opera and Bloch Quartet

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

Special to The Star from the N.Y. Herald Tribune

LENOX, Mass., July 29—Ernst Bloch's fourth quartet had its first American performance last night when it was played by the Griller Quartet before an audience of 1,300 in the theatre concert hall at Tanglewood.

This new quartet is distinguished by a quiet, calm and reposeful mood. Its texture is lighter than in the previous ones, yet it has terrific vitality without retaining the barbaric ingredients once associated with his chamber music. Even the third movement, the presto scherzo, has a soft, lyrical interlude, almost Oriental in nature. The other three movements all begin with tranquility and the first and last both end with similarly-paced episodes with their central and main sections energetic and decisive.

THE Grillers gave an especially graphic performance of the impressive slow movement in which they kept the contrapuntal lines clearly distinct and, incidentally, achieved some of the most effective ponticello bowing heard here in a long time. After the slow introduction of the final movement, Bloch makes a reference to most of the themes of the previous movements and proceeds then with a new vigorous theme before receding to the final nostalgic quiet epiloge.

The Griller Quartet played the composition for the first time anywhere in London 10 days ago. The Grillers have had the honor of introducing two of Mr. Bloch's previous quartets and thus it was only natural that he should rely on them to introduce this latest one, finished last November and dedicated to his English friend, Ernest Chapman.

LENOX, Mass., July 29—An audience of 1,400 crowded the intimate theatre-concert hall here Tuesday night as students of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Centre, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival, presented a program of three rarely-heard one-act operas, under the direction of Frederic Cohen.

Orazio Vecchi's L'Amfiparnaso, a madrigal opera composed in 1954, was the evening's novelty. This was its first staged performance in America.

IN COLORFUL robes a chorus of 34 representing the poets of Parnassus sang in Italian, while seventeen pantomimists acted little stories of servant pranks, the loneliness of young lovers, a captain drilling unruly soldiers, clown robbing a grave doctor, pantalone burlesquing a choral conductor. The nine scenes were announced by pages bearing placards.

Hit of the performance were the lively antics of the captain (Antonio Giardino) and Pantalone (Jack Hornor). The colorful commedia dell'arte costumes were designed by Leo Van Witsen. Hugh Ross, who conducted the chorus, made a surprise appearance in jester's cap and bells and long cape, and was carried off the stage at the finale in high indignity.

PAUL HINDERMITH'S 10-minute sketch, There and Back; and Ernst Toch's tale opera, The Princess and the Pea, completed the bill. The Hindemith Pastiche, given first at Tanglewood when the composer was composition teacher in residence in 1940, was sung first forward and then in reverse action.

John Blankenchip, who designed all three operas, evoked the jazz age in silver setting, and for the Toch opera designed an airy court and bedroom of peagreen and yellow.

The Toch piece was staged in honor of the Austrian-American composer, who is on the Berkshire music centre's faculty this summer.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION

JUL 31 1954

WOMAN FLUTIST STAR IN CONCERT AT TANGLEWOOD

Doriot Dwyer Acclaimed at Theater Program; 'Romeo And Juliet' Tonight

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 30—Doriot Anthony Dwyer, principal flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was the bright particular star of the Chamber-orchestra concert given tonight under the direction of Charles Munch. The program devoted to the music of Roussel, Ibert and Mozart drew 2500 people to the theater shed and adjacent lawn.

The brilliant and demanding flute concerto by Jacques Ibert proved a perfect vehicle to display the amazing technical resources and sound musicianship of this petite and charming flutist. She was recalled at least a half dozen times.

Two Mozart Works

The color, animation and lyric beauty in this concerto, fine tonal contrasts and cadenzas which all for enormous technical resources, all of which were available in abundance. The small orchestra joined with Mr. Munch in providing splendid collaboration.

The program opened with excerpts from "The Spider's Web," a ballet-pantomime by Albert Roussel. In this delightful work the composer has been singularly successful in devising music for this microscopic drama. It has to do with ants, butterflies and, of course the spider. There are several charming waltz fragments and an impressive funeral procession. Mr. Munch was particularly happy in his reading of this work, providing colors which shimmered and rhythms which entranced.

Mozart was represented by two works. The first was his "Serenade in C Minor for two oboes, two clarinets, two horns and two bassoons." The virtuosi of the Boston Symphony Orchestra gave a wonderfully clear, poetic and concentrated performance. Particularly fine was the minuet, a contrapuntal display piece. This work was written to entertain, yet is more than a display piece, it has a depth of feeling and sweetness which rise far above the wit, good humor and cleverness one finds so often in the works of Haydn.

"Paris" Symphony Played

The final work on the program was the "Symphony in D Minor" known as the "Paris." Mozart had not composed a symphony for four years, for the good reason that there had been no call for one. His experiences during his Paris visit were none too happy and there are moments in this symphony when this unhappiness is apparent. The performance tonight was particularly felicitous.

Tomorrow night there will be a performance of Berlioz' symphonic drama "Romeo and Juliet." The soloists will be Beatrice Krebs, contralto; John McColum, tenor and Nicola Moscana, bass. The festival chorus will participate. This work was performed here last summer with Jennie Tourel. The two other soloists were the same.

LOWELL, MASS.
SUN

JUL 29 1954

MUSIC

Festival Highlights

Doriot Anthony, principal flutist of the Boston Symphony orchestra will make her second appearance at the Berkshire Festival tomorrow evening at the program in the Theatre-Concert hall. Earlier this season she was one of the soloists in the program of Bach Brandenburg concertos.

The program, under the baton of Charles Munch, will include Roussel's "The Spider's Feast" the Flute Concerto by Jacques Ibert, Mozart's "Serenade for Eight Winds, all new to Tanglewood, and also Mozart's "Paris Symphony".

Saturday evening will have a program continuing the celebration of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of Hector Berlioz. Music Director Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony orchestra, soloists and Festival chorus of students in the composer's dramatic symphony Romeo and Juliet". This program will be in the Music shed.

On Sunday afternoon, Richard Burgin, associate conductor and concert master of the Boston Symphony, will lead the orchestra for the first time at Tanglewood. The program will include William Schuman's "American Festival Overture", Vaughn Williams' "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis", the Sibelius Second Symphony and Katchaturian's Violin Concerto in which Ruth Posselt will be the soloist.

OSSINING, N. Y.
CITIZEN-REGISTER

JUL 30 1954

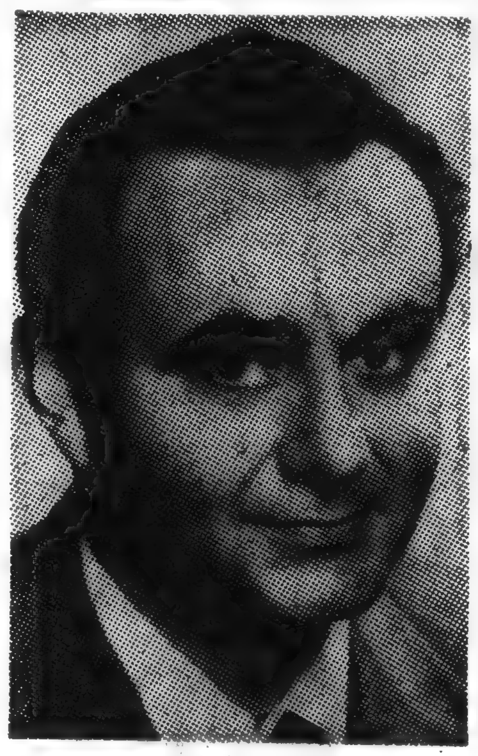
Mary MacKenzie Has Singing Role

Miss Mary MacKenzie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alex MacKenzie of Morningside Drive, Croton, will sing a leading role in Aaron Copeland's opera, "The Tender Land," Monday night at the Theater Concert Hall of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass.

Miss MacKenzie, a contralto, was recently graduated from Juilliard School of Music and has a scholarship at Tanglewood.

ALBANY, N. Y.
KNICKERBOCKER NEWS

JUL 30 1954



FESTIVAL SOLOIST—Nicola Moscana, bass-baritone, will be soloist in the dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform under the baton of Charles Munch and with the Festival Chorus at a Berkshire Festival concert tomorrow night at Tanglewood.

BROOKLYN, N.Y
RECORD
7/30/54

MAN ABOUT BROOKLYN

By Charles Richman

TREK: Up the Taconic, through Conn. and into Lenox, Mass. The way is lined with scenic beauty. Try to travel on a Thursday afternoon for a long week-end. You will find it uncrowded and fast without the speed showing on your nerves.

This time we come to an interesting inn called Avaloch. Operated by a young man who is cordial and a good host with the unique name of "Skip," you are pleasantly surprised that it is just across the street from Tanglewood, music center of the Berkshires.

The resort has several buildings perched atop the rambling hills and affording a view of rich countryside and lakelands. There are the facilities for the athletic with tennis, badminton, ping-pong, and volley-ball on the grounds. There are lakes and golf near-by.

The informality of the place reaches you right from the start. After your day of music or ballet, there is the inn called Five Reasons with all the rich furnishings of the days of yore making the imported beer taste that much better. A feeling of comradeship permeates through the entire establishment. In the other buildings there are rooms for talk. You make your selection and all are happy.

On a Thursday night to the Tanglewood "friends" concert with the students acting as guest conductors. Folks come from all parts of the country to listen to the charming music. Thinking aloud, it made me wonder how come our town has not a music shell in the Tanglewood fashion but appears to be satisfied with antiquated, delapidated most uncomfortable and poorly situated Lewisohn Stadium.

JACOB'S PILLOW: A few miles outside of SCHENECTADY, N. Y.

GAZETTE

JUL 30 1954

Tanglewood Concert Will Feature Flutist

Doriot Anthony, principal flutist of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will be the featured soloist tonight in the Berkshire Festival concert at the Theater-Concert hall at Tanglewood, with Charles Munch conducting. The program will open at 8:30 o'clock.

* * *

MUNCH also will conduct the full Boston Symphony orchestra with festival chorus and soloists tomorrow at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed at Tanglewood. Richard Burgin will conduct the Sunday afternoon program at 2:30 with his wife, Ruth Posselt, as the featured soloist in the Khatchaturian violin concerto.

Aaron Coplon's "The Tender Land," newly revised by the composer, will have its second production anywhere Monday evening in the Theater-Concert hall. The performance also will be repeated on Tuesday evening and both performances will be given by students of the opera department at the Berkshire Music center. Frederic Cohen is serving as producer.

The program tonight will include Roussel's "The Spider's Feast," the Ibert concerto and the Mozart "Serenade for Eight Winds, K. 388" and the "Paris Symphony, K. 297."

* * *

BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD

JUL 31 1954

Berlioz "Romeo" at Tanglewood Tonight

Continuing the celebration of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of Hector Berlioz Music Director Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra, soloists and Festival Chorus of students in the composer's dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet" tonight at 8:30 p.m. in the Music Shed, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

WE DENT shire wood.
MacK

MONTREAL, CANADA
STAR
JUL 29 1954

At Tanglewood Festival

First American Performance Of Opera and Bloch Quartet

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

Special to The Star from the N.Y. Herald Tribune

LENOX, Mass., July 29—Ernst Bloch's fourth quartet had its first American performance last night when it was played by the Griller Quartet before an audience of 1,300 in the theatre concert hall at Tanglewood.

This new quartet is distinguished by a quiet, calm and reposeful mood. Its texture is lighter than in the previous ones, yet it has terrific vitality without retaining the barbaric ingredients once associated with his chamber music. Even the third movement, the presto scherzo, has a soft, lyrical interlude, almost Oriental in nature. The other three movements all begin with tranquility and the first and last both end with similarly-paced episodes with their central and main sections energetic and decisive.

THE Grillers gave an especially graphic performance of the impressive slow movement in which they kept the contrapuntal lines clearly distinct and, incidentally, achieved some of the most effective ponticello bowing heard here in a long time. After the slow introduction of the final movement, Bloch makes a reference to most of the themes of the previous movements and proceeds then with a new vigorous theme before receding to the final nostalgic quiet epiloge.

The Griller Quartet played the composition for the first time anywhere in London 10 days ago. The Grillers have had the honor of introducing two of Mr. Bloch's previous quartets and thus it was only natural that he should rely on them to introduce this latest one, finished last November and dedicated to his English friend, Ernest Chapman.

LENOX, Mass., July 29—An audience of 1,400 crowded the intimate theatre-concert hall here Tuesday night as students of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Centre, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival, presented a program of three rarely-heard one-act operas, under the direction of Frederic Cohen.

Orazio Vecchi's L'Amfiparnaso, a madrigal opera composed in 1954, was the evening's novelty. This was its first staged performance in America.

IN COLORFUL robes a chorus of 34 representing the poets of Parnassus sang in Italian, while seventeen pantomimists acted little stories of servant pranks, the loneliness of young lovers, a captain drilling unruly soldiers, clown robbing a grave doctor, pantalone burlesquing a choral conductor. The nine scenes were announced by pages bearing placards.

Hit of the performance were the lively antics of the captain (Antonio Giardino) and Pantalone (Jack Hornor). The colorful commedia dell'arte costumes were designed by Leo Van Witsen. Hugh Ross, who conducted the chorus, made a surprise appearance in jester's cap and bells and long cape, and was carried off the stage at the finale in high indignity.

PAUL HINDERMITH'S 10-minute sketch, There and Back; and Ernst Toch's tale opera, The Princess and the Pea, completed the bill. The Hindemith Pastiche, given first at Tanglewood when the composer was composition teacher in residence in 1940, was sung first forward and then in reverse action.

John Blankenchip, who designed all three operas, evoked the jazz age in silver setting, and for the Toch opera designed an airy court and bedroom of peagreen and yellow.

The Toch piece was staged in honor of the Austrian-American composer, who is on the Berkshire music centre's faculty this summer.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION
JUL 31 1954

WOMAN FLUTIST STAR IN CONCERT AT TANGLEWOOD

Doriot Dwyer Acclaimed at Theater Program; 'Romeo And Juliet' Tonight

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 30—Doriot Anthony Dwyer, principal flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was the bright particular star of the Chamber-orchestra concert given tonight under the direction of Charles Munch. The program devoted to the music of Roussel, Ibert and Mozart drew 2500 people to the theater shed and adjacent lawn.

The brilliant and demanding flute concerto by Jacques Ibert proved a perfect vehicle to display the amazing technical resources and sound musicianship of this petite and charming flutist. She was recalled at least a half dozen times.

Two Mozart Works

The color, animation and lyric beauty in this concerto, fine tonal contrasts and cadenzas which all for enormous technical resources, all of which were available in abundance. The small orchestra joined with Mr. Munch in providing splendid collaboration.

The program opened with excerpts from "The Spider's Web," a ballet-pantomime by Albert Roussel. In this delightful work the composer has been singularly successful in devising music for this microscopic drama. It has to do with ants, butterflies and, of course the spider. There are several charming waltz fragments and an impressive funeral procession. Mr. Munch was particularly happy in his reading of this work, providing colors which shimmered and rhythms which entranced.

Mozart was represented by two works. The first was his "Serenade in C Minor for two oboes, two clarinets, two horns and two bassoons." The virtuosi of the Boston Symphony Orchestra gave a wonderfully clear, poetic and concentrated performance. Particularly fine was the minuet, a contrapuntal display piece. This work was written to entertain, yet is more than a display piece, it has a depth of feeling and sweetness which rise far above the wit, good humor and cleverness one finds so often in the works of Haydn.

"Paris" Symphony Played

The final work on the program was the "Symphony in D Minor" known as the "Paris." Mozart had not composed a symphony for four years, for the good reason that there had been no call for one. His experiences during his Paris visit were none too happy and there are moments in this symphony when this unhappiness is apparent. The performance tonight was particularly felicitous.

Tomorrow night there will be a performance of Berlioz' symphonic drama "Romeo and Juliet." The soloists will be Beatrice Krebs, contralto; John McCollum, tenor and Nicola Moscana, bass. The festival chorus will participate. This work was performed here last summer with Jennie Tourel. The two other soloists were the same.

[illegible]
JUL 29 1954

MUSIC

Festival Highlights

Doriot Anthony, principal flutist of the Boston Symphony orchestra will make her second appearance at the Berkshire Festival tomorrow evening at the program in the Theatre-Concert hall. Earlier this season she was one of the soloists in the program of Bach Brandenburg concertos.

The program, under the baton of Charles Munch, will include Roussel's "The Spider's Feast", the Flute Concerto by Jacques Ibert, Mozart's "Serenade for Eight Winds, all new to Tanglewood, and also Mozart's "Paris Symphony".

Saturday evening will have a program continuing the celebration of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of Hector Berlioz. Music Director Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony orchestra, soloists and Festival chorus of students in the composer's dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet". This program will be in the Music shed.

On Sunday afternoon, Richard Burgin, associate conductor and concert master of the Boston Symphony, will lead the orchestra for the first time at Tanglewood. The program will include William Schuman's "American Festival Overture", Vaughn Williams' "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis", the Sibelius Second Symphony and Katchaturian's Violin Concerto in which Ruth Posselt will be the soloist.

OSSINING, N. Y.
CITIZEN-REGISTER
JUL 30 1954

Mary MacKenzie Has Singing Role

Miss Mary MacKenzie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alex MacKenzie of Morningside Drive, Croton, will sing a leading role in Aaron Copeland's opera, "The Tender Land," Monday night at the Theater Concert Hall of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass.

Miss MacKenzie, a contralto, was recently graduated from Juilliard School of Music and has a scholarship at Tanglewood.

ALBANY, N. Y.
KNICKERBOCKER NEWS
JUL 30 1954

FESTIVAL SOLOIST—Nicola Moscana, bass-baritone, will be soloist in the dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform under the baton of Charles Munch and with the Festival Chorus at a Berkshire Festival concert tomorrow night at Tanglewood.

BROOKLYN, N.Y
RECORD
7/30/54

MAN ABOUT BROOKLYN

By Charles Richman

TREK: Up the Taconic, through Conn. and into Lenox, Mass. The way is lined with scenic beauty. Try to travel on a Thursday afternoon for a long week-end. You will find it uncrowded and fast without the speed showing on your nerves.

This time we come to an interesting inn called Avaloch. Operated by a young man who is cordial and a good host with the unique name of "Skip," you are pleasantly surprised that it is just across the street from Tanglewood, music center of the Berkshires.

The resort has several buildings perched atop the rambling hills and affording a view of rich countryside and lakelands. There are the facilities for the athletic with tennis, badminton, ping-pong, and volley-ball on the grounds. There are lakes and golf near-by.

The informality of the place reaches you right from the start. After your day of music or ballet, there is the inn called Five Reasons with all the rich furnishings of the days of yore making the imported beer taste that much better. A feeling of comradeship permeates through the entire establishment. In the other buildings there are rooms for talk. You make your selection and all are happy.

On a Thursday night to the Tanglewood "friends" concert with the students acting as guest conductors. Folks come from all parts of the country to listen to the charming music. Thinking aloud, it made me wonder how come our town has not a music shell in the Tanglewood fashion but appears to be satisfied with antiquated, delapidated most uncomfortable and poorly situated Lewisohn Stadium.

JACOB'S PILLOW: A few miles outside of Lenox

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
JUL 30 1954

Tanglewood Concert Will Feature Flutist

Doriot Anthony, principal flutist of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will be the featured soloist tonight in the Berkshire Festival concert at the Theater-Concert hall at Tanglewood, with Charles Munch conducting. The program will open at 8:30 o'clock.

* * *

MUNCH also will conduct the full Boston Symphony orchestra with festival chorus and soloists tomorrow at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed at Tanglewood. Richard Burgin will conduct the Sunday afternoon program at 2:30 with his wife, Ruth Posselt, as the featured soloist in the Khatchaturian violin concerto.

Aaron Coplon's "The Tender Land," newly revised by the composer, will have its second production anywhere Monday evening in the Theater-Concert hall. The performance also will be repeated on Tuesday evening and both performances will be given by students of the opera department at the Berkshire Music center. Frederic Cohen is serving as producer.

The program tonight will include Roussel's "The Spider's Feast," the Ibert concerto and the Mozart "Serenade for Eight Winds, K. 388" and the "Paris Symphony, K. 297."

BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD
JUL 31 1954

Berlioz "Romeo" at Tanglewood Tonight

Continuing the celebration of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of Hector Berlioz Music Director Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra, soloists and Festival Chorus of students in the composer's dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet" tonight at 8:30 p.m. in the Music Shed, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

[39]

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
EVE. NEWS
JUL 31 1954

Tanglewood Soloist on Friday

This unusual camera study catches Seymour Lipkin, pianist, in a pensive mood, as he prepares for his appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Mozart Piano Concerto in B Flat Friday night at Tanglewood. Lukas Foss will conduct.

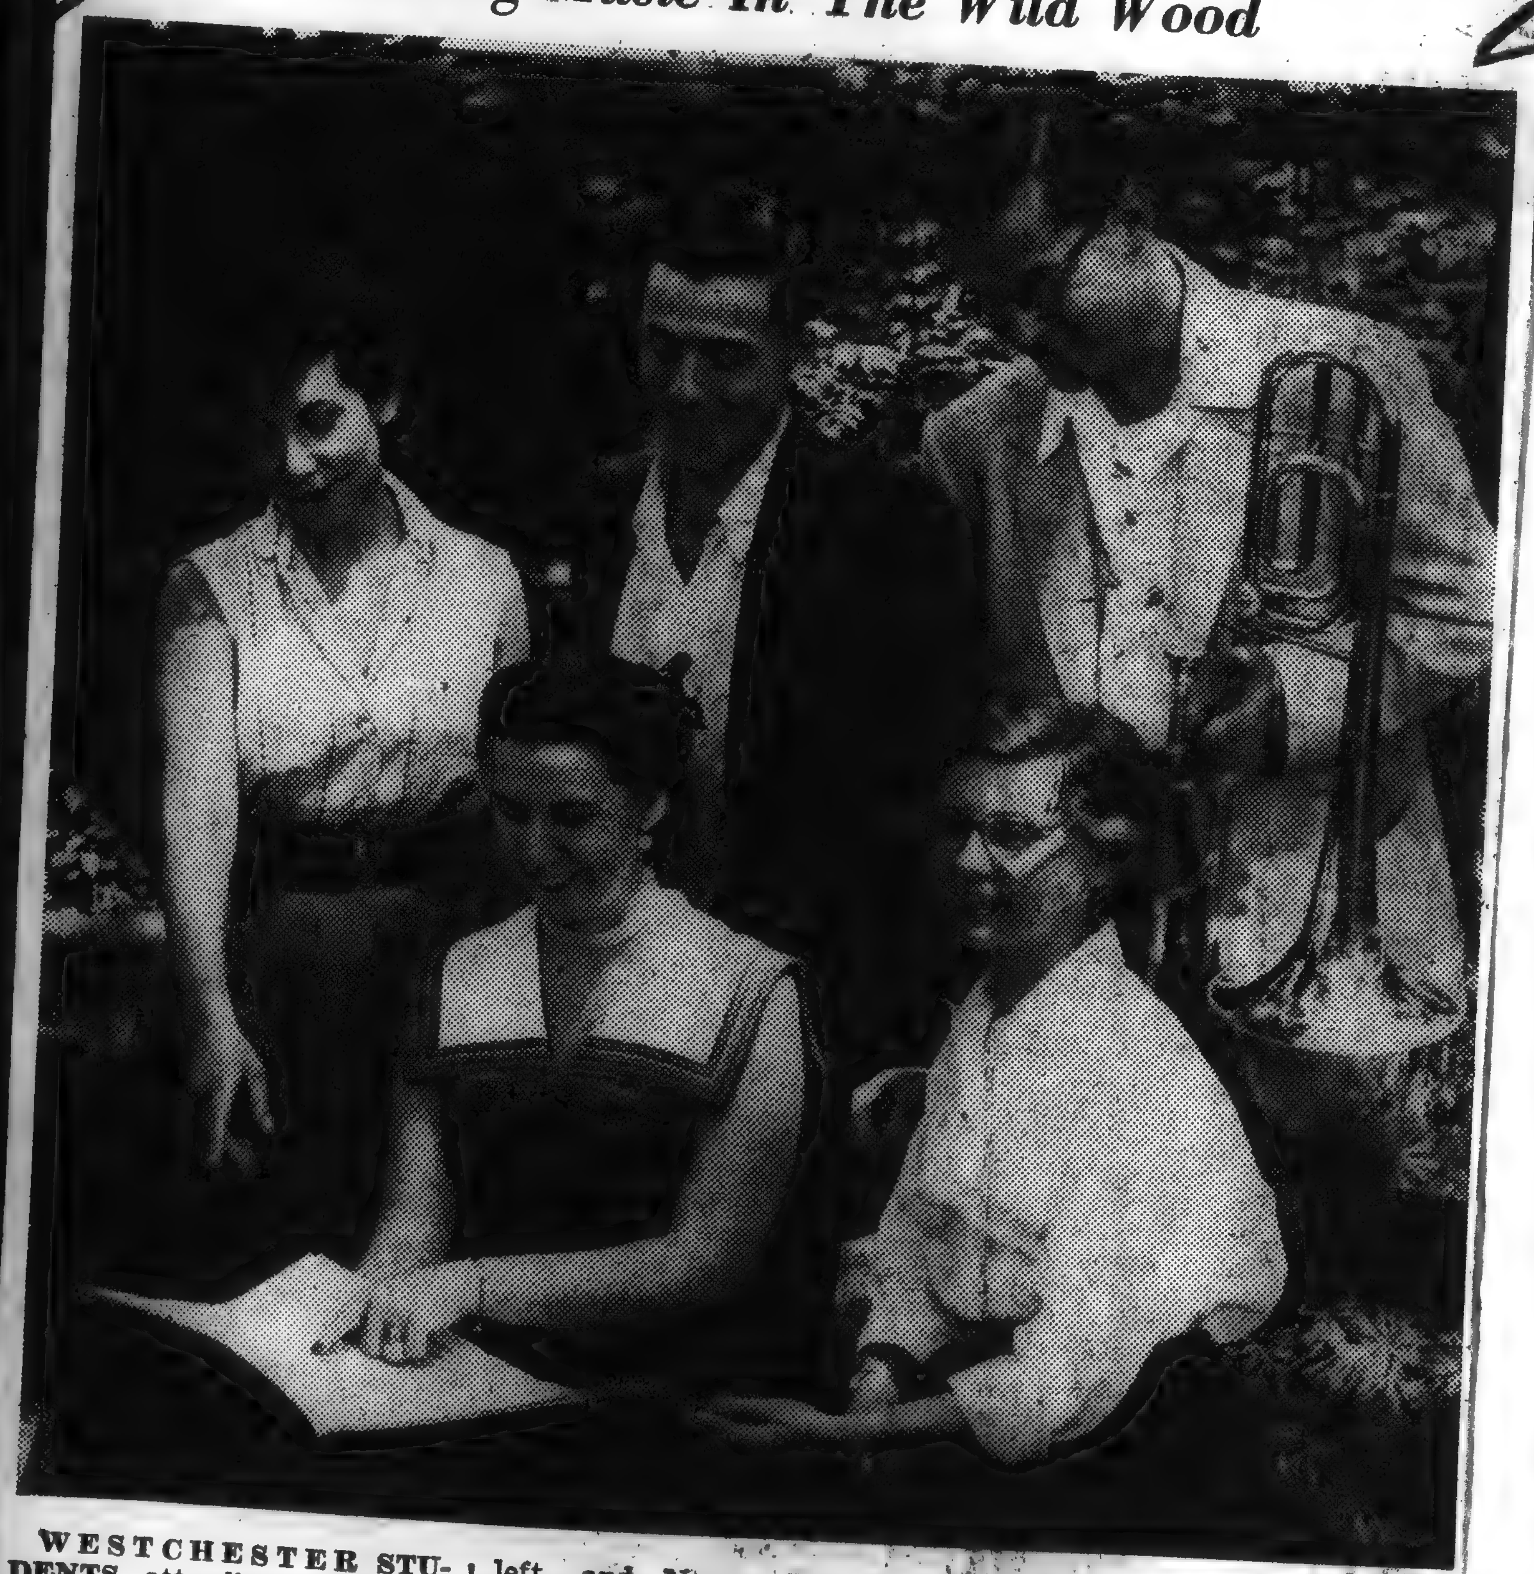
G. P. GRAHAM
ASSOCIATED NEGRO PRESS
373 WEST 126 STREET, SUITE 5
NEW YORK 27, N. Y.

N.Y. Courier
7/31/54

STUDENT ARTISTS — Negro students from New York and other parts of the country are studying on scholarships at the Berkshire Music Center, Lenox, Mass. Shown securing the autographs of baritone Fred Thomas of New York and Eva Jessye of Lawrence, Mass., both well-known musicians, are, seated: Mrs. Charlotte Holloman, East Elmhurst, L. I.; Benjamin Patterson, Turtle Creek, Pa.; Reri Lorraine Grist, New York City, and Joseph Moore, Detroit. Standing, left to right, are Emma Goldman, New Orleans; Mr. Thomas, Harold Johnson, Chicago; Herbert Boatright, Boston; Miss Jessye and Theresa Green, Baltimore.

YONKERS, N .Y.
HERALD STATESMAN
JUL 31 1954

Making Music In The Wild Wood



WESTCHESTER STUDENTS attending the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., are: Mary MacKenzie of Croton, seated at left, and Nancy Turner of Hastings-on-Hudson, and standing, Evelyn Lear of Yonkers and Jack Gottlieb and Lawrence Weinman of New Rochelle. The center Summer School of Music is maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with its Berkshire Festival.

NEW CANAAN, CONN
ADVERTISER
7/29/54

Local Girl Attending School At Tanglewood

Miss Sandys Moore (left), daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John C. B. Moore of West Road, is shown above with Miss Adrienne Rosenbaum of West Hartford at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., where they are participating in the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with its Berkshire Festival.

Hugh Ross, head of the center's choral department is in the center of the picture. Miss Moore will be a sophomore this fall at Radcliffe College at Cambridge, Mass., where she is a member of the Radcliffe Choral Society. She is studying the flute at the summer school.

With 35 states and 12 foreign countries represented in its enrollment of 375 music students, the Berkshire Music Center is now midway through its 12th season at Tanglewood. The only school in the world sponsored by a major symphony orchestra it will continue through the end of the festival concerts on August 15.

Culminating the current season, "Tanglewood on Parade" will be presented on Friday, August 13, as the anual benefit for the center, at which festivities from 6 p.m. to 11 o'clock will include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper and a gala evening concert, followed by dancing on the lawn.

For the first time in the Tanglewood Music Shed, the Boston Pops Orchestra will perform that evening with Arthur Fielder, celebrating his 25th year as its conductor, on the podium. The pops orchestra, under the shed, will share the evening's concert, scheduled for 8:15 o'clock with the Boston Symphony which will perform Bizet's "Symphony in C Major" and the final scene of "Salome" by Strauss, with the lead role sung by Brenda Lewis, soprano, and popular star of Broadway, the Metropolitan and New York City Opera companies.

Concerts in the shed for the balance of this season will be held on Saturday evenings, July 31 and August 7, and Sunday afternoons, August 1, 8 and 15. Chamber music concerts, held in the theatre, will be presented in the evening on this Friday, and on Wednesday, August 4, Friday, August 6, Wednesday, August 11 and Thursday, August 12.

The Berkshire Music Center was established in 1940 by the Boston Symphony Orchestra to provide a campus where young musicians could add to their professional training and artistic experience under the guidance of eminent musicians and teachers. Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra, is director of the center. The eminent American composer, Aaron Copland, is the assistant director, and Ralph Berkowitz, pianist on the staff of the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia, is dean.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
EYE. NEWS

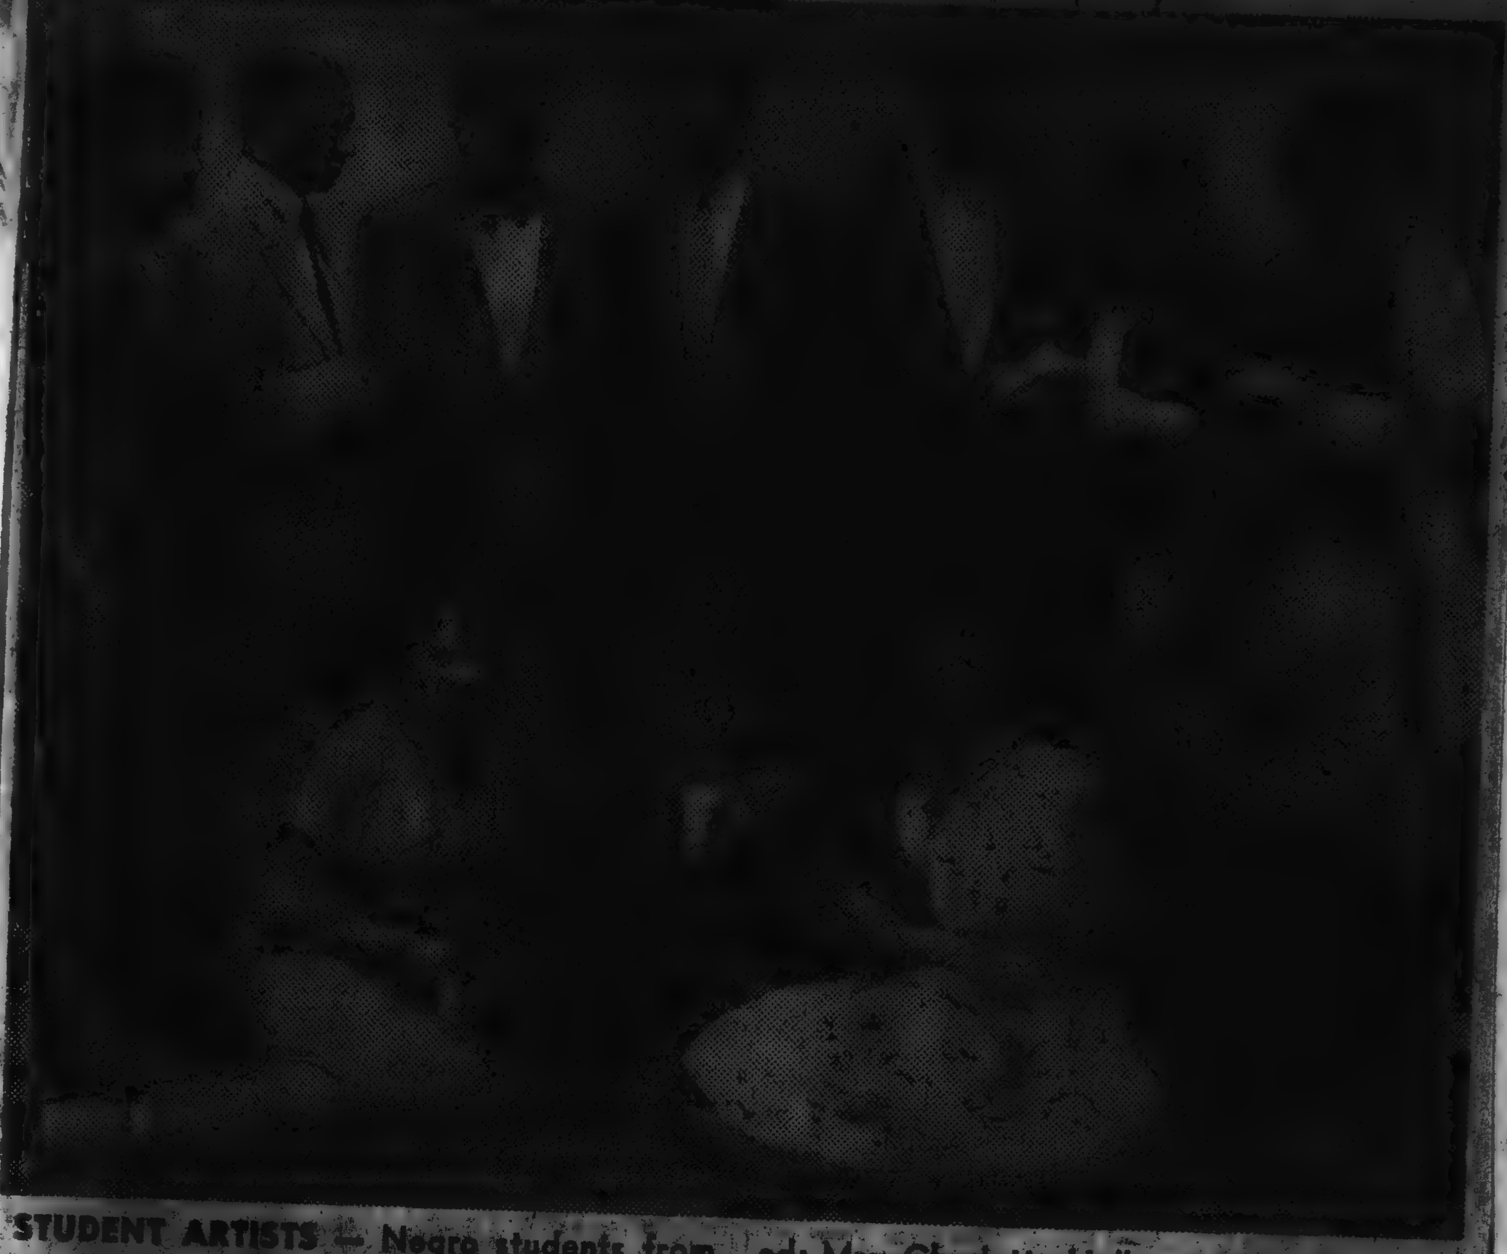
JUL 31 1954

Tanglewood Soloist on Friday

This unusual camera study catches Seymour Lipkin, pianist, in a pensive mood, as he prepares for his appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Mozart Piano Concerto in B Flat Friday night at Tanglewood. Lukas Foss will conduct.

G. P. GRAHAM
ASSOCIATED NEGRO PRESS
373 WEST 126 STREET, SUITE 5
NEW YORK 27, N. Y.

N.Y. Courier
7/31/54

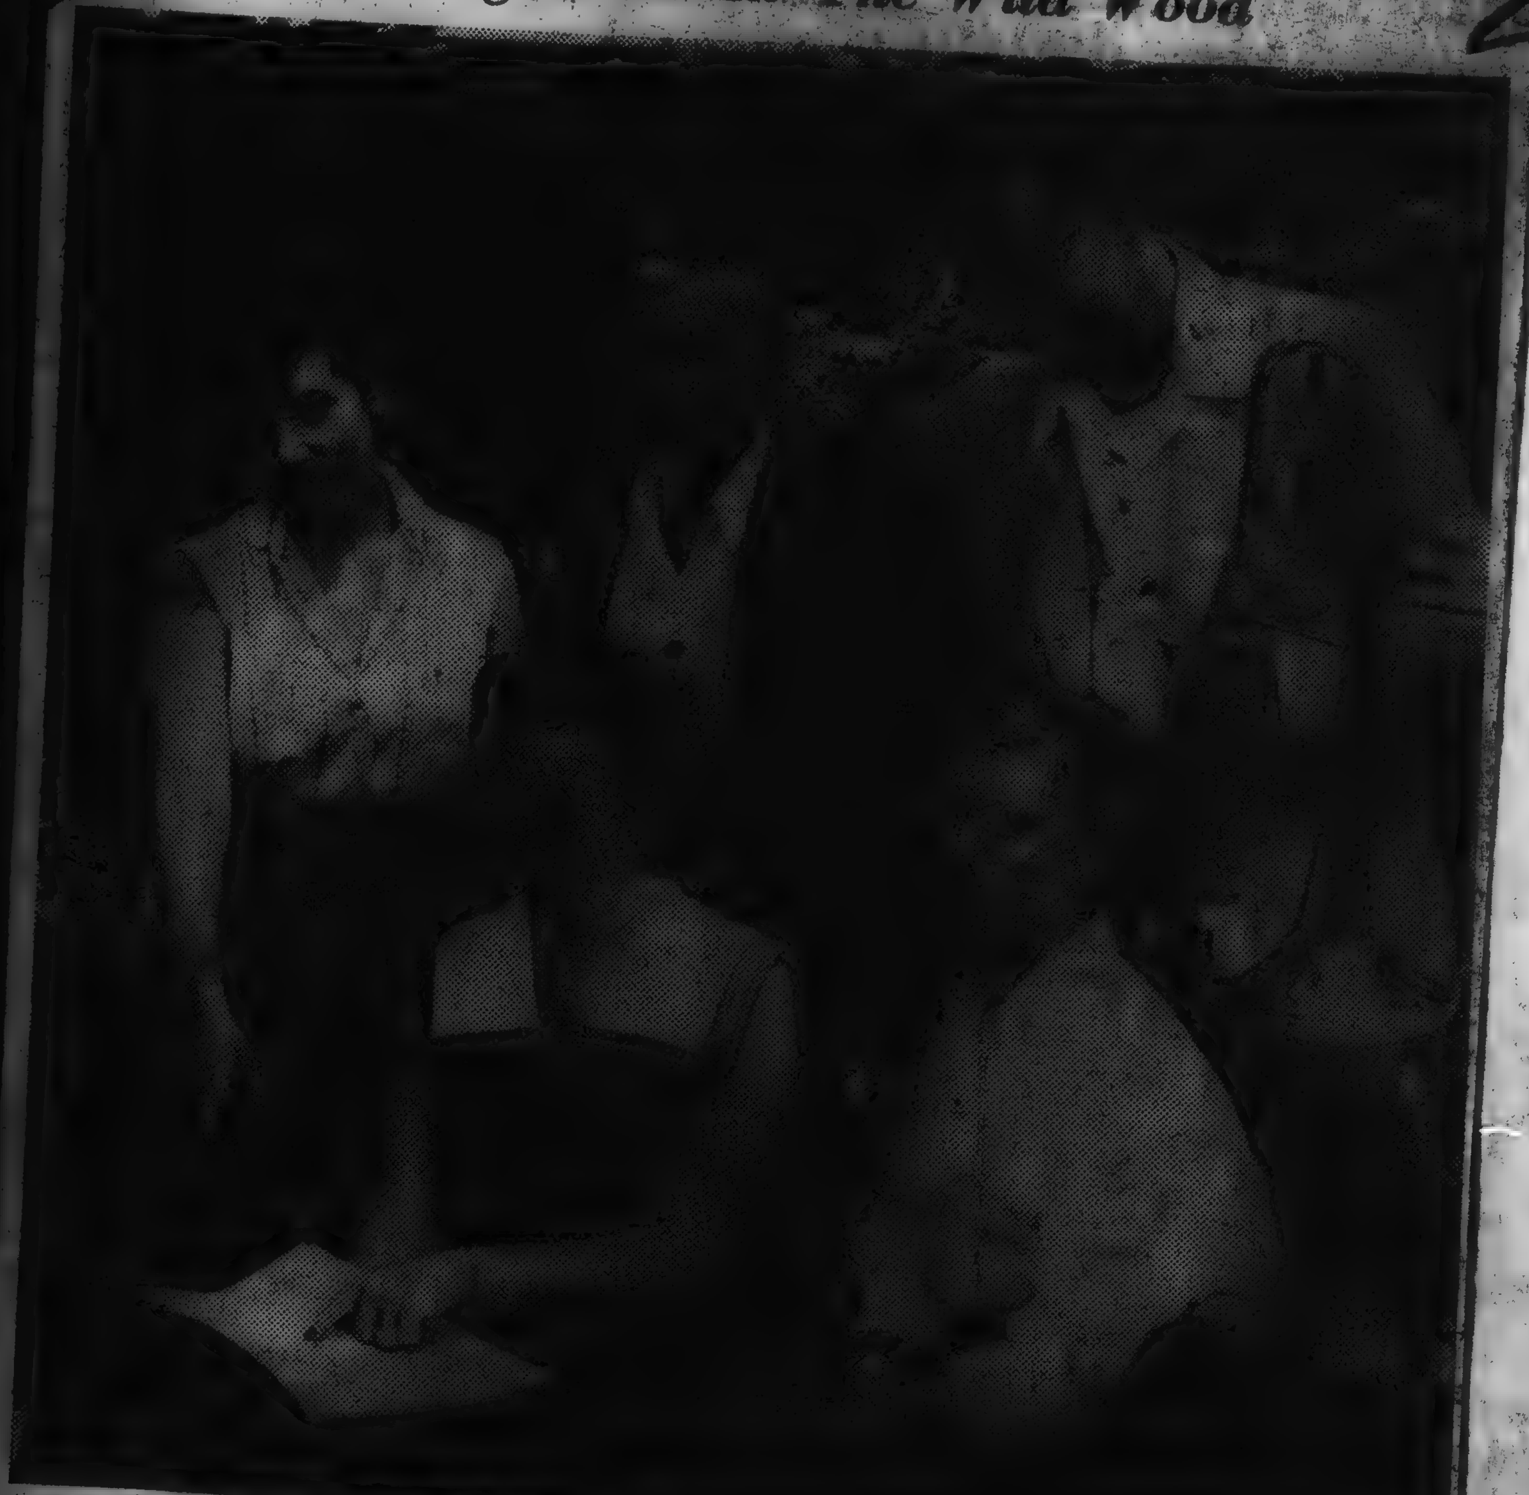


STUDENT ARTISTS — Negro students from New York and other parts of the country are studying on scholarships at the Berkshire Music Center, Lenox, Mass. Shown securing the autographs of baritone Fred Thomas of New York and Eva Jessye of Lawrence, Mass., both well-known musicians, are, seated: Mrs. Charlotte Holloman, East Elmhurst, L. I.; Benjamin Patterson, Turtle Creek, Pa.; Reri Lorraine Grist, New York City, and Joseph Moore, Detroit. Standing, left to right, are Emma Goldman, New Orleans; Mr. Thomas, Harold Johnson, Chicago; Herbert Boatright, Boston; Miss Jessye and Therese Green, Baltimore.

YONKERS, N.Y.
HERALD STATESMAN

JUL 31 1954

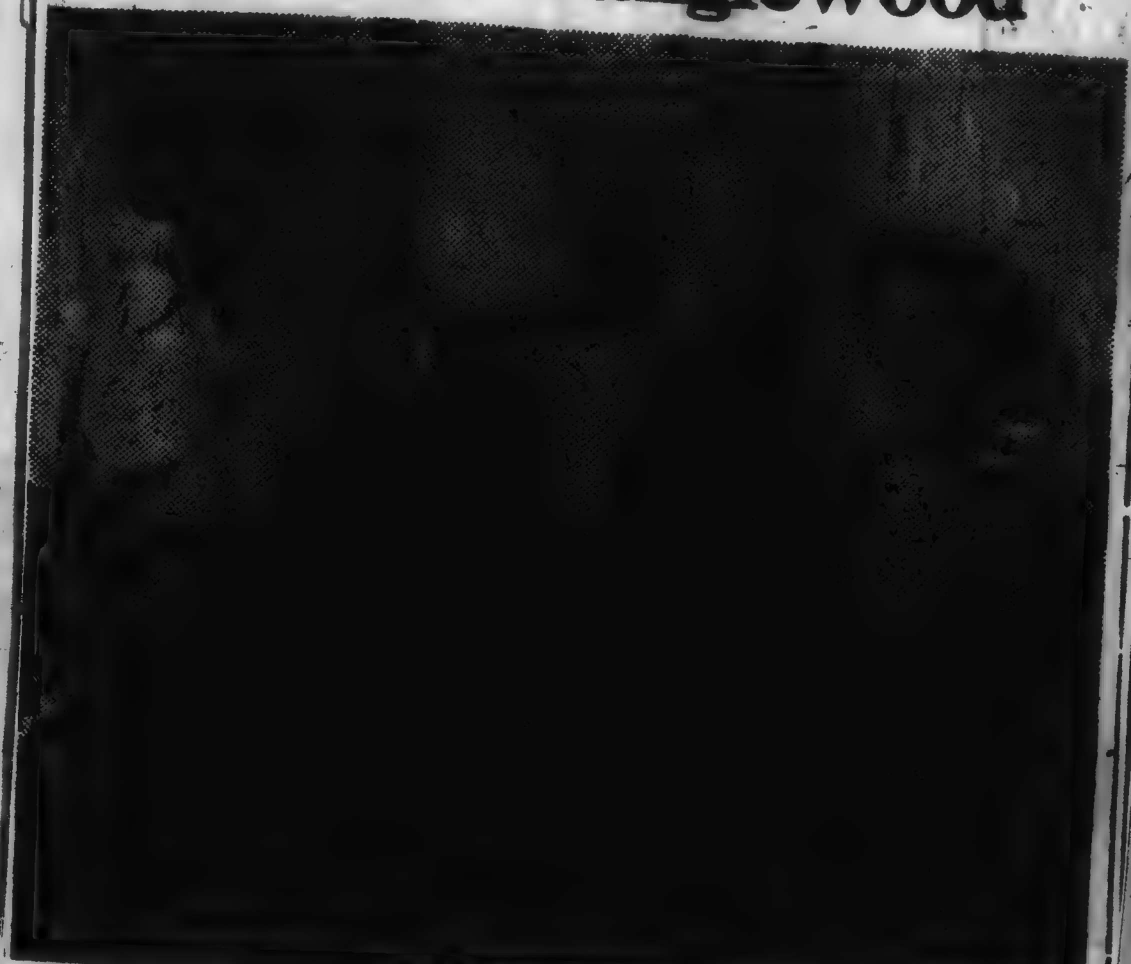
Making Music In The Wild Wood



WESTCHESTER STUDENTS attending the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., are: Mary MacKenzie of Croton, seated at left, and Nancy Turner of Hastings-on-Hudson, and standing, Evelyn Lear of Yonkers and Jack Gottlieb and Lawrence Weinman of New Rochelle. The center Summer School of Music is maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with its Berkshire Festival.

NEW CANAAN, CONN
ADVERTISER
7/29/54

Local Girl Attending School At Tanglewood



Miss Sandys Moore (left), daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John C. B. Moore of West Road, is shown above with Miss Adrienne Rosenbaum of West Hartford at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., where they are participating in the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with its Berkshire Festival.

Hugh Ross, head of the center's choral department is in the center of the picture. Miss Moore will be a sophomore this fall at Radcliffe College at Cambridge, Mass., where she is a member of the Radcliffe Choral Society. She is studying the flute at the summer school.

With 35 states and 12 foreign countries represented in its enrollment of 375 music students, the Berkshire Music Center is now midway through its 12th season at Tanglewood. The only school in the world sponsored by a major symphony orchestra, it will continue through the end of the festival concerts on August 15.

Culminating the current season, "Tanglewood on Parade" will be presented on Friday, August 13, as the anual benefit for the center, at which festivities from 6 p.m. to 11 o'clock will include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper and a gala evening concert, followed by dancing on the lawn.

For the first time in the Tanglewood Music Shed, the Boston Pops Orchestra will perform that evening with Arthur Fielder, celebrating his 25th year as its conductor, on the podium. The pops orchestra, under the shed, will share the evening's concert, scheduled for 8:15 o'clock with the Boston Symphony which will perform Bizet's "Symphony in C Major" and the final scene of "Salome" by Strauss, with the lead role sung by Brenda Lewis, soprano, and popular star of Broadway, the Metropolitan and New York City Opera companies.

Concerts in the shed for the balance of this season will be held on Saturday evenings, July 31 and August 7, and Sunday afternoons, August 1, 8 and 15. Chamber music concerts, held in the theatre, will be presented in the evening on this Friday, and on Wednesday, August 4, Friday, August 6, Wednesday, August 11 and Thursday, August 12.

The Berkshire Music Center was established in 1940 by the Boston Symphony Orchestra to provide a campus where young musicians could add to their professional training and artistic experience under the guidance of eminent musicians and teachers. Charles Munch, music directer of the orchestra, is director of the center. The eminent American composer, Aaron Copland, is the assistant director, and Ralph Berkowitz, pianist on the staff of the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia, is dean.

[40]

Providence Sunday Journal 8/1/54

Berkshire Festival in Full Swing

By RUTH TRIPP

LENOX, MASS.—The Berkshire Festival is in full swing. Tanglewood bustles with the well-organized series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, 12 in the shed and six in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Six concerts of chamber music and innumerable programs by the students at the Berkshire Music Center make an exciting schedule no matter at what point you pick up the thread.

With the third week of the Festival well along, I went first to hear the concert of Friday, July 23. Charles Munch conducted the first half, a steady, reassuring presentation of Handel's Concerto Grosso for String Orchestra, Op. 6, No. 4, followed by a spirited parade of Haydn's "Military" Symphony, No. 100 in G. major. The precision with which all the square corners were turned gave it considerable aplomb. The gay trio of percussion instruments, bass drum, cymbals and triangle, added a novel touch for the era in which it was written

Hugh Ross Is Conductor

The feature of the program was Haydn's Mass No. 3 in D minor, called the "Nelson" in honor of the victory of Lord Nelson at the Battle of the Nile. Hugh Ross conducted the Festival Chorus, orchestra and quartet of solo voices in a thrilling performance. Free, florid writing for the voices, beautiful contrasting sections for the instruments and an exuberant melodic line for soprano, made the hearing of this music a memorable experience.

Naomi Farr, as soprano soloist accomplished her assignment with distinction. The bass part, sung by Thomas Stewart, was artistic. Haydn required less for this voice. Contralto and tenor sung by Beatrice Krebs and Marvin Worden, fitted in as they were called for and the entire production added luster to the already distinguished list of accomplishments by Hugh Ross. There were three striking sections where the chorus came in unaccompanied with a pianissimo tone of exquisite quality. For me the "Dona nobis pacem" was uplifting.

Jean Morel conducted the Saturday evening program in the shed. He was a thin, shy youth of 20, playing piano accompaniments for the opera class at Fontainebleau, when I first met him. At Tanglewood, it was good to see him take the podium with all the confidence required and to hear the artistry, now mature, with which he commanded the musicians before him.

Prokofieff's Sixth

We heard Prokofieff's Sixth Symphony, Op. 111 interpreted with clarity and finesse. Many of the favorite idioms of the composer were there and as they were displayed, pleasant recollections of other works by Prokofieff flashed back to the listeners. Nicole Henriot, a favorite in Providence, played a brilliant performance of the Liszt Concerto, No. 1 in E flat major. Accuracy, strength, in fact all the attributes of virtuosity have always been apparent in the playing of this young artist. Here we heard an added quality of warmth and intimacy which endeared her playing to the audience. She and the conductor were recalled many times.

The concert finished with the ardent "Don Juan" Tone Poem by Richard Strauss, played with more than the usual amount of ardor. A sensitive, beautifully contrasted reading of the Elgar, "Enigma" Variations, closed the program and again, the conductor was given an ovation.

The largest throng gathers for the Sunday concerts. The day was an ideal example of Berkshire weather. At the morning worship of the Lenox Congregational Church, (in the churchyard of which Serge Koussevitzky is buried), a choral work was presented to honor the 80th anniversary of the late founder of the Berkshire Center. Hugh Ross conducted a chorus of 30 voices, a cantor, two clarinets, two bassoons, two trumpets, three trombones and organ in a wonderful presentation of the Organum Triplum, "Descendit" by Perotinus, a composer who was cantor in Notre Dame Cathedral in Paris when it was built in 1198. The pedal point by the brass and organ tones, the flowing Gregorian line of the chorus and the stark, solitary intonation by the cantor moved along to a splendid climax where the brass instruments suddenly separated and went in contrary motion to each other.

This work had its first presentation in America this year at the Center. After service, the group went to Koussevitzky's grave and sang Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," a work which was commissioned by Koussevitzky. There was a wonderful feeling of past and present, old world and new and,—from it all, one gained a confident feeling of serene continuity in spite of upheaval.

Biggs in Organ Recital

E. Power Biggs gave a splendid organ recital Saturday afternoon in the shed. His works were chosen from the music he likes best to play, Handel, Couperin, Vivaldi and Byrd. He gave a beautiful interpretation of Franck's Prelude, Fugue and Variation.

Many famous people came on Sunday afternoon. In the audience were Fritz Kreisler, now with snowy white hair; Mlle. Henriot, as pretty at close range as she is on stage; Gertrude Robinson Smith, one of the bulwarks of the Berkshire Festival and many others. It was especially pleasing to have M. and Mme. Jean Bedetti seated just in front of us and good to recall other pleasant meetings with him. He comes back from the University of Miami to teach at Tanglewood each summer and except for a little added girth, he is the same friendly, modest person who was a familiar figure in the first cellists chair of the Boston Symphony for so many seasons.

Dr. Munch gave a breath-taking performance of the Berlioz "Harold in Italy" Symphony. William Primrose was viola soloist and his playing reached a high level of artistry. Tone color in every degree of intensity brought the voice of his viola to us with eloquence which was moving. The acoustic properties of the shed were never more taxed than by his delicate pianissimo tone. Yet, it carried everywhere.

Further brilliance of writing by Berlioz was heard in the Overture to "Beatrice and Benedict" and Dr. Munch has made a notable contribution to musical history at Tanglewood by his inspired interpretations of this Berlioz music.

The afternoon closed with the Toch Symphony No. 2, Op. 73, a work which could be called controversial. It is modern writing as I like it. Plenty of evidence of craftsmanship, great imagination in the use of material and a closely knit fabric of sound which seems to me, at least, completely integrated. Ernst Toch was present and the audience gave him his due in hearty applause. Mr. Toch is teaching composition at the center this season.

Tuesday brought us the triple bill by the opera and orchestra departments of the Center. The first staged performance in America of "L'Amfiparnaso," by Orazio Vecchi proved to be one of the most entrancing productions I've ever seen. It was written in 1594 and the beautiful unaccompanied vocal score in five parts was sung to perfection by two madrigal groups ably conducted by Hugh Ross.

The action, in pantomime, was high comedy played on and around the lower slopes of Parnassus by a Commedia dell' Arte group. They were a rowdy lot and one of the wonders of this season is how Hugh Ross, during the merry play, could have kept not one, but two, madrigal groups smoothly singing the immortal music of the muses who dwell on the heights.

Scenery was brought on as it was required. Costumes were exquisite and we were kept informed about the action by little pages who came in with silken banners suitably inscribed.

Hindemith's Opera

Hindemith's 10-minute opera, "Hin und Zuruck" was staged as it would have been in 1927. The transition from Parnassus, including its buffoonery, was a rapid one. We found much to laugh at in the fast moving pace of the ludicrous situations of this witty work. A bit of the Charleston, a pocket flask, and a murder, (complete with ambulance orderly) were the high spots of the action. The plot then reverses itself and is played backwards chiefly to prove the point that in either direction, things can be slightly crazy. But we all had such fun meantime! This performance was staged and executed with skill which exceeded that of a first performance I saw here with Hindemith conducting.

The final one-act opera was written by Ernst Toch, a member of the composition faculty at the center. "The Princess and the Pea" is adapted from the fairy tale by Hans Christian Andersen and we heard a delightful English version written by Marion Farquhar. Costumes and scenery were beautifully executed and the difficult music was accomplished successfully. The action of the plot was descriptively assisted by the instruments and altogether, this was delightful fantasy.

The work of the opera and orchestral departments of Tanglewood have added another outstanding bill to a list which has become by now, an important one. Frederick Cohen, assisted by Elsa Kahl and Morton Seigel were production staff. Scenery was by John Blankenchip and costumes by Leo Van Witsen. Conductors were Samuel Krachmalnick, for the Hindemith opera, and Paul Vermel for the Toch work.

MUSIC'S MOST TRANQUIL SUMMER FESTIVAL

In Lenox, Mass., the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch is giving the nation its annual great music conclave of the century until Aug. 15. From all over the nation music-lovers come to the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, picnic before concerts on its beautiful lawns.

Sunday Mirror Aug 1, 1954

NEW HAVEN, CONN.
REGISTER
AUG 1 - 1954

MUSIC

Berkshire Music Festival Schedules 'The Tender Land'

By GORDON E. ARMSTRONG

A highlight of this week's activities at the Berkshire Music Festival will be the staging of Aaron Copland's opera, "The Tender Land." Representing the major project of the Berkshire Music Center this season, two performances will be given by students of the school's opera department, the first tomorrow evening and the other on Tuesday evening. Monday's performance will mark the second production anywhere of the newly revised opera by the composer who has been assistant director of the school since it was founded at Tanglewood in 1940.

Frederic Cohen, head of the school's opera department this summer, had planned "The Tender Land" for Tanglewood this year before the opera was premiered by the New York City Opera Company last April. This week's production at the Festival will be entirely different from the one given in New York, in line with the composer's original intention that his opera be produced by colleges, workshops, and opera groups. Says Mr. Copland, "I have revised the opera in an attempt to give stronger emphasis to those dramatic motives which formerly had only lightly been sketched in." Three scenes have been added to the work and its period is now the spring of 1910.

Here is the schedule of the week's regular four Berkshire Festival concerts:

Wednesday, Aug. 4, 8:30 p. m.—Theater-Concert Hall, chamber music: Haydn: String Quartet in D major, Op. 64 No. 5 ("Lark"); Hindemith: String Quartet No. 3, Op. 22; Ravel: String Quartet in F. The Kroll String Quartet (William Kroll, Louis Graeler, violins; David Mankovitz, viola; Avron Twerdowsky, 'cello).

Friday, Aug. 6, 8:30 p. m.—Theater-Concert Hall, chamber orchestra: Stravinsky: "Pulcinella," Ballet with song in one act (after Pergolesi), with soloists Regina Sarfaty, soprano; Jefferson Morris, tenor; McHenry Boatwright, bass. Mozart: Piano Concerto in B flat major, K. 450—with Seymour Lipkin, soloist. Mozart: Excerpts from "Idomeneo," K. 366, soloists Marvin Worden, tenor; Theresa Green, Regina Sarfaty, Charlotte Holloman, sopranos; Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, augmented by pupils of the Indian Hill Music Workshop.

Saturday, Aug. 7, 8:30 p. m.—Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra: Berlioz: Royal Hunt and Storm from "The Trojans"; "Summer Nights," for Soprano and Orchestra, Op. 7—with Eleanor Steber, soloist; "Te Deum," for Three Choruses, with Orchestra and Organ, Op. 22; with David Poleri, tenor; Willem Frisco Frank, organ soloist; Festival chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke DeVaron, augmented by a children's chorus from Camp Mah-Kee-Nac for Boys, Stockbridge Bowl, and Indian Hill Music Workshop, Stockbridge. Charles Munch, conductor.

Sunday, Aug. 8, 2:30 p. m.—Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra: Gluck: Overture to "Alceste"; Beethoven: Violin Concerto in D major, Op. 61—with Zino Francescatti as soloist; Brahms: Symphony No. 2. Charles Munch, conductor.

"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will come on Friday, Aug. 13. For the first time in the history of the Festival, the Boston Pops Orchestra conducted by Arthur Fiedler, will participate in the gala evening concert on that day.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.
HERALD
AUG 1 - 1954

MANY COUNTY SOCIALITES visiting their children at Summer camps in Massachusetts or at Tanglewood, near Lenox, for the magnificent music festival sponsored by Boston Symphony Orchestra, are stopping in at former Westporters Fred and Gerry Kelly's beautiful place, Fairfield Inn, in Great Barrington. Judge Ned Ostmark and his wife, and realtor George Kish and his missus were among the Fairfieldites guesting at Kelly's the day this columnist popped in. The Inn is one of the most beautiful in the country, lavishly decorated with antiques that make collectors drool, and the food is out of this world.

BOSTON MASS.
POST
AUG 1 - 1954

13 on Bike Tour

A group of 13 Greater Boston young men and women will leave tomorrow for a one-week bicycle tour of the Connecticut Valley and western Massachusetts under the sponsorship of the American Youth Hostel organization. The tour, directed by Miss Barbara Freeman of Roxbury, will also include a visit to the Berkshire Festival.

MIAMI, FLA.
HERALD
AUG 1 - 1954
✓

Tanglewood Plans

This year's festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., include several ballet works. Lukas Foss will conduct Stravinsky's "Pulcinella" and Richard Burgin Prokofieff's "Chout" Ballet Suite.

[41]

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.
POST
AUG 1 - 1954

Pops Concert Duo-Piano Team to Give Both Classical and Popular Program

ARTHUR WHITTEMORE (left), and JACK LOWE
. . . Their piano program will be long hair, short hair and crew cut.

By TERE PASCONE

A long hair, short hair and crew cut program will be offered Friday night by duo-pianists Whittemore and Lowe at the fourth concert of the Connecticut Pops series in Fairfield University field. Daniel Saidenberg, back from a European trip, during which he was guest conductor of L'Orchestre de la Suisse Romande, on two occasions, will direct the musicians for the first time this season.

The versatile pianists, who have arranged almost 200 works for two pianos have appeared with the country's leading orchestras, among them the New York Philharmonic, Oklahoma City Symphony, San Francisco, Boston, Cincinnati, San Antonio, Detroit, and in the Robin Hood Dell in Philadelphia and Chicago's Grant Park.

The long hair part of their program will be the Concerto for Two Pianos by the 55-year-old French composer, Francis Poulenc, written 20 years ago. The work contains many folk song-like tunes harmonized with unexpected dissonance, and is fun to listen to, and fun to play, according to many pianists.

Short Haired Group

In the second half of the concert, Whittemore and Lowe will gradually enter the short hair group by first playing the Coronation scene from Moussorgsky's "Boris Godounov," in a special arrangement by the two musicians.

Classified under short hair are two of Fritz Kreisler's works, also arranged for two pianos by Whittemore and Lowe. They include "Stars in My Eyes," written by Kreisler originally as a song for Grace Moore to sing in the motion picture, "The King Steps Out," and "Liebesfreud," a piece originally written for violin and meaning in English, "Joy of Love."

Under the heading of crew cut comes Harold Arlen's "That Old Black Magic," and Richard Rodgers' "Lover." The work by Arlen, who also composed the music of "Star and Garter" and "Bloomer Girl," has been one of the most popular songs in the last decade and still rates high among hit tunes of today. As for "Lover," the guest soloists took the charming waltz and made a glittering piano arrangement of it.

The orchestral works without soloists to be played will be the Corsair overture by Berlioz; Swedish Rhapsody by Alfven, ballet music from Gounod's "Faust," and the Acceleration waltz by Johann Strauss, Jr.

DANIEL SAIDENBERG
. . . conducts for first time this season.

Brilliant Berlioz Work

The Berlioz work is a short brilliant piece about the sea and is not really an overture to anything. Berlioz worked on it over a period of 20 years and wrote his first notes for it when 28 years old, inspired by his first sea voyage. Years later, he orchestrated the work in an old ruined tower, 200 feet above the sea at Nice. It has been called other names — "The Tower of Nice," "The Red Rover," and finally "The Corsair."

The composer of the Swedish Rhapsody or "Midsummer Vigil," as it is known is one of Sweden's leading musicians today, and the piece is a tone poem, picturing the festivities of a Swedish holiday, St.

Norwalk Girls at Berkshire Music Center

Among Connecticut residents summering as students at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.—the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with its Berkshire Festival—are Catherine Ameer, (left) 1 Buckingham place, Norwalk, and Grace Adkins of Wilson Point, South Norwalk, with Hugh Ross (center) head of the Center's choral department.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.
REGISTER
AUG 1 - 1954

Zino Francescatti, violinist, is soloist in Beethoven's Violin Concerto, which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform with Charles Munch conducting in the Sunday afternoon, August 8, concert (2:30 p.m.) of the Berkshire Festival, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

ERIE, PA.
DISPATCH
AUG 1 - 1954

CONSTANCE KEENE, the young American pianist who will appear with the Chautauqua Symphony Tues., first attracted international attention when she substituted at the last moment for Vladimir Horowitz—the ovations accorded her performance received nation-wide publicity. Miss Keene won the gold medal award of the Nat. Fed. of Music Clubs at the age of 7, and kept right on winning the same award for four successive years. At 13 she was brought to the eminent pianist-composer, Abram Chasins, who was so impressed with her talent that he offered her a scholarship and taught her composition as well as piano. In May, 1949, Miss Keene became Mrs. Chasins. Popular on records as well as on the concert platform, Miss Keene is represented on several outstanding recordings of two-piano works performed with Mr. Chasins. Tuesday evening she will play Beethoven's "Concerto No. 4." The orchestral numbers include Mozart's Overture to "The Marriage of Figaro" and Brahms' Symphony No. 1.

TANGLEWOOD WILL BE On Parade Friday, Aug. 13. Festivities, from 6 p. m. to 11 p. m. include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper, a gala evening concert, followed by drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn. Thomas Schippers will conduct the Boston Symphony; Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston "Pops"; Wanda Lewis, celebrated young star of opera and musical comedy, will be soloist in the final scene from Strauss' "Salome."

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.
STANDARD-TIMES
AUG 1 - 1954

All-Berlioz Program Planned for Lenox

Special to The Standard-Times

LENOX, July 31 — The fifth week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, comprises a program of chamber music by Haydn, Hindemith and Ravel played by the Kroll String Quartet, next Wednesday evening in the Theater-Concert Hall. A program of Stravinsky and Mozart will be performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Lukas Foss guest conductor and Seymour Lipkin piano soloist next Friday night in the hall.

Slated is an all-Berlioz program by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch music director, conducting, which will include Tanglewood premieres of the "Summer Nights" song cycle with Eleanor Steber as soprano soloist and the "Te Deum" with David Poleri as tenor soloist and Willem Frisco Frank as organ soloist, next Saturday night in the Music Shed. The orchestra, will also be heard in a program of Gluck, Beethoven and Brahms, on Sunday, Aug. 8 in the Music Shed with Mr. Munch conducting and Zino Francescatti as violin soloist.

BURLINGTON, VT.
NEWS
AUG 1 - 1954

Festival to Hear American Operfa

LENOX, Mass — The opera department of the Berkshire Music Center will give the New England premiere, and the first Tanglewood performances, of Aaron Copland's full-length opera on an American theme, "The Tender Land" tomorrow and Tuesday nights.

The opera has been newly revised by the composer who has been assistant director of the summer school of music of the Boston Symphony Orchestra since its founding under the direction of the late Serge Koussevitzky in 1940.

It will be more in line with the composer's original intention that his opera be produced by colleges, workshops and opera groups.

[42]

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.
POST
AUG 1 - 1954

Pops Concert Duo-Piano Team to Give Both Classical and Popular Program

ARTHUR WHITTEMORE (left), and JACK LOWE
. . . Their piano program will be long hair, short hair and crew cut.

DANIEL SAIDENBERG
. . . conducts for first time this season.

By TERE PASCONE

A long hair, short hair and crew cut program will be offered Friday night by duo-pianists Whittemore and Lowe at the fourth concert of the Connecticut Pops series in Fairfield University field. Daniel Saidenberg, back from a European trip, during which he was guest conductor of L'Orchestre de la Suisse Romande; on two occasions, will direct the musicians for the first time this season.

The versatile pianists, who have arranged almost 200 works for two pianos have appeared with the country's leading orchestras, among them the New York Philharmonic, Oklahoma City Symphony, San Francisco, Boston, Cincinnati, San Antonio, Detroit, and in the Robin Hood Dell in Philadelphia and Chicago's Grant Park.

The long hair part of their program will be the Concerto for Two Pianos by the 55-year-old French composer, Francis Poulenc, written 20 years ago. The work contains many folk song-like tunes harmonized with unexpected dissonance, and is fun to listen to, and fun to play, according to many pianists.

Short Haired Group

In the second half of the concert, Whittemore and Lowe will gradually enter the short hair group by first playing the Coronation scene from Moussorgsky's "Boris Godounov," in a special arrangement by the two musicians.

Classified under short hair are two of Fritz Kreisler's works, also arranged for two pianos by Whittemore and Lowe. They include "Stars in My Eyes," written by Kreisler originally as a song for Grace Moore to sing in the motion picture, "The King Steps Out," and "Liebesfreud," a piece originally written for violin and meaning in English, "Joy of Love."

Under the heading of crew cut comes Harold Arlen's "That Old Black Magic," and Richard Rodgers' "Lover." The work by Arlen, who also composed the music of "Star and Garter" and "Bloomer Girl," has been one of the most popular songs in the last decade and still rates high among hit tunes of today. As for "Lover," the guest soloists took the charming waltz and made a glittering piano arrangement of it.

The orchestral works without soloists to be played will be the Corsair overture by Berlioz; Swedish Rhapsody by Alfven, ballet music from Gounod's "Faust," and the Acceleration waltz by Johann Strauss, Jr.

Brilliant Berlioz Work

The Berlioz work is a short brilliant piece about the sea and is not really an overture to anything. Berlioz worked on it over a period of 20 years and wrote his first notes for it when 28 years old, inspired by his first sea voyage. Years later, he orchestrated the work in an old ruined tower, 200 feet above the sea at Nice. It has been called other names — "The Tower of Nice," "The Red Rover," and finally "The Corsair."

The composer of the Swedish Rhapsody or "Midsummer Vigil," as it is known is one of Sweden's leading musicians today, and the piece is a tone poem, picturing the festivities of a Swedish holiday, St. John's Eve, celebrated June 24.

The Faust ballet music is familiar to everyone, and includes seven contrasting dances in different rhythms, different speeds, played without pause.

Finale is Viennese Waltz

The Strauss Waltz will be the finale number, written by Johann in a Viennese coffee house. In the Vienna museum today there is a collection of 200 menus, covered with music notes and among them is one on which is scribbled the Acceleration waltz.

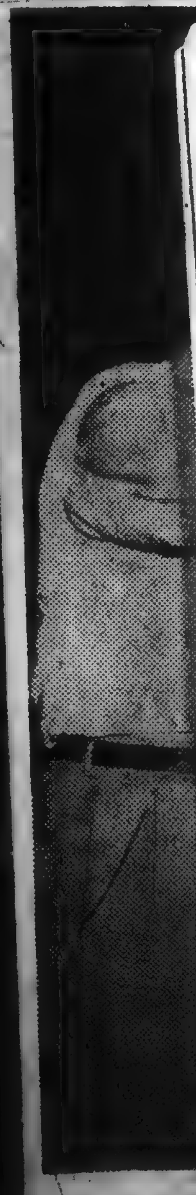
Mr. Saidenberg, fellow Fairfield coutnyite, who resides with his family in Redding, has been the Symphony's regular conductor and musical director since its founding eight years ago. Patrons of the concerts need not be told of the work he has accomplished with the group, for under his skillful and musicianly direction, the orchestra has grown in ability and reputation and is now considered one of the finest community orchestras in the East.

He also is a talented 'cellist and is conductor of the Saidenberg Sinfonietta, and radio and recordings have also been on his conductorial schedule. Musical director of the Alec Templeton radio program for several seasons, he has also made many recordings including the Cimarosa and Mozart Oboe concertos with "Mitch Miller," and modern works by Paul Bowles and Milhaud. Annually he plays a series of concerts at New York's Y.M.H.A.

Norwalk Girls at Berkshire Music Center

Among Connecticut residents summering as students at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.—the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with its Berkshire Festival—are Catherine Ameer, (left) 1 Buckingham place, Norwalk, and Grace Adkins of Wilson Point, South Norwalk, with Hugh Ross (center) head of the Center's choral department.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.
REGISTER
AUG 1 - 1954



Zino Fr
phony Orc cert (2:30

NOW HELD OVER
On Wide Vision Screen
PERSPECTA SOUND
Clark GABLE Vivien LEIGH in ERIE, PA.

DISPATCH
AUG 1 - 1954

CONSTANCE KEENE, the young American pianist who will appear with the Chautauqua Symphony Tues., first attracted international attention when she substituted at the last moment for Vladimir Horowitz—the ovations accorded her performance received nation-wide publicity. Miss Keene won the gold medal award of the Nat. Fed. of Music Clubs at the age of 7, and kept right on winning the same award for four successive years. At 13 she was brought to the eminent pianist-composer, Abram Chasins, who was so impressed with her talent that he offered her a scholarship and taught her composition as well as piano. In May, 1949, Miss Keene became Mrs. Chasins. Popular on records as well as on the concert platform, Miss Keene is represented on several outstanding recordings of two-piano works performed with Mr. Chasins. Tuesday evening she will play Beethoven's "Concerto No. 4." The orchestral numbers include Mozart's Overture to "The Marriage of Figaro" and Brahms' Symphony No. 1.

TANGLEWOOD WILL BE On Parade Friday, Aug. 13. Festivities, from 6 p. m. to 11 p. m. include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper, a gala evening concert, followed by drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn. Thomas Schippers will conduct the Boston Symphony; Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston "Po[illegible]nda [illegible]celebrated young star of opera and musical comedy, will be soloist in the final scene from Strauss' "Salome."

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.
STANDARD-TIMES
AUG 1 - 1954

All-Berlioz Program Planned for Lenox

Special to The Standard-Times

LENOX, July 31 — The fifth week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, comprises a program of chamber music by Haydn, Hindemith and Ravel played by the Kroll String Quartet, next Wednesday evening in the Theater-Concert Hall. A program of Stravinsky and Mozart will be performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Lukas Foss guest conductor and Seymour Lipkin piano soloist next Friday night in the hall.

Slated is an all-Berlioz program by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch music director, conducting, which will include Tanglewood premieres of the "Summer Nights" song cycle with Eleanor Steber as soprano soloist and the "Te Deum" with David Poleri as tenor soloist and Willem Frisco Frank as organ soloist, next Saturday night in the Music Shed. The orchestra, will also be heard in a program of Gluck, Beethoven and Brahms, on Sunday, Aug. 8 in the Music Shed with Mr. Munch conducting and Zino Francescatti as violin soloist.

BURLINGTON, VT.
NEWS
AUG 1 - 1954

Festival to Hear American Operfa

LENOX, Mass — The opera department of the Berkshire Music Center will give [illegible] England premiere, and the first Tanglewood performances, of Aaron Copland's full-length opera on an American theme, "The Tender Land" tomorrow and Tuesday nights.

The opera has been newly revised by the composer who has been assistant director of the summer school of music of the Boston Symphony Orchestra since its founding under the direction of the late Serge Koussevitzky in 1940.

It will be more in line with the composer's original intention that his opera be produced by colleges, workshops and opera groups.

[42]

HOUSTON, TEX.
POST

AUG 1 1954

Berkshire Students Bring Out A Trio of Operatic Novelties

NY HERALD TRIBUNE NEWS SERVICE

LENOX, Mass—An audience of 1,400 crowded the intimate theatre-concert hall here last week for a long-awaited program of three rarely heard one-act operas.

The novelties were presented by students of the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival. They were directed by Frederic Cohen.

ORAZIO VECCHI'S "L'Amfiparnaso," a madrigal opera composed in 1594, was the evening's novelty. This was its first staged performance in America.

In colorful robes a chorus of 34, representing the poets of Parnassus sang in Italian, while 17 pantominists acted little stories of servant pranks, the loneliness of young lovers, a captain drilling unruly soldiers, clowns robbing a grave doctor, and Pantalone burlesquing a choral conductor. The nine scenes were announced by pages bearing placards.

HIT OF THIS production were the lively antics of the captain (Antonio Giardino) and Pantalone (Jack Hornor). The colorful Commedia dell'Arte costumes were designed by Leo van Witsen. Hugh Ross, who conducted the chorus, made a surprise appearance in jester's cap and bells and long cape, and was carried off the stage at the finale in high indignity.

Paul Hindermith's 10-minute sketch, "There and Back," and Ernst Toch's tale opera, "The Princess and the Pea," completed the bill. The Hindemith pastiche, given first at Tanglewood when the composer was composition teacher in residence in 1940, was sung first forward and then in reverse action.

JOHN BLANKENSHIP, who designed all three operas, evoked the jazz age in silver setting, and for the Toch opera designed an airy court and bedroom of pea green and yellow.

The Toch piece was staged in honor of the Austrian-American composer, who is on the Berkshire music center's faculty this summer.

BOSTON, MASS.
AMERICAN

AUG 3 - 1954

Tanglewood on Radio Saturday

WGBH-FM will broadcast at 8:30 p. m. Saturday (Aug. 7) a tape-recorded concert from Tanglewood.

The program of the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch will be: Debussy, Iberia; Copland, Piano Concerto (soloist: Leo Smit); Berlioz, Fantastic Symphony.

WGBH-FM will broadcast the 18 Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts—six Friday evening concerts in the theater and 12 Saturday and Sunday concerts in the Shed

---

MIDDLETOWN, CONN.
PRESS

AUG 3 - 1954

OPERA 'TENDERLAND' HAS N. E. PREMIERE

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 3.—(UP)—Aaron Copeland's opera, "The Tenderland," had its New England premiere last night in a performance by students of the Berkshire Music Center's Opera department before [illegible] overflow audience in the 1,200-seat theater-concert hall.

Revised by the composer since the first performance by the New York City Opera company in April, the work will be presented again tonight by a different cast of student performers.

The lead role, about a Kansas farm girl in the year of 1910 who decides to seek broader horizons, was sung last night by Rosemary Carlos of Walnut, Kan., who created the role in the New York production.

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE

AUG 2 - 1954

Another Interesting 'First' At Festival

Another interesting "first" at Tanglewood took place yesterday afternoon when Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra became guest conductor for the first time at Tanglewood. In addition to this, Ruth Posselt, Mrs. Richard Burgin in private life, was the violin soloist of the afternoon in a Tanglewood premiere of Aram Khatchaturian's Concerto for violin and orchestra.

The whole program was one of contrasts throughout. The second half was concerned with Sibelius' Second Symphony in D Major which is one of violent contrasts. The orchestra and Mr. Burgin presented this work with full comprehension of the need for impassioned playing, incisiveness alternating with lyrical ideas of great beauty.

The afternoon's program opened with William H. Schuman's "American Festival Overture," which was composed in 1939 for two special concerts of American music by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and first performed at the second of these concerts in Symphony Hall under the direction of Serge Koussevitsky, October 6, 1939. It was a piece based on a boyhood call or signal used to call the gang together for games or some other festive occasion. It is not, however program music, but a work developed along "purely musical lines."

This was followed by "Fantasia on a theme by Thomas Tallis for Double String Orchestra," by Ralph Vaughan Williams. The rich sonorities produced by the ever resonant and unified strings was most impressive. The divisions of larger and smaller groups playing, provided nice contrasts and variety of tone color. The beautiful tones of the solo viola and violin in turn, were especially representative of the virtues ascribed to the entire string section.

The orchestra and Miss Posselt then played Khatchaturian's Concerto for Violin and Orchestra. This was in direct contrast to the sensitively lovely Fantasia. Miss Posselt is a very fine violinist as well as an extremely valuable teacher at the Music Center. Her brilliant playing of the Russian composer's difficult but engaging work was entirely assured and much more than just technically accurate. Her poise and pleasing stage presence were not in the least jarred by the untimely break of a violin string following a very lively and strenuous solo passage. She most prepossessingly borrowed another instrument from the man to her right and finished the section with undiminished fervor. There was some lovely lyrical writing for both the solo instrument and orchestra in the second movement and the third, marked Allegro Vivace, has a popular flavor, rhythmic, syncopated and tuneful.

A total of 8,225 music lovers attended this varied and enjoyable concert, a large number making the most of a beautiful, golden day and the expanse of green lawn to heighten their enjoyment. It is an enviable experience to enter the grounds of Tanglewood, to see the beauties of nature as well as to become a listening participant in the musical activity of the Center. — F. W. R.

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE

AUG 2 - 1954

Fiedler To Direct Pops Orchestra At Tanglewood Parade

Arthur Fiedler conducts the Boston Pops Orchestra for the first time in Tanglewood's Music Shed at the annual Tanglewood on Parade, Friday, Aug. 13, at 8:15. Celebrating his 25th year as conductor of the famed Pops, Mr. Fiedler is probably the best known symphonic conductor in America through his long association with the Pops, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's outdoor Esplanade concerts which he founded in 1929, his guest conducting throughout the country and the more than 600 recordings he has made with the Boston Pops Orchestra.

Born in Boston, Mr. Fiedler studied piano, violin and conducting in Berlin and made his concert debut in Berlin at the age of 17. He joined the Boston Symphony as a violinist in 1915, becoming the youngest member of the orchestra. In 1924 he organized the Boston Sinfonietta; in 1929, the Esplanade concerts given outdoors on the banks of Boston's Charles River, which now draw draw as many as 35,000 listeners on a warm summer evening.

He has just celebrated his 25th season with the Boston Pops, the longest conductorship in the history of the orchestra which was organized in 1885 when the Boston Symphony Orchestra was four years old and the programs were called "Promenade Concerts" after the old London concerts. Mr. Fiedler and the Pops have become so popular that the gross receipts for the ten-week season in Boston's Symphony Hall exceed the yearly income of more than half of the American symphony orchestras.

1954

SCHENECTADY GAZETTE, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 4, 195

Copland Opera at Tanglewood

By D. E. RITZ

Aaron Copland has achieved a truly remarkable delineation of the rural simplicity of life in the midwest in the 1910 era in his three-act opera "The Tender Land" presented Monday and last evening at the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood.

* * *

THE MUSIC concerns itself primarily with the moods and emotions of the characters. The orchestral texture varies from an opening transparent wind theme against sustained string tone, to complicated noisy dance music. love music for daughter Laurie and Martin and the heartbreak music of both daughter and mother.

One meets the simple family life of the period with Grandpa Moss as the domineering figure in the household and Ma Moss, whose life is centered in her daughters young Beth and adolescent Laurie, who is to be graduated from school on the following day. The postman delivers the long-awaited mail-order white dress for the occasion at the same time telling the news of the vicinity and of two no-account transient workers.

Laurie returns late from school and is reprimanded for her daydreaming by Ma, who has failed to sense that daughter is growing up rapidly. Gramps returns from the field and shortly after two harvest drifters appear on the scene, ready for supper and work. Gramps hires them and they are invited to come in for the evening-before graduation party.

* * *

MARTIN, ONE of the drifters, and Laurie fall in love and are discovered by Gramps and Ma. A scene ensues and the boys are ordered to leave before daybreak. Laurie plans to leave with them but Martin is persuaded of the folly of this move by his companion.

Laurie, heartbroken at the loss of her new-found love, determines to leave for a new life of her own. Ma Moss suffers the heartbreak of all mothers when they lose their daughters, but finds solace in Beth, who is still of doll-age.

Ma Moss emerges as the most vividly drawn character in the opera with Laurie, Martin and Grandpa following in the order named. The vocal solos are not easy singing and all of the music has the authentic Copland flavor. Some of the unusual numbers include the trio between Grandpa and the drifters, "Hire a Stranger" and the quintet, "Blessings of Harvest." The square-dance music and the dance itself are delightful. Martin's solo, "I'm Gettin' Tired of Travelin' Too" and his duet with Laurie, "I Love You, I Do" were eloquent as was the "Why Should I Fear a New Day's Dawn " which opened the final act.

* * *

THE OPERA was commissioned through the League of Composers by Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II and had its premiere by the New York City Opera Company at City Center in New York on April 1. Horace Everett was the librettist.

The opera was revised by Mr. Copland for the Tanglewood performance in "an attempt to give stronger emphasis to those dramatic motives which formerly had only lightly been sketched in." Frederic Cohen, head, and members of the staff of the opera department at Tanglewood were in charge of the productions which included two different casts.

Kroll String Quartet at Lenox Tonight

The Kroll String Quartet will give a chamber music program tonight at 8:30 o'clock at the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Quartet members include William Kroll and Louis Graeler, violins; David Mankovitz, viola; and Avron Twerdowsky, 'cellist.

* * *

THIS YEAR'S chamber series replaces concerts given in past years by the late Elizabeth Sprague Collidge and proceeds are donated to the Berkshire Music Center. An audience of more than 5,500 has attended the first four programs in the series. Reserved tickets for the hall and tickets of general admission to the Tanglewood lawns will be sold at the box-office at Tanglewood tonight.

* * *

THE PROGRAM will include Haydn's "Lark" Quartet, Paul Hindemith's "Quartet Number 3, Opus 22," and the Ravel "Quartet in F."

The quartet is the official quartet of the Musician's Guild in New York and has given 40 Town Hall recitals since it was founded by Mr. Kroll in 1945.

WORCESTER, MASS.
GAZETTE

AUG 3 - 1954

Copeland Opera In N. E. Premiere

LENOX, Aug. 3 (UP)—Aaron Copeland's opera, "The Tenderland," had its New England premiere last night in a performance by students of the Berkshire Music Center's opera department before an overflow audience in the 1200-seat theater-concert hall.

Revised by the composer since the first performance by the New York City Opera company in April, the work will be presented again tonight by a different cast of student performers.

The lead role, about a Kansas farm girl in the year 1910 who decides to seek broader horizons, was sung last night by Rosemary Carlos of Walnut, Kas., who created the role in the New York production.

BOSTON, MASS.
TRAVELER

AUG 3 - 1954

Tanglewood Pops Program Announced

Arthur Fieldler has announced the program the Boston Pops Orchestra will play when the organization makes its first appearance at Tanglewood's Music Shed Friday, Aug. 13, as the star attraction of "Tanglewood on Parade," a day-long benefit for the Berkshire Music Center.

Mr. Fiedler has scheduled Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever" march, a suite from Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne," Ravel's "Bolero," the Hayman arrangement of video commercials called "TViana," and Merrick-Bennett's "Look Sharp, Be Sharp."

MILLERTON, N.Y
NEWS
8/5/54

AT TANGLEWOOD

Zino Francescatti, violinist, accompanied by Artur Balsam at the piano, will play the last of the Berkshire Festival series of six chamber music concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., when he plays Brahms' sonatas in A major and D minor, and Bach's suite in C, on Wednesday, August 11, at 8:30 p.m.

[43]

Providence Journal 8/3/54

1954

Chamber Music, Soloists Heard On Programs at Tanglewood

Doriot Anthony Dwyer and Ruth Posselt Among Those Featured Over Weekend

By RUTH TRIPP

Journal-Bulletin Music Critic

Lenox, Mass.—Another exciting weekend at Tanglewood has closed and the many Rhode Island visitors who attended, chose well.

The Friday evening program with Charles Munch conducting was one of the series featuring chamber music or works for small orchestra. It was held in the theater. It began with excerpts from the ballet-pantomime "The Spider's Feast" by Albert Roussel. Highly descriptive sounds emerged from the instruments and it was easy to imagine the suffering of the insects which were enticed into the web. Roussel's spider has no connection, by the slightest filament, with the now famous Charlotte. His precedes her by some 40 years and suffers by comparison.

The virtuoso performance of Ibert's "'Concerto for Flute and Orchestra," played by Doriot Anthony Dwyer (Miss Anthony was married last May) was a repetition of the brilliant playing which we heard in Providence last winter. The audience recalled soloist and conductor many times.

Mozart's music occupied the second half of the program. The Serenade in C minor, for two each of oboes, clarinets, horns and bassoons (K.388) was perfection for ensemble in playing as well as writing. The delightful way in which the high and low double reeds were paired and then the single reeds and horns made fascinating listening. The eight players excelled in the little minuet in canon form.

Precision and Grace

Mozard's "Paris Symphony," (K 297), which lasts only 18 minutes, made a delightful conclusion for the enjoyable program. Precision and grace were the outstanding qualities of the interpretation.

The high point of the weekend for many of the listeners was the performance of Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliette" Dramatic Symphony, Op. 17. The Boston Symphony Orchestra was assisted by a chorus from the Berkshire Music Center which had been skillfully trained by Lorna Cooke DeVaron, a former resident of Pawtucket who is now on the faculty of the New England Conservatory as well as that of the Berkshire Music Center. A member of the chorus, also from Pawtucket, was Shirley Wilkinson. Several members of the Harvard Glee Club came to reinforce the male section of the chorus.

Dr. Munch, who is a genius at interpretation of French music, brought every possible mood from the dramatic score. Soloists were Beatrice Krebs, contralto, who sang the narrative bit about the famous love affair; John McCollum, tenor, who sang Mercutio's "Queen Mab" speech, with choral reiteration, and Nicola Moscona, bass, who sang the role of Friar Laurence. His was the most dramatic solo work and was impressive.

Storm Interrupts

It was unfortuate that a short but heavy thunder shower interrupted the music in the most delicate section where the music of the fairies was in progres Dr. Munch stopped the player turned to beckon the listener from the lawn to dry land insid the shed. At a word from th concertmaster, the conductor de clared intermission a bit early. The storm was of short duration and after intermission, we heard the balance of this colorful work and it was good to see Dr. Munch call Mrs. DeVaron out for the first round of applause. Soloists, players and all concerned were given an ovation and it was the general consensus that we had heard a memorable interpretation.

The Sunday concert featured Ruth Posselt, violinist, as soloist in the Khatchaturian concerto for violin and orchestra. Richard Burgin was the conductor. It is always interesting to hear the sensitive accompaniment which he conducts for his wife. We had heard the rehearsal, on Saturday morning and although the work is rather long, one has to admire the technical proficiency of the soloist and her skill at memorizing it.

Severe Demands

The first movement makes severe demands on the instrument and at a spot near the end of the first movement, a string broke. Miss Posselt quickly passed her violin over to the player at the second desk of the first stand. He exchanged fiddles and the Allegro was finished. By the time the Andante came, the string had been replaced and tuned but the soloist took time out, off-stage, to make sure that it was stretched properly to stay in tune. In any case, she soon came back to give a beautiful interpretation of the slow movement which is full of sad, oriental melody.

The strings of the orchestra played the Vaughan Williams "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis" and we heard a very moving rendition of this beautiful music. The incidental solo by Alfred Krips was one of the high spots of the concert.

Holds Together

American music was represented by William Schuman's "American Festival Overture" and its bold, brassy themes seemed repetitive and youthful writing. It was not nearly so astonishing as when I first heard it in Boston in its world premiere conducted by Koussevitzky. It holds together, however, over the years since 1939 and shows skill in writing.

Burgin was given an ovation for his stirring interpretation of the Sibelius Second Symphony. Somehow, this work is firmly fixed in my mind with the opening season of the Tanglewood concerts. It belongs in an outdoor setting and its breadth and power blend well with the surroundings.

The Berkshire Festival continues through August 15 and nowhere along the list of programmed music is there a spot which could be thought lacking in interest. It has been admirably planned and I am sorry that I must miss Aaron Copland's opera, "The Tender Land" which has its New England premiere today.

BRONXVILLE, N.Y
REVIEW PRESS
8/5/54

Village Vagabonds Visit Berkshires

Thirty-two members of the Village Vagabonds spent last weekend in the Berkshires where they attended the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass. They heard the Boston Symphony Orchestra present Berlioz's "Romeo et Juliette," Sibelius' "Symphony No. 2" and other selections.

The group made its headquarters at the Oaklawn Inn in Stockbridge. Donald West and Cinda Hoysradt were in charge of arrangements for the club.

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
AUG 4 - 1954

Brenda Lewis To Be Featured At Tanglewood

Broadway comes to the Berkshires (August 13) when Brenda Lewis sings with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Thomas Schippers conducting, at the Berkshire Music Center's gala Tanglewood on Parade. The second half of the Music Shed concert (8:15 p. m.) features Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops Orchestra in a typical Pops program.

Star of Broadway's recent musical, "The Girl in Pink Tights," Miss Lewis also starred in "The Merry Widow" with Jan Kiepura, "Secret du Suzanne," as Birdie in Marc Blitzstein's opera "Regina," and toured the nation in the Strauss operetta "The Gypsy Baron."

Medicine and not music was to be Miss Lewis' career when she enrolled at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia, but after a short apprenticeship with the Philadelphia Opera Co. she made her debut as the Marshallin in "Der Rosenkavalier." Although only 19 she received great critical acclaim and moved on to Broadway, opera and concert engagements.

During one season she sang six different opera roles in Rio de Janeiro, with the Pro Arte Opera Company in Cuba, and with the Central City Opera Festival. An Honorary Citizen of Montreal because of her successive appearaince there in opera, Miss Lewis has also starred in light opera with the St. Louis Municipal Opera Company and summer music theatres in Kansas City, Dallas, Memphis, Birmingham and Chicago.

WORCESTER, MASS.
GAZETTE
AUG 4 - 1954

A Couple of Musicians Who Stayed Real Cool

THIS HAS BEEN a bad week for musicians. Their instruments have been falling apart.

At Tanglewood, Ruth Posselt broke a string on her violin while playing the first movement of the Khatchaturian Violin Concerto as soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Miss Posselt coolly traded violins with another player and completed her performance.

In Buenos Aires, Friedrich Gulda was well into Beethoven's Emperor Concerto when he discovered a foot pedal of his piano had become disconnected. With complete composure, Mr. Gulda kept on playing while a piano tuner crawled under the piano and made emergency repairs.

Clearly Miss Posselt and Mr. Gulda deserve a "bravo" or two for their aplomb in those horrible moments when musical disaster stared them in the eye. Could Evelyn, Magic Violin and all, or even Liberace have managed half as well?

NEW BRITAIN, CONN.
HERALD
AUG 3 - 1954

Aaron Copeland's Opera Presented at Lenox

LENOX, MASS.—(UP)—Aaron Copeland's opera, "The Tenderland," had its New England premier last night in a performance by students of the Berkshire Music Center's opera department before an overflow audience in the 1,200-seat theater-concert hall.

Revised by the composer since the first performance by the New York City Opera Company in April, the work will be presented again tonight by a different cast of student performers.

The lead role, about a Kansas farm girl in the year 1910 who decides to seek broader horizons, was sung last night by Rosemary Carlos of Walnut, Kan., who created the role in the New York

---

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
AUG 4 - 1954

Tanglewood Audience Hears Copland Opera

The opera department of the Berkshire Music Center presented last night, the second of two performances of Aaron Copland's new opera, "The Tender Land." The production was marked by an unusually fine cast. Singers were asked, not only to sing the music required of them, but also to participate in folk dancing, and acting roles which put great demands upon their imagination and secondary talents. The plot revolves around a young girl, Laurie Moss, on the eve of her graduation, when she is in revolt against her doting grandfather and feels that she is on the brink of new adventure out in the world, not circumscribed by the fences surrounding her grandfather's farm, either physically or spiritually.

The role of Laurie was sung most affectingly and simply by Phyllis Murphy, who seemed, in voice and appearance to be admirably suited to the part. Beatrice Krebs, a contralto of note, who has sung with the Robert Shaw Chorale, was superb as Laurie's mother. Miss Krebs has a voice of exceptional depth and resonance, a mature voice, strong and substantial, as was also the part she played, one of motherly understanding and solicitation for her daughters. Laurie has a younger sister played very sweetly and with much poise by Eve Rubin. This was not a singing part, but it played a small role in carrying out the plot and little Eve Rubin made a delightful contribution whenever she appeared.

Laurie's grandfather was most successfully sung and acted by Malcolm Bernstein. The part demands the feeling of great power of voice and physique and these were both found amply abundant in Mr. Bernstein. His voice, a rich, deep bass had a warmth and richness that one does not often hear. He and Miss Krebs were beautifully cast in the opera and added much to the most extremely effective vocal writing.

Another voice which must not be left unmentioned is that of Jefferson Morris who played the part of the young man Laurie falls in love with. His was a tenor of a clear ringing texture very pleasant to listen to and equally easy to understand.

Some of the vocal lines were lost to the audience either because they were not adequately projected or because acoustically the orchestra, which did not appear to be playing too loudly, erected a wall of sound between the stage and the audience. However, that may be, the music, although sung and played adequately and even sensitively and artistically, did not deliver the impact it might have. There was one particularly fine trio, later developed into a quintet, which was truly the high point of the opera. The emotional appeal and the harmonic detail involved here were just beautiful.

Everyone connected with the opera, stage managers, directors, conductor, Frederic Waldman and the student orchestra contributed admirably to the quiet simplicity and efficient producion of Mr. Copland's first opera, but though there was some very fine and memorable music the opera missed fire. There was no real impact on the emotions. The story seemed a bit repetitive in places and dragged in others. The music was too vague and sometimes too monotonous to give that added touch which makes for success. The orchestral writing especially for the woodwinds, with background effects in the strings was very nice but there were times when the accompaniments were thin and unconvincing, as the nebulous reasoning behind young Laurie's departure out into the great wide world. The opera—plot, action and music—does have cogent possibilities and with some revising and pointing up might even yet have a larger popular success.—F. M. R.

BROCKTON, MASS.
ENTERPRISE & TIMES
AUG 3 - 1954

N. E. PREMIERE

LENOX. — (UP) — Aaron Copeland's opera, "The Tenderland," had its New England premiere last night in a performance by students of the Berkshire Music Centre's opera department before an overflow audience in the 1200-seat theatre-concert hall. Revised by the composer since the first performance by the New York City Opera Co. in April, the work will be presented again tonight by a different cast of student performers.

RIDGEFIELD, CONN
PRESS
8/5/54

Tanglewood

A Review

The 15th Berkshire Festival program of the current season at Tanglewood Saturday offered Berlioz "Romeo and Juliet." Charles Munch has conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in this same dramatic symphony on an RCA Victor recording. Soloists at Tanglewood were Beatrice Krebs, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, and Nicola Moscona, bass, three up-and-coming singers who appear to have promising careers ahead.

During the Queen Mab scherzo, conductor Munch suddenly interrupted the concert. It had begun to rain. Abandoning the olympian concentration usual to baton-wiedlers, he wanted to be sure that several hundred listeners outside the mammoth shed would be swiftly welcomed to shelter from the storm.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra remains an incomparable instrument. Abetted by the Festival Chorus conducted by Hugh Ross, "Romeo and Juliet" resounded with might and splendor. It was the right wedding of score and performance, a memorable collaboration between the composer who has been called the Father of the Orchestra and the orchestra which represents perhaps the highest development of musical organization.

The Boston orchestra will be heard over NBC regularly during the coming fall and winter season. But the sound and sight of its current appearances at Tanglewood should not be missed by those who would revel in an inspiring and satisfying experience.

—H. Urrows

"Tanglewood on Parade" will take place August 13 from 6 to 11 p. m. Seats are on sale at the box office, or by mail or telephone. Holders of box seats and reserved front section will be able to hear the opera in the afternoon. General admissions will nave seats in the rear of the shed. All ticket holders may hear demonstarions a demonstration by the various groups at Tanglewood.

There will be a picnic at 7 p. m., and a concert with the Boston Symphony under Thomas Schippers, doing the finale of Salome with Brenda Lewis and Bizet's Symphony in C. The Pops under Arthur Fiedler will play a typical Pops program. There will be door prizes and waltzing on the lawn after the concert.

This week's program starts Friday with Stravinsky's Pulcinella with Regina Sarfaty, Jefferson Morris and McHenry Boatright; Mozart's Say you saw it in The Press.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
VILLAGER
AUG 5 - 1954

Music Hath Charms . . .

It is extremely gratifying to note that the crescendo of public opinion regarding the successful chamber music concerts held last year in Washington Square Park has reached such tidal wave proportions that it has assured the public of at least two concerts through contributions, in 1954 and two more through the generosity of Local 802, American Federation of Musicians, which promises to match the contributions dollar for dollar.

Summer concerts in the open air are prevalent throughout the length and breadth of the country from the Watergate Concerts in Washington, D. C. to the Hollywood Bowl, from Tanglewood in Massachusetts to San Diego.

Through the combined generosity of those who love music by appreciation of production, and those whose love of music is the production through appreciation of the score, Greenwich Villagers are not to be slighted in the opportunity to listen to music that eases the tension of city life, which in itself is only a small part of the world tension that too often occupies an unwarranted majority of our waking hours.

LAKEVILLE, CONN
JOURNAL
8/5/54

Final Tanglewood Concerts Offer Variety Of Programs

The sixth and final week of Festival concerts comprises a recital by Zino Francescatti, violinist, of Brahms and Bach sonatas, on Wednesday evening (August 11) in the Theatre-Concert Hall; Jean Morel conducting the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of Rossini, Mozart, Ravel and Richard Strauss, on Thursday evening (August 12) in the Theatre-Concert Hall; a symphonic program of works by Brahms, Piston, Ravel and Saint-Saens, with Charles Munch conducting the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, on Saturday evening (August 14) in the Music Shed; and Mr. Munch leading the Boston Symphony in Hector Berlioz' massive "Requiem," in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, with David Poleri, tenor, and chorus, Sunday (August 15) in the Music Shed.

Zino Francescatti, a neighbor of Tanglewood, summering at Monterey, Mass., is donating his recital on Wednesday to the Berkshire Music Center. Arthur Balsam is his accompanist. Jean Morel, who heads the orchestra and conducting department of the Music Center this summer, makes his second appearance on the podium for a Festival concert, featuring two works new to Tanglewood audiences, the Overture to Scala di Seta (The Silken Ladder), the short opera Rossini composed at the age of 20, and Richard Strauss' suite Der Burger als Edelmann (Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme) arranged from his incidental music to Moliere's play. Mr. Munch's Saturday evening concert also has two Tanglewood premieres, Walter Piston's Symphony No. 4, commissioned by the University of Minneapolis in 1951, and Saint-Saens' Symphony No. 3, in which E. Power Biggs is organ soloist.

Hector Berlioz' Requiem, which had its Tanglewood premiere in 1952, will be repeated as the Festival's final concert Sunday, again under Mr. Munch's direction.

Weekend music lovers are invited to subscribe to "Tanglewood on Parade" on Friday. The annual benefit for the orchestra's music school, now completing its 12th season, which provides opportunity for ensemble performance and musical instruction under expert musicians for some 400 students from 35 states in the U. S. and 12 foreign lands, is from 6 p.m. to 11 p.m. It will commence with demonstrations by all departments — student symphony orchestra, chamber music, chorus and opera, followed by a gala concert in the Music Shed and concluding with the drawing of door prizes and waltzing on the lawn. Thomas Schippers will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in symphonic music of Bizet and the final scene of Strauss' Salome, with Brenda Lewis as soloist; and Arthur Fiedler will lead the Boston Pops Orchestra in a typical program.

The complete programs are:

Wednesday, August 11, 8:30 p.m. — Theatre-Concert Hall, Chamber Music: Brahms: Violin Sonata in A major; Bach: Suite in C (violin unaccompanied); Brahms: Violin Sonata in D minor. Zino Francescatti, Violin — Arthur Balsam, piano.

Thursday, August 12, 8:30 p.m. — Theatre-Concert Hall, Chamber Orchestra: Rossini: Overture to Scala di Seta; Mozart: Symphony in B flat (K. 319); Ravel: Mother Goose Suite; Strauss: Der Burger als Edelmann. Jean Morel, conductor.

Friday, August 13, Tanglewood On Parade: 6-7 p.m. — Student Symphony Orchestra, Music Shed; Student Opera, Theatre-Concert Hall; Student Chamber Music, Chamber Music Hall; 7-8 p.m. — Picnic Supper, Student Chorus, Porch, Administration Building; 8:15 p.m. — Music Shed: Bizet: Symphony in C; Strauss: Salome (Final Scene) — Brenda Lewis, soprano. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Thomas Schippers, conductor. Sousa: March, Stars and Stripes Forever; Offenbach: Suite from Gaite Parisienne; Hayman (arr.) TViana; Merrick-Bennett (arr.) Look Sharp — Be Sharp. The Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler, conductor.

11 p.m. midnight — Drawing for door prizes; waltzing on the lawn, Joe Bushkin, pianist.

Saturday, August 14, 8:30 p.m. — Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra: Brahms: Tragic Overture; Piston: Symphony No. 4; Ravel: Le Tombeau de Couperin; Saint-Saens: Symphony No. 3, with E. Power Biggs as organ soloist. Charles Munch, conductor.

Sunday, August 15, 2:30 p.m. — Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra: Berlioz: Requiem — in memory of Serge Koussevitzky — with David Poleri, tenor soloist and 200 voices, Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center students augmented by Chorus of Springfield (Mass.) Symphony Orchestra; and with four brass bands. Charles Munch, conductor.

This weekend's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Saturday August 7: Berlioz: Royal Hunt and Storm from The Trojans; Summer Nights, with Eleanor Steber, soprano; Te Deum, with David Poleri, tenor, Willem Frisco Frank, organ, and Festival Chorus augmented by children's choruses — Charles Munch, conductor; Sunday August 8: Gluck: Overture to Alceste; Beethoven: Violin Concerto — Zino Francescatti, soloist; Brahms: Symphony No. 2 — Charles Munch, conductor.

NEWTOWN, CONN
BEE
8/6/54

Berkshire Festival Now In Fifth Week

Boston Symphony To Play Twice On Week-end

The fifth week-end of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will present a chamber orchestra concert conducted by Lukas Foss this Friday evening, and concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch on Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon.

The chamber orchestra, which will perform on Friday night in the Theatre-Concert Hall, is composed of members of the Boston Symphony. The program will include Stravinsky's "Pulcinella", a ballet with song in one act, after Pergolesi, with soloists Regina Sarfaty, soprano; Jefferson Morris, tenor, and McHenry Boatwright, bass. Seymour Lipkin will appear as the soloist in Mozart's Piano Concerto in B flat major, K. 450, while soloists and a chorus will join the orchestra to give excerpts from Mozart's opera "Idomeneo".

Mr Munch's Saturday evening concert, one of his programs this summer marking the 150th anniversary of the the birth of Hector Berlioz, will include the first performances by the Boston Symphony of the six "Summer Night" songs after Theophile Gautier, and will present Eleanor Steber as the soprano soloist. The "Te Deum", also to be given its first performance by the orchestra, will be given with the assistance of the Festical chorus; 40 boys, aged nine to 13, from Camp Mah-Kee-Nac at neighboring Stockbridge Bowl, and 44 girls, aged 13 to 18, from Indian Hill Music Workshop at Stockbridge.

On Sunday afternoon at 2:30, Mr Munch will again conduct the orchestra and will feature Beethoven's Piano Concerto in D major, Op. 61, with Zino Francescatti as soloist. The program will include Brahm's Symphony No. 2 following the intermission.

Annual Benefit Is August 13

Plans are announced for the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, "Tanglewood On Parade", on Friday, August 13, include demonstrations by every department of the school, beginning at 6 p.m., a lawn supper, an evening concert, drawing for door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

The evening concert will be given by the Boston Symphony and conducted by Thomas Schippers, and the Boston Pops Orchestra under Arthur Feidler, celebrating his 25th year is its conductor. The Boston Symphony will give Bizet's Symphony in C major and the final scene of Richard Strauss' Salome, with soprano Brenda Lewis as soloist.

The detailed programs for the next two weeks at Tanglewood will be found in the Weekly Calendar in this issue of The Bee.

HUDSON, N. Y.
REGISTER
AUG 6 - 1954

'Round the Town

If there's a hole in a' your
I rede you tent it;
A chield's amang you taking notes
And, faith, he'll prent it.
—Burns

. . . If you're addicted to stargazing — right now its "shooting star" time. From now until August 16th stargazers will be rewarded with the sight of shining meteors plunging earthward. According to astronomers the shower is due to reach its peak August 12th. And they add that "shooting" or "falling stars" are not stars at all. They simply are tiny particles of cosmic matter travelling through space at a terrific speed.

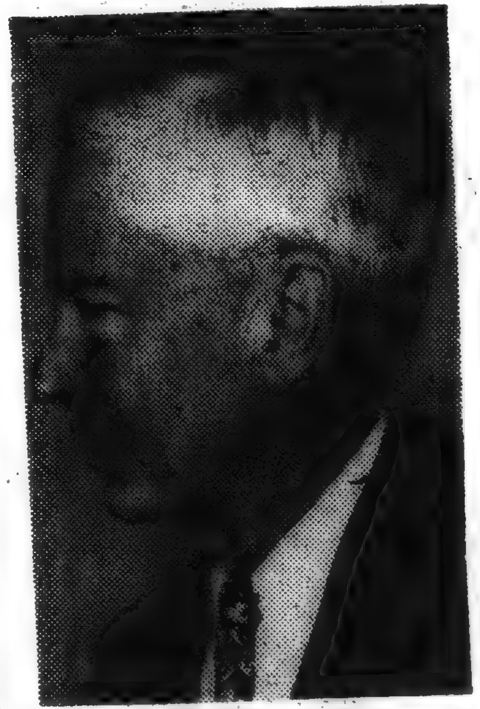
. . . Area fans of the Boston Pops will head for Tanglewood's Music Shed come next Friday when Arthur Fiedler brings the 92 piece Boston Pops Orchestra to play for the first time at Tanglewood as the star attraction of the gala concert of Tanglewood on Parade, the day-long annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center.

. . . The battle against the army worm invasion of Columbia and Greene Counties is being waged from the air in the fashion of modern warfare with Don Webber, Germantown pilot, dusting and spraying farms in infested areas. Most of the damage has been confined to grasses and corn.

. . . Thoughts while motoring about town . . . State street, between 2nd and 3rd streets is one of the difficult traffic bottlenecks to negotiate. With cars parked on both sides, little space remains for cars to pass. The reason is that many years ago in an effort to spur neighborhood pride and civic improvement, curb lines were extended into the street, so that there might be grass plots between the sidewalks and the roadway. At its inception the plan worked out fairly well and the tree shaded street with grass plots on either side presented an attractive appearance. However civic pride waned and most of what were grass plots became barren wastes between curb and sidewalks. State street is one of the city's wider streets for most of its length, save this particular block. The experiment was abandoned long ago but the narrowed roadway remains. In this later time of congested traffic with wider roadways, essential to safe and convenient driving, the city, when it can get around to it, should move the curbs back and restore this block to the general width of the street, in the interests of convenience and safety.

BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE
AUG 7 - 1954

Judd, Retiring Symphony Head, Honored at Tanglewood Luncheon



GEORGE E. JUDD

LENOX, Aug. 6—George E. Judd, retiring manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was honored today at Tanglewood at a luncheon given by members of the orchestra. Judd, associated with the Boston Symphony for nearly 40 years and its manager for 19, will be succeeded Sept. 1 by Thomas D. Perry Jr., assistant manager.

A special gift to Judd was a leather-bound record album containing the only copy of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's final program of its 73d season in Symphony Hall last May 1, Beethoven's Ninth Symphony conducted by Charles Munch. The performance was tape-recorded, unknown to Judd, by WGBH, Boston's non-commercial radio station and, with the blessing of the musicians' union, pressed in an LP album by RCA-Victor Records, complete with regular labels.

The special edition of one record included the gold-plated master from which it was made and also the plate from which the text on the album cover was printed. The album was presented by Rosario Mazzeo, personnel manager of the orchestra.

Added Lustre

Under Judd's direction, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, a $1,500,000 annual operation, added further lustre to its status as one of the leading orchestras in the United States; during his tenure the orchestra became part of the annual Berkshire Festival in the hills of Western Massachusetts where an anticipated audience of 120,000 will have attended its 24 concerts of the season.

In the Summer of 1952, under Judd's guidance, the orchestra made its first tour to Europe and in the Spring of 1953 its first coast-to-coast tour. Recently the manager negotiated contracts with the National Broadcasting Company for his orchestra to replace the N. B. C. Symphony of Arturo Toscanini next season on Saturday night broadcasts.

Born in Stamford, N. Y., Jan. 6, 1887, Judd was educated at Oneonta Normal School in New York and received a B.A. degree from Harvard in 1911. He was given an honorary LL.D. by Bates College (June, 1953) and was made a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor by France (July, 1953). At the end of the Tanglewood season he will retire to his farm in Cannonsville, N. Y., to devote his activities to floriculture.

Two Others Retire

The Tanglewood luncheon also was in honor of two retiring members, violinist Leon Gorodetzky and Georges Fourel, viola. Both are natives of France. Gorodetzky joined the orchestra in 1920, Fourel in 1921. With characteristic modesty, Judd asked that no special ceremony be made of his official farewell, and that he be included simply "as a third retiring member." Engraved gold watches were presented to the three men by music director Charles Munch. Jerome Lipson presided and Harry Dickson was toastmaster.

Gorodetzky will be succeeded by Jesse Ceci, a Philadelphian, Fourel by John Fiasca, a Californian who was a student at Tanglewood in 1942.

CLAREMONT, N. H.
EAGLE

AUG 6 - 1954

Berkshire Festival Enters Fifth Week at Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 6 — The ifth week of Berkshire Festival oncerts at Tanglewood, in- ludes a program of Stravinsky nd Mozart performed by a hamber orchestra of members f the Boston Symphony Orches- a, Lukas Foss guest conductor nd Seymour Lipkin piano solo- t, this evening in the Theatre- oncert hall; an all-Berlioz pro- ram by the full 104-piece Bos- on Symphony orchestra, harles Munch, music director, onducting, including Tangle- ood premieres of the "Summer ights" song cycle with Eleanor teber as soprano soloist and of he "Te Deum" with David Po- eri as tenor soloist and Willem risco Frank, organ soloist, on aturday evening in the music hed; and the Boston Symphony rchestra, in a program of luck, Beethoven and Brahms, unday afternoon in the music hed, Mr. Munch conducting, ino Francescatti violin soloist.

Mr. Foss, who is a teacher of omposition and who heads the anglewood study group divi- ion of the Berkshire Music cen- er will conduct the Boston ymphony orchestra chamber rchestra in its first perform- nce of "Pulcinella", ballet with ong in one act, by Igor Stravin- ky, after Pergolesi, with Regina arfaty, soprano; Jefferson Mor- is, tenor; McHenry Poatwright, ass, as soloists. Another Tan- lewood premiere on this pro- ram will be the excerpts from ozart's opera, "Idomeneo" (which had its American prem- ere by the Berkshire Music cen- er's opera department at Tan- lewood in 1947), with soloists Marvin Worden, tenor, and Theresa Green, Regina Sarfaty and Charlotte Holloman, sopranos; 50 voices of the Festival chorus of Berkshire Music center students, supplemented by 18 boys from Indian Hill Workshop, Stockbridge, trained by David L. Buttolph and Harold Aks.

"Summer Nights"

Mr. Munch's Saturday evening Festival concert, one of his programs this summer in honor of the 150th aniversary season of the birth of Hector Berlioz, will mark first performances by the Boston Symphony orchestra of the six 'Summer Nights" songs after Theophile Gautier which Miss Steber has previously performed with the New York Symphony orchestra.

Evening concerts are at 8:30 p. m., the Sunday afternoon concert at 2:30 p. m. In the event of rain the Friday evening concert will be moved to the music shed. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the spacious Tanglewood lawns, are placed on sale on the day of the performance.

An added attraction for Festival patrons is the organ recital at 3 p. m., Saturday in the music shed, by E. Power Biggs. Mr. Biggs' program consists of Antonio Soler: Double Concerto No. 3, in G; J. S. Bach: Fantasia and Fugue in C minor; Louis Claude Daquin: Three Noels with Variations; Anthony Donato: Two Pastels; Jehan Alain: Litanies.

WORCESTER, MASS.
TELEGRAM
AUG 8 - 1954

SEEING NEW ENGLAND

Visit to Berkshires Is Time Well Spent

By BETTY LILYESTROM

Whether you're planning a day trip, a weekend or a two-week vacation, a visit to the beautiful Berkshires of Western Massachusetts will be time well spent.

For the most inland part of our state abounds in historical monuments, educational features and a variety of recreational areas.

A complex network of roads leads into the area, with something to see and do on every route. The visitor who chooses Route 20, the southern route, will travel over Jacob's ladder and thus have an opportunity to visit Ted Shawn's famed Jacob's Pillow Dance Center, a Summer gathering place for the leading American modern dance artists.

By branching off Route 20 at Springfield and following Routes 57 and 124 to southern Berkshire County, you will encounter an imposing array of waterfalls and state forests.

State Forests

Along the route are Tolland State Forest and Beartown State Forest. In the southern corner of the state are Mt. Everett Reservation and Bash-Bish Falls State Forest, the latter named for its scenic waterfall. An uncounted number of clear blue lakes and ponds is found all along the way.

At Sheffield, a tiny town close to the Connecticut border, is the newest covered bridge in the nation, a state-built edifice dedicated only last year.

Traveling north on Route 7, you will cross the Appalachian Trail just before entering Great Barrington, a pleasant country town noted for its annual county fair. Here, indeed, the first county fair ever to be held in the United States took place in 1807.

Monument Mountain

Passing through Monument Mountain Reservation, you will view the austere granite peak for which the state-protected area is named. From here it is only a short drive to Stockbridge, site of the Red Lion Inn, an old New England hostelry which first opened its doors in 1773.

Stockbridge and its neighbor to the north, Lenox, still prize the stately mansions built by the nation's wealthy in years gone by. Most of the original families have long since left the area and many of the estates are now private schools or community centers, but the glamor of past eras can be glimpsed again in the spacious, well-kept grounds, the marble statuary and the substantial wood and brick mansions.

The luxurious estates are particularly evident in Lenox, which claimed during the 1920's to shelter 67 per cent of the nation's wealth. Among the famous names to have graced Lenox guest books are those of Nathaniel Hawthorne, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, James Russell Lowell and Fanny Kemble.

Hawthorne House

Hawthorne wrote his famous "House of Seven Gables" is a dwelling now known as Hawthorne House on the grounds of the Tanglewood Music Center in Lenox. The center is one of the greatest tourist attractions in Berkshire County, annually drawing thousands of visitors to its music programs which include symphony concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, chamber music, opera and choral recitals. Serious music students come from all over the world to study at the Tanglewood music school under the tutelage of modern music "greats."

In this area, too, are the Pleasant Valley Bird Sanctuary, the Pittsfield State Forest and the South Mountain Chamber Music Center.

A few miles to the north is Pittsfield, Berkshire county seat and one of the county's two cities. Settled in 1753, Pittsfield is today a city of nearly 60,000 people, an industrial center richly endowed with cultural features.

City's Products

Products of the city's manufacturing industries include plastics, worsteds, silk, buttons, machines, paper and the largest power transformers in the world. The General Electric Company maintains a test engineering division where visitors can see a demonstration of man-made lightning. Among the many paper mills is one in suburban Dalton where all the paper used in U. S. Currency is made.

The picturesque yellow brick City Hall is nearly 125 years old. It stands on one side of the oval common at the city's center — from this common North, South, East and West streets branch out. Also bordering the common are the Berkshire County Courthouse, the imposing public library and several churches.

A stone's throw away, on South street, stands the Berkshire Museum, a weathered stone building that has gained world recognition for the excellence of its collection.

Public High School

A few blocks down East street is the public high school, a mammoth domed brick edifice. On the site, before the school was built, stood the mansion in which Longfellow was married and which held the clock that inspired the poet's "Old Clock on the Stairs."

Within the city limits are two scenic lakes, Pontoosuc and Onota, both set against a background of tall, forest-covered mountains.

If you choose to start your journey back directly from Pittsfield, you will probably travel on Route 9 to Worcester. If so, don't fail to stop in Cummington to view the little house that was the birthplace of the poet, William Cullen Bryant. Along the way you may also wish to visit Wahconah Falls State Park.

Greylock Reservation

However, if you'd like to drive a little farther before starting home, continue north on Route 7 past Pontoosuc Lake, through quaint old Lanesboro and New Ashford to the Greylock Reservation.

Here, from a circle of lesser peaks rises the highest mountain in Massachusetts — Mt. Greylock, its summit 3500 feet above sea level. In Winter, the mountain is a mecca for skiing enthusiasts. In Summer, its summit affords an unrivalled view of the whole Berkshire area.

From Mt. Greylock, you will travel on through industrial North Adams, Berkshire County's second and smaller city. A few miles farther and you will arrive in Williamstown, a picturesque country town, site of Williams College and the historic Williams Inn. Stately homes here attest to the prominence of Williamstown residents, past and present. For several years, until his death in 1951, novelist Sinclair Lewis made his home here. William H. Vanderbilt, a former governor of Rhode Island, and Cole Porter, the song writer, are also permanent Williamstown residents.

This Clipping From
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE

AUG 6 - 1954

Tanglewood Parade Week From Today

Thomas Schippers, who conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first half of the gala evening concert at the Berkshire Music Center's annual "Tanglewood on Parade", Friday, August 13, is a "musical revelation in himself" said the Paris press, and London agreed that "Thomas Schippers was a born conductor" when the twenty-three-year-old American made his first European tour in 1951.

For his conducting debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra Mr. Schippers conducts Bizet's Symphony in C major and the final scene from Richard Strauss' opera "Salome", with Brenda Lewis of the Metropolitan Opera and the Broadway stage as soloist; in the concert's second half Arthur Fielder leads The Boston Pops Orchestra for the first time in Tanglewood's Music Shed.

Making his debut in his native Kalamazoo, Michigan, at the age of six, Mr. Schippers was official organist at St. Luke's Episcopal Church when he was eleven, and at the First Reformed Church at the age of fourteen. After concertizing in other mid-western cities as pianist and organist he enrolled at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia and New York's Juilliard School of Music.

Mr. Schippers—at seventeen—was chosen by Eugene Ormandy as one of the five finalists in a conductor's contest to direct the Philadelphia Orchestra in the Academy of Music. The same season he conducted New York's Lemonade Opera Co., in the first United States production of Haydn's "Man in the Moon," as well as Kurt Weill's "Down in the Valley" and Mendelssohn's "The Stranger."

LAKEVILLE, CONN
JOURNAL
8/5/54

Thomas Schippers, 23 To Conduct Orchestra

Thomas Schippers, who conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first half of the gala evening concert at the Berkshire Music Center's annual "Tanglewood on Parade" Friday, August 13 (8:15, Music Shed) is a "musical revelation in himself" said the Paris press, and London agreed that "Thomas Schippers was a born conductor" when the twenty-three-year-old American made his first European tour in 1951.

For his conducting debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Schippers conducts Bizet's Symphony in C major and the final scene from Richard Strauss' opera Salome, with Brenda Lewis of the Metropolitan Opera and the Broadway stage as soloist; in the concert's second half Arthur Fiedler leads the Boston Pops Orchestra for the first time in Tanglewood's Music Shed.

Making his debut in his native Kalamazoo, Mich., at the age of six, Mr. Schippers was official organist at St. Luke's Episcopal Church when he was eleven, and at the First Reformed Church at the age of fourteen. After concertizing in other mid-western cities as pianist and organist he enrolled at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia and New York's Juilliard School of Music.

Mr. Schippers — at seventeen — was chosen by Eugene Ormandy as one of the five finalists in a conductor's contest to direct the Philadelphia Orchestra in the Academy of Music. The same season he conducted New York's Lemonade Opera Company in the first United States production of Haydn's Man in the Moon, as well as Kurt Weill's Down in the Valley and Mendelssohn's The Stranger.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
UNION-STAR

AUG 6 - 1954

Lukas Foss To Make Debut At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 6 — Lukas Foss, who appeared as piano soloist earlier in this year's Berkshire Festival, will make his conducting debut of the season tonight at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood here.

Conducting a chamber group of Boston Symphony Orchestra players, he will have pianist Seymour Lipkin as soloist in Mozart's piano concerto in B flat major.

Regina Sarfaty, Jefferson Morris and McHenry Boatwright will be soloists in the New England premiere of Igor Stravinsky's "Pulcinella."

Foss will conduct excerpts from Mozart's opera "Idomeneo" for the program's second half with Marvin Worden, Miss Sarfaty, Charlotte Holloman and Theresa Green as soloists.

A composer's forum by composition students will be presented Sunday at 8:30 p.m. in the Chamber Music Hall.

BOSTON, MASS.
TRAVELER

AUG 6 - 1954

Remembering Koussevitzky

Almost spontaneously, Berkshire residents have banded together to establish a memorial for the late Serge Koussevitzky.

They hope to raise $15,000 for a Koussevitzky Memorial Fund to endow at least one annual scholarship for a talented young musician. Already they have more than $5,000, and will make the first award August 14 at Tanglewood, where the great Boston Symphony conductor established the Berkshire Festival.

This is a project that is certain to succeed. It's fitting that the name of Koussevitzky will still help young musicians in the years to come.

CLAREMONT, N. H.
EAGLE

AUG 6 - 1954

Berkshire Festival Enters Fifth Week at Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 6 — The fth week of Berkshire Festival oncerts at Tanglewood, in-ludes a program of Stravinsky nd Mozart performed by a hamber orchestra of members the Boston Symphony Orches-a, Lukas Foss guest conductor nd Seymour Lipkin piano solo-t, this evening in the Theatre-oncert hall; an all-Berlioz pro-ram by the full 104-piece Bos-n Symphony orchestra, harles Munch, music director, nducting, including Tangle-ood premieres of the "Summer ights" song cycle with Eleanor teber as soprano soloist and of e "Te Deum" with David Po-eri as tenor soloist and Willem risco Frank, organ soloist, on aturday evening in the music hed; and the Boston Symphony rchestra, in a program of luck, Beethoven and Brahms, unday afternoon in the music hed, Mr. Munch conducting, ino Francescatti violin soloist.

Mr. Foss, who is a teacher of omposition and who heads the anglewood study group divi-ion of the Berkshire Music cen-r will conduct the Boston ymphony orchestra chamber rchestra in its first perform-nce of "Pulcinella", ballet with ong in one act, by Igor Stravin-ky, after Pergolesi, with Regina arfaty, soprano; Jefferson Mor-is, tenor; McHenry Poatwright, ass, as soloists. Another Tan-lewood premiere on this pro-ram will be the excerpts from ozart's opera, "Idomeneo" which had its American prem-re by the Berkshire Music cen-r's opera department at Tan-lewood in 1947), with soloists arvin Worden, tenor, and Theresa Green, Regina Sarfaty and Charlotte Holloman, sopranos; 50 voices of the Festival chorus of Berkshire Music center students, supplemented by 18 boys from Indian Hill Workshop, Stockbridge, trained by David L. Buttolph and Harold Aks.

"Summer Nights"

Mr. Munch's Saturday evening Festival concert, one of his programs this summer in honor of the 150th aniversary season of the birth of Hector Berlioz, will mark first performances by the Boston Symphony orchestra of the six 'Summer Nights" songs after Theophile Gautier which Miss Steber has previously performed with the New York Symphony orchestra.

Evening concerts are at 8:30 p. m., the Sunday afternoon concert at 2:30 p. m. In the event of rain the Friday evening concert will be moved to the music shed. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the spacious Tanglewood lawns, are placed on sale on the day of the performance.

An added attraction for Festival patrons is the organ recital at 3 p. m., Saturday in the music shed, by E. Power Biggs. Mr. Biggs' program consists of Antonio Soler: Double Concerto No. 3, in G; J. S. Bach: Fantasia and Fugue in C minor; Louis Claude Daquin: Three Noels with Variations; Anthony Donato: Two Pastels; Jehan Alain: Litanies.

This Clipping From
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE

AUG 6 - 1954

Tanglewood Parade Week From Today

Thomas Schippers, who conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first half of the gala evening concert at the Berkshire Music Center's annual "Tanglewood on Parade", Friday, August 13, is a "musical revelation in himself" said the Paris press, and London agreed that "Thomas Schippers was a born conductor" when the twenty-three-year-old American made his first European tour in 1951.

For his conducting debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra Mr. Schippers conducts Bizet's Symphony in C major and the final scene from Richard Strauss' opera "Salome", with Brenda Lewis of the Metropolitan Opera and the Broadway stage as soloist; in the concert's second half Arthur Fielder leads The Boston Pops Orchestra for the first time in Tanglewood's Music Shed.

Making his debut in his native Kalamazoo, Michigan, at the age of six, Mr. Schippers was official organist at St. Luke's Episcopal Church when he was eleven, and at the First Reformed Church at the age of fourteen. After concertizing in other mid-western cities as pianist and organist he enrolled at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia and New York's Juilliard School of Music.

Mr. Schippers—at seventeen—was chosen by Eugene Ormandy as one of the five finalists in a conductor's contest to direct the Philadelphia Orchestra in the Academy of Music. The same season he conducted New York's Lemonade Opera Co., in the first United States production of Haydn's "Man in the Moon," as well as Kurt Weill's "Down in the Valley" and Mendelssohn's "The Stranger."

LAKEVILLE, CONN
JOURNAL
8/5/54

Thomas Schippers, 23 To Conduct Orchestra

Thomas Schippers, who conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first half of the gala evening concert at the Berkshire Music Center's annual "Tanglewood on Parade" Friday, August 13 (8:15, Music Shed) is a "musical revelation in himself" said the Paris press, and London agreed that "Thomas Schippers was a "born conductor" when the twenty-three-year-old American made his first European tour in 1951.

For his conducting debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Schippers conducts Bizet's Symphony in C major and the final scene from Richard Strauss' opera Salome, with Brenda Lewis of the Metropolitan Opera and the Broadway stage as soloist; in the concert's second half Arthur Fiedler leads the Boston Pops Orchestra for the first time in Tanglewood's Music Shed.

Making his debut in his native Kalamazoo, Mich., at the age of six, Mr. Schippers was official organist at St. Luke's Episcopal Church when he was eleven, and at the First Reformed Church at the age of fourteen. After concertizing in other mid-western cities as pianist and organist he enrolled at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia and New York's Juilliard School of Music.

WORCESTER, MASS.
TELEGRAM
AUG 8 - 1954

SEEING NEW ENGLAND

Visit to Berkshires Is Time Well Spent

By BETTY LILYESTROM

Whether you're planning a day trip, a weekend or a two-week vacation, a visit to the beautiful Berkshires of Western Massachusetts will be time well spent.

For the most inland part of our state abounds in historical monuments, educational features and a variety of recreational areas.

A complex network of roads leads into the area, with something to see and do on every route. The visitor who chooses Route 20, the southern route, will travel over Jacob's ladder and thus have an opportunity to visit Ted Shawn's famed Jacob's Pillow Dance Center, a Summer gathering place for the leading American modern dance artists.

By branching off Route 20 at Springfield and following Routes 57 and 124 to southern Berkshire County, you will encounter an imposing array of waterfalls and state forests.

State Forests

Along the route are Tolland State Forest and Beartown State Forest. In the southern corner of the state are Mt. Everett Reservation and Bash-Bish Falls State Forest, the latter named for its scenic waterfall. An uncounted number of clear blue lakes and ponds is found all along the way.

At Sheffield, a tiny town close to the Connecticut border, is the newest covered bridge in the nation, a state-built edifice dedicated only last year.

Traveling north on Route 7, you will cross the Appalachian Trail just before entering Great Barrington, a pleasant country town noted for its annual county fair. Here, indeed, the first county fair ever to be held in the United States took place in 1807.

Monument Mountain

Passing through Monument Mountain Reservation, you will view the austere granite peak for which the state-protected area is named. From here it is only a short drive to Stockbridge, site of the Red Lion Inn, an old New England hostelry which first opened its doors in 1773.

Stockbridge and its neighbor to the north, Lenox, still prize the stately mansions built by the nation's wealthy in years gone by. Most of the original families have long since left the area and many of the estates are now private schools or community centers, but the glamor of past eras can be glimpsed again in the spacious, well-kept grounds, the marble statuary and the substantial wood and brick mansions.

The luxurious estates are particularly evident in Lenox, which claimed during the 1920's to shelter 67 per cent of the nation's wealth. Among the famous names to have graced Lenox guest books are those of Nathaniel Hawthorne, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, James Russell Lowell and Fanny Kemble.

Hawthorne House

Hawthorne wrote his famous "House of Seven Gables" is a dwelling now known as Hawthorne House on the grounds of the Tanglewood Music Center in Lenox. The center is one of the greatest tourist attractions in Berkshire County, annually drawing thousands of visitors to its music programs which include symphony concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, chamber music, opera and choral recitals. Serious music students come from all over the world to study at the Tanglewood music school under the tutelage of modern music "greats."

In this area, too, are the Pleasant Valley Bird Sanctuary, the Pittsfield State Forest and the South Mountain Chamber Music Center.

A few miles to the north is Pittsfield, Berkshire county seat and one of the county's two cities. Settled in 1753, Pittsfield is today a city of nearly 60,000 people, an industrial center richly endowed with cultural features.

City's Products

Products of the city's manufacturing industries include plastics, worsteds, silk, buttons, machines, paper and the largest power transformers in the world. The General Electric Company maintains a test engineering division where visitors can see a demonstration of man-made lightning. Among the many paper mills is one in suburban Dalton where all the paper used in U. S. Currency is made.

The picturesque yellow brick City Hall is nearly 125 years old. It stands on one side of the oval common at the city's center — from this common North, South, East and West streets branch out. Also bordering the common are the Berkshire County Courthouse, the imposing public library and several churches.

A stone's throw away, on South street, stands the Berkshire Museum, a weathered stone building that has gained world recognition for the excellence of its collection.

Public High School

A few blocks down East street is the public high school, a mammoth domed brick edifice. On the site, before the school was built, stood the mansion in which Longfellow was married and which held the clock that inspired the poet's "Old Clock on the Stairs."

Within the city limits are two scenic lakes, Pontoosuc and Onota, both set against a background of tall, forest-covered mountains.

If you choose to start your journey back directly from Pittsfield, you will probably travel on Route 9 to Worcester. If so, don't fail to stop in Cummington to view the little house that was the birthplace of the poet, William Cullen Bryant. Along the way you may also wish to visit Wahconah Falls State Park.

Greylock Reservation

However, if you'd like to drive a little farther before starting home, continue north on Route 7 past Pontoosuc Lake, through quaint old Lanesboro and New Ashford to the Greylock Reservation.

Here, from a circle of lesser peaks rises the highest mountain in Massachusetts — Mt. Greylock, its summit 3500 feet above sea level. In Winter, the mountain is a mecca for skiing enthusiasts. In Summer, its summit affords an unrivalled view of the whole Berkshire area.

From Mt. Greylock, you will travel on through industrial North Adams, Berkshire County's second and smaller city. A few miles farther and you will arrive in Williamstown, a picturesque country town, site of Williams College and the historic Williams Inn. Stately homes here attest to the prominence of Williamstown residents, past and present. For several years, until his death in 1951, novelist Sinclair Lewis made his home here. William H. Vanderbilt, a former governor of Rhode Island, and Cole Porter, the song writer, are also permanent Williamstown residents.

Mr. Schippers — at seventeen — was chosen by Eugene Ormandy as one of the five finalists in a conductor's contest to direct the Philadelphia Orchestra in the Academy of Music. The same season he conducted New York's Lemonade Opera Company in the first United States production of Haydn's Man in the Moon, as well as Kurt Weill's Down in the Valley and Mendelssohn's The Stranger.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
UNION-STAR

AUG 6 - 1954

Lukas Foss To Make Debut At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 6 — Lukas Foss, who appeared as piano soloist earlier in this year's Berkshire Festival, will make his conducting debut of the season tonight at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood here.

Conducting a chamber group of Boston Symphony Orchestra players, he will have pianist Seymour Lipkin as soloist in Mozart's piano concerto in B flat major.

Regina Sarfaty, Jefferson Morris and McHenry Boatwright will be soloists in the New England premiere of Igor Stravinsky's "Pulcinella."

Foss will conduct excerpts from Mozart's opera "Idomeneo" for the program's second half with Marvin Worden, Miss Sarfaty, Charlotte Holloman and Theresa Green as soloists.

A composer's forum by composition students will be presented Sunday at 8:30 p.m. in the Chamber Music Hall.

BOSTON, MASS.
TRAVELER

AUG 6 - 1954

Remembering Koussevitzky

Almost spontaneously, Berkshire residents have banded together to establish a memorial for the late Serge Koussevitzky.

They hope to raise $15,000 for a Koussevitzky Memorial Fund to endow at least one annual scholarship for a talented young musician. Already they have more than $5,000, and will make the first award August 14 at Tanglewood, where the great Boston Symphony conductor established the Berkshire Festival.

This is a project that is certain to succeed. It's fitting that the name of Koussevitzky will still help young musicians in the years to come.

HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES

AUG 9 - 1954

Berlioz 'Te Deum' Played at Tanglewood

By GEORGE W. STOWE
Special to The Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass. — The most amazing feature of the Berlioz Festival this Summer at Tanglewood has been the cumulative interest on the part of concertgoers. Each successive program dedicated to the French composer seems to have drawn a larger crowd, with Saturday's audience of 10,600 constituting a record high for the season.

And to such a consecrated and indefatigable Berliozian as Dr. Munch it must have been a source of gratification that this huge throng was attracted, not by such staples as the "Fantastic" Symphony or the "Romeo and Juliet," but by a program that consisted of such unfamiliar and rarely-performed works as the "Royal Hunt and Storm" from the "Trojans," the "Summer Nights" song cycle, and the powerful "Te Deum."

* * *

IT HAS BECOME fashionable to extol Berlioz the symphonist and in the same breath to deny his talent in writing for the voice. This myth was effectively shattered Saturday night by the performance of his "Summer Nights," an exquisite cycle of songs for soprano and orchestra with texts by Theophile Gautier.

In subtlety of expression and evanescent coloration they are the legitimate forerunners of the French art songs of Debussy, Faure, and others of the impressionistic school. "Absence" is the best known of the six, but others equally persuasive include the haunting "On the Lagoons" and the dramatic "Specter of the Rose."

* * *

NO SMALL CREDIT must go to Eleanor Steber, the soloist, who sang with faultless control and an ethereal warmth that we have never known her to display heretofore. That her voice is a dramatic soprano made the accomplishment doubly remarkable.

The "Royal Hunt and Storm" music from Berlioz' Virgilian opera, "The Trojans," has its artistic counterpart in the Love Music from "Romeo and Juliet." Both represent the apotheosis of the "grand passion," a situation which impelled the composer to resort to symphonic rather than vocal terms. Surpassing tenderness and contrasting "storminess" were realized in the interpretation of Mr. Munch and the Bostonians.

But both these works were only a prelude to the sonoral grandeur of the "Te Deum," which is so seldom given in this country as to be practically unknown. Its affinity to the better-known "Requiem" is undoubted, but this is the creation of a more mature artisan, a more concise expression — but certainly no less powerful.

THE ONLY SOLOIST is a tenor but the choral and instrumental requirements are stupendous. The composer's specifications were only partially met Saturday night, although there was the Festival Chorus of 200 voices on stage and a children's chorus of 80 voices to augment it. But such resources were more than sufficient to impress the audience with the manumentality of this conception.

There are moments of quiet expression, as in the Te Ergo with the tenor solo capably handled by David Poleri, but the over-all effect is of concretic and awesome power. And the concluding Judex crederis rises to an inexorable point of sound and majesty that can only become anticlimactic before it is over.

Berlioz must be accepted or rejected on his own terms. For those who prefer a grandiose rather than a beatific hymn of praise this is the final word.

Beethoven Concerto

Zino Francescatti, the distinguished French violinist, was guest soloist with the Boston Symphony under Charles Munch Sunday afternoon and it must be reported that his performance of the Beethoven Concerto was the shining ornament in a program that also included Gluck and Brahms.

* * *

AFTER ALL the pyrotechnics have been spent and the brilliant showpieces exploited it is soul-satisfying to return to the solid virtues of Beethoven's essay in this form. All its parts belong to a homogenous whole and it speaks with nobility directly to the heart. Such simplicity can only arise from unspeakable depths.

Mr. Francescatti's conception of the concerto is admirable in its breadth and tonal warmth. In his hands its technical difficulties seem hardly existent because they are subordinated to the architectural considerations of its design. One could ask no more of a Beethoven interpretation.

Brahms' Second Symphony has the reputation of being his most genial experiment in this medium. This is not the lighthearted affability of Mozart or the earthly jocularity of Beethoven but something so Olympian that it sometimes seems disassociated with ordinary human beings.

* * *

MR. MUNCH does not exactly carry on the tradition of Koussevitsky in his Brahms. There is less suavity and more dynamic thrust to its contours under the Frenchman. And there is no doubt that the final Allegro con spirit moves along with more alacrity under Munch than it did for his predecessor. How do you like your Brahms?

Gluck's Overture to "Alceste" came through to us with a classical purity and restraint that could well be an exemplar for all performances.

For the statistical record Sunday's concert was, by far, the most popular of the season; 12,700 were in attendance.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE

AUG 7 - 1954

Berlioz Music To Be Featured At Tanglewood

Berlioz' song cycle "Summer Nights" for soprano and orchestra will have its first performance at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., tonight, played by the Boston Symphony orchestra under the baton of Charles Munch. Eleanor Steber will be the soloist.

* * *

THE ALL-BERLIOZ program, honoring the 150th anniversary of the composer's birth, also includes "Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans" and the "Te Deum" with tenor David Poleri as soloist with the Festival chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke DeVaron.

Zino Francescatti will make the first of two Berkshire festival appearances when he plays the Beethoven Violin Concerto tomorrow afternoon. He will give the final chamber music program of the season on Wednesday evening in the Theater-Concert hall. He is donating his services to the Berkshire Music center for the Wednesday program.

The program tomorrow afternoon will also include the Gluck "Overture to Alceste," and the Brahms Symphony number 2.

Tonight's program starts at 8:30 o'clock and tomorrow's at 2:30

'Tanglewood on Parade' Will Be Benefit for Music Center

Providence Sunday Journal 8/8/54

THE annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, "Tanglewood on Parade," will take place Friday at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., with department sessions in the afternoon and a gala concert at night. Among the lighter aspects of the event will be a lawn party and picnic supper, drawings for door prizes and waltzing on the lawn after the evening concert. Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky is chairman of the committee.

The concert will be held in the Shed where the Boston Pops Orchestra, conducted by Arthur Fiedler, will appear for the first time in a typical Pops program. The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play the first half of the program consisting of Bizet's Symphony in C Major and the final scene from Strauss' "Salome," with Brenda Lewis, soprano soloist.

Conducting the orchestra will be Thomas Schippers, a young alumnus of the Berkshire Music Center who made his debut on the podium with Menotti's "The Consul." He has conducted the Philadelphia, NBC and Lewisohn Stadium orchestras and has also been with the New York City Opera where he conducted the world premiere of Aaron Copland's "The Tender Land" which was given its New England premiere last week at Tanglewood.

Miss Lewis made her debut with the Metropolitan Opera two years ago as Musetta in "La Boheme" and sang here in the Met's road production of "Fledermaus." On Broadway she has been in "Regina," "The Merry Widow," "The Gypsy Baron" and "The Girl in Pink Tights."

Guests are invited to bring picnic suppers and make use of the buffet tents from [illegible] to 8:15. At the latter hour, Thomas Schippers will conduct the Boston Symphony in Bizet's C Major Symphony, and the final scene from Strauss's "Salome" with Brenda Lewis in the title role.

The program will also include a concert by Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra.

Saturday evening at 8:30, Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony in Brahms' "Tragic" Overture, Piston's Symphony No. 4, Ravel's Piano Concerto with Nicole Henriot as soloist, and Saint-Saens' Symphony No. 3.

The closing program of the Tanglewood Festival will be Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, when Mr. Munch will conduct Berlioz's Requiem.

HARTFORD, CONN.
COURANT

AUG 8 - 1954

Week Will Bring Final Programs At Tanglewood

The Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., goes into its final programs this week.

Wednesday evening at 8:30 in the theater-concert hall, Zino Francescatti, violin, and Artur Balsam, piano, will be heard in the Brahms Violin Sonatas in A Major and D Minor. Mr. Francescatti will also play the Bach Suite in C for unaccompanied violin.

The usual Friday night program in the theater-concert hall at 8:30, will be held Thursday evening instead. Jean Morel will conduct members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Rossini's Overture to "Scala di Seta," Mozart's Symphony in B Flat (K319), Ravel's "Mother Goose" Suite, and "Der Burger als Edelmann," by Richard Strauss.

The annual Tanglewood-On-Parade will be held Friday, rain or shine. Holders of boxes and reserved seats are invited to a special performance of opera in the Tanglewood gardens at 4 o'clock.

The regular public program will begin at 5:45 with a fanfare and welcome. At 6 o'clock the departments of the Berkshire Music Center, will hold simultaneous programs. The orchestra will be heard in the shed, the opera department in the theater-concert hall, and chamber music ensembles in the chamber music hall.

BOSTON MASS.
POST

AUG 8 - 1954

Memorial to a Musician

Folks in the western part of the State, where the Berkshire Festival attracts more than 50,000 people a week to hear good music, are creating a living memorial to the man who made the festival possible.

They will commemorate the genius of the late Serge Koussevitzky not, with a plaque or a statue, but in a scholarship aiding talented young conductors. The first award will be announced in a few days.

The memory of the great maestro, who held the Boston Symphony at a peak of musical perfection not matched by any other orchestra in the world, will be kept green by promising young men, year after year. Since he aided many such on the first steps to fame, he would have been pleased by this.

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE

AUG 7 - 1954

Judd Retires As Manager Of Boston Symphony Orchestra

After nearly 40 years of service to the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with which he became associated in 1915, and which he has managed since 1936, George E. Judd was honored at a luncheon by members of the orchestra yesterday at Tanglweood, where the Berkshire Festival to which he brought the Boston Symphony in 1937 is drawing to the close of its 17th season. Mr. Judd will be succeeded September 1 at the start of the orchestra's 74th season in Symphony Hall, Boston, by assistant manager Thomas D. Perry Jr.

The retirement ceremony also paid tribute to Leon Gorodetzky, violinist, who has seen service with the Boston Symphony since 1920, and to violinist Georges Fourel, whom Pierre Monteux (then permanent conductor of the orchestra) brought from France in 1921. They were presented with engraved gold watches on behalf of members of the orchestra and the management by Music Director Charles Munch at the conclusion of the morning's rehearsal for tonight's all-Berlioz program in the Tanglewood Music Shed. Jerome Lipson, violinist, chairman of the orchestra committee, presided, and first violinist Harry Dickson was toastmaster.

With the modesty that has characterized his association with the orchestra all his years, Mr. Judd refused to allow any special ceremony to be made of his official farewell to the symphony and to Tanglewood, but asked that he be included in the orchestra men's lunch in honor of their colleagues "as a third retiring member of the orchestra." An engraved gold watch was also presented him.

A special gift to Mr. Judd was a leather-bound record album containing the only copy of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's final program of its 73rd season' in Symphony Hall May 1st last, Beethoven's Ninth Symphony conducted by Mr. Munch, tape-recorded unbeknownst to Mr. Judd by WGBH, Boston's non-commercial radio station which broadcasts a number of the orchestra's programs to educational institutions, and with the blessing of the Musicians' Union pressed in an LP album by RCA-Victor Records, complete with [illegible] labels. The special edition of one record included the gold-plated master from which it was made and also the plate from which the text on the album cover was printed. The album was presented the retiring manager by Rosario Mazzeo, personnel manager of the orchestra.

HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM

AUG 9 - 1954

23,000 Persons At Tanglewood Over Weekend

The largest crowds so far attended the week-end concerts of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood Saturday night and Sunday afternoon. A quite unusual program drew 10,600 on Saturday, and 12,700 heard Zino Francescatti, violinist, play with the Boston Symphony orchestra on Sunday.

Eleanor Steber, the famous soprano, thrilled her Saturday audience in Berlioz' "Nuits d'Ete," a most romantic opening with "The Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans," and concluding with his extravagant "Te Deum." In this last an organ, a tenor soloist, and three choruses joined with the orchestra. The choruses themselves were something: the Berkshire Music Center chorus which is a highly trained group, and then a group of 40 boys from 9 to 13 from a nearby summer camp, and one of 44 girls from the Indian Hill music workshop. The youngsters had worked hard and put everything they had into it. David Poleri was soloist and Willem Frisco Frank played the organ. Behind it all was the Boston symphony and Charles Munch, whose presentation o Berlioz this anniversary season has met with resounding success.

Sunday afternoon was calme but as satisfying with Francescatti bringing the audience to its feet in applause for his Concerto in D Major by Beethoven Fritz Kreisler was in the audience to hear this. Gluck' Alceste Overture and Brahms Second Symphony were also on a program that was richly enjoyed.

Mr. Francescatti will presen a Sonata program on Wednesday evening at the Theatre Concert hall, and on Thursday evening the Chamber orchestra concert will be given, to make way for the big Tanglewood on Parade program scheduled for Friday. The Thursday night program will be conducted by Jean Morel, the program consisting of Overture to "Sca[illegible] Seta" by Rossini, Mozart's Symphony in B flat, Ravel's "Mo[illegible] Goose" suite, and "Der Burger als Edelmann" by Richard Strauss.

NEWARK, N. J.
NEWS
AUG 8 - 1954

Young Jersey Singers Thrill To Honor at Berkshire Fete

By EDITH KRAVET
Staff Correspondent.

TANGLEWOOD, Mass. — To work under the great conductor, Charles Munch, and perform with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in one of the major concerts of the Berkshire Music Festival! This was the thrill given 25 boys and six teen-age girls from North Jersey who yesterday appeared in choruses of Hector Berlioz's "Te Deum" oratorio.

The boys, from 9 to 13 years old, were members of a 40-voice children's chorus composed of youngsters attending Camp Mah-Kee-Nac in neighboring Stockbridge Bowl. The New Jersey girls were among 44 who formed the all-girl chorus from the Indian Hill Music Workshop in Stockbridge. They joined with the Berkshire Music Center's own singers to present the triple-chorus Berlioz work as the entire second half of yesterday's program.

Enthusiastic

When Mah-Kee-Nac's director, Joseph Kruger of South Orange, received the request from Tanglewood to have some of the campers participate in the program, he put the matter to the boys' governing council.

The group immediately recognized the honor and the audition call brought out a huge force. Some had too "changing" a voice, however, and others already had developed a deep tone.

The boys chosen rehearsed with Tanglewood directors at 40-minute sessions three times a week for about a month. Although they occasionally did some practicing on their own, their regular camping activities were not interfered with until last week when they joined with the festival singers and orchestra for full rehearsals.

"Everybody stared and stared at us when we first came to rehearsal," one boy said, a bit surprised by their reception. But their efforts soon won the pronouncement "excellent" from Tanglewood's choral director, Hugh Ross, and the enthusiastic applause of the professional choristers.

Only 15 Experienced

Only 15 of the Jersey boys in the group have had previous singing experience, although all said they really liked music. Several play musical instruments and attend concerts in Newark.

Among the youthful singers who appeared last night in their gray flannels and Mah-Kee-Nac camp shirts were Robert Fischer, brothers Roger and John Lowenstein and Richard Wasserman of Newark, Michael Luftman of Hillside, Barry Siegel and Larry Spritzer of Maplewood, Norman Goldberg of East Orange, Michael Biber, Howard Cohen, Neal Demby, Michael Feller, David Lieberman, Michael Markensohn, Fred Rosenberg and Kenneth Segal of South Orange, Jeffrey Fisch of Montclair, Eric Chivian of Millburn, Michael Stiglitz of Elizabeth, Edward Freedman and Milton Reitman of New Brunswick, Jeffrey Lawrence of Paterson, David Bruck and Charles Saletan of Arlington and Herbert Zamansky of Teaneck.

The girls who appeared in the same program are students at a music workshop for 13- to 18-year-olds. From New Jersey were Lynn Elkus of Jersey City, Joy Goldsmith of Perth Amboy, Judy Silk and Joan Locker of Arlington, Adele Mayers of Maplewood and Harriet Turtletaub of Bayonne. All are 16 except Adele, who is 17.

None of these girls happens to be a voice major. Harriet, Judy and Joy are concentrating on piano, Adele is a violinist, Lynn a dancer and Joan a fine arts major. They found the music a bit "tough" and "especially high," but nothing could detract from the pleasure and excitement of working with Munch and the Boston Symphony, they said.

BOSTON MASS.
POST
AUG 8 - 1954

Berlioz "Requiem"

The final concert in the Berkshire Festival will be given next Sunday afternoon in the Shed at Tanglewood. At that time Berlioz' monumental "Requiem" will be performed in memory of Serge Koussevitzky by the Boston Symphony, the Festival Chorus, and Tenor David Poleri under the direction of Charles Munch. The "Requiem" requires, in addition to soloist, chorus and orchestra, the services of four brass bands and additional percussion.

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
AUG 9 - 1954

Near Record Crowds At Two Tanglewood Concerts

Enthusiasm and thrilling performances were the order of the last two days at the Berkshire Music Festival in Tanglewood. Near record crowds, 10,600 on Saturday night and 12,700 Sunday afternoon, swarmed into the beautiful grounds and Shed to hear the music of Berlioz, Gluck, Beethoven and Brahms. Saturday evening the twentieth program of the season was devoted entirely to the works of Hector Berlioz. Evidence of this composer's tremendous talent in orchestral innovation and dynamic possibility was obvious in the three offerings of the evening. The largest work was the last on the program, "Te Deum" for three choruses, with orchestra and organ. Willem Frank was at the organ and the young Italian singer, David Poleri, sang the tenor solo.

The enthusiasm of the audience was aroused to high pitch by the amazing spirit and magnificent volume of sound produced by the Festival Chorus, slightly but charmingly reinforced by a children's chorus from Camp Mahkeenac and Indian Hill, and the full power of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Charles Munch, Festival director, quite literally whipped the massed forces before him into the magnificently conceived climaxes of this festive work. It was a trifle disconcerting to follow the conducting of two men at the same time as was necessary. Hugh Ross, conductor and director of choral work at Tanglewood, was seated in front of the combined choral groups at the rear of the platform and gave, to the children's groups especially, the cues and dynamic direction needed to insure their continued support in the proper places. He followed Mr. Munch precisely, but watching both men at once was a visual distraction. Eleanor Steber was the soloist for the song cycle "Summer Nights" for soprano and orchestra. The orchestra provided an extremely sympathetic and understanding background for the sensitive and beautiful singing of the artist. Her high notes were exquisite and the expressiveness of the lower register in her voice will be remembered.

Sunday afternoon will also stand out as a memorable occasion. The highlight was the impressively exceptional artistry of Zino Francescatti in the playing of Beethoven's "Violin Concerto" in D Major. Jascha Heifetz, the world renowned violinist, once remarked that he would walk miles to see and hear Mr. Francescatti play. Many thousands came for hundreds of miles yesterday to hear him and were handsomely rewarded. The D Major Concerto is a magnificent one on any program, but it was a joy as played under the sensitive baton of Mr. Munch, with the outstanding interpretation given by the soloist. Mr. Munch was so carried away with the beauty of the work that he unconsciously sang out on one of the most lovely of the phrases in the second movement.

Gluck's "Overture to Alceste" which opened the program is an unusually sombre dark-hued introduction to an opera. It was interesting as a forerunner in operatic overtures from Don Giovanni to Brahms' Tragic Overture. Brahms' "Symphony No. 2 in D Major" rounded out a perfect afternoon of the best in musical offering. This symphony abounds with mellifluous phrases and as played by the Boston Symphony, whose string section is so much to be admired, it was singularly moving.

Dark clouds threatened to open up during the first half of the program and throngs of music lovers and sun worshippers felt it wise to move into the shelter of the Shed, but the storm bided its time and did not interfere further with a truly unforgettable experience.—F.M.R.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
NEW YORKER
AUG 8 - 1954

Event Scheduled At Berkshire Center

"Tanglewood on Parade," will be featured at the Berkshire Music center, Lenox, Mass., from 6 to 11 o'clock, Friday night, with a lawn party and picnic supper being scheduled at 7 o'clock.

Beginning at 6 o'clock, the orchestra will be heard in the shed, the opera group in the theater-concert hall and chamber music in the chamber music hall. Concerts will begin by the chorus on the porch of the main house at 7 o'clock and at 8:15 o'clock, there will be a gala concert in the shed. For the shed concert, Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops orchestra in a typical Pops program. Thomas Schippers, who made his first European tour in 1951, will make his conducting debut with the Boston Symphony orchestra, for the first half of the program.

Mr. Schippers studied at the Berkshire Music center in 1948, after which he was chosen to conduct the opera, "The Consul," in New York City and later in Europe. Upon returning to this country, he was appointed a resident conductor of the New York City Opera Co., becoming the youngest conductor on the staff of any major opera company.

Brenda Lewis, New Rochelle, who is with the Metropolitan Opera company, will be the soloist with the orchestra, singing the final scene from Richard Strauss' "Salome," which she has sung with the New York City Opera Co. Miss Lewis made her debut at the Metropolitan Opera in February of 1952 and subsequently toured the nation. This will be her her first appearance at Tanglewood.

In addition to the final scene from "Salome," the first half of the program will include Bizet's "Symphony in C."

For those having box seats or reserved tickets, a special program of opera music will be presented in the formal gardens at 4 o'clock.

BOSTON, MASS.
ADVERTISER
AUG 8 - 1954

Pops at Tanglewood

Arthur Fiedler is bringing the 92-piece Boston Pops Orchestra to play for the first time in Tanglewood's Music Shed on Friday, Aug. 13, as the star attraction of the gala concert of Tanglewood on Parade, the day-long annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center.

HARTFORD, CONN.
COURANT
AUG 8 - 1954

The Lively Arts—

Culture's Coney Islands

By T. H. Parker

"Summertime an' the livin' is easy . . ."

Who ever said such foolishment, anyway? Horace Sutton, writing in the New York Herald Tribune, wants to give him an argument. "What you have to get on a holiday nowadays is not a boy friend, or a sun tan, or, heaven forbid — a rest," says Mr. Sutton, in part. "Vacations are for culture . . . Tennyson anyone?"

The fretted Mr. Sutton (makes him sound like a lute, doesn't it; well, it's just another example of how summer makes people musimanic), the fretted Mr. Sutton is reporting from a lake resort in New Hampshire. The hotel there has been running a Festival of the Seven Arts for five years, or "ever since the use of the mind in July and August became popular." The day begins with full length recorded operas after breakfast. In the afternoon you may hear a harpist pluck a Bach bourree, or professors and foreign correspondents discuss the future of the world. In the evening, Trinidad dancers make voodoo beneath the maples, perhaps. The hotel's card room is hung with exhibitions and painting, and college presidents and editors lecture "the waitresses, locker boys, and assorted potato peelers."

Mr. Sutton's indictment doesn't stop there, by a long cadenza. He points out that one may hear Wagner from Bayreuth to the Berkshires, Shakespeare from Stratford, Ont., to Stratford-on-Avon, see ballet in Banff. "The thinkers are foregathered at Aspen in the cool of Colorado, the trippers are off to hear how Mozart sounds in the shade of Salzburg."

"What is a summer without Socrates, a vacation without Virgil," he muses. "I don't know what's happened to the sound of the cricket, but all you can hear in the mountains now is the Mendelssohn String Quartet. Well, I say it's Spinoza, and I say the heck with it."

Are we in the midst of some great People's Renaissance? Will future history books set down the mid-twentieth century as the new, cultural Enlightenment?

Let us look at the record. Take Tanglewood, for example, and the subject of summertime music. Last year, the fourteenth annual pontification of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at that site, a total of 126,350 persons heard the concerts. They ranged from personages in boxes to hoi polloi lying on the lawn amidst the evening dews and damps.

That is a lot of people. The concerts offered a lot of music. None of it was exactly esoteric, yet it was not to be confused, either, with the programs of the Boston "Pops." The appreciation of good music should have been hiked several notches, theoretically.

Perhaps it was. But last week the nationwide list of best selling "classical" (mind you!) records was headed by Romberg's "Student Prince." In fact, among the first ten best sellers, Romberg got the nod twice, taking both first and sixth places.

It would be foolish indeed to decry these Socratic summers, these Virgilian vacations, merely because some of the public shows a hankering for "The Student Prince." There may be many who will have profited from rubbing elbows with Berlioz this summer, or looking where the dawn, in russet mantle clad, clambers over the platform stages under direction of Tyrone Guthrie. Cultivation sometimes clings like clumps of burdock to even the most unwilling.

But more than 20 years now of frequenting summer's Pierias has left me in the belief that most of those who stop by, do not drink deeply. A certain surface curiosity to see what cultivation, the arts are all about doubtless moves many, in the same way that they would sample shish-kebab in an Armenian restaurant. Far and away the greatest number, however, seem to turn up at the summer resorts of the Muses because it's something to do.

It's the new tourism. Once the holiday tripper went hither and yon to see the topographical wonders, the customs of the natives, or to gaze upon the tomb of Napoleon. Now he gazes on the works of Shakespeare, of Brahms, of some capering choreographer in the same mute blankness. In advance, these art events represent some place to go. Afterward, they are some place where you have been.

But it is for the promoters of such long-hair enterprises that "the livin' is easy" in the summer time. Actors, musicians, dancers, artists, lecturers and every other variety of pie-men, are reaping in summer as they have never reaped before. So are their impresarios. Says Louis Marder, editor and publisher of the Shakespeare Newsletter, "If Shakespeare were collecting royalties this summer, his income would be many times greater than that of any other playwright, living or dead." Shakespeare isn't collecting, but somebody is, from Zurich in Switzerland to San Diego in southern California. They've even thought of staging "Hamlet" at Elsinore, in Denmark.

In the course of the last few years, the word "festival" has come to be one of the most horrid and obnoxious in the entire English language. No summer arts event, however highbrow or however commercial, except that it be a festival. "Festival" is a huckster's term, to give an air of glamor and desirability to something that otherwise would have a smaller draw. At first, when it was the illiterate that shunned portions of Stravinsky or Schoenberg, "festival" was the word used to lure the lowbrow. Now that almost every festival is geared to the lowest common denominator, the term is bait for the highbrows. "Festival" gets 'em going or coming. Your dollar is your diploma, admitting to each and every art event.

The arts should be available, summer or winter, to everyone who has a genuine taste for them. But the spirit of tourism which is turning the arts into a kind of cultural Coney Island, is getting a bit trying.

BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD
AUG 8 - 1954

Berkshire Festival Enters Final Week

With an anticipated attendance of 120,000 at its 24 concerts—six chamber music programs by visiting ensembles and 18 concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra; an expected 10,000 on Friday at Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center (the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra); and a predicted 45,000 patrons at the 40-odd concerts and demonstrations by various departments of the school, the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., concludes its 1954 schedule in the coming week. 175,000 persons will have helped shatter records, and prove the popularity of Music Director Charles Munchs decision this year to enlarge the annual summer Festival in the hills of Western Massachusetts within the scope of its previous six-week framework.

The sixth and final week of Festival concerts comprises a recital by Zino Francescatti, violinist, of Brahms and Bach sonatas, on Wednesday evening in the Theater-Concert Hall; Jean Morel conducting the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of Rossini, Mozart, Ravel and Richard Strauss, on Thursday evening in the Theater-Concert Hall; a symphonic program of works by Brahms, Piston, Ravel and Saint-Saens, with Charles Munch conducting the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, on Saturday evening in the Music Shed; and Mr. Munch leading the Boston Symphony in Hector Berlioz' massive "Requiem," in memory of Serge Koussevitsky, with David Poleri, tenor, and chorus, Sunday, August 15, in the Music Shed.

Zino Francescatti, a neighbor of Tanglewood, summering at Monterey, Mass., is donating his recital on Wednesday to the Berkshire Music Center. Arthur Balsam is his accompanist. Jean Morel, who heads the orchestra and conducting department of the Music Center this summer, makes his second appearance on the podium for a Festival concert, featuring two works new to Tanglewood audiences, the Overture to "Scala di Seta" (The Silken Ladder), the short opera Rossini composed at the age of 20, and Richard Strauss' suite "Der Burger als Edelmann" (Le Bourgeouis Gentilhomme) arranged from his incidental music to Moliere's play. Mr. Munch's Saturday evening concert also has two Tanglewood premieres, Walter Piston's Symphony No. 4, commissioned by the University of Minneapolis in 1951, and Saint-Saens' Symphony No. 3, in which E. Power Biggs is organ soloist.

BOSTON, MASS.
EVENING GLOBE
AUG 10 1954

Widow Protests "Goings-On"

Tanglewood Wooing Ires Music Lover, 83

LENOX, Aug. 10 (UP)—An elderly widow whose ancestors came over on the Mayflower bristled with Puritan indignation today at lovemaking at the long-haired Tanglewood musical concerts.

Mrs. Charles F. Bassett's blue-blood dander was ruffled because of the "perfectly horrid goings-on" under the skies while the famed Boston Symphony Orchestra is playing.

"The things I've seen on the lawns at Tanglewood. . . . It's repulsive," said Mrs. Bassett, whose hedge-fronted estate Sundrum overlooks the Episcopal Church in this Berkshire Hills community of about 3000.

And Mrs. Bassett blames out-of-towners. She said these "outsiders" take the attitude: "Well, we'll show these hicks how to have fun and be free. These people (Lenox residents) need to be shown what freedom means."

Mrs. Bassett, a dignified 83, said she is descended from the Mayflower Pilgrims, including William Brewster and Gov. William Bradford of the Plymouth Bay colony.

Couples petting is all right—in its place, Mrs. Bassett allowed. "But why don't they do it in privacy? They absolutely have no decency."

Mrs. Bassett's complaints were brought to the attention of the Selectmen. But the board said it has no jurisdiction over Tanglewood because it is private property.

However, the board acted on another thing that has disturbed Mrs. Bassett—the scanty attire worn by men and women on Lenox streets. She said she was "disgusted" by the "lack of clothes on old and young."

The board voted to tack up signs "respectfully requesting" people to dress properly when they go window shopping or when they run down to the store for a can of milk.

Board chairman R. Harry Barnes said "we don't object to Bermuda shorts. But a lot of people are wearing these Bikini-type bathing suits."

And after all, he chuckled, "we're 100 miles or more from the seashore."

Barnes said the selectmen can't enforce the request but merely seek everybody's cooperation. He said the signs will be nailed up this week in public places.

Mrs. Bassett said she feared Lenox would get the reputation of being an "open town" if a halt were not called to the partial nudity on the streets and the woo-pitching with Wagner at Tanglewood.

BOSTON, MASS.
EVENING GLOBE
AUG 9 - 1954

Berlioz' Te Deum Highlight of Tanglewood Week-end

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, Aug. 8—A Berlioz program Saturday night which featured the seldom-heard Te Deum was the highlight of the last week-end but one of the current Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

That, and a splendid singing performance of the Beethoven Violin Concerto, with Zino Francescatti, concluded an enjoyable series.

The audience total of 27,950 persons for this series was the largest of the festival thus far. Of that figure, 10,600 were present Saturday night and 12,700 this afternoon. The remainder attended Wednesday and Friday.

Berlioz' vast and grandiose Te Deum, his last huge choral work and a product of his highest maturity, is almost a curiosity today. Few here could have heard it much before, and indeed I think this was the first time that Charles Munch has conducted it in this country.

Like the Requiem it calls for greatly augmented orchestra and chorus (Berlioz wanted 800 singers and an orchestra based upon 100 strings).

Yet the total effect, which in spirit is truly laudamus, is less a big sound than a big feeling. Loud enough to be impressive, of course, but not the sort of circus effect he obtained with his four brass bands in the Requiem.

Although the orchestral writing is characteristic Berlioz, of much detail and consistent beauty, the real interest here is the choral work, which is demanding, tricky and most ingenious.

The Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center was augmented by children from Camps Mahkeenac aand Indian Hill, with Hugh Ross stationed directly in front of youngsters as assistant conductor.

The device worked very well indeed: the choral singing of this performance was really superb, both in technical efficiency and expressive power. The tone was full without any sense of strain or shrillness.

David Poleri sang admirably (though his voice seemed a little tight, at first), the tenor solo of "Te Ergo Quaesumus." At the end, there was one of the biggest ovations, directed especially at Mr. Munch, that I have ever heard anywhere. The evening began with the orchestral Royal Hunt and Storm from "The Trojans," which went in accustomed fine style.

Another novelty was the song-cycle "Summer Nights," Berlioz' own orchestration of Vilanelle, "Le Spectre de la Rose," "Sur Les Lagunes," "L'Absence," "Au Cimitiere" and "L'Ile Inconnu."

The soloist was Eleanor Steber and she gave a good account of herself, though it seemed that she might have mustered a bit more variety of expression in the final three songs.

"Sur les Lagunes" ranges low for her soprano voice, but the tone was neither hollow nor unsteady. Especially in those measures where the dynamic volume is slight and the vocal range medium to high Miss Steber produced lovely sounds. She was well received by the audience, which could not repress a sympathetic chuckle when, as they left the stage, conductor Munch inadvertently stepped upon the train of her handsome light blue gown. The fragment was picked up, placed on a music stand and snatched up with a laugh and a flourish by Miss Steber when she responded to another round of applause.

This afternoon's program also included Gluck's gravely noble "Alceste" Overture and the Second Symphony of Brahms. Apart from two uneasy moments in the concerto the great violin classic went beautifully. Mr. Francescatti gives it a certain warm, Mediterranean quality that the work takes very nicely, and accordingly his reading is a bit different from the heavier and perhaps more roundly sculptured playing of it you have heard from other artists, especially German or Russian.

But the aspect of the Francescatti reading you remember longest is its constantly singing style.

WATERBURY, CONN.
AMERICAN
AUG 10 1954

Leisure Well Earned

Nearly 40 years of service with any organization is no mean accomplishment. When it is served with such an organization as the famous Boston Symphony Orchestra, and includes 20 years as the manager of that venerable organization, it is an accomplishment doubly worthy of notice. That is the achievement of George E. Judd, who retires Sept. 1, after one of the busiest careers in the musical life of the country.

Mr. Judd, with his characteristic modesty that has been noted in his association with the orchestra all his years, refused to allow any special ceremony to be made of his official farewell to the symphony and to Tanglewood. He asked that he be included as a third retiring member of the orchestra when the group honored two of its members at a luncheon.

Under George E. Judd's direction, the Boston Symphony Orchestra—a million and a half dollar operation—added luster to its status as one of the leading orchestras in the United States. During his tenure it became part of the annual Berkshire Festival in the hills of Western Massachusetts, where as many as 175,000 music-lovers from all parts of the country have enjoyed its offerings. In the summer of 1952, under his guidance, the orchestra made its first tour of Europe, and, in the spring of 1953, its first coast-to-coast tour.

Mr. Judd recently negotiated contracts with the National Broadcasting Co. for the Boston Symphony to replace the NBC Symphony of Arturo Toscanini next season on weekly Saturday night broadcasts. In his 20 years at its helm he scheduled the Boston Symphony to play a longer season than any other orchestra. It is the only one to maintain a music school of its own.

After so many years of arranging the orchestra's bookings, scheduling its tours, negotiating salaries, and recording contracts, supervising transportation, dealing with union, guest conductors, soloists, and the daily details of running Symphony Hall in Boston and Tanglewood, none will deny Mr. Judd his right to retire. On his newly acquired farm in Cannonsville, New York, he will devote his activities hereafter to floriculture. The many music lovers of western Connecticut who have been privileged through the years to hear his orchestra in its Woolsey Hall concerts in New Haven, and in its summer program at Tanglewood, will join in wishing him health, contentment, and a "green thumb."

---

gether to give one of the finest performances of the season. Mr. Francescatti will be heard again on Wednesday evening.

The Brahms symphony which brought the fifth week's program to a close was especially pleasing in the third movement. Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra were greeted with an ovation as the final notes were played.

This week will bring the Festival to its end but not before Tanglewood on Parade, for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, presents its variety program Friday evening and Mr. Munch leads the orchestra in programs on Saturday night and Sunday afternoon. The final program Sunday afternoon will present Berlioz' "Requiem" in memory of Serge Koussevitzky who conducted the orchestra for many years and was the spiritual father of the Music Center.

S. M.

HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM
AUG 11 1954

They had a special luncheon at Tanglewood last week to honor retiring members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Leon Gorodetzky, violinist, who came to the orchestra in 1920, and Georges Fourel, violinist, who joined it in 1921. Gold watches were given to these veteran musicians. But there was a third "member" also honored—George E. Judd, who after nearly 40 years of service to the orchestra is retiring as its general manager. A special edition of just one record—the Ninth Symphony of Beethoven recorded during the orchestra's last Symphony Hall program in May—was pressed for Mr. Judd's retirement. They gave him this record with the gold-plated master from which it was pressed. Mr. Judd was at the reins when the Boston Symphony took over Tanglewood and the Berkshire Festival. He has arranged now to have the NBC Saturday night broadcasts done by the Boston Symphony, replacing the NBC symphony, conducted by Arturo Toscanini, who has retired. Mr. Judd is going to retire to a New York State farm and raise flowers, but he has two sons in the music business to keep him in touch with what is going on, one with Columbia Artists' management and the other with the New York Philharmonic Symphony. The new Boston Symphony manager will be Thomas D. Perry, Jr., who has worked with Mr. Judd as assistant manager for six years and who has been executive secretary of the Berkshire Music Center.

¤ ¤

Christian Science Monitor

MILWAUKEE, WIS.
JOURNAL
AUG 10 1954

Playing and studying at Tanglewood music festival in the Berkshire mountains at Lenox, Mass., are three Milwaukeeans. They are (from left) William Keller, violinist, 3226 N. 27th st.; Eugene Schweiger, cellist, 3936 N. 11th st., and Barbara Fraser, violinist, 3750 W. Roberts st. The school is operated by the Boston symphony orchestra. —Gus Manos

---

BOSTON, MASS.
TRAVELER
AUG 10 1954

Tanglewood Petting Scored

By STANTON BERENS

LENOX (UP)—An elderly widow whose ancestors came over on the Mayflower bristled with Puritan indignation today at "indecent" love-making at the long-haired Tanglewood musical concerts.

Mrs. Charles F. Bassett's blueblood dander was ruffled because of the "perfectly horrid goings-on" under the skies while the famed Boston Symphony Orchestra is playing.

"The things I've seen on the lawns at Tanglewood . . . it's repulsive, wicked, indecent," said Mrs. Bassett whose hedge-fronted estate "Sundrum" overlooks the Episcopal church in this Berkshire Hills community of about 3,000.

And Mrs. Bassett blames out-of-towners. She said these "outsiders take the attitude: 'Well, we'll show these hicks how to have fun and be free. These people (Lenox residents) need to be shown what freedom means."

Mrs. Bassett, a dignified, 83, said she is descended from five Mayflower Pilgrims, including William Brewster and Gov. William Bradford of the Plymouth Bay Colony.

Couples petting is all right—in its place, Mrs. Bassett allowed. "But why don't they do it in privacy? They absolutely have no decency."

Mrs. Bassett's complaints were brought to the attention of the board of selectmen. But the board said it has no jurisdiction over Tanglewood because it is private property.

However, the board acted on another thing that has disturbed Mrs. Bassett—the scanty attire worn by men and women on Lenox streets. She said she was "disgusted" by the "lack of clothes on old and young."

The board voted to tack up signs "respectfully requesting" people to dress properly when they go window shopping or when they run down to the store for a can of milk.

[49]

PROVIDENCE, R. I.
BULLETIN
AUG 10 1954

Younger Set at Tanglewood Jolts an Old-Timer

Lenox, Mass. — (UP) — An 83-year-old widow whose ancestors came over on the Mayflower bristled with Puritan indignation today at "indecent" love-making at the Tanglewood concerts.

Mrs. Charles F. Bassett's blue-blood dander was ruffled because of the "perfectly horrid goings-on" while the Boston Symphony Orchestra is playing.

"The things I've seen on the lawns at Tanglewood . . . It's repulsive, wicked, indecent," said Mrs. Bassett.

She blames out-of-towners. She said these "outsiders take the attitude: 'Well, we'll show these hicks how to have fun and be free. These people (Lenox residents) need to be shown what freedom means.'"

Petting is all right—in its place, Mrs. Bassett allowed. "But why don't they do it in privacy? They absolutely have no decency."

Mrs. Bassett's complaints were brought to the attention of the Board of Selectmen. But the board said it has no jurisdiction over Tanglewood because it is private property.

However, the board acted on another complaint of Mrs. Bassett—the scanty attire worn by men and women on Lenox streets.

The board voted to tack up signs "respectfully requesting" people to dress properly.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
EVE. NEWS
AUG 10 1954

Old Lenox Strenuously Objects To Necking on Tanglewood Lawn

Five-Way Mayflower Descendant Finds Mixture of Sex and Symphony 'Repulsive'

Lenox, Aug. 10 (UP)—An elderly widow whose ancestors came over on the Mayflower bristled with Puritan indignation today at "indecent" love-making at the long-haired Tanglewood Musical Concerts.

Mrs. Charles F. Bassett's blue-blood dander was ruffled because of the "perfectly horrid goings-on" under the skies while the famed Boston Symphony Orchestra is playing.

"The things I've seen on the lawns at Tanglewood...it's repulsive, wicked, indecent," said Mrs. Bassett whose hedge-fronted estate "Sundrum" overlooks the Episcopal Church in this Berkshire Hills community of about 3000.

And Mrs. Bassett blames out-of-towners. She said these "outsiders take the attitude: 'Well, we'll show these hicks how to have fun and be free. These people (Lenox residents) need to be shown what freedom means.'"

Mrs. Bassett, a dignified 83, said she is descended from five Mayflower pilgrims, including William Brewster and Gov. William Bradford of the Plymouth Bay Colony.

Couples petting is all right—in its place, Mrs. Bassett allowed. "But why don't they do it in privacy? They absolutely have no decency."

Mrs. Bassett's complaints were brought to the attention of the Board of Selectmen. But the board said it has no jurisdiction over Tanglewood because it is private property.

For More Clothes on Street

However, the board acted on another thing that has disturbed Mrs. Bassett—the scanty attire worn by men and women on Lenox streets. She said she was "disgusted" by the "lack of clothes on old and young."

The board voted to tack up signs "respectfully requesting" people to dress properly when they go window shopping or when they run down to the store for a can of milk.

Board Chairman R. Harry Barnes said "we don't object to Bermuda shorts. But a lot of people are wearing these Bikini-type bathing suits."

And after all, he chuckled, "we're a 100 miles or more from the seashore."

Barnes said the selectmen can't enforce the request but merely seek everybody's co-operation. He said the signs will be nailed up this week in public places.

Mrs. Bassett said she feared Lenox would get the reputation of being an "open town" if a halt were not called to the partial nudity on the streets and the woo-pitching with Wagner at Tanglewood.

BOSTON, TUESDAY, AUGUST 10, 1954

ick'—'Bitter Swe

Thomas Schippers will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra for Tanglewood on Parade—the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center—on Friday evening in the Music Shed.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.
POST
AUG 10 1954

Widow Bristles At Love-Making At Tanglewood Musical Concerts

By STANTON BERENS

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 10.—(UP) An elderly widow whose ancestors came over on the Mayflower bristled with Puritan indignation today at "indecent" love-making at the long-haired Tanglewood musical concerts.

Mrs. Charles F. Bassett's blue-blood dander was ruffled because of the "perfectly horrid goings-on" under the skies while the Boston Symphony orchestra is playing.

"The things I've seen on the lawns at Tanglewood . . . it's repulsive, wicked, indecent," said Mrs. Bassett whose hedge-fronted estate "Sundrum" overlooks the Episcopal church in this Berkshire Hills Community of about 3,000.

And Mrs. Bassett blames out-of-towners. She said these "outsiders take the attitude: 'Well, we'll show these hicks how to have fun and be free. These people (Lenox residents) need to be shown what freedom means.'"

Mrs. Bassett, a dignified 83, said she is descended from five Mayflower Pilgrims, including William Brewster and Gov. William Bradford of the Plymouth Bay colony.

Couples petting is all right—in its place, Mrs. Bassett allowed. "But why don't they do it in privacy? They absolutely have no decency."

Mrs. Bassett's complaints were brought to the attention of the board of selectmen. But the board said it has no jurisdiction over Tanglewood because it is private property.

However, the board acted on another thing that has disturbed Mrs. Bassett—the scanty attire worn by men and women on Lenox streets. She said she was "disgusted" by the "lack of clothes on old and young."

The board voted to tack up signs "respectfully requesting" people to dress properly when they go window shopping or when they run down to the store for a can of milk.

Board Chairman R. Harry Barnes said "we don't object to Bermuda shorts. But a lot of people are wearing these Bikini-type bathing suits."

WATERBURY, CONN.
AMERICAN
AUG 9 - 1954

26,650 At Tanglewood For Concerts

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 9 —The fifth week of the Berkshire Musical Festival which brought Zino Francescatti, violin soloist, to the largest audience of the season, piled up a total of 26,650 music lovers in the three concerts of the week end.

Yesterday's concert, heard by 12,700 brought the largest audience of the season for a beautiful concert of Beethoven's "Violin Concerto in D major" and Brahms' "Symphony No. 2" conducted by Charles Munch. Saturday evening's concert brought an all-Berlioz program to 10,700 persons who heard Eleanor Steber, David Poleri, and William Friso Frank as soloists and the festival chorus.

Following close upon that delightful concert on Friday evening, heard by 3,350 music lovers, an overflow that had twice as many listeners on the grounds as there were in the filled music hall, Saturday's night performance was another in the 150th anniversary series being presented at Tanglewood to honor Berlioz.

Seymour Lipkin, guest pianist, gave a moving and finished performance of the Mozart "Piano Concerto in B-flat major" Friday night. Lukas Foss, conducting that concert in which a number of the students of the school appeared as soloists in Stravinsky's "Pulcinella" and in excerpts from Mozart's opera "Idomeneo", showed that he had masterly control of orchestra and singers. He is a new conductor with the orchestra who undoubtedly will be seen more frequently in the future, judging by the excellence of his work that evening.

There were beautiful solo parts by Mr. Francescatti at the Sunday performance. It was a brilliant performance in which orchestra, soloist and conductor worked to-

---

QUINCY, MASS.
PATRIOT LEDGER
AUG 10 1954

Tanglewood Lovers Gain Widow's Wrath

LENOX, Aug. 10 (UP) — An elderly widow whose ancestors came over on the Mayflower bristled with Puritan indignation today at "indecent" love-making at the long-haired Tanglewood musical concerts.

Mrs. Charles F. Bassett's blue-blood dander was ruffled because of the "perfectly horrid goings-on" under the skies while the famed Boston Symphony Orchestra is playing.

"The things I've seen on the lawns at Tanglewood . . . it's repulsive, wicked, indecent," said Mrs. Bassett whose hedge-fronted estate "Sundrum" overlooks the Episcopal Church in this Berkshire Hills community of about 3,000.

And Mrs. Bassett blames out-of-towners. She said these "outsiders take the attitude: 'Well, we'll show these hicks how to have fun and be free. These people (Lenox residents) need to be shown what freedom means.'"

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-JOURNAL
AUG 10 1954

Syracusans in "Tanglewood" . . . The Misses Victoria Gorcoff, left, 219 Marian dr., and Jane Snyder, 816 Maryland av., enrolled in Berkshire Music Center courses. Miss Gorcoff, soprano, is a member of the Center's Choral department. Miss Snyder is enrolled in a choral group. Miss Gorcoff is an active member of Syracuse Civic Morning Musicals, Inc.

50

HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
AUG 10 1954

Woo to Music Stirs Puritan Indignation

By STANTON BERENS

Lenox, Mass.—(UP)—An elderly widow whose ancestors came over on the Mayflower bristled with Puritan indignation today at "indecent" love-making at the long-haired Tanglewood musical concerts.

Mrs. Charles F. Bassett's blue-blood dander was ruffled because of the "perfectly horrid goings-on" under the skies while the famed Boston Symphony Orchestra is playing.

"The things I've seen on the lawns at Tanglewood. . . . It's repulsive, wicked, indecent," said Mrs. Bassett whose hedge-fronted estate "Sundrum" overlooks the Episcopal church in this Berkshire Hills community of about 3,000.

* * *

AND MRS. BASSETT blames out-of-towners. She said these "outsiders take the attitude: 'Well, we'll show these hicks how to have fun and be free. These people (Lenox residents) need to be shown what freedom means."

Mrs. Bassett, a dignified 83, said she is descended from five Mayflower pilgrims, including William Brewster and Gov. William Bradford of the Plymouth Bay Colony.

Couples petting is all right—in its place, Mrs. Bassett allowed. "But why don't they do it in privacy? They absolutely have no decency."

Mrs. Bassett's complaints were brought to the attention of the Board of Selectmen. But the board said it has no jurisdiction over Tanglewood because it is private property.

However, the board acted on another thing that has disturbed Mrs. Bassett—the scanty attire worn by men and women on Lenox streets. She said she was "disgusted" by the "lack of clothes on old and young."

* * *

THE BOARD VOTED to tack up signs "respectfully requesting" people to dress properly when they go window shopping or when they run down to the store for a can of milk.

Board Chairman R. Harry Barnes said "we don't object to "Bermuda shorts. But a lot of people are wearing these Bikini-type bathing suits."

Barnes said the selectmen can't enforce the request but merely seek everybody's cooperation. He said the signs will be nailed up this week in public places.

WATERBURY, CONN.
REPUBLICAN
AUG 10 1954

26,650 Hear Violinist At Tanglewood

(Special to The Republican)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 9 —The fifth week of the Berkshire Musical Festival which brought Zino Francescatti, violin soloist, to the largest audience of the season, piled up a total of 26,650 music lovers in the three concerts of the week end.

Sunday's concert, heard by 12,700 brought the largest audience of the season for a beautiful concert of Beethoven's "Violin Concerto in D major" and Brahms' "Symphony No. 2" conducted by Charles Munch. Saturday evening's concert brought an all-Berlioz program to 10,700 persons who heard Eleanor Steber, David Poleri, and William Friso Frank as soloists and the festival chorus.

Following close upon that delightful concert on Friday evening, heard by 3,350 music lovers, an overflow that had twice as many listeners on the grounds as there were in the filled music hall, Saturday's night performance was another in the 150th anniversary series being presented at Tanglewood to honor Berlioz.

Seymour Lipkin, guest pianist, gave a moving and finished performance of the Mozart "Piano Concerto in B-flat major" Friday night. Lukas Foss, conducting that concert in which a number of the students of the school appeared as soloists in Stravinsky's "Pulcinella" and in excerpts from Mozart's opera "Idomeneo", showed that he had masterly control of orchestra and singers. He is a new conductor with the orchestra who undoubtedly will be seen more frequently in the future, judging by the excellence of his work that evening.

There were beautiful solo parts by Mr. Francescatti at the Sunday performance. It was a brilliant performance in which orchestra, soloist and conductor worked together to give one of the finest performances of the season. Mr. Francescatti will be heard again on Wednesday evening.

The Brahms symphony which brought the fifth week's program to a close was especially pleasing in the third movement. Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra were greeted with an ovation as the final notes were played.

This week will bring the Festival to its end but not before Tanglewood on Parade, for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, presents its variety program Friday evening and Mr. Munch leads the orchestra in programs on Saturday night and Sunday afternoon. The final program Sunday afternoon will present Berlioz' "Requiem" in memory of Serge Koussevitzky who conducted the orchestra for many years and was the spiritual father of the Music Center.

S. M.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-JOURNAL
AUG 12 1954

Soprano Brenda Lewis will appear in scenes from the Richard Strauss opera "Salome" at "Tanglewood on Parade" tomorrow night in The Shed in "Tanglewood." Miss Lewis is remembered here as Rosalinda with the Metropolitan Opera Touring Company presenting "Fledermaus" in Loew's State. In the "Tanglewood" night concert, Thomas Schippers will conduct the Boston Symphony and Arthur Fiedler will direct a Boston Pops program.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION
AUG 11 1954

Plan Tanglewood Trip

The Adult Fellowship group of Third Baptist Church has scheduled a trip to Tanglewood as concerts at the famed Berkshire music center enter their last week. Preparing a passenger list for the Third Baptist motorcade to Lenox tonight are Mrs. Lillie Bean, at left, and Miss Dorothy Billup.

MANCHESTER, N. H.
UNION-LEADER
AUG 11 1954

WITH DORIOT ANTHONY (seated, left,) first flutists of the Boston Symphony orchestra and faculty member of the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., are New Hampshire residents summering as ~~students of the cen~~ter—the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival. (Left to right), Albert Petillo, cellist, 2 Grove street, North Conway; Miss Anthony; violinist, Richard Elias, 240 Calef road, Manchester; Elizabeth Hall, 86 Orchard street, Portsmouth, student in the Study Group; and Darius Robinson, 9 Elm street, Milford, associate in the school's opera division. (Photo by Gus Manos)

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
AUG 12 1954

Arthur Fiedler to Conduct Tanglewood Concert Today

Arthur Fiedler, who is celebrating his 25th year as conductor of the Boston Pops orchestra, will conduct that organization during the after-intermission portion of the Tanglewood-on-Parade program today.

The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music center attracted 8,500 persons last summer. Proceeds benefit the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

* * *

THE PROGRAM, which opens at 6 p.m., lasts to 11 p.m. and includes demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper and the evening concert followed by dancing on the lawn.

Fiedler is now conducting the Art Commission Pop Concerts in San Francisco's Civic auditorium, and will fly to the Berkshires for the parade concert, returning to California immediately after.

The first half of the concert program, scheduled for 8:15 p.m. in the Shed, will feature Thomas Schippers conducting the Boston Symphony orchestra in a program of Bizet and Richard Strauss. Soloist for this portion of the concert will be Brenda Lewis, celebrated young star of opera and musical comedy, in the final scene from Richard Strauss' "Salome."

Holders of boxes and reserved seats for the Tanglewood-on-Parade program have been invited to a special performance of opera in the formal gardens at Tanglewood at 4 p.m.

* * *

THE SCHEDULE for the evening includes fanfare and welcome at 5:45, simultaneous sessions of each department of the Berkshire Music center in the Shed, Theater Concert hall and the Chamber Music hall, a lawn party with picnic supper at 7 o'clock and the gala concert at 8:15.

The Pops concert program will include Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever," the Offenbach "Suite from Gaite Parisienne," the Ravel "Bolero," "TViana" arranged by Hayman and "Look Sharp-Be Sharp," Merrick-Bennett.

SHARON, CONN
NEWS
8/12/54

Two Weekend Concerts Will Conclude 1954 Berkshire Festival

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Music Director, conducting, gives the final pair of concerts of its enlarged 1954 Berkshire Festival, on Saturday, August 14, at 8:30 p.m. and Sunday, August 15, at 2:30 p.m. in the huge Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. If attendance figures of last summer, when 25,000 persons attended the final brace of concerts, can be considered a gauge and if fair weather prevails for the more than 12,000 persons who will hear the music on the spacious lawns outdoors, all records will be shattered in this 17th summer of symphonic music in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the 15th since the Boston Symphony Orchestra participated.

Saturday's program is all symphonic, with Mr. Munch leading the 104-piece Boston Symphony in Brahms' "Tragic Overture", Walter Piston's Symphony No. 4, Davel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin" and the Saint-Saens Symphony No. 3 with E. Power Biggs as organ soloist.

The concluding concert, in memory of late Serge Koussevitzky, who died in 1951 after 25 years as Music Director of the Boston Symphony, will be the last of a number of programs devoted this summer to rarely-heard music of Hector Berlioz, given in their complete form in

---

SHARON, CONN
NEWS
8/12/54

Attendance Records At Tanglewood Broken; Francescatti Triumphs

Last Sunday's Tanglewood attendance of nearly 13,000 broke all records for the season. Fine weather, the "middle week" of the heaviest vacation season, and a world-famous soloist, were all contributing factors. But a well-balanced program of classics familiar to most music lovers — a welcome respite from Berlioz, to some of us — and the great, growing, and deserved reputation of conductor Charles Munch, to say nothing of the virtuoso Boston Symphony, helped to drive cops, parking attendants, ticket collectors, and ushers nearly off their rockers.

Cars were blocked for miles as two-thirty neared, but the concert's opening hour was mercifully delayed, and nearly everybody heard nearly every note. That every note was well worth hearing was attested by extraordinary scenes, even for Tanglewood. One young aficionado ran glassy-eyed into the aisle and waved his arms in unison with those of Mr. Munch as the concluding number, the Brahms No. 2, was nearing its close, and almost collapsed with enthusiasm after the stirring climax.

When things like that happen at a concert of serious music as well as at the big-town appearances of jazz heroes, we, who like "both kinds" of music, may well take heart. And when the venerable Fritz Kreisler, as well as many others of the violinistically great, turn out to hear Mr. Zino Francescatti play the Beethoven, Zino could ask no greater compliment. To say nothing of such cheering and flash-blub popping as Tanglewood, yes, Tanglewood, seldom affords.

After a noble performance of the Gluck "Alceste" overture by the orchestra, Mr. Francescatti turned in a well-nigh perfect interpretation of perhaps the greatest single piece ever composed for his instrument. His is the classic approach — and considering the plethora of fervid fiddlers in the Auer tradition, it was, at least to this auditor, welcome indeed. Not that we don't like "rich" playing, even when it verges upon "schmaltz". But

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-JOURNAL
AUG 12 1954

TALKING IT OVER

Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Farr Are Among Husband-Wife Teams in 'Tanglewood'

By EMMA VAN WORMER

THE 200 OR MORE musicians and music lovers in attendance at the convention dinner of the New York State Federation of Music Clubs here last spring recall the recital given by Lowell and Naomi Farr, the latter a national auditions winner of Federated Music Clubs. Mr. and Mrs. Farr are among husband-wife teams studying in Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood this summer.

LOWELL FARR, a pianist is former student in the Paris Conservatoire, is working on opera coaching in the Berkshires. His wife, Naomo, a professional concert artist, a soprano, is working on advanced opera dramatics. In the convention dinner in Hotel Syracuse Farr played his wife's accompaniments in a varied program of operatic arias and songs.

Also in "Tanglewood," while Julius Ilku is studying double bass, Mrs. Ilku is working under the Boston Symphony's harpist Bernard Zinghera. Heskel Brisman, composition pupil of Ernst Toch and his wife, Rina Basin Brisman, an opera associate, are registered in the Berkshire Music Center summer session, to close Sunday. Monica and Keith MacGaffrey, brother and sister of Lenox, Mass., are students respectively of the French horn and the Study group. Rodney and Robert Pierece, twins, whose home is in Wichita, Kan., returned to "Tanglewood" for a season's study in the orchestra department.

CHORAL CONDUCTORS who are alumni of Tanglewood include James Aliferis (University of Minnesota); Jacob Avshalomoff (Columbia University,) and Lorna Cooke de Varon (New England Conservatory, Boston). Composers who have profited by summers in this center in the foothills of the Berkshires in Western Massachusetts: Norman dello Joio, Alan Hovaness, Ulysses Kay, Peter Mennin, Leonard Rosenman, Louis Mennini, Ned Rorem, Jurriaan Andraessen. Instrumentalists also receiving training there include Jacob Krachmalnick, concert master of the Philadelphia Orchestra; pianists Seymour Lipkin, Leonard Pennario, Constance Keene, Julius Katchen; cellist Aldo Parisot and violinist Norman Carol.

• • •

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
AUG 12 1954

anglewood Parade Friday 6 - 12 P.M.

Tanglewood will be On Parade omorrow. The annual benefit r the Berkshire Music Center, hich is expected to attract 10,-00 persons, is in aid of the oston Symphony Orchestra's um[illegible] music, now in s 12th season in conjunction ith the 17th Berkshire Festival, hich comes to its end Sunday. estivities, rain or shine, from :00 p. m. to midnight, include emonstrations by every depart- ent of the school, a lawn sup- er, a gala evening concert, folowed by drawing of door prizes, altzing on the lawn and a jam ession.

The evening's gala concert, ommencing at 8:15 p. m. in the lusic Shed, will feature, on the irst half, Thomas Schippers, Berkshire Music Center student n 1948, conducting the Boston ymphony Orchestra in Bizet's ymphony in C and in the final [illegible] of Richard Strauss' "Salome," with Brenda Lewis, tar of Broadway and formerly ith the Metropolitan and New ork City opera companies, as [illegible] soloist. The second part [illegible] program will feature the oston Pops Orchestra, performing for the first time in the Tanglewood Music Shed, with [illegible] Fiedler, celebrating his [illegible] year as its conductor, leading [illegible] Pops program.

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
AUG 12 1954

Large Audience Hears Violinist At Tanglewood

We broke a precedent last night at Tanglewood and went backstage after the concert and obtained the signature of that remarkable musician and violinist, Zino Francescatti. Assisted sympathetically at the Baldwin piano by Artur Balsam, Mr. Francescatti completely amazed and enthralled the 2,000 persons fortunate enough to obtain tickets to this concert which had been sold out days in advance. Acquiring this autograph was in the nature of a small attempt to pay homage to one of the relatively few truly great violinists, who is acknowledged by other top violinists to have arrived. Mr. Francescatti donated his services last night to the Berkshire Music Center and was also the soloist last Sunday afternoon with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

From the beautiful opening theme of Brahms' Sonata in A Major to the last exacting phrase of Brahms' D Minor Sonata, Mr. Francescatti gave a stirring performance. In the first Sonata, the wonderful sweeping phrases and inspired intertwining of violin and piano provided a marvelous wealth of composition for the combined talents of the two artists. Mr. Balsam has been playing with Mr. Francescatti for almost twenty years and is admirably equipped to be the tasteful frame for the exquisite work of art which is the playing of Mr. Francescatti. This may be a mixed metaphor but it is only to point up the fact that though an excellent acocmpanist, Mr. Balsam does not have the spirit or the same living, breathing oneness with his instrument as does the violinist, is to self effacing, to stand out as more than a "frame."

In the A Major Sonata we first heard the wonderful sustaining power of Mr. Francescatti's bow. In the second movement there is a high D which he held with rare tonal beauty through at least three bowings witout a single audible break, which literally made one gasp.

He played next an unaccompanied Suite in C Major by J. S. Bach which is wholly and most assuredly a violinist's piece. Someone asked if Bach really thought that a violinist could be found who could master it, and the fact is that they had to go to France to find one. Mr. Francescatti, also a Frenchman, though being French could hardly be said to be a factor in his complete understanding of the work, was incredibly the master. It is a technical tour de force, a composition lacking in appeal to the layman, but teeming with challenge to the virtuoso. About Brahms' D Minor Violin Sonata, much the same remarks may be made as for the A Major. It is not so lyric or so sprightly, is a more mature work, but it gave, in the second, Adagio movement, a marvelous smoothly flowing musical line in the lower registers which Mr. Francescatti played with consummate richness and tonal purity, a singing resonance which the most ravishing contralto voices in the world would envy.

This was the last of the Wednesday Chamber concerts and an auspicious close to a most successful season.—F.M.R.

Thomas Doane Perry, Jr., who succeeds the able and justly popular George E. Judd, retiring manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has served several summers as executive secretary of the Berkshire Music Center in "Tanglewood." Mr. Judd retires following nearly 40 years of distinguished service to the Boston Symphony, now a $1,500,000 annual operation, including running Symphony Hall in Boston, business of the orchestra's tours and the annual Berkshire Festival in "Tanglewood."

WATERBURY, CONN.
AMERICAN
AUG 12 1954

Francescatti Thrills Crowd At Tanglewood

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 12—One of the finest concerts in more than 15 years of listening at Tanglewood, home of the Berkshire Music Festival, was given [illegible]cescatti, violinist, with Arthur Balsam, pianist, before 2,000 listeners last evening.

The two artists presented Brahms' "Violin Sonata in A Major" and his "Violin Sonata in D Minor" with such beauty that the audience in the little concert hall with some 700 music-lovers scattered about the grounds was speechless and sat as though glued to their seats.

The most spectacular and memorable part of the evening, though, was the performance of Francescatti in the Bach "Suite in C major" (unaccompanied). This was one of the most brilliant performances ever heard at Tanglewood. Mr. Francescatti's tone was flawless, his fingering was something to watch from the fifth row where we sat. Brought back again and again at its completion by an audience which included Fritz Kreisler this was an incredible performance. At times we had to look at the artist to make sure we were not listening to an orchestra's whole string section. His tone was rich and deep and drawn as thin as gossamer.

The "bravos" at the conclusion of the performance were well deserved by both artists. It was minutes before any one in the audience so much as stirred.

Mr. Francescatti's performance last evening followed close upon a thrilling performance he gave on Sunday when he played with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the shed before an audience of 12,700.

Friday night the annual Tanglewood-on-Parade concert will be presented for the benefit of the musician's pension fund. Saturday and Sunday the last concerts of this season will be presented.

SM.

---

observance of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of the French composer. Mr. Munch will lead the orchestra in the "Requiem" which had its Tanglewood premiere two summers ago. It will have the assistance of David Poleri, tenor soloist; a chorus of 200 voices of students of the choral and opera departments of the Berkshire Music Center (the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood) trained by Hugh Ross and James Ali-we've had a [illegible] country for a lot of years. And really great playing in the classic tradition is indeed a treat.

KINGSTON, N.Y
PRESS

AUG 12 1954

Boston Symphony Tanglewood Concert Is Highly Praised

By W. W. FREDENBURGH

Sunday afternoon 12,700 people attended the concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at their Berkshire Summer Festival at Tanglewood near Lenox, Mass.

The program consisted of Gluck's "Alceste" Overture, Beethoven's Violin Concerto, with Zino Francescatti, soloist, and the Brahms Second Symphony. The Gluck Overture, lyrical in character received a beautiful interpretation. Mr Francescatti played the Concerto in elegant style, with clean cut technical virtuosity and a thorough understanding of the score, which brought a notable interpretation of the work, Mr Munch and his orchestra provided an admirable accompaniment.

These qualities all added up to a wonderful performance of the great Brahms Symphony and brought to a close an afternoon of rich and rewarding music.

Each year these concerts attract music lovers from a wide area, including many from Kingston who would feel their summer enjoyment to be incomplete without several trips to this beautiful spot with its unique setting in the Berkshire Hills.

Sunday afternoon the enormous shed circular and open in form, seating 6000 persons, was packed. Outside another 6,000 and more were seated in groups, in camp chairs which they had brought, or lying on blankets spread on the beautiful lawns, thus informally enjoying the music as it floated out from the

To this reporter, one of the amazing aspects of such a huge shed crowd was the intense interest in the music as shown by the absolute silence that prevailed throughout the program and the lack of any disturbing element at any time.

To those in this area who have not visited Tanglewood, it might be reassuring to know the arrangements for parking a large number of cars is excellent and the ten miles from Great Barrington to Tanglewood are well marked by road signs at every turn.

This year's festival closes this week. Friday night is Tanglewood on Parade with special features. Saturday evening Boston Symphony Concert, with Nicole Henriot, pianist; and Sunday afternoon will be devoted to a performance of Berlioz "Requiem" with Festival Chorus and soloists, in memory of Serge Koussevitsky, founder of Tanglewood.

TOLEDO BLADE: FRIDAY, AUGUST 13, 1954

Berkshire Festival Concerts Head Into Their Final Week

Exquisite Balance Marks Morel's Work; Ravel Suite Done With Subtle Realization

TANGLEWOOD, Mass., Aug. 13—Unfamiliar matters of the chamber roster began the final week of Berkshire Festival concerts here last night in the theater-concert hall. Brutish weather and dank temperatures tended to prune the attendance below its usual rampant dimensions.

Jean Morel conducted an ensemble of chamber proportions, drawn from the sainted ranks of Boston. It was a concert of knifeblade precision, glossy and lyric tone and exquisite balance, despite M. Morel's style of fluttering gentility.

He is a fussy conductor inclined to rant or to run wild in the manner of one's maiden aunt caught in a family crisis.

Never Better

Yet I think in all the years of concert going I never have heard Ravel's little suite, "Ma Mere l'Oy" done with a kinder sense of rhythmic outline, a less obvious attention to childlike caprice, a more subtle realization of this music as adult comment and an exercise in tonal restraint.

A tidbit of Rossini that we seldom hear, the overture to Rossini's "The Silken Ladder" and the Mozart Symphony No. 33 in B-flat (Koechel 319) preceded the Ravel score. The Mozart Symphony, also, is unfamiliar to the average habitue of concert purlieus. It received, I thought a treatment almost too feathery and insouciant, yet one could not cavil at perfection of detail and discipline.

Richard Strauss and chamber music would seem a contradiction in terms, unless you knew that "Ariadne" is a lineal if not a respectable descendent of "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme." Hugo Von Hofmannstahl had suggested that Strauss compose some incidental music to Poliere's play. This "incidental music" cultivating the style of Lully and even distilled from Lully's own score attending the premiere before Louis XIV Oct. 14, 1670, was not altogether a success when the play was produced in Stuttgart in 1912, the genius of Max Reinhardt to the contrary.

Revised Year Later

"Both men," remarks John M. Burk in a program note, "realized that they had tried to combine more than one evening would hold" and in 1913 revised their score, "making the opera and the play producible as separate entities."

Pierre Monteux conducted the first performance of this suite by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1921. The performance last night was one of care, symetry and infinite clarity and patience. I thought at times that M. Morel overstated his responsibilities, but he did not fail to preserve the dry humor and wit inherent in this music.—J.S.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-JOURNAL
AUG 12 1954

TALKING IT OVER

Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Farr Are Among Husband-Wife Teams in 'Tanglewood'

By EMMA VAN WORMER

THE 200 OR MORE musicians and music lovers in attendance at the convention dinner of the New York State Federation of Music Clubs here last spring recall the recital given by Lowell and Naomi Farr, the latter a national auditions winner of Federated Music Clubs. Mr. and Mrs. Farr are among husband-wife teams studying in Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood this summer.

LOWELL FARR, a pianist is former student in the Paris Conservatoire, is working on opera coaching in the Berkshires. His wife, Naomo, a professional concert artist, a soprano, is working on advanced opera dramatics. In the convention dinner in Hotel Syracuse Farr played his wife's accompaniments in a varied program of operatic arias and songs.

Also in "Tanglewood," while Julius Ilku is studying double bass, Mrs. Ilku is working under the Boston Symphony's harpist Bernard Zinghera. Heskel Brisman, composition pupil of Ernst Toch and his wife, Rina Basin Brisman, an opera associate, are registered in the Berkshire Music Center summer session, to close Sunday. Monica and Keith MacGaffrey, brother and sister of Lenox, Mass., are students respectively of the French horn and the Study group. Rodney and Robert Pierece, twins, whose home is in Wichita, Kan., returned to "Tanglewood" for a season's study in the orchestra department.

CHORAL CONDUCTORS who are alumni of Tanglewood include James Aliferis (University of Minnesota); Jacob Avshalomoff (Columbia University,) and Lorna Cooke de Varon (New England Conservatory, Boston). Composers who have profited by summers in this center in the foothills of the Berkshires in Western Massachusetts: Norman dello Joio, Alan Hovaness, Ulysses Kay, Peter Mennin, Leonard Rosenman, Louis Mennini, Ned Rorem, Jurriaan Andraessen. Instrumentalists also receiving training there include Jacob Krachmalnick, concert master of the Philadelphia Orchestra; pianists Seymour Lipkin, Leonard Pennario, Constance Keene, Julius Katchen; cellist Aldo Parisot and violinist Norman Carol.

• • •

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
AUG 12 1954

anglewood Parade Friday 6 - 12 P.M.

Tanglewood will be On Parade morrow. The annual benefit r the Berkshire Music Center, hich is expected to attract 10,-00 persons, is in aid of the oston Symphony Orchestra's [illegible] music, now in s 12th season in conjunction ith the 17th Berkshire Festival, hich comes to its end Sunday. estivities, rain or shine, from :00 p. m. to midnight, include emonstrations by every departnent of the school, a lawn super, a gala evening concert, folowed by drawing of door prizes, altzing on the lawn and a jam ession.

The evening's gala concert, ommencing at 8:15 p. m. in the Music Shed, will feature, on the irst half, Thomas Schippers, erkshire Music Center student n 1948, conducting the Boston ymphony Orchestra in Bizet's ymphony in C and in the final cene of Richard Strauss' Salome," with Brenda Lewis, tar of Broadway and formerly ith the Metropolitan and New ork City opera companies, as oprano soloist. The second part f the program will feature the oston Pops Orchestra, performng for the first time in the Tanglewood Music Shed, with Arthur Fiedler, celebrating his 5th year as its conductor, leading a typical Pops program.

Thomas Doane Perry, Jr., who succeeds the able and justly popular George E. Judd, retiring manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has served several summers as executive secretary of the Berkshire Music Center in "Tanglewood." Mr. Judd retires following nearly 40 years of distinguished service to the Boston Symphony, now a $1,500,000 annual operation, including running Symphony Hall in Boston, business of the orchestra's tours and the annual Berkshire Festival in "Tanglewood."

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
AUG 12 1954

Large Audience Hears Violinist At Tanglewood

We broke a precedent last night at Tanglewood and went backstage after the concert and obtained the signature of that remarkable musician and violinist, Zino Francescatti. Assisted sympathetically at the Baldwin piano by Artur Balsam, Mr. Francescatti completely amazed and enthralled the 2,000 persons fortunate enough to obtain tickets to this concert which had been sold out days in advance. Acquiring this autograph was in the nature of a small attempt to pay homage to one of the relatively few truly great violinists, who is acknowledged by other top violinists to have arrived. Mr. Francescatti donated his services last night to the Berkshire Music Center and was also the soloist last Sunday afternoon with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

From the beautiful opening theme of Brahms' Sonata in A Major to the last exacting phrase of Brahms' D Minor Sonata, Mr. Francescatti gave a stirring performance. In the first Sonata, the wonderful sweeping phrases and inspired intertwining of violin and piano provided a marvelous wealth of composition for the combined talents of the two artists. Mr. Balsam has been playing with Mr. Francescatti for almost twenty years and is admirably equipped to be the tasteful frame for the exquisite work of art which is the playing of Mr. Francescatti. This may be a mixed metaphor but it is only to point up the fact that though an excellent acocmpanist, Mr. Balsam does not have the spirit or the same living, breathing oneness with his instrument as does the violinist, is to self effacing, to stand out as more than a "frame."

In the A Major Sonata we first heard the wonderful sustaining power of Mr. Francescatti's bow. In the second movement there is a high D which he held with rare tonal beauty through at least three bowings witout a single audible break, which literally made one gasp.

He played next an unaccompanied Suite in C Major by J. S. Bach which is wholly and most assuredly a violinist's piece. Someone asked if Bach really thought that a violinist could be found who could master it, and the fact is that they had to go to France to find one. Mr. Francescatti, also a Frenchman, though being French could hardly be said to be a factor in his complete understanding of the work, was incredibly the master. It is a technical tour de force, a composition lacking in appeal to the layman, but teeming with challenge to the virtuoso. About Brahms' D Minor Violin Sonata, much the same remarks may be made as for the A Major. It is not so lyric or so sprightly, is a more mature work, but it gave, in the second, Adagio movement, a marvelous smoothly flowing musical line in the lower registers which Mr. Francescatti played with consummate richness and tonal purity, a singing resonance which the most ravishing contralto voices in the world would envy.

This was the last of the Wednesday Chamber concerts and an auspicious close to a most successful season.—F.M.R.

WATERBURY, CONN.
AMERICAN
AUG 12 1954

Francescatti Thrills Crowd At Tanglewood

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 12—One of the finest concerts in more than 15 years of listening at Tanglewood, home of the Berkshire Music Festival, was given [illegible]cescatti, violinist, with Arthur Balsam, pianist, before 2,000 listeners last evening.

The two artists presented Brahms' "Violin Sonata in A Major" and his "Violin Sonata in D Minor" with such beauty that the audience in the little concert hall with some 700 music-lovers scattered about the grounds was speechless and sat as though glued to their seats.

The most spectacular and memorable part of the evening, though, was the performance of Francescatti in the Bach "Suite in C major" (unaccompanied). This was one of the most brilliant performances ever heard at Tanglewood. Mr. Francescatti's tone was flawless, his fingering was something to watch from the fifth row where we sat. Brought back again and again at its completion by an audience which included Fritz Kreisler this was an incredible performance. At times we had to look at the artist to make sure we were not listening to an orchestra's whole string section. His tone was rich and deep and drawn as thin as gossamer.

The "braves" at the conclusion of the performance were well deserved by both artists. It was minutes before any one in the audience so much as stirred.

Mr. Francescatti's performance last evening followed close upon a thrilling performance he gave on Sunday when he played with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the shed before an audience of 12,700.

Friday night the annual Tanglewood-on-Parade concert will be presented for the benefit of the musician's pension fund. Saturday and Sunday the last concerts of this season will be presented.

SM.

---

observance of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of the French composer. Mr. Munch will lead the orchestra in the "Requiem" which had its Tanglewood premiere two summers ago. It will have the assistance of David Poleri, tenor soloist; a chorus of 260 voices of students of the choral and opera departments of the Berkshire Music Center (the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood) trained by Hugh Ross and James Ali-country for a lot of years. And really great playing in the classic tradition is indeed a treat.

---

Kingston, [illegible]
Press
AUG 12 1954

Boston Symphony Tanglewood Concert Is Highly Praised

By W. W. FREDENBURGH

Sunday afternoon 12,700 people attended the concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at their Berkshire Summer Festival at Tanglewood near Lenox, Mass.

The program consisted of Gluck's "Alceste" Overture, Beethoven's Violin Concerto, with Zino Francescatti, soloist, and the Brahms Second Symphony. The Gluck Overture, lyrical in character received a beautiful interpretation. Mr Francescatti played the Concerto in elegant style, with clean cut technical virtuosity and a thorough understanding of the score, which brought a notable interpretation of the work, Mr Munch and his orchestra provided an admirable accompaniment.

These qualities all added up to a wonderful performance of the great Brahms Symphony and brought to a close an afternoon of rich and rewarding music.

Each year these concerts attract music lovers from a wide area, including many from Kingston who would feel their summer enjoyment to be incomplete without several trips to this beautiful spot with its unique setting in the Berkshire Hills.

Sunday afternoon the enormous shed circular and open in form, seating 6000 persons, was packed. Outside another 6,000 and more were seated in groups, in camp chairs which they had brought, or lying on blankets spread on the beautiful lawns, thus informally enjoying the music as it floated out from the crowd was the intense interest in the music as shown by the absolute silence that prevailed throughout the program and the lack of any disturbing element at any time.

To this reporter, one of the amazing aspects of such a huge shed.

To those in this area who have not visited Tanglewood, it might be reassuring to know the arrangements for parking a large number of cars is excellent and the ten miles from Great Barrington to Tanglewood are well marked by road signs at every turn.

This year's festival closes this week. Friday night is Tanglewood on Parade with special features. Saturday evening Boston Symphony Concert, with Nicole Henriot, pianist; and Sunday afternoon will be devoted to a performance of Berlioz "Requiem" with Festival Chorus and soloists, in memory of Serge Koussevitsky, founder of Tanglewood.

TOLEDO BLADE: FRIDAY, AUGUST 13, 1954

Berkshire Festival Concerts Head Into Their Final Week

Exquisite Balance Marks Morel's Work; Ravel Suite Done With Subtle Realization

TANGLEWOOD, Mass., Aug. 13—Unfamiliar matters of the chamber roster began the final week of Berkshire Festival concerts here last night in the theater-concert hall. Brutish weather and dank temperatures tended to prune the attendance below its usual rampant dimensions.

Jean Morel conducted an ensemble of chamber proportions, drawn from the sainted ranks of Boston. It was a concert of knifeblade precision, glossy and lyric tone and exquisite balance, despite M. Morel's style of fluttering gentility.

He is a fussy conductor inclined to rant or to run wild in the manner of one's maiden aunt caught in a family crisis.

Never Better

Yet I think in all the years of concert going I never have heard Ravel's little suite, "Ma Mere l'Oy" done with a kinder sense of rhythmic outline, a less obvious attention to childlike caprice, a more subtle realization of this music as adult comment and an exercise in tonal restraint.

A tidbit of Rossini that we seldom hear, the overture to Rossini's "The Silken Ladder" and the Mozart Symphony No. 33 in B-flat (Koechel 319) preceded the Ravel score. The Mozart Symphony, also, is unfamiliar to the average habitue of concert purlieus. It received, I thought a treatment almost too feathery and insouciant, yet one could not cavil at perfection of detail and discipline.

Richard Strauss and chamber music would seem a contradiction in terms, unless you knew that "Ariadne" is a lineal if not a respectable descendent of "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme." Hugo Von Hofmannstahl had suggested that Strauss compose some incidental music to Poliere's play. This "incidental music" cultivating the style of Lully and even distilled from Lully's own score attending the premiere before Louis XIV Oct. 14, 1670, was not altogether a success when the play was produced in Stuttgart in 1912, the genius of Max Reinhardt to the contrary.

Revised Year Later

"Both men," remarks John M. Burk in a program note, "realized that they had tried to combine more than one evening would hold" and in 1913 revised their score, "making the opera and the play producible as separate entities."

Pierre Monteux conducted the first performance of this suite by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1921. The performance last night was one of care, symetry and infinite clarity and patience. I thought at times that M. Morel overstated his responsibilities, but he did not fail to preserve the dry humor and wit inherent in this music.—J.S.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 13 1954

Manos

WELCOME TO STARS of Tanglewood on Parade is extended by Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager-elect of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Brenda Lewis of Broadway stage and Metropolitan Opera will sing the final scene from the Strauss "Salome," and Thomas Shippers, Tanglewood student in 948, will conduct the BSO in a program of Bizet and Strauss. Program will begin at 8:15 tonight.

THE HARTFORD TIMES, FRIDAY, AUGUST 13, 1954

1,650 Hear Bach-Mozart Series Finale at Lenox

By EVANS CLINCHY

Tanglewood—The Boston Symphony here at Tanglewood precented last night a diverse if not totally inspired program of music under the direction of Jean Morel as the final installment on this season's Bach-Mozart series.

A rather small crowd of 1,650 showed up, due primarily, I suppose, to the almost bitter cold that descended upon the Berkshires and the threatening clouds. At any rate, there were few couples strewn around the grounds outside the Theater Concert Hall.

* * *

MR. MOREL'S PROGRAM, just to keep the Bach-Mozart name in order, contained a Mozart Symphony, No. 33, and also Rossini's inconsequential Overture to "La Scala di Seta," Ravel's Mother Goose Suite and Richard Strauss' music for Moliere's "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme."

Although he is not a conductor calculated to raise the soul's roof a great deal, Mr. Morel led the orchestra through its paces in a pleasant enough manner. None of the music exhibits any strong degree of passion, but much of it, particularly the Ravel and the Strauss, is loaded with scintillating orchestral effects.

* * *

IT WAS THIS sharp brilliance which the men of the orchestra gave him in full measure. Individually, Ralph Gomberg's oboe in the Mozart, Richard Burgin's violin in the Ravel, and Samuel Mayes' cello in the Strauss added no end to the overall virtuosity.

And in the irreverent Strauss piece, everyone happily let themselves go and had a field day. Lots of boom and bang here.

It was a fitting opening to the final weekend of the season which closes Sunday with the Berlioz Requiem.

This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
EVE. NEWS
AUG 13 1954

Symphony Supporters Aid Colleagues

Extra brass players needed for the final Berkshire Festival concert at Tanglewood Sunday found friends here today in the persons of Springfield symphony leaders and supporters who rushed them to Tanglewood in time for a 2.30 rehearsal. Shown greeting Chester A. Mason of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Union Station at noon are Lee Crabtree, left, director of music at Technical High School, and Charles J. Lukas, right, of the Labor Supports the Symphony Committee. Emergency transportation was provided for 12 extra brass players of the Boston orchestra. Berlioz' massive "Requiem," to be presented at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon, is scored for a greatly enlarged orchestra, four brass band units placed outside the orchestra and a large chorus with tenor soloist. Some 50 members of the Springfield Symphony Chorus will sing with the Berkshire Festival Chorus in the Berlioz work.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
AUG 12 1954

Final Chamber Music Concert Draws 2,000; Tanglewood Near End

An audience of 2,000 persons braved chilling temperatures last night to hear the first concert in the final series of programs of the 1954 Berkshire festival at Tanglewood.

Francescatti Plays

The featured artists in the theater concert hall last night were violinist Zino Francescatti and pianist Arthur Balsam. Together they played two Brahms' sonatas, while Mr. Francescatti was heard alone in Bach's suite in C.

This evening Jean Morel will lead the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra through a program which will include the overture "Scale di Seta" by Rossini, Mozart's Symphony in B flat, Ravel's "Mother Goose" suite and Strauss' "Der Burger als Edelman."

The program for tomorrow night, the annual Tanglewood on Parade event, was also disclosed today. The main concert, to be held in the big shed, will be highlighted by the appearance of the Boston Pops orchestra, under the direction of Arthur Fiedler.

"Parade Program"

John Phillip Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever" will open the Pops section of the concert, after the intermission. A suite from the lively operetta music of Jacques Offenbach, including his "Gaite Parisienne," will follow, along with Maurice Ravel's "Bolero."

Two Fiedler specialties will complete the announced part of the program, a symphonic arrangement of well-known television commercials, called "TV-iana," and the Merrick-Bennett "Look Sharp-Be Sharp" Gilette razor theme of radio and television. In addition, it is expected that there will be encores of the type that have always been a feature of Boston Pops concerts.

The Tanglewood on Parade concert will start at 8.15 o'clock with Thomas Schippers, former student at the Berkshire Music center, conducting the Boston Symphony in Bizet's Symphony in C, followed by the final scene of the Richard Strauss opera, "Salome," with Broadway and Metropolitan opera star Brenda Lewis as soloist.

School Demonstration

Simultaneous demonstrations of the student symphony orchestra, student chamber music and student opera departments will go on respectively in the music shed, chamber music hall and theater-concert hall during the evening-long program, which gets underway at 6 o'clock. A special attraction for holders of box seats and reserved seats for the evening shed concert will be a program of outdoor opera in the formal gardens at 4 o'clock.

The final two concerts in the series on Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon, featuring the full Boston Sympathy, will also be held in the music shed.

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
AUG 13 1954

Busy Tanglewood Program Today

Special to the Herald Tribune

LENOX, Mass. Aug. 12.—The complete program has been announced for tomorrow's "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit at Tanglewood for the Berkshire Music Center. The Tanglewood Study Group will open a two-hour demonstration at 2 p. m. in the Barn, one of the Center's buildings. Gounod's opera "The Physician in Spite of Himself," will have a performance at 4 p. m. in Tanglewood's formal gardens; this is open only to purchasers of reserved and box seats for the evening concert.

After a fanfare at 5:45, there will be three simultaneous demonstrations of the Center's activities. A student orchestra will play works of Bizet, Mozart, Lalo and Wagner in the Music Shed; scenes from "Tosca" and "La Boheme" and Hindemith's short opera, "There and Back" will be performed in the Theater-Concert Hall, and chamber music by Brahms, Kodaly, John Kennedy, Copland, Poulenc, Leonard Bernstein and Richard Maxfield will be heard in the Chamber Music Hall. A student chorus will sing music by Gesualdo, Hassler, Peter Re, Karl Kohn, Vaughan Williams, Dvorak, Benjamin Britten, Norman Dello Joio and Offenback during the supper interval beginning at 7 p. m.

In the evening concert beginning at 8:15, as already announced, the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Thomas Schippers will play Bizet's Symphony in C and the finale of Richard Strauss' "Salome," with Brenda Lewis as soloist, and Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra in a characteristic program. Drawings for door prizes, waltzing on the lawn and a jam session will follow.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN
AUG 13 1954

Berkshire Festival:

Morel Conducts

Program Lacks Lift

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 13. — To Jean Morel fell the honor of opening the final weekend of the Berkshire Festival last night.

Having given an excellent account of his conducting abilities at a concert of the Boston Symphony in the music shed three weeks ago, he was further put to the test leading the chamber orchestra in the theater-concert hall. The shift proved revealing.

In the more exacting task of his chamber-music program, Morel courted reservations.

It could be that limited rehearsal time and damp weather worked against him, but the fact remains that the finesse expected of his performances appeared only spasmodically. For all his fine musicianship and vitality, the music seldom took flight.

Varied Program

The program was more varied than any other in this series formerly known as the Bach-Mozart concerts.

Mozart existed only by courtesy in a list of works that began with Rossini's overture to "La Scala di Seta," included Mozart's Symphony K. 319, then turned to Ravel's "Mother Goose" suite, and ended with Strauss' suite from "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme."

That light touch which all this music needed was suggested but not fully realized. The silken suavity of Rossini, the refinement of Mozart, the perfection of Ravel, and the wit of Strauss bowed to a heaviness and robustness of treatment somewhat out of character and even to coarseness in the playing.

These matters did not rob the concert of enjoyment. The program was good, the conducting firm. What I missed was the delicious quality of the music in performance. Weather conditions cut attendance to 1,650 people.

TOLEDO, OHIO
BLADE

AUG 13 1954

Berkshire Festival Concerts Head Into Their Final Week

Exquisite Balance Marks Morel's Work; Ravel Suite Done With Subtle Realization

TANGLEWOOD, Mass., Aug. 13—Unfamiliar matters of the chamber roster began the final week of Berkshire Festival concerts here last night in the theater-concert hall. Brutish weather and dank temperatures tended to prune the attendance below its usual rampant dimensions.

Jean Morel conducted an ensemble of chamber proportions, drawn from the sainted ranks of Boston. It was a concert of knifeblade precision, glossy and lyric tone and exquisite balance, despite M. Morel's style of fluttering gentility.

He is a fussy conductor inclined to rant or to run wild in the manner of one's maiden aunt caught in a family crisis.

Never Better

Yet I think in all the years of concert going I never have heard Ravel's little suite, "Ma Mere l'Oy" done with a kinder sense of rhythmic outline, a less obvious attention to childlike caprice, a more subtle realization of this music as adult comment and an exercise in tonal restraint.

A tidbit of Rossini that we seldom hear, the overture to Rossini's "The Silken Ladder" and the Mozart Symphony No. 33 in B-flat (Koechel 319) preceded the Ravel score. The Mozart Symphony, also, is unfamiliar to the average habitue of concert purlieus. It received, I thought a treatment almost too feathery and insouciant, yet one could not cavil at perfection of detail and discipline.

Richard Strauss and chamber music would seem a contradiction in terms, unless you knew that "Ariadne" is a lineal if not a respectable descendent of "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme." Hugo Von Hofmannstahl had suggested that Strauss compose some incidental music to Poliere's play. This "incidental music" cultivating the style of Lully and even distilled from Lully's own score attending the premiere before Louis XIV Oct. 14, 1670, was not altogether a success when the play was produced in Stuttgart in 1912, the genius of Max Reinhardt to the contrary.

Revised Year Later

"Both men," remarks John M. Burk in a program note, "realized that they had tried to combine more than one evening would hold" and in 1913 revised their score, "making the opera and the play producible as separate entities."

Pierre Monteux conducted the first performance of this suite by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1921. The performance last night was one of care, symetry and infinite clarity and patience. I thought at times that M. Morel overstated his responsibilities, but he did not fail to preserve the dry humor and wit inherent in this music.—J.S .

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES

AUG 13 1954

BERKSHIRE SERIES ENDS A DAY EARLY

Friday Night Chamber Music Programs Conclude With Brilliant Work by Morel

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

CONDUCTOR: Jean Morel, who led last night's chamber music concert at the Berkshire Music Festival.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 12—The Friday night series of chamber orchestra concerts at Tanglewood ended tonight—that is, Thursday. This was no typographical error. Since "Tanglewood On Parade," the five-ring circus put on by the student body of the Berkshire Music Center, takes place tomorrow, the closing chamber orchestra event was moved up a day.

Jean Morel, who taught conducting at Tanglewood this summer, gave an exhibition of his own command of this art tonight. Conducting a Boston Symphony Orchestra ensemble, he gave meticulous, often brilliant, performances of works by Rossini, Mozart, Ravel and Strauss.

To consider the program backward, because that was the order of excellence in tonight's interpretations, Mr. Morel closed the concert with a jubilant reading of a suite from Strauss' "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme" music. This music is not played as often as the tone poems, but it has a wit and a flavor that belong to the mood of such works as "Rosenkavalier." Mr. Morel, who is evidently a man with a subtle sense of humor, gave a bouncing, luminous reading of this score, and the Boston players responded to his every wish to make the music go with a joyous freshness.

Had Force and Vitality

Still moving backward, let us consider Ravel's "Mother Goose" suite, which ended the first half. Here again was a score Mr. Morel felt in his bones. He had the orchestra project its delicate colors with precision; at the same time the music did not become attenuated in spirit. It had force and vitality.

Preceding Ravel was Mozart's Symphony No. 33 in B flat (K. 319). Mr. Morel and his musicians gave it a transparent reading, light in style and yet full of implicit feeling. One could have wished for just a shade more virility, but Mr. Morel could easily justify his approach.

The evening began with Rossini's "La Scala Di Seta" overture. All in all, a graceful, brightly textured occasion marred only by the rain earlier in the day that kept the lawnsitters away, but the moon was there to shine benignly on those brave enough to take a chance on Berkshire's capricious weather.

HUDSON, N. Y.
REGISTER

AUG 13 1954

FINAL WEEKEND OF BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL AT TANGLEWOOD

"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center (the summer school of music operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra) at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., begins at 6 p. m. tonight with simultaneous sessions of the student orchestra, opera department and chamber music students, followed by a concert of the choral department at 7 p. m. Former Tanglewood student Thomas Schippers conducts the first half of the gala concert in the Music Shed beginning at 8:15 p. m. Leading the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the first time, Mr. Schippers has programmed Bizet's Symphony in C and the final scene from Richard Strauss' Opera "Salome" with Brenda Lewis soloist. After intermission Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra play for the first time in Tanglewood's Music Shed.

For the Music Shed concert tomorrow evening at 8:30 Mr. Munch has chosen Brahms' "Tragic Overture," Walter Piston's Symphony No. 4, Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin" and the Saint-Saens Symphony No. 3, E. Power Biggs organ soloist.

Dedicated to the memory of the late Serge Koussevitzky, first director of the Berkshire Music Center and musical director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for 25 years, Mr. Munch will conduct the seldom-heard Berlioz "Requiem" at the final Festival concert at 2:30 p. m. in the Music Shed. Tenor soloist will be David Poleri; the chorus of 200 choral and opera students from the Berkshire Music Center, trained by Hugh Ross and James Aliferis, will be augmented by a chorus of 50 voices from the Springfield (Mass.) Symphony Orchestra and four brass bands

Tickets for the weekend programs may be reserved by telephoning the Tanglewood box office at Lenox, (Mass.) 600. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the lawns, are sold on the day of the performance.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION

AUG 14 1954

FINAL CONCERTS TONIGHT, SUNDAY AT TANGLEWOOD

12,000 Expected as Munch Directs; Springfield Chorus to Sing

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Music Director, conducting, gives the final pair of concerts of its enlarged 1954 Berkshire Festival, tonight at 8.30 p. m. and tomorrow afternoon, at 2.30 p. m. in the huge Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox. If attendance figures of last summer, when 25,000 persons attended the final brace of concerts, can be considered a guage and if fair weather prevails for the more than 12,000 persons which will hear the music on the spacious lawns outdoors, all records will be shattered in this 17th summer of symphonic music in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the 15th since the Boston Symphony Orchestra participated.

All Symphonic Program

Tonight's program is all symphonic, with Mr. Munch leading the 104-piece Boston Symphony in Brahms' "Tragic Overture," Walter Piston's Symphony No. 4, Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin" and the Saint-Saens Symphony No. 3 with E. Power Biggs as organ soloist.

The concluding concert, in memory of late Serge Koussevitzky, who died in 1951 after 25 years as Music Director of the Boston Symphony, will be the last of a number of programs devoted this summer to rarely-heard music of Hector Berlioz, given in their complete form in observance of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of the French composer. Mr. Munch will lead the orchestra in the "Requiem" which had its Tanglewood premiere two summers ago. It will have the assistance of David Poleri, tenor soloist; a chorus of 200 voices of students of the choral and opera departments of the Berkshire Music Center (the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood) trained by Hugh Ross and James Aliferis, augmented by a chorus of 50 voices of the chorus of the Springfield Symphony Orchestra; and four bras bands, totalling 36 players.

General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the Tanglewood lawns, are placed on sale on the day of the performance. Festival patrons are invited to a public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra today at 10 in the Music Shed, at the nominal charge of $1, for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

This week-end concludes also the activities of the Berkshire Music Center, which has presented some 40 concerts and demonstrations by students of its orchestra, chamber music, chorus, opera and amateur study group departments in this, its 12th six-week session. At Saturday's final concert by the student symphony orchestra in the Music Shed at 3 p. m., composer Aaron Copland, assistant director of the music school, will announce scholarships and prize awards. Sunday morning at 10 a. m., in the Chamber Music Hall, is the final program of chamber music by students of the school's Department I (orchestra). These two events are open to members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, who may attend through voluntary contributions to the school.

Tickets are available at the Tanglewood box office for the final Shed concerts, and reservations may be made by telephoning Lenox (Mass.) 600.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE

AUG 14 1954

Box Occupants at Tanglewood on Parade

Plouffe

State Sen. Silvio O. Conte chats with Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, widow of the late conductor, while Mrs. Conte looks on during intermission at last night's Tanglewood on Parade concert. The annual event is for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, school founded by Dr. Koussevitzky.

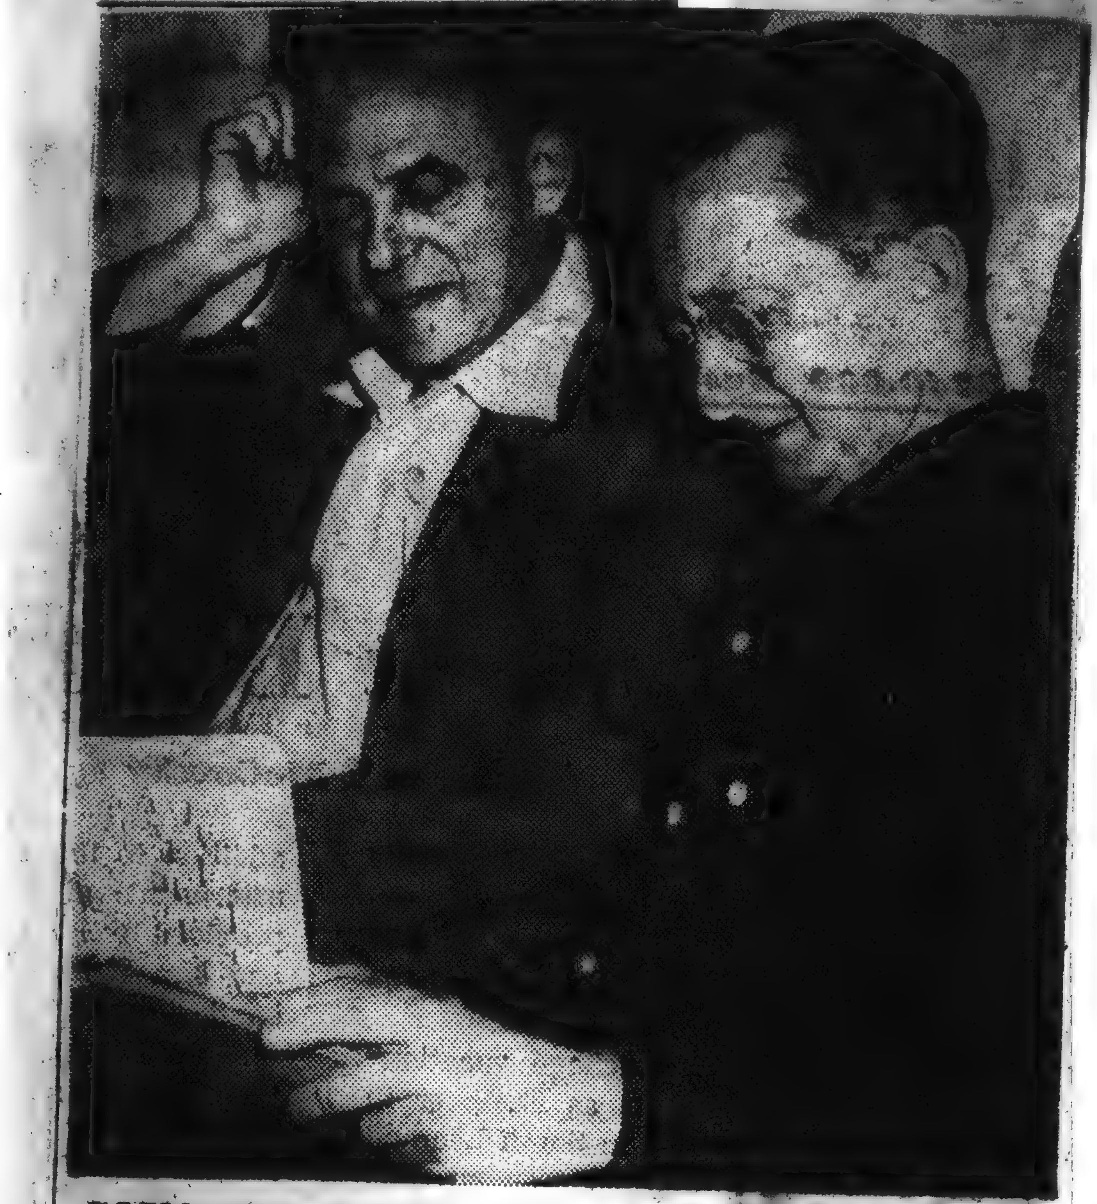
BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD

AUG 13 1954

Berkshire Benefit Takes Place Tonight

"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit ofr the Berkshire Music Center (the summer school of musi operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra) at Tanglewood, Lenox, begins at 6 tonight with simultaneous sessions of the student orchestra, opera department and chamber music students, followed by a concert of the choral department at 7 p.m.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 14 1954



CONCERTMASTERS of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Boston Pops Orchestra, Richard Burgin, left, and Alfred Krips, look over a score to be performed at the Berkshire Music Festival.

Weather Holds Up in County For Weekend Festival Finale

All Attendance Records Shattered Going Into Final Series—All Symphonic Concert Tonight; Koussevitzky Memorial Tomorrow

TANGLEWOOD—The 1954 Berkshire Festival, with two concerts to go, has broken all existing records for attendance this year, following a change in the weather which promises to be fair again tonight and tomorrow afternoon for the concluding concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Charles Munch conducting.

May Top 150,000

Before going into the final week of concerts, attendance at the Festival events reached about 110,000, compared to the 117,000 record set last year for the whole series of programs. With 10,050 attending the Tanglewood on Parade benefit last night and another 5,000 at the two "small concerts" in the theater concert hall Wednesday and Thursday evenings, the attendance is already over 125,000 for this season and may top 150,000 before the Festival season winds up tomorrow afternoon.

Tonight's Program

Tonight's program is all symphonic, with Mr. Munch leading the 104-piece Boston Symphony in Brahms' "Tragic Overture," Walter Piston's Symphony No. 4, Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin" and the Saint-Saens Symphony No. 3 with E. Power Biggs as organ soloist.

The concluding concert, in memory of late Serge Koussevitzky, who died in 1951 after 25 years as music director of the Boston Symphony, will be the last of a number of programs devoted this summer to rarely-heard music of Hector Berlioz, given in their complete form, in observance of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of the French composer.

'Requiem' Tomorrow

Mr. Munch will lead the orchestra in the "Requiem" which had its Tanglewood premiere two summers ago. It will have the assistance of David Poleri, tenor soloist; a chorus of 200 voices of students of the choral and opera departments of the Berkshire Music Center, trained by Hugh Ross and James Aliferis, augmented by a chorus of 50 voices of the chorus of the Springfield Symphony Orchestra; and four brass bands, totaling 36 players.

Music Center Closing

This weekend concludes also the activities of the Berkshire Music Center, which has presented some 40 concerts and demonstrations by students of its orchestra, chamber music, chorus, opera and amateur study group departments in this, its 12th six-week session. At this afternoon's final concert by the student symphony orchestra in the Music Shed at 3, composer Aaron Copland, assistant director of the music school, announced scholarships and prize awards. Tomorrow morning at 10 in the Chamber Music Hall, the final program of chamber music by students of the school's Department I (Orchestra) will be given. The event is open to members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, who may attend through voluntary contributions to the school.

ALBERT SCHWEITZER, the noted humanitarian, left, whose brother is married to the sister of Charles Munch, right, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be honored on his 80th birthday, Jan. 14, 1955, when Mr. Munch and the BSO will commemorate the first performance of a new orchestral work by Lukas Foss at Symphony Hall in Boston. Here, Mr. Schweitzer congratulates Mr. Munch following a concert the BSO director conducted with the French National Radio Orchestra in Strasbourg last summer.

THE FORWARD
NEW YORK,N.Y
8/15/54

א קאנצערט אין די בוירקשאיר בערג. — טויזענטער מענשען אין דעם „שעד" און
אויפ'ן גראז הערען זיך צו צום קאנצערט פון דער באסטאן סימפאנישען ארקעסטער
אין טענגעלוואוד, לענאקס, מאסס. די טענגעלוואוד קאנצערטען ווערען אנגעפירט
פון טשארלז מאנש און האלטען־אן אין משך פון די צוויי זומער־מאנאטען, יולי און
אויגוסט. עס געפינט זיך דארט אויך א מוזיק און געזאנג שולע, אין וועלכער עס זיינען
פארטראטען פיל אידישע לערער
און סטודענטען.

A CONCERT IN THE BERKSHIRES—Thousands of people in the shed and on the lawn listen to a concert of the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The Tanglewood festivals conducted by Charles Munch take place during the months of July and August. Tanglewood also has a music and voice school conducted by prominent Jewish composers and directors with a great number of Jewish students from Israel and other parts of the world. (

BOSTON, MASS.
TRAVELER
AUG 13 1954

CHARLES MUNCH, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducts the final pair of concerts this weekend in the Music Shed, Tanglewood.

Weekend Concludes Tanglewood Concerts

Arthur Fiedler conducts the Boston Pops Orchestra for the first time in Tanglewood's Music Shed, Lenox, Mass., tonight at 8:15 at "Tanglewood On Parade," annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the summer music school operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

In addition to the typical Pops program which Mr. Fiedler will conduct as the second half of the Music Shed concert, tonight's program includes Thomas Schippers conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Bizet's Symphony in C and soprano Brenda Lewis singing the final scene from Richard Strauss' "Salome."

Charles Munch, Music Director, will conduct the Boston symphoy Orchestra Saturday at 8:30 P. M. and Sunday at 2:30 P. M. in the final pair of concerts.

Saturday's program is all symphonic including works by Brahms, Piston, Ravel and Saint Saens. Sunday's concluding concert will feature "Requiem" by Berlioz, in memory of Serge Koussevitsky, who died in 1951 after 25 years as Music Director of the Boston Symphony.

HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
JG 13 1954

1,650 Hear Bach-Mozart Series Finale at Lenox

By EVANS CLINCHY

Tanglewood—The Boston Symphony here at ~~Tanglewood~~ presented last night a diverse if not totally inspired program of music under the direction of Jean Morel as the final installment on this season's Bach-Mozart series.

A rather small crowd of 1,650 showed up, due primarily, I suppose, to the almost bitter cold that descended upon the Berkshires and the threatening clouds. At any rate, there were few couples strewn around the grounds outside the Theater Concert Hall.

* * *

MR. MOREL'S PROGRAM, just to keep the Bach-Mozart name in order, contained a Mozart Symphony, No. 33, and also Rossini's inconsequential Overture to "La Scala di Seta," Ravel's Mother Goose Suite and Richard Strauss' music for Moliere's "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme."

Although he is not a conductor calculated to raise the soul's roof a great deal, Mr. Morel led the orchestra through its paces in a pleasant enough manner. None of the music exhibits any strong degree of passion, but much of it, particularly the Ravel and the Strauss, is loaded with scintillating orchestral effects.

* * *

IT WAS THIS sharp brilliance which the men of the orchestra gave him in full measure. Individually, Ralph Gomberg's oboe in the Mozart, Richard Burgin's violin in the Ravel, and Samuel Mayes' cello in the Strauss added no end to the overall virtuosity.

And in the irreverent Strauss piece, everyone happily let themselves go and had a field day. Lots of boom and bang here.

It was a fitting opening to the final weekend of the season which closes Sunday with the Berlioz Requiem.

[55]

ACUSE HERALD-JOURNAL, Saturday, August 14, 1954

BERKSHIRE CENTER

Note Scholarships, CashAwardsGiven In 'Tanglewood'

LENOX—During this closing weekend of the Berkshire Music Festival in "Tanglewood," summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, tuition scholarships and cash prizes were presented during intermission of the Student Symphony Orchestra's final concert today. Composer Aaron Copland, assistant director of Berkshire Music Center awards, made the awards.

THROUGH EFFORTS of neighboring residents of Berkshire County (Massachusetts), a committee headed by Mrs. William M. Crane of Richmond, raised $5,000 towards a $15,000 goal to establish an annual scholarship for student conductors here as a memorial to Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, former music director of the Boston Symphony and first director of the Berkshire Music Center. The scholarship was awarded jointly today to student conductors Samuel Krachmalnick of New York City, formerly of St. Louis, and to Paul Vermel of New York, formerly of France.

OTHER AWARDS: the Jascha Heifetz prize, given by the eminent violinist to Tiberius Klausner, 22, a native of Hungary, now a student in Juilliard, New York; the Gregor Piatigorsky prize, the noted cellist, guest chamber music teacher here, was divided between cellists Camilla Heller, a Michigan U. Music School student, and Evelyn Steinbock of Brooklyn, who studies in Julliard; the Serge Koussevitzky Composition prize, given by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation for a work written here this summer, went to Robert Barney Childs, of Reno, Nev., a composition pupil of Aaron Copland. A special prize went to Michael Sahl, a New Yorker attending Amherst College and student of Lukas Foss. These prize-winning works, written for harp and for string quartet, will have first performances tomorrow morning at the final student chamber music concert.

Among other winners: Raymond Wilding-White, former Berkshire Music Center scholar, now on the staff of Boston's educational radio Station WGBH, who was given the Wechsler Commission; Catherine Dufford, 22, oboe student in Eastman School of Music and member of the Rochester Philharmonic, the Eisemann scholarship; Phyllis Mursphy, soprano, of Bement, Ill., the Carlotta M. Dreyfus scholarship. Some nine pupils attended the 1954 Music Center's 12th season this summer on scholarships.

"Tanglewood on Parade," a gala, was observed yesterday with simultaneous performances of the several student and professional groups here in the halls and in the Music Shed. Tonight and tomorrow afternoon in the Shed the final concerts of the season take place. Tomorrow's concert, conducted by Charles Munch, will have Tenor David Poleri as soloist. The Festival Chorus of 200 which has rehearsed under direction of Hugh Ross, and singers and instrumentalists from the Springfield, Mass., Symphony, also will participate.

E. V. W.

TOLEDO BLADE: SATURDAY, AUGUST 14, 1954

Traditional Dances Of India, Scotland Staged At Festival

Boston Symphony, 'Pops' Orchestras Play For 'Tanglewood On Parade'

BY JULIAN SEAMAN
Blade Music Editor

TANGLEWOOD, Mass., Aug. 14—Heather and lotus mingled amiably last night in the rustic Theater of Jacobs Pillow where Ted Shawn presides over the annual dance festival.

The Celtic ballet of Scotland and Ram Gopal of India shared the rhapsodic comment of a rather small audience. Traditional dances from each of these far-flung lands evoked ecstatic applause, after some detailed explanations from Mr. Shawn and Mr. Gopal, both of whom tried to bring a measure of symbolism to what might have been considered tedious by the cultural novice.

Sense Of The Exotic

I would hand the palm to Mr. Gopal whose faultless English and lutelike voice, preceding his illustrations of postures and hand figures, touched the audience with a sense of the exotic.

Despite the pioneer efforts of Margaret Morris, artistic director of the lads and lassies, I thought a monotony of technique, rhythm and basic conception robbed the proceedings of allure. Besides, the dancing was not always crisp and professional.

The drone of the pipes and the harsh and repetitious tunes from this unyielding land wear upon the ear.

Plaque For Miss Smith

The annual "Tanglewood on Parade" at the Berkshire Music Center drew a large audience to the shed, where Thomas Schippers conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston "Pops" Orchestra played under Arthur Fiedler. Brenda Lewis, soprano of the Metropolitan, was a soloist. A plaque was presented to Gertrude Robinson Smith, who helped to found the Berkshire festival two years before the Boston Symphony Orchestra took over from the late Henry Hadley and the Philharmonic, by Dr. Lewis Perry, honorary chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. Seven scholarships and cash awards were handed to students, and a "jam session" on the porch of the main house ended the proceedings.

CATSKILL, N. Y.
MAIL
AUG 14 1954

MUSIC

Boston Symphony Orchestra

Thursday evening's performance by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Joan Morel, consisted of music that was relaxing, untaxing and unpretentious. It wasn't a program of the type that requires deep concentration; it was designed for one purpose: pleasant listening. The music was uncomplicated and straightforward for it would undoubtedly easily pass for a listening session at a high school appreciation class.

The program opened with aspritely Rossini overture, "Scala di Seta" and was followed by the Symphony 33 in B Flat, K. 319, by Mozart. Both of these compositions were in the lighter vein, with what appeared to be quite a bit of musical mirth injected in each. The orchestra played with conviction and within the stylistic bounds of each composition, but not with the precision needed to make a completely satisfying musical experience.

Rich sonority and delicate shading were evident in Maurice Ravel's simple "Mother Goose" Suite. Mr. Morel ejected vibrant color from the beautiful Boston string section, which painted, in beautiful hues, the pastels of Ravel's score.

The program closed with a performance of Strauss" "Der Burger als Edelmann." This composition which makes no pretense at being profound music, was given a careful, energetic reading by Mr. Morel and the orchestra. It brought to a close what would have been a dreary, dull, rainy evening in the Berkshire hills, had it not been for this program of musical gems.

NEWTOWN, CONN
BEE
8/13/54

Music

The Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., presents chamber music Wednesdays at 8:30 p.m., chamber orchestra Fridays at 8:30 p.m. and the Boston Symphony Orchestra Saturdays at 8:30 p.m. and Sundays at 2:30 p.m. Tickets on sale at the box office, telephone Lenox 600.

Firday, August 13, Tanglewood on Parade: 5:45 p.m., fanfare and welcome; 6 o'clock, demonstration sessions of orchestra, opera and chamber music departments of the Berkshire Music Center; 7 o'clock, picnic supper; 8:15 concert in the Music Shed with the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Thomas Schippers, playing Bizet's Symphony in C major and the final scene of Strauss' "Salome" with Brenda Lewis, singing the soprano role of Salome, and the Boston Pops Orchestra with Arthur Feidler conducting a typical pops concert.

Saturday, August 14: Brahms, "Tragic Overture"; Piston, Symphony No. 4; Ravel, "Le Tombeau de Couperin"; Saint-Saens, Symphony No. 3, with E. Power Biggs as organ soloist. Charles Munch, conductor.

Sunday, August 15: Berlioz, "Requiem", in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, with David Poleri, tenor, with 200 voices, including the Festival Chorus augmented by the chorus of the Springfield, Mass., Symphony Orchestra, and four brass bands.

---

vel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin" and the Saint-Saens Symphony No. 3 with E. Power Biggs as organ soloist.

The concluding concert, in memory of late Serge Koussevitzky, who died in 1951 after 25 years as music director of the Boston Symphony, will be the last of a number of programs devoted this summer to rarely-heard music of Hector Berlioz, given in their complete form in observance of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of the French composer. Mr. Munch will lead the orchestra in the "Requiem" which had its Tanglewood premiere two summers ago. It will have the assistance of David Poleri, tenor soloist; a chorus of 200 voices of students of the choral and opera departments of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, trained by Hugh Ross and James Aliferis, augmented by a chorus of 50 voices of the chorus of the Springfield (Mass.) Symphony Orchestra; and four brass bands, totalling 36 players.

Music Making and Vacation, Too

By AL ARONOWITZ
Staff Correspondent.

LENOX, Mass.—Ten New Jersey girls are getting their vacations for a song.

They're among the New Jersey students — also including four men — attending the Berkshire Music Center of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and they're taking their six weeks in the heart of Massachusetts's mountain playland on full scholarships.

"Sure, it's fun," was the comment of one of the group from Jersey, violinist Roberta Hartman of Kensington Ave., Trenton, who is spending her second summer at Tanglewood, the wooded vacation headquarters for the orchestra and the site of its Berkshire Music Festival.

"Our schedule includes study, practice, classes and more practice from sunup to sundown, but it's more than fun," she said.

Roberta and sister Jerseyans are among a student body of 400 which is chosen annually from some 1,500 worldwide applicants on the basis of musical talents.

Four brother Jerseyans, trumpetist Donald Benedetti of Chestnut Ave., Trenton; singer Robert Simpson of Nassau St., Princeton; choralist Henry Fusner of Magie Ave., Roselle Park, and conductor Henry Janiec of Columbia Ave., Passaic, are also among those who survived the auditions necessary for enrollment at the music center.

In addition, seven other young women from the Garden State are spending from two to six weeks as part of the Tanglewood Study Group. Its members vary from housewives to stenographers. These students need only a love for music to join up at the school.

What Miss Hartman described as "fun" consists of getting up about 7 a.m., having breakfast in time for three hours of orchestra practice, cramming in lunch before a difficult sight-reading class, another hour or so of chamber music, and then combined and solo practice almost until bedtime, which comes early in the cool mountainscape of the Berkshires.

"It's doing what we want, and that's fun," explained Jill Bengelsdorf of Clinton Pl., Newark, an accomplished harpist.

Jill has one handicap at Tanglewood. Other orchestral students can take their instruments for practice to dormitories at the Lenox Preparatory School, but the harp is too heavy for a young woman to carry.

Working under such musical greats as Charles Munch, conductor; composer Aaron Copeland; choir master Hugh Ross, and other periodic visitors to Tanglewood is its own reward, but Jersey lasses do get their "time outs" from keeping time.

"Perhaps the nicest part of the day is talking over the day's work with the other students on the lawn," said Joan Hagen of Angelique St., Weehawken, lyric soprano who contends that she got her voice only after she had her tonsils out.

In the Swim

There's also afternoon swimming and boating in the scenic Stockbridge Bowl, at the foot of the sloping Tanglewood estate. And on free nights there are summer stock companies, art movies and the nearby dance festival at Jacob's Pillow in Lee.

Mixed with the heavy enrollment of young men of talent and the others who are attracted to Tanglewood by the outdoor week-end concerts, a summer at the music center is turning out to be quite a sociable thing for the Jersey misses.

The names of the others on scholarship are Alice Adams of E. Decatur Ave., Pleasantville; Brenda Bench of Linden Ave., Alayne Buechner of Ridgeland Ter. and Alison Dessau of Hillside Ave., all three of Englewood; Juliana Cuyler of Edgehill street, Princeton; Barbara Ann Schelberg of Roosevelt Ave., Ridgefield Park, and Esther Schatzow of Fourth Ave., Belmar.

Those in the study group are Annamae Vogelzang of Hamilton Ave., Passaic; Shirley Bode of Brookline Ave., Nutley; Marion Day of Lorraine Ave., Upper Montclair; Mrs. Josephine Isaacs of Woodruff Pl., Hillside; Marjorie Sill of Leonia Ave., Leonia; Irma Stahlberg of Lupton Ave., Woodbury, and Marian Mehrman of Washington Ave., Linden.

Newark Evening News – Aug 15/54 [56]

Berlioz Requiem Ends Lenox Fete

8/16/54

Special to The Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass.—A festival performance of the Berlioz Requiem Sunday afternoon closed what the management considered an eminently successful Tanglewood season. There were more concerts and, despite persistently unfavorable weather, a greater attendance.

It was a Berlioz festival which brought out practically everything by that composer which is yet worth hearing and also a few pages which endure simply because his name attaches to them. This unevenness can scarcely be said to extend to the Requiem Mass which has greatness as well as bigness; an abiding nobility as well as loud sounding of much brass.

* * *

I DON'T KNOW what it takes to make a festival, but certainly it is only a very singular and glamorous occasion that can bring together the resources necessary to produce this prodigious work.

Besides the considerably reinforced main orchestra there were four additional brass choirs — two on either side of the stage and on specially built platforms. Behind the instrumental forces were the white-clad singers of the festival chorus which had been trained by Hugh Ross and James Aliferis.

This final concert was given in tribute to Serge Koussevitzky, the man who created Tanglewood and the Berkshire Music Center. The attendance was just under 9,000, considerably less than for the Saturday night concert but the weather was distinctly unfavorable.

* * *

DR. MUNCH, who is a fervent partisan of Berlioz, has a very special regard for the Requiem. He interprets it with a fervor which is devotional; with intensity as well as breadth. In spite of the technical problem of marshalling so large and widespread a corps of players and singers he never lost his visionary perspective.

He has done this Requiem before at Tanglewood. It was Sunday, as previously, an epitome of the festival spirit, a rare artistic experience.

Saturday evening brought not only Walter Piston's Fourth Symphony but also the composer in person who was called to the stage and received a prolonged ovation which must have warmed his heart.

This symphony wears well. It was once thought music for the intellect, abstruse and mechanical but familiarity discloses an essential friendliness and vitality.

* * *

IT WAS FOLLOWED by the melodious C minor Symphony of Saint-Saens in which E. Power Biggs demonstrated his gift for integrating organ sonorities with those of the orchestra.

Traffic congestion so delayed your reviewer that he missed the first two Brahms and Ravel numbers.—C. E. L.

BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE

AUG 1 4 1954

Raymond Wilding-White Awarded Tanglewood Wechsler Commission

RAYMOND WELDING-WHITE

Raymond Wilding-White, staff member of the Boston educational radio station WGBH, today will be given the Wechsler Commission at Tanglewod in Lenox. This commission of $300 is for a work to be specified by the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, where Wilding-White studied composition with Jacques Ibert in 1950 and with Luigi Dallapiccola in 1951.

The award is one of several to be presented today by Aaron Copland, assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center. The prizes are given annually to outstanding students at the Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with its Berkshire Festival, which concludes its 17th and most successful Summer tomorrow afternoon. Winners are chosen from among the 375 enrolled this year from 35 states and 12 foreign countries.

Through the efforts of Tanglewood's neighboring residents of Berkshire County, a committee headed by Mrs. William M. Crane of Richmond has raised $5000 towards a $15,000 total to establish an annual scholarship for student conductors at Tanglewood, as a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, former Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and first director of the Berkshire Music Center.

The Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship, with a present value of $250, will be awarded today jointly to student conducters Samuel Krachmalnick of New York, a second year student, and Paul Vermel of New York, a student in 1949.

Other awards made today are the Jascha Heifetz Award, $250 in cash, given by the eminent violinist to Tiberius Klausner, 22-year-old student of the Juilliard School of Music, New York; the Gregor Piatigorsky Prize of $200, gift of the cellist, this year divided between Camilla Heller, Appleton, Wis., and Evalyn Steinbock, Brooklyn; the Serge Koussevitzky Composition Prize, $250, given by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation for work written a Tanglewood this season, to Robert Barney Childs, a composition pupil of Copland and a resident of Reno. A special prize was also given to Michael Sahl, a New Yorker attending Amherst College, student of Lukas Foss.

The Selly A. Eisemann Scholarship, $150, was awarded to Catherine Dufford, 22, oboe student from Evansville, Ind. The Carlotta M. Dreyfus Scholarship, of similar value, went to Phyllis Murphy, of Bement, Ill.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION

AUG 1 4 1954

Musical Variety, Picnics, Warm Night Delight 10,050 at Tanglewood-On-Parade

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 13—Everything and everyone combined to make this Tanglewood-on-Parade a huge success. In the first place the weather was perfect, the best weather of the entire festival, in fact. Then there were all the resources of the Berkshire Music Center on view and lastly a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Thomas Schippers, with soprano Brenda Lewis giving an impassioned performance of the final scene from Strauss' "Salome." Finally, the audience was as enthusiastic as it was large. It is estimated at 10,050 people, the largest attendance in five years.

Hear Opera, Symphony

We came early in the afternoon and managed to hear a variety of representations. The opera department put on the comic opera "The Physician in Spite of Himself" by Gounod. This was given in the garden. Later, other members of the department were heard. The excerpts included the love duet ly. Richard Maxfield's "Six little from act one of "Tosca" by Puccini; the Addie from the third act of "La Boheme" and a repeat performance of Hindemith's "Hin und Zuruck" or "There and Back." We heard some fine voices, remembering particularly the Tosca of Emma Goldman and the Cavaradossi of Marvin Worden.

A bit later we heard Beatrice Krebs sing the lamentation from Leonard Bernstein's "Jeremiah" symphony. She sang it magnificently. Richard Maxfield's "Six little pieces for pianoforte, four hands" was played by the composer and Tessi Ichiyanagi, a student from Tokyo, Japan. For good measure, we heard a fine performance of the Brahms "Quintet for strings and piano in F Minor."

It was worth coming to "Tanglewood-on-Parade" just to watch the people enjoying themselves. There were literally thousands of picnic parties going on, ranging from a solitary man eating his fare while seated on a tree stump, to an elaborate party equipped with table, cloth, cutlery and quantities of food.

Shed Is Jammed

The evening concert found the shed jammed. Thomas Schippers is a young conductor with great vitality and considerable audience appeal. He opened the program with a fine performance of the "Symphony in C" by Bizet. There was a real solidity to the opening movement. A nice comprehension of the oriental flavor of the adagie and a spirited and brilliant performance of the finale. Not a symphony of heavy weight, it is a symphony that makes for good listening.

Brenda Lewis gave an impassioned account of Salome as she sang the final scene of this opera. It is a cruel task for a singer and surely one of the most difficult of operatic roles. Miss Lewis has a huge voice, some might liken it to a silver-toned trumpet. Mr. Schippers did not spare her at all, but the combined effect was thrilling.

The concert then turned to lighter entertainment and on stage came Arthur Fiedler, now observing his 25th year as conductor of the Boston "Pops" orchestra, to lead this orchestra through a typical program. He started off with "Stars and Stripes Forever." Then came a suite from Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne" and the "Bolero" by Ravel. An arrangement by Haymann called "Tviana" and the theme song "Look sharp — be sharp" completed the program. It was all received with boundless enthusiasm.

During intermission, Dr. Lewis Perry, honorary chairman of the friends of the Berkshire Center, in one of those graceful speeches for which he is noted, presented Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, organizer of the first 1934 festival, with an illuminated leather scroll.

Miss Smith responded as follows: "It gives me a very deep sense of gratification to accept this scroll from the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on behalf of the members of the board of trustees of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival and all of those citizens of this country, who so generously gave their time, effort and enthusiasm to make possible this great musical event.

"It was 20 years ago this summer that Dr. Henry Hadley conceived this idea of "music under the moon" and the machinery was set in motion.

"Eighteen years ago, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with its outstanding conductor, Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, joined forces with the Boston Symphonic Festival. From that time on, musical history has been written, giving the Berkshire Symphonic Festival national and international importance."

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION

AUG 1 6 1954

Festival Closes Honoring Memory of Koussevitsky

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 15—The 17th Berkshire Music Festival closed this afternoon with the traditional commemorative concert in memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, founder of the Berkshire Music Center and long-time conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Festival.

Today's concert attracted 8950 persons despite steady rain.

Spirit Still Felt

Tthe spirit of Dr. Koussevitzky is still felt here and it is eminently fitting that each year a great work be given in his memory. Today, Charles Munch, director of the Festival, chose to perform one of the greatest of all works, the "Requiem" by Hector Berlioz.

Had this performance been given under the aegis of Hollywood, it would have been characterized as "colossal," "stupendous". It was all of that, but it was something more. There was a wonderfully devout and reverential atmosphere, no matter how brilliant were the forces involved. There are few conductors who so thoroughly understand the Berlioz idiom as Charles Munch. The performance today was infinitely finer than given here two seasons ago.

The Festival chorus was augmented by members of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe choral group and it also included 50 members of the Springfield Symphony Chorus who had previously sung the mass under the direction of Dr. Alexander Leslie. It was a splendid chorus, capable of fine sonorities and equally effective lyric singing. We remember particularly the lovely singing of the male chorus in the "Quid Sum Miser" and the grace and delicacy of the unaccompanied prayer, in six parts, of the "Quarens Me." The "Tuba Mirum" and "Rex Tremendae" were magnificent, awe-inspiring in their intensity.

High Standard

The orchestral portions of the work were of the same high standard. The four brass choirs and full orchestra rose to great heights while meeting every demand of contrast. There was a breadth and sweep to Mr. Munch's reading and a sincere feeling for the character of the work. David Poleri sang the only solo with the artistry which we have come to expect from him.

So this session of the Berkshire Music Festival has come to a magnificent close. There is always an interest in attendance figures. This is the first six-week season and it has included 24 concerts divided into six chamber music concerts, six chamber-orchestra concerts, six Saturday night and six Sunday afternoon concerts by the full orchestra. Total attendance at these 24 concerts has been 135,775. Total attendance for 1953 was 117,950. Total money received amounted to $330,083. There will be a full report of attendance and receipts at a later date, but it is apparent that the six-week season was worthwhile and probably will be continued.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES

AUG 1 4 1954

SOPRANO: Brenda Lewis, soloist at last night's "Tanglewood On Parade" program at Berkshire Music Festival.

TANGLEWOOD FETE DEFIES 13TH 'JINX'

10,000 Attend 'Parade' of Berkshire Music Center —Variety Is Keynote

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 13—Friday the thirteenth was auspicious for "Tanglewood On Parade." The sun shone in the afternoon, and the full moon and the stars brightened the night. As a result, more than 10,000 persons had the liveliest and best attended demonstration in years of Tanglewood's many-faceted activities.

More than $23,000 was realized today for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center's scholarship fund.

There was music echoing through the halls and across the rolling lawns of this gracious estate from mid-afternoon until almost midnight, beginning with an early demonstration of the Berkshire Music Center's study group and ending with a jam session presided over by Joe Bushkin, jazz pianist, who composed a jump tune for the occasion called "Tanglewood hangover."

Plenty of refreshments were around, but if one can have a hangover from an excess of music, "Tanglewood On Parade" would be the show to do it. Fortunately, there was so much variety that one could move from opera to symphony, from chamber music to choral music, from the violence and passion of "Salome" to the wonderful stride of "Stars and Stripes Forever."

Not only was the Berkshire Music Center on display, but so was the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and, for the first time at Tanglewood, the Boston "Pop" group under Arthur Fiedler, who is celebrating his twenty-fifth anniversary at the head of this organization.

In addition, there was a brief ceremony commemorating the founding of the Berkshire Festival twenty years ago and a tribute to the men and women who helped to make it possible. Lewis Perry of the Boston Symphony trustees presented a plaque to Gertrude Robinson Smith, who was the founding president of the festival.

The festivities got an early impetus from a performance of Gounod's setting of Moliere's "Medecin Malgre Lui," which was presented in the formal gardens in mid-afternoon. Morton Siegel, who made the English adaptation, also staged the little piece.

Then, after a fanfare, Ralph Berkowitz, Dean of the center, invited the audience to make itself at home and to watch the various departments of the center at work. In the shed the student orchestra led by student conductors—Henry Janiec, Paul Vermel (a Frenchman whose parents came from abroad to hear him conduct), and Samuel Krachmalnick — led pieces by Bizet, Mozart, Lalo and Wagner. William De Pasquale, violinist, was the soloist in one movement of the "Symphonie Espagnole."

In the Theatre-Concert Hall the opera department presented excerpts from Puccini's "Tosca" and "Bohème" and Hindemith's one-acter, "Hin und Zurueck." In the Chamber Music Hall there was a program of songs and chamber music. John Kennedy and Richard Maxfield of this year's composition department were represented by new works, and among the performers were Catherine Akos, Mr. Kennedy, Stanley Dombrowski, Tan Crone, Beatrice Krebs, Mr. Maxfield, Tossi Ichiyanagi, Tiberius Klausner, Endel Kalam, Evalyn Steinbeck and Gilbert Kalish.

After a picnic supper on the lawn, the Boston Symphony took over. Thomas Schippers, an old Tanglewood hand though a very young man, was the guest conductor with the orchestra. He led a crisp performance of Bizet's youthful Symphony in C and a turbulent reading of the final scene from Strauss' "Salome." Brenda Lewis, who is an incandescent artist and who sang with passionate intensity, was the Salome. She brought her to life without sets or staging.

Mr. Fiedler and the Boston "Pops"—to let you in on a secret, the Boston Symphony with very few changes—took over and had the audience in a tizzy. Mr. Fiedler is a showman. He knows his milieu.

He makes things like "Stars and Stripes Forever," Offenbach or "Bolero" go like controlled lightning. No wonder he is a popular figure on the American scene. The audience roared its delight.

Then there were drawings for door prizes, waltzing on the lawn, and Joe Bushkin with his jazz. If anyone was looking for music after that, they could turn to disk jockeys, poor benighted devils.

PORTLAND, ME.
PRESS-HERALD

AUG 1 6 1954

Berkshire Festival Sets New Record

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 15 (AP)—Tanglewood officials today reported 135,775 persons attended the six-week Berkshire Music Festival, 16,000 more than last year's record turnout.

Today's final concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra attracted 8,950 persons despite steady rain.

Conductor Charles Muench dedicated the concert as a memorial to his predecessor, the late Serge Koussevitzky, longtime Boston Symphony conductor, who founded the Berkshire Music Center, the school connected with Tanglewood.

A feature of the program was Berlioz's Requiem with a chorus of 204 voices.

Tomorrow marks the conclusion of the festival. The afternoon concert will be devoted to a performance of the "Grande Messe Des Morts (Requiem)" By Hector Berlioz. This performance will be in memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, founder of the festival and the Berkshire Music Center.

ERIE, PA.
DISPATCH ✓

AUG 1 5 1954

Soprano Discovered

Saramae Endich, young soprano who was a member of the N. Y. Herald Tribune's European edition staff for seven years, was recently "discovered" when singing solos in choral and opera productions at Tanglewood. She's appearing as soloist with the Cleveland Pops Orchestra, and has a long recital tour set for the coming season.

FALL RIVER, MASS.
HERALD NEWS

AUG 1 6 1954

Festival Draws 135,775

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — Fully 135,775 persons attended the six week Berkshire Music Festival 16,000 more than last year's record turnout, Tanglewood officials announced.

The final concert yesterday by the Boston Symphony Orchestra attracted 8,950 despite steady rain.

[57]

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES

AUG 1 5 1954

IZES AWARDED AT FETE IN LENOX

ron Copland Officiates as udents of 6-Week Course Get Tuitions and Money

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 14—This prize day for the Berkshire sic Center. Although there no credits, degrees or examtions at the end of the sixek course at Tanglewood, a mber of awards are available outstanding students. These re presented this afternoon by ron Copland during the interssion of a concert by the stunt orchestra.

The newly established Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship for onductors, financed by contributions from the people of the erkshire area, was presented ointly to Samuel Krachmalnick of New York and Paul Vermel, young Frenchman now living in New York. The present value of he award is $250, but as the scholarship reaches its $15,000 oal, the stipend will increase.

Tiberius Klausner, 22-year-old violinist born in Hungary, received the $250 Jascha Heifetz award. Camilla Heller of Appleton, Wis., and Evalyn Steinbeck of Brooklyn, N. Y., shared the $200 Gregor Piatigorsky Prize for a 'cellist.

The Serge Koussevitzky Composition Prize of $250, presented by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, went to Robert Barney Childs of Reno, Nev. Mr. Childs was represented on this afternoon's program by the second movement of his First symphony. A special Koussevitzky Composition Prize was given to Michael Sahl of New York.

1953 Winner Returns

The Wechsler Commission of $300, awarded by Samuel Wechsler, a former Tanglewood student, was presented to Raymond Wilding-White, now of Boston. Last year's Wechsler Commission winner, Juan Oreggo-Salas of Santiago, Chile, returned this year with the score he composed. This piece, a sextet for clarinet, piano and string quartet, will be performed at tomorrow morning's final student chamber music concert.

Other prize winners this summer were:

Catherine Dufford, oboist, of Evansville, Ind.,—The Selly A. Eisemann Scholarship of $150.

Phyllis Murphy of Bement, Ill., soprano—The Carlotta M. Dreyfus Scholarship of $150.

Allyn Ferguson of San Jose, Calif., pianist and composer, and Bruce Klingbell of Bay City, Mich., 'cellist—Tuition scholarships from the Anne M. Gannett fund of the National Federation of Music Clubs.

Lois Lenstrohm of Reading, Pa., amateur study group—The Harden Scholarship awarded through the Wyomissing (Pa.) Institute.

Katherine Towns of Buechel, Ky., choral student—The Louisville (Ky.) Philharmonic chorus scholarship.

Myrna Bressick of Miami, Fla., opera department—Miami Opera Guild scholarship.

Robert Simpson of Princeton, N. J., opera department — the Music Study club of Newark and Oranges scholarship.

Mary L. Dodge, University City, Mo., violist—women's association of the St. Louis Symphony Society competition.

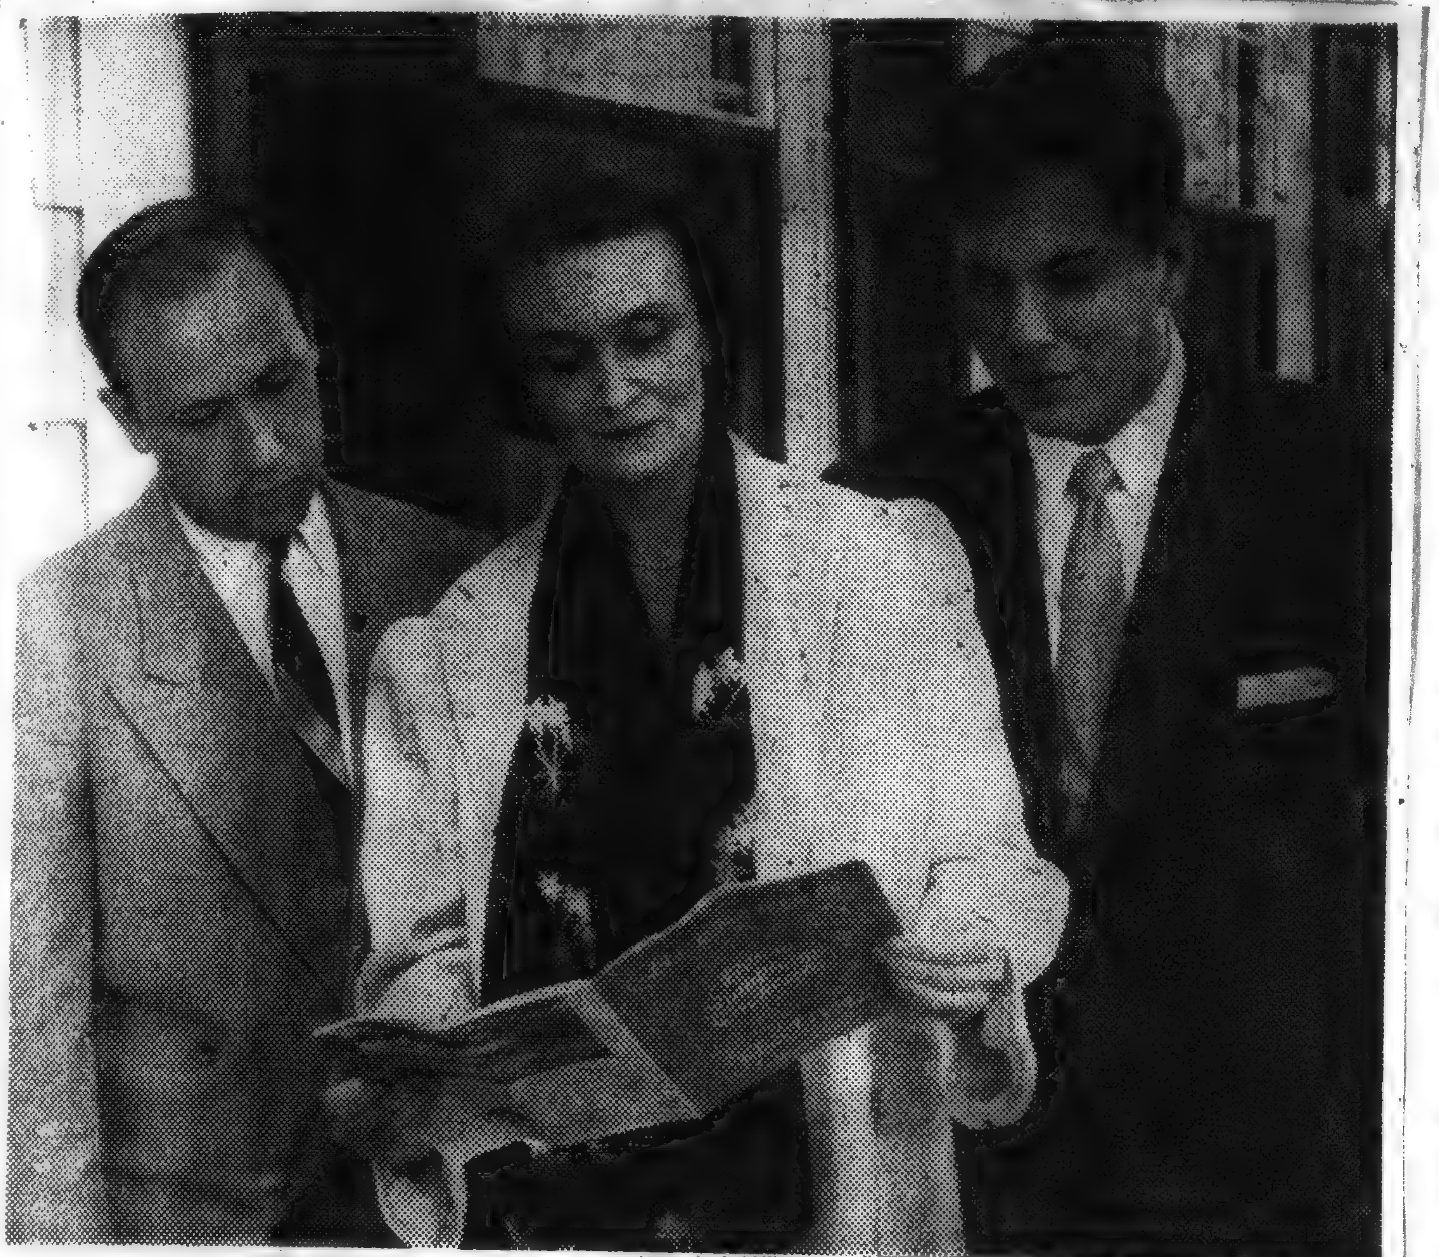
William Keith Rogers of Charlottetown, P. E. I., composer—Canadian Government overseas scholarship.

Stefan Grove of Capetown, South Africa, and Mr. Childs—Margaret Lee Crofts scholarships for tuition.

John Kennedy of Huntington, L. I., composer; Yecheskel Rasiel of Tel Aviv, Israel, violist, and Mr. Klausner, violinist—Koussevizky Music Foundation tuition grants.

It was announced today that the Tanglewood revolving scholarship fund had benefited to the extent of $7,850 from the Wednesday night chamber music series, thanks not only to the attendance but also to the contribution of services by Zino Francescatti, Claudio Arrau, William Kroll, Ruth Posselt and Joseph De Pasquale.

There was one amusing footnote to last night's "Tanglewood On Parade" festivities that became known today. The winners of the main door prizes were Marion Schotten of Ludlow, who received a Victor phonograph, and Roberta Goldberg of Malden, who won a General Electric refrigerator. Afterward, when they were posing for photographs, they discovered that Miss Schotten had a phonograph and no refrigerator and Miss Goldberg a refrigerator but no phonograph. They swapped prizes on the spot.



SCHOLARSHIP WINNERS: Samuel Krachmalnick, right, and Paul Vermel, both of New York, joint victors in the Koussevitzky Memorial scholarship competition, with Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky at the Berkshire Music Center. The young conductors, who led the student orchestra in Tanglewood concerts this season, were chosen by Aaron Copland yesterday.

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN

AUG 1 4 1954

'Tanglewood on Parade':

Exciting Concert

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 14.—Almost 10 hours of continuous musical activity sums up "Tanglewood on Parade," which took place here yesterday from 2 p.m. to midnight.

The occasion attracted 10,050 people, all of whom gathered for the big concert in the music shed where Thomas Schippers and Arthur Fiedler made their local debuts with the Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestra, respectively.

Youth Meets Youth

The "gala" concert offered plenty of excitement. There was the brilliant talent of young Schippers to appreciate in performances of Bizet's Symphony in C and the final scene from Strauss' "Salome."

There was Brenda Lewis to sing the Salome with smoldering passion. There was the high-spirited conducting of Fiedler to super-charge the Pops Orchestra in a series of rousing performances.

Youths on Parade

Everybody could hardly help having a good time.

Youth met youth, as the 23-year-old conductor played the 19-year-old composer's symphony. The performance of one was as extraordinary as that of the other in point of mastery.

The responsiveness of the musicians to Schippers indicated deep respect for his exceptional attainments both in knowledge of scores and in qualities of leadership.

It paid off in playing the Strauss score with all the luxury of sound and virtuosity in execution for which the B. S. O. is famous.

Miss Lewis enjoyed a personal triumph in her luxurious voicing of the Salome music and in the conviction of her interpretation. This was something to have heard.

That Fiedler and the Pops Orchestra also triumphed in their own way almost goes without saying if one knows of their success together over the last quarter century.

Fiedler's strict beat assured crisp, bright performances of Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever," Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne" suite, Ravel's "Bolero," Hayman's "Tyiana," which caused great amusement, and Merrick-Bennett's "Look Sharp—Be Sharp" and the inevitable encores.

The audience was delighted.

Youthful talent galore found its chief outlet in the simultaneous demonstrations by the orchestra, opera, chamber music, composition, and choral departments, all preceding the main concert.

Other events included a performance of Gounod's "The Physician in Spite of Himself," and a jam session led by Jose Bushkin.

The Berkshire Music Center benefited by a gate of $23,981. During the concert Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith received an illuminated leather scroll in recognition of her efforts and vision in promoting the founding of the Berkshire symphonic festival 20 years ago.

WATERBURY, CONN.
AMERICAN
AUG 1 6 1954

Tanglewood Season Breaks All Records.

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 16 — The Berkshire Festival, which concluded ~~here at~~ Tanglewood Sunday afternoon with the performance of Berlioz' "Requiem" in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, piled up new records for attendance in all branches of its varied activities.

More than 140,000 persons, an increase of 33,000 over the record of last year, attended the 12 concerts in the Music Shed which this year were spread over a six-week period. Tanglewood - on - Parade on Friday night set an all - time record for that activity with 10,050. Six public rehearsals on Saturday mornings for the benefit of the musician's pension fund drew 12,511. The 30 student demonstrations during the summer season drew 33,000 and the Bach-Mozart concerts in the Music Hall drew additional throngs to bring the grand total for all activities close to 235,000.

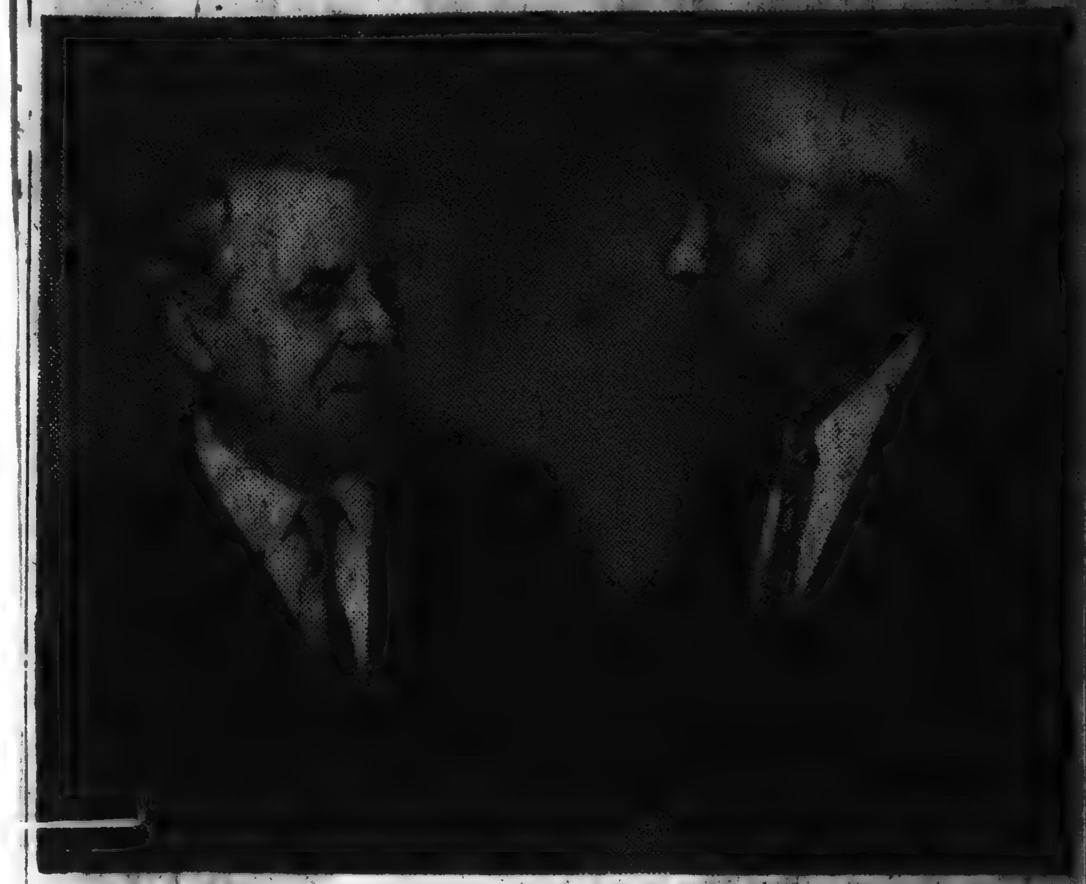
Saturday evening's concert, which brought out 10,400, presented an interesting program of Brahms' "Tragic Overture", Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin" and Piston's "Symphony No. 4". Under Charles Munch the orchestra gave a spirited performance and Walter Piston, the composer, was called to the platform to receive the plaudits of the enthusiastic audience. But it was the after-intermission performance of Saint-Saens "Symphony No. 3" which thrilled the audience. Mr. Munch did a splendid bit of conducting here and had his orchestra play so that the music seemed to be singing itself. E. Power Biggs appeared at the organ. When the concert was over Mr. Munch was called back again and again. His conducting in this part of the program and the Boston's playing of it made everyone realize that this was another of those specials to which the audiences have been treated in this summer of fine concerts.

The rain and mist yesterday shrank the audience to a mere 9,000 but it did not dampen the enthusiasm of those who heard the memorial concert with David Poleri as tenor soloist and the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and James Aliferis.

As the last notes faded away and the last car left the grounds of Tanglewood, saying "farewell" for another year to programs and performers who had brought so much pleasure to more than a quarter of a million music-lovers from all this country and many others as well, plans for next year's performances of The Berkshire Music Festival here on the tree-shaded lawns of this beautiful estate were under way. The Berkshire Festival is an enduring part of America's cultural life and all who love it must join in saying with the Latin poet, "Ave atque vale" — "Hail and Farewell!"

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
AUG 1 5 1954

Munch Bids Judd Goodby



Charles Munch, on left, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, says goodby to George Judd who is retiring after 40 years of service with the orchestra — 18 years of which were as manager. It was through Mr. Judd that Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, organizer of the first Berkshire Music Festival in 1934, opened negotiations to bring the Boston Symphony Orchestra to Tanglewood in 1936. The 1954 Festival closes with this afternoon's concert. Mr. Judd retires officially On Sept. 1.

10,400 AT FESTIVAL; FINALE IS TODAY

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 14 — We left the music shed tonight with the feeling that we had heard one of the finest concerts of the current Berkshire Music Festival which concludes tomorrow afternoon.

It was a dramatic performance, both as to content and performance. Seldom, this season, has Charles Munch summoned the glory of the Boston Symphony Orchestra so effectively. An estimated 10,400 persons were on hand to enjoy it with us.

The "Tragic Overture" by Brahms opened the program. This is a work most agreeable to Mr. Munch and a stunning performance was the result. The almost hysterical rebellion and contrasting reluctant resignation were set forth with admirable clarity. Brahms said of his pair of overtures, the "Tragic" and the "Academic"; "One laughs, the other cries," One sensed more of a rebellion than tears tonight.

We are told that Ravel was always interested in the styles of other writers, wondering, perhaps what he could do with the same materials. He took it upon himself to undertake a piano suite in the style of a fellow countryman, Francois Couperin. This was in 1914, but it was not until 1917 that this fragile reminder of the past was completed.

It was later orchestrated. In this work, Ravel has incarnated the very spirit of the classicism of the 18th Century, but he has done more, he has painted it from his limitless palette of colors, vitalized it and made it gleam like a jewel. The Boston players are past masters in the art of evoking all the beauties of a Ravel score and the performance was a gem.

Charles Munch paid his respects to a fine American composer, Walter Piston, tonight by providing a splendid performance of his "Symphony No. 4." Mr. Piston was on hand to acknowledge the enthusiastic applause of the audience and also the orchestra members. The University of Minnesota, founded in 1851, celebrated its centennial by commissioning this symphony. It was first performed at the close of the celebration by the Minneapolis Symphony.

Mr. Piston is a skilled craftsman. He has a direct manner of expression and a deal of melodic consciousness. The second movement of the work, titled "Ballando" is rife with spirited melodies and dance-like rhythms. His handling of the brasses is wonderfully effective. The third movement, titled "Contemplative" has broad strands of melody, dark hued for the most part and texture is rich and velvety. The final movement is a bit frenetic. It surges onward with all the resources of the orchestra employed. This work will bear many hearings and it will hold the interest.

Saint-Saens composed his "Symphony in C Minor, No. 3" for the London Philharmonic Society and it was first played by that orchestra in 1886. Thus there was quite a gap between the style and lush melodies of the French composer and his contemporary counterpart, Walter Piston. Saint-Saens puts forth his message in a much more simple manner. His music soars to the heights because of its inherent beauty, but he was not afraid to employ the full resources of the orchestra and the final movement with the added full organ and piano (four hands) produces a tremendous impact Tonight E. Power Biggs was at the organ. Mr. Munch read the score with

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN

AUG 15 1954

Thomas D. Perry, Jr., Will Be Manager of Orchestra

Succeeds George E. Judd, Retiring From Boston Symphony Post After Nearly 40 Years; Gail Rector To Be Assistant Manager

Lenox, Aug. 14—The symphony organization which is probably better known to America than any other—the Boston Symphony Orchestra—comes under new management Sept. 1, when Thomas Doane Perry, Jr., succeeds George E. Judd who is retiring after nearly 40 years of distinguished service to the orchestra.

Explaining the job of an orchestra manager as "everything on this side of the footlights," Mr. Perry is responsible for the $1,500,000 annual operation of the orchestra which includes running Symphony Hall in Boston, business details in connection with the orchestra's tours and the annual Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

Started as Teacher

Mr. Perry, whose great-grandfather founded Doane College in Crete, Neb., and whose father is a retired engineer now living in Moorestown, N. J., was born Dec. 31, 1913, and raised in Grand Rapids, Michigan. Intending to follow the example of his mother who was a teacher of Latin, Mr. Perry enrolled at Yale in 1931 where he majored in English. He taught two years at the Sanford Academy near Wilmington, Del., before joining the staff of a Philadelphia advertising agency.

Taking charge or radio and concert activities at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia in September, 1939, "Tod" Perry met Randall Thompson, eminent American composer who then headed the conservatory. At Mr. Thompson's suggestion Perry spent the summer of 1940 as a choral student at the new Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music established that year by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, at Tanglewood.

After a two-year term as manager of two concert halls for the New England Mutual Insurance Co. in Boston and a year's service (1944) in the Medical Corps of the U. S. Navy, Mr. Perry—again on the recommendation of Randall Thompson—began his association with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, as assistant to Mr. Judd, in 1946.

Lives at Hingham

Married to the former Helen Roberts, of Philadelphia, Tod Perry makes his home in Hingham, and is the father of two boys, aged 9 and 11. "Our boys are tremendous baseball fans," says Mr. Perry, "Little Leaguers. So far this season I have had to repair six broken windows."

Music is the foremost Perry hobby but Mr. Perry confesses to "a mild form of insanity; taking old autos apart." One of his most prized possessions was an old Rolls Royce whose engine, he claims, "was the most beautiful piece of machinery I've ever tinkered with; of course it gave us only 10 miles to the gallon, but it was superbly engineered." Disposing of the Rolls Royce in 1952 when he and Mrs. Perry went with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on its European tour, Mr. Perry now restricts his mechanical talents to maintaining a handsome 1936 convertible Ford sedan.

In addition to his duties until now as assistant manager of the Boston Symphony, he has served several summers as the executive secretary of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, now completing its 12th season. His Tanglewood duties will be taken over largely by his successor, Gail Rector, the new assistant manager of the orchestra.

In Army Four Years

Mr. Rector, born Feb. 14, 1918, in North Platte, Nebraska, received his bachelor of music degree from the University of Michigan before serving four years in the U. S. Army which included a tour of duty in New Caledonia. Since 1946 Mr. Rector, who has been on the Berkshire Music Center staff for three seasons, has been assistant to the president of the University Musical Society (the sponsoring organization of the Choral Union and May Festival) at the University of Michigan. With Mrs. Rector and their three children—Richard, 7; Ellen, 4; and Patricia, 3—Mr. Rector assumes his Symphony Hall duties on Sept. 1.

The forthcoming season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra—its 74th—finds Mr. Perry working with the most extensive symphonic operation in the country with some 200 concerts including the regular Boston season, the tours, Pops, Esplanade and Tanglewood seasons plus the national NBC Saturday night broadcasts. But he believes his job is "the most fascinating job in the world."

"I like music and people," says the new manager, "and when you're able to serve both it's very pleasant."

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE

AUG 14 1954

'Tanglewood on Parade' Heard Under Bright Sky

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 13.—"Tanglewood on Parade," the Berkshire Music Center's annual panorama of talent and skill, took place today under a bright sky and in a holiday mood. Starting at 2 in the afternoon, Tanglewood's student activities were opened for the public to inspect, and by the day's end every department had been awarded a chance to haul out its wares and display under the most favorable circumstances.

To cap the event, tonight's concert was climaxed by the first Tanglewood appearance of the famed Boston Pops Orchestra, under the direction of Arthur Fiedler. A gay host of works including Raval's "Bolero," Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever" and Hayman's arrangement of TV commercials was the program offering. Previously, Thomas Schippers had conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Bizet's Symphony in C Major and the final scene from Strauss' "Salome" with Brenda Lewis in the title role.

6 P. M. Barrage

During the afternoon, visitors to America's renowned festival locale were offered an opportunity to hear the opera department in Gounod's "The Physician in Spite of Himself"; and, at 6 o'clock, a simultaneous barrage of features was held in every available auditorium on the grounds. Within two hours there were an orchestral concert led by student conductors, a program of chamber music and works by student composers, a group of opera scenes and a concert by members of Tanglewood's Chorus. In all, a bird's-eye view of the Berkshire Music Center's formidable facilities and curriculum.

Last night's concert in the Theater-Concert Hall, featuring members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Jean Morel, was compounded of major distinctions and minor failures. Beginning with Rossini's bumptious and whimsical overture to "La Scala di Seta," the program then turned its sights on Mozart's rarely heard Symphony No. 33, in B Flat, K. 319, Ravel's "Mother Goose" suite, and, as the grand finale, Richard Strauss' music for Moliere's "Le Bourgeois Gentilhome."

Rossini Overture

The "Silken Ladder" overture, heard with an orchestra of chamber size approximating Rossini's own, leaps like a trout and makes lovely sounds. All of its vivacity, its swirling elegance and brio, were apparent in Mr. Morel's buoyant reading.

Buoyant also, and sunny as well, was the conductor's interpretation of Mozart's Symphony No. 33, a work cast into semi-obscurity by the perfection of Mozart's later efforts in the form. On this occasion there was, in addition, the considerable advantage of hearing

Mr. Morel in particular—perform him, Mozart's soulfulness shrinks a mite, but his polish and glitter, his sparkle and verve, are made immeasurably brighter. He is asked to dance and lark, to dispel sad thoughts. And while slow movements are thus liable to lose some of their potency and passion, the outer ones take on a festival flavor, and revel effortlessly in their own high spirits.

Fairy Tales in Tune

Ravel's "Mother Goose" suite, on the other hand, is a wide-eyed and tender collection of fairy tales set to tune. It is a gentle piece, nostalgic and gossamer, and it wants much in the way of sentiment and flexibility to make its point. These several graces, however, were largely absent from Mr. Morel's performance. Supplanting them were strictness and severity and a rigidity of tempo and rhythm that robbed the numbers of their naive charm. Stern and unsmiling, then, was this "Mother Goose." And she is no friend when encountered with a frown.

Strauss' music for the "Bourgeois Gentilhomme" has, owing to its incessant waltzes, a tendency to grow kittenish and coy. As much as he was able, Mr. Morel minimized these aspects of the score by concentrating on its rollicking orchestration and piquancy of detail. But even the stamina and thrust of his rendition failed to conceal the work's looseness of structure and glaring archness of theme.

TOLEDO, OHIO
BLADE

AUG 15 1954

Rehearsal For Tanglewood Concert

CHARLES MUNCH and part of the Boston Symphony Orchestra are shown at rehearsal. They have been preparing the gigantic Berlioz "Grand Mass for the Dead," otherwise known as "Requiem," which will close the Berkshire Musical Festival today.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION

AUG 14 1954

Symphony Chorus Will Sing Tomorrow at Tanglewood

Fifty members of the chorus of the Springfield Symphony will leave Springfield today to go to Lenox for the final rehearsal of the Berlioz "Requiem", which they will sing with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Festival Chorus at Tanglewood, the home of the Berkshire Festival. The rehearsal, which will be open to the public, will be the last in a series of nine for the local people.

Means 1000-Hours Work

Going into the performance with the world-famous orchestra and chorus are better than a thousand hours' work—each rehearsal lasts about three hours—better than 3000 miles travel—the round trip to Tanglewood is ninety miles—and, according to one chorister, "tons of mental energy." The energy has been burned up in perfecting the thousands of details which go into the two-hour performance.

One of those details is the Latin word "Rex." "Rex," which means "King" in Latin, when stretched out over two bars of music isn't just "Rexsssss." According to James Aliferis, assistant Festival choral director—the bald, pleasant tyrant who has been directing the rehearsals at Tanglewood—it is "Rreeeeex." Mr. Aliferis makes the chorus say and sing "R-r-e-e-e-e-e-x." until it comes out to his satisfaction.

At the rehearsals also is Hugh Ross, a thin, twinkling Englishman who is choral director at Tanglewood. Mr. Ross spends most of his time cocking an experienced ear at the sections of the chorus and saying such things to individual singers as "You have a lovely voice. Why don't you sing out?"

He was responsible for one of the high spots of the long series of rehearsals. In last Sunday night's session, the first at Tanglewood, he said to the group as the clock neared nine that rehearsals had been planned to run from 7 'til 9, but that, since so much was to be done that, in his words, "We'll stay as long as we can."

The battle-wise choristers, who well knew that they would be singing as long as the director had strength to wave a baton at them, detected a certain humorous understatement and showed their merriment, whereupon Mr. Ross remarked to the further delight of the group that one of the joys of a Britisher working in the United States was that you said the most ordinary things and everyone laughs like anything.

BOSTON MASS
POST

AUG 15 1954

Music In Review

By TUCKER KEISER

TANGLEWOOD, Aug. 14—The Boston Symphony has been as busy as a bee-stung Stakhanovite this week giving three Esplanade concerts, the Thursday evening performance in the Bach-Mozart series, last night's "Tanglewood on Parade" jamboree, and the final rehearsals for tomorrow's Berkshire premiere of the Berlioz "Requiem."

One result: Charles Munch was compelled tonight to play scores which could practically be read at sight before an audience of 11,000. Competent was the performance; curious was the programing.

Brahms' "tragic" overture proved to be considerably more tragic for Brahms than Mr. Munch. This short, sober work the conductor served up with a tangy Latin sauce which concealed the flavor of the basic ingredients but obviously appealed to palates long accustomed to its roast beef flavor.

Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin" formed a pleasantly quiet interlude before Walter Piston's noisy fourth symphony, which closed the first portion of the program with a bang, if a certain disregard for programmatic logic.

Mr. Piston's little opus with all its craftsmanship and subtlety came through very well indeed under the volatile conductor's treatment. Mr. Munch made production numbers of the two big, fat tunes in the second and fourth movements, illuminating these passages with a romantic glow, not perhaps what the composer intended but conceivably what he should have had in mind.

Saint-Saens' Third Symphony with organ solo (played tonight by E. Power Biggs) was the closing work. This is possibly the worst symphony ever written. It is dull, it is pretentious, and it is devoid of every genuine feeling; all of its coloration is so drearily contrived. However, it must be admitted that the final movement which contains a little of at least 10 other composers, is a rousingly corny finale—it is so loud.

Were this symphony not revived occasionally by conductors at their wits' end for something to play, it would recline peacefully in the archives where no one with a bit of sensibility would disturb it.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE

54

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky (left) congratulating winners of the Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship—student conductors Paul Vermel (right) and Samuel Krachmalnick. Looking on are Mrs. William M. Crane (second from left) and Mrs. John R. Rice, co-chairmen of a committee raising funds for the annual scholarship.

Music Festival Awards Made

Seven scholarships and cash wards were made to students f the Berkshire Music Center t Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., esterday. The prizes are iven annually to outstanding tudents at the summer school f music maintained by the oston Symphony Orchestra n connection with its Berkhire Festival which concludes s seventeenth summer this fternoon. Winners were hosen from among the 375 nrolled this year from thirtyve states and twelve foreign countries. A committee headed by Mrs. William M. Crane, of Richmond, Mass., has raised $5,000 towards a $15,000 goal to establish an annual scholarship for student conductors at Tanglewood, as a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, former music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and first director of the Berkshire Music Center. The scholarship, whose present value is $250, was awarded jointly to student conductors Samuel Krachmalnick, of New York, formerly of St. Louis, a second year student, and Paul Vermel, of New York, formerly of France, a student in 1949. Other awards made yesterday were: The Jascha Heifetz Award to Tiberius Klausner, the Gregor Piatigorsky Prize to Camilla Heller and Evalyn Steinbock, the Serge Koussevitzky Composition Prize to Robert Barney Childs, the Wechsler Commission to Raymond Wilding-White, the Selly A. Eisemann Scholarship to Catherine Dufford, and the Carlotta M. Dreyfus Scholarship to Phyllis Murphy.

anglewood Saturday Finale Presents Boston Symphony

By Jay Harrison

ENOX, Mass., Aug 14.—The rkshire Music Festival en- red the last phase of its pres- t acaivity tonight with the al Saturday evening concert Tanglewood's large Music ed. For the event, Charles nch conducted the Boston mphony Orchestra in a pro- am familiar to his admirers, cluding Brahms' "Tragic" erture, Ravel's "Le Tombeau Couperin" Suite, Walter ston's Fourth Symphony and int-Saens' Symphony No. 3, C minor, Op. 78.

Last night, as a rousing cli- ax to the Center's day-long anglewood on Parade," Arthur edler and the famed Boston ps Orchestra invaded the rawling campus and straight- y proceeded to knock the ops from under every staid nvention known to the Festi- l grounds and its environs. histles blew, sirens honked, mbals crashed, and an audi- ce of over 10,000 competed th the furor on stage by going into systerical cheers and applause at the slightest provocation.

Madcap Numbers

And there were ripe reasons for the demonstrations of approval. Mr. Fiedler and his orchestra—consisting in the main of members from the Boston Symphony Orchestra—had selected for their program a series of mapcap numbers rivaling a circus in their din, variety and feverish high spirits. Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever," with the piccolos and brasses called upon to stand during their solos, started it off, and in rapid proliferation came Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne," Ravel's Bolero, and Antic Pot-Pourri by Hayman of myriad tunes from TV commercials and an arrangement of Gillette's "Look Sharp Be Sharp" refrain. Separating these pieces were a host of encores—E. Strauss' "Fast Track," "Fernando's Hideaway" and "The Glow-worn Turns"—which for sheer looniness are not likely to find anywhere an equal.

The beauty of it all was the vast abandon with which the pieces were played. No sooner had it begun, than the concert became a kind of symphonic hoe-down, with percussion cannonades and brass assaults to stir the dead. It made little difference to Mr. Fiedler and his crew whether Ravel or Ajax the Foaming Cleanser was the topic of the moment—they were all dealt with lustily, garishly, with an ear for the spectacular. Accepted in that spirit, the concert proved a hilarious venture into those regions of spoofing that vanish when the summer pop season draws to an end.

The first half of last night's concert was devoted to performances of Bizet's Symphony in C and the final scene from Strauss' "Salome," with Thomas Schippers conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Brenda Lewis as soloist, Mr. Schippers' reading emerged somewhat sensationalized, and he harried the great little work with rhythmic accents and tempos unnatural to it; but, for the most, it was a powerful performance and a gripping one. Equally stunning, though far more appropriate, was the conductor's entrance into the morbid and neurotic realms of the Strauss opera, where Mr. Schippers pulled such blazing and luminous sonorities from the orchestra that they all but swamped Miss Lewis' solo line. When she could be heard, however, it was apparent that her voice has increased in size and quality, that her pitch is neat as a pin, and that her artistry grows rapidly with the hours.

But it was, in the final analysis, really Mr. Fiedler's night. Before he began, Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith was given a plaque honoring her farsightedness, twenty years ago, in starting a music series destined to evolve into the Tanglewood Festival. And after Mr. Fiedler concluded his barnstorming, a few die-hard conservatives in the audience were seen turning faint and grasping the chairs for assistance. No wonder, It was quite a night.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
SUNDAY NEWS

AUG 15 1954

Last Concert

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, gives the final concert on the 1954 Berkshire Festival this afternoon at Lenox, Mass.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
WORLD - TELEGRAM & SUN

AUG 14 1954

Varied Program at Berkshire

By ROBERT BAGAR.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 14.—A crowd of 10,000 swarmed down upon Tanglewood today for the festivities connected with "Tanglewood on Parade." So many things went on during the course of the day—and far into the night—that it would be impossible to enumerate them all. And, think of it, quite a few of the events were presented simultanously.

For instance, this is what was going on, among other things, around 6 p.m. In the music shed the Department 1 orchestra (Berkshire Music Center) led by various young conductors, students here, showed their mettle in short symphonic works.

And, by the way, Samuel Hindemith's "There and Back." the youthful musicians very efficiently, indeed, through excerpts from Act 3 of "Die Meistersinger." Meanwhile, the opera department of the school offered scenes from such works as "Tosca," "La Boheme," and Hindesmith's "There and Back." At the same time the chamber music hall was given over to performances of pretty difficult music, a good deal of which was composed and all of it played by students.

A Choice of Events.

All day the throngs entered the many gates. Picnics happened sporadically on the lawns throughout the grounds. And the patrons had their choice of events to attend, most of them running from one to the other, trying to absorb everything going on.

With all that, there were substantial matters for the listeners who thronged the music shed last night. First half of the program by the Boston Symphony, was conducted by Thomas Schippers, who had chosen Bizet's charming Symphony in C and the final scene from Richard Strauss' "Salome" as his interpretative material. Brenda Lewis sang the solo part in the latter.

It was perfectly clear to everyone present, and in spite of some loud playing by the orchestra, that Miss Lewis is a Salome to the fingertips. She already had proved this at the City Center, of course, but attempting to create a characterization via a relatively few pages of the score and without benefit of acting and the rest is quite a task. She accomplished it, though, with almost ridiculous ease.

Entertaining Portion.

The second half of the evening shed concert was taken over by the personable Arthur Fiedler who conducted the musicians, now transformed into the Boston "pops" orchestra, through a most engaging program of light music.

Listening to the Sousa "Stars and Stripes Forever" march, the suite from Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne," Ravel's "Bolero," as well as a clever confection of commercial radio and TV jingles and other items proved hugely entertaining.

At intermission time Dr. Lewis Perry, honorary chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, presented Agnes Robinson Smith with an illuminated leather scroll. This was in honor of her yeoman work toward bringing about the Berkshire Music Festival. In accepting the scroll Miss Smith spoke of the magnificent contribution of many others who "gave us the courage, inspiration and determination to carry on."

Following last night's concert was dancing on the lawn. That was followed by a jam session spearheaded by Joe Bushkin, ace jazz pianist who now is a student in composition at the center. The gate for yesterday's admissions totaled $23,981. Fun, as you see, pays off.

FORT WORTH, TEX.
Morning Star-Telegram

AUG 15 1954

Festival Stresses Works of Berlioz

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 14 (Spl). The 15th session of the Berkshire Festival, sponsored by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conclude Sunday with the performance of the Berlioz "Requiem," conducted by Charles Munch.

Programs this year have stressed the words of Hector Berlioz, observing the 150th anniversary season of the birth of the French composer.

Total attendance at the 24 public concerts of the season is expected to reach 120,000.

The Berkshire Music Center, the "school" of the festival, enrolls 400 from among the 1,500 students who apply. The enrollment this year represents 35 states and 12 foreign countries. With Munch as director and Aaron Copland, eminent American composer, as assistant, the faculty includes many distinguished figures in American music.

Former students include Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra; Walter Hendl of the Dallas Symphony; Anne Bollinger and James Pease of the Hamburg State Opera, and Frances Yeend and David Lloyd of the New York City Opera.

Thomas Stewart, San Saba, Texas, was one of the soloists selected by Hugh Ross for his presentation this year of the Bach "Cantata No. 93."

FORT WORTH AT BERKSHIRE—Among the students in the Berkshire Music Center this summer at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., is Mrs. Dora Lee Langdon, 1227 Washington Ter., Fort Worth, at the extreme right of the group shown here. Others are Lukas Foss and Florence Dunn, who head the faculty, and Jeannene McIver, Houston, and Ann Heilignan, Overton.

BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD
AUG 15 1954

TANGLEWOOD FESTIVAL

Final concert of the 1954 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, a unique American musical institution in Lenox, will be held this afternoon when Charles Munch conducts Berlioz' "Requiem". Scenes from this summer's huge operation are pictured here. Above, pupils of student orchestra cluster around Jean Morel (next to left), head of orchestra department. The Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school has 400 students from 35 states and 12 nations.

LAURIE, heroine of Aaron Copland's opera "The Tender Land," is played by Phyllis Murphy (standing center) in rehearsal at Tanglewood. Others watch appreciatively as she responds to toasts from farm neighbors in production.

DORIOT ANTHONY, (above) first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (left), directs flute section at Berkshire Music Center. In first three weeks of this season, 60,750 had attended 12 public concerts.

PEOPLE will listen to good music, as this overflow audience outside the music shed attests. The building seats 6,000 persons.

BALTIMORE, MD.
MORNING SUN
AUG 15 1954

FOR THE WOMEN
Beauty—Style—Patterns—Children—
Dorothy Dix—Hedda Hopper
Homes—Emily Post

LIVING
THE SUNDAY SUN

FOR EVERYBODY
Television—Radio—Photography—Music
Books—Theaters—Films—Real Estate
Do-It-Yourself—Travel

SECTION A
BALTIMORE, SUNDAY MORNING, AUGUST 15, 1954
SECTION A

Summer Music Capital

The combination of fine music and beautiful scenery draws more than a hundred thousand people to Tanglewood each summer. Here a double bass player carries his instrument from his living quarters over to the large concert shed.

By WELDON WALLACE

FOR a few weeks each summer, tens of thousands of musicians, music students, music lovers or mere sight-seers descend upon a Massachusetts estate where Nathaniel Hawthorne once strolled and wrote in a landscape that opens out to the horizon across trees, water, hills.

This restful and secluded spot in the Berkshires, where crickets formerly made up the only orchestra, is the summer music capital of America. The Boston Symphony gives summer concerts in a shed that will seat more than 6,000 persons and there is often an overflow audience of thousands on the lawn.

Elsewhere on the estate, on certain nights, one may hear opera. Another spot is devoted to chamber music.

And on the smooth grass once the calm setting for New England lawn gatherings, hundreds of music students go to and from their classes with some of the world's best-known musicians.

Berkshire Festival Site

This is Tanglewood, site of the annual Berkshire Festival.

In twenty years, beginning with three concerts in the open air by 65 players of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony, the Berkshire Festival has become one of the world's liveliest summer music centers.

In its earlier years, the audiences had more homogeneity than now. They resembled, in dress and behavior, the audiences that attend serious winter concerts.

Today, especially on Sunday afternoons, the view is more likely to suggest Coney Island than a magnificent vista in the mountains.

On the lawn listeners settle down as informally as if protected by the privacy of their own living rooms. They sometimes remove shoes or shirts. They may have a whisky bottle or a radio. Some of them take picnic lunches or decks of cards. They crowd together in a chummy way.

There is not a flower at Tanglewood, but the absence of color makes the green appear that much more luxurious. Opening off the main lawn are sedate gardens with shrubs trimmed in the formal manner.

There, quietly dressed and dignified men and women stroll, along with blondined spectators wearing halters, puddle jumpers and dark glasses.

All Tastes, Temperaments

Tanglewood's pilgrims democratically represent all tastes and temperaments.

The flocks of cars and swarms of visitors do not, however, destroy the atmosphere. The New England character of this setting, strong and undismayed, does not lose its forcefulness.

On these 210 acres, more than 100 years ago, William Aspinwall Tappan, a Boston banker and merchant, laid out the estate, buying several farms for the purpose.

Nathaniel Hawthorne lived on the place from 1851 to 1853. There he planned "Tanglewood Tales," assembled the material for "The House of Seven Gables" and wrote "The Wonder Book."

On the lawn stands the house, built in 1865. It is not fancy or extravagant. It is large but rambling and of a gabled, stiff architecture. Anything ostentatious or frivolous would have been unthinkable to the New England mind represented by William Tappan and others of similar background and period.

It is not difficult to imagine the leisurely, untroubled life that went on in that place.

It is a setting equally fitting as background for music. The sonorities of Richard Strauss or the breadth of Beethoven acquire an added dimension if one listens while watching the stars and moon above Tanglewood, resting one's eyes on the silvered hills and water far away.

The lawn at Tanglewood seems to ride high and serenely above its surroundings.

Visiting Musicians

Among the visitors one may recognize well-known persons from time to time.

When Mr. Munch is not involved with rehearsals or concerts of the Boston Symphony he may be found at other concerts on the premises.

Zino Francescatti, the noted violinist, and his wife are boxholders at Tanglewood. (They have a home at Monterey, Mass.) Francescatti was also a Tanglewood soloist this year.

The late Albert Spalding, violinist, used to live in the region, and his wife still attends the programs.

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky maintans a box.

Massimo Freccia, conductor of the Baltimore Symphony, and Mrs. Freccia sometimes drive to Tanglewood for the Boston Symphony programs. They have a home at Warren, Conn.

Ted Shawn, head of the ~~Jacob's Pillow~~ University of the Dance, just a few miles from Tanglewood, is another concert-goer.

The great festival that flourishes at Tanglewood did not come into being effortlessly. Its origin goes back to 1934, when concerts were arranged on the Hanna estate by a committee of citizens from Berkshire county.

5,000 At First Concerts

Sixty-five players from the New York Philharmonic Symphony played for 5,000 persons. The next summer a tent was rented to protect the audience. The festival was given at the same spot.

In 1936 the Boston Symphony, under the direction of the late Serge Koussevitzky, was invited to play. Nearly 15,000 persons attended the programs at Holmwood, the Stockbridge estate of Mrs. Margaret Emerson.

That winter Tanglewood was presented to the Boston Symphony by Mrs. Gorham Brooks (later Mrs. Andrew Hepburn) and her aunt, Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan. The following summer a tent was again used. Nature impeded the opening concert, however. A storm forced Koussevitzky to stop the orchestra several times during a Wagner program.

Koussevitzky's Ultimatum

The report is that Koussevitzky delivered an ultimatum: Facilities had to be adequate if Boston Symphony music was expected at Tanglewood.

A festival committee went to work, raising $80,000 for a shed that was completed in time for the 1938 season.

Although big enough to accommodate thousands, the shed fits inconspicuously into the trees of Tanglewood. No effort was made to "prettify" it. It was built for service, and it gives superb service. Its acoustics permit the softest tones to be heard throughout the shed, and the many listeners who remain outside to hear the concerts have no difficulty whatsoever.

The shed had its formal première in 1938 with Beethoven's "Ninth Symphony." Attendance that season totaled 38,000.

Summer School Opened

The next major development occurred in 1940 when the Berkshire Music Center, a school for intensive summer work, was opened in conjunction with the concerts.

Such world-known musicians as Paul Hindemith, Aaron Copland and Boris Goldovsky were faculty members.

In 1941 other buildings were erected—a theater-concert hall, a hall for chamber music, and five studios.

In 1942, because of wartime conditions, the festival was temporarily abandoned; but the Music Center continued to operate that summer. Then it, too, was discontinued. Activities were resumed on full scale in 1946.

This year the Music Center has 375 students from 35 states and twelve foreign countries.

Two Baltimore Students

Among them are two Baltimoreans, Malcolm Bernstein and Theresa Green. Both have had a prominent part in Tanglewood activities.

On August 6 Miss Green was soprano soloist in excerpts from the Mozart opera "Idomeneo."

Mr. Bernstein had one of the leads in Aaron Copland's opera "The Tender Land."

Hugh Ross, noted choral conductor, heard Mr. Bernstein singing in the chorus of one of the Tanglewood productions and immediately assigned him to the bass solo role in another production.

A third Baltimore musician, Arthur Kerr, trombonist in the Baltimore Symphony, studied at Tanglewood for two years and liked it so much that he is back this year working as a lifeguard.

Tanglewood makes every effort to take talented students regardless of their financial status. This summer two Negro students from the University of Illinois opera workshop hitchhiked to Tanglewood, arriving with only 32 cents between them. They were enrolled.

Students are attractively housed. The men live in near-by Wheatleigh, estate of a former ambassador from Spain to the United States. The women students occupy what in the winter is a school for boys.

Students Must Work

In addition to facilities to teach students of professional caliber, there is a study group for amateurs who wish to spend their vacations absorbing music. Occupations of Berkshire students include mail carrier, shoe salesman, audiometer technician, chemist, housewife, construction worker and furniture salesman.

There is no time for vacation for the professional students at Tanglewood. Persons accepted for the school are expected to work.

Mr. Bernstein won his Tanglewood scholarship in auditions held in New York last April. Several hundred applicants tried out; only some fifteen or twenty were chosen.

"They do not wonder whether you can do the work," Mr. Bernstein explains. "They take it for granted that you can. They simply expect you to do it."

Therefore, students like Mr. Bernstein may find themselves learning several opera and oratorio roles practically simultaneously. There are rehearsals, coaching sessions, classes to fuse drama and music and, finally, performances.

And when the student is not working himself, he is attending other rehearsals or concerts.

Many In Symphony Orchestras

Tanglewood alumni, according to festival records, make up more than ten per cent of the membership of all major United States symphony orchestras.

Leonard Bernstein got his start there, joining Koussevitzky's conducting class in 1940 long before he was familiar to the public. A member of the same class was Thor Johnson, who now holds the directorship of one of America's most noted orchestras, the Cincinnati.

Walter Hendl, who conducts the Dallas Symphony, and Elea de Carvalho, of Rio de Janeiro, are other former Tanglewood students.

Since many concert stars and conductors may be found mingling with the Tanglewood audiences, the visitor who is out to recognize celebrities stays on the alert.

Recently, one spectator recognized Ernst Ansermet, the distinguished European conductor. There he was: Van Dyke beard; well-shaped head; the fine expression; all Ansermet's.

Armed with this evidence, the spotter ventured to approach the gentleman and begin a conversation with, "Pardon me, aren't you Mr. Ansermet?"

"No," the man replied.

At any rate, it turned out, the man was distinguished—a Hollander connected with the United Nations.

Informality is one of the keynotes at Tanglewood. Although there are seats for 6,000 in the concert shed, there is often an overflow crowd, comfortably sprawled on the lawns around it, and crowding together in a relaxed, chummy way.

Baltimoreans Malcolm Bernstein and Theresa Green, right, students of dramatics in the opera department, have had key roles in recent productions.

These Tanglewood voice students will take their talents to all parts of the country in the fall. Ten per cent of all musicians in major symphony orchestras are Tanglewood graduates. Persons accepted for the school are expected to work.

Music emanates from the dormitories all day long as students practice for their parts in the music festival that makes Tanglewood a mecca for music lovers.

13-1475

SPRINGFIELD, MASS
REPUBLICAN

AUG 15 1954

Tanglewood Tales

Lenox, Aug. 14—Guests at Tanglewood concerts this weekend of Julius Fleischmann, Cincinnati industrialist and arts patron, are Sergei Denham, director of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, and Richard Aldrich, of the Broadway theatrical firm of Aldrich & Myers. Mr. Denham this year is reactivating the ballet company for a coast-to-coast tour under the sponsorship of Columbia Concerts. Mr. Aldrich is producer of four Cape Cod summer theatres, the Cape Playhouse at Dennis, the Connamessett Playhouse at Falmouth, and music circuses at Hyannis and Cohasset, and with Messrs. Myers and Fleischmann will produce Tallulah Bankhead in "Dear Charles" on Broadway in the autumn.

* * *

The "Berlioz Ball," held at Wheatleigh this week by the Student Council of Berkshire Music Center summer students, netted $150 for the emergency fund which helps out needy students with dormitory fees. Entertainment was provided by Jo Popper, Brooklyn, N. Y., chorus student, folk songs; Lorenzo Malfatti, Pittsburgh, opera student, Italian folk songs; Richard Elias, Manchester, N. H., violin student, violin caricatures; Emma Goldman, New Orleans, opera student, aria from "Tosca." Music was provided by Allyn Ferguson, San Jose, Cal.; Irwin Zucker, New York; Charles Hedlund, Hingham, Mass.; Lorenzo Malfatti, at pianos; Don Bravo, Fall River, Mass., saxophone; Arthur Kerr, Baltimore, trombone; Bill Tessin, Boston, trumpet.

* * *

Juan Orrego-Salas, of the Facultad de Belles Artes, Santiago, Chile, is a Tanglewood visitor this weekend. Mr. Orrego, here for a year's study on a Guggenheim fellowship, was awarded the Samuel Wechsler Commission in 1953 for a short work suitable for performance by student ensemble, and the prize-winning composition, "Sextet for Clarinet, String Quartet and Piano," will be performed at the summer's final student chamber music concert, which will be held tomorrow in the Theatre-Concert Hall, not as customary in the Chamber Music Hall, at 10 a. m. It will be performed by Constance Field, Phyllis Skoldberg, violins; Joseph Pietrapaolo, viola; Evelyn Steinbock, cello; John Grande, clarinet; Gilbert Kalishg, piano. Mr. Oorrego lectured to Tanglewood students, faculty and staff in the concluding "Aspects of Music" informal talk last Friday in the Chamber Music Hall on the topic "The South American Musica Scene." He is music critic of his city's publication "Critico Musical," and was a Tanglewood student of composition under Aaron Copland in 1946.

* * *

Leonard Rosenman, who was awarded a commission last summer by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation to compose a one-act opera for performance at Tanglewood by the Berkshire Music Center's opera department, is in California, writing the musical score for the screen version of the John Steinbeck novel "East of Eden." Mr. Rosenman has completed his Tanglewood opera, entitled "Cipolla, the Great," an adaptation of Thomas Mann's short story, "Mario and the Magician." It is planned for Tanglewood during the summer of 1955 when Boris Goldovsky, who selected Mr. Rosenman and Louis Mennini, of Rochester, N. Y., returns to head the opera department.

* * *

Barney Childs, Rhodes Scholar at the University of California, who is spending his second summer as a composition student at Tanglewood, a pupil of Aaron Copland, was honored by having the second movement, entitled "Calm" of his first symphony performed by the Tanglewood student symphony at its final concert of the season today, with Henry Janiec, of Passaic, N. J. as conductor. A quintet for harp and strings, in memoriam to Charles Ives, also by Mr. Childs, will have its fourth movement performed at the concluding student Chamber Music concert Sunday morning.

* * *

Ann English, concert soprano of Nahant, Mass., who was a popular member of the 1953 opera department at Tanglewood, and sang in a number of student opera and symphony programs, was a guest artist on the concluding student symphony program today in the Music Shed, in Ravel's "Sheherazade," which Samuel Krachmalnick conducted.

SYRACUSE HERALD-AMERICAN, Sunday, August [illegible]

1954 Berkshire Festival Closes Today as Requiem By Berlioz is Performed soprano, born. Her greatest operatic role was Carmen in the Bizet opera of that name; 1890, Jacques Ibert, French composer, born.

By E. V. W.

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA, Charles Munch conducting, closes its highly successful 1954 season this afternoon in "Tanglewood" with a performance of the Berlioz Requiem in the Music Shed. Last night's all-symphony program, Charles Munch conducting, included works by Brahms, Walter Piston, Ravel and Saint-Saens, with E. Power Biggs as organ soloist.

THIS 17TH summer of symphonic music in the Western Massachusetts hills and the 15th season with the Boston Symphony participating, ends with a memorial program to Dr. Serge Koussevitzky. Several rarely-heard Berlioz works have been presented, given in complete form, in observance of the 150th anniversary year of the birth of the French composer. In this afternoon's program, at 2:30 o'clock, David Poleri, tenor, will be soloist and a chorus of 200 students of the choral and opera departments of the Berkshire Music Center will be augmented by 50 voices from the chorus of the Springfield, Mass., symphony orchestra and four brass bands, totaling 50 players.

THE BOSTON Symphony Orchestra of 104 players which plays today participated in the Tanglewood premiere of the Berlioz Requiem in 1952. Activities of the Berkshire Music Center's 12th season also are concluded today, following some 40 concerts and demonstrations by students of the orchestra, chamber music, chorus, opera and amateur study departments. This morning, in the Chamber Music Hall, the final program of Chamber Music by students in Department I orchestra takes place. Yesterday afternoon, Composer Aaron Copland, assistant director of the music school, announced scholarships and prize awards.

THIRTY-FIVE states and 12 foreign countries are represented in the 1954 Berkshire Music Center enrollment, the Center being the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. This is the only school in the world sponsored by a major symphony orchestra. More than 100 students are registered from New York State; with 57 from Massachusetts. Four husband-wife teams are included; there are mother-son and a father-son combination.

FORMER Berkshire Music Center students scattered throughout the world in important music posts total 4,612 and more than 10 per cent of the membership of all major United States Symphony orchestras comprises one-time students and conductors who have graduated from "Tanglewood." There are such names as Leonard Bernstein, Thor Johnson (Cincinnati); Walter Hendl (Dallas and Chautauqua); Eleazar de Carvalgo (Rio de Janeiro); Lukas Foss, Robert Zeller, Herman Herz (Duluth); Robert Whitney (Louisville); Richard Bales (National Gallery, Washington, D. C.), and Thomas Schippers, Lorin Maazel (recalled in a Syracuse appearance in the War Memorial) and Alexander Leslie.

THE METROPOLITAN Opera Company membership also includes former "Tanglewood" students: Rosalind Elias, a 1953 pupil, withdrawn from further competition and made a member following one hearing; Frank Guarerra, Mildred Miller, Paul Knowles, Christina Cardillo. In the Hamburg, Germany State Opera are former students Anne Bollinger and James Pease and in the New York City Opera are Ellen Faull, (who sang with the Liederkranz Chorus a few seasons ago); David Lloyd, Mac Morgan, Phyllis Curtin, Frances Yeend (recently in Israel for first performances of the Verdi Requiem). Mario Lanza, now of Hollywood, was a Tanglewood student in 1940-41.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE

AUG 16 1954

Awe Inspiring 'Requiem' Ends Tanglewood Season

By D. E. RITZ

Hector Berlioz' "Requiem" or "Grande Messe des Morts," one of the most astounding compositions ever written for orchestra and chorus, was presented at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon as the closing program of the summer festival season.

* * *

CHARLES MUNCH conducted the performance, its second at Tanglewood, as a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, the first music director of the Tanglewood festival.

The full Boston Symphony orchestra was augmented by the four brass choirs indicated in the Berlioz score placed two on each side and in front of the main orchestra. The huge chorus, which had been prepared by Hugh Ross and James Aliferis, included the Berkshire Festival chorus and members of the Springfield Orchestra chorus. David Poleri was the tenor soloist in the "Sanctus."

There is no explanation of the genius Berlioz and there can be no adequate description of his music. Majestic, deeply religious, making full use of orchestral and vocal textures, the music shows complete understanding of the contrasts possible within the orchestral and vocal framework.

* * *

IT WOULD BE difficult to decide which is more impressive—the full glory of the four brass choirs or the "Quaerens Me" sung by the huge chorus unaccompanied.

Poleri was one of those rare tenor voices which can be magnificent in an auditorium the size of the Tanglewood Shed. The muted symbal punctuation of the music was an outstanding feature of the accompaniment for the solo voice.

The solemnity of the music was much enhanced yesterday by the general somberness of the day with its overhanging clouds and mist in the trees. Though the sun tried to break through on several occasions it never quite achieved it and the lawn audience must have been cool, we are sure.

* * *

TANGLEWOOD REMAINS the one place where Berlioz has received his due this summer with the performance of most of his major works in their entirety under the direction of Munch.

Musicians have come from far and near to hear the performances which have been outstanding from start to finish of the season.

Over 126,000 persons attended this summer's concerts through Saturday evening. Attendance figures for yesterday's concert were expected to swell the total to over 138,000.

Descending musical phrases mark many of the movements of the "Requiem" and unexpected nuances bring one out of the reverie inspired by the music. Sometimes it is the emphasis obtained by incisive down-bow accompaniment in the violin sections, again the somber coloring from the cellos or violas, an ostinato figure or bassoon theme.

* * *

THE CLOSING "Amen" is followed by a few final pizzicato notes from the cellos and it seemed sacriligious to applaud.

Never-the-less a heart-warming ovation for all concerned followed before the chorus, orchestra, conductor, soloist, and audience parted. Bravos and shouts of enthusiasm filled the Shed and another season at Tanglewood had ended.

Schenectady Gazette 8/16/54

GAZETTE PHONE 4-4141

Storm Drowns Out Parts Of Tanglewood Offering

BY D. E. RITZ

The odds always have been against "Romeo et Juliette" and Saturday night at Tanglewood was no exception. Very hot and humid weather had prevailed during the day and even at night the big Shed was only a bit cooler. Then the weather was not of the best for instrumentalists.

* * *

AS IF THAT were not enough a truly magnificent Berkshire mountain storm drove the lawn audience racing to the Shed for shelter. Then the rain on the roof drowned out the "Queen Mab" music and forced an early intermission.

But in spite of all that the Boston Symphony orchestra, Charles Munch, the festival chorus and soloists came through with a truly magnificent interpretation of Berlioz' dramatic symphony.

Soloists were Beatrice Krebs, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Nicola Moscona, bass.

Some persons in the audience took a good beating from the rain but very few left—they had come to listen and music lovers don't give up easily.

* * *

AN AMAZING OVATION concluded the evening and the second performance of the symphony at Tanglewood, the first was given last summer.

We consider ourselves very fortunate to have heard the epic work twice under Munch's direction. It increases in magnitude with each hearing and we are no nearer to comprehending the mentality which could conceive such music in such amazing detail.

Soloists, though impontant, have a very minor role and it is the orchestra and the chorus which carry the major portion of the interest and the action. Particularly fine, however was McCollum interpretation of the "almost a whisper" singing of the Mercutio' "Queen Mab" speech. Moscona in the role of Friar Laurence has a much better opportunity to display his voice as did Miss Krebs in her recitative whith the chorus.

* * *

THERE IS an incisiveness of phrasing about the singing of the festival chorus which we have not heard from other choruses. We have not been sure whether it was the crisp Berlioz idom only or whether it is the approach of general training—either way we like it.

The orchestra is the fountainhead of the music and for it the composer gave his best—there is no description which can match it in the least and attempts seem silly.

The blazing magnificence of the brass, the flurries of excitement from the strings, the combinations of tone color, the richness of the orchestral fabric, poetic imagination in both composer and conductor and the precision of it all defy description.

* * *

WE ARE MOST GLAD that Munch included the work again this year as a part of the observance of the Berlioz sesquicentennial season.

The Tanglewood season will continue through Aug. 15 with programs by the chamber orchestra in the Theater Concert hall on Fridays, special programs there on Wednesdays, and Shed concerts by the full 104-piece Boston orchestra on Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon. The Berlioz "Requiem" will conclude the season and will be played in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

BRISTOL, CONN.
PRESS

AUG 16 1954

MANY AT FESTIVAL

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 16 (AP)—Fully 135,775 persons attended the six-week Berkshire Music Festival, 16,000 ~~more than last~~ year's record turnout, Tanglewood officials announced.

The final concert yesterday by the Boston Symphony Orchestra attracted 8,950 despite Sunday steady rain.

HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM

AUG 16 1954

Tanglewood Closes Season; 135,000 Heard Concerts

The traditional commemorative concert in memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, founder of the Berkshire Music Center and conductor ~~of the Boston~~ Symphony orchestra and Festival for many years, marked the closing of the 17th Berkshire Music Festival Sunday afternoon.

Some 8950 persons listened to the concert in spite of heavy rain and formed a part of a total of 135,000 who attended the 24 concerts this season. Receipts for the season were $330,003. Last year, 117,950 persons were attracted to the concerts.

Charles Munch directed a well executed performance of the reverential "Requiem" by Hector Barlioz. A capable chorus was constituted by the Festival chorus, the Harvard Glee club and Radcliffe choral group, and 50 members of the Springfield Symphony chorus who previously performed the mass under the direction of Dr. Alexander Leslie. David Poleri was soloist.

BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE
AUG 15 1954

Berkshire Festival Ends

But one concert remains in the 1954 Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, in Lenox. This afternoon at 2:30 Charles Munch will conduct the orchestra, in the Music Shed, in the Berlioz Requiem. The soloist will be David Poleri, tenor. The Festival Chorus of 200 voices, trained by Hugh Ross and James Aliferis, will be augmented by the Springfield Chorus of 50 voices and four brass bands.

BROCKTON, MASS.
ENTERPRISE & TIMES
AUG 16 1954

TANGLEWOOD ATTENDANCE

LENOX. — (AP) — Fully 135,775 persons attended the six-week Berkshire Music Festival, 16,000 more than last year's record turnout, Tanglewood officials announced.

LEWISTON, ME.
JOURNAL
AUG 16 1954

135,775 Persons Attend Berkshire Music Festival

LENOX, Mass. (AP)—Fully 135,775 persons attended the six week Berkshire Music Festival, 16,000 more than last year's record turnout, Tanglewood officials announced.

PORTLAND, ME.
EXPRESS
AUG 16 1954

135,775 Attend Music Festival

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — Fully 135,775 persons attended the six-week Berkshire Music Festival, 16,000 more than last year's record turnout, Tanglewood officials announced.

The final concert yesterday by the Boston Symphony Orchestra attracted 8,950 despite steady rain.

CATSKILL, N. Y.
MAIL
AUG 16 1954

MUSIC

Tanglewood On Parade

o you care for Super Sunds your Salome? Gillette Blue les with your Bizet? Pabst Blue bon with your Ravel?

ew people realize it, but these sual combinations were available at the once-a-year musical -for-all commonly referred to "Tanglewood On Parade." This nt must really be seen and rd to be believed. It's uncanny; fun.

ch summer (it's over now: Reescat in pace), the combined ces of all the human dynamos at Berkshire Music Center are rolling into a monster of a musical eamroller and for a slight adssion fee, one is given the opportnity of being crushed by fanres, lawn parties, door prizes, altzing on spacious lawns and for xtra good measure, to be sure that he officials have catered to every aste, a jam session is thrown in o boot. Bl late evening (or early morning) everyone is tired and attempts to go home. The only thing that could possibly bring out a larger crowd would be the promise that Dr. Einstein was being launched in an experimental rocket (from atop the Music Shed, no doubt) for a trial flight to Pluto. It's a program for which people must save their energy, for if one makes the rounds of everything, the chances are slim that he will have the stamina to climb in his car (buried in a sea of Cadillacs) and drive home.

Don't get me wrong. "Tanglewood On Parade" is fun, and in addition, it has behind it, a worthy purpose. The proceeds go to the Berkshire Music Center, the music Center, the music school under the supervision of the Boston Symphony Orchestra where young and aspiring musicians come to better themselves and gain the experience of working with seasoned performers. The result of Friday's jamboree waes $20,000 in the jackpot for this worthwhile purpose.

The program included both the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops. Charles Munch did not conduct. He left things to Thomas Schippers and Arthur Fiedler, and from all outward appearances, he seemed to be having a whopping good time in his box seat. Whether or not he tapped his foot to the hodge-podge of television commercials, or whether he was inspired by a whoop-de-doo of a transcription of Bach's "Little" G minor Fugue, could not be ascertained.

If you haven't experienced a "Tanglewood On Parade," by all means try it. A word of advice: start saving your energy for next summer. You'll need it. Who knows what evil (?) lurks in the minds of men? Only the Shadow knows, and he ain't telling til next summer.

Oh yes, the Bizet Symphony in C Major and the final scene from Salome, with Brenda Lewis singing the role of Salome, were performed by the Boston Symphony. Arthur Fiedler and the oBston Pops provided the lighter music with plenty of drum rolls and cymbal crashes.

Everyone seemed to be having the time of their lives. I guess they did!

Clarence R. Warrington, Jr.

Berkshire Festival: N. Y. - Journal - American 8/16/54

Superb Performance

Berlioz's 'Requiem' Spellbinds Audience

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug., 16.—Berlioz's "Requiem" logically culminated this year's Berkshire Festival in a singularly moving performance by Charles Munch, the Boston Symphony and Festival chorus in the music shed yesterday afternoon. Damp wether cut the crowd to 8,950 people. The performance was dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

The spirit of dedication undoubtedly inspired Munch. The moments of lamentation in the opening "Requiem" and the 'Rex Tremendae," for instance, carried a depth of feeling quite searching. Elsewhere during the performance this aspect dominated.

And no moment was more perfectly timed than the very closing measures of the "Agnus Dei."

They ended the performance perfectly, as the audience's silence indicated.

Approaching the "Requiem" thus profoundly tempered the pages dominated by sheer effective writing. This time the "Tuba Mirum," with all its added brass creating reverberations multitudinous, acquired meaning in continuity and did not stand out too violently. It led naturally to the "Lacrymosa" three movements later.

Daring Offering

The "Offertorium" caught attention not only for the beauty of this particular movement but for the care with which Munch molded the performance of it. David Poleri sang the tenor solo of the "Sanctus" in good voice and in touching realization of its content, while the rosannas of the chorus came in striking contrast.

What appears daring in the "Requiem" today may still be the feats of orchestration so important over a century ago, but the masterly planning of the work as a whole, carries its own expression of original genius. Insomuch as Munch drew attention to this side, he made a distinctive contribution in this performance.

Though the chorus numbered 250, supplemented as it was by the Springfield (Mass.) orchestra chorus, the work needs greater vocal eloquence than this "small" group could give.

It had been admirably prepared by Hugh Ross and James Aliferis. The singing of the sopranos in certain pianissimo passages was notable for tonal quality. The men singers were insufficient in number for their voices to give the proper amount of weight.

Munch also conducted the Saturday night concert which drew an audience of 10,400 people. The program consisted of Brahms' tragic overture, Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin," Piston's fourth symphony, and Saint-Saens' third symphony with E. Power Biggs at the organ.

The Piston aroused interest because the composer has written more of himself into this music than in his earlier symphonies. The Saint-Saens is fast becoming a Munch warhorse.

BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD
AUG 15 1954

Brilliant Tanglewood Concerts End Record-Breaking Season

By RUDOLPH ELIE

TANGLEWOOD, Aug. 14 — If the recent charges by a little old lady who complained there was too much romancing during the concerts on the be-blanketed lawns of this stately green alfresco musical arena caused some little flurry of excitement at the Berkshire Festival headquarters recently, it quite failed to overpower the fact that this 20th anniversary season will end up tomorrow afternoon with a $350,000 box office contributed by nearly 150,000 visitors from practically everywhere. For it is now clear that this Festival is a prodigious attraction on a nation-wide scale, and certainly the largest and most important musical festival in America.

The little controversy on manners and customs, incidentally, came about quite by contrivance. For it appears that the author of the charges, an 83-year-old Lenox resident, wrote a letter to the selectmen complaining that the summer people walking about the streets of her town were unsuitably dressed. A press service called her for further comment, and managed to get her going on the subject of music lovers who, with blankets stretched out under the stars before the music shed, seemed to be responding to the romantic situation more than she deemed proper.

In view of the fact that the letter-writer invariably occupies a box, it is not generally known how she researched the situation, but a hasty survey by a picked squad of monitors chosen for their ability to see in the dark revealed that the reclining music lovers were the soul of discretion.

Indeed, since they were all wraapped up in blankets—the weather here having been somewhat immoderately cool — the monitors' considered opinion was that everyone was asleep, and that it was all a tempest in a timpanum.

NOVEL SCHEME

The problem of suitable garb, however, has always gnawed away at Tanglewood officials, who some years ago hit upon the novel scheme of supplying the bare-legged (male or female) with wellow wrap-around skirts at the gate.

This was greeted with such good natured aplomb by the visitors that it is now standard procedure, resulting, for the men at least, in much comic relief. Since the skirts were limited to several score and the visitors often e ceeded several thousand, ba legs are still to be seen and, some cases for that matter, a mired.

As for the blanket brigad the management takes the uno ficial view that music and r mance have been associated sinc Babylon, that only those dispose to such entertainment bring thei blankets, and that old ladies ar more properly advised to sit i their boxes and not roam trippin over people who got there first

As for more solemn matters, i may be reported that the traditional "Tanglewood on Parade," an event designed to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, was for once blessed with perfect outdoor weather. By six o'clocks 5,000 people from (to judge by a quick survey of the parking area) 28 states and Hawaii, were strolling on the overpoweringly green lawns, picnicking under the mugo pines, and dropping in on the several informal musical events offered on the occasion.

POPS ORCHESTRA

These consisted of an opera (Gounod's "The Physician in Spite of Himself"), a fanfare and a simultaneous demonstration of the orchestra, opera, chamber music and composition departments of the Center.

All this was followed by a picnic supper and at 8:15, the Gala concert featuring, for the first time at Tanglewood, Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops orchestra, who triumphed beyond imagining.

While Charles Munch occupied a box in the audience, the famed Pops maestro lifted the eaves of the shed a few inches with such familiar Pops numbers as "Stars and Stripes Forever," Ravel's "Bolero," the comical parody of TV commercials that has rocked Symphony Hall all season, and "Look Sharp—Be Sharp," not to mention a slate of encores.

If an audience—for the evening event numbering 10,500 — has been more elevated by the music at these Fesivals, it has certainly never been more entertained and amused than by this uproarious finale.

During the intermission, Dr. Lewis Perry, honorary chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, presented Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith with a leather scroll recognizing her as the leader of the original Festival enterprise here 20 years ago.

It was she who arranged for the Boston Symphony to make Tanglewood, already famous as the summer home of Nathaniel Hawthorne, its summer headquarters. The ensuing years have seen it grow from a small, more or less social series of a few selected events, to a musical festival of international significance offering more than 50 individual concerts.

MANAGER RETIRING

Regrettably enough, the man who — after Koussevitzky — was most responsible for the astonishing growth of the festival, this year retires as manager of the Boston Symphony and of the Berkshire Festival.

He is George E. Judd, who after 40 years of guiding the destinies of the orchestra, during which it completed an immensely successful tour of Europe and anothed of the United States, retires to his new farm at Cannonsville, N. Y., to devote his time to floriculture.

Taking his place, as of Sept. 1, is his former assistant, Thomas D. Perry, Jr., a young man who has long since established himself in an organization that now operates on an overall budget of a million and a half dollars a year, almost half as much more as that maintained by the New York Philharmonic and twice as much as that of any other orchestra in the world.

Except for the unruly weather, which has clouded much of the festival but hasn't prevented an all-time record attendance, the season has been musically brilliant. Thematically it has honored the 150th anniversary of Hector Berlioz, many of whose largest works have been performed during the season. The final work of the season, Berlioz's monumental "Requiem," which requires a much augmented orchestra, a chorus, and soloists as well as four brass bands posted in each corner of the shed, will be given tomorrow afternoon to conclude the festival. At this time, also, the Berkshire Music Center, composed of 375 students, disbands.

As for Tanglewood on Parade" itself, once the door prizes were distributed and the waltzing on the lawn ended, it came to a vivid conclusion with a jam session on the porch of the main house put on by jazz pianist Joe Bushkin, who thereby purged himself of the long-hair routine he has been undergoing at the center as a student. The little old lady who complained about the mores of the Tanglewood audiences could not be reached for comment on this bit of sacrilege, but another letter to the selectmen is expected presently.

Volume 63—No. 89 Berkshire Eagle Pittsfield, Massachusetts, Monday, August 16, 1954.

GOP Would Ban Red Part

Plouffe

THE FINALE of the 1954 Berkshire Festival season at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon brought 8,950 people to the Music Shed, despite threatening weather, as a climax to the six-week event attended by record-breaking crowds totaling 135,775. For the conclusion of the Festival season Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the massive "Requiem" by Hector Berlioz in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the BSO for 25 years.

All Records At Festival Shattered

135,000 Attend 24 Concerts—Munch Off to Paris

TANGLEWOOD — The six-week season at the Berkshire Music Festival, an "experiment" this year, was termed a success today by Boston Symphony Orchestra officials, who came up with figures to prove their case. The Festival, expanded from three weeks, had its greatest attendance and largest receipts in history.

Yesterday afternoon's concluding concert, in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the BSO for more than 25 years, drew 8,950 to Tanglewood, despite threatening weather, bringing the total for the season to 135,775 and total paid admissions of $330,033, compared to 117,950 and $311,600 a year ago.

Judd, Munch Pleased

Gratification at the new attendance records for the orchestra's concerts and its school demonstrations was expressed by BSO Manager George E. Judd, who is retiring after 40 years with the Boston Symphony.

"Music lovers have shown their increasing awareness of the Berkshire Festival's accessibility and have shown they welcome the Charles Munch plan inaugurated this summer to increase the number of concerts within the Festival's six-week scope."

Mr. Munch was also pleased with the results of the new plan. In spite of one of the most ambitious seasons ever undertaken at Tanglewood, Mr. Munch did not appear to be over-tired at the conclusion of yesterday's concert. Before leaving by car for Boston he visited in the Green Room at the side of the Shed with close friends and BSO officials, while hundreds of his fans gathered outside to give him a rousing ovation as his automobile drove him from the grounds. He went by plane today to New York where he boarded an Air France plane, bound for his home in Paris, where he will remain with his family until he leaves for Scotland to conduct at the Edinburgh Festival.

129,925 in Shed

The 12 concerts in the Music Shed this summer attracted 129,925 persons while the 12 chamber music and chamber orchestra concerts in the theater-concert hall drew 25,400.

Paid admissions to the six Saturday morning public rehearsals of the BSO for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund totaled $11,274.25. Total attendance at the rehearsals was 12,510.

Crowds totaling 30,800 attended the 30 performances of the student concerts, according to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. The total Friends' membership reached 5,141 this year and contributions from the members totaled $23,545.71.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
POST (Bx.-Home Ed.)
AUG 16 1954

Bronxite at Tanglewood

A teacher of music in Bronx junior high schools, Barry Volkman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Volkman, 1065 Jerome Av., is shown conducting at the Berkshire Music Center during the Tanglewood, Mass., musical festival.

BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD
AUG 16 1954

Tanglewood Sets Turnout Record

LENOX, Aug. 15 (AP) — Tanglewood officials today reported that 135,775 persons attended the six-week Berkshire Music Festival, 16,000 more than last year's record turnout.

Today's final concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra attracted 8,950 persons, despite steady rain.

Conductor Charles Muench dedicated the concert as a memorial to his predecessor, the late Serge Koussevitzky, longtime Boston Symphony conductor, who founded the Berkshire Music Center, the school connected with Tanglewood.

A feature of the program was Berlioz's requiem with a chorus of 204 voices.

PAGE 6

Tanglewood Festival Closes With Tribute To Koussevitzky

Berlioz Mass For Dead Performed By Munch And Orchestra! Poleri Is Soloist

By JULIAN SEAMAN
Blade Music Editor

TANGLEWOOD, Mass., Aug. 16—They can never leave off saluting Serge Koussevitzky here, and so Charles Munch closed the present Berkshire Music Festival here yesterday with a funeral matinee, Berlioz's "Grand' Mass for the Dead." The program whispered a footnote: "In memory of Serge Koussevitzky."

The late conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra has been dead long enough to have tempered these recurrent solemnities. The ghost still walks, however, though I am inclined to think a more wholesome realization of present problems would tend to establish the project more firmly upon the financial hillside.

Let us return, however, to the aforesaid Requiem, a performance of immensity, deep humility and artistic perfection, even superior, it seemed to me, to that of two years ago in the some locale. A painstaking rehearsal in the shed on Saturday morning gave one a portent of the actual performance.

Poleri Is Soloist

Hugh Ross and James Aliferis had prepared the Festival Chorus. The four extra brass choirs demanded by the gigantic score were seated in the orchestra and on either side of the huge stage. David Poleri, tenor of the City Center and other opera companies, was the soloist.

Mr. Poleri still impresses me as a gifted young artist of uncertain technique. The wisdom of casting an operatic tenor in this part is apparent, however, for the music requires just such an elan and projection as the stage would dictate. His success was overwhelming.

Recollections of Saturday night left us one fond memory of Mr. Munch and the orchestra, an expression of Walter Piston's Fourth Symphony. The Munch windmill drive seemed the right metier for Mr. Piston's muscular music.

Receive Ovation

This score is abstemious, yet astir with the strength and audacity of musical youth. Mr. Piston on the other hand has been at Harvard these 20 years and more and no longer can be called young. Music is full of such paradoxes.

An ovation rewarded Mr. Munch and the orchestr. Mr. Piston was called up to ar chaplets of his own.

Brahms began this program, a percussive and vulgar reading of the "Tragic Overture," followed by the Ravel suite, "Le Tombeau de Couperin." This is Ravel's homage to the classic mode. Really, it is orchestral chamber music.

Mr. Munch imparted weight without poetry, a literal statement of black and white. One felt exasperation and the annoyance of having missed the point of an engrossing discourse.

E. Power Biggs was the organist in Saint-Saens third symphony (Opus 78 C minor), a contrivance of no great genius, captivating enough in the causal ear to warrant substantial applause.

Toledo Blade
August 16, 1954

uiem' eason

aore impressive—the e four brass choirs ns Me" sung by the
accompanied.
one of those rare
vhich can be mag-auditorium the size
wood Shed. The punctuation of the outstanding feature niment for the solo

y of the music was yesterday by the rness of the day
anging clouds and
s. Though the sun through on several er quite achieved it udience must have ra sure.

* *

OD REMAINS the ré Berlioz has re-this summer with
e of most of his their entirety un-
n of Munch.
ve come from far r the performances
n outstanding from
of the season.
persons attended concerts through
s. Attendance figday's concert were ll the total to over

usical phrases
the movements of and unexpected ne out of the rev-
the music. Some-emphasis obtained
n-bow accompani-
lih sections, again loring from the an ostinato figure e.

* *

G "Amen" is fol-
nal pizzicato notes
and it seemed sac-
ud.
a heart-warming
oncerned followed us, orchestra, con-nd audience part-shouts of en-he Shed and an-
Tanglewood had

CATSKILL, N. Y.
MAIL

AUG 16 1954

MUSIC

Tanglewood On Parade

Do you care for Super Sunds with your Salome? Gillette Blue Blades with your Bizet? Pabst Blue Ribbon with your Ravel?

Few people realize it, but these unusual combinations were available at the once-a-year musical free-for-all commonly referred to as "Tanglewood On Parade." This event must really be seen and heard to be believed. It's uncanny; it's fun.

ach summer (it's over now: Requiescat in pace), the combined forces of all the human dynamos at the Berkshire Music Center are rolled into a monster of a musical steamroller and for a slight admission fee, one is given the opportunity of being crushed by fanfares, lawn parties, door prizes, waltzing on spacious lawns and for extra good measure, to be sure that the officials have catered to every taste, a jam session is thrown in to boot. Bl late evening (or early morning) everyone is tired and attempts to go home. The only thing that could possibly bring out a larger crowd would be the promise that Dr. Einstein was being launched in an experimental rocket (from atop the Music Shed, no doubt) for a trial flight to Pluto. It's a program for which people must save their energy, for if one makes the rounds of everything, the chances are slim that he will have the stamina to climb in his car (buried in a sea of Cadillacs) and drive home.

Don't get me wrong. "Tanglewood On Parade" is fun, and in addition, it has behind it, a worthy purpose. The proceeds go to the Berkshire Music Center, the music Center, the music school under the supervision of the Boston Symphony Orchestra where young and aspiring musicians come to better themselves and gain the experience of working with seasoned performers. The result of Friday's jamboree waes $20,000 in the jackpot for this worthwhile purpose.

The program included both the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops. Charles Munch did not conduct. He left things to Thomas Schippers and Arthur Fiedler, and from all outward appearances, he seemed to be having a whopping good time in his box seat. Whether or not he tapped his foot to the hodge-podge of television commercials, or whether he was inspired by a whoop-de-doo of a transcription of Bach's "Little" G minor Fugue, could not be ascertained.

If you haven't experienced a "Tanglewood On Parade," by all means try it. A word of advice: start saving your energy for next summer. You'll need it. Who knows what evil (?) lurks in the minds of men? Only the Shadow knows, and he ain't telling til next summer.

Oh yes, the Bizet Symphony in C Major and the final scene from Salome, with Brenda Lewis singing the role of Salome, were performed by the Boston Symphony. Arthur Fiedler and the oBston Pops provided the lighter music with plenty of drum rolls and cymbal crashes.

Everyone seemed to be having the time of their lives. I guess they did!

Clarence R. Warrington, Jr.

BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE

AUG 15 1954

Berkshire Festival Ends

But one concert remains in the 1954 Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, in Lenox. This afternoon at 2:30 Charles Munch will conduct the orchestra, in the Music Shed, in the Berlioz Requiem. The soloist will be David Poleri, tenor. The Festival Chorus of 200 voices, trained by Hugh Ross and James Aliferis, will be augmented by the Springfield Chorus of 50 voices and four brass bands.

BROCKTON, MASS.
ENTERPRISE & TIMES

AUG 16 1954

TANGLEWOOD ATTENDANCE

LENOX. — (AP) — Fully 135,775 persons attended the six-week Berkshire Music Festival, 16,000 more than last year's record turnout, Tanglewood officials announced.

LEWISTON, ME.
JOURNAL

AUG 16 1954

er injuries.

135,775 Persons Attend Berkshire Music Festival

LENOX, Mass. (AP)—Fully 135,775 persons attended the six week Berkshire Music Festival, 16,000 more than last year's record turnout, Tanglewood officials announced.

PORTLAND, ME.
EXPRESS

AUG 16 1954

135,775 Attend Music Festival

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — Fully 135,775 persons attended the six-week Berkshire Music Festival, 16,000 more than last year's record turnout, Tanglewood officials announced.

The final concert yesterday by the Boston Symphony Orchestra attracted 8,950 despite steady rain.

N. Y. Journal-American 8/16/54

Berkshire Festival:

Superb Performance

Berlioz's 'Requiem' Spellbinds Audience

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug., 16.—Berlioz's "Requiem" logically culminated this year's Berkshire Festival in a singularly moving performance by Charles Munch, the Boston Symphony and Festival chorus in the music shed yesterday afternoon. Damp wether cut the crowd to 8,950 people. The performance was dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

The spirit of dedication undoubtedly inspired Munch. The moments of lamentation in the opening "Requiem" and the 'Rex Tremendae," for instance, carried a depth of feeling quite searching. Elsewhere during the performance this aspect dominated.

And no moment was more perfectly timed than the very closing measures of the "Agnus Dei."

They ended the performance perfectly, as the audience's silence indicated.

Approaching the "Requiem" thus profoundly tempered the pages dominated by sheer effective writing. This time the "Tuba Mirum," with all its added brass creating reverberations multitudinous, acquired meaning in continuity and did not stand out too violently. It led naturally to the "Lacrymosa" three movements later.

Daring Offering

The "Offertorium" caught attention not only for the beauty of this particular movement but for the care with which Munch molded the performance of it. David Poleri sang the tenor solo of the "Sanctus" in good voice and in touching realization of its content, while the rosannas of the chorus came in striking contrast.

What appears daring in the "Requiem" today may still be the feats of orchestration so important over a century ago, but the masterly planning of the work as a whole, carries its own expression of original genius. Insomuch as Munch drew attention to this side, he made a distinctive contribution in this performance.

Though the chorus numbered 250, supplemented as it was by the Springfield (Mass.) orchestra chorus, the work needs greater vocal eloquence than this "small" group could give.

It had been admirably prepared by Hugh Ross and James Aliferis. The singing of the sopranos in certain pianissimo passages was notable for tonal quality. The men singers were insufficient in number for their voices to give the proper amount of weight.

Munch also conducted the Saturday night concert which drew an audience of 10,400 people. The program consisted of Brahms' tragic overture, Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin," Piston's fourth symphony, and Saint-Saens' third symphony with E. Power Biggs at the organ.

The Piston aroused interest because the composer has written more of himself into this music than in his earlier symphonies. The Saint-Saens is fast becoming a Munch warhorse.

BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD

AUG 15 1954

Brilliant Tanglewood Concerts End Record-Breaking Season

By RUDOLPH ELIE

TANGLEWOOD, Aug. 14 — If the recent charges by a little old lady who complained there was too much romancing during the concerts on the be-blanketed lawns of this stately green alfresco musical arena caused some little flurry of excitement at the Berkshire Festival headquarters recently, it quite failed to overpower the fact that this 20th anniversary season will end up tomorrow afternoon with a $350,000 box office contributed by nearly 150,000 visitors from practically everywhere. For it is now clear that this Festival is a prodigious attraction on a nation-wide scale, and certainly the largest and most important musical festival in America.

The little controversy on manners and customs, incidentally, came about quite by contrivance. For it appears that the author of the charges, an 83-year-old Lenox resident, wrote a letter to the selectmen complaining that the summer people walking about the streets of her town were unsuitably dressed. A press service called her for further comment, and managed to get her going on the subject of music lovers who, with blankets stretched out under the stars before the music shed, seemed to be responding to the romantic situation more than she deemed proper.

In view of the fact that the letter-writer invariably occupies a box, it is not generally known how she researched the situation, but a hasty survey by a picked squad of monitors chosen for their ability to see in the dark revealed that the reclining music lovers were the soul of discretion.

Indeed, since they were all wraapped up in blankets—the weather here having been somewhat immoderately cool — the monitors' considered opinion was that everyone was asleep, and that it was all a tempest in a timpanum.

NOVEL SCHEME

The problem of suitable garb, however, has always gnawed away at Tanglewood officials, who some years ago hit upon the novel scheme of supplying the bare-legged (male or female) with wellow wrap-around skirts at the gate.

This was greeted with such good natured aplomb by the visitors that it is now standard procedure, resulting, for the men at least, in much comic relief. Since the skirts were limited to several score and the visitors often e ceeded several thousand, ba legs are still to be seen and, some cases for that matter, a mired.

As for the blanket brigad the management takes the uno ficial view that music and r mance have been associated sinc Babylon, that only those dispose to such entertainment bring thei blankets, and that old ladies ar more properly advised to sit i their boxes and not roam trippin over people who got there first

As for more solemn matters, i may be reported that the tradi tional "Tanglewood on Parade," an event designed to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, was for once blessed with perfect outdoor weather. By six o'clock 5,000 people from (to judge by a quick survey of the parking area) 28 states and Hawaii, were strolling on the overpoweringly green lawns, picnicking under the mugo pines, and dropping in on the several informal musical events offered on the occasion.

POPS ORCHESTRA

These consisted of an opera (Gounod's "The Physician in Spite of Himself"), a fanfare and a simultaneous demonstration of the orchestra, opera, chamber music and composition departments of the Center.

All this was followed by a picnic supper and at 8:15, the Gala concert featuring, for the first time at Tanglewood, Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops orchestra, who triumphed beyond imagining.

While Charles Munch occupied a box in the audience, the famed Pops maestro lifted the eaves of the shed a few inches with such familiar Pops numbers as "Stars and Stripes Forever," Ravel's "Bolero," the comical parody of TV commercials that has rocked Symphony Hall all season, and "Look Sharp—Be Sharp," not to mention a slate of encores.

If an audience—for the evening event numbering 10,500 — has been more elevated by the music at these Fesivals, it has certainly never been more entertained and amused than by this uproarious finale.

During the intermission, Dr. Lewis Perry, honorary chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, presented Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith with a leather scroll recognizing her as the leader of the original Festival enterprise here 20 years ago.

It was she who arranged for the Boston Symphony to make Tanglewood, already famous as the summer home of Nathaniel Hawthorne, its summer headquarters. The ensuing years have seen it grow from a small, more or less social series of a few selected events, to a musical festival of international significance offering more than 50 individual concerts.

MANAGER RETIRING

Regrettably enough, the man who — after Koussevitzky — was most responsible for the astonishing growth of the festival, this year retires as manager of the Boston Symphony and of the Berkshire Festival.

He is George E. Judd, who after 40 years of guiding the destinies of the orchestra, during which it completed an immensely successful tour of Europe and anothed of the United States, retires to his new farm at Cannonsville, N. Y., to devote his time to floriculture.

Taking his place, as of Sept. 1, is his former assistant, Thomas D. Perry, Jr., a young man who has long since established himself in an organization that now operates on an overall budget of a million and a half dollars a year, almost half as much more as that maintained by the New York Philharmonic and twice as much as that of any other orchestra in the world.

Except for the unruly weather, which has clouded much of the festival but hasn't prevented an all-time record attendance, the season has been musically brilliant. Thematically it has honored the 150th anniversary of Hector Berlioz, many of whose largest works have been performed during the season. The final work of the season, Berlioz's monumental "Requiem," which requires a much augmented orchestra, a chorus, and soloists as well as four brass bands posted in each corner of the shed, will be given tomorrow afternoon to conclude the festival. At this time, also, the Berkshire Music Center, composed of 375 students, disbands.

As for Tanglewood on Parade" itself, once the door prizes were distributed and the waltzing on the lawn ended, it came to a vivid conclusion with a jam session on the porch of the main house put on by jazz pianist Joe Bushkin, who thereby purged himself of the long-hair routine he has been undergoing at the center as a student. The little old lady who complained about the mores of the Tanglewood audiences could not be reached for comment on this bit of sacrilege, but another letter to the selectmen is expected presently.

uiem'
eason nore impressive—the he four brass choirs

ns Me" sung by the
accompanied.
one of those rare
which can be mag-auditorium the size
wood Shed. The punctuation of the outstanding feature niment for the solo

y of the music was d yesterday by the rness of the day
anging clouds and
es. Though the sun through on several er quite achieved it udience must have are sure.

* *

OD REMAINS the re Berlioz has re-this summer with
e of most of his their entirety un-
n of Munch.
ve come from far r the performances
n outstanding from
of the season.
persons attended concerts through
g. Attendance figday's concert were ll the total to over

usical phrases
the movements of
and unexpected ne out of the rev-
the music. Some-emphasis obtained
n-bow accompani-lin sections, again loring from the
an ostinato figure e.

* *

G "Amen" is fol-
nal pizzicato notes
and it seemed sac-
ud.
a heart-warming concerned followed
s, orchestra, con-
nd audience part-l shouts of en-the Shed and an-Tanglewood had

CATSKILL, N. Y.
MAIL

AUG 16 1954

MUSIC

Tanglewood On Parade

Do you care for Super Sunds with your Salome? Gillette Blue Blades with your Bizet? Pabst Blue Ribbon with your Ravel?

Few people realize it, but these unusual combinations were available at the once-a-year musical free-for-all commonly referred to as "Tanglewood On Parade." This event must really be seen and heard to be believed. It's uncanny; it's fun.

ach summer (it's over now: Requiescat in pace), the combined forces of all the human dynamcs at the Berkshire Music Center are rolled into a monster of a musical steamroller and for a slight admission fee, one is given the opportunity of being crushed by fanfares, lawn parties, door prizes, waltzing on spacious lawns and for extra good measure, to be sure that the officials have catered to every taste, a jam session is thrown in to boot. Bl late evening (or early morning) everyone is tired and attempts to go home. The only thing that could possibly bring out a larger crowd would be the promise that Dr. Einstein was being launched in an experimental rocket (from atop the Music Shed, no doubt) for a trial flight to Pluto. It's a program for which people must save their energy, for if one makes the rounds of everything, the chances are slim that he will have the stamina to climb in his car (buried in a sea of Cadillacs) and drive home.

Don't get me wrong. "Tanglewood On Parade" is fun, and in addition, it has behind it, a worthy purpose. The proceeds go to the Berkshire Music Center, the music Center, the music school under the supervision of the Boston Symphony Orchestra where young and aspiring musicians come to better themselves and gain the experience of working with seasoned performers. The result of Friday's jamboree waes $20,000 in the jackpot for this worthwhile purpose.

The program included both the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops. Charles Munch did not conduct. He left things to Thomas Schippers and Arthur Fiedler, and from all outward appearances, he seemed to be having a whopping good time in his box seat. Whether or not he tapped his foot to the hodge-podge of television commercials, or whether he was inspired by a whoop-de-doo of a transcription of Bach's "Little" G minor Fugue, could not be ascertained.

If you haven't experienced a "Tanglewood On Parade," by all means try it. A word of advice: start saving your energy for next summer. You'll need it. Who knows what evil (?) lurks in the minds of men? Only the Shadow knows, and he ain't telling til next summer.

Oh yes, the Bizet Symphony in C Major and the final scene from Salome, with Brenda Lewis singing the role of Salome, were performed by the Boston Symphony. Arthur Fiedler and the oBston Pops provided the lighter music with plenty of drum rolls and cymbal crashes.

Everyone seemed to be having the time of their lives. I guess they did!

Clarence R. Warrington, Jr.

BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE

AUG 15 1954

Berkshire Festival Ends

But one concert remains in the 1954 Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, in Lenox. This afternoon at 2:30 Charles Munch will conduct the orchestra, in the Music Shed, in the Berlioz Requiem. The soloist will be David Poleri, tenor. The Festival Chorus of 200 voices, trained by Hugh Ross and James Aliferis, will be augmented by the Springfield Chorus of 50 voices and four brass bands.

BROCKTON, MASS.
ENTERPRISE & TIMES

AUG 16 1954

TANGLEWOOD ATTENDANCE

LENOX. — (AP) — Fully 135,775 persons attended the six-week Berkshire Music Festival, 16,000 more than last year's record turnout, Tanglewood officials announced.

LEWISTON, ME.
JOURNAL

AUG 16 1954

er injuries.

135,775 Persons Attend Berkshire Music Festival

LENOX, Mass. (AP)—Fully 135,775 persons attended the six week Berkshire Music Festival, 16,000 more than last year's record turnout, Tanglewood officials announced.

PORTLAND, ME.
EXPRESS

AUG 16 1954

135,775 Attend Music Festival

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — Fully 135,775 persons attended the six-week Berkshire Music Festival, 16,000 more than last year's record turnout, Tanglewood officials announced.

The final concert yesterday by the Boston Symphony Orchestra attracted 8,950 despite steady rain.

Berkshire Festival: N. Y. Journal-American 8/16/54

Superb Performance

Berlioz's 'Requiem' Spellbinds Audience

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug., 16.—Berlioz's "Requiem" logically culminated this year's Berkshire Festival in a singularly moving performance by Charles Munch, the Boston Symphony and Festival chorus in the music shed yesterday afternoon. Damp wether cut the crowd to 8,950 people. The performance was dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

The spirit of dedication undoubtedly inspired Munch. The moments of lamentation in the opening "Requiem" and the 'Rex Tremendae," for instance, carried a depth of feeling quite searching. Elsewhere during the performance this aspect dominated.

And no moment was more perfectly timed than the very closing measures of the "Agnus Dei."

They ended the performance perfectly, as the audience's silence indicated.

Approaching the "Requiem" thus profoundly tempered the pages dominated by sheer effective writing. This time the "Tuba Mirum," with all its added brass creating reverberations multitudinous, acquired meaning in continuity and did not stand out too violently. It led naturally to the "Lacrymosa" three movements later.

Daring Offering

The "Offertorium" caught attention not only for the beauty of this particular movement but for the care with which Munch molded the performance of it. David Poleri sang the tenor solo of the "Sanctus" in good voice and in touching realization of its content, while the rosannas of the chorus came in striking contrast.

What appears daring in the "Requiem" today may still be the feats of orchestration so important over a century ago, but the masterly planning of the work as a whole, carries its own expression of original genius. Insomuch as Munch drew attention to this side, he made a distinctive contribution in this performance.

Though the chorus numbered 250, supplemented as it was by the Springfield (Mass.) orchestra chorus, the work needs greater vocal eloquence than this "small" group could give.

It had been admirably prepared by Hugh Ross and James Aliferis. The singing of the sopranos in certain pianissimo passages was notable for tonal quality. The men singers were insufficient in number for their voices to give the proper amount of weight.

Munch also conducted the Saturday night concert which drew an audience of 10,400 people. The program consisted of Brahms' tragic overture, Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin," Piston's fourth symphony, and Saint-Saens' third symphony with E. Power Biggs at the organ.

The Piston aroused interest because the composer has written more of himself into this music than in his earlier symphonies. The Saint-Saens is fast becoming a Munch warhorse.

BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD

AUG 15 1954

Brilliant Tanglewood Concerts End Record-Breaking Season

By RUDOLPH ELIE

TANGLEWOOD, Aug. 14 — If the recent charges by a little old lady who complained there was too much romancing during the concerts on the be-blanketed lawns of this stately green alfresco musical arena caused some little flurry of excitement at the Berkshire Festival headquarters recently, it quite failed to overpower the fact that this 20th anniversary season will end up tomorrow afternoon with a $350,000 box office contributed by nearly 150,000 visitors from practically everywhere. For it is now clear that this Festival is a prodigious attraction on a nation-wide scale, and certainly the largest and most important musical festival in America.

The little controversy on manners and customs, incidentally, came about quite by contrivance. For it appears that the author of the charges, an 83-year-old Lenox resident, wrote a letter to the selectmen complaining that the summer people walking about the streets of her town were unsuitably dressed. A press service called her for further comment, and managed to get her going on the subject of music lovers who, with blankets stretched out under the stars before the music shed, seemed to be responding to the romantic situation more than she deemed proper..

In view of the fact that the letter-writer invariably occupies a box, it is not generally known how she researched the situation, but a hasty survey by a picked squad of monitors chosen for their ability to see in the dark revealed that the reclining music lovers were the soul of discretion.

Indeed, since they were all wraapped up in blankets—the weather here having been somewhat immoderately cool — the monitors' considered opinion was that everyone was asleep, and that it was all a tempest in a timpanum.

NOVEL SCHEME

The problem of suitable garb, however, has always gnawed away at Tanglewood officials, who some years ago hit upon the novel scheme of supplying the bare-legged (male or female) with wellow wrap-around skirts at the gate.

This was greeted with such good natured aplomb by the visitors that it is now standard procedure, resulting, for the men at least, in much comic relief. Since the skirts were limited to several score and the visitors often exceeded several thousand, bar legs are still to be seen and, some cases for that matter, admired.

As for the blanket brigade the management takes the unofficial view that music and romance have been associated sinc Babylon, that only those dispose to such entertainment bring thei blankets, and that old ladies ar more properly advised to sit i their boxes and not roam tripping over people who got there first

As for more solemn matters, i may be reported that the traditional "Tanglewood on Parade,' an event designed to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, was for once blessed with perfect outdoor weather. By six o'clock 5,000 people from (to judge by a quick survey of the parking area) 28 states and Hawaii, were strolling on the overpoweringly green lawns, picnicking under the mugo pines, and dropping in on the several informal musical events offered on the occasion.

POPS ORCHESTRA

These consisted of an opera (Gounod's "The Physician in Spite of Himself"), a fanfare and a simultaneous demonstration of the orchestra, opera, chamber music and composition departments of the Center.

All this was followed by a picnic supper and at 8:15, the Gala concert featuring, for the first time at Tanglewood, Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops orchestra, who triumphed beyond imagining.

While Charles Munch occupied a box in the audience, the famed Pops maestro lifted the eaves of the shed [illegible] inches with such familiar Pops numbers as "Stars and Stripes Forever," Ravel's "Bolero," the comical parody of TV commercials that has rocked Symphony Hall all season, and "Look Sharp—Be Sharp," not to mention a slate of encores.

If an audience—for the evening event numbering 10,500 — has been more elevated by the music at these Fesivals, it has certainly never been more entertained and amused than by this uproarious finale.

During the intermission, Dr. Lewis Perry, honorary chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, presented Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith with a leather scroll recognizing her as the leader of the original Festival enterprise here 20 years ago.

It was she who arranged for the Boston Symphony to make Tanglewood, already famous as the summer home of Nathaniel Hawthorne, its summer headquarters. The ensuing years have seen it grow from a small, more or less social series of a few selected events, to a musical festival of international significance offering more than 50 individual concerts.

MANAGER RETIRING

Regrettably enough, the man who — after Koussevitzky — was most responsible for the astonishing growth of the festival, this year retires as manager of the Boston Symphony and of the Berkshire Festival.

He is George E. Judd, who after 40 years of guiding the destinies of the orchestra, during which it completed an immensely successful tour of Europe and anothed of the United States, retires to his new farm at Cannonsville, N. Y., to devote his time to floriculture.

Taking his place, as of Sept. 1, is his former assistant, Thomas D. Perry, Jr., a young man who has long since established himself in an organization that now operates on an overall budget of a million and a half dollars a year, almost half as much more as that maintained by the New York Philharmonic and twice as much as that of any other orchestra in the world.

Except for the unruly weather, which has clouded much of the festival but hasn't prevented an all-time record attendance, the season has been musically brilliant. Thematically it has honored the 150th anniversary of Hector Berlioz, many of whose largest works have been performed during the season. The final work of the season, Berlioz's monumental "Requiem," which requires a much augmented orchestra, a chorus, and soloists as well as four brass bands posted in each corner of the shed, will be given tomorrow afternoon to conclude the festival. At this time, also, the Berkshire Music Center, composed of 375 students, disbands.

As for Tanglewood on Parade" itself, once the door prizes were distributed and the waltzing on the lawn ended, it came to a vivid conclusion with a jam session on the porch of the main house put on by jazz pianist Joe Bushkin, who thereby purged himself of the long-hair routine he has been undergoing at the center as a student. The little old lady who complained about the mores of the Tanglewood audiences could not be reached for comment on this bit of sacrilege, but another letter to the selectmen is expected presently.

[64]

Volume 63—No. 89 Berkshire Eagle Pittsfield, Massachusetts, Monday, August 16, 1954.

GOP Would Ban Red Part

Plouffe

THE FINALE of the 1954 Berkshire Festival season at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon brought 8,950 people to the Music Shed, despite threatening weather, as a climax to the six-week event attended by record-breaking crowds totaling 135,775. For the conclusion of the Festival season Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the massive "Requiem" by Hector Berlioz in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the BSO for 25 years.

All Records At Festival Shattered

135,000 Attend 24 Concerts—Munch Off to Paris

TANGLEWOOD — The six-week season at the Berkshire Music Festival, an "experiment" this year, was termed a success today by Boston Symphony Orchestra officials, who came up with figures to prove their case. The Festival, expanded from three weeks, had its greatest attendance and largest receipts in history.

Yesterday afternoon's concluding concert, in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the BSO for more than 25 years, drew 8,950 to Tanglewood, despite threatening weather, bringing the total for the season to 135,775 and total paid admissions of $330,033, compared to 117,950 and $311,600 a year ago.

Judd, Munch Pleased

Gratification at the new attendance records for the orchestra's concerts and its school demonstrations was expressed by BSO Manager George E. Judd, who is retiring after 40 years with the Boston Symphony.

"Music lovers have shown their increasing awareness of the Berkshire Festival's accessibility and have shown they welcome the Charles Munch plan inaugurated this summer to increase the number of concerts within the Festival's six-week scope."

Mr. Munch was also pleased with the results of the new plan. In spite of one of the most ambitious seasons ever undertaken at Tanglewood, Mr. Munch did not appear to be over-tired at the conclusion of yesterday's concert. Before leaving by car for Boston he visited in the Green Room at the side of the Shed with close friends and BSO officials, while hundreds of his fans gathered outside to give him a rousing ovation as his automobile drove him from the grounds. He went by plane today to New York where he boarded an Air France plane, bound for his home in Paris, where he will remain with his family until he leaves for Scotland to conduct at the Edinburgh Festival.

129,925 in Shed

The 12 concerts in the Music Shed this summer attracted 129,925 persons while the 12 chamber music and chamber orchestra concerts in the theater-concert hall drew 25,400.

Paid admissions to the six Saturday morning public rehearsals of the BSO for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund totaled $11,274.25. Total attendance at the rehearsals was 12,510.

Crowds totaling 30,800 attended the 30 performances of the student concerts, according to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. The total Friends' membership reached 5,141 this year and contributions from the members totaled $23,545.71.

BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD

AUG 16 1954

Tanglewood Sets Turnout Record

LENOX, Aug. 15 (AP) — Tanglewood officials today reported that 135,775 persons attended the six-week Berkshire Music Festival, 16,000 more than last year's record turnout.

Today's final concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra attracted 8,950 persons, despite steady rain.

Conductor Charles Muench dedicated the concert as a memorial to his predecessor, the late Serge Koussevitzky, longtime Boston Symphony conductor, who founded the Berkshire Music Center, the school connected with Tanglewood.

A feature of the program was Berlioz's requiem with a chorus of 204 voices.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
POST (Bx.-Home Ed.)

AUG 16 1954

Bronxite at Tanglewood

A teacher of music in Bronx junior high schools, Barry Volkman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Volkman, 1065 Jerome Av., is shown conducting at the Berkshire Music Center during the Tanglewood, Mass., musical festival.

PAGE 6

Tanglewood Festival Closes With Tribute To Koussevitzky

Berlioz Mass For Dead Performed By Munch And Orchestra! Poleri Is Soloist

By JULIAN SEAMAN
Blade Music Editor

TANGLEWOOD, Mass., Aug. 16—They can never leave off saluting Serge Koussevitzky here, and so Charles Munch closed the present Berkshire Music Festival here yesterday with a funeral matinee, Berlioz's "Grand' Mass for the Dead." The program whispered a footnote: "In memory of Serge Koussevitzky."

The late conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra has been dead long enough to have tempered these recurrent solemnities. The ghost still walks, however, though I am inclined to think a more wholesome realization of present problems would tend to establish the project more firmly upon the financial hillside.

Let us return, however, to the aforesaid Requiem, a performance of immensity, deep humility and artistic perfection, even superior, it seemed to me, to that of two years ago in the some locale. A painstaking rehearsal in the shed on Saturday morning gave one a portent of the actual performance.

Poleri Is Soloist

Hugh Ross and James Aliferis had prepared the Festival Chorus. The four extra brass choirs demanded by the gigantic score were seated in the orchestra and on either side of the huge stage. David Poleri, tenor of the City Center and other opera companies, was the soloist.

Mr. Poleri still impresses me as a gifted young artist of uncertain technique. The wisdom of casting an operatic tenor in this part is apparent, however, for the music requires just such an elan and projection as the stage would dictate. His success was overwhelming.

Recollections of Saturday night left us one fond memory of Mr. Munch and the orchestra, an expression of Walter Piston's Fourth Symphony. The Munch windmill drive seemed the right metier for Mr. Piston's muscular music.

Receive Ovation

This score is abstemious, yet astir with the strength and audacity of musical youth. Mr. Piston on the other hand has been at Harvard these 20 years and more and no longer can be called young. Music is full of such paradoxes.

An ovation rewarded Mr. Munch and the orchestra. Mr. Piston was called up to wear chaplets of his own.

Brahms began this program, a percussive and vulgar reading of the "Tragic Overture," followed by the Ravel suite, "Le Tombeau de Couperin." This is Ravel's homage to the classic mode. Really, it is orchestral chamber music.

Mr. Munch imparted weight without poetry, a literal statement of black and white. One felt exasperation and the annoyance of having missed the point of an engrossing discourse.

E. Power Biggs was the organist in Saint-Saens third symphony (Opus 78.C minor), a contrivance of no great genius, captivating enough in the causal ear to warrant substantial applause.

Toledo Blade
August 16, 1954

TIGHT BINDING

HARTFORD, CONN.
COURANT

AUG 16 1954

Jature Aids erlioz At anglewood

Berkshire Festival Closes With Munch Directing Requiem

ANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., 15 — The elements gave ioz an assist today when his uiem was performed as the ng event of the Berkshire c Festival.

might have been a warm, at, teeming afternoon, fit er for a New England Transentalist. Instead, the leaden were the color of a paller's gloves, and mists hung pallid crepe over the surding hills. Nature, ever the nticist, wept over the event.

ient Stunning Presentation

wever, there was nothing in erformance for her to weep . Charles Munch led the n Symphony and the festival s in his usual stunning preson of this remarkable grand e des morts. "Usual," betwo or three seasons ago, st such a lugubrious afteras this, he had already ined his ideas of Berlioz's Ren, and had also brought it kind of performance, musind emotional, that makes the crawl.

ong all the familiar res by great composers, Beris, all points considered, the est. It combines the most tive and at the same time, nost appropriate music, has leur, its temper is entirely ous without being pietistic, n the other hand operatic. despite all the flamboyant es that fill the festival shed wall to wall, the earth ng clamor, still, somehow, Requiem is in its way elein mien, and seizing in genness. No one will deny that oz is a romanticist, but the s of this score are out of the al zealousness and imaginaof the Middle Ages. They e with the apocalyptic vision has been the vision of Rem from the beginning.

t, in the midst of all that is endous and other - worldly his requiem. Berlioz has not quished a humanity and tenness that are mortal. Berlioz not forget for whom the bell . No matter how huge and enly are some aspects of service for the dead, it is the occasion for the small of some soul. Except where liturgy emphasizes other s. Berlioz always remembers

ormance On Enormous Scale

day's performance was, of se, on the same enormous as it was at Tanglewood iously. In addition to extra choirs flanking both ends of stage, there are still other of brass players back bethese, on special platforms. as they play toward each from both sides of the shed, is a remarkable reverberauntil the tuba mirum is inno mean approximation of ast trump. Within the stone vaulted confines of a catheof course, the effect is terng and unearthly.

spite the striking effectivemusical and emotional, of Munch's presentation of Ber Requiem, it is not however ll-out affair. He manages to it within the confines of a ortionate restraint, instead of ng it into mad romantic exment. It is this ability to out the fullness of Berlioz, ut allowing, or encouraging to go to pieces, that makes Munch so ideal an interpreter works. The late great Serge sevitzky — incidentally, y's performance of the Ren was in his memory—found same, saving grace for aikowsky. The discernment esent a composer at his best only is a great and humane gift.

Big Chorus Creditable

The big chorus of men's and women's voices had been prepared by Hugh Ross and James Alleris. Everything considered — the fact that not too many of them are professional singers, the problems inherent in massive choruses anyhow, the difficulty of the work — the performance of the chorus was quite creditable. Compared to the Boston Symphony, of course it is a raw instrument, in precision and tonally. It has the tendency of all big choruses, to get to eventual plodding, and of all non-professional bodies, which is to be note-bound. On the other hand, it was a sound as well as resounding achievement, and a great experience for the singers as well as for much of the audience.

The orchestra played with special intensity throughout the concert. Sometimes they were a little obscured by the chorus, and the melange of so many elements, choral and extra brass, did not make for complete polish. But that is the trouble with these compositions of outsize dimension, and you have to take it with the over-all effect, which on this occasion was deeply moving and vividly striking.

David Poleri was the tenor soloist for the Sanctus, a man with a fine voice, a fine lyricism and he gave a commanding performance.

Attendance, Receipts Increase

And now, from the sublime to the mundane, you might be interested in these figures compiled on the 1954, 17th Berkshire Music Festival. Total attendance at the 24 festival concerts was 135,775, as opposed to 117,950 a year ago. And total receipts were $281,674.75.

Just drop it in this satchel, I'll take it with me.

T. H. P.

WORCESTER, MASS.
GAZETTE

AUG 16 1954

135,775 Attend Concerts

LENOX, Aug. 16 (AP)—Fully 135,775 persons attended the six-week Berkshire Music Festival, 16,000 more than last year's record turnout, Tanglewood officials announced.

The final concert Sunday by the Boston Symphony Orchestra attracted 8950 despite steady rain.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-JOURNAL

AUG 16 1954

MASTERLY CONDUCTORSHIP. Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony and the Berkshire Music Festival in "Tanglewood," pictured in rehearsal. The Berlioz Requiem was a fitting musical climax to a highly successful season.

—SEASON CLOSES—

'Tanglewood' Rings With Great Music In The Shed

LENOX—The 17th season of the Berkshire Music Festival in "Tanglewood" closed here yesterday afternoon with 8,950 listeners for the Berlioz Requiem under the masterly direction of Charles Munch. Great music finely wrought by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with the Berkshire Festival Chorus of 200, assisted by members of the Springfield Symphony Orchestra, (four brass bands). Total attendance for the season which started early in July was 135,775.

32—Waterbury American, M

Tanglewood Season Breaks All Records

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 16 — The Berkshire Festival, which concluded here at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon with the performance of Berlioz' "Requiem" in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, piled up new records for attendance in all branches of its varied activities.

More than 140,000 persons, an increase of 33,000 over the record of last year, attended the 12 concerts in the Music Shed which this year were spread over a six-week period. Tanglewood - on - Parade on Friday night set an all - time record for that activity with 10,050. Six public rehearsals on Saturday mornings for the benefit of the musician's pension fund drew 12,511. The 30 student demonstrations during the summer season drew 33,000 and the Bach-Mozart concerts in the Music Hall drew additional throngs to bring the grand total for all activities close to 235,000.

Saturday evening's concert, which brought out 10,400, presented an interesting program of Brahms' "Tragic Overture", Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin" and Piston's "Symphony No. 4". Under Charles Munch the orchestra gave a spirited performance and Walter Piston, the composer, was called to the platform to receive the plaudits of the enthusiastic audience. But it was the after-intermission performance of Saint-Saens "Symphony No. 3" which thrilled the audience. Mr. Munch did a splendid bit of conducting here and had his orchestra play so that the music seemed to be singing itself. E. Power Biggs appeared at the organ. When the concert was over Mr. Munch was called back again and again. His conducting in this part of the program and the Boston's playing of it made everyone realize that this was another of those specials to which the audiences have been treated in this summer of fine concerts.

The rain and mist yesterday shrank the audience to a mere 9,000 but it did not dampen the enthusiasm of those who heard the memorial concert with David Poleri as tenor soloist and the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and James Aliferis.

As the last notes faded away and the last car left the grounds of Tanglewood, saying "farewell" for another year to programs and performers who had brought so much pleasure to more than a quarter of a million music-lovers from all this country and many others as well, plans for next year's performances of The Berkshire Music Festival here on the tree-shaded lawns of this beautiful estate were under way. The Berkshire Festival is an enduring part of America's cultural life and all who love it must join in saying with the Latin poet, "Ave atque vale" — "Hail and Farewell!"

S. M.

Music Berkshire Eagle 8/16/54 Mon.

Season's Tanglewood Finale Is Memorial to Koussevitzky

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FINAL CONCERT of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon was devoted to the "Requiem" of Hector Berlioz, the sesquicentennial anniversary of whose birth was observed last year by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony orchestra in Symphony Hall and whose major and some less important works have been repeated in this summer's programs.

One of the most touching details of an afternoon full of exhilarating incidents was Munch's gallant and fine gesture of escorting the orchestra's two retiring members, violinist Leon Gorodetzky and violist Georges Fourel, to the front of the stage for a final appreciative moment.

The performance of the "Requiem" was dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky. Berlioz, in his "Memoires" uses a quotation from Shakespeare's "Macbeth" as an envoy: "Life's but . . . a poor player that struts and frets his hour . . . and then is heard no more." Yesterday afternoon exactly belied that sentiment in the case both of the composer who met with such disappointment in his lifetime and the conductor who left so much evidence of his foresight and such a memorial even as the institution which could reproduce the great music.

* * *

BERLIOZ, no matter what the auspices of his commission, wrote for posterity. Great things must have an element of ageless simplicity. The "Requiem" starts with an unaffected ascending scale in the violas which the discerning composer reinforced with bassoons with remarkable profit. He used the same insight later when the male chorus enters and he adds extra substance to their voices with French horns. The unique and great moment in the "Tuba Mirum" where the four brass choirs, disposed in more advantageous locations yesterday than at the performance of three seasons ago, raise their majestic tone in glorious concord, made everyone's blood tingle in his veins. And then, again, Berlioz' genius becomes apparent when the tremendous volume ceases, and, in the Shed with its wonderful acoustics, there is no reverberation, and the thread is carried on in a soft tremolo in the celli.

The excitement was as great in the orchestra as among the audience. The tympanist, reanimated, lost the pad from one of his sticks as it struck the drum head. It bounced upward in a wide arc and descended, as the legend has already been established, on the head of each one of the 20 violinists of the first violin section.

Munch gave a remarkably poised performance, and was accorded deeply telling response in both the orchestra and the Festival chorus which had been augmented by members of the Springfield orchestra chorus trained by their conductor, Alexander Leslie. The Festival chorus had been prepared by Hugh Ross and James Aliferis. Their work was most apparent in the a cappella episodes where solidity and balance were excellent. David Poleri's single opportunity as tenor soloist came in the Sanctus. It was ideally suited to his voice and he sang with impressive conviction and ringing ease.

* * *

SATURDAY EVENING Munch chose a program from many schools and the comparison served to highlight the temper of several epochs. There was the Teutonic Brahms, represented by his Tragic Overture; the French periods of Saint-Saens and Ravel, whose third symphony, in C minor, Opus 78, and "Le Tombeau de Couperin" respectively were played; and the American, by the Walter Piston fourth symphony.

Brahms and Saint-Saens were contemporaries but interest in the Frenchman has not been maintained, yet his symphony was not only worth playing but does not deserve the oblivion to which it seems to be headed. It uses an immense orchestra with organ, played Saturday by E. Power Biggs, and in several instances Saint-Saens molds a congeries of orchestral tones, such as the violin and cello aria in the lowest registers over the sustaining bass of the organ, which are deeply impressive and in which the orchestra played with luscious tone.

Yet, although they were played in reverse order, one could not fail to set beside the Saint-Saens the delicate and lace-like imaginative fantasy of Ravel's suite. Munch asked oboe Ralph Gomberg to stand to take a bow at the conclusion of the performance and, while he well deserved it, the whole orchestra might as well have taken individual bows, for it was a virtuoso performance in its sensitive playing.

* * *

PISTON was in the audience and Munch called him forward for all of the many recalls the audience seemed eager to award the composer and the executants. This symphony was written only three years ago. One senses easy craftsmanship throughout but more telling and lasting marks are not easyily noted. The apt use of instruments is one of Piston's conspicuous attributes. Phrases and figures are indisputably appropriate and right where he places them and he uses the whole wide gamut of the orchestral resources unerringly.

One of our music's greatest virtues is its power to afford pleasure even when the compositions are most familiar. The ability of artists vividly to revive emotions make the performance heard latest the most enjoyable. It is too close at this point to gauge the place in the Berkshire Festivals' history of this one just now completed, but many will contend, and be well fortified to hold their ground that this was one of the great ones.

FORWARD
A JEWISH DAILY

Wednesday, August 18, 1954

די באַרימטע זומער־קאָנצערטען אין די שעהנע בּוירקשיר בּערג

צענדליגער טויזענטער מענשען קומען פון אַלע טיילען פון לאַנד און פון אויסלאַנד. — אידישע בחורים און מיידלעך קריגען די ערשטע פּרייזען פאַר זינגען. — חזנ'ס זוהן פירט־אָן מיט אַ כאָר פון 150 שטימען.

אַ בריף פון טענגלוואוד, ספּעציעל צום „פאָרווערטס"

פון שלום סעקונדאַ

טענגלוואוד, מאַסס. — נישט קוקענדיג אויף דעם וואָס דער היינטיגער סעזאָן אין טענגלוואוד איז פאַרלענגערט געוואָרען, דאָך איז דער באַזוך פון יעדען קאָנצערט, אין דורכשניט, געווען אַ גרעסערער. די צאָל סטודענטען וואָס קומען יעדען מאָל פון דער גאַנצער וועלט איז אויך געווען באַדייטענד גרעסער ווי וועלכען ס'איז יאָר ביז איצט. אַ גרויסע איבערראַשונג איז אויך געווען דער באַזוך פון הונדערטער קינדער יעדען טאָג, וואָס זיינען געקומען באַגלייט פון זייערע קאָונסילאָרס, מיט טשאַרטער באַסעס פון די זומער־קעמפּס וואָס געפינען זיך אין דער געגענט. פון די לאַיסענס־פּלעיטס אויף די טויזענטער אויטאָמאָבילען אויף דעם ריזיגען „פּאַרקינג לאָט" האָט מען געקענט זעהן אויטאָמאָבילען פון כמעט יעדען שטאַט פון די פאַראייניגטע שטאַטען.

טענגלוואוד איז איצט נישט נאָר דער וויכטיגסטער מוזיקאַלישער זומער צענטער אין אַמעריקע, נאָר אפשר אין דער גאַנצער וועלט. עס איז אויך אינטערעסאַנט צו באַמערקען, ווען מען געהט אַרום דעם פּראַכטפולען „לאָאָן" אויף וועלכן די באַזוכער זיצען אָדער ליגען זיך באַקוועם, קען מען הערען אַ צאָל שפּראַכען אויסער ענגליש אָדער אידיש, וואָס וואָלט געווען צו ערוואַרטען. מען הערט אויך פראַנצויזיש, איטאַליעניש, דייטש, רוסיש, פּויליש און אויך אַנדערע שפּראַכען, וועלכע איך האָב נים פאַרשטאַנען.

איך בין געווען איינער פון די צושויער פיר וויק־ענדס אין משך פון דעם זעקס־וואָכיגען סעזאָן.

לכבוד דעם 150טען יאָר זייט העקטאָר בערליאָז איז געבוירען געוואָרען האָט מען געקענט הערען כמעט אויף יעדער פּראָגראַם כאָטש איין וויכטיגע קאָמפּאָזיציע פון דעם באַרימטען פראַנצויזישען קאָמפּאָזיטאָר. זיינע וויכטיגסטע קאָמפּאָזיציעס וואָס זיינען אויפגעפירט געוואָרען, זיינען געווען די, וואָס מען הערט זעלטען: „דאַמנעישאַן אָוו פאַוסט", די רעליגיעזע „טעדעאום" און זיין „רעקוויעם". וואָס, אויב מיין זכרון דינט מיר גוט, איז אין ניו יאָרק קיינמאָל נים געהערט געוואָרען.

די מוזיקאַלישע פאָדערונגען פון בערליאָז'ס „רעקוויעם" זיינען פון אַזאַ הויכער שטופע, אַז עס איז פינאַנציעל כמעט אוממעגליך צו געבען אַזאַ אונטערנעמונג אפילו אין אַזאַ גרויסען קאָנצערט־זאַל ווי קאַרנעגי האָל.

אויסער דעם באָסטאָן סימפאָני אָרקעסטער, וואָס באַשטעהט פון 104 מוזיקער, דיריגירט פון שאַרל מינש, זיינען באַנוצט געוואָרען צוויי בראַס בענדס אין צוויי פאַרשידענע טיילען פון זאַל, וואָס באַשטעהט פון אַ גרופּע פון 36 מוזיקער. צו די אַלע מוזיקער דאַרף מען צורעכענען דעם כאָר פון 250 שטימען און אַ טענאָר סאָליסט. אין דעם פאַל דער אַנגעזעהענער טענאָר פון סיטי סענטער אָפּערע, דייוויד פּאָלערי. די פינאַנציעלע אויסגאַבע דערגרייכט אַזאַ פאַנטאַסטישען ציפער, אַז די גרעסטע איינגאַמע פון אַ קאָנצערט, אפילו מיט געהעכערטע פּרייזען, קען דאָס נים באַצאָלען. טענגלוואוד קען זיך דאָס ערלויבען, ערשטענס, ווייל ביי אַ קאָנצערט אין „שעד" קען מען ערוואַרטען איבער 10,000 באַזוכער, און צווייטענס, ווייל דער כאָר און דער גרעסטער טייל פון די צוויי בענדס באַשטעהען פון די סטודענטען וואָס קומען דאָרט שטודירען און דאַנקען גאָט וואָס זיי האָבען אַ געלעגענהייט אַנטייל צו נעמען אין אַזאַ קאָנצערט, ספּעציעל אונטער דער מוזיקאַלישער דירעקציע פון דעם פראַנצויזישען מייסטער־דיריגענט, און איצטיגער שטענדיגער מוזיקאַלישער לייטער פון דעם באָסטאָן סימפאָני אָרקעסטער, שאַרל מינש.

די גרויסע שמחה, וואָס רופט זיך „טענגלוואוד אַן פּאַרעיד", האָט זיך אָנגעהויבען פרייטאָג, דעם 13טען אויגוסט — דער פעסטיוואַל לכבוד דעם לעצטען וויק־ענד פון סעזאָן. עס האָט זיך אָנגעהויבען באַלד נאָך מיטאָג און האָט אָנגעהאַלטען ביז שפּעט אין דער נאַכט, ווען מען האָט מכבד געווען די געסט מיט טאַנץ־מוזיק, און יונגוואַרג האָט זיך אַ לאָז־געטאָן אויף דעם גרויסען, ברייטען פעלד צו כאַפּען אַ טענצעל.

אין משך פון טאָג זיינען פאָרגעקומען אַהן אַ צאָל מוזיקאַלישע אַקטיוויטעטען: אָפּערע, קאַמער־מוזיק, אַ סימפאָנישער קאָנצערט געשפּילט פון די תלמידים און דיריגירט פון איינינע סטודענטען; דער טענגלוואוד כאָר האָט זיך אויך אויסגעצייכענט אין אַ קאָנצערט פון כאָראַלער מוזיק, אויך דיריגירט פון סטודענטען, צווישען וועלכע עס איז אויפגעטראָטען דער יונגער „מאַטיע" גאָלד, דער גראַטענער זוהן פון אונזער איינענעם לעאָן גאָלד, וועלכער איז איצט אַ אָנגעזעהענער חזן אין באָסטאָן. דער יונגער גאָלד האָט דיריגירט מיט טעמפּעראַמענט און אַרויסגעוויזען באַזונדערע פעהיגקייטען אין באַלאַנסירען די שטימען פון כאָר.

דער סימפאָנישער קאָנצערט פון אָוונט איז געווען איינגעטיילט אין צוויי טיילען: דער ערשטער — דיריגירט פון טאָמאַס שיפּער, מיט ברענדאַ לואיס, די טאַלאַנטירטע סאָפּראַנאָ פון דער מעטראָפּאָליטען אָפּעראַ קאָמפּאַני און ניט־ווייניגער טאַלאַנטירטע שוישפּילערין. דער צווייטער טייל איז איבערגענומען געוואָרען פון אַרטור פידלער, דער דיריגענט פון די באָסטאָן „פּאָפּס". דאָס איז געווען אַ דורכשניטליכער טייל פון אַ באָסטאָן „פּאָפּ" קאָנצערט, ביי וועלכען דער עולם האָט זיך אַמוזירט און הנאה געהאַט.

די אינטערעסאַנטסטע קאָמפּאָזיציעס זיינען געווען „טי־ווי־אַנאַ", אַ סאַטירע אויף די טעלעוויזיע „קאָמוירשעלס". דער עולם האָט געלאַכט פון אַט דער שפּאַסיגער קאָמפּאָזיציע, פּונקט ווי ביי אַ קאָמעדיע. די סאַטירע איז אַראַנזשירט געוואָרען פון היימאַן. אַ צווייטע קאָמפּאָזיציע, וואָס האָט אַרויסגערופען נאָך מער האַרציגע געלעכטערס, איז געווען די גוט־באַקאַנטע „גלאָו וואָרם". זעלטען ווען איך האָב געהערט אַ קאָמיקער אַרויסרופען אַזוי פיל הילכיגע געלעכטערס פון די בעסטע וויצען, ווי אַרטור פידלער מיט דעם באָסטאָן סימפאָני אָרקעסטער האָבען עס באַוויזען מיט אַ קוריאָזער באַאַרבייטונג אויף דעם גוט־באַקאַנטען ניגון, וואָס איז שוין אפילו אַדאָפּטירט געוואָרען פאַר אַן ענגלישער פּאָפּולערער ליד פון אַ בראַזיליער קאָמפּאָזיטאָר.

דער גאַנצער טאָג שבת איז געווען געווידמעט צו אָרקעסטער רעפּעטיציעס פאַר דעם זונטאָגדיגען קאָנצערט פון העקטאָר בערליאָז'ס „רעקוויעם", ווי אויך צו קאָנצערטען מכל המינים. בייטאָג איז אויך געגעבען געוואָרען אַ סימפאָנישער קאָנצערט פון די סטודענטען מיט זייערע אייגענע דיריגענטען. ביי דעם קאָנצערט זיינען אַנאָנסירט געוואָרען די געווינער פון די ערשטע פּרייזען פאַר קאָמפּאָזיציע, אינסטרומענטאַליסטען, ווי אויך דיריגענטען. די גרעסטע צאָל פון די געווינער איז באַשטאַנען פון אידישע בחורים און מיידלעך.

דער וויכטיגסטער קאָנצערט איז פאָרגעקומען זונטאָג, דעם 15טען אויגוסט, ווען שאַרל מינש האָט אויפגעפירט די „רעקוויעם" פון העקטאָר בערליאָז. די גליקליכע ביוואוינער פון דעם קאָנצערט וועלען דעם געוויס קיינמאָל נים פאַרגעסען. די מוזיק איז נים נאָר רעליגיעז אין כאַראַקטער און דירעקט קינסטלעריש אויס דעם שווידער פון טויט, נאָר מאָלט אויך מיט די שאַרפסטע און קאָלירפולסטע מוזיקאַלישע פאַרבען די גאַנצע דראַמע פון מענשליכען לעבען און קאַמף. אין געוויסע מאָמענטען דערגרייכט די מוזיק אַזאַ שטופע פון קאָנפליקט און אויפרעגונג, אַז עס האָט ממש פּראָוואָצירט דעם גרויסען עולם צו ספּאָנטאַנע אָוואַציעס פון ענטוזיאַסטישער באַגייסטערונג. בערליאָז'ען קען מען אָנרופען „דער ערפינדער פון מוזיקאַלישע אָרקעסטראַל קאָלירען". ער האָט אין זיין צייט געוואַגט צו באַנוצען די אינסטרומענטען פון אָרקעסטער אויף די רעוואָלוציאָנערסטע אופנים. קיינער פאַר אים האָט אפילו נים געחלום'ט צו עקספּערימענטירען מיט אַזעלכע מוזיקאַלישע מיטלען. ער האָט באַזינגט די אַלע כוחות וואָס האָבען אים געזוכט צו באַקעמפען אין זיין צייט. איצט, 150 יאָר שפּעטער, פייערט די גאַנצע ציוויליזירטע וועלט זיין גרויסען שעפערישען ביישטייער צו דער מוזיקאַלישער וויסענשאַפט און ליטעראַטור.

דייוויד פּאָלעזי, וועלכער האָט די סאָלאָס געזונגען מיט מוזיקאַלישער אינטעליגענץ, באַזיצט אַ טענאָר־שטימע וואָס דינט אים אין אַלע רעדזשיסטערס און האָט אַ וואונדערליכען קאָנטראָל אין אַרויסברענגען ניואַנסען.

שאַרל מינש, דער דיריגענט האָט כשר פאַרדינט די ענטוזיאַסטישע אַפּלאָדיסמענטען און הילכיגע בראַוואָ געשרייען.

דער פּאַרוואָלקענטער הימעל האָט נים אָפּגעשראָקען די טויזענטער ליבהאָבער פון מוזיק, וואָס האָבען נים געקענט געפינען קיין פּלאַץ צו שלאָפען אין דעם נעענטען פון „לענאָקס", וואו טענגלוואוד געפינט זיך. איך האָב גערעדט מיט אַ סך מענשען וואָס האָבען זיך געפונען צימערען 10, 20 און אפילו 30 מייל אַוועק פון „לענאָקס".

די נעכט זיינען געווען קאַלט. אַ סך באַזוכער האָבען מיטגעבראַכט מיט זיך „קאָלדרעס", „בלענקעטס", און האָבען זיך ממש אויסגעבעט אַ געלעגער אויף דעם גראָז און זיך צוגעהערט צו דער מוזיק. אַ סך מענשען, וואָס זיינען געקומען אינדערפרי און געבליבען ביז נאָך דעם קאָנצערט ביי נאַכט, האָבען מיטגעבראַכט עסענוואַרג.

לויט די ציפערען, וואָס איך האָב באַקומען פון דעם „באָקס אָפיס", זיינען די קאָנצערטען אין די דריי טעג באַזוכט געוואָרען פון 30,000 מענשען און האָבען באַצאָלט איינטריטסגעלט אַ סומע פון כמעט $50,000.

Aug 14/54

HIRE GAZETTE, NORTHAMPTON, MASS., SATURDAY, AUGUST

Varied Programs Mark Tanglewood On Parade

Variety is the spice of life and variety was all over the place, all day yesterday in Lenox. Some 10,050 people, the largest audience for the last five years found its way to the Berkshire Music Center's benefit free-for-all, "Tanglewood on Parade."

We missed a considerable amount of all that was to be seen and heard, arriving in the middle of a student opera performed in the very beautiful formal garden, entitled "The Physician in Spite of Himself," a comic buffoonery after Moliere by Charles Gounod, adapted and translated into English by Morton Siegel. The outstanding actor and distinguished voice in this bit of spice was the student baritone, Thomas Stewart. As a woodcutter, who is persuaded that he is an eminent doctor and expected to cure a gentleman's daughter of her inability to talk he was perfectly cast and sang the part with utmost ease, lots of fun and with a full-bodied baritone which left very little to be desired.

Following this, there were three simultaneous performances to choose from in the Shed, the Theatre-Concert Hall and the Chamber Music Hall, of student recitals of opera excerpts, short symphonic works and chamber music which included some student compositions. We attended some of all of these and found them very nicely sung and played.

During the picnic supper hour, the chorus conducted by seven or more students sang a number of madrigals and choruses from the main house porch. The music was well sung, exciting in many instances and very interesting. While the chorus was singing, the lawns in every direction resembled a patchwork quilt of hunger satisfying music-lovers.

The gala concert in the evening was almost like a fiesta in it's gaiety, high spirits and enthusiastic audiences. The concert was divided into two sections each in its own way delectable.

A 25-year-old, Thomas Schippers, conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first half of the program, choosing Bizet's Symphony in C Major, which he read in a crisp, spirited fashion, and the final scene from the Strauss of opera "Salome." Mr. Schippers is a very virile and dynamic conductor, an extremely able one but perhaps lacking the sensitivety and feeling for subtlety which will no doubt come with an increased maturity. The score for Salome is intensely and brilliantly orchestral. The most engagingly colorful "bit of spice of the whole of Tanglewood on Parade was unquestionably Miss Brenda Lewis, soprano, popular star of Broadway, formerly of the Metropolitan and the New York City operas. Miss Lewis is a striking brunette and appeared in a gorgeous gown of orange, dramatically and excitingly co-operative in her moving and eloquent interpretation of the exotic Salome. Miss Lewis was an eyefilling attraction on a Tanglewood stage, but whether Mr. Schippers or the composer Strauss were at fault it would be perhaps unfair to say, the orchestral accompaniment was not in the least sympathetic to what Miss Lewis had to offer vocally. The audience directly in front of the singer were undoubtedly more fortunate than those farther removed, but what was earfilling was not from Miss Lewis except in rare occasions when she was singing at full tilt and the orchestral score did not drown out all her efforts. A microphone would have been in order.

Space does not permit the exhaustive comments that Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra are entitled to in their handling of the second half of the program. From the rousing "Stars and Stripes Forever" march by Sousa with which they opened to the two request numbers, "TViana" and "Look Sharp—Be Sharp," both of which are collections of the tunes used in well-known commercials and brimful of humorous musical effects, the Boston Pops outdid itself.

Mention should also be made of a scroll presentation made to Gertrude Robinson Smith at intermission in behalf of the Boston Symphony Orchestra members, trustees and Charles Munch, musical director of the Berkshire Music Center in honor of the work she did in laying the groundwork which has since developed into the Berkshire Music Center. Also it was announced that the proceeds of "Tanglewood on Parade" which annually are raised for the maintenance of the center, this year amounted to the amazing sum of $23,981.

Elaborate door prizes were awarded by baritone Mac Morgan. The festivities in the shed were followed by dancing with music led by Joe Bushkin.—F.M.R.

YORK, N. Y.
-TELEGRAM & SUN
AUG 16 1954

Music

Festival Ends on Big Note

By ROBERT BAGAR.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 16.—A big-scale work closed the Berkshire Music Festival for 1954. That was the Berlioz "Requiem," given in memory of the late Serge Koussevitzky in the Music Shed yesterday afternoon.

It takes heavy rehearsing to prepare a work as massive as this. Obviously that was done, thanks to the efforts of Charles Munch, who conducted, and Hugh Ross and James Aliferis, in charge of the chorus, which was reinforced by the Springfield Orchestra Chorus (Alexander Leslie, director).

A large orchestra is required here, hence the Boston Symphony was augmented by several brass choirs as well as by extra players on the stage. The chorus was a huge one. The tenor soloist, David Poleri, sang in the Sanctus the only vocal solo of the entire composition, and with notable effect.

The occasion was deeply moving. Mr. Munch could scarcely have shown more devotion to either the memory of his late predecessor or (at the same time) to Berlioz. If there were any faults in the rendition they happened early. In fact, they happened at the very beginning. Trifling ones, they proved; such things as the male voices of the chorus not sustaining their tones evenly while the female voices sang a descending scale against them. Also, the lady singers—in the same section, the opening "Requiem" — did some anticipating of the conductor's beat. Yet such matters caused only a temporary confusion.

Poetic Lament.

This Berlioz piece proves the stopper to all carping that belittles his musical imagination, his expressive vigor, his total adherence to a subject. The orchestration here is in that master's graphic manner. He sings a huge lament, yet in the most poetic sound.

I wish words could describe the sweeping power of the "Rex Tremendae" or that they could give some hint of the fragile, bitter-sweet prayer of the "Offertorium."

No Berkshire Festival of my recollection has ended so dramatically. And none has more convincingly argued the validity of its artistic aims with so brilliant a closing concert. Truly, the dream of Serge Koussevitzky, valiant toiler [illegible] Tanglewood field, lives [illegible] America's major music festival flourishes, thanks to the [illegible] service of those who [illegible] after him.

Saturday Pro[illegible]

The Saturday [illegible] concert, again conducted [illegible] Munch, offered the [illegible] "Tragic Overture" [illegible] "Tombeau de Couperin," [illegible] Piston Symphony No. [illegible] Saint-Saens Symphony [illegible]

Walter Piston's Symphony [illegible] beautifully tailored job, [illegible] distinct signs of a musical [illegible]sonality. The composer [illegible] enjoyed writing it, and there is enjoyment for the listener too.

I don't know how frequently it gets played—it was composed in 1951—but it will [illegible] its way, never fear. For [illegible] is a solid, agreeable score [illegible] lots of variety and freshness.

The concert—as yesterday's—was well attended. The playing? Mr. Munch had [illegible] very well in hand.

[6]

TIGHT BINDING

14/54

URDAY, AUGUST

urade creased ma-

Salome is orchestral.
colorful "bit
Tanglewood
onably Miss o, popular nerly of the
New York
s is a strik-eared in a ge, drama-co-operative quent interalome. Miss attraction
but whether composer it would be the orchesvas not in what Miss
lly. The au-ont of the y more for-er removed,
g was not pt in rare singing at al score did efforts. A ve been in mit the ex-hat Arthur

n Pops Or-o in their nd half of he rousing Forever" which they quest num-
Look Sharp which are es used in cials and musical ef-outdid it-

be made n made to nith at in-the Boston members,
s Munch,
Berkshire
or of the aying the has since Berkshire was an-roceeds of ie" which the main-this year ng sum of zes were Mac Mor-

the shed cing with Bushkin.—

Note

liant a closing concert. Tru
the dream of Serge Kous vitzky, valiant toiler in the Ta glewood field, lives on. Ame
ca's major music festival flo ishes, thanks to the dedica service of those who have co
after him.

Saturday Program.

The Saturday evening co
cert, again conducted by Charl
Munch, offered the Brahm
"Tragic Overture" the Rav
"Tombeau de Couperin," t
Piston Symphony No. 4, and t
Saint-Saens Symphony No. 3.
Walter Piston's Symphony,
beautifully tailored job, show
distinct signs of a musical pe
sonality. The composer has e joyed writing it, and there enjoyment for the listener, to
I don't know how frequent it gets played—it was compos in 1951—but it will make i way, never fear. For this is solid, agreeable score with lo
of variety and freshness.
The concert — as yesterday
—was well attended. The pla ing? Mr. Munch had that ve well in hand.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE

AUG 16 1954

shire Festival Ends

erlioz Requiem Mass ayed for Koussevitzky

By Jay S. Harrison

OX, Mass., Aug. 15.—The Berkshire Music Festival
nded this afternoon with r Berlioz' "Grande Messe Morts (Requiem)," present-memory of Serge Kousse-
, and a work which should ade, by law, a mandatory
e for all large festival end-

arles Munch and the Bos-Symphony Orchestra were ented by several hundred cians to fill the demands of oz' mammoth score. Four choirs, each consisting of ten players, sat at strategic in the large Music Shed;
Tanglewood Chorus, end by the addition of the ngfield Orchestra Chorus, placed behind the orches-
while flanks of percussion
rs lined the areas between.
ter the intermission, David
i, the tenor soloist, sat by Munch's side. The whole nted — even before the
ing measures—a pageant spectacle as glorious to the s it later proved stunning
e ear.

"Colossal" Applies

e work itself is one of the n history to which the mild epithet "colossal" is not propriately applied. It is in spirit, panoramic in out-long in length, massive in cture.

ot only are the performing es overwhelming and gran-
e, the nature of the Requiem, expressive fabric is also
e and trumpeting. And yet,
pposition to the general view
Berlioz is a wizard only of loud and the raucous, the uiem Mass is most frequently oted to a species of quiet rence that is equally, if not e, ennobling than all the et and rumpus created by combined ensembles charg-
at full vigor.

ully two-thirds of it is of a re all somber and austere even at crucial moments the poser's instrumental and l coloring is designed to d blatancy for its own sake ood deal of the scoring, in
, is a bit grey, as benefits a mn occasion. To emphasize condition, the Requiem has tches of bleakness and muted
ent that are almost a sonor-
incarnation of despair.

ll of these circumstances are ingly understood by Mr.
ch and the matter of his ormance, therefore, is a simone to contend with. No one ing to conduct the work un-he is positive well in advance
he can wrench from the uiem its full meaning and tance.

Impressive Closing

his Mr. Munch can and does.
n assisted by a chorus
ed to the hilt, as was Tanood's, to ring out the Latin with magnitude and color, stands in the way of Ber-stated intent. Combined, tionally, with the perfection
semble available to the Bos-men and the vibrant sing
of David Poleri, the resu und to be consistently i sive.

pressive indeed was yest

day's closing concert. Eight thousand nine hundred fifty listeners—the small number in a dismal rain—found it so. For their response to Mr. Munch's extraordinary job was akin in its clamor to that of the judgment day.

Last night's program, also conducted by Mr. Munch, consisted of selections familiar to Boston Symphony admirers including Brahms' Tragic Overture, Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin" Suite, Walter Piston's Symphony No. 4 and Saint-Saens' Symphony No. 3 in C Minor.

At the opening measures of the first number, in fact throughout its entire course, Mr. Munch had not yet hit his stride. Under his direction, the Brahms overture was rather coarse and explosive, with its tragic elements dissolved in an aura of pomp and circumstance. Once done with Brahms, however, he plunged headlong into the remaining pieces and delivered them, with a biting zest that characterizes Mr. Munch's way with music dear to his fancy.

A Personal "Tombeau"

Ravel's "Tombeau" was presented in a highly personal and mannered reading that held its rewards in the reflection of a genuine Old World elegance and charm. From measure to measure its poetry remained ever intact, while its bittersweet melodies were held out for fond inspection like so many charms on a bracelet. And while greater instrumental precision has been know in other Boston Symphony performances, few have captured the essence of a work with so little effort.

Mr. Piston's Fourth Symphony is a fine piece, his finest, I suspect, to date. Craft, naturally, there is in abundance, since the composer's reputation has long rested upon his ability to deal smartly with tone. But the Fourth is no mere artisan's piece. Its first movement is warmly spirited, gentle and playful; its second bounding and rhythmically vital. Even its third movement manages to remain engagingly introspective without brooding or turning sour. And the close is a big clangorous finale that brings the symphony to a whooping, forceful end. Mr. Piston, himself, was on hand to accept the generous ovation from an audience estimated at well over 10,000.

Saint-Saens' Third Symphony, which brought the evening to a roaring conclusion, is a warhorse that Mr. Munch knows how to ride. It is a display piece, neither more nor less, and for its display qualities does the conductor read it. Thus heard, the symphony becomes a study in rushing sonorities and unabashed sentiment. There is nothing small about it, nothing petty or mean. As read by Charles Munch, the work is a vast, pulsing musical organism with a life and a heart of its own.

Aug 16/54

Berlioz' Requiem Gripping, Challenges Esthetic Senses

Exciting is a timid word to apply to Hector Berlioz' Requiem. Monumental but not overpowering, challenging without cessation the esthetic senses, impressive and spiritually pervasive it is, and was, as performed by the Boston Symphony under the inspired leadership of Charles Munch on Sunday, in memory of Serge Koussevitzky. The final concert in the 17th Berkshire Festival, and the 15th since the Boston Symphony participated, it included the Berkshire Festival Chorus, augmented by 50 voices from the Springfield Orchestra Chorus, and four brass bands.

Mr. Munch's attention was devoted to the chorus in the opening Kyrie, rather to the detriment of the orchestral ensemble which was slightly uneven toward the close. Its gentle restraint was easily felt, though, and lifted one to the proper plane for the rest of the Requiem.

The usual torpor of a Sunday afternoon, made more so by the threatening skies, was willingly overcome in the desire to grasp and hold each wondering change in all 10 movements.

Rapid cueing of the four brass orchestras in the Dies Irae was expertly handled by Mr. Munch, and also in the Tuba Mirum (literally, beautiful music) which thrilled one to his innermost being. The haunting quality of the oboe dominated the third movement, with quiet male voices accompanied by bass instruments only. Another contrast followed with full orchestral forces in the Rex Tremendae, and then a soft bit of loveliness was heard in the a capella prayer, Quarens me, sung in six parts.

The syncopated beginning of the Lacrymosa, its moods, at once sacred and secular, almost convinced one that dancing in church has a rightful and timely place. In the Offertorium, the melodic lines of the strings and voices were delicately handled, and the alternating voices and pizzicato strings building chords to a hushed climax left one breathless at such beauty. A short Hostias, sung in chords by the male chorus alternating with chords for deep trombones, and flutes blending in high harmonics gave a truly unearthly effect.

Many people feel that the Sanctus is the most beautiful movement of the Requiem. A composition of devotional tenderness, it was rather marred by the emotional style of David Poleri, a good tenor, but not with the purity of voice one associates with the Sanctus Cymbals and drum combined to intersperse a sound of sacramental bells, played once or twice, but never three times. The chorus and muted strings were outstanding in the fugal Hosanna and its climactic repetition in free style.

The final movement, Agnus Dei, set one gently back on an earthly plane, exalted and refreshed by this partioular music of composer Hector Berlioz, whose 150th anniversary has been specially honored this year.

Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony, and indeed all those who have devoted their energies to the Festival, are to be highly commended for the ever-increasing success of this unique contribution to music lovers.—M.deB.B.

HOUSTON, TEX.
POST

AUG 18 1954

Berkshire Festival

NY HERALD TRIBUNE NEWS SERVICE

LENOX, Mass — George E. Judd, retiring manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, announced Tuesday the Berkshire Music Festival which ended Monday, had attracted the largest audiences in its history. Mr Judd said 135,775 persons paid $330,033 to hear 24 concerts, compared to 117,950 in 1953 who paid $311,600.

A total of 375 students from 35 states and 12 foreign countries attended the Berkshire Music Center's student program, and 116 music amateurs ranging from 18 to 60 attended the Tanglewood study group programs.

GINA

PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE

AUG 16 1954

Music

Season's Tanglewood Finale Is Memorial to Koussevitzky

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FINAL CONCERT of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon was devoted to the "Requiem" of Hector Berlioz, the sesquicentennial anniversary of whose birth was observed last year by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony orchestra in Symphony Hall and whose major and some less important works have been repeated in this summer's programs.

One of the most touching details of an afternoon full of exhilarating incidents was Munch's gallant and fine gesture of escorting the orchestra's two retiring members, violinist Leon Gorodetzky and violist Georges Fourel, to the front of the stage for a final appreciative moment.

The performance of the "Requiem" was dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky. Berlioz, in his "Memoires" uses a quotation from Shakespeare's "Macbeth" as an envoy: "Life's but . . . a poor player that struts and frets his hour . . . and then is heard no more." Yesterday afternoon exactly belied that sentiment in the case both of the composer who met with such disappointment in his lifetime and the conductor who left so much evidence of his foresight and such a memorial even as the institution which could reproduce the great music.

* * *

BERLIOZ, no matter what the auspices of his commission, wrote for posterity. Great things must have an element of ageless simplicity. The "Requiem" starts with an unaffected ascending scale in the violas which the discerning composer reinforced with bassoons with remarkable profit. He used the same insight later when the male chorus enters and he adds extra substance to their voices with French horns. The unique and great moment in the "Tuba Mirum" where the four brass choirs, disposed in more advantageous locations yesterday than at the performance of three seasons ago, raise their majestic tone in glorious concord, made everyone's blood tingle in his veins. And then, again, Berlioz' genius becomes apparent when the tremendous volume ceases, and, in the Shed with its wonderful acoustics, there is no reverberation, and the thread is carried on in a soft tremolo in the celli.

The excitement was as great in the orchestra as among the audience. The tympanist, reanimated, lost the pad from one of his sticks as it struck the drum head. It bounced upward in a wide arc and descended, as the legend has already been established, on the head of each one of the 20 violinists of the first violin section.

Munch gave a remarkably poised performance, and was accorded deeply telling response in both the orchestra and the Festival chorus which had been augmented by members of the Springfield orchestra chorus trained by their conductor, Alexander Leslie. The Festival chorus had been prepared by Hugh Ross and James Aliferis. Their work was most apparent in the a cappella episodes where solidity and balance were excellent. David Poleri's single opportunity as tenor soloist came in the Sanctus. It was ideally suited to his voice and he sang with impressive conviction and ringing ease.

* * *

SATURDAY EVENING Munch chose a program from many schools and the comparison served to highlight the temper of several epochs. There was the Teutonic Brahms, represented by his Tragic Overture; the French periods of Saint-Saens and Ravel, whose third symphony, in C minor, Opus 78, and "Le Tombeau de Couperin" respectively were played; and the American, by the Walter Piston fourth symphony.

Brahms and Saint-Saens were contemporaries but interest in the Frenchman has not been maintained, yet his symphony was not only worth playing but does not deserve the oblivion to which it seems to be headed. It uses an immense orchestra with organ, played Saturday by E. Power Biggs, and in several instances Saint-Saens molds a congeries of orchestral tones, such as the violin and cello aria in the lowest registers over the sustaining bass of the organ, which are deeply impressive and in which the orchestra played with luscious tone.

Yet, although they were played in reverse order, one could not fail to set beside the Saint-Saens the delicate and lace-like imaginative fantasy of Ravel's suite. Munch asked oboe Ralph Gomberg to stand to take a bow at the conclusion of the performance and, while he well deserved it, the whole orchestra might as well have taken individual bows, for it was a virtuoso performance in its sensitive playing.

* * *

PISTON was in the audience and Munch called him forward for all of the many recalls the audience seemed eager to award the composer and the executants. This symphony was written only three years ago. One senses easy craftsmanship throughout but more telling and lasting marks are not easyily noted. The apt use of instruments is one of Piston's conspicuous attributes. Phrases and figures are indisputably appropriate and right where he places them and he uses the whole wide gamut of the orchestral resources unerringly.

One of our music's greatest virtues is its power to afford pleasure even when the compositions are most familiar. The ability of artists vividly to revive emotions make the performance heard latest the most enjoyable. It is too close at this point to gauge the place in the Berkshire Festivals' history of this one just now completed, but many will contend, and be well fortified to hold their ground that this was one of the great ones.

BOSTON MASS
POST

AUG 16 1954

Music in Review

By TUCKER KEISER

TANGLEWOOD, Aug. 15—Despite a misty, chilly day the final concert in the Berkshire Festival drew an audience of 9000 to hear a performance of the Berlioz "Requiem," a fitting climactic work in the Berlioz sesqui-centennial this summer here at Tanglewood.

Not as many listeners as is usual were seated on the grass, but the weather did not dampen the enthusiasm in the reception of thie wonderful composition.

The stereophonic "Requiem" requires a vast number of performers. There must be a tenor soloist, a huge chorus, an augmented orchestra, and four brass bands. The latter were placed one at each end of the stage and on the right and left sides of the concourse. The festival chorus was assisted by members of the Springfield orchestra chorus, trained by Alexander Leslie, and the soloist was the popular young singer, David Poleri, who has made quite a hit this season with Tanglewood audiences.

Though Berlioz demands so large a performing apparatus, the extended work is a model of classical proportions in its writing. Only in the "Dies Irae" and in the "Lacrymosa" does he employ all of the performers, and this is used not so much for a shocking effect but to give a sense of power and awe in underlining the drama of the text.

The composer does not use all of the traditional text normally a part of the "grande messe des morts." He is concerned primarily with the musical values, and in consequence, repeats many passages to round out his formal scheme.

Though on occasion the "Requiem" has been used as a part of worship, the piece is not really religious in mood. It's feeling is theatrical rather than pious.

Mr. Munch led his forces with that wonderful skill which he always brings to a score of his favorite composer. The chorus responded splendidly to the conductor's demands, and at times achieved great beauty of tone. However, it was unfortunate that during the "Dies Irae," Mr. Munch allowed one pierceing trumpet to dominate the music and mar the otherwise overwhelming effect which Berlioz makes here.

But then, Mr. Munch has a great love for this penetrating sound and he, perhaps, found it stirring.

The performance of the "Requiem" was dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky that famed conductor whose imprint remains in every department at Tanglewood.

TIGHT BINDING

2 14/54

URDAY, AUGUST

arade

creased ma-Salome is orchestral.
colorful "bit
Tanglewood
ionably Miss no, popular nerly of the
New York
s is a strik-eared in a nge, drama-co-operative quent interalome. Miss g attraction
but whether e composer
it would be the orchesvas not in what Miss
ily. The au-
ont of the y more for-er removed,
ng was not ept in rare
s singing at al score did efforts. A ve been in mit the ex-hat Arthur

n Pops Or-o in their nd half of he rousing Forever" which they quest num-
Look Sharp which are es used in cials and musical ef-outdid it-

be made n made to nith at in-the Boston
members,
s Munch,
Berkshire
or of the aying the has since Berkshire
t was an-roceeds of de" which the main-this year
ng sum of izes were Mac Mor-

the shed cing with Bushkin.—

Note

liant a closing concert. Tru
the dream of Serge Kous vitzky, valiant toiler in the T glewood field, lives on. Ame
ca's major music festival flo
ishes, thanks to the dedica service of those who have co
after him.

Saturday Program.

The Saturday evening co
cert, again conducted by Charl
Munch, offered the Brahm
"Tragic Overture" the Rav
"Tombeau de Couperin," th
Piston Symphony No. 4, and t
Saint-Saens Symphony No. 3.
Walter Piston's Symphony,
beautifully tailored job, show
distinct signs of a musical pe
sonality. The composer has e
joyed writing it, and there
enjoyment for the listener, to
I don't know how frequent it gets played—it was compose in 1951—but it will make i way, never fear. For this is solid, agreeable score with lo
of variety and freshness.
The concert—as yesterday
—was well attended. The pla ing? Mr. Munch had that ver
well in hand.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE

AUG 16 1954

shire Festival Ends

erlioz Requiem Mass ayed for Koussevitzky

By Jay S. Harrison

OX, Mass., Aug. 15.—The Berkshire Music Festival
ded this afternoon with
r Berlioz' "Grande Messe orts (Requiem)," present-memory of Serge Kousse-
, and a work which should ade, by law, a mandatory for all large festival end-

arles Munch and the Bos-Symphony Orchestra were ented by several hundred ians to fill the demands of z' mammoth score. Four choirs, each consisting of en players, sat at strategic
in the large Music Shed;
Tanglewood Chorus, end by the addition of the gfield Orchestra Chorus,
placed behind the orches-
while flanks of percussion
rs lined the areas between.
er the intermission, David
i, the tenor soloist, sat by Munch's side. The whole
nted — even before the
ing measures—a pageant spectacle as glorious to the s it later proved stunning
e ear.

"Colossal" Applies

e work itself is one of the n history to which the mild epithet "colossal" is not propriately applied. It is in spirit, panoramic in out-long in length, massive in cture.
t only are the performing es overwhelming and gran-
e, the nature of the Requiem, expressive fabric is also
e and trumpeting. And yet,
pposition to the general view
Berlioz is a wizard only of loud and the raucous, the uiem Mass is most frequently ted to a species of quiet rence that is equally, if not e, ennobling than all the
et and rumpus created by combined ensembles charg-
at full vigor.
ully two-thirds of it is of a re all somber and austere
even at crucial moments the poser's instrumental and l coloring is designed tc
d blatancy for its own sake
ood deal of the scoring, in
, is a bit grey, as benefits a mn occasion. To emphasize condition, the Requiem has tches of bleakness and muted
ent that are almost a sonor-
incarnation of despair.
ll of these circumstances are vingly understood by Mr.
nch and the matter of his ormance, therefore, is a simone to contend with. No one
ing to conduct the work un-
he is positive well in advance
he can wrench from the uiem its full meaning and
tance.

Impressive Closing

his Mr. Munch can and does.
n assisted by a chorus
ed to the hilt, as was Tanood's, to ring out the Latin
with magnitude and color,
stands in the way of Ber-stated intent. Combined,
tionally, with the perfection
semble available to the Bos-men and the vibrant sing
of David Poleri, the resu
und to be consistently i sive.
pressive indeed was yest

day's closing concert. Eight thousand nine hundred fifty listeners—the small number in a dismal rain—found it so. For their response to Mr. Munch's extraordinary job was akin in its clamor to that of the judgment day.

Last night's program, also conducted by Mr. Munch, consisted of selections familiar to Boston Symphony admirers including Brahms' Tragic Overture, Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin" Suite, Walter Piston's Symphony No. 4 and Saint-Saens' Symphony No. 3 in C Minor.

At the opening measures of the first number, in fact throughout its entire course, Mr. Munch had not yet hit his stride. Under his direction, the Brahms overture was rather coarse and explosive, with its tragic elements dissolved in an aura of pomp and circumstance. Once done with Brahms, however, he plunged headlong into the remaining pieces and delivered them with a biting zest that characterizes Mr. Munch's way with music dear to his fancy.

A Personal "Tombeau"

Ravel's "Tombeau" was presented in a highly personal and mannered reading that held its rewards in the reflection of a genuine Old World elegance and charm. From measure to measure its poetry remained ever intact, while its bittersweet melodies were held out for fond inspection like so many charms on a bracelet. And while greater instrumental precision has been know in other Boston Symphony performances, few have captured the essence of a work with so little effort.

Mr. Piston's Fourth Symphony is a fine piece, his finest, I suspect, to date. Craft, naturally, there is in abundance, since the composer's reputation has long rested upon his ability to deal smartly with tone. But the Fourth is no mere artisan's piece. Its first movement is warmly spirited, gentle and playful; its second bounding and rhythmically vital. Even its third movement manages to remain engagingly introspective without brooding or turning sour. And the close is a big clangorous finale that brings the symphony to a whooping, forceful end. Mr. Piston, himself, was on hand to accept the generous ovation from an audience estimated at well over 10,000.

Saint-Saens' Third Symphony, which brought the evening to a roaring conclusion, is a warhorse that Mr. Munch knows how to ride. It is a display piece, neither more nor less, and for its display qualities does the conductor read it. Thus heard, the symphony becomes a study in rushing sonorities and unabashed sentiment. There is nothing small about it, nothing petty or mean. As read by Charles Munch, the work is a vast, pulsing musical organism with a life and a heart of its own.

Aug 16/54

Berlioz' Requiem Gripping, Challenges Esthetic Senses

Exciting is a timid word to apply to Hector Berlioz' Requiem. Monumental but not overpowering, challenging without cessation the esthetic senses, impressive and spiritually pervasive it is, and was, as performed by the Boston Symphony under the inspired leadership of Charles Munch on Sunday, in memory of Serge Koussevitzky. The final concert in the 17th Berkshire Festival, and the 15th since the Boston Symphony participated, it included the Berkshire Festival Chorus, augmented by 50 voices from the Springfield Orchestra Chorus, and four brass bands.

Mr. Munch's attention was devoted to the chorus in the opening Kyrie, rather to the detriment of the orchestral ensemble which was slightly uneven toward the close. Its gentle restraint was easily felt, though, and lifted one to the proper plane for the rest of the Requiem.

The usual torpor of a Sunday afternoon, made more so by the threatening skies, was willingly overcome in the desire to grasp and hold each wondering change in all 10 movements.

Rapid cueing of the four brass orchestras in the Dies Irae was expertly handled by Mr. Munch, and also in the Tuba Mirum (literally, beautiful music) which thrilled one to his innermost being. The haunting quality of the oboe dominated the third movement, with quiet male voices accompanied by bass instruments only. Another contrast followed with full orchestral forces in the Rex Tremendae, and then a soft bit of loveliness was heard in the a capella prayer, Quarens me, sung in six parts.

The syncopated beginning of the Lacrymosa, its moods, at once sacred and secular, almost convinced one that dancing in church has a rightful and timely place. In the Offertorium, the melodic lines of the strings and voices were delicately handled, and the alternating voices and pizzicato strings building chords to a hushed climax left one breathless at such beauty. A short Hostias, sung in chords by the male chorus alternating with chords for deep trombones, and flutes blending in high harmonics gave a truly unearthly effect.

Many people feel that the Sanctus is the most beautiful movement of the Requiem. A composition of devotional tenderness, it was rather marred by the emotional style of David Poleri, a good tenor, but not with the purity of voice one associates with the Sanctus Cymbals and drum combined to intersperse a sound of sacramental bells, played once or twice, but never three times. The chorus and muted strings were outstanding in the fugal Hosanna and its climactic repetition in free style.

The final movement, Agnus Dei, set one gently back on an earthly plane, exalted and refreshed by this particular music of composer Hector Berlioz, whose 150th anniversary has been specially honored this year.

Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony, and indeed all those who have devoted their energies to the Festival, are to be highly commended for the ever-increasing success of this unique contribution to music lovers.—M.deB.B.

HOUSTON, TEX.
POST

AUG 18 1954

Berkshire Festival

NY HERALD TRIBUNE NEWS SERVICE

LENOX, Mass — George E. Judd, retiring manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, announced ~~Tuesday~~ the Berkshire Music Festival which ended Monday, had attracted the largest audiences in its history. Mr Judd said 135,775 persons paid $330,033 to hear 24 concerts, compared to 117,950 in 1953 who paid $311,600.

A total of 375 students from 35 states and 12 foreign countries attended the Berkshire Music Center's student program, and 116 music amateurs ranging from 18 to 60 attended the Tanglewood study group programs.

GINA

PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE

AUG 16 1954

Music

Season's Tanglewood Finale Is Memorial to Koussevitzky

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FINAL CONCERT of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood ~~yesterday afternoon~~ was devoted to the "Requiem" of Hector Berlioz, the sesquicentennial anniversary of whose birth was observed last year by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony orchestra in Symphony Hall and whose major and some less important works have been repeated in this summer's programs.

One of the most touching details of an afternoon full of exhilarating incidents was Munch's gallant and fine gesture of escorting the orchestra's two retiring members, violinist Leon Gorodetzky and violist Georges Fourel, to the front of the stage for a final appreciative moment.

The performance of the "Requiem" was dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky. Berlioz, in his "Memoires" uses a quotation from Shakespeare's "Macbeth" as an envoy: "Life's but . . . a poor player that struts and frets his hour . . . and then is heard no more." Yesterday afternoon exactly belied that sentiment in the case both of the composer who met with such disappointment in his lifetime and the conductor who left so much evidence of his foresight and such a memorial even as the institution which could reproduce the great music.

* * *

BERLIOZ, no matter what the auspices of his commission, wrote for posterity. Great things must have an element of ageless simplicity. The "Requiem" starts with an unaffected ascending scale in the violas which the discerning composer reinforced with bassoons with remarkable profit. He used the same insight later when the male chorus enters and he adds extra substance to their voices with French horns. The unique and great moment in the "Tuba Mirum" where the four brass choirs, disposed in more advantageous locations yesterday than at the performance of three seasons ago, raise their majestic tone in glorious concord, made everyone's blood tingle in his veins. And then, again, Berlioz' genius becomes apparent when the tremendous volume ceases, and, in the Shed with its wonderful acoustics, there is no reverberation, and the thread is carried on in a soft tremolo in the celli.

The excitement was as great in the orchestra as among the audience. The tympanist, reanimated, lost the pad from one of his sticks as it struck the drum head. It bounced upward in a wide arc and descended, as the legend has already been established, on the head of each one of the 20 violinists of the first violin section.

Munch gave a remarkably poised performance, and was accorded deeply telling response in both the orchestra and the Festival chorus which had been augmented by members of the Springfield orchestra chorus trained by their conductor, Alexander Leslie. The Festival chorus had been prepared by Hugh Ross and James Aliferis. Their work was most apparent in the a cappella episodes where solidity and balance were excellent. David Poleri's single opportunity as tenor soloist came in the Sanctus. It was ideally suited to his voice and he sang with impressive conviction and ringing ease.

* * *

SATURDAY EVENING Munch chose a program from many schools and the comparison served to highlight the temper of several epochs. There was the Teutonic Brahms, represented by his Tragic Overture; the French periods of Saint-Saens and Ravel, whose third symphony, in C minor, Opus 78, and "Le Tombeau de Couperin" respectively were played; and the American, by the Walter Piston fourth symphony.

Brahms and Saint-Saens were contemporaries but interest in the Frenchman has not been maintained, yet his symphony was not only worth playing but does not deserve the oblivion to which it seems to be headed. It uses an immense orchestra with organ, played Saturday by E. Power Biggs, and in several instances Saint-Saens molds a congeries of orchestral tones, such as the violin and cello aria in the lowest registers over the sustaining bass of the organ, which are deeply impressive and in which the orchestra played with luscious tone.

Yet, although they were played in reverse order, one could not fail to set beside the Saint-Saens the delicate and lace-like imaginative fantasy of Ravel's suite. Munch asked oboe Ralph Gomberg to stand to take a bow at the conclusion of the performance and, while he well deserved it, the whole orchestra might as well have taken individual bows, for it was a virtuoso performance in its sensitive playing.

* * *

PISTON was in the audience and Munch called him forward for all of the many recalls the audience seemed eager to award the composer and the executants. This symphony was written only three years ago. One senses easy craftsmanship throughout but more telling and lasting marks are not easyily noted. The apt use of instruments is one of Piston's conspicuous attributes. Phrases and figures are indisputably appropriate and right where he places them and he uses the whole wide gamut of the orchestral resources unerringly.

One of our music's greatest virtues is its power to afford pleasure even when the compositions are most familiar. The ability of artists vividly to revive emotions make the performance heard latest the most enjoyable. It is too close at this point to gauge the place in the Berkshire Festivals' history of this one just now completed, but many will contend, and be well fortified to hold their ground that this was one of the great ones.

BOSTON MASS
POST

AUG 16 1954

Music in Review

By TUCKER KEISER

TANGLEWOOD, Aug. 15— Despite a misty, chilly day the final concert in the Berkshire Festival drew an audience of 9000 to hear a performance of the Berlioz "Requiem," a fitting climactic work in the Berlioz sesqui-centennial this summer here at Tanglewood.

Not as many listeners as is usual were seated on the grass, but the weather did not dampen the enthusiasm in the reception of thie wonderful composition.

The stereophonic "Requiem" requires a vast number of performers. There must be a tenor soloist, a huge chorus, an augmented orchestra, and four brass bands. The latter were placed one at each end of the stage and on the right and left sides of the concourse. The festival chorus was assisted by members of the Springfield orchestra chorus, trained by Alexander Leslie, and the soloist was the popular young singer, David Poleri, who has made quite a hit this season with Tanglewood audiences.

Though Berlioz demands so large a performing apparatus, the extended work is a model of classical proportions in its writing. Only in the "Dies Irae" and in the "Lacrymosa" does he employ all of the performers, and this is used not so much for a shocking effect but to give a sense of power and awe in underlining the drama of the text.

The composer does not use all of the traditional text normally a part of the "grande messe des morts." He is concerned primarily with the musical values, and in consequence, repeats many passages to round out his formal scheme.

Though on occasion the "Requiem" has been used as a part of worship, the piece is not really religious in mood. It's feeling is theatrical rather than pious.

Mr. Munch led his forces with that wonderful skill which he always brings to a score of his favorite composer. The chorus responded splendidly to the conductor's demands, and at times achieved great beauty of tone. However, it was unfortunate that during the "Dies Irae," Mr. Munch allowed one pierceing trumpet to dominate the music and mar the otherwise overwhelming effect which Berlioz makes here.

But then, Mr. Munch has a great love for this penetrating sound and he, perhaps, found it stirring.

The performance of the "Requiem" was dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky that famed conductor whose imprint remains in every department at Tanglewood.

Attendance Record Set At Tanglewood

Waterbury Republican Aug. 17, 1954.

(Special to The Republican)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 16. — The Berkshire Festival, which concluded here at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon with the performance of Berlioz' "Requiem" in memory of Serge Koussevitszky, piled up new records for attendance in all branches of its varied activities.

More than 140,000 persons, an increase of 33,000 over the record of last year, attended the 12 concerts in the Music Shed which this year were spread over a six-week period. Tanglewood-on-Parade on Friday night set an all-time record for that activity with 10,050. Six public rehearsals on Saturday mornings for the benefit of the musician's pension fund drew 12,511. The student demonstrations during the summer season drew 33,000 and the Bach-Mozart concerts in the Music Hall drew additional throngs to bring the grand total for all activities close to 235,000.

Saturday evening's concert, which brought out 10,400, presented an interesting program of Brahms' "Tragic Overture," Ravels' "Le Tombeau de Couperin" and Piston's "Symphony No. 4." Under Charles Munch the orchestra gave a spirited performance and Walter Piston, the composer, was called to the platfrom to receive the plaudits of the enthusiastic audience. But it was the after-intermission performance of Saint-Saens "Symphony No. 3" which thrilled the audience. Mr. Munch did a splended bit of conducting here and had his orchestra play so that the music seemed to be singing itself. E. Power Biggs appeared att he organ. When the concert was over Mr. Munch was called back again and again. His conducting in this part of the program and the Boston's playing of it made everyone realize that this was another of those specials to which the audiences have been treated in this summer of fine concerts.

The rain and mist Sunday shrank the audience to a mere 9,000 but it did not dampen the enthusiasm of those who heard the memorial concert with David Poleri as tenor soloist and the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and James Aliferis.

As the last notes faded away and the last car left the grounds of Tanglewood, saying "farewell" for another year to programs and performers who had brought so much pleasure to more than a quarter of a million music-lovers from all this country and many others as well, plans for next year's performances of The Berkshire Music Festival here on the tree-shaded lawns of this beautiful estate were under way. The Berkshire Festival is an enduring part of America's cultural life and all who love it must join in saying with the Latin poet, "Ave atyue vale"—"Hail and Farewell!"

S. M.

VARIETY
NEW YORK, N. Y.

AUG 18 1954

BERKSHIRE FEST WINDS TO RECORD 330G TAKE

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 17.

The 17th annual Berkshire Festival wound up at Tanglewood here Sunday (15) at a high peak, both artistic and boxoffice-wise. Charles Munch led his Boston Symphony Orchestra, plus four brass bands, Music Center chorus of 200 and Springfield, Mass., chorus of 50, in a performance of Berlioz's "Requiem." New attendance record for the six-week fest was set, with a new boxoffice mark. Total paid admissions were $330,033, as against $311,600 in 1953.

The dozen concerts of the BSO in the 6,000-seater Shed (with overflow on lawn) brought in $249,217. Six chamber orchestra events in the 1,150-seater Theatre-Concert Hall accounted for another $32,467. Six more music events in the smaller hall added $13,007. "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit Aug. 13 netted $24,066, and there was an additional $11,276 added from Saturday morning public rehearsals.

Pittsfield, Massachusetts, Monday, August 16, 1954.

Plouffe

A SPECIAL GESTURE on the part of Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, swelled the cheers of the audience at the Music Shed yesterday afternoon at the conclusion of the 1954 season, when Mr. Munch, center, singled out Leon Gorodetsky and Georges Fourel, who are retiring after a generation of service in the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

MORNING GLOBE

AUG 16 1954

Final Tanglewood Concert Pays Tribute to Koussevitsky

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, Aug. 15—The 17th Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra ended here in the music shed at Tanglewood this afternoon with a splendid—also a stupendous—performance of the Requiem of Hector Berlioz.

Charles Munch conducted; the tenor soloist was David Poleri, and the huge choral forces consisted of the Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross and James Aliferis, and the Springfield Chorus, prepared by Alexander Leslie.

The performance was in memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitsky, and a photograph of him fittingly adorned the title page of the program.

The Berlioz Requiem is, in its vast and portentous way, partly an electrifying show, with its extra brass of four groups for the tuba mirum and rex tremendae.

It is also, since Berlioz was an artist of peculiar imagination and intensity as well as a man of complications, a religious masterpiece of deep feeling.

Mr. Munch, unerringly a conductor to comprehend these blended elements, makes the most of all of them. The result is a musical manifestation which both excites you and touches your heart.

Like certain other masterworks created in homage to the dead, the Berlioz Requiem is a poetic expression in a highly organized tonal structure that unmistakably depicts the deprivation of life and as compellingly intimates the unassailable continuity of some form of life eternal. More need hardly be said.

More Than Technical Excellence

Today all upon the stage of the music shed seemed at their best. Mr. Munch's conducting showed all his finest qualities, and a controlled passion not always in evidence.

The orchestra played superbly, not alone with fine technical ensemble, but with a string tone rich and luminous and not in the least dry.

Mr. Poleri's voicing of the tenor solo was beautiful in sound and admirable in the churchly devotion with which he sang it. The choruses lacked nothing of clarity, good balance and willing response.

In the music shed Berlioz' directions that the added brass bands be placed at the four points of the compass, could hardly be met. Two of the groups were placed at extreme left and right, stage front, the others a little way into the auditorium, on either side.

The effect was not overwhelming (nor should it be, either, because of the open sides of the shed) but the arrangement served.

At the end the ovation was vociferous and sustained in which all shared. The applause was swelled by cheers. Mr. Munch singled out, as a special gesture, Leon Gorodetsky and Georges Fourel, who are retiring after a generation of service in the Boston Symphony.

Brahm's "Tragic"

The final Saturday night concert was a singularly satisfying one. It assembled Brahms' "Tragic" Overture (some very loud but dramatic tympani beats at the insistent demand of conductor Munch); Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin" which Mr. Munch and the orchestra do most excellently, though taking the prelude a little slower than I like to hear it; the Fourth Symphony of Walter Piston, which is dancy, juicy music of stature and distinction, and which won the composer, present in the audience, a hearty reception, and the C minor Symphony of Saint-Saens, which I believe will never have a finer interpretation than that by Mr. Munch. The organist for the latter was E. Power Biggs, and needless to say, his work was creditable.

The weather for this final day of the festival, was cold and rainy, thereby cutting down the audience to 8950. Ten thousand, four hundred persons were present Saturday night.

To continue with otherwise encouraging statistics, the total attendance for the six weeks of the festival was 135,775, and the total gross revenue $330,033 as against $311,600 in 1953 when the total attendance was 117,950.

This financial total breaks down in $11,274.25 paid admissions at rehearsals for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund; net benefit of $22,000 for the Berkshire Music Center from the annual "Tanglewood on Parade"; a net to the center of $7850 from the six chamber music concerts and a total in receipts for the Boston Symphony of $281,674.75.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
UNION-STAR

AUG 20 1954

Boston Symphony Manager to Quit

LENOX, Mass.—George E. Judd, manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra since 1936, will retire this season. He has had nearly 40 years of service with the orchestra with which he became associated in 1915.

He was honored at a luncheon recently at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Festival to which he brought the orchestra in 1937.

He will be succeeded Sept. 1 at the start of the orchestra's 74th season in Symphony Hall, Boston, by Thomas D. Perry Jr., assistant manager. Leon Gorodetzky, violinist with the orchestra since 1920, and George Fourel, violist since 1921, also are retiring and were honored at the luncheon.

In Brief . . .

Even with yesterday's lugubrious weather, Tanglewood attendance ended up 25,000 ahead of last year to vindicate the planners who staked a great deal on their conviction that a six-week season was the next logical step . . . It must have been a great source of satisfaction, too, when Richmond's Mrs. William M. Crane witnessed the first presentation of the Koussevitzky memorial scholarship award to student conductors Paul Vermel and Samuel Krachmalnick. A purely Berkshire gesture to Tanglewood, it brings credit both to the county and to Mrs. Crane, who conceived the idea . . . The weather failed also to discourage the opening of Marian Week at the Eden Hill Novitiate of the Marian Fathers, where a crowd of 2,500 gathered from all parts of the country for the ceremonies . . .

Speaking of attendance, Director Stuart Henry's report of a marked increase in the number of summer visitors at the Berkshire Museum strengthens the belief that those coming to Tanglewood are equally interested in other high-grade cultural offerings . . . Berkshire's ties to Bob Toski are tenuous,

---

Syracuse Herald-Journal 8/16/54

MASTERLY CONDUCTORSHIP. Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony and the Berkshire Music Festival in "Tanglewood," pictured in rehearsal. The Berlioz Requiem was a fitting musical climax to a highly successful season.

—SEASON CLOSES—

'Tanglewood' Rings With Great Music In The Shed

LENOX—The 17th season of the Berkshire Music Festival in "Tanglewood" closed here yesterday afternoon with 8,950 listeners for the Berlioz Requiem under the masterly direction of Charles Munch. Great music finely wrought by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with the Berkshire Festival Chorus of 200, assisted by members of the Springfield Symphony Orchestra, (four brass bands). Total attendance for the season which started early in July was 135,775.

DAVID POLERI, tenor, who had been a "Tanglewood" student in the late 40's, was an able soloist in the Requiem. The impressive Berlioz work was pre[illegible] in memory of Dr. Serg[illegible] [illegible]evitzky whose plans [illegible] "[illegible]glewood" as a summer [illegible] the Boston Symphony [illegible] being, with later organization of the Berkshire Music Center.

The Festival Chorus which sang effectively with excellence of enunciation was prepared by Hugh Ross and James Aliferis.

NOTABLE were the fourth section of the Requiem, the "Rex Tremendae," with full orchestral forces, followed by the prayer, sung in six parts, a cappella, and the oratorio's "Lacrymosa," with rich melodic content. The principal orchestra's playing in the Offertorium and the "Sanctus" and Agnus Dei were deeply moving. There were several recalls to the stage for Director Munch, who shared honors with the instrumentalists and singers. Noted among musicians in the throng were Prof. and Mrs. Louis Krasner and their daughters, of Syracuse. Professor Krasner renewed acquaintances with Boston Symphony players with whom he worked when he lived in Boston some years ago.—E.V.W.

ALBANY,
TIMES-UNI

AUG 17

FESTIVAL HAS BIGGEST YEAR

135,775 Music Lov
Thronged Tanglew

The Berkshire F
Lenox, Mass., ran up
gest attendance record
consequently the lar
ceipts—in its history, season that ended Sun

Total attendance, de usually capricious weath 135,775, as compared previous record of 117
tablished a year ago. T paid admissions were as against $311,600
last year.

The concluding co
memory of the late Koussevitzky who the Tanglewood festival
its formative years,
8,950 people who defied
day threat of rain to Berlioz "Requiem."

BERLIOZ HONOR

The Berkshire Fes
year paid special ho Hector Berlioz, a nu concerts being devoted serving the 150th an season of the birth
French composer by ances of complete ve
some of his seldom-hea
The first of these Damnation of Faust"
Mr. Munch conducted and which Mr. Munch
duct this season in N
Brooklyn and Washin

On July 25, Mr. Mu formed the Overture
trice and Benedick"
symphony "Harold with William Primrose
soloist. A repeat of mer's "Romeo and Ju
July 31, drew 9,800
an electrical storm.
7 performance includ
"Royal Hunt and St
"The Trojans" and performance by the Symphony of the "T

Soloists this
cluded Claudio Arra
Franceschi, Nicole He
Leo Smit, pianists;
cescatti and Ruth Po
linists; E. Power
Willem Friso Frank,
Pierre Monteux was
ductor for two of the certs; Richard Burgi master of the Bost
phony, and Jean Mor
head of the Berksh Center's orchestra d for one each.

WASHINGTON, D. C.
STAR

AUG 21 1954

Memorial to Koussevitzky

The late Serge Koussevitzky received many honors during his long and brilliant musical career, but perhaps none gave him greater pleasure than he would feel, if still alive today, at a movement started in the Berkshire Hills of Massachusetts. For the residents, old and young, of this rural area are joining to create a Koussevitzky Memorial Fund for endowment of an annual scholarship for a gifted young conductor.

Born to poverty in Northern Russia, Dr. Koussevitzky obtained his own early musical training by doing menial work in exchange for his lessons at the Philharmonic School in Moscow. But through the years of his greatest success—as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and a frequent visitor to Washington—his interest in young musicians and in the development of new music burned brightly. This dedication to the cause of music was demonstrated particularly in the annual Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood and it was under the guidance of Dr. Koussevitzky that this occasion has become known among music lovers all over the world. It is appropriate but no surprising, therefore, that the school children and their parents of that pleasant New England region should be giving their pennies and dollars for a living and constructive memorial to one who had been their friend and patron.

Attendance Record Set At Tanglewood

Waterbury Republican Aug. 17, 1954.

(Special to The Republican)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 16. — The Berkshire Festival, which concluded here at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon with the performance of Berlioz' "Requiem" in memory of Serge Koussevitszky, piled up new records for attendance in all branches of its varied activities.

More than 140,000 persons, an increase of 33,000 over the record of last year, attended the 12 concerts in the Music Shed which this year were spread over a six-week period. Tanglewood-on-Parade on Friday night set an all-time record for that activity with 10,050. Six public rehearsals on Saturday mornings for the benefit of the musician's pension fund drew 12,511. The student demonstrations during the summer season drew 33,000 and the Bach-Mozart concerts in the Music Hall drew additional throngs to bring the grand total for all activities close to 235,000.

Saturday evening's concert, which brought out 10,400, presented an interesting program of Brahms' "Tragic Overture," Ravels' "Le Tombeau de Couperin" and Piston's "Symphony No. 4." Under Charles Munch the orchestra gave a spirited performance and Walter Piston, the composer, was called to the platfrom to receive the plaudits of the enthusiastic audience. But it was the after-intermission performance of Saint-Saens "Symphony No. 3" which thrilled the audience. Mr. Munch did a splended bit of conducting here and had his orchestra play so that the music seemed to be singing itself. E. Power Biggs appeared att he organ. When the concert was over Mr. Munch was called back again and again. His conducting in this part of the program and the Boston's playing of it made everyone realize that this was another of those specials to which the audiences have been treated in this summer of fine concerts.

The rain and mist Sunday shrank the audience to a mere 9,000 but it did not dampen the enthusiasm of those who heard the memorial concert with David Poleri as tenor soloist and the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and James Aliferis.

As the last notes faded away and the last car left the grounds of Tanglewood, saying "farewell" for another year to programs and performers who had brought so much pleasure to more than a quarter of a million music-lovers from all this country and many others as well, plans for next year's performances of The Berkshire Music Festival here on the tree-shaded lawns of this beautiful estate were under way. The Berkshire Festival is an enduring part of America's cultural life and all who love it must join in saying with the Latin poet, "Ave atyue vale"—"Hail and Farewell!"

S. M.

VARIETY
NEW YORK, N. Y.

AUG 18 1954

BERKSHIRE FEST WINDS TO RECORD 330G TAKE

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 17.

The 17th annual Berkshire Festival wound up at Tanglewood here Sunday (15) at a high peak, both artistic and boxoffice-wise. Charles Munch led his Boston Symphony Orchestra, plus four brass bands, Music Center chorus of 200 and Springfield, Mass., chorus of 50, in a performance of Berlioz's "Requiem." New attendance record for the six-week fest was set, with a new boxoffice mark. Total paid admissions were $330,033, as against $311,600 in 1953.

The dozen concerts of the BSO in the 6,000-seater Shed (with overflow on lawn) brought in $249,217. Six chamber orchestra events in the 1,150-seater Theatre-Concert Hall accounted for another $32,467. Six more music events in the smaller hall added $13,007. "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit Aug. 13 netted $24,066, and there was an additional $11,276 added from Saturday morning public rehearsals.

Pittsfield, Massachusetts, Monday, August 16, 1954.

Plouffe

A SPECIAL GESTURE on the part of Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, swelled the cheers of the audience at the Music Shed yesterday afternoon at the conclusion of the 1954 season, when Mr. Munch, center, singled out Leon Gorodetsky and Georges Fourel, who are retiring after a generation of service in the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

In Brief . . .

Even with yesterday's lugubrious weather, Tanglewood attendance ended up 25,000 ahead of last year to vindicate the planners who staked a great deal on their conviction that a six-week season was the next logical step . . . It must have been a great source of satisfaction, too, when Richmond's Mrs. William M. Crane witnessed the first presentation of the Koussevitzky memorial scholarship award to student conductors Paul Vermel and Samuel Krachmalnick. A purely Berkshire gesture to Tanglewood, it brings credit both to the county and to Mrs. Crane, who conceived the idea . . . The weather failed also to discourage the opening of Marian Week at the Eden Hill Novitiate of the Marian Fathers, where a crowd of 2,500 gathered from all parts of the country for the ceremonies . . .

Speaking of attendance, Director Stuart Henry's report of a marked increase in the number of summer visitors at the Berkshire Museum strengthens the belief that those coming to Tanglewood are equally interested in other high-grade cultural offerings . . . Berkshire's ties to Bob Toski are tenuous,

---

MORNING GLOBE

AUG 16 1954

Final Tanglewood Concert Pays Tribute to Koussevitsky

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, Aug. 15—The 17th Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra ended here in the music shed at Tanglewood this afternoon with a splendid—also a stupendous—performance of the Requiem of Hector Berlioz.

Charles Munch conducted; the tenor soloist was David Poleri, and the huge choral forces consisted of the Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross and James Aliferis, and the Springfield Chorus, prepared by Alexander Leslie.

The performance was in memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitsky, and a photograph of him fittingly adorned the title page of the program.

The Berlioz Requiem is, in its vast and portentous way, partly an electrifying show, with its extra brass of four groups for the tuba mirum and rex tremendae.

It is also, since Berlioz was an artist of peculiar imagination and intensity as well as a man of complications, a religious masterpiece of deep feeling.

Mr. Munch, unerringly a conductor to comprehend these blended elements, makes the most of all of them. The result is a musical manifestation which both excites you and touches your heart.

Like certain other masterworks created in homage to the dead, the Berlioz Requiem is a poetic expression in a highly organized tonal structure that unmistakably depicts the deprivation of life and as compellingly intimates the unassailable continuity of some form of life eternal. More need hardly be said.

More Than Technical Excellence

Today all upon the stage of the music shed seemed at their best. Mr. Munch's conducting showed all his finest qualities, and a controlled passion not always in evidence.

The orchestra played superbly, not alone with fine technical ensemble, but with a string tone rich and luminous and not in the least dry.

Mr. Poleri's voicing of the tenor solo was beautiful in sound and admirable in the churchly devotion with which he sang it. The choruses lacked nothing of clarity, good balance and willing response.

In the music shed Berlioz' directions that the added brass bands be placed at the four points of the compass, could hardly be met. Two of the groups were placed at extreme left and right, stage front, the others a little way into the auditorium, on either side.

The effect was not overwhelming (nor should it be, either, because of the open sides of the shed) but the arrangement served.

At the end the ovation was vociferous and sustained in which all shared. The applause was swelled by cheers. Mr. Munch singled out, as a special gesture, Leon Gorodetsky and Georges Fourel, who are retiring after a generation of service in the Boston Symphony.

Brahm's "Tragic"

The final Saturday night concert was a singularly satisfying one. It assembled Brahms' "Tragic" Overture (some very loud but dramatic tympani beats at the insistent demand of conductor Munch); Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin" which Mr. Munch and the orchestra do most excellently, though taking the prelude a little slower than I like to hear it; the Fourth Symphony of Walter Piston, which is 'dancy, juicy music of stature and distinction, and which won the composer, present in the audience, a hearty reception, and the C minor Symphony of Saint-Saens, which I believe will never have a finer interpretation than that by Mr. Munch. The organist for, the latter was E. Power Biggs, and needless to say, his work was creditable.

The weather for this final day of the festival, was cold and rainy, thereby cutting down the audience to 8950. Ten thousand, four hundred persons were present Saturday night.

To continue with otherwise encouraging statistics, the total attendance for the six weeks of the festival was 135,775, and the total gross revenue $330,033 as against $311,600 in 1953 when the total attendance was 117,950.

This financial total breaks down in $11,274.25 paid admissions at rehearsals for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund; net benefit of $22,000 for the Berkshire Music Center from the annual "Tanglewood on Parade"; a net to the center of $7850 from the six chamber music concerts and a total in receipts for the Boston Symphony of $281,674.75.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
UNION-STAR

AUG 20 1954

Boston Symphony Manager to Quit

LENOX, Mass.—George E. Judd, manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra since 1936, will retire this season. He has had nearly 40 years of service with the orchestra with which he became associated in 1915.

He was honored at a luncheon recently at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Festival to which he brought the orchestra in 1937.

He will be succeeded Sept. 1 at the start of the orchestra's 74th season in Symphony Hall, Boston, by Thomas D. Perry Jr., assistant manager. Leon Gorodetzky, violinist with the orchestra since 1920, and George Fourel, violist since 1921, also are retiring and were honored at the luncheon.

Syracuse Herald-Journal 8/16/54

MASTERLY CONDUCTORSHIP. Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony and the Berkshire Music Festival in "Tanglewood," pictured in rehearsal. The Berlioz Requiem was a fitting musical climax to a highly successful season.

—SEASON CLOSES—

'Tanglewood' Rings With Great Music In The Shed

LENOX—The 17th season of the Berkshire Music Festival in "Tanglewood" closed here yesterday afternoon with 8,950 listeners for the Berlioz Requiem under the masterly direction of Charles Munch. Great music finely wrought by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with the Berkshire Festival Chorus of 200, assisted by members of the Springfield Symphony Orchestra, (four brass bands). Total attendance for the season which started early in July was 135,775.

DAVID POLERI, tenor, who had been a "Tanglewood" student in the late 40's, was an able soloist in the Requiem. The impressive Berlioz work was [illegible] in memory of Dr. Serge [illegible]vitzky whose plans brou[illegible] [illegible]glewood" as a summer [illegible] the Boston Symphony [illegible] being, with later organization of the Berkshire Music Center.

The Festival Chorus which sang effectively with excellence of enunciation was prepared by Hugh Ross and James Aliferis.

NOTABLE were the fourth section of the Requiem, the "Rex Tremendae," with full orchestral forces, followed by the prayer, sung in six parts, a cappella, and the oratorio's "Lacrymosa," with rich melodic content. The principal orchestra's playing in the Offertorium and the "Sanctus" and Agnus Dei were deeply moving. There were several recalls to the stage for Director Munch, who shared honors with the instrumentalists and singers. Noted among musicians in the throng were Prof. and Mrs. Louis Krasner and their daughters, of Syracuse. Professor Krasner renewed acquaintances with Boston Symphony players with whom he worked when he lived in Boston some years ago.—E.V.W.

ALBANY, N.
TIMES-UNIO
AUG 17 195

FESTIVAL HAS BIGGEST YEA

135,775 Music Lov Thronged Tanglewo

The Berkshire Festi
Lenox, Mass., ran up
gest attendance record
consequently the larg
ceipts—in its history, season that ended Sunday

Total attendance, desp
usually capricious weath 135,775, as compared w
previous record of 117,
tablished a year ago. Th paid admissions were $3 as against $311,600 ta
last year.

The concluding conc memory of the late Koussevitzky who co
the Tanglewood festival
its formative years,
8,950 people who defied
day threat of rain to h
Berlioz "Requiem."

BERLIOZ HONOR

The Berkshire Festi
year paid special ho
Hector Berlioz, a num concerts being devoted serving the 150th ann season of the birth
French composer by p ances of complete ver
some of his seldom-heard
The first of these w
Damnation of Faust,"
Mr. Munch conducted
and which Mr. Munch duct this season in New
Brooklyn and Washing

On July 25, Mr. Mun
formed the Overture
trice and Benedick"
symphony "Harold
with William Primrose
soloist. A repeat of mer's "Romeo and Juli
July 31, drew 9,800 pe
an electrical storm.
7 performance included
"Royal Hunt and Sto
"The Trojans" and
performance by the Symphony of the "Te

Soloists this sum
cluded Claudio Arra
Franceschi, Nicole He Leo Smit, pianists; Zi
cescatti and Ruth Po
linists; E. Power Bi
Willem Friso Frank,
Pierre Monteux was
ductor for two of the certs; Richard Burgin, master of the Boston
phony, and Jean Mor
head of the Berkshire Center's orchestra dep
for one each.

WASHINGTON, D. C.
STAR

AUG 21 1954

Memorial to Koussevitzky

The late Serge Koussevitzky received many honors during his long and brilliant musical career, but perhaps none gave him greater pleasure than he would feel, if still alive today, at a movement started in the Berkshire Hills of Massachusetts. For the residents, old and young, of this rural area are joining to create a Koussevitzky Memorial Fund for endowment of an annual scholarship for a gifted young conductor.

Born to poverty in Northern Russia, Dr. Koussevitzky obtained his own early musical training by doing menial work in exchange for his lessons at the Philharmonic School in Moscow. But through the years of his greatest success—as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and a frequent visitor to Washington—his interest in young musicians and in the development of new music burned brightly. This dedication to the cause of music was demonstrated particularly in the annual Berkshire Festiva at Tanglewood and it was under the guid ance of Dr. Koussevitzky that this occasion has become known among music lovers a over the world. It is appropriate but n surprising, therefore, that the school chi dren and their parents of that pleasa
New England region should be giving and co pennies and dollars for a living and co structive memorial to one who had be their friend and patron.

ESTIVAL HAS BIGGEST YEAR

5,775 Music Lovers
onged Tanglewood

The Berkshire Festival a nox, Mass., ran up the big attendance record — and nsequently the largest re ipts—in its history, with th
ason that ended Sunday.
Total attendance, despite un ually capricious weather, wa
5,775, as compared with th evious record of 117,950, es blished a year ago. The tota aid admissions were $330,03 against $311,600 taken l
st year.
The concluding concert, i emory of the late Serg oussevitzky who conducte
e Tanglewood festival durin formative years, attracte people who defied the al threat of rain to hear th erlioz "Requiem."

BERLIOZ HONORED

The Berkshire Festival th ear paid special homage t
Hector Berlioz, a number o concerts being devoted to o erving the 150th anniversar season of the birth of th
French composer by perform ances of complete versions o
some of his seldom-heard work
The first of these was "T
Damnation of Faust," whic
Mr. Munch conducted July 1
and which Mr. Munch will co
duct this season in New Yor
Brooklyn and Washington.
On July 25, Mr. Munch pe formed the Overture to "Be trice and Benedick" and t symphony "Harold in Italy with William Primrose as vio soloist. A repeat of last su mer's "Romeo and Juliet,"
July 31, drew 9,800 persons
an electrical storm. The A 7 performance included Berlio
"Royal Hunt and Storm" fr
"The Trojans" and the f
performance by the Bos
Symphony of the "Te Deu
Soloists this summer
cluded Claudio Arrau,
Franceschi, Nicole Henriot,
Leo Smit, pianists; Zino
cescatti and Ruth Posselt,
linists; E. Power Biggs
Willem Frico Frank, organi
Pierre Monteux was guest co
ductor for two of the Shed co
certs; Richard Burgin, conce
master of the Boston Sy phony, and Jean Morel, acti
head of the Berkshire Mu Center's orchestra departme
for one each.

D. C.

ssevitzky

Koussevitzky received his long and brilliant perhaps none gave him n he would feel, if still vement started in the Massachusetts. For the oung, of this rural area
e a Koussevitzky Me-dowment of an annual ted young conductor.
in Northern Russia, Dr.
ed his own early mu-
ing menial work in ex-
ns at the Philharmonic
But through the years ss—as conductor of the rchestra and a frequent n—his interest in young he development of new
tly. This dedication to was demonstrated par-
nual Berkshire Festiva
it was under the guid
vitzky that this occasio
among music lovers a is appropriate but no
e, that the school chi arents of that pleasa
n should be giving the s for a living and co
to one who had be tron

PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 18 1954

Festival Six-Week Concert Plan Successful Experiment for Resorts

Same Pattern May Be Followed For 1955 Season

Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager-elect of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, said th[illegible] that "we're all encouraged by the results of the experiment but no definite decisions have been made on the pattern to be followed next season."

However, it is understood the BSO will again make plans for a six-week season of concerts in 1955 though the report could not get official confirmation.

A survey among resort operators in Pittsfield and Southern Berkshire revealed today that the six-week concert plan at Tanglewood this year proved a successful experiment.

The majority of resort places close to Tanglewood reported an upward swing in the volume of trade, due principally to the fact that the "heavy load" was spread out over a longer period.

The peaks, experienced when the Festival operated over three long weekends, were leveled off this season, according to owners of hotels and motels, but the smaller tourist home operators had fewer visitors at their places.

Boon to Pittsfield

In Pittsfield, the three extra weekends of concerts provided a greater volume of business for hotels, but only served as a "stretcher" to relieve congested conditions during the "crush period" for motels and guest houses. Generally, the longer concert period was hailed by all as "a boon."

Hotel owners felt the first three weeks "naturally gave us more business" and backed their findings with figures, but motel owners, especially those on Lenox Road, said business for the same period was about the same as last year. Only one motel, the Tanglewood Motor Court, noted that people stayed longer because of concerts during the week.

Motel owners, for the large part, were glad to have the six-weekend concert period because it gave them a chance to provide more accommodations for more people. "It was steady"—"business stretched out"—and "it wasn't so crowded" were the general observations.

Six Per Cent Increase

Thomas A. Fitzgerald, manager of the Wendell-Sherwood Hotel, reported that business for the six weekends was "generally better than last year." He especially pointed to the first three music weekends as being responsible for a 6 per cent increase in guests, as compared to the same period last year.

No appreciable difference was noted at the Wendell during the last three weeks. They ran "the same as last year," Mr. Fitzgerald said. He also noted a slight gain [illegible] days this year, with the longer stays of about 18 BSO musicians. The musicians came on Wednesday and stayed through the weekend, the hotel manager said, and last year only a few stayed at his hotel and then only for the weekend.

About the same report was made for the Allen Hotel in Pittsfield by Manager Olin A. Sturgis. He said business was better because of the extra weekends especially during the first three weeks and "fully as good as last year" for the remaining three.

Week Long Guests

"People came on Monday and wanted to stay the whole week," observed Mrs. S. Friedland, owner of the Tanglewood Motor Court on Lenox Road. "Of course," she continued, "we were filled last year too, but the six weekends made a great difference in the number of people who stayed all week long."

More accommodations for more people was realized at the Wagon Wheel Motel on Lenox Road. "Naturally, we liked it better," Mrs. Abraham Gordon said, "they all got rooms and it wasn't so crowded."

She also said that more people wanted to stay longer, "but we couldn't do it because we were booked up ahead." Business volume remained about the same as last year she said.

Better Distribution

Two motel owners on West Housatonic Street agreed that the six weekend arrangement was better because business "stretched out."

"It's been a boon to business," according to W. B. Guilford, owner of the Town and Country Motor Lodge at 1350 West Housatonic St. "While we did the same volume of business as last year, there was a better distribution of facilities. I think the Festival should be extended right through Labor Day."

The same view was recorded by Mrs. Edwin A. Johnson of the 501 Ranch and the Holly K Motel, and Mrs. Charles E. Daoust of the Heart of the Berkshires Motel. All are West Housatonic Street businesses.

In general, hotels and motels did a much greater business than last year during the six week Festival, according to John F. Downing, executive director of the Berkshire Hills Conference.

The only persons hurt by the extended concerts were those with rooms to let in private homes. Since there wasn't any need for their services this year, "many just lost out," Mr. Downing reported.

While the private room owners did some business, Mr. Downing said, "there was not the tremendous crush and jamming of facilities that there was during the three weekend concerts."

Lenox Notes Improvement

Whether the new Tanglewood schedule is popular among Lenox guest house, hotel, inn and resort operators seems to depend on whom you ask.

The operators of those places which have facilities for keeping their guests occupied during the entire week found the extension of the schedule to six weeks an improvement. Most operators of those places with only guest rooms to rent reported that when there were no big concerts, there were few guests.

Hurts Small Operators

Representing the small operators, Mrs. John M. O'Brien, director of the Kiwanis Information Booth, reports a large increase in the number of people seeking rooms in town for Saturday night only, but a decrease in total business. Mrs O'Brien believes substitution of chamber music concerts during the week for Shed concerts of previous years Thursday or Friday is the cause.

Under the old schedule, the large crowds came early and stayed for the weekend concerts. Under the new schedule, the crowds arrived Saturday and left Sunday, from the small operators' point of view.

Operators of larger accommodations in Lenox — Avaloch, Music Inn, Festival House, Seven Hills—liked the new schedule and would be pleased to see it extended still further. The season started slowly at most of these resorts, but picked up after the second week.

Resorts Filled to Capacity

All resorts found the requests for weekend accommodations more than they could handle, but made no complaints about the all-week business. Unlike the small guest houses, the resorts have the facilities to keep visitors occupied during the part of the week when there are no concerts.

The Curtis Hotel and the smaller hotel-type accommodations also approved of the extended schedule. It increased their all-week business as well as the weekend business. The longer season meant better service could be given to the guests. The service was better organized over the longer period and not under as much pressure at any one time.

Longer Season Suggested

George Turain, owner-manager of the Curtis Hotel, goes along with resorts in recommending that the season be extended even longer, and adds he would also like to see the midweek Shed concerts revived.

In Lee, where most of the Tanglewood business is in small guest houses, business was reported not as good as in previous years. Similar to the small operators in Lenox, Lee guest houses had fewer guests during the week and about the same number or more for Saturday night.

Treadway Dislikes Plan

Heaton Treadway, owner of the Red Lion Inn and Heaton Hall in Stockbridge, said that concert business was "materially less" than a year ago because of the new six-week schedule which cuts to two the number of Shed concerts each week.

"Several of our best concert people did not come this year," he said, "because they did not like the new schedule of only two concerts a week. Our Tanglewood business was definitely worse than last year."

Mr. Treadway explained that the majority of Tanglewood visitors stayed only on Saturday night this year while two or three night stays were much more common a year ago. He discounted any attraction chamber music concerts might have held, saying that only two-thirds of the number of people who came in the middle of the week last year arrived this summer.

"Our volume of over-all business was better than a year ago because of a big increase in non-concert visitors," he concluded.

Simms Favors Schedule

Albert R. Simms, proprietor of the Elm Street Inn and Restaurant in Stockbridge, likes the new schedule because he says it spreads out the business over a longer period and makes it easier to handle. But he added that it did not affect the volume of his business appreciably.

He said that the majority of business now goes north from Tanglewood to Lenox and Pittsfield and that only on Friday and Saturday is his business much affected by Tanglewood traffic, discounting any financial benefits from the chamber music concerts.

Restaurateurs Disagree

A similar reaction was voiced by Aristotle Tripodes of Paul's Restaurant in Great Barrington. "We'd like to have three months of Tanglewood and close the other nine," he said, "why don't they add three more weeks to the schedule?"

The young restaurateur said his summer business is directly proportional to activity at Tanglewood. As a consequence, this summer has been much busier than previous seasons because of the six-week schedule.

A dissenting vote was cast by a next-door neighbor on Great Barrington's Main Street, where Leo Zittman of the United Cigar Store noted a marked decline in business.

"Now, with the new schedule, people are only here on the weekends—they don't have time to spend much money," he said. Formerly, visitors were more likely to spend several days in the area, Mr. Zittman said, while now they attend the concerts and head back to the city immediately.

Familiar Faces Missing

Mr. Zittman, whose store includes a snack bar, said the familiar faces formerly seen year after year have not appeared this year. "Seems like nobody spends any time here. We don't have anything much to offer them except the concerts," he said. "Lots of people stop in on their way back to New York from Lake George and even Cape Cod—that's the pattern now—but they don't stay here long."

A third businessman, Gen[illegible] Scott of Scott's Inc., said his clothing business in Great Barrington is ahead of last year, but he hesitates to attribute the improvement to the changed Tanglewood schedule.

"We get Tanglewood people, sure, but we've had a sale going on all summer, so who knows whether that's it or Tanglewood's it?" Mr. Scott asked.

South Berkshire Picture

While there was disagreement among Southern Berkshire resort owners and entrepreneurs on the value of the uniform six-week program, two main principles seemed to be at work:

1. The closer a resort was to Tanglewood, the more it benefited by the new plan.
2. The successful operations—motels, cabins and popular resort hotels—were more successful, while the "marginal" businesses, including most guest houses, lost out.

The explanation of both these trends appeared to lie in the fact that the crowds were not concentrated in two or three weekends as in years past. Since there were fewer visitors here on the traditional three "big weekends," it was easier for tourists to find the kind of accommodations they wanted near Tanglewood.

Observers noted out-of-towners preferred being near the concerts. Difficulty in driving back to thei lodgings at night over unfamilia country roads was cited as one bi reason for the preference.

With less of a strain upon t more popular facilities in Lenox-Stockbridge area, few visitors were compelled to go afield for their rooms. This sho up particularly in the room r vation service at the Sout Berkshire Chamber of Commerce information booth in Great Barrington.

Many Rooms Available

Chamber personnel said they filled fewer rooms this season than last, and did not fill all available rooms once this year. Hotels, motels and sports centers did a good business, but guest houses were less busy than last year. The season's peak was reached Saturday, Aug. 7, when a high percentage of the guest house rooms were filled, but that was an unusually active weekend.

These observations by the Chamber of Commerce were repeated by several landlords south of Great Barrington. Stuart M. Beard III of the Sheffield Inn reported that business through June and July was somewhat ahead of last year but that transient trade in town had dropped off. Mr. Beard noted that most of his Berkshire Festival business was still concentrated in the last three weeks of the Tanglewood season.

Joyce Rejoices

One of the heartiest Southern Berkshire advocates of the new plan was James J. Joyce, landlord of Great Barrington's Berkshire Inn, who remarked a "decided increase in business."

Mr. Joyce was sure the uniform six-week program brought many more visitors to the county and made both tickets and accommodations available for many who otherwise would not have been able to obtain them. For the past six weeks, he said, the Berkshire Inn has been filled to capacity every Thursday through Saturday. On two Saturday nights he had to turn away people by the score.

Mr. Joyce also said business in the Berkshire Inn grill, a reliable indicator of tourist trade, was "excellent—way ahead of last year."

BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE
AUG 21 1954

PRESENTS CHECK—Timothy J. Sullivan (right), sales representative for Haffenreffer & Co., Inc., Boston, presents to John Brosnahan, assistant treasurer of Boston Symphony Orchestra, check representing proceeds from sale of Haffenreffer Private Stock Malt Liquor during Tanglewood Parade Day at Berkshire Music Festival, Money is donated to Berkshire Music Center Scholarship Fund, which each Summer aids worthy music students to attend Center.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.
POST
AUG 22 1954

The Boston Symphony orchestra clos[illegible] 17th [illegible]k-shire Festival last Sunday with the greatest attendance and largest receipts in its history . . . The final concert was attended by 8,950 persons . . . Gratification at the new attendance records was expressed by Manager George E. Judd, who retired Sunday after nearly 40 years with the Boston Symphony orchestra.

LBANY, N. Y
MES-UNION

AUG 17 1954

ESTIVAL HAS BIGGEST YEAR

35,775 Music Lovers
hronged Tanglewood

The Berkshire Festival a enox, Mass., ran up the big est attendance record — and onsequently the largest re eipts—in its history, with the eason that ended Sunday.

Total attendance, despite un usually capricious weather, wa
35,775, as compared with th revious record of 117,950, es ablished a year ago. The tota aid admissions were $330,033, s against $311,600 taken i ast year.

The concluding concert, i memory of the late Serg Koussevitzky who conducte the Tanglewood festival durin its formative years, attracte
8,950 people who defied the al day threat of rain to hear th
Berlioz "Requiem."

BERLIOZ HONORED

The Berkshire Festival thi year paid special homage t
Hector Berlioz, a number o
concerts being devoted to o serving the 150th anniversar
season of the birth of th
French composer by perform ances of complete versions o
some of his seldom-heard work
The first of these was "Th
Damnation of Faust," whic
Mr. Munch conducted July 1
and which Mr. Munch will co
duct this season in New Yor
Brooklyn and Washington.

On July 25, Mr. Munch pe formed the Overture to "Be trice and Benedick" and th
symphony "Harold in Italy with William Primrose as vio soloist. A repeat of last sum mer's "Romeo and Juliet," o
July 31, drew 9,800 persons
an electrical storm. The A 7 performance included Berlio
"Royal Hunt and Storm" fr
"The Trojans" and the fi
performance by the Bos
Symphony of the "Te Deu

Soloists this summer
cluded Claudio Arrau,
Franceschi, Nicole Henriot,
Leo Smit, pianists; Zino
cescatti and Ruth Posselt,
linists; E. Power Biggs
Wilem Friso Frank, organis
Pierre Monteux was guest co
ductor for two of the Shed co
certs; Richard Burgin, conce
master of the Boston Sy phony, and Jean Morel, acti
head of the Berkshire Mus Center's orchestra departme
for one each.

D. C.

---

ssevitzky

Koussevitzky received his long and brilliant erhaps none gave him
n he would feel, if still vement started in the assachusetts. For the oung, of this rural area te a Koussevitzky Me-
dowment of an annual ted young conductor.
in Northern Russia, Dr.
ed his own early mu-
ing menial work in ex-
ns at the Philharmonic
But through the years
ess—as conductor of the rchestra and a frequent n—his interest in young he development of new
tly. This dedication to was demonstrated par-
nual Berkshire Festiva
it was under the guid
vitzky that this occasio
among music lovers a
is appropriate but no
e, that the school chi arents of that pleasa
n should be giving the s for a living and co
to one who had be tron

PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE

AUG 18 1954

Festival Six-Week Concert Plan Successful Experiment for Resorts

Same Pattern May Be Followed For 1955 Season

Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager-elect of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, said this morning that "we're all encouraged by the results of the experiment but no definite decisions have been made on the pattern to be followed next season."

However, it is understood the BSO will again make plans for a six-week season of concerts in 1955 though the report could not get official confirmation.

A survey among resort operators in Pittsfield and Southern Berkshire revealed today that the six-week concert plan at Tanglewood this year proved a successful experiment.

The majority of resort places close to Tanglewood reported an upward swing in the volume of trade, due principally to the fact that the "heavy load" was spread out over a longer period.

The peaks, experienced when the Festival operated over three long weekends, were leveled off this season, according to owners of hotels and motels, but the smaller tourist home operators had fewer visitors at their places.

Boon to Pittsfield

In Pittsfield, the three extra weekends of concerts provided a greater volume of business for hotels, but only served as a "stretcher" to relieve congested conditions during the "crush period" for motels and guest houses. Generally, the longer concert period was hailed by all as "a boon."

Hotel owners felt the first three weeks "naturally gave us more business" and backed their findings with figures, but motel owners, especially those on Lenox Road, said business for the same period was about the same as last year. Only one motel, the Tanglewood Motor Court, noted that people stayed longer because of concerts during the week.

Motel owners, for the large part, were glad to have the six-weekend concert period because it gave them a chance to provide more accommodations for more people. "It was steady"—"business stretched out"—and "it wasn't so crowded" were the general observations.

Six Per Cent Increase

Thomas A. Fitzgerald, manager of the Wendell-Sherwood Hotel, reported that business for the six weekends was "generally better than last year." He especially pointed to the first three music weekends as being responsible for a 6 per cent increase in guests, as compared to the same period last year.

No appreciable difference was noted at the Wendell during the last three weeks. They ran "the same as last year," Mr. Fitzgerald said. He also noted a slight gain [illegible] days this year, with the longer stays of about 18 BSO musicians. The musicians came on Wednesday and stayed through the weekend, the hotel manager said, and last year only a few stayed at his hotel and then only for the weekend.

About the same report was made for the Allen Hotel in Pittsfield by Manager Olin A. Sturgis. He said business was better because of the extra weekends especially during the first three weeks and "fully as good as last year" for the remaining three.

Week Long Guests

"People came on Monday and wanted to stay the whole week," observed Mrs. S. Friedland, owner of the Tanglewood Motor Court on Lenox Road. "Of course," she continued, "we were filled last year too, but the six weekends made a great difference in the number of people who stayed all week long."

More accommodations for more people was realized at the Wagon Wheel Motel on Lenox Road. "Naturally, we liked it better," Mrs. Abraham Gordon said, "they all got rooms and it wasn't so crowded."

She also said that more people wanted to stay longer, "but we couldn't do it because we were booked up ahead." Business volume remained about the same as last year she said.

Better Distribution

Two motel owners on West Housatonic Street agreed that the six weekend arrangement was better because business "stretched out."

"It's been a boon to business," according to W. B. Guilford, owner of the Town and Country Motor Lodge at 1350 West Housatonic St. "While we did the same volume of business as last year, there was a better distribution of facilities. I think the Festival should be extended right through Labor Day."

The same view was recorded by Mrs. Edwin A. Johnson of the 501 Ranch and the Holly K Motel, and Mrs. Charles E. Daoust of the Heart of the Berkshires Motel. All are West Housatonic Street businesses.

In general, hotels and motels did a much greater business than last year during the six week Festival, according to John F. Downing, executive director of the Berkshire Hills Conference.

The only persons hurt by the extended concerts were those with rooms to let in private homes. Since there wasn't any need for their services this year, "many just lost out," Mr. Downing reported.

While the private room owners did some business, Mr. Downing said, "there was not the tremendous crush and jamming of facilities that there was during the three weekend concerts."

Lenox Notes Improvement

Whether the new Tanglewoo schedule is popular among Leno: guest house, hotel, inn and resor operators seems to depend o whom you ask.

The operators of those place which have facilities for keepin their guests occupied during th entire week found the extension o the schedule to six weeks an improvement. Most operators c those places with only guest room to rent reported that when ther were no big concerts, there wer few guests.

Hurts Small Operators

Representing the small operators Mrs. John M. O'Brien, director o the Kiwanis Information Booth, reports a large increase in the number of people seeking rooms in tow for Saturday night only, but a decrease in total business. Mrs O'Brien believes substitution o chamber music concerts during the week for Shed concerts of previous years Thursday or Friday is the cause.

Under the old schedule, the large crowds came early and stayed for the weekend concerts. Under the new schedule, the crowds arrived Saturday and left Sunday, from the small operators' point of view.

Operators of larger accommodations in Lenox — Avaloch, Music Inn, Festival House, Seven Hills—liked the new schedule and would be pleased to see it extended still further. The season started slowly at most of these resorts, but picked up after the second week.

Resorts Filled to Capacity

All resorts found the requests for weekend accommodations more than they could handle, but made no complaints about the all-week business. Unlike the small guest houses, the resorts have the facilities to keep visitors occupied during the part of the week when there are no concerts.

The Curtis Hotel and the smaller hotel-type accommodations also approved of the extended schedule. It increased their all-week business as well as the weekend business. The longer season meant better service could be given to the guests. The service was better organized over the longer period and not under as much pressure at any one time.

Longer Season Suggested

George Turain, owner-manager of the Curtis Hotel, goes along with resorts in recommending that the season be extended even longer, and adds he would also like to see the midweek Shed concerts revived.

In Lee, where most of the Tanglewood business is in small guest houses, business was reported not as good as in previous years. Similar to the small operators in Lenox, Lee guest houses had fewer guests during the week and about the same number or more for Saturday night.

Treadway Dislikes Plan

Heaton Treadway, owner of the Red Lion Inn and Heaton Hall in Stockbridge, said that concert business was "materially less" than a year ago because of the new six-week schedule which cuts to two the number of Shed concerts each week.

"Several of our best concert people did not come this year," he said, "because they did not like the new schedule of only two concerts a week. Our Tanglewood business was definitely worse than last year."

Mr. Treadway explained that the majority of Tanglewood visitors stayed only on Saturday night this year while two or three night stays were much more common a year ago. He discounted any attraction chamber music concerts might have held, saying that only two-thirds of the number of people who came in the middle of the week last year arrived this summer.

"Our volume of over-all business was better than a year ago because of a big increase in non-concert visitors," he concluded.

Simms Favors Schedule

Albert R. Simms, proprietor of the Elm Street Inn and Restaurant in Stockbridge, likes the new schedule because he says it spreads out the business over a longer period and makes it easier to handle. But he added that it did not affect the volume of his business appreciably.

He said that the majority of business now goes north from Tanglewood to Lenox and Pittsfield and that only on Friday and Saturday is his business much affected by Tanglewood traffic, discounting any financial benefits from the chamber music concerts.

Restaurateurs Disagree

A similar reaction was voiced by Aristotle Tripodes of Paul's Restaurant in Great Barrington. "We'd like to have three months of Tanglewood and close the other nine," he said, "why don't they add three more weeks to the schedule?"

The young restaurateur said his summer business is directly proportional to activity at Tanglewood. As a consequence, this summer has been much busier than previous seasons because of the six-week schedule.

A dissenting vote was cast by a next-door neighbor on Great Barrington's Main Street, where Leo Zittman of the United Cigar Store noted a marked decline in business.

"Now, with the new schedule, people are only here on the weekends—they don't have time to spend much money," he said. Formerly, visitors were more likely to spend several days in the area, Mr. Zittman said, while now they attend the concerts and head back to the city immediately.

Familiar Faces Missing

Mr. Zittman, whose store includes a snack bar, said the familiar faces formerly seen year after year have not appeared this year. "Seems like nobody spends any time here. We don't have anything much to offer them except the concerts," he said. "Lots of people stop in on their way back to New York from Lake George and even Cape Cod—that's the pattern now—but they don't stay here long."

A third businessman, Gen Scott of Scott's Inc., said his clothing business in Great Barrington is ahead of last year, but he hesitates to attribute the improvement to the changed Tanglewood schedule.

"We get Tanglewood people, sure, but we've had a sale going on all summer, so who knows whether that's it or Tanglewood's it?" Mr. Scott asked.

South Berkshire Picture

While there was disagreement among Southern Berkshire resort owners and entrepreneurs on the value of the uniform six-week program, two main principles seemed to be at work:

1. The closer a resort was to Tanglewood, the more it benefited by the new plan.
2. The successful operations—motels, cabins and popular resort hotels—were more successful, while the "marginal" businesses, including most guest houses, lost out.

The explanation of both these trends appeared to lie in the fact that the crowds were not concentrated in two or three weekends as in years past. Since there were fewer visitors here on the traditional three "big weekends," it was easier for tourists to find the kind of accommodations they wanted near Tanglewood.

Observers noted out-of-towners preferred being near the concerts. Difficulty in driving back to thei lodgings at night over unfamilia country roads was cited as one bi reason for the preference.

With less of a strain upon t more popular facilities in t Lenox-Stockbridge area, fe visitors were compelled to go afield for their rooms. This sho up particularly in the room re vation service at the Sout Berkshire Chamber of Commerce information booth in Great Barrington.

Many Rooms Available

Chamber personnel said they filled fewer rooms this season than last, and did not fill all available rooms once this year. Hotels, motels and sports centers did a good business, but guest houses were less busy than last year. The season's peak was reached Saturday, Aug. 7, when a high percentage of the guest house rooms were filled, but that was an unusually active weekend.

These observations by the Chamber of Commerce were repeated by several landlords south of Great Barrington. Stuart M. Beard III of the Sheffield Inn reported that business through June and July was somewhat ahead of last year but that transient trade in town had dropped off. Mr. Beard noted that most of his Berkshire Festival business was still concentrated in the last three weeks of the Tanglewood season.

Joyce Rejoices

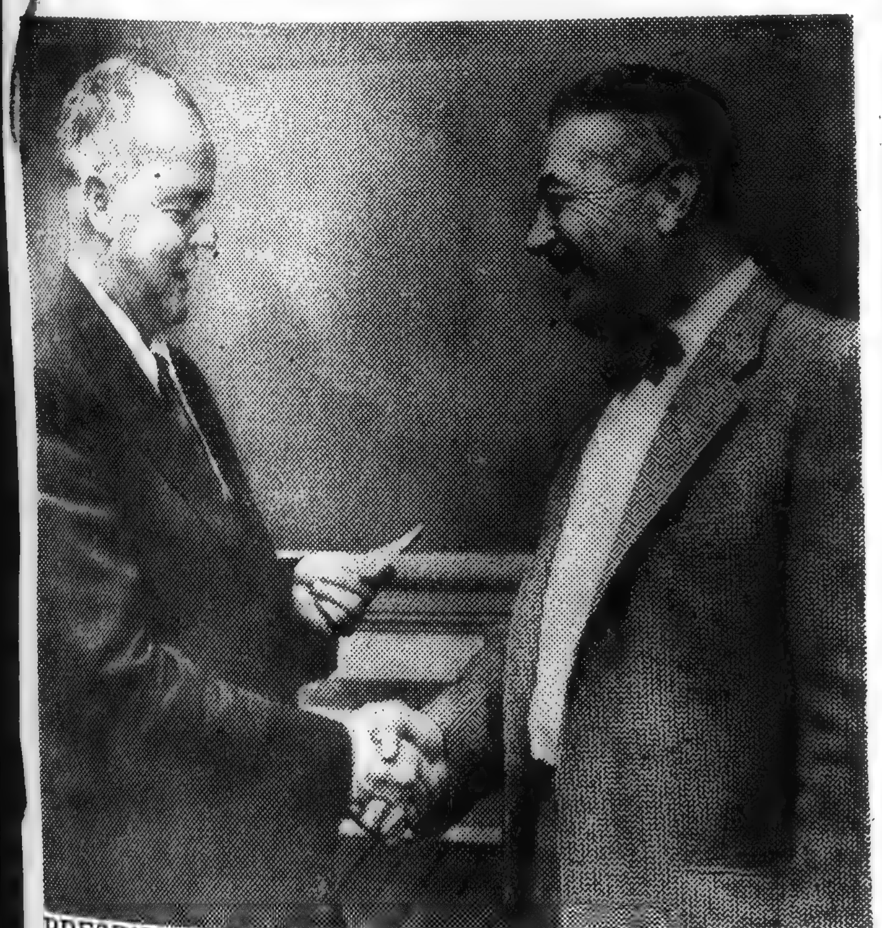
One of the heartiest Southern Berkshire advocates of the new plan was James J. Joyce, landlord of Great Barrington's Berkshire Inn, who remarked a "decided increase in business."

Mr. Joyce was sure the uniform six-week program brought many more visitors to the county and made both tickets and accommodations available for many who otherwise would not have been able to obtain them. For the past six weeks, he said, the Berkshire Inn has been filled to capacity every Thursday through Saturday. On two Saturday nights he had to turn away people by the score.

Mr. Joyce also said business in the Berkshire Inn grill, a reliable indicator of tourist trade, was "excellent—way ahead of last year."

BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE

AUG 21 1954



PRESENTS CHECK—Timothy J. Sullivan (right), sales representative for Haffenreffer & Co., Inc., Boston, presents to John Brosnahan, assistant treasurer of Boston Symphony Orchestra, check representing proceeds from sale of Haffenreffer Private Stock Malt Liquor during Tanglewood Parade Day at Berkshire Music Festival. Money is donated to Berkshire Music Center Scholarship Fund, which each Summer aids worthy music students to attend Center.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.
POST

AUG 22 1954

The Boston Symphony orchestra clo[illegible] 17th [illegible]kshire Festival last Sunday with the greatest attendance and largest receipts in its history . . . The final concert was attended by 8,950 persons . . . Gratification at the new attendance records was expressed by Manager George E. Judd, who retired Sunday after nearly 40 years with the Boston Symphony orchestra.

ALBANY, N. Y.
KNICKERBOCKER NEWS

AUG 16 1954

Berlioz 'Requiem' Is Tanglewood Finale

For the final concert of the Berkshire Festival yesterday afternoon at Tanglewood Charles Munch conducted the Berlioz "Requiem," thus completing 7 of the 12 major works of this composer in the anniversary series this summer. Tremendous in scope and demands, this musical juggernaut, presented in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, combined the forces of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, 36 extra brass, a full battery of percussion, the Festival Chorus and the chorus of the Springfield Symphony Orchestra, Hugh Ross and James Aliferis prepared the choral groups, the best of recent years.

In sustained power this combined massiveness surpasses comparative music in literally ringing the rafters. But the dramatic intensity and religious awe serve to make the 10 sections into 10 varying woods. Analyzed on the basis of the art principle of contrast alone, it is an astounding example of the genius of Berlioz. The introductory "Requiem," full of faith and hope, is followed by the chromatic rumblings and bursts of the "Dies Irae," and then by the awesome strength of the "Tuba Mirum." Placed at compass points, the four brass ensembles cut through like swords of sound to continually build the effects. Followed by the penitent prayer of the men's voices the abrupt pauses of the "Rex Tremendae" achieve unique emphasis. Again the antiphonal choral "Salve" receives periodic blasts of ringing brass. The lyric beauty of an unaccompanied choral prayer suddenly changes all this.

Mr. Munch designed the result to balance elements, and stress tonal beauty within the weight of sound. In Berlioz there is much stress on musical precedence over the words as such. Th choral enunciation kept the message clear, even in the fugal complexities of the "Hosanna."

David Poleri, tenor, sang the solo prayer of the "Sanctus" with convincing fervor. Here again Berlioz wrote ideas that defy convention. With the solo voice punctuated at intervals by choral replies, the quiet use of bass drum and cymbals created weird colors. To follow with the lyricism of the closing "Agnus Dei" marked the final contrast.

The 24 concerts of the series this summer have set new attendance records. Despite the rain an overflow crowd heard the tremendous effect of this final program.

For the 23d program Saturday night Mr. Munch conducted an all-orchestral program. With impeccable taste and catholicity of style. He presented four varying schools of composition. Brahms, Ravel, Pisten, Saint-Saens, in an overture, suite and two symphonies combined to make a splendid evening.

The concert closed with Saint-Saens Third Symphony, which included the organ, effectively played by E. Power Biggs. The romantic spirit and sheer loveliness of this music cause it to retain power today. Mr. Munch studiously avoided the commonplace by directing each musical line to a purpose, perhaps his unique characteristic in conducting. Thus recapitulation became not just repetition but imaginative exploration. The Adagio found strings and organ sympathetic. In the closing sections the fugal imitations mounted steadily to thrilling power.—C.F.S.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION
AUG 19 1954

Greatest Moment for Chorus Singers Was at Tanglewood

Hills, for Instance, Had 'Highlight of My Life' in Sunday Appearance; Mrs. Donnis 'Lifted Right Up'

Fifty members of the Springfield Symphony Chorus, carried high in the clouds Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood, gradually are getting their feet back on the ground.

Singing Hector Berlioz' "Requiem" with Charles Munch, the Boston Symphony and the Berkshire Music Festival Chorus was a top musical and emotional experience for them.

They were invited to join the festival group in presenting the vocally taxing, seldom-offered number.

For Homer Mallory of 131 Orleans St., who hasn't missed singing in a Symphony Chorus performance since it was organized 10 years ago, the Sunday opportunity was fulfillment of the dream of a lifetime.

"I always wanted to appear in Tanglewood before I died," he said after the "Requiem" was concluded.

Now that he has, he isn't satisfied.

"I want to sing there again," he added earnestly.

Still buoyed by the sweep and tenderness, grandeur and sublimity of the symphony and choral work that calls for four supplementary brass choirs, Symphony Chorus members who participated agreed after the performance with Mrs. Ruth Gebeau of 222 Springfield St., Wilbraham:

"I'm surely excited, a bit hoarse—and shaking all over."

They also went along with Mrs. Ruth Donnis of 37 Wright St., Agawam.

"A thrilling experience and wonderful feeling," she said. "I'm lifted right up."

And the singers are convinced they were the most favored people at Tanglewood Sunday.

They were asked if the chorus enjoys the music as much as the audience.

"The chorus enjoys it more. I am convinced of that 100 per cent," Ernest Furnans, chorus president, of 515 Stony Hill Rd., Wilbraham, replied.

Ernest J. Hills of 105 Riverview Ave., Longmeadow, director of the Westinghouse Men's Chorus, said singing at Tanglewood was "a highlight of my life."

More experienced in music than most of the singers, he acknowledged that the night before the Tanglewood performance he "did not sleep" because he was excited about the next afternoon.

The Symphony Chorus sang the Berlioz "Requiem" in October, 1952. This was with the Springfield Symphony, directed by Dr. Alexander Leslie, in a Springfield Symphony Association subscription series concert.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.
EAGLE
AUG 16 1954

MUSIC

Berkshire Festival Closes With 'Requiem' by Berlioz

By PAUL AFFELDER

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 16—The 1954 Berkshire Festival came to a close here yesterday afternoon with a deeply moving performance of the "Grande Messe Des Morts"—the "Requiem" by Henry Hector Berlioz. It made a fitting conclusion to a six-week festival which this year was centered around the larger works of this French master, the 150th anniversary of whose birth is being celebrated this season.

Despite the large forces called for in the "Requiem"—an oversized symphony orchestra, a mixed chorus of extensive proportions and four supplementary brass choirs—this is anything but bombastic music.

True, it has its gigantic climaxes, particularly in the "Tuba Mium" and "Rex Tremendae." Essentially, however, this is a work of sincere, pious devotion, more reserved than it is flamboyant, and still, more for the concert hall than the church.

Spirit of Humility

It was in a spirit of reverence and humility that Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the augmented festival chorus, the latter splendidly prepared by Hugh Ross and James Aliferis. A certain feeling of restraint, except in the overpowering passages with the brass choirs, brought to this music the requisite solemnity and religious stature.

There was much tonal beauty, too, the strings shining forth with their old-time Boston sheen and the chorus singing with a well-rounded tone and generally clear diction.

David Poleri was the tenor soloist in the "Sanctus," performing with fluency and intensity, and, fortunately, seldom forcing his usually lovely tone.

An audience of 8,950 applauded and loudly cheered the performance, presented in memory of the late Serge Koussevitzky. Since the shed at Tanglewood accommodates only 6,000, this meant that nearly 3,000 braved the constant threat of rain to crowd around the outside or sit on blankets on the damp grass.

If this final program climaxed a Summer of memorable Berlioz interpretations by Mr. Munch, it must have been something of a sad farewell for another important member of the orchestra family. For George E. Judd retired after 40 years of devoted service as manager of the Boston Symphony, to be succeeded by Thomas D. Perry.

Not only in Boston, but wherever the orchestra visits, including Brooklyn, Mr. Judd will be missed by his many friends and associates.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN
AUG 22 1954

175,000 Witness Berkshire Boom

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TWENTY years a-growing, the Berkshire Festival has just experienced its biggest season and a record attendance close to 175,000 people.

Miles Kastendieck

How much it has attracted an international audience is not fully known; but as the festival has grown in national prominence, it has also attracted interest abroad.

That it offers something to the foreigner as European festivals lure Americans cannot be denied.

Scope Enlarged

Enlarging its scope proved an important feature of this year's festival. The scheduling of six full weekends with the Boston Symphony functioning full force on Saturdays and Sundays and its chamber group playing on Fridays turned out successfully.

The festival is actually broader than that with the Wednesday evening chamber music concerts included. Under the circumstances it now has a comprehensive program of four events weekly.

If the 40-odd concerts and demonstrations of the Berkshire Music Center are added, Tanglewood thrives with almost unprecedented musical activity.

The festival has also broadened its base in having more conductors and varying its programs.

Though Charles Munch assumed the major portion of conducting, the debuts of Jean Morel and Lukas Foss in the regular series and of Thomas Schippers and Arthur Fiedler in "Tanglewood on Parade" brought important musicians into the picture.

The Bach-Mozart series has grown through Haydn and several "moderns" to be a chamber orchestra series. This expansion is most desirable.

What this festival offered particularly was the core-program centered on Berlioz. For the first time specific attention was given in the music shed concerts to the works of one composer.

This should become a precedent—to be fostered for the Mozart year of 1956, but to be encouraged as an annual unifying element in planning festival programs.

The Berlioz anniversary brought certain memorable highlights. Offering "The Damnation of Faust" may have been the most significant.

The performances of the "Te Deum" and the "Requiem" helped to emphasize Berlioz's place as a writer of choral works on a grand scale. This realization was probably the chief contribution of focusing attention on Berlioz.

At The Top

There were other highlights. At the top should be placed the performance of Haydn's "Nelson" Mass which Hugh Ross conducted.

Then should be included the performance of Prokofieff's Sixth Symphony conducted by Morel and that of Stravinsky's "Pulcinella" by Lukas Foss.

"Going to Tanglewood" has come to mean a great deal today. In comparison with the uncertainties and slim beginnings of a score of years ago and even after the B.S.O. entered the picture 15 years ago, the Berkshire Festival has become a vital part of the American musical scene.

16, 1954. N.Y. World-Telegram and Sun, 8/16/54

Music

Festival Ends on Big Note

By ROBERT BAGAR.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 16.—A big-scale work closed the Berkshire Music Festival for 1954. That was the Berlioz "Requiem," given in memory of the late Serge Koussevitzky in the Music Shed yesterday afternoon.

It takes heavy rehearsing to prepare a work as massive as this. Obviously that was done, thanks to the efforts of Charles Munch, who conducted, and Hugh Ross and James Aliferis, in charge of the chorus, which was reinforced by the Springfield Orchestra Chorus (Alexander Leslie, director).

A large orchestra is required here, hence the Boston Symphony was augmented by several brass choirs as well as by extra players on the stage. The chorus was a huge one. The tenor soloist, David Poleri, sang in the Sanctus the only vocal solo of the entire composition, and with notable effect.

The occasion was deeply moving. Mr. Munch could scarcely have shown more devotion to either the memory of his late predecessor or (at the same time) to Berlioz. If there were any faults in the rendition they happened early. In fact, they happened at the very beginning. Trifling ones, they proved; such things as the male voices of the chorus not sustaining their tones evenly while the female voices sang a descending scale against them. Also, the lady singers—in the same section, the opening "Requiem" — did some anticipating of the conductor's beat. Yet such matters caused only a temporary confusion.

Poetic Lament.

This Berlioz piece proves the stopper to all carping that belittles his musical imagination, his expressive vigor, his total adherence to a subject. The orchestration here is in that master's graphic manner. He sings a huge lament, yet in the most poetic sound.

I wish words could describe the sweeping power of the "Rex Tremendae" or that they could give some hint of the fragile, bitter-sweet prayer of the "Offertorium."

No Berkshire Festival of my recollection has ended so dramatically. And none has more convincingly argued the validity of its artistic aims with so brilliant a closing concert. Truly, the dream of Serge Koussevitzky, valiant toiler in the Tanglewood field, lives on. America's major music festival flourishes, thanks to the dedicated service of those who have come after him.

Saturday Program.

The Saturday evening concert, again conducted by Charles Munch, offered the Brahms "Tragic Overture" the Ravel "Tombeau de Couperin," the Piston Symphony No. 4, and the Saint-Saens Symphony No. 3.

Walter Piston's Symphony, a beautifully tailored job, shows distinct signs of a musical personality. The composer has enjoyed writing it, and there is enjoyment for the listener, too.

I don't know how frequently it gets played—it was composed in 1951—but it will make its way, never fear. For this is a solid, agreeable score with lots of variety and freshness.

The concert—as yesterday's—was well attended. The playing? Mr. Munch had that very well in hand.

E-4 THE SUNDAY STAR, Washington, D. C.
SUNDAY, AUGUST 22, 1954

News of Music

Summer at Tanglewood

Berkshire Music Festival Enjoyed Fruitful, Successful Season

By James G. Deane

LENOX, Mass.

The Berkshire Music Festival is still thriving.

Twenty years ago some ambitious citizens decided man-made music would be an attractive addition to that already provided by nature in these green Berkshire Hills. Three outdoor concerts were presented in nearby Stockbridge by a symphony orchestra of 65, to a total audience of about 5,000.

The next summer a second festival was held, this time in a tent.

In 1936 the Boston Symphony Orchestra became the performing focus, and in 1937 a beautiful Lenox estate called Tanglewood (made famous originally by Nathaniel Hawthorne) was given to the orchestra. The following summer, orchestra and hearers moved from tent into a great, sideless, permanent and quite distinctive shed. And the Tanglewood tale since then has become a famed one of continuous and much-enjoyed success.

Tanglewood this summer has had one of its most interesting and fruitful seasons. It also has been one of the most successful for attendance. While individual concerts did not set attendance records (the all-time mark was 15,800 one day in 1951), the grand total this year topped the 1953 record of 117,000 by an imposing margin, reaching 135,775.

The chief artistic focus this summer, for the public at least, has been Hector Berlioz. Berlioz, known to most American concert-goers for only a small portion of his creative output, was a natural choice for attention. For one thing, the music world this year has been observing the 150th anniversary of his birth. For another, he is a particular favorite of Boston's conductor, Frenchman Charles Munch.

Lots of Berlioz

Berlioz pieces occupied a prominent place on each of this summer's six festival week ends, with some concerts devoted to them entirely. Concert throngs have been learning that there is much to the great French composer besides the bombast for which he is often, and carelessly, cited.

Besides the well-known "Fantastic" symphony and "Harold in Italy" and the also fairly familiar "Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans," Mr. Munch conducted the complete "Damnation of Faust," "Romeo and Juliet," with which he also favored Washington hearers last season; and the "Te Deum," a choral work less gigantic only than the "Requiem," which closed the season last Sunday. Also heard were "Nuits d'Ete" or "Summer Nights," a cycle of six songs for soprano and orchestra, and the overture to "Beatrice and Benedick," a comic opera and Berlioz's last work.

The "Te Deum" and "Nuits d'Ete" are good examples of the two extremes in Berlioz' nature. In the former, Mr. Munch employed an augmented chorus, including young boys and girls recruited from nearby summer camps, and an oversize orchestra (Mr. Munch did not use by any means all the specified instruments, probably partly because space was already at a premium), and the length and loudness of the piece left some hearers lukewarm, although the music has points of some eloquence.

Sensuous Songs

In "Nuits d'Ete," on the other hand, Berlioz reined himself in. The six songs, concerned with love, death and similar poetic matters, are sensuousness itself, with orchestrations beautifully tailored to the solo voice. Eleanor Steber, the soloist, performed them for the most part impressively, giving the most convincing demonstration of maturing artistry to come from her yet.

The "Damnation," which I did not hear, by all accounts was splendidly done. It is already on sale here in a new recording by the Munch forces (the Radcliffe and Harvard Choral Society among them) which is due in record shops this autumn.

The balance of the shed fare has been more conventional. It has included music by Prokofieff, Elgar, Richard Strauss, Brahms and much Beethoven. One novelty was the second symphony of Ernest Toch, a faculty member at the music school operated in connection with the festival.

Of particular interest, besides the Berlioz performances, have been the smaller-scale concerts in the theater-concert hall, which in previous seasons have been given on three week ends prior to those of the main festival. This summer, one such concert has been given on each Friday, preceding shed concerts on Saturday and Sunday, and the change appears to have gone over well with festival-goers, who thus can enjoy the more intimate musical events as well as the big-scale ones.

Overflow Crowds

Even the concert-hall programs have drawn large overflow crowds to adjacent lawns, on the model of the shed concerts, where more listeners sometimes congregate on the grass than the 6,000 seated under the shed roof.

A generous helping of excerpts from Mozart's early but masterful opera "Idomeneo," sung by a student chorus and four soloists of the music center, has been perhaps the outstanding highlight of these programs. This music, given its American premiere entire here several years ago, was given a glowing performance under Lukas Foss, young faculty member of the center and one-time protege of the late Tanglewood guiding spirit, Serge Koussevitzky. Seymour Lipkin, another Koussevitzky protege, played Mozart's B flat piano concerto, K. 450, with considerable flair.

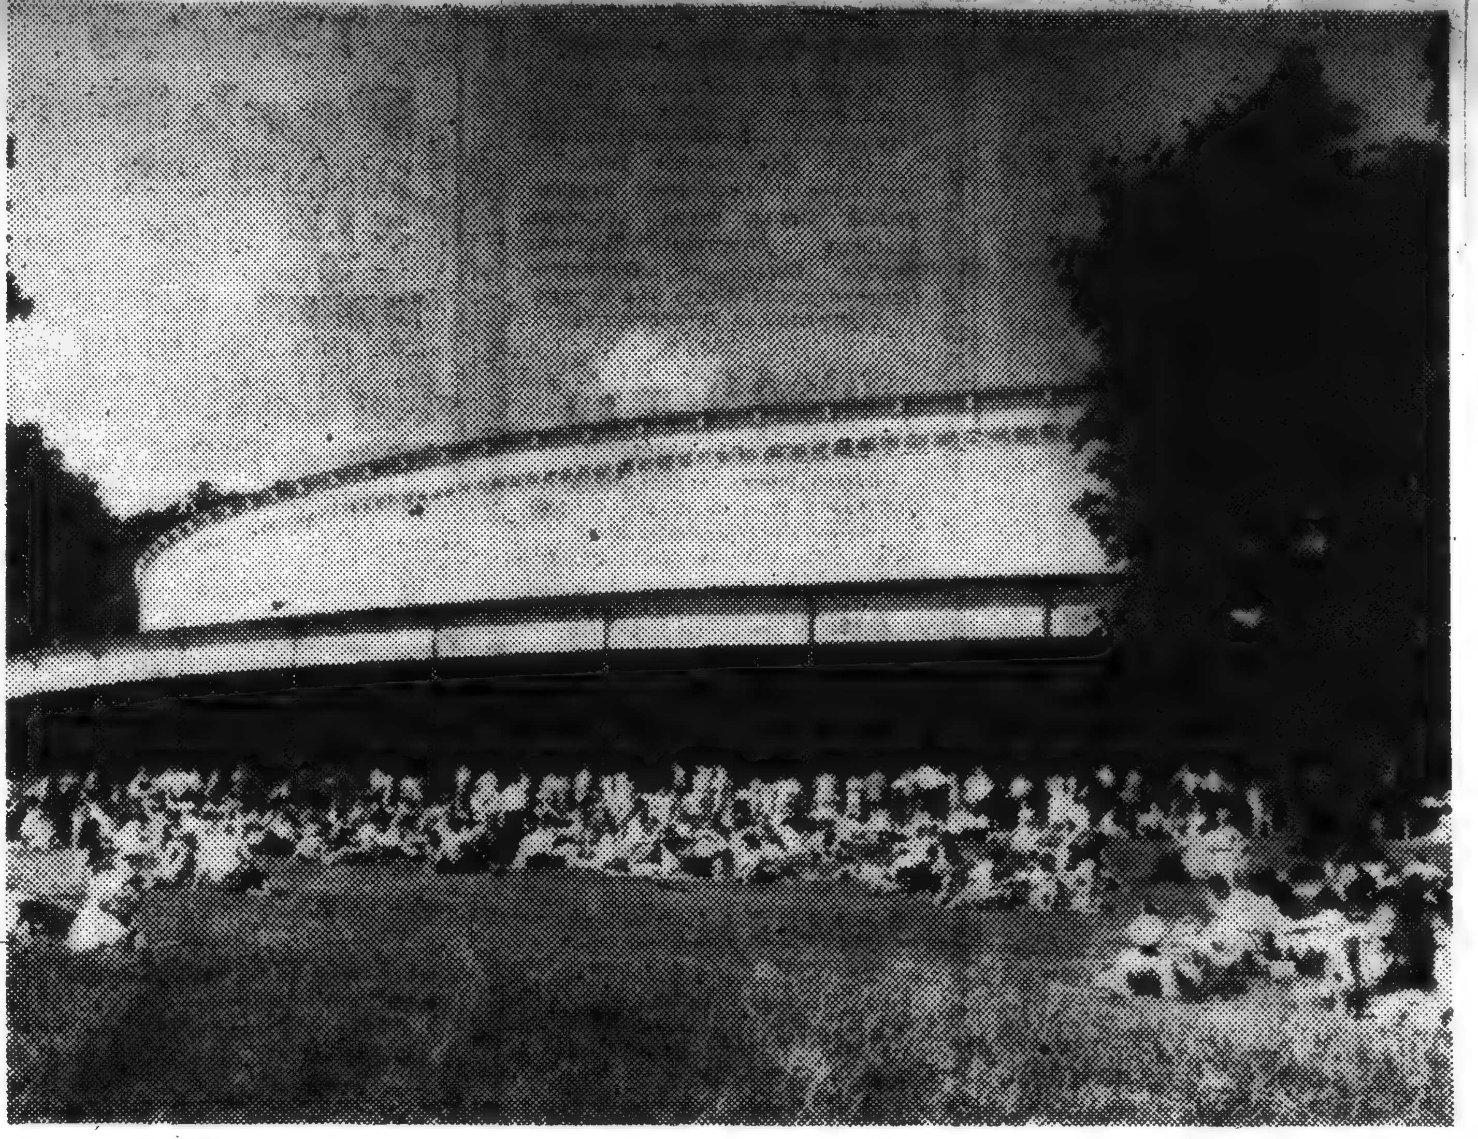
Other features of the Friday night series have included Stravinsky's ballet "Pulcinella," based on music of Pergolesi; Ibert's flute concerto played by the BSO's new lady flutist, Doriot Anthony (who just became the wife of another BSO player); Roussel's charming "The Spider's Feast," and music by Bach and Haydn, including the latter's "Nelson" mass.

New Chamber Series

There has been another innovation in the festival this year, a Wednesday night chamber music series. Performers in these have included the Kroll and Griller quartets, Claudio Arrau, the Bel Arte and Albeneri trios, the Zimbler Sinfonietta and Zino Francescatti and Artur Balsam, the latter pair in a program of Brahms and Bach sonatas. Mr. Francescatti also played the Beethoven concerto in a shed concert.

Operatic repertoire has had a major place in the summer's activities. The most publicized event has been the presentation of Aaron Copland's "The Tender Land," premiered in New York last spring. Rewritten somewhat since then, following critical complaints that it didn't move dramatically, Copland's piece, which deals with a rural Alabama high school girl's graduation, was given on two nights by largely different casts. It still doesn't move very much, but hearers were impressed favorably by Copland's music and forecast possibly better things to come.

The Berkshire Music Center itself, apart from the festival, has been a beehive of activity which has afforded, as in past summers, many other opportunities for stimulating music listening. Besides opera, a student orchestra has played a full-scale concert in the shed each week, displaying a remarkable level of ability (many of the players actually are professionals). Friends of the center—music lovers who contribute to its support—have been invited to numerous other student performances, including the elaborate, culminating "graduation" program called "Tanglewood on Parade" which is held each summer at the six-week session's end. All of the center's 400-odd students, who this year represented 35 different States and 12 foreign countries, had more than one opportunity to show off their talents.



TANGLEWOOD SCENE—A typical Sunday afternoon crowd of music lovers lounges comfortably on the lawn listening to a concert being played in the shed at the Boston Symphony's summer home.

Modernism Prevails

Student music-making leans heavily to the modern idiom, both in performance and composing, although a strolling visitor can hear plenty of the old classic master works sounding forth from practice rooms and rehearsal halls.

Among the most interesting programs—and the most challenging—have been those entitled "composers' forums." At these, students perform their own compositions, some fresh off the music paper, and most quite frankly modernistic. The public—that is, the "Friends"—is permitted to attend these sessions, and the contact is sometimes a bit less than immediately endearing. At the end of one such concert this summer several auditors, gray haired, showed obvious bafflement and, indeed, some concern. "What is the message?" asked one, making it clear he didn't consider what he had heard to be music. The youthful creators replied as best they could, although without apparent success. But this is something they have become used to, and they showed no discouragement.

The music center attracts students from many walks of life, and many degrees of musical attainment. The largest group this year consisted of amateurs in the study group. These play in chamber music ensembles and a reading orchestra, sing in the festival chorus, and attend a variety of lectures, acquiring a musical exposure in six weeks that most winter-time music schools would not offer in two years. There are also more professional groups in chamber music, chorus, opera and orchestra, but it may well be the "study groupers" who get the biggest thrill from the experience. Among their number were a chemist, a dental assistant, a mail carrier and a tool and die maker. One is a grandmother.

Manager Retires

George Judd, modest, gray-haired veteran Boston Symphony manager who has had a large hand in making Tanglewood the busily productive place it is, is retiring this year after neraly 40 years with the orchestra. At a luncheon recently he was given a gold-plated recording of a recent Boston performance of the Beethoven Ninth Symphony, in honor of his long service.

Mr. Judd, who is leaving confident that Tanglewood has a long, useful and distinguished role in American musical life ahead, had some testimony to just how big and in some ways businesslike an operation the festival has become.

Driving up to the back gate in his old-model, well-worn "work car" well ahead of an evening concert, Mr. Judd was accosted by a young teen-age gate guard who said:

"Are you the ticket taker?"

Mr. Judd paused for a startled moment. Then he replied, tolerantly and very likely for the first, as well as last, time:

"I'm the boss."

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
AUG 22 1954

Second Thoughts in Music

Expanded Season Seems Fixture at Tanglewood

Berkshire Music Festival Attains New Heights With Enlarged Program; Berlioz 'Requiem' On Final Day Called Triumph for All Concerned

By WILLARD M. CLARK

The 20th Berkshire Festival and the 15th since the Boston Symphony Orchestra participated, came to a magnificent finale last Sunday afternoon with a great performance of the Berlioz "Requiem" performed in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, long time conductor of the orchestra and founder of the Berkshire Music Festival.

We are told that this Festival has had the greatest attendance and largest receipts in its history. The total attendance at all Festival concerts was 135,775. Total paid admissions amounted to $330,033.

The final week of the Festival offered notable musical fare. The chamber music concert brought Zino Francescatti, violinist, and Artur Balsam in a recital of the A-major and D-minor sonatas by Brahms. Mr. Francescatti was also heard in the unaccompanied Bach Suite in C. The violinist, who had appeared with the orchestra playing the Beethoven violin concerto, again revealed his superb artistry and he was ably seconded by Mr. Balsam. The Bach opus won for Mr. Francescatti a vertiable ovation.

Morel Conducts

Jean Morel, the French conductor, led the chamber-orchestra in an ingratiating performance of Ravel's "Mother Goose" suite and he was equally successful in his reading of Strauss' "Der Burger als Edelmann." Morel is not yet a great conductor. He uses many graceful Gallic gestures, but the veterans of the Boston Symphony do about as they please.

Charles Munch conducted the final Saturday night concert, offering a powerful reading of the "Tragic Overture" by Brahms and a revealing interpretation of Piston's fourth symphony, a work which may well become an established part of the repertoire. The volatile French conductor really outdid himself in his presentation of Saint-Saens' third symphony, with organ. Not a great symphony by any measure, it is pleasant to hear and the audience was enthusiastic.

I doubt if a finer performance of "Requiem" by Berlioz has been given in this country. The Festival Chorus, augmented by 50 voices from the Springfield Symphony Chorus, was magnificent and the huge orchestral resources were awe-inspiring. David Poleri sang the only solo.

However, it was less the huge sonorities of the work which impressed; rather it was the delicate, reverential handling of those purely liturgical passages which impressed most. The performance was a triumph for all participants.

Festival Thoughts

As we look back, we think that the chamber-orchestra concerts and the new series of chamber-music concerts offered the most satisfying moments of the Festival. In the 1150 seat Theater-Shed there was an intimate atmosphere which fostered close listening. In the chamber music series, the Griller quartet was the least satisfactory; the Kroll quartet was outstanding.

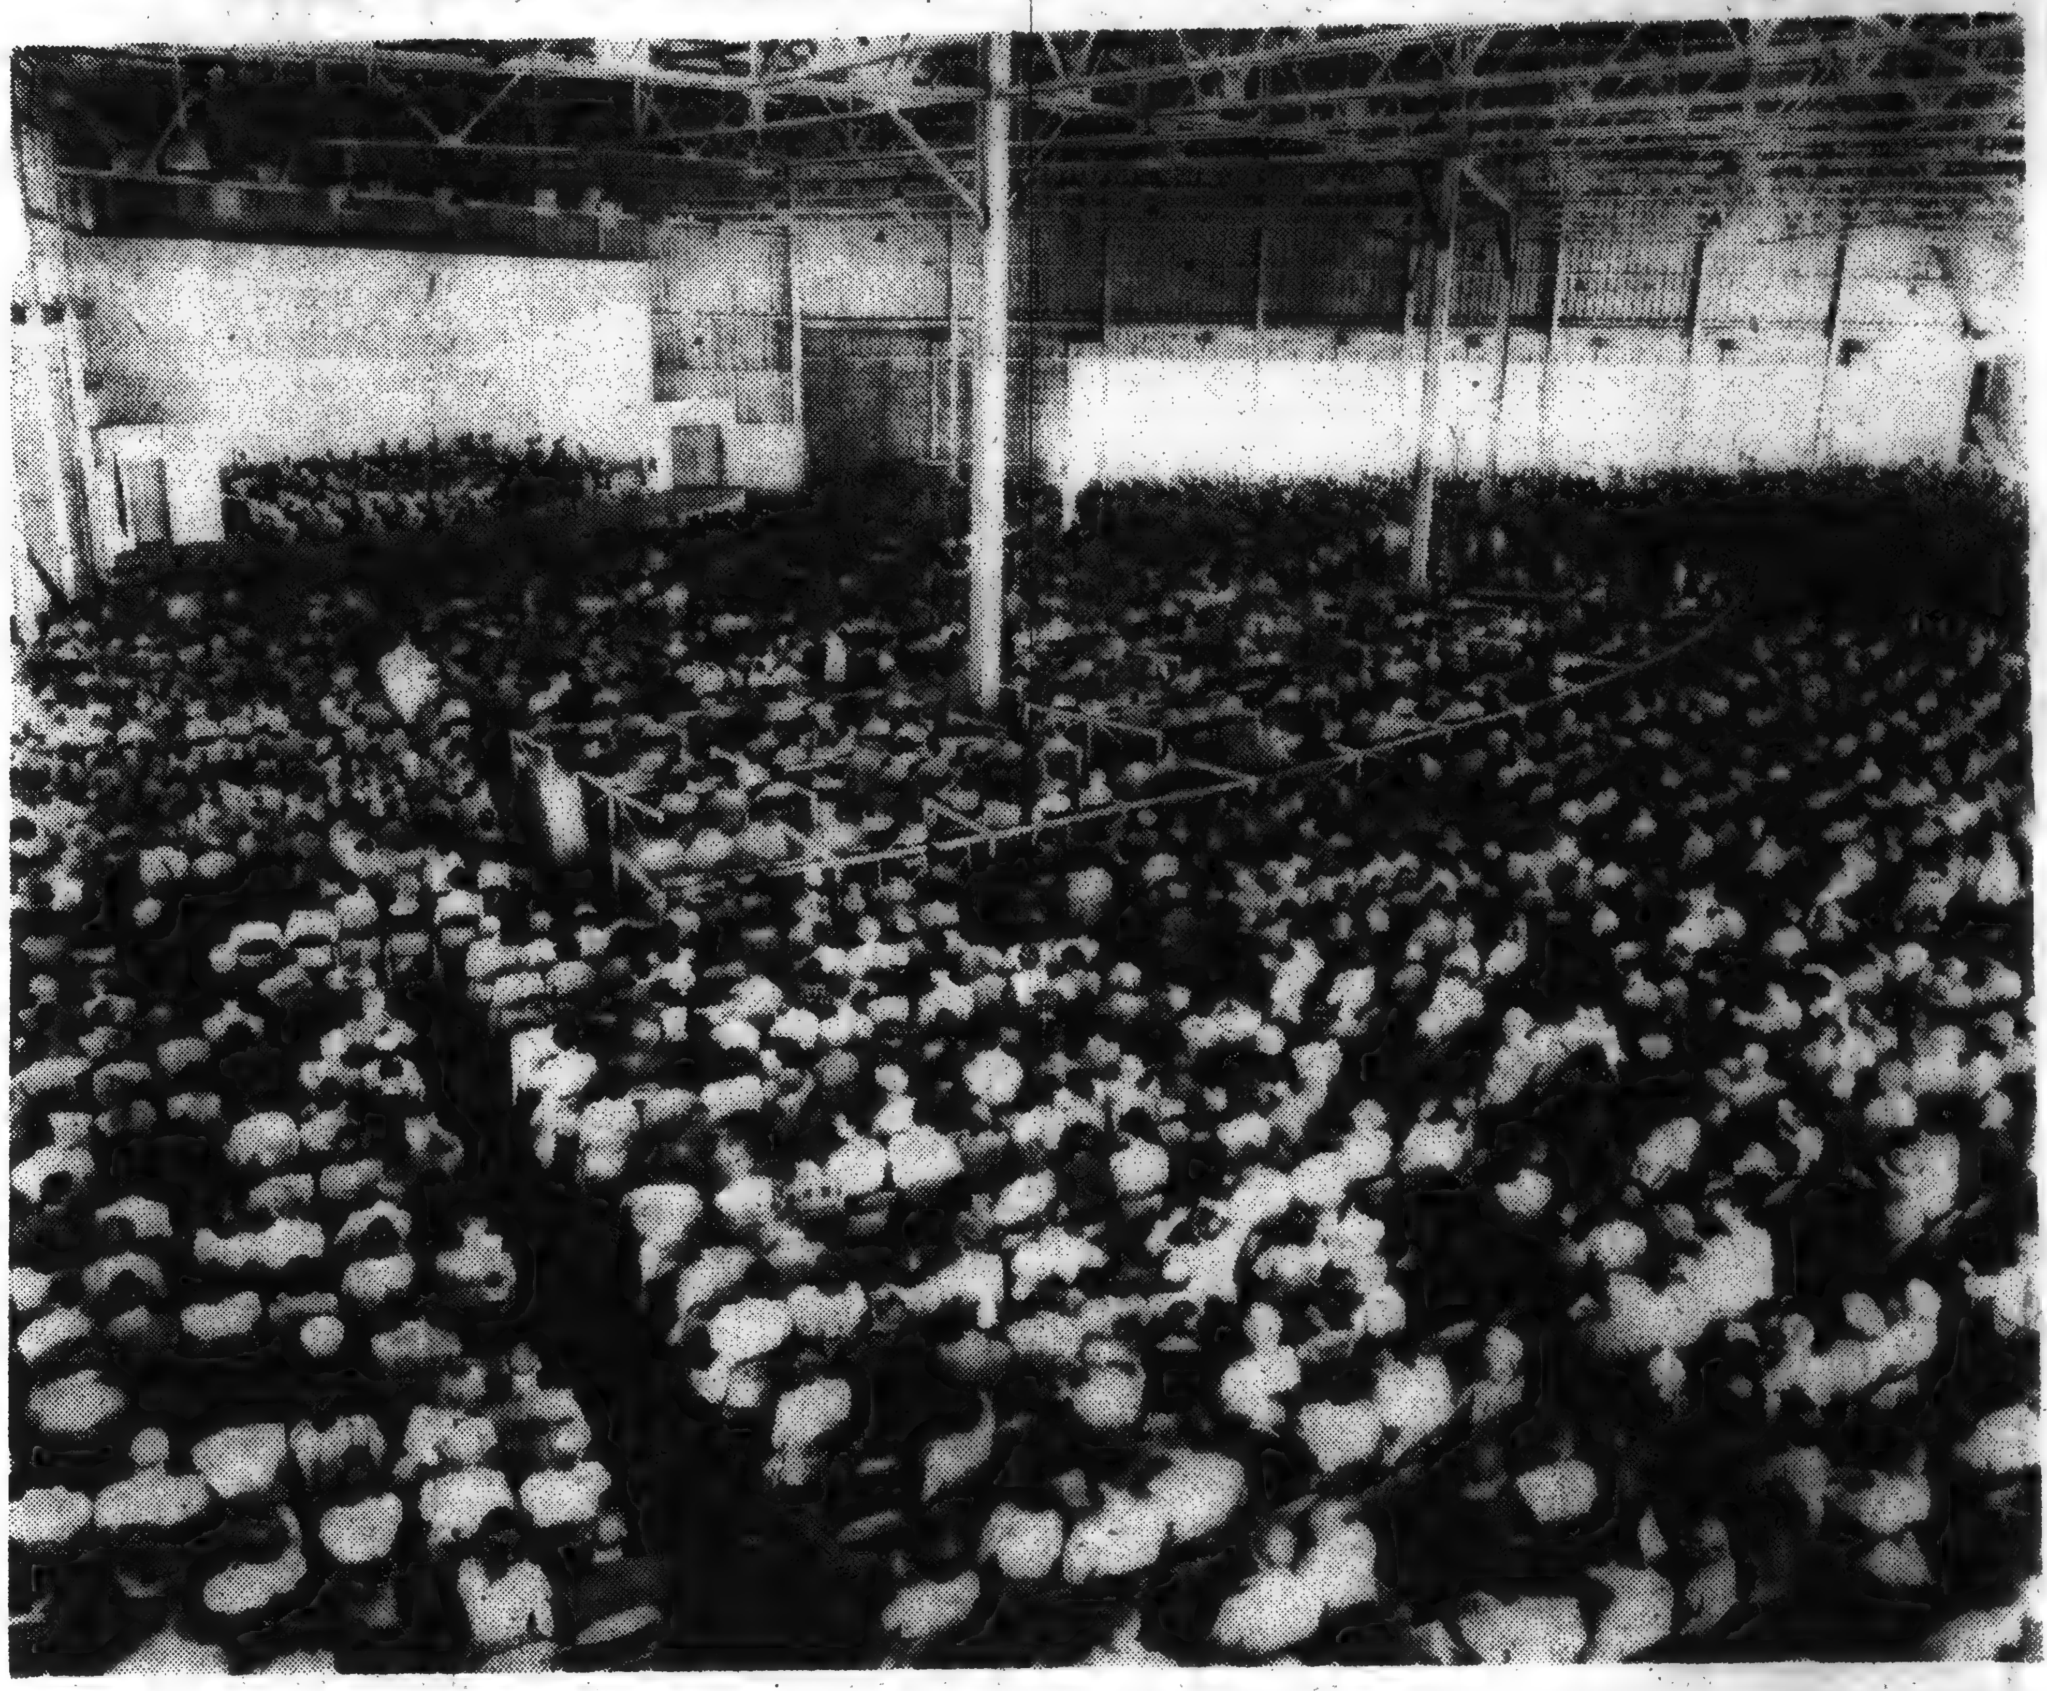
It was good to have a focal point to this festival. The 150th anniversary of the birth of Hector Berlioz offered opportunity for a display of his works. His "Damnation of Faust," "Romeo and Juliet" and the "Requiem" received splendid performances. His song cycle "Summer Nights," sung by Eleanor Steber, came off less happily. The distinguished American soprano has been busy this summer and the voice was not at its best; also these songs demand subtle interpretations, rather than the somewhat theatrical interpretations offered.

American Opera

Copland's opera "The Tender Land" proved the ideal vehicle for the Opera Department. While the opera may not reach the major opera houses, it will be a welcome addition to the repertory as far as Opera Workshops are concerned. Hindemith's "There and Back" is another comic-tragedy which offers some fine music and a deal of entertainment.

The six-week season seems assured. The chamber-music series brought out an entirely new audience and, as noted, audiences and receipts were the largest on record. Retiring orchestra manager George Judd, who urged the extension of the Festival season, has reason to be satisfied with this crowning achievement of his long and distinguished career with the orchestra. Conductor Charles Munch is carrying on the high ideals set by Serge Koussevitzky, and there is every reason to believe that next summer the Berkshire Festival will be better than ever.

Berkshire Festival Music Shed at Tanglewood



The huge Music Shed at Tanglewood, which seats 6000, scene of the Berkshire Festival's week-end concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which completed a highly successful season last Sunday. Tomorrow will mark the 20th anniversary of the Berkshire Festival. The Music Shed was dedicated in 1938.

OPINIONS DIFFER ON LONG SEASON AT MUSIC CENTER

Operators of Small Guest Homes Are Reported to Have Lost Money

Pittsfield, Aug. 21 — The approaching end of the tourist season and the final concerts at Tanglewood have started a controversy among some residents as to the value of the extended season at the music center to the county.

From early reports it would seem that the old adage about the rich getting richer and the poor getting poorer is going to apply if the Boston Symphony Orchestra continues the six-week season.

Little Fellow Suffers

The larger hotels and the newer motels report that while business was no better than last year, it was spread over a longer season which helped them serve the public better. Few reported better business. It just took longer to harvest the crop.

The little fellow suffered the most. The householder with a large home who hoped to attract a few paying guests during the music season found that the bigger places were able to accommodate the one-night tourists. His rooms went begging.

It is reported that in many cities persons are told by their hometown tourist agencies to stay away from the Berkshires during the Tanglewood season because rooms would not be available. With the season now slated to last practically all summer, the Tanglewood business would seem to be all that the county can look forward to during the summer months.

Summer Clothes Issue

The matter of appropriate clothing for summer visitors will reach town meeting importance next spring in some places. How far the towns will want to go in censoring their visitors' apparel is anyone's guess but in most cases cooler heads will prevail and there will be no drastic rules set up.

Whether the rain, sun spots or some other natural phenomenon has been responsible no one knows, but there has been more emotion displayed over issues this summer than in many that went before. The prison camp furor touched it off and this had hardly died down when the scant clothing issue arose. In a few days the primary campaigns will swing into action. Here is another chance for emotion to sweep the city unless the new Democratic county committee can lead the party back to the issues rather than to personalities.

Democratic Troubles

The election of Thomas Callahan of Alton to be county Democratic chairman was a rebuff to Dr. T. Edward Quinn as well as Mayor Robert T. Capeless who had backed Prof. James Burns of Williamstown for the post. The setup of the county committee is such that each town has at least one vote. This gave Hancock, a town which had five Democratic votes in 1952, one-third as much representation as Pittsfield with its thousands of Democratic votes.

How else the committee could be constructed and still allow the small towns to be represented is a problem? It will be interesting to see how well the small towns turn out for the Democratic outing next Sunday when the entire state ticket is expected to be at Wild Acres.

The tax is $5 which may be too high to attract the multitude these days.

First Berkshire Festival 20 Years Ago Tomorrow

Henry Hadley and N. Y. Philharmonic Players in First Concert at Hanna Farm; Tanglewood Scene for First Time in 1937, Year After BSO Debut

By E. H. TOOLE

Lenox, Aug. 21 — The 20th milestone of the Berkshire Festival, which has made the area internationally famous as a cultural and music center, as well as ringing the cash registers to the tune of hundreds of thousands of dollars each summer, will occur Monday. However, with the final notes of last Sunday afternoon's concert at Tanglewood the 20-year growth of this tremendous enterprise was completed.

Born in 1934

It was back in 1934, Aug. 23,, 25 and 26 to be exact, that the Berkshire Symphonic Festival was born. Moving spirit behind the venture was Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Stockbridge, who together with a farsighted committee, brought to the Berkshire Hills 65 members of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra under the baton of the late Dr. Henry Hadley. They performed under the stars in the horse show ring of the Dan Hanna farm in neighboring Interlaken on the west shore of Stockbridge Bowl.

For that first Berkshire Festival series some 6000 music lovers subscribed. It is of interest to note that not unlike this year's Festival programs it was the works of Berlioz that were featured. Honorary chairman of the sponsoring group was the late Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, who was known as the "fairy godmother of chamber music."

The second year of the Festival saw the committee erecting a huge tent at the Dan Hanna site. This accommodated 3000 concertgoers. And still another new "first" was recorded when a chorus of 200 voices joined with the orchestra on opening night.

Following the 1935 season Dr. Hadley resigned and the Festival Committee set about endeavoring to arrange for a larger symphony orchestra to play for the third season. Finally Gertrude Robinson Smith met with the affable manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, George Judd, and the way was paved for the late Serge Koussevitzky and the BSO to step into the Berkshire picture.

BSO On Scene

Came the next summer and the Festival made another change, this time in locale. The tent was erected on the spacious lawn of the old Vanderbilt estate, Holmwood, overlooking the west shore of Laurel Lake between Lenox and Lee. There the Boston Symphony Orchestra made its first appearance in the Berkshire Festival history, its third season, with the dates of Aug. 13, 15, and 16th being memorable ones in 1936.

Still another move in operational site was to be effected. With Mrs. Gorham Brooks and her aunt Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan of Boston donating their beautiful 200-acre estate, Tanglewood, to the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the fourth season of the Berkshire Festival saw it move to a permanent home at Tanglewood located between Lenox and Stockbridge overlooking the north shore of Stockbridge Bowl.

And for this 1937 season, the second with the BSO, the Festival series was enlarged to cover two week ends—Aug. 5, 7, and 8, and Aug. 12, 14, and 15. Once again the huge tent was erected. The exact site was to the north of the formal gardens and on a spot now occupied by the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood.

At Tanglewood

The first year at Tanglewood witnessed two events that highlighted the early annals of the Festival. There was that Sunday afternoon in 1937 when the humidity became so great that the conductor and orchestra shed their coats in the middle of the concert, due to the extreme heat. But perhaps the most history-making incident occurred on Aug. 12, 1937. Koussevitzky was leading his musicians in Wagner's "Ride of the Valkyries" when rain, thunder and lightning greeted the orchestra and concert-goers. Not once but three times the music was stopped and begun again, only to lose out in the battle with the Berkshire elements.

A new record was established that year when on opening night 5000 music lovers overflowed from the huge tent and out onto the lawns. The Berkshire Symphonic Festival had became full grown. But it was to expand to still greater proportions because of that memorable thunderstorm.

After much untiring work and fund raising, ground was broken on Dec. 31, 1937, for the new $100,000 Music Shed which is today housing the Festival concerts and regarded as among the finest such structures. It was completed on June 16, 1937, a month before the opening date of the fifth annual Festival.

Steady was the growth in popularity of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival. There was the concert that drew 14,500. Not only was the vast music shed filled but so were the sprawling lawns of Tanglewood.

Music Center

On Oct. 5, 1945, after the 12th season of the Festival, 10 with the BSO and nine years at Tanglewood, the committee of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc., turned complete control and management over to the Boston Symphony Orchestra. During those intervening years the theater-concert-hall and other buildings were erected to house not only the Festival but also the unique and renowned Music Center school which was given birth in 1940.

Many memorable concerts have been enjoyed at Tanglewood but standing out above all others were, to mention a few, the night of Aug. 3, 1950 when the Italian guest conductor Victor de Sabata led the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Respighi's "symphonic poem," Pines of Rome" without a score in front of him! That was a triumphant occasion.

The 1950 season was the final one in which Serge Koussivitzky was to be music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He retired and that fall he was replaced by the renowned French conductor Charles Munch under whose baton the BSO was to gain further international fame.

Berkshire Note

The 1953 season concluded with a total attendance figure of 117,950 which greatly surpassed Dr. Koussivitzky's record year of 1950 (his last) when 113,300 attended the Berkshire Festival programs.

Distinct Berkshire connections have developed in the history of the history of this Festival. As a matter of fact, "lightning struck twice" for one North Adams family. It was in 1939 that Pasquale Cardillo came down from the Tunnel City for a tryout with the BSO and made his mark to join the internationally famous symphony orchestra as clarinetist. A few years later his sister Christina C. Cardillo attended the Berkshire Music Center school at Tanglewood and she too started up the ladder of success.

She received fine notices for her soprano voice in opera presentations in the theater-concert hall. Last winter she went on to win the Metropolitan auditions of the air and this summer starred in Faust at the Central City Opera in Colorado. Met stars of today predict by right years ahead for this Berkshire lass who got her start at the Berkshire Festivals of Tanglewood.

Completes Gala Season

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who directed the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood this summer.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES

BERLIOZ REQUIEM ENDS LENOX FETE

Munch Conducts Augmented Orchestra in Climax to the Season at Tanglewood

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 15—The prime subject of this summer's Berkshire Festival has been Berlioz. For the climax and conclusion of the six-week event at Tanglewood this afternoon, Charles Munch conducted the French composer's Requiem.

Not many works could provide a nobler peroration for any festival. There are a grandeur and sublimity in this requiem that seem breath-taking to most of us earth-bound mortals. Berlioz' vision at times is as apocalyptic as Michelangelo's in "The Last Judgment."

Mr. Munch, one of the great interpreters of Berlioz in our time, has immersed himself in this music, and he is worthy to deal with it. He conducted a performance today that had the sweep and the tenderness, the pity and the majesty that Berlioz poured into it.

Choirs Augment Orchestra

Mr. Munch had large forces at his disposal. There was, to begin with, the full Boston Symphony Orchestra. At the sides there were four brass choirs, in all an added contingent of more than thirty men.

Then there was the Festival Choir drawn from the students who have been at the Berkshire Music Center this summer. From near-by Springfield came that city's Orchestra Chorus, of which Alexander Leslie is the conductor.

The massed choruses were prepared by Hugh Ross and James Aliferis of the center's staff. They sang with the cohesion of a group that might have been working together for years.

In the "Sanctus" David Poleri was the tenor soloist. Mr. Poleri has one of the fattest tenor voices around these days, and he was in the vein today. He kept under strict rein his tendency to press too hard on the fortissimos, but when he let the voice ring out it had a rich fullness.

It was a performance to remember. When credit has been given to the various elements one must return to Mr. Munch, the commanding figure of the occasion. He gave the interpretation its pace and shape. He was its heart.

Biggs is Organ Soloist

At last night's concert Mr. Munch conducted a program that included Brahms' "Tragic" Overture, Ravel's "Tombeau de Couperin," Walter Piston's Fourth symphony (and it was good and wise to have an attractive piece by an American composer on the program) and Saint-Saëns' resounding Symphony No. 3 in C minor, with which the conductor, orchestra and the organ soloist, E. Power Biggs, scored a tour de force.

The overcast skies today held down the closing concert's audience. There were nearly 9,000 here this afternoon, and it speaks well for their taste and determination that neither rain nor fog could keep them from their appointment with Berlioz. Last night when the weather was fine, there were more than 10,000 on hand. All told, Tanglewood played host to more than 135,000 paying customers this summer.

Before saying farewell to Tanglewood, it is worth mentioning the final student chamber music concert, which took place in the Theatre Concert Hall this morning. The score, written as a result of last year's Wechsler commission, was performed. It brought to light an enormously gifted young composer, Juan Orrego-Salas, of Santiago, Chile.

His sextet for clarinet, string quartet and piano is an ambitious work, more than thirty minutes long. But its resourcefulness and vitality are the notable things about it, not its length. This composer, who studied here several years ago, seems to have what it takes to be a composer—ideas of his own, an individuality, and a deep well of feeling.

TENOR: David Poleri, who sang in yesterday's performance of the Berlioz Requiem at Tanglewood, Mass. The concert concluded the Berkshire Music Festival there.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
AUG 22 1954

BERLIOZ POSITION

Some Further Thoughts On French Composer

By OLIN DOWNES

THE many events and accomplishments of the Berkshire Festival and of the Berkshire Music Center, which ran concurrently with the festival and contributed brilliantly to its offerings, came to a conclusion last Sunday afternoon with the performance of the Berlioz Requiem given especially in honor of Serge Koussevitzky. He it was who, as head of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, brought the Music Center into existence and developed the festival to the point of the artistic eminence and international influence which it now exercises. It was Dr. Koussevitzky's thought that the work of the music school and of the festival should supplement each other, and that the school should develop young conductors, composers and interpretive artists in ways that would prove a powerful constructive force for the future of music in America. The results of the festival and of the work of the music school, both functioning under the direction of Charles Munch, spoke eloquently for the boldness of Koussevitzky's imagination and the soundness of his aims, which seemed at first impractical and visionary to some people who now take pride and credit for the results that have eventuated.

There are others who also have reason to feel rewarded for their energy and zeal in founding this festival twenty years ago. They are the original board of directors and leaders of the Berkshire community who supported the festival idea, and backed their chairman, Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, in establishing the festival as a going concern and in securing the services of Dr. Koussevitzky and the Boston Symphony Orchestra to develop the conception. The festival has been a fortunate demonstration of community spirit and cultural ideals pursued with a sincerity and practicality of method which have made the institution what it is today—the most important and influential music festival given in America.

Extension

This year the Berkshire Festival extended its season from three to six weeks, increasing not only the number of its concert series but also, with the cooperation of the faculty, the students and the choral and opera departments of the Music Center, offering programs of a variety and significance of material without precedent in its history.

The Berlioz performances were given with special observance of that composer's sesquicentennial—he was born Dec. 3, 1803—and these observances could fairly be listed as of the 150th music season since his birth. They gave particular significance to the festival and the musical world's latest examination of what we may call, or at least what has long been considered to be, the "Berlioz problem." This department referred to the "problem" in articles published last December, and wondered what a reexamination of Berlioz' music today would reveal.

In general, what did these special performances and the special attention that the press paid to them indicate as to Berlioz' present value to modern audiences?

They seem to the writer to have indicated that he stands today very much in the same position that he has held for half a century: that of a man of volcanic genius, and singularly uneven production, with works of unequal value, epochal as they certainly were in their period, and very influential in the development of modern orchestral music.

For this writer, as an example, the love music and associated passages of the "Romeo and Juliet" dramatic symphony stand out in the most striking and somewhat unfortunate relation to the vocal passages of the same work. The "Faust" score is for us of more sustained merit than that of "Romeo and Juliet," though perhaps it never touches the flight of the greatest music of the latter score.

Astonishing Work

The "Fantastic Symphony," which seems part of Mr. Munch's special domain, is still astonishing and so interpreted, overwhelming. Yet it requires a special approach, in which the conductor's temperament and imagination meet that of the composer half way, for its complete effect.

Harmonically Berlioz, side by side with astonishingly original modulations, prevailingly is unresourceful, sometimes even monotonous. His instinct for development is not always equal to his intention in carrying forward a thematic idea. His imagination, tempestuous and tremendous, flies off the ground in a manner that sometimes leaves the actual substance of his music behind it.

He is a stunning and incredible genius. Perhaps his most powerful and unforgettable factor is the purity of spirit, the abnormally impressionable and passionate youth. In some respects he seems to us never — perhaps fortunately—to have grown up. He wrote at the beginning, and with incredibly little preparation, as imaginative and original music as he ever composed. Even the "Harold in Italy" Symphony, with all its wonderful tone-painting and establishment of mood, seems like a poor relation by the side of the "Fantastic" of only four years before.

Forever Berlioz will be honored and acclaimed for his astonishing creative power, which unaided and but half trained, and audacious beyond anything else that we know in music, carried him so far. But it will be so far, we believe — no farther. He is part of the world's legacy; his name will forever endure. But how far its power will go was perhaps nowhere better illustrated than by the Sunday concert of Beethoven that followed the Saturday night performance of the "Damnation of Faust." Here were two composers, volcanoes both, and both romanticists, though on different scales and in different ways. But Beethoven, the volcano of irresistible force, is invariably under a giant master's control. The Berlioz volcano erupts with immense and picturesque violence—not always under control.

Supremacy

This does not mean that the allegedly classic master will be the most powerful artist, or that the obviously romantic composer—such as Wagner—will be the less great a creator. It only means that, "classic" or "romantic" or what, the artist, whatever his passion, his inspiration, his melodic fertility, be he Schubert or Mozart, must be supremely the master of his thought and emotion, and the supreme craftsman in its fashioning of his form. And to this supreme height, supremely presented, let us say, by Beethoven, neither a Schubert nor a Berlioz could aspire.

8—THE WINDSOR DAILY STAR, SATURDAY, AUGUST 21, 1954

Music Here and There

By John Gardiner

Today our thoughts turn to that fabulous cradle of culture and music—Tanglewood at Lenox, Mass.—and a cheery note from Windsor's youthful violin virtuoso, Tony Ginter, now at Tanglewood.

Writes Tony:

"Tanglewood is a wonderful place. The students have been working very hard but there is a lot of spirit and enthusiasm. The concerts by visiting artists and the Boston Symphony have been excellent and it is a wonderful experience working with the members of the symphony."

Tony is making his mark in the realm of violinistic music and a great concert future is in store for him. He is an Ursuline product, another reason why this Windsor school of music enjoys such a world-wide reputation for artistic merit.

Now to Tanglewood:

In wooded grounds made famous by Nathaniel Hawthorne's "Tanglewood Tales," musical culture is being broadened.

There in that Massachusetts sanctuary 400 students have been participating in the 12th session of the study of music at the Berkshire Music Centre in connection with concerts of the Berkshire Festival.

And among these students is Tony Ginter whom, we learn, both staff and students regard as one of the most promising students at the school.

* * *

Tony, a scholarship student at Toronto's Royal Conservatory of Music, has completed his six-week course, a course which has extended his knowledge in all fields of music.

For during his Tanglewood stay Tony studied symphonic orchestra playing; worked in an opera orchestra, participating in a performance of Aaron Copeland's "Tender Land"; performed chamber music, joining a different group of students each week. Few Windsor musicians have had such a wonderful opportunity.

Not the least of Tony's musical education was his attendance at concerts under the trees conducted by Dr. Charles Munch, distinguished leader of the Boston Symphony and director of the Tanglewood school.

* * *

Tony admits that he enjoys these festival performances immensely but that his schedule called for hard work five days a week. In the morning he rehearsed with 90 or more other students in a symphony orchestra for performance on the sixth day. This calls for working under three different conductors and learning the art of carrying on under tremendous pressure and the necessity of unfaltering and rapid sight reading.

* * *

MR. TONY GINTER

Reflecting on his stay at Tanglewood, Tony says:

"I have enjoyed my association at Tanglewood with students possessing varied backgrounds. Each student has had vast experience and the work is of the highest quality, with performances well polished. Such combinations create that electrified atmosphere charged with intense enthusiasm for music of ethereal structure in its finest garb."

As this column appears, Tony has returned to his Windsor domicile. But he has brought with him memories of incalculable value—memories of his session at Tanglewood and his association with some of the greatest names in the world of contemporary musical expression. For with the Tanglewood stamp of approval, an artist is made.

* * *

KALAMAZOO, MICH
GAZETTE
8/22/54

N.Y. Critics Hail Concert By Schippers

Local Man Conducts Boston Symphony.

A concert Friday, Aug. 13 by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the baton of Kalamazoo born Thomas Schippers, guest conductor, has won high praise from New York City music critics.

The 24-year-old Schippers conducted the orchestra in its "Tanglewood on Parade" program on behalf of the Berkshire Music Center.

Howard Taubman, of the New York Times, called it "a crisp performance of Bizet's youthful 'Symphony in C' and a turbulent reading of the final scene from Strauss' 'Salome.'"

"It was a powerful performance and a gripping one," reported Jay Harrison of the New York Herald Tribune. "Equally stunning was the conductor's entrance into the morbid and neurotic realms of the Strauss opera, where Mr. Schippers pulled blazing and luminous sonorities from the orchestra."

YOUTH

Miles Kastendieck of the New York Journal-American wrote, "The gala concert offered plenty of excitement. There was the brilliant talent of young Schippers to appreciate. Youth met youth as the 24-year-old conductor played the 19-year-old composer's symphony.

"The performance of one was as extraordinary as that of the other in point of mastery. The responsiveness of the musicians to Schippers indicated deep respect for his exceptional attainments both in knowledge of scores and in qualities of leadership. It paid off in playing the Strauss score with all the luxury of sound and virtuosity in execution for which the orchestra is famous.

Schippers has already started auditioning and studying the score of Gian-Menotti's new opera, "The Saint of Bleecker Street." The premiere of the opera is scheduled on Broadway some time in December. He will make his first appearance as conductor in the New York City Center Opera fall season in about a month. In addition to the operas he conducts regularly, he will conduct a completly new production of Offenbach's "The Tales of Hoffman."

6 Part IV—SUNDAY, AUG. 22, 1954 * Los Angeles Times

THE SOUNDING BOARD

1954 Berkshire Festival Celebrates Berlioz Sesquicentennial and Presents Short Operas

By ALBERT GOLDBERG

Irving Deakin, our roving correspondent, as usual attended the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood and sends the following report of the summer's doings there:

"Twenty years ago, with tremulous beginnings, the Berkshire Festival, at Tanglewood deep in the heart of the green Berkshire Hills, was founded. The first concert, beneath a tent, was directed by the late Henry Hadley, with a group of New York Philharmonic Orchestra players. In 1938 came Serge Koussevitzky with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and established the center.

"Summer festivals, to be sure, are by no means uncommon these days, but this dream child of the late Koussevitzky still has the Boston Symphony (now under the direction of Charles Munch) as its nucleus, and it, with its associated school and other musical activities, provides in the Berkshire Festival what is beyond shadow of doubt not only the most important but the most distinguished of any summer festival on this side of the Atlantic.

BOWL DISSENTERS

"It is possible this statement may bring a shout of protest from the Los Angeles devotees of the Hollywood Bowl concerts. But surely no one would insist that the Bowl concerts constitute a music festival, for which works are commissioned, where people live in music, and where the basic approach is intellectual and creative.

"Since the passing of Koussevitzky there have been fewer commissioned works, fewer novelties, but the approach remains a serious one, in contrast to one of pure enjoyment. All this is emphasized additionally by the intensive six-week summer school of music which functions side by side with the public music-making, with a distinguished faculty headed by Aaron Copland, whose leadership, breadth and soundness are everywhere apparent.

"On Aug. 15 the 1954 season came to a dramatic climax with a quite magnificent performance of the seldom-heard Berlioz Requiem, dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky, conducted by Charles Munch, with David Poleri as tenor soloist.

BERLIOZ YEAR

"This was, as a matter of fact, a Berlioz year at Tanglewood, featuring the work of the composer whose music Hans von Bulow said shot like a bullet from a pistol's mouth. The great renascent interest in the French composer has brought about a belated but widespread recognition of his genius in this sesquicentennial year. Recordings are sprouting on both sides of the Atlantic, and a recently formed Berlioz Society has admirably focused public attention on all these Berlioz activities.

"In addition to the Requiem, the Berkshire Festival has provided magnificent performances of, among others, 'The Damnation of Faust,' the 'Te Deum' and an ineffable one of the song cycle, for soprano and orchestra, 'Summer Nights,' with Eleanor Steber, delicate songs that contradict Bulow's dictum.

"Perhaps the best summing up of the impression of this correspondent, himself an avowed Berlioz devotee, is that his feeling is that it is conceivable that Berlioz himself might have found a good deal of satisfaction in it. And one takes the liberty of wondering seriously if Berlioz in his lifetime ever had the joyful experience of the Boston Symphony tone.

"The other chief interests of the season lay in the operatic department, in two sets of performances. One was a group of one-acters, made up of 'L'Amfiparnaso,' by Orazio Vecchi, 'There and Back,' by Paul Hindemith, and 'The Princess and the Pea,' by Ernst Toch, who this year headed the operatic department while Boris Goldovsky was on sabbatical leave. The other was a reworking of Aaron Copland's 'The Tender Land,' first seen at New York's City Center last season, and still unfinished.

"It is a bit ironic that the work of chief interest was the oldest, Orazio Vecchi's 'L'Amfiparnaso' had its first performance in 1594 and, so far as this writer is able to determine, this Tanglewood performance was the first in America, so far as dramatic presentation, with action, scenery and costumes, is concerned.

Charles Munch

"'L'Amfiparnaso' is, of course, a madrigal opera, consisting of 14 unaccompanied madrigals. Here, under the really superb musical guidance of Hugh Ross, the work musically came to vibrant life as a score implicit with poetry and vitality, jocosity and earthy humor.

EPHEMERAL ART

"Set on the lower slopes of Parnassus, that mountain of the immortal poets, its action is peopled by figures of the Comedia dell' Arte, that most ephemeral art of theatrical improvisation. Of all forms of theater, Comedia dell' Arte calls for the greatest skill in mime and improvisation, something to be had only at the hands (and bodies) of highly skilled professionals. Michel Fokine's 'Carnaval,' in its Diaghileff incarnation, is a supremely fine modern example of the art.

"The Prologue might have been a warning. Two characters crossed the stage bearing a device reading: 'This spectacle is to be seen with the mind, which it enters by the ear and not by the eyes.'

SINGER'S TRIUMPH

"Unfortunately, Frederick Cohen, Elsa Kahl, and Morton Siege[illegible]ho were responsible for [illegible]rrago they attempted to p[illegible]as Comedia dell' Arte, di[illegible]eed the warning of the Pr[illegible]e. In their defense it sho[illegible]d be pointed out that, while complicated, the plot is of the very slightest and almost as completely inconsequential as it is inconsecutive. What it calls for is genuine Comedia dell' Arte or a reasonable facsimile thereof, and not the unmitigated amateurish horseplay it received.

"The result was a singers' triumph, a lively, expressive performance of an intensely interesting musical work under the baton of a virtuoso conductor.

"The Hindemith and Toch works, stemming from a Baden-Baden summer of 1927, today require little comment. They are interesting examples of the sort of musical ferment that was stirring in Germany before a certain mad house painter put an end to it and nearly everything else before he was stopped.

'Hindemith's 'There and Back' (Hin und Zuruck) and Toch's 'The Princess and the Pea' (Die Prinzessin auf der Erbse) today are distinctly period pieces, but none the less valuable for that. The sparse economy of Hindemith's writing is still, in this work, a gem of its kind. Both works received first-class staging, exhibited singing of a high order, and some first-class orchestral playing by student orchestras, made up, for the most part, of American symphonic players taking 'postgraduate' playing courses at the Berkshire Music Center.

"So, another Berkshire Festival goes into history. The stately trees and spacious lawns will have a year in which to recuperate and to remember as they contemplate the triumph of the sun and the season and the plowman. The 1954 Festival, if not the most distinguished in its history, was not without its stirring moments. The attendance was, so it is said, as great as any. Perhaps it is not too much to hope that, come another season, more emphasis will be placed on creations and commissions."

SAN ANTONIO, TEX.
LIGHT

AUG 28 1954

SOKOLSKY SAYS:

Attempt to Invade Tanglewood Fails

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

THE BRITISH open every public assembly, meeting, theatrical performance, concert, or any other gathering with "God Save the Queen!" And it is considered proper and fitting. So this summer, I thought I would do a bit of agitating among the concertgoers at Tanglewood to make it customary to start all concerts with "The Star-Spangled Banner."

I once heard Sir Thomas Beecham conduct "The Star-Spangled Banner" in Carnegie hall with a verve and fervor to which Americans are hardly accustomed. It almost sounded that he meant:

"Oh, thus be it ever, when freemen shall stand Between their loved homes and the war's desolation!"

At any rate, there were some like-minded ladies who agreed and we talked the thing up. They liked the idea of an agitation over "The Star-Spangled Banner."

My first experience was a blank stare. Perhaps the person thought that I had said the "Internationale" instead of America's national anthem.

We listen to Prokofiev and Khatchaturian but "The Star-Spangled Banner"—"Well I don't know," he said, "It raises an issue." What issue was not explained, but it was something controversial.

Then one of my friends came back with the report that she had encountered direct opposition. She had been told that it could not be done because it is so dull.

I could not make out whether what was meant was that the tune is dull or that having a national anthem is dull.

Of course, some of our friends are becoming so sophisticated that anything less than the universe is too small and dull for them.

Tanglewood on Parade

Well, on "Tanglewood on Parade," which is a gala fiesta in the Berkshires, where anything musical can happen, Arthur Fiedler appeared with the Boston Pops orchestra which plays whatever comes to hand, and Fiedler opened his program with Sousa's "The Stars and Stripes Forever," and the enormous audience let out a thunder of applause with cheers and bravos and it did their hearts good.

Maybe nobody will ask Fiedler to come again because he introduced a patriotic note, but the audience loved it.

True, we had gone in plentifully for Berlioz and we always have Mozart, Haydn, Beethoven and Brahms, but a little baked beans and apple pie go far in New England and the New Yorkers who fill the seats and throw their blankets on the lawn are of a generation that can listen to Berlioz's "Requiem" and enjoy good jazz in their young lives without too much shock.

It is like being right wing or left wing in politics, but in the middle, it is like something by Hindemith, which, if you like it, you can have it. And I fear that the young prefer the romanticists and the jazz-writers but not the discordant moderns who drown them in orchestration without joy or sorrow.

Wonderful Concerts Recounted

I recently recounted the wonders of this year's concerts at Tanglewood, the best in many years, and the most favorable response to the revival of Berlioz, who will undoubtedly become fashionable again, to Alexis Lichine, the French wine merchant who remarked that perhaps this improving taste in music will be reflected in an improving taste in food and liquor.

It is a bit astonishing that young people can steep themselves deeply in good music on a fare of bland frankfurters and greasy hamburgers downed with a cola drink.

Perhaps to them it will be neither dull nor incongruous to start a concert with a reminder that the United States is a nation.

So now that we have had the invasion of the sacred precincts of Tanglewood by "The Stars and Stripes Forever," perhaps it will not be amiss to begin the concerts or even the first concert with "The Star-Spangled Banner," and it might even be possible to have some outstanding soprano sing it.

And this rule could be made to apply to all concerts, baseball games, football games, etc.

Occasionally one hears a compromise. "America the Beautiful," or "God Bless America" is played to permit a patriotic note, yet avoiding the national anthem, Perhaps "The Star-Spangled Banner" is feared lest it stimulate nationalism, thus giving offense to the Indians or the Arab bloc or even, God save the mark, the Soviet universal state. We must be so careful, you know, lest we offend the foreigners or they will refuse to take our tainted money.

Copyright, 1954, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

6 Part IV—SUNDAY, AUG. 22, 1954 * Los Angeles Times

THE SOUNDING BOARD

1954 Berkshire Festival Celebrates Berlioz Sesquicentennial and Presents Short Operas

By ALBERT GOLDBERG

Irving Deakin, our roving correspondent, as usual attended the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood and sends the following report of the summer's doings there:

"Twenty years ago, with tremulous beginnings, the Berkshire Festival, at Tanglewood deep in the heart of the green Berkshire Hills, was founded. The first concert, beneath a tent, was directed by the late Henry Hadley, with a group of New York Philharmonic Orchestra players. In 1938 came Serge Koussevitzky with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and established the center.

"Summer festivals, to be sure, are by no means uncommon these days, but this dream child of the late Koussevitzky still has the Boston Symphony (now under the direction of Charles Munch) as its nucleus, and it, with its associated school and other musical activities, provides in the Berkshire Festival what is beyond shadow of doubt not only the most important but the most distinguished of any summer festival on this side of the Atlantic.

BOWL DISSENTERS

"It is possible this statement may bring a shout of protest from the Los Angeles devotees of the Hollywood Bowl concerts. But surely no one would insist that the Bowl concerts constitute a music festival, for which works are commissioned, where people live in music, and where the basic approach is intellectual and creative.

"Since the passing of Koussevitzky there have been fewer commissioned works, fewer novelties, but the approach remains a serious one, in contrast to one of pure enjoyment. All this is emphasized additionally by the intensive six-week summer school of music which functions side by side with the public music-making, with a distinguished faculty headed by Aaron Copland, whose leadership, breadth and soundness are everywhere apparent.

"On Aug. 15 the 1954 season came to a dramatic climax with a quite magnificent performance of the seldom-heard Berlioz Requiem, dedicated, to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky, conducted by Charles Munch, with David Poleri as tenor soloist.

BERLIOZ YEAR

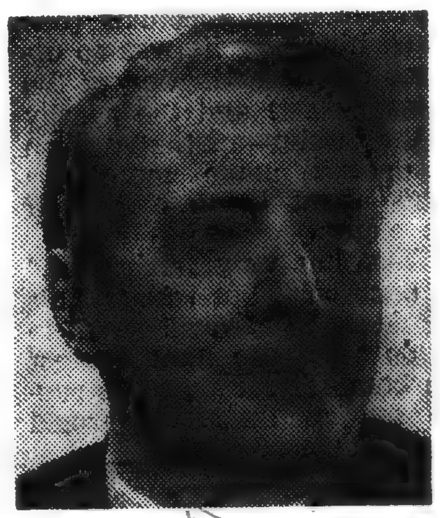
"This was, as a matter of fact, a Berlioz year at Tanglewood, featuring the work of the composer whose music Hans von Bulow said shot like a bullet from a pistol's mouth. The great renascent interest in the French composer has brought about a belated but widespread recognition of his genius in this sesquicentennial year. Recordings are sprouting on both sides of the Atlantic, and a recently formed Berlioz Society has admirably focused public attention on all these Berlioz activities.

"In addition to the Requiem, the Berkshire Festival has provided magnificent performances of, among others, 'The Damnation of Faust,' the 'Te Deum' and an ineffable one of the song cycle, for soprano and orchestra, 'Summer Nights,' with Eleanor Steber, delicate songs that contradict Bulow's dictum.

"Perhaps the best summing up of the impression of this correspondent, himself an avowed Berlioz devotee, is that his feeling is that it is conceivable that Berlioz himself might have found a good deal of satisfaction in it. And one takes the liberty of wondering seriously if Berlioz in his lifetime ever had the joyful experience of the Boston Symphony tone.

"The other chief interests of the season lay in the operatic department, in two sets of performances. One was a group of one-acters, made up of 'L'Amfiparnaso,' by Orazio Vecchi, 'There and Back,' by Paul Hindemith, and 'The Princess and the Pea,' by Ernst Toch, who this year headed the operatic department while Boris Goldovsky was on sabbatical leave. The other was a reworking of Aaron Copland's 'The Tender Land,' first seen at New York's City Center last season, and still unfinished.

"It is a bit ironic that the work of chief interest was the oldest. Orazio Vecchi's 'L'Amfiparnaso' had its first performance in 1594 and, so far as this writer is able to determine, this Tanglewood performance was the first in America, so far as dramatic presentation, with action, scenery and costumes, is concerned.



Charles Munch

"'L'Amfiparnaso' is, of course, a madrigal opera, consisting of 14 unaccompanied madrigals. Here, under the really superb musical guidance of Hugh Ross, the work musically came to vibrant life as a score implicit with poetry and vitality, jocosity and earthy humor.

EPHEMERAL ART

"Set on the lower slopes of Parnassus, that mountain of the immortal poets, its action is peopled by figures of the Comedia dell' Arte, that most ephemeral art of theatrical improvisation. Of all forms of theater, Comedia dell' Arte calls for the greatest skill in mime and improvisation, something to be had only at the hands (and bodies) of highly skilled professionals. Michel Fokine's 'Carnaval,' in its Diaghileff incarnation, is a supremely fine modern example of the art.

"The Prologue might have been a warning. Two characters crossed the stage bearing a device reading: 'This spectacle is to be seen with the mind, which it enters by the ear and not by the eyes.'

SINGER'S TRIUMPH

"Unfortunately, Frederick Cohen, Elsa Kahl, and Morton Siegel, who were responsible for the farrago they attempted to pass off as Comedia dell' Arte, did not heed the warning of the Prologue. In their defense it should be pointed out that, while complicated, the plot is of the very slightest and almost as completely inconsequential as it is inconsecutive. What it calls for is genuine Comedia dell' Arte or a reasonable facsimile thereof, and not the unmitigated amateurish horseplay it received.

"The result was a singers' triumph, a lively, expressive performance of an intensely interesting musical work under the baton of a virtuoso conductor.

"The Hindemith and Toch works, stemming from a Baden-Baden summer of 1927, today require little comment. They are interesting examples of the sort of musical ferment that was stirring in Germany before a certain mad house painter put an end to it and nearly everything else before he was stopped.

'Hindemith's 'There and Back' (Hin und Zuruck) and Toch's 'The Princess and the Pea' (Die Prinzessin auf der Erbse) today are distinctly period pieces, but none the less valuable for that. The sparse economy of Hindemith's writing is still, in this work, a gem of its kind. Both works received first-class staging, exhibited singing of a high order, and some first-class orchestral playing by student orchestras, made up, for the most part, of American symphonic players taking 'postgraduate' playing courses at the Berkshire Music Center.

"So, another Berkshire Festival goes into history. The stately trees and spacious lawns will have a year in which to recuperate and to remember as they contemplate the triumph of the sun and the season and the plowman. The 1954 Festival, if not the most distinguished in its history, was not without its stirring moments. The attendance was, so it is said, as great as any. Perhaps it is not too much to hope that, come another season, more emphasis will be placed on creations and commissions."

SAN ANTONIO, TEX.
LIGHT

AUG 28 1954

SOKOLSKY SAYS:

Attempt to Invade Tanglewood Fails

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

THE BRITISH open every public assembly, meeting, theatrical performance, concert, or any other gathering with "God Save the Queen!" And it is considered proper and fitting. So this summer, I thought I would do a bit of agitating among the concertgoers at Tanglewood to make it customary to start all concerts with "The Star-Spangled Banner."

I once heard Sir Thomas Beecham conduct "The Star-Spangled Banner" in Carnegie hall with a verve and fervor to which Americans are hardly accustomed. It almost sounded that he meant:

"Oh, thus be it ever, when freemen shall stand Between their loved homes and the war's desolation!"

At any rate, there were some like-minded ladies who agreed and we talked the thing up. They liked the idea of an agitation over "The Star-Spangled Banner."

My first experience was a blank stare. Perhaps the person thought that I had said the "Internationale" instead of America's national anthem.

We listen to Prokofiev and Khatchaturian but "The Star-Spangled Banner"—"Well I don't know," he said, "It raises an issue." What issue was not explained, but it was something controversial.

Then one of my friends came back with the report that she had encountered direct opposition. She had been told that it could not be done because it is so dull.

I could not make out whether what was meant was that the tune is dull or that having a national anthem is dull.

Of course, some of our friends are becoming so sophisticated that anything less than the universe is too small and dull for them.

Tanglewood on Parade

Well, on "Tanglewood on Parade," which is a gala fiesta in the Berkshires, where anything musical can happen, Arthur Fiedler appeared with the Boston Pops orchestra which plays whatever comes to hand, and Fiedler opened his program with Sousa's "The Stars and Stripes Forever," and the enormous audience let out a thunder of applause with cheers and bravos and it did their hearts good.

Maybe nobody will ask Fiedler to come again because he introduced a patriotic note, but the audience loved it.

True, we had gone in plentifully for Berlioz and we always have Mozart, Haydn, Beethoven and Brahms, but a little baked beans and apple pie go far in New England and the New Yorkers who fill the seats and throw their blankets on the lawn are of a generation that can listen to Berlioz's "Requiem" and enjoy good jazz in their young lives without too much shock.

It is like being right wing or left wing in politics, but in the middle, it is like something by Hindemith, which, if you like it, you can have it. And I fear that the young prefer the romanticists and the jazz-writers but not the discordant moderns who drown them in orchestration without joy or sorrow.

Wonderful Concerts Recounted

I recently recounted the wonders of this year's concerts at Tanglewood, the best in many years, and the most favorable response to the revival of Berlioz, who will undoubtedly become fashionable again, to Alexis Lichine, the French wine merchant who remarked that perhaps this improving taste in music will be reflected in an improving taste in food and liquor.

It is a bit astonishing that young people can steep themselves deeply in good music on a fare of bland frankfurters and greasy hamburgers downed with a cola drink.

Perhaps to them it will be neither dull nor incongruous to start a concert with a reminder that the United States is a nation.

So now that we have had the invasion of the sacred precincts of Tanglewood by "The Stars and Stripes Forever," perhaps it will not be amiss to begin the concerts or even the first concert with "The Star-Spangled Banner," and it might even be possible to have some outstanding soprano sing it.

And this rule could be made to apply to all concerts, baseball games, football games, etc.

Occasionally one hears a compromise. "America the Beautiful," or "God Bless America" is played to permit a patriotic note, yet avoiding the national anthem, Perhaps "The Star-Spangled Banner" is feared lest it stimulate nationalism, thus giving offense to the Indians or the Arab bloc or even, God save the mark, the Soviet universal state. We must be so careful, you know, lest we offend the foreigners or they will refuse to take our tainted money.

Copyright, 1954, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

TIGHT BINDING

LE DROIT, OTTAWA, JEUDI, 19 AOUT 1954

Radio-Cinéma-Musique

Deux concerts sous les pins de Tanglewood

Mélomanes de toutes les parties du monde

par Thérèse CHARBONNEAU

Le Festival de musique de Berkshire qui s'est ouvert le 5 juillet dernier vient de terminer sa 17e saison de concerts d'été pendant laquelle l'orchestre symphonique de Boston, dirigé par Charles Münch, a donné 12 concerts. Plus de 120,000 personnes auront assisté cette année dans le domaine de Tanglewood, aux abords de la ville de Lenox, Mass., aux concerts symphoniques, aux spectacles lyriques, aux soirées de musique de chambre offerts tantôt par l'orchestre de Boston, tantôt par les jeunes artistes qui suivent les cours d'été. Tanglewood, bien avant la création du festival de musique en 1937, jouissait déjà d'une grande renommée car l'écrivain américain Nathaniel Hawthorne l'avait célébré dans ses "Tanglewood Tales".

Ce festival de musique attire des foules de plus en plus nombreuses venues de tous les coins des Etats-Unis, du Canada et de plusieurs autres pays. Chaque fin de semaine des avions, des autobus, des trains spéciaux, des centaines d'automobiles arrivent ici emportant à leurs bords des mélomanes qui abandonnent le bruit et la poussière de leurs villes pour venir chercher la fraîcheur bienfaisante des montagnes et de la musique. Le pivot de cette vaste organisation est l'orchestre symphonique de Boston. Depuis 1940 le festival de Berkshire a élargi ses cadres en adjoignant à sa série de concerts une école d'été, la seule au monde qui soit soutenue grâce aux ressources artistiques et financières d'un orchestre symphonique. Il y avait cette année 400 étudiants inscrits aux cours d'été. Parmi eux 12 étaient du Canada. Les autres venaient de France, de Hollande, de Grèce, de Hongrie, d'Israël et du Japon.

Charles Münch est directeur de ce centre d'études. Aaron Copland, éminent compositeur américain, est assistant directeur. Le corps enseignant de cette faculté, formée en grande partie par des membres de l'orchestre de Boston, comprenait cette année Gregor Piatigorsky, qui dirigeait la section de musique de chambre, et le célèbre compositeur austro-américain Ernst Toch, qui avait été invité à donner le cours de composition.

Deux concerts — 14 et 15 août

L'ouverture tragique de Brahms, le "Tombeau de Couperin" de Ravel, la 4e symphonie de Walter Piston et la 3e symphonie avec orgue de Saint-Saens formait le programme du samedi soir. Münch a fait du "Tombeau de Couperin" un splendide bijou. Sans son bâton, la musique française recouvre toute sa finesse et son élégance. Walter Piston, américain d'origine italienne, a écrit sa 4e symphonie en 1951 à la demande de l'Université de Minnesota pour célébrer le 100e anniversaire d'existence de celle-ci. Le thème cyclique est basé sur deux quartes ascendantes. Le langage harmonique employé n'a rien d'audacieux. C'est une oeuvre fort intéressante à écouter. Walter Piston qui était présent a reçu une chaleureuse ovation de l'auditoire.

Berlioz

Le concert de clôture, le 15 août, était consacré à Hector Berlioz dont on a fait entendre le colossal "Requiem", grande messe qui lui fut commandée pour célébrer la mémoire des victimes de la Révolution de 1830. Le festival de Berkshire a fait une large place à ce grand compositeur français dont on fêtait cette année le 150e anniversaire de naissance. L'imposant effectif requis pour l'exécution du Requiem comprenait l'orchestre symphonique de Boston (104 musiciens), 4 orchestres de cuivres (34 musiciens), et une chorale mixte de 300 voix formée par la chorale masculine de la symphonie de Springfield et les étudiants inscrits aux cours d'été.

L'effet produit par une telle masse d'interprètes nous enveloppe d'espoir et de terreur. Les 8,000 auditeurs qui inondaient le "Shed" et les terrains environnants ne sont pas prêts d'oublier les clameurs des trompettes et des cymbales retentissantes qui glacent de frayeur en rappelant le jour du jugement dernier, et les passages soudains de la justice à la clémence qui provoquent des contrastes admirables comme le terrible "Dies irae" suivi de l'invocation suppliante "Quid sum miser", chanté à l'unisson avec un sentiment d'humilité et de crainte.

La présence de noirs et de jeunes orientaux qui pointillaient la masse des choristes, de blanc vêtus, a rendu encore plus saisissantes certaines supplications du Requiem.

"Si seulement je pouvais vivre 150 ans", écrivait dans ses mémoires l'infortuné Berlioz. S'il avait vécu pour entendre l'ovation que la foule fit à Charles Münch et aux interprètes de son Requiem, il aurait pu constater que son espérance n'était pas vaine.

Heureux ceux qui ont pu entendre cette oeuvre dimanche dernier. Il faut, pour apprécier ses effets et ses proportions gigantesques, non seulement une interprétation impeccable mais encore, une vaste salle dans un vaste décor, sorte de vallée de Josaphat et des milliers de fidèles pour partager avec vous cette indicible émotion qu'inspire la vision de l'au-delà. Tous ces éléments se trouvaient réunis à Tanglewood et cette occasion ne nous sera peut-être pas donnée de sitôt.

LA CELEBRE "SHED" DU FESTIVAL DE BERKSHIRE — Comme par les années passées, le Festival de Berkshire, sous l'égide de la symphonie de Boston, a attiré des milliers de visiteurs. Ci-dessus, la salle ou "shed", comme on l'appelle communément là-bas, qui abrite l'orchestre.

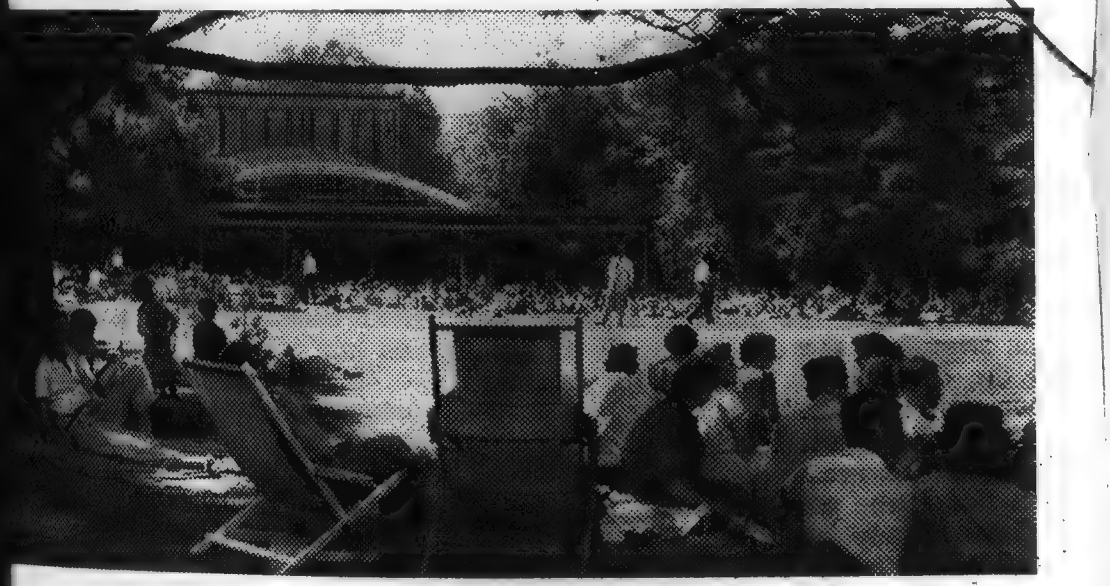
HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
AUG 23 1954

Bullard Land Going To Stockbridge Bowl

Stockbridge, Mass. — An advance bequest of 70 acres of land on the north shore of Stockbridge Bowl has been announced by the Stockbridge Bowl Association.

The property involved will be known as Bullard's Park. It extends from Hawthorne St. on the north to the lake and from the Boston Symphony Orchestra lake front area on the west to Camp Mahkeena.

TIMES WEEKLY REVIEW



of a large audience seated on the lawns outside the theatre-concert hall at Tanglewood, listening to a concert of chamber music.

AN AMERICAN FESTIVAL OF MUSIC

By A Special Correspondent

Berkshire Festival, the Boston ony Orchestra's summer music which has just finished its six-eason at Tanglewood, in Lenox, husetts, has this year honoured Berlioz on the 150th anniversary of by presenting complete performances major works of this much-neglected
er. Romantic of romantics though , Berlioz's clean and discriminating al style with the warmth and emotional ty so lacking in modern composers o suit present-day aesthetics, and for gloriousness of musical sound the Boston Symphony Orchestra perform-his music are hard to equal, especially thoughtful and penetrating a student ioz as Charles Munch. Certainly, in of notable and brilliant performances,
s dramatic and rarely heard Damna-Faust has been outstanding.

er memorable concert during the was the dramatic symphony, " Romeo et." Berlioz himself considered it his ork and it is hard to conceive of any mposer capturing the romantic essence kespeare's play so completely. The a rather than chorus or soloists is the this score and the whole gorgeous, tive, and eloquent orchestration was to a degree rarely heard. Particularly was the bell-like effect of a single note over and over by the violins, a very if perhaps somewhat conscious device.
Berlioz music heard at Tanglewood en the Symphonie Fantastique, a , but stimulating and lyrical if at omewhat frenzied reading by Mr.
the overture to " Beatrice and t." and the " Harold in Italy " sym-this last with Glasgow-born William e as viola soloist. Each was in its masterly reading of the so rarely heard, ed, all-of-a-piece sort. Much music other than Berlioz was heard at Tanglewood. Of the two orchestral concerts heard each week, apart from the Berlioz already mentioned, the most exciting has been the varied and diverse concert, demanding the utmost in integrity and musical versatility, led by Jean Morel, the young French conductor now head of the orchestral department at the Julliard School and this summer's teacher of orchestra and conducting at the Berkshire Music Centre.

Another memorable concert was that led by Richard Burgin, concert master of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, a concert devoted entirely to contemporary music and featuring Ruth Posselt, Mr. Burgin's wife and a noted recitalist, in a brilliant performance of the Khatchaturian Violin Concerto. The thin haunting strains of the violin, the rather—to Western ears—mournful melodic line of the theme, the dissonances of the allegro movement, the complex rhythmic pattern, all seem fairly to breathe of the melancholy orientalism of Khatchaturian's native Armenia. Other works heard in this concert were a stirring reading of William Schuman's robust and clamorous " American Festival Overture "; Vaughan Williams's lovely Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis for double string orchestra, a very modern piece however old the theme, sensitively led and beautifully performed by the incomparable string section of the orchestra; and a notable reading of Sibelius's Symphony No. 2.

Under the 79-year-old Pierre Monteux, whose vigour puts most much younger conductors to shame, the orchestra gave a thoughtful, musicianly performance of the Beethoven Fifth Symphony and, with Claudio Arrau as a strangely self-effacing soloist, an exceedingly good Emperor Concerto, integrated, with the musical line at all times paramount rather than the pianistics of a virtuoso, unusual but as it should be. Mr. Arrau has become a notable Beethoven interpreter and it is to be regretted that he is playing only Chopin and Liszt at Edinburgh this year. Also with Mr. Monteux have been eloquent performances of Debussy's " La Mer " and the Franck D-minor Symphony. Under Mr. Munch we have heard the enchanting Debussy " Iberia " and, with the very competent Leo Smit as soloist, Aaron Copland's brash and jazzy Piano Concerto, a work of relatively minor importance and too loudly orchestrated for the full piano parts to be heard.

Mr. Munch conducted the second American performance of Ernst Toch's Symphony No. 2, composed in Zurich in 1951. Dr. Toch, noted Austrian-born teacher and composer, is composer-in-residence at Tanglewood this year. He has written much chamber music, a few symphonies, several operas, has scored several Hollywood pictures and is the author of two books. This symphony is reverential in tone, serious and carefully made, but curiously unsatisfying and seemingly incomplete. It is long and was very eloquently presented to considerable audience acclaim but it does seem lacking in individuality and invention.

This was the twentieth season of the Berkshire Festival, the seventeenth with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the fifteenth at the Tanglewood estate. It has been increasingly popular as the years have gone by and has become a mecca for music lovers from all over the eastern parts of the United States and Canada. Last year more than 117,000 people heard the concerts, and this year, with an expanded programme but very cold weather, more than 60,000 had attended at the half-way mark. This year there is the full quota of 400 students chosen from some 1,500 applicants from all over the world, all aspiring professional musicians who come to the Berkshire Music Centre for an intensive course in conducting, composition, instrumental work, choral singing and conducting, opera, and good old music appreciation. Mr. Munch is the school's director, and the noted American composer, Aaron Copland, is assistant director and permanent head of the composition department.

LE DROIT, OTTAWA, JEUDI, 19 AOUT 1954

Radio-Cinéma-Musique

Deux concerts sous les pins de Tanglewood

Mélomanes de toutes les parties du monde

par Thérèse CHARBONNEAU

Le Festival de musique de Berkshire qui s'est ouvert le 5 juillet dernier vient de terminer sa 17e saison de concerts d'été pendant laquelle l'orchestre symphonique de Boston, dirigé par Charles Münch, a donné 12 concerts. Plus de 120,000 personnes auront assisté cette année dans le domaine de Tanglewood, aux abords de la ville de Lenox, Mass., aux concerts symphoniques, aux spectacles lyriques, aux soirées de musique de chambre offerts tantôt par l'orchestre de Boston, tantôt par les jeunes artistes qui suivent les cours d'été. Tanglewood, bien avant la création du festival de musique en 1937, jouissait déjà d'une grande renommée car l'écrivain américain Nathaniel Hawthorne l'avait célébré dans ses "Tanglewood Tales".

Ce festival de musique attire des foules de plus en plus nombreuses venues de tous les coins des Etats-Unis, du Canada et de plusieurs autres pays. Chaque fin de semaine des avions, des autobus, des trains spéciaux, des centaines d'automobiles arrivent ici emportant à leurs bords des mélomanes qui abandonnent le bruit et la poussière de leurs villes pour venir chercher la fraîcheur bienfaisante des montagnes et de la musique. Le pivot de cette vaste organisation est l'orchestre symphonique de Boston. Depuis 1940 le festival de Berkshire a élargi ses cadres en adjoignant à sa série de concerts une école d'été, la seule au monde qui soit soutenue grâce aux ressources artistiques et financières d'un orchestre symphonique. Il y avait cette année 400 étudiants inscrits aux cours d'été. Parmi eux 12 étaient du Canada. Les autres venaient de France, de Hollande, de Grèce, de Hongrie, d'Israël et du Japon.

Charles Münch est directeur de ce centre d'études. Aaron Copland, éminent compositeur américain, est assistant directeur. Le corps enseignant de cette faculté, formée en grande partie par des membres de l'orchestre de Boston, comprenait cette année Gregor Piatigorsky, qui dirigeait la section de musique de chambre, et le célèbre compositeur austro-américain Ernst Toch, qui avait été invité à donner le cours de composition.

Deux concerts — 14 et 15 août

L'ouverture tragique de Brahms, le "Tombeau de Couperin" de Ravel, la 4e symphonie de Walter Piston et la 3e symphonie avec orgue de Saint-Saens formait le programme du samedi soir. Münch a fait du "Tombeau de Couperin" un splendide bijou. Sans son bâton, la musique française recouvre toute sa finesse et son élégance. Walter Piston, américain d'origine italienne, a écrit sa 4e symphonie en 1951 à la demande de l'Université de Minnesota pour célébrer le 100e anniversaire d'existence de celle-ci. Le thème cyclique est basé sur deux quarts ascendantes. Le langage harmonique employé n'a rien d'audacieux. C'est une oeuvre fort intéressante à écouter. Walter Piston qui était présent a reçu une chaleureuse ovation de l'auditoire.

Berlioz

Le concert de clôture, le 15 août, était consacré à Hector Berlioz dont on a fait entendre le colossal "Requiem", grande messe qui lui fut commandée pour célébrer la mémoire des victimes de la Révolution de 1830. Le festival de Berkshire a fait une large place à ce grand compositeur français dont on fêtait cette année le 150e anniversaire de naissance. L'imposant effectif requis pour l'exécution du Requiem comprenait l'orchestre symphonique de Boston (104 musiciens), 4 orchestres de cuivres (34 musiciens), et une chorale mixte de 300 voix formée par la chorale masculine de la symphonie de Springfield et les étudiants inscrits aux cours d'été.

L'effet produit par une telle masse d'interprètes nous enveloppe d'espoir et de terreur. Les 8,000 auditeurs qui inondaient le "Shed" et les terrains environnants ne sont pas prêts d'oublier les clameurs des trompettes et des cymbales retentissantes qui glacent de frayeur en rappelant le jour du jugement dernier, et les passages soudains de la justice à la clémence qui provoquent des contrastes admirables comme le terrible "Dies irae" suivi de l'invocation suppliante "Quid sum miser", chanté à l'unisson avec un sentiment d'humilité et de crainte.

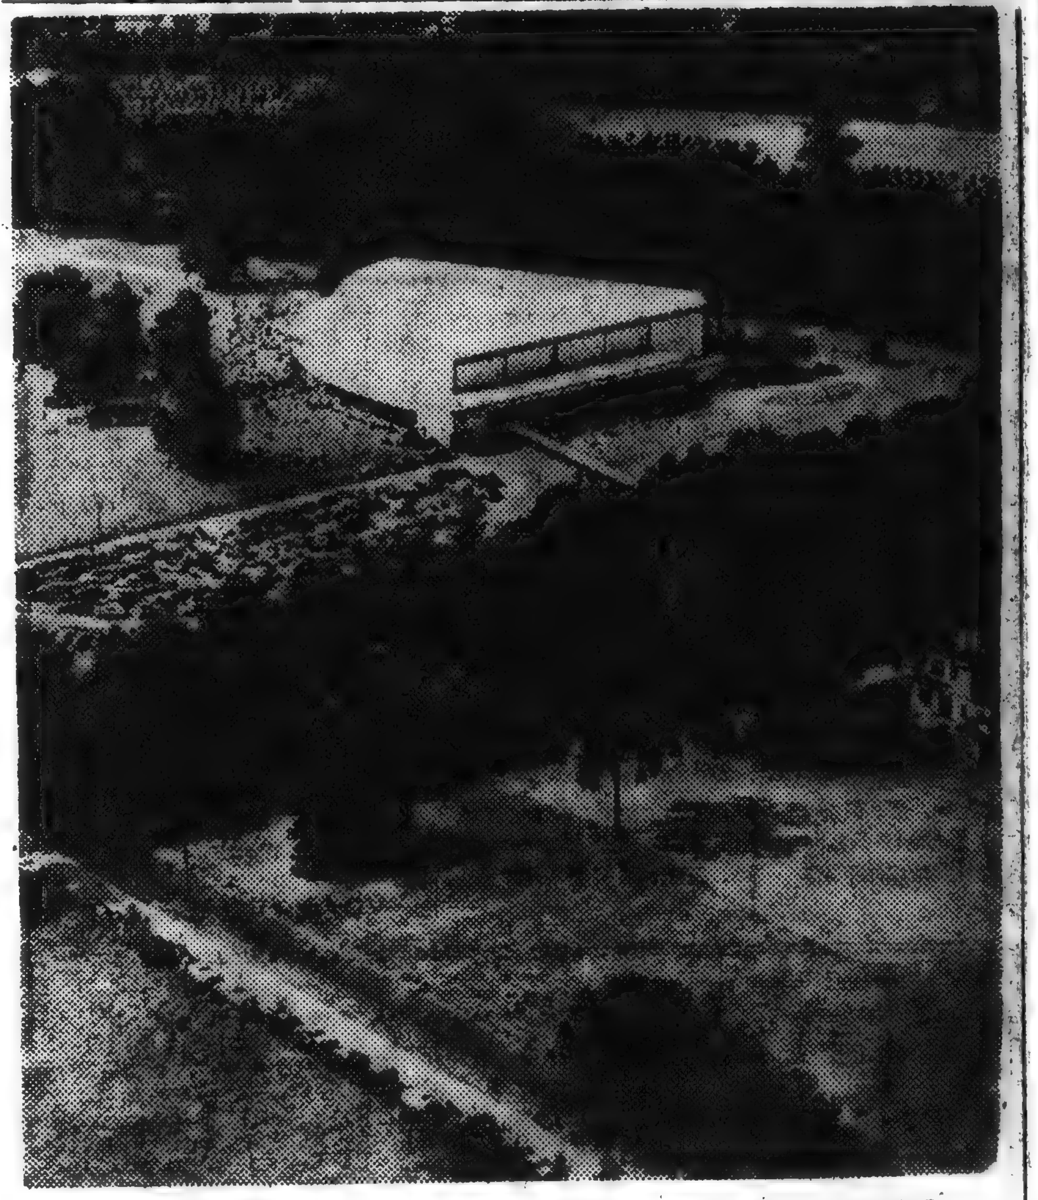
La présence de noirs et de jeunes orientaux qui pointillaient la masse des choristes, de blanc vêtus, a rendu encore plus saisissantes certaines supplications du Requiem.

"Si seulement je pouvais vivre 150 ans", écrivait dans ses mémoires l'infortuné Berlioz. S'il avait vécu pour entendre l'ovation que la foule fit à Charles Münch et aux interprètes de son Requiem, il aurait pu constater que son espérance n'était pas vaine.

Heureux ceux qui ont pu entendre cette oeuvre dimanche dernier. Il faut, pour apprécier ses effets et ses proportions gigantesques, non seulement une interprétation impeccable mais encore, une vaste salle dans un vaste décor, sorte de vallée de Josaphat et des milliers de fidèles pour partager avec vous cette indicible émotion qu'inspire la vision de l'au-delà. Tous ces éléments se trouvaient réunis à Tanglewood et cette occasion ne nous sera peut-être pas donnée de sitôt.



LA CELEBRE "SHED" DU FESTIVAL DE BERKSHIRE — Comme par les années passées, le Festival de Berkshire, sous l'égide de la symphonie de Boston, a attiré des milliers de visiteurs. Ci-dessus, la salle ou "shed", comme on l'appelle communément là-bas, qui abrite l'orchestre.

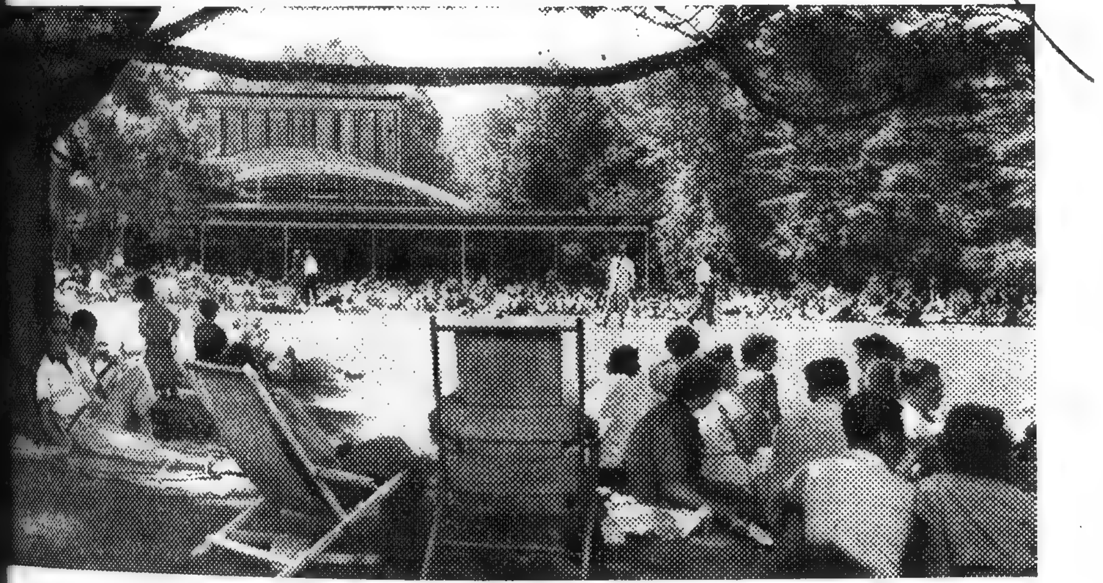
HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
AUG 23 1954

Bullard Land Going To Stockbridge Bowl

Stockbridge, Mass. — An advance bequest of 70 acres of land on the north shore of Stockbridge Bowl has been announced by the Stockbridge Bowl Association.

The property involved will be known as Bullard's Park. It extends from Hawthorne St. on the north to the lake and from the Boston Symphony Orchestra lake front area on the west to Camp Mahkeena.

TIMES WEEKLY REVIEW



t of a large audience seated on the lawns outside the theatre-concert hall at Tanglewood, listening to a concert of chamber music.

AN AMERICAN FESTIVAL OF MUSIC

By A Special Correspondent

Berkshire Festival, the Boston ony Orchestra's summer music l which has just finished its six- season at Tanglewood, in Lenox, chusetts, has this year honoured Berlioz on the 150th anniversary of h by presenting complete performances major works of this much-neglected er. Romantic of romantics though s. Berlioz's clean and discriminating al style with the warmth and emotional ity so lacking in modern composers o suit present-day aesthetics, and for gorgeousness of musical sound the Boston Symphony Orchestra perform- f his music are hard to equal, especially o thoughtful and penetrating a student lioz as Charles Munch. Certainly, in n of notable and brilliant performances, s dramatic and rarely heard Damna- Faust has been outstanding.

her memorable concert during the was the dramatic symphony, " Romeo iet." Berlioz himself considered it his ork and it is hard to conceive of any omposer capturing the romantic essence kespeare's play so completely. The ther than chorus or soloists is the this score and the whole gorgeous, ative, and eloquent orchestration was to a degree rarely heard. Particularly was the bell-like effect of a single note over and over by the violins, a very e perhaps somewhat conscious device. r Berlioz music heard at Tanglewood een the Symphonie Fantastique, a . but stimulating and lyrical if at somewhat frenzied reading by Mr. , the overture to " Beatrice and " and the " Harold in Italy " sym- n's last with Glasgow-born William se as viola soloist. Each was in its masterly reading of the so rarely heard, ted, all-of-a-piece sort. Much music other than Berlioz was heard at Tanglewood. Of the two orchestral concerts heard each week, apart from the Berlioz already mentioned, the most exciting has been the varied and diverse concert, demanding the utmost in integrity and musical versatility, led by Jean Morel, the young French conductor now head of the orchestral department at the Julliard School and this summer's teacher of orchestra and conducting at the Berkshire Music Centre.

Another memorable concert was that led by Richard Burgin, concert master of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, a concert devoted entirely to contemporary music and featuring Ruth Posselt, Mr. Burgin's wife and a noted recitalist, in a brilliant performance of the Khatchaturian Violin Concerto. The thin haunting strains of the violin, the rather—to Western ears—mournful melodic line of the theme, the dissonances of the allegro movement, the complex rhythmic pattern, all seem fairly to breathe of the melancholy orientalism of Khatchaturian's native Armenia. Other works heard in this concert were a stirring reading of William Schuman's robust and clamorous " American Festival Overture "; Vaughan Williams's lovely Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis for double string orchestra, a very modern piece however old the theme, sensitively led and beautifully performed by the incomparable string section of the orchestra; and a notable reading of Sibelius's Symphony No. 2.

Under the 79-year-old Pierre Monteux, whose vigour puts most much younger conductors to shame, the orchestra gave a thoughtful, musicianly performance of the Beethoven Fifth Symphony and, with Claudio Arrau as a strangely self-effacing soloist, an exceedingly good Emperor Concerto, integrated, with the musical line at all times paramount rather than the pianistics of a virtuoso, unusual but as it should be. Mr. Arrau has become a notable Beethoven interpreter and it is to be regretted that he is playing only Chopin and Liszt at Edinburgh this year. Also with Mr. Monteux have been eloquent performances of Debussy's " La Mer " and the Franck D-minor Symphony. Under Mr. Munch we have heard the enchanting Debussy " Iberia " and, with the very competent Leo Smit as soloist, Aaron Copland's brash and jazzy Piano Concerto, a work of relatively minor importance and too loudly orchestrated for the full piano parts to be heard.

Mr. Munch conducted the second American performance of Ernst Toch's Symphony No. 2, composed in Zurich in 1951. Dr. Toch, noted Austrian-born teacher and composer, is composer-in-residence at Tanglewood this year. He has written much chamber music, a few symphonies, several operas, has scored several Hollywood pictures and is the author of two books. This symphony is reverential in tone, serious and carefully made, but curiously unsatisfying and seemingly incomplete. It is long and was very eloquently presented to considerable audience acclaim but it does seem lacking in individuality and invention.

This was the twentieth season of the Berkshire Festival, the seventeenth with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the fifteenth at the Tanglewood estate. It has been increasingly popular as the years have gone by and has become a mecca for music lovers from all over the eastern parts of the United States and Canada. Last year more than 117,000 people heard the concerts, and this year, with an expanded programme but very cold weather, more than 60,000 had attended at the half-way mark. This year there is the full quota of 400 students chosen from some 1,500 applicants from all over the world, all aspiring professional musicians who come to the Berkshire Music Centre for an intensive course in conducting, composition, instrumental work, choral singing and conducting, opera, and good old music appreciation. Mr. Munch is the school's director, and the noted American composer, Aaron Copland, is assistant director and permanent head of the composition department.

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.
OKLAHOMAN

AUG 24 1954

Tanglewood Music Festival Becomes Ridden With Rules

By ALICE HUGHES

THE MOST ENCHANTING place to hear music is under the moon, and one of the most convincing proofs is at Tanglewood in the Massachusetts Berkshires where annually, for six weeks during July and August, the Boston Symphony orchestra under baton-wielder Charles Munch, makes this America's outstanding musical festival.

Artistically and financially, this mid-summer delight to the ears has built increasing stature. This past week-end, when its 17th annual event came to a close, peak figures revealed that 150,000 persons from all parts of the country had deposited $330,000 in the Tanglewood treasury.

As usual the final concert was an "In Memoriam performance of Berlioz' "Requiem," in honor of the late Boston Symphony conductor Serge Koussevitzky. Together with Miss Gertrude Robinson-Smith he sparked this symphonic treat, which is now on a permanent basis 18 years ago.

IMPORTANT as this Berkshire festival has become, it has nonetheless retained much of its New England ruggedness. The orchestra and audience are sheltered in a 6,000-seat shed which is acoustically perfect, but on cool, mountain-foggy nights, music lovers either huddle or shiver unless they are warmly dressed.

It struck me as odd that this need for warmth was the one point Miss Gertrude Robinson-Smith neglected to include in her seasonal plea for more decency in dress styles on the part of concert crowds.

Regardless of popularity elsewhere, in Tanglewood men and women wearing abbreviated shorts are frowned upon. Last summer even girls wearing slacks were refused admittance.

I recall the rapid prestochango when one girl in our party slipped out of an extra petticoat so that another, pretty Mary Olberg, of NBC-TV, could step into it and hide her rolled up slacks which were barring her from admission. Tanglewood has since lost its wat on slacks, but still bans shorts.

IN OTHER RESPECTS, too, the rules of conduct have been tightened at Tanglewood. Eating on the spacious park lawn must be done with no evidence of picnicking. Students enrolled in the school at the Berkshire Music center are sternly disciplined against public love-making, despite the eternal chemical attraction 'twixt music-moon-and-romance.

Cool night-time climate plus an old Yankee custom have kept Festival authorities from cracking down on one Tanglewood pracice among those who buy admission-but-no-seats, however. Young folks, many of them music students, have revived the quaint and historic New England "bundling" by bringing a blanket to spread on the lawn while listening to the concert. This takes the chill out of Tanglewood's moon-music.

IN HONOR OF HIS 84TH BIRTHDAY, Bernard M. Baruch became the published author of a new book, "A Philosophy For Our Time," under the Simon & Schuster imprint.

Dedicating this volume to his alma mater, the College of the City of New York, philosopher Baruch also has donated the original manuscripts plus all proceeds from the sale of the book, to the development fund of a recent branch of C. C. N. Y. which he endowed under the name of the Bernard M. Baruch School of Business and Public Administration.

The address he delivered when the school was named in his honor and the three lectures he gave this past May to its students are included in "A Philosophy for Our Time." Before its publication date demand for Baruch's book was so lively that it went into its second large printing.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
AUG 24 1954

The Lively Arts

By Milton R. Bass

THE CRICKETS in Lenox are the craziest mixed-up Gryllidae that ever rubbed two forewings together. It took them six-weeks this year to acclimate themselves to the chirp of the majestic Boston Symphony Orchestra which was complicated by the Cineramic productions of Hector Berlioz and they were pretty cocky at the end of this accomplishment.

Then, just as they had perfected their augmented forewings, with resonance enough to reach the outskirts of Pittsfield, a dead silence spread over the expansive lawns. The classical musicians had departed, the crowds faded, only the memory lingered on. It was time to perfect the cricket symphonies for the winter concert season.

* * *

AND THEN pandemonium struck. Weird and primitive sounds emanated from the opposite end of the Tanglewood estate, sounds that made the augmented brass sections of Berlioz' "Te Deum" pale into silence. The crickets' Day of Judgment seemed to have arrived and great were the moaning chirps that rose from the younger element.

But the older Assimilae merely smiled and calmed the fears of the panicky youth. Because they knew that it was not Gabriel rubbing his two forewings together. It was just the fifth annual Folk and Jazz Roundtable at Music Inn kicking off on its initial session.

* * *

THERE IS A UNIQUE quality to the three-week festival at Music Inn that I have seen nowhere else in the world. It is a blend of enthusiasm, intelligence, esprit de corps and talent. Since 90 per cent of the spectators at the sessions are guests of the inn, it is an integrated audience to begin with. And since they have all come up AFTER the Tanglewood season is over, they are there because of their interest in folk music and jazz specifically.

Thus the artist has the happy privilege of playing to a discerning audience and the unhappy knowledge that you can't fake your way through the performance. You have to deliver the goods in this atmosphere or you get a coldly polite reception that will freeze your fingerbones to the strings of your guitar.

* * *

THIS IS A RARE occurrence because program director Marshall Stearns and owners Philip and Stephanie Barber scour the hemisphere to bring in artists who are real and great. Dr. Stearns, who doubles as associate professor of Medieval English at Hunter College in New York and president of the Jazz Institute of America, knows musicians from Barbados to Lapland and he can pull a Nigerian drummer, a Calypso trio, a blues guitarist or a university professor out of his magic bag with only the maximum of hard work, sweat and trouble. It's a tough job to round up the best of what you need, but Dr. Stearns comes through year after year.

* * *

THIS PAST WEEK, for instance, he rounded up Prof. Willis James of Spelman College in Atlanta, one of the leading authorities on folk music in the South, Prof. Roy Lamson of Williams College, who plays a clarinet as hot as the English courses he teaches, Prof. John Parker of Kentucky, who bangs out a real Storyville piano, and threw them in with folk singer Pete Seeger, guitarist Brownie McGhee, harmonica king Sonny Terry and a gentleman who played a washboard and three frying pans with thimbles on his fingers, stirred well and turned out some of the most exciting music it has ever been my pleasure to hear.

This Sonny Terry plays a harmonica that goes back to the beginning of sorrow and the tragedies he sings about are the ones that are going to happen to everybody tomorrow or the day after. When you listen to him, you feel sad about all the bad things that ever happened to you, but he buoys you up by letting you know that he's felt that way too, that everybody feels that way too. You haven't heard blues till Sonny Terry's told you about them.

* * *

AS A CLIMAX to the folk music week, Music Inn brought together poet-novelist-folklorist Langston Hughes and musicologist Charles Seeger for the talking and everybody and his brother for the playing. They held a Deep South square dance Saturday night and they played it jug-band style. Pete Seeger did the calling and all the jazz musicians combined with the folk music artists for a beat that was as solid as Gibraltar. The man with the washboard was backed up by a youth with a washtub bass and the place looked like the revival meeting held the night before Judgment. It's a good thing the Otis farmers couldn't hear it or they never would have been happy again.

This week the festival slides down to Jamaica and Trinidad before winding up with a session on modern jazz. There are roundtable discussions the morning after every musical session and at these the experts try to beat each other's brains out with assists from various and sundry spectators. It's all very exciting and informal after the ponderous majesty of the Tanglewood season and a wonderful way to taper off the year. The only drawback to the whole business is that it's hell on crickets.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN

AUG 29 1954

Saluting A Proper Bostonian

By MILES KASTENDIECK

NOT only the Berkshire Festival ended on Aug. 15 but also the career of its manager, George E. Judd. After nearly 40 years of association with the Boston Symphony Orchestra he has decided to retire. That he played a vital role in its existence may not be fully appreciated.

Judd may be proud of his life work. The preeminence of the BSO today rests not only on the leadership of Koussevitzky and Munch and the musicians themselves but also on the management of Judd. Tanglewood itself is one of his achievements.

Quietly Done

It may be the realization of Koussevitzky's dream, but it also represents Judd's quiet, skillful manipulation to bring it to fruition.

When Mrs. Andrew Hepburn presented the Tanglewood estate to the BSO, the trustees were for a moment at a loss what to do with it. Judd pointed out that every child knew Tanglewood and fought to establish the Berkshire Festival and permanent quarters there.

Koussevitzky dreamed of the Berkshire Music Center in connection with the Festival, but it was Judd who handled the details.

Cleared Way

When the trustees threatened to drop the school because of an annual deficit, Judd organized the Society of Friends to help defray expenses through contributions. Tanglewood as it is today owes much to him.

In recent years Judd has made significant contributions to the success of the orchestra. His enthusiasm for Charles Munch prompted the trustees to engage him as successor to Koussevitzky.

The orchestra's European tour in May, 1952, became possible chiefly because Judd dissolved the problems confronting acceptance of the invitation to go to Paris.

He formed a second Boston Pops Orchestra to carry on under Arthur Fiedler while the regular orchestra was abroad.

He had helped considerably to establish the Boston Pops as a national institution. Through this decision there now exists the Boston Pops Tour Orchestra.

The acclaim of the European tour led Judd to propose the Orchestra's tour to the West Coast in May, 1953. His latest achievement was the contract with NBC [illegible] Boston Symphony [illegible] place of the NBC [illegible] broadcast this com[illegible]

These are only [illegible] lights of a dedica[illegible]

As a tribute to [illegible] Judd is now the p[illegible] sessor of a leather-[illegible] ord album containing [illegible] copy of the Boston [illegible] Orchestra's final [illegible] Symphony Hall at [illegible] of its 73d season [illegible]

PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE

AUG [illegible]54

Mr. Sokolsky and The National Anthem

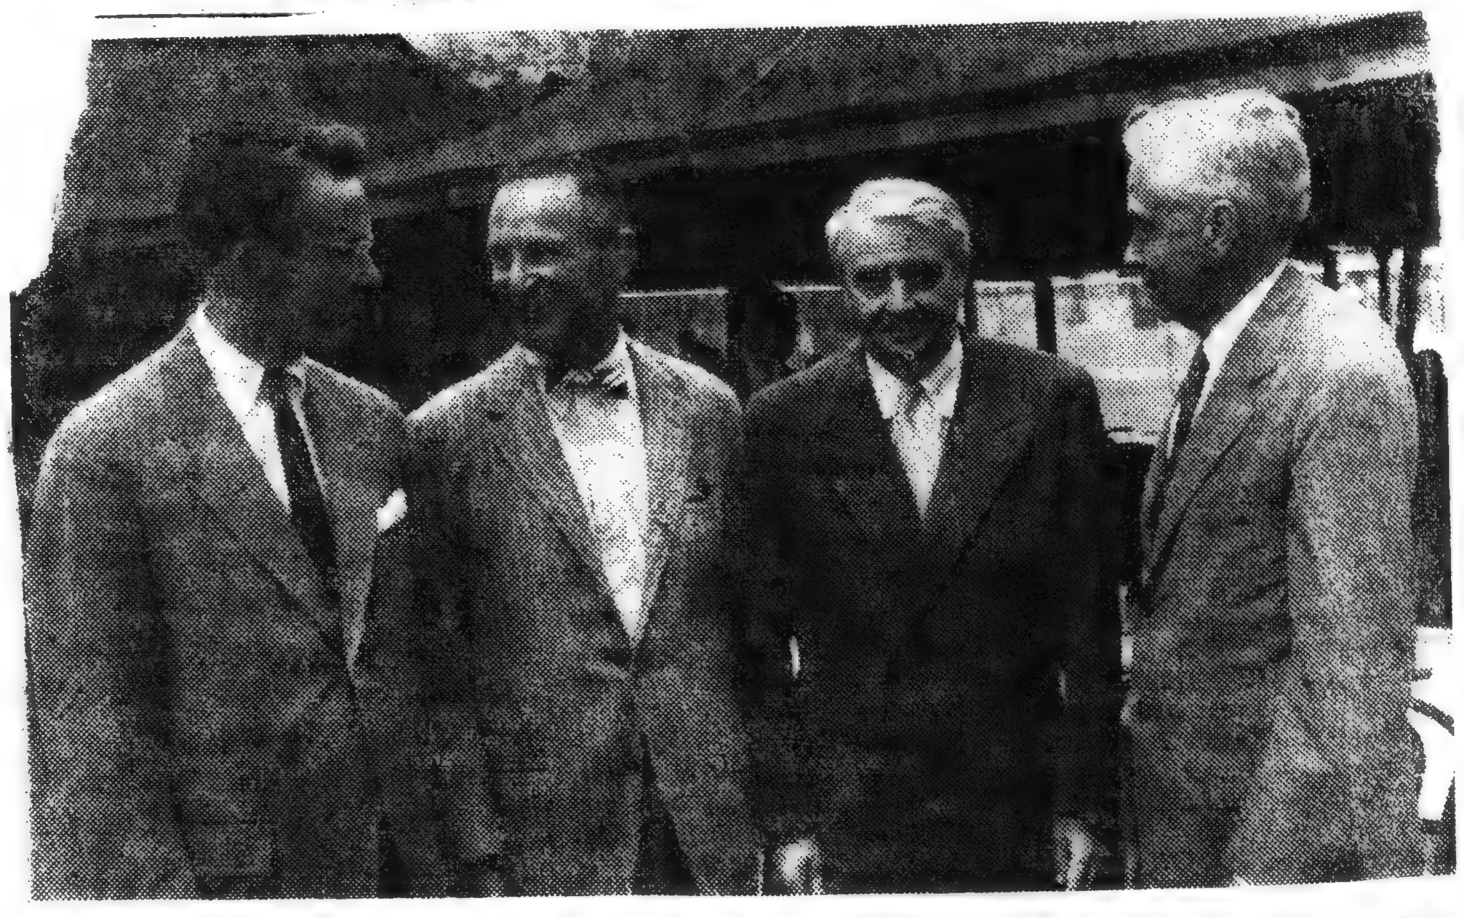
George E. Sokolsky, our fellow new[illegible] analyst from Otis, reported in his syndicated column recently that he had a bit of trouble with Tanglewood this season, even though he derived some kicks from the music. It seems that he and some friends hit on the idea that it would be a nice patriotic gesture if the Boston Symphony Orchestra opened each concert with "The Star Spangled Banner," the way British concerts start with "God Save the King." But when they put this proposition to orchestra officials, Mr. Sokolsky testifies, they got nothing but a polite brush-off.

We don't know who Mr. Sokolsky talked to at Tanglewood, because he doesn't say; but maybe the tip-off on his difficulties is his further suggestion that the national anthem may be feared because it could "stimulate nationalism" and thus give offense to "the foreigners," causing them to "refuse to take our tainted money." We doubt if the proprietors of Tanglewood are afraid of the national anthem; but they might reasonably suspect that it would be contrary to the anthem's spirit to play it at the behest of someone who conceives its function in such extraordinarily limited terms.

We can see no reasonable objection to starting Tanglewood concerts with "The Star-Spangled Banner." And by the same token, it might be a nice thing if Mr. Sokolsky were to start each of his columns and broadcasts by reciting the preamble to the Constitution. But it is perhaps a considerable delusion to suppose that either procedure is likely to make a real patriot out of anyone whose love of America is shallow enough to be equated with making faces at foreigners.

CINCINNATI, OHIO
TIMES-STAR

AUG 24 1954



AT TANGLEWOOD, MASS., with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Julius Fleischmann, Cincinnati industrialist and arts patron (second from left), is shown with, left to right, Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager-elect of the orchestra; Charles Munch, the symphony's music director, and George E. Judd, retiring manager. Fleischmann helped make possible the orchestra's tour of

TOWN & VILLAGE
NEW YORK, N. Y.

AUG 2[illegible]

Palatable Music—Helen Worth, Town & Village food editor, and Alvin Edmonson of 541 East 20th Street, share lunch at Tanglewood during the Berkshire Music Festival.

IT'S WORTH TRAVELING

To Tanglewood

By Helen Worth — Food & Drink Editor

The trouble with age is that while hefting a suitcase becomes increasingly difficult, gentlemen who leap to assist become increasingly scarce. This sad observation accompanied a recent trip to Tanglewood.

WORTH

The journey began in Grand Central Station, and I'd like to say, to whom it may concern, that the American flag hanging in the main lobby is in urgent need of laundering. I would also like to note that the banner opposite, depicting the Statue of Liberty, is a most unattractive likeness of that beautiful lady.

On the other hand, I would like to commend the gentlemen of the railroad on their choice of scenery. For the train to Lenox, Mass., travels through country so fair that it gives real meaning to the song, "America, the Beautiful."

Music Festival

Lenox itself, a town of some 3,000, is taxed to capacity during the six-week Berkshire Music Festival which deposits some 10,000 tourists on its doorstep. Although neighboring towns also offer accommodations, Lenox is closest to Tanglewood.

It is therefore an excellent idea to insure reservations before enjoying great music under stars or under sun. It is also more convenient to have a car if you are staying for more than a day. Because both bus and taxi service are as overworked as an umbrella man during a downpour.

A car will not only be helpful in traveling to the concerts, but it will also stand you in good stead for seeking out fine inns, or even for a cup of coffee after 10:00 p.m. on weekdays.

As far as the food is concerned, with the exception of a drugstore egg-salad sandwich the meals I had — and at stiff prices — ranged from awful to adequate.

However, that egg-salad sandwich is worthy of special note because it was such an outstanding example of the genus. Get yours at Hagyard's Drug Store on Main Street. You'll find the bread toasted to a good crisp brown, and clean, perky lettuce. The egg mixture will contain no dot of shell, will be given extra flavor boost by onion minced fine. Good mayonnaise, a final attribute, will make your sandwich a complete delight.

Tanglewood Picnic

Incidentally, if all other restaurants are seating guests on the rafters, you can purchase lunch, dinner or snacks on the Tanglewood grounds. An outdoor cafeteria serves a variety of hot and cold foods, and you and your tray may wander to any part of the picturesque grounds.

I had lunch there with neighbor Alvin Edmonson, (see picture) of 541 East 20th Street, who was honored by being chosen as a member of the Opera Study Group at Tanglewood. Mr. Edmonson is also professionally active here. He has sung with the Amato Opera, is a member of the Madison Avenue Baptist Church quartet, and his fine tenor is heard on special occasions at other churches in the city.

Unfortunately it is too late this year to avail yourself of the magnificent music the Boston Symphony Orchestra makes at Tanglewood. However, a trip there deserves priority in your plans for next summer.

Vacation Trip

If you are a music lover, you might like to know that you can spend a six-week vacation at Tanglewood as a non-professional. This group is often composed of attorneys, teachers, housewives, chemists, and the like.

While in the Tanglewood vicinity, Lee, Mass., boasts the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival. Again, if you [illegible] like to attend a performance, be sure to have your tickets in advance.

There are good reasons why almost every performance, including standing room, is sold out. For Ted Shawn's showcase includes such famous people as Charles Weidman, Tei Ko, and Ram Gopal. The performance I saw included Hadassah, Pearl Lang, and the Celtic Ballet of Scotland.

Incidentally, a hint for next year's visit, during many of the hours I spent at Tanglewood, a fur coat would have been most welcome.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE

AUG 28 1954

Lenox Is Girdling Its Loins

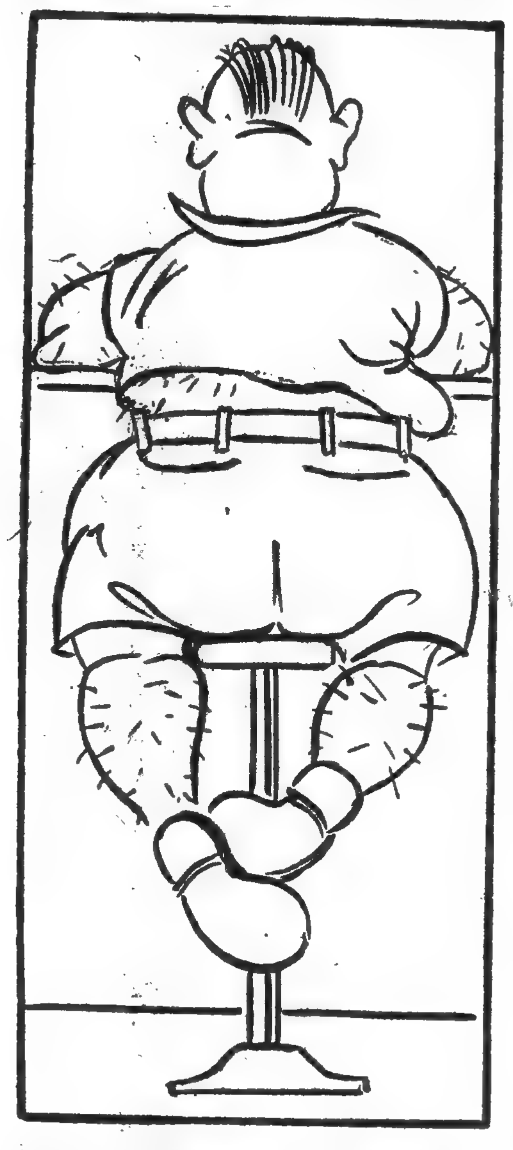
By Frank McCarthy

LENOX—The stand taken recently by the Selectmen here against bathing suits and other brief attire on local streets has been, according to the response, popular.

The stand is expected to be followed up at the next annual meeting by the proposal of an ordinance outlining the limits of nudity on public streets. The Planning Board already is studying the basis in law for such regulation.

* * *

THE SELECTMEN'S "respectful request" that people dress properly on Lenox streets has drawn comment all the way from Eagle columnists to ladies in Boston. On the streets and in the mail, the Selectmen have received almost unanimous endorsement of their views that "Bermuda shorts are all right, but bathing suits aren't."



On the streets — "A few facetious characters have stopped me to remark that I'm getting old," reports R. Harry Barnes, chairman of the Board of Selectmen. But otherwise, he says, all response he's received has been entirely favorable.

In the mail—"You are on absolutely firm ground," writes the Rev. Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes of Brook Farm in one of half a dozen letters congratulating the Selectmen. Dr. Stokes suggests that next year the proper-clothing notices be posted early—in hotels, resorts and inns as well as public buildings.

Mrs. Charles F. Bassett of Kemble Street, whose letter to the Selectmen Aug. 12 noting "the appalling lack of clothes on old and young" started the "respectful request" rolling, has received 14 letters from out-of-towners. All but one of the 14 congratulates her for speaking out. A 15th letter was from a firm offering to send her for $1 a clipping encased in plastic of the newspaper story reporting her stand. She has sent the $1.

* * *

THE ONE LETTER attacking Mrs. Bassett was from a woman who did not identify herself, but mailed her missive in Springfield. It says:

"I am a college graduate, but I am not a sex maniac. You and your cohorts are responsible for all the trouble in the world. I don't believe people should neck right out in broad daylight . . . but if people want to be comfortable and show off their bodies, what's wrong with it?"

* * *

"THE LETTER is choice," Mrs. Bassett comments.

Letters in sympathy with Mrs. Bassett's stand include one from a writer she identifies as "a foreign woman with a doctor of philosophy degree." The woman wrote that she had been to Tanglewood and was appalled by the clothes, or lack of them, that she saw on people in the neighborhood.

Mrs. Bassett discloses that in addition to the letters she has received, vocal approval has been extended to her from many sources in Lenox.

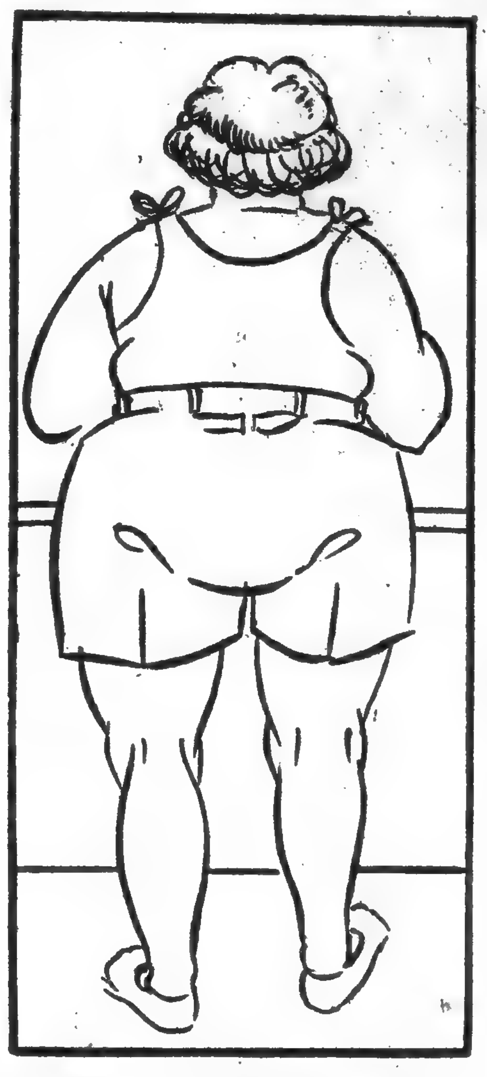
"Women have told me they wanted to do something about the situation themselves, but didn't want to accept the publicity. I didn't realize when I wrote that letter to the Selectmen it would put me so much in the public eye. I simply felt that something had to be done."

* * *

NO ONE KNOWS if what was done—the simple posting of notices Aug. 10 asking people to keep themselves covered in public—was effective. The cold rainy weather that immediately set in kept everyone pretty much covered anyway.

* * *

NEVERTHELESS, the possibility of adopting a bylaw to enforce the request is being considered here. In some other Berkshire towns, police keep bathing-suit-wearers off the street merely by tapping them with the suggestion that they go home and put their clothes on—though there are no bylaws to cover the situation.



But in at least two towns in New York State, there are such bylaws. And the mere fact that they are on the books seems to have solved the problem.

One of the towns is White Plains, where the Common Council passed an ordinance last March that "no person over 12 years of age shall appear upon any of the streets . . . in bathing suits, halter, shorts, knickers, pants, shirts, waists, sweaters, playsuits or any other attire which fails to conceal that portion of the body extending from the shoulders to a point midway between the hips and the knees . . ."

* * *

THE PENALTY for violating the ordinance is a fine of not more than $150 or not more than 30 days in the cooler. Since the law was passed, however, the need for the penalty has not arisen, according to J. Spencer Gray, editor and publisher of the Westchester Herald, published in White Plans.

The other town with such a bylaw is Rye, which also found that metering out punishment under the law was not necessary. In a third New York State town, Southampton, L.I., such prominent residents as Eva Gabor, Joan Fontaine and Mr. and Mrs. Gary Cooper have joined the natives in protesting brief attire on local streets.

A meeting has been called for Sept. 10 in Southampton to pass a law restricting nudity. Whether such official regulation is possible under the laws of Massachusetts is being checked now by the Lenox Planning Board.

According to its chairman, John D. Kennedy, the board will have a recommendation on the issue before the next annual meeting.

* * *

THE TOWN has the support of Tanglewood in trying to regulate the situation, Mr. Kennedy states. He reports that Henry Cabot, president of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, called the Kenn[illegible] home when he read about the issue in the newspapers.

"He seemed anxious to have the town do something about it," Mr. Kennedy said, "as he felt it would help regulation of the same probl[illegible] Tanglewood."

BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD

AUG 27 1954

BERKSHIRES A DESERT? COME OUT AND SEE!

To the Editor of The Herald

I suppose that an answer to a letter of H. B. Cantor of Boston, is compulsory on my part. That is the one, you will recall, which suggested a grand, month-long music festival for Boston in November, using the Boston Symphony Orchestra as [illegible]leus. And your correspondent concludes that "if the Tanglewood Festival can bring 20,000 people daily to a desert, surely Boston, the cultural city, should be able to likewise."

Even though my job, as executive director of the Berkshire Hills Conference, an agency which is dedicated to the proposition that the Berkshires shall get more than their share of the tourist dollar, calls for a certain feeling of disgust at Mr. Cantor's description of our hill country, I can muster only sympathy. You see, for the first 30 years of my life, I lived in Boston. I was born and brought up in the Jeffries Point section of East Boston, and as I look back, I hide my head in shame to say that I probably lived in the same state of blissful ignorance as Mr. Cantor and many another Bostonian.

Mr. Cantor's description of the verdant Berkhires as a "desert" is, however, something new in the hit parade of epithets that I have heard hurled by inhabitants of Boston's asphalt jungle.

Fortunately, we do have some more articulate, more appreciative and more objective critics in Boston than Mr. Cantor. I refer you to your own Mr. Elie, who takes in not only the concerts at Tanglewood but the surroundings in which the music is played. Another Bostonian who will defend our physical and cultural atmosphere is Arthur T. Lyman, the state's commissioner of natural resources, who a couple years ago came back to Boston after being treated to the azalea display at the Pittsfield State Forest, and demanded that several girls in his office drink in the display. He furnished the wherewithal out of his own pocket. I might add that it was the first time that several veteran employees of the state's conservation agency had seen our hills.

And, of course, my best reference might well be not only the management, but the membership, of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the organization which Mr. Cantor would make the nucleus for his November festival in Boston. He'll find that this "desert" is not only a healthful tonic for the orchestra's members, but a financial one, too. There are no deficits to make up for the BSO's concerts out this way.

Finally, I have to point out somewhat sorrowfully — that Mr. Cantor is way off when he credits the festival at Tanglewood with an attendance of 20,000 daily, the correct total attendance for the series of 24 concerts in 1954 being 135,000.

JOHN F. DOWNING,
Pittsfield.

[78]

TOWN & VILLAGE
NEW YORK, N. Y.

AUG 2 [illegible]

Palatable Music—Helen Worth, Town & Village food editor, and Alvin Eamonson of 541 East 20th Street, share lunch at Tanglewood during the Berkshire Music Festival.

IT'S WORTH TRAVELING

To Tanglewood

By Helen Worth — Food & Drink Editor

The trouble with age is that while hefting a suitcase ecomes increasingly difficult, gentlemen who leap to ssist become increasingly scarce. This sad observation ccompanied a recent trip to Tanglewood.

WORTH

The journey began in Grand Central Station, and I'd like to say, to whom it may concern, that the American flag hanging in the main lobby is in urgent need of laundering. I would also like to note that the banner opposite, depicting the Statue of Liberty, is a most unattractive ikeness of that beautiful lady.

On the other hand, I would ike to commend the gentlemen f the railroad on their choice f scenery. For the train to Lenox, Mass., travels through ountry so farr that it gives real neaning to the song, "America, he Beautiful."

Music Festival

Lenox itself, a town of some ,000, is taxed to capacity during the six-week Berkshire Music Festival which deposits some 10,000 tourists on its doorstep. Although neighboring towns also offer accommodations, Lenox s closest to Tanglewood.

It is therefore an excellent dea to insure reservations before enjoying great music under tars or under sun. It is also more convenient to have a car if you are staying for more than a day. Because both bus and taxi service are as overworked as an umbrella man during a downpour.

A car will not only be helpful in traveling to the concerts, but it will also stand you in good stead for seeking out fine inns, or even for a cup of coffee after 10:00 p.m. on weekdays.

As far as the food is concerned, with the exception of a drugstore egg-salad sandwich the meals I had — and at stiff prices — ranged from awful to adequate.

However, that egg-salad sandwich is worthy of special note because it was such an outstanding example of the genus. Get yours at Hagyard's Drug Store on Main Street. You'll find the bread toasted to a good crisp brown, and clean, perky lettuce. The egg mixture will contain no dot of shell, will be given extra flavor boost by onion minced fine. Good mayonnaise, a final attribute, will make your sandwich a complete delight.

Tanglewood Picnic

Incidentally, if all other restaurants are seating guests on the rafters, you can purchase lunch, dinner or snacks on the Tanglewood grounds. An outdoor cafeteria serves a variety of hot and cold foods, and you and your tray may wander to any part of the picturesque grounds.

I had lunch there with neighbor Alvin Edmonson, (see picture) of 541 East 20th Street, who was honored by being chosen as a member of the Opera Study Group at Tanglewood. Mr. Edmonson is also professionally active here. He has sung with the Amato Opera, is a member of the Madison Avenue Baptist Church quartet, and his fine tenor is heard on special occasions at other churches in the city.

Unfortunately it is too late this year to avail yourself of the magnificent music the Boston Symphony Orchestra makes at Tanglewood. However, a trip there deserves priority in your plans for next summer.

Vacation Trip

If you are a music lover, you might like to know that you can spend a six-week vacation at Tanglewood as a non-professional. This group is often composed of attorneys, teachers, housewives, chemists, and the like.

While in the Tanglewood vicinity, Lee, Mass., boasts the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival. Again, if you would like to attend a performance, be sure to have your tickets in advance.

There are good reasons why almost every performance, including standing room, is sold out. For Ted Shawn's showcase includes such famous people as Charles Weidman, Tei Ko, and Ram Gopal. The performance I saw included Hadassah, Pearl Lang, and the Celtic Ballet of Scotland.

Incidentally, a hint for next year's visit, during many of the hours I spent at Tanglewood, a fur coat would have been most welcome.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE ✓

AUG 28 1954

Lenox Is Girdling Its Loins

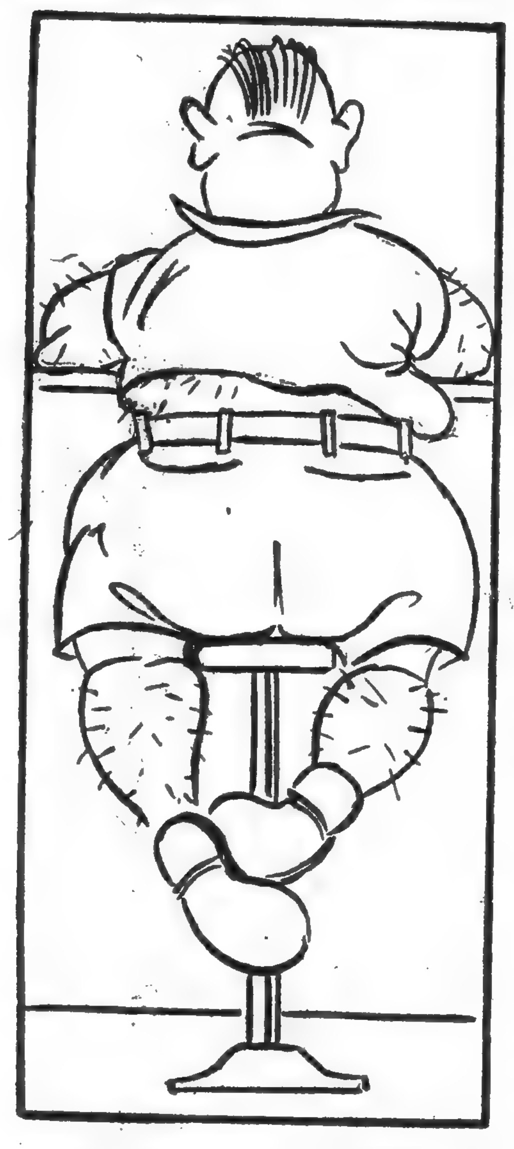
By Frank McCarthy

LENOX—The stand taken recently by the Selectmen here against bathing suits and other brief attire on local streets has been, according to the response, popular.

The stand is expected to be followed up at the next annual meeting by the proposal of an ordinance outlining the limits of nudity on public streets. The Planning Board already is studying the basis in law for such regulation.

* * *

THE SELECTMEN'S "respectful request" that people dress properly on Lenox streets has drawn comment all the way from Eagle columnists to ladies in Boston. On the streets and in the mail, the Selectmen have received almost unanimous endorsement of their views that "Bermuda shorts are all right, but bathing suits aren't."



On the streets — "A few facetious characters have stopped me to remark that I'm getting old," reports R. Harry Barnes, chairman of the Board of Selectmen. But otherwise, he says, all response he's received has been entirely favorable.

In the mail—"You are on absolutely firm ground," writes the Rev. Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes of Brook Farm in one of half a dozen letters congratulating the Selectmen. Dr. Stokes suggests that next year the proper-clothing notices be posted early—in hotels, resorts and inns as well as public buildings.

Mrs. Charles F. Bassett of Kemble Street, whose letter to the Selectmen Aug. 12 noting "the appalling lack of clothes on old and young" started the "respectful request" rolling, has received 14 letters from out-of-towners. All but one of the 14 congratulates her for speaking out. A 15th letter was from a firm offering to send her for $1 a clipping encased in plastic of the newspaper story reporting her stand. She has sent the $1.

* * *

THE ONE LETTER attacking Mrs. Bassett was from a woman who did not identify herself, but mailed her missive in Springfield. It says:

"I am a college graduate, but I am not a sex maniac. You and your cohorts are responsible for all the trouble in the world. I don't believe people should neck right out in broad daylight . . . but if people want to be comfortable and show off their bodies, what's wrong with it?"

* * *

"THE LETTER is choice," Mrs. Bassett comments.

Letters in sympathy with Mrs. Bassett's stand include one from a writer she identifies as "a foreign woman with a doctor of philosophy degree." The woman wrote that she had been to Tanglewood and was appalled by the clothes, or lack of them, that she saw on people in the neighborhood.

Mrs. Bassett discloses that in addition to the letters she has received, vocal approval has been extended to her from many sources in Lenox.

"Women have told me they wanted to do something about the situation themselves, but didn't want to accept the publicity. I didn't realize when I wrote that letter to the Selectmen it would put me so much in the public eye. I simply felt that something had to be done."

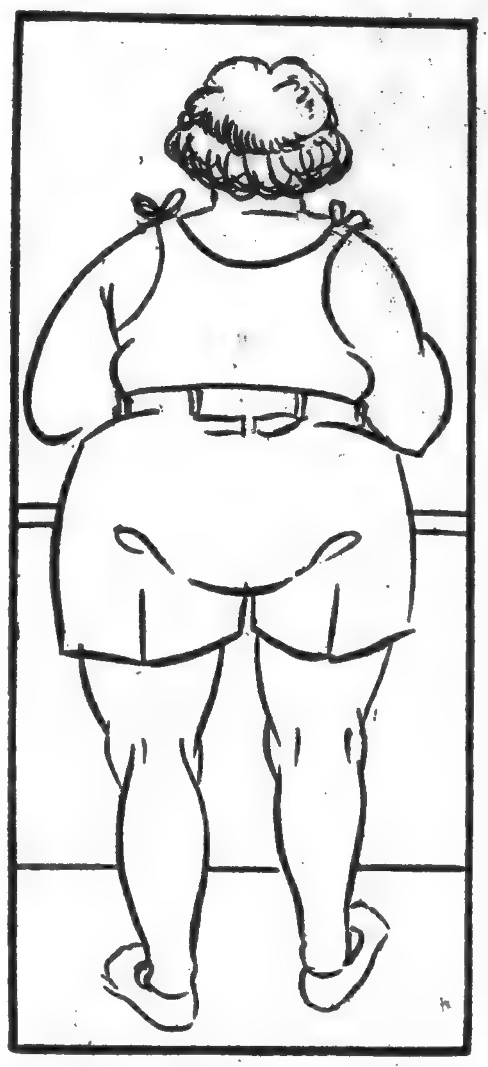
* * *

NO ONE KNOWS if what was done—the simple posting of notices Aug. 10 asking people to keep themselves covered in public—was effective. The cold rainy weather that immediately set in kept everyone pretty much covered anyway.

* * *

NEVERTHELESS, the possibility of adopting a bylaw to enforce the request is being considered here. In some other Berkshire towns, police keep bathing-suit-wearers off the street merely by tapping them with the suggestion that they go home and put their clothes on—though there are no bylaws to cover the situation.

But in at least two towns in New York State, there are such bylaws. And the mere fact that they are on the books seems to have solved the problem.



One of the towns is White Plains, where the Common Council passed an ordinance last March that "no person over 12 years of age shall appear upon any of the streets . . . in bathing suits, halter, shorts, knickers, pants, shirts, waists, sweaters, playsuits or any other attire which fails to conceal that portion of the body extending from the shoulders to a point midway between the hips and the knees . . ."

* * *

THE PENALTY for violating the ordinance is a fine of not more than $150 or not more than 30 days in the cooler. Since the law was passed, however, the need for the penalty has not arisen, according to J. Spencer Gray, editor and publisher of the Westchester Herald, published in White Plans.

The other town with such a bylaw is Rye, which also found that metering out punishment under the law was not necessary. In a third New York State town, Southampton, L.I., such prominent residents as Eva Gabor, Joan Fontaine and Mr. and Mrs. Gary Cooper have joined the natives in protesting brief attire on local streets.

A meeting has been called for Sept. 10 in Southampton to pass a law restricting nudity. Whether such official regulation is possible under the laws of Massachusetts is being checked now by the Lenox Planning Board.

According to its chairman, John D. Kennedy, the board will have a recommendation on the issue before the next annual meeting.

* * *

THE TOWN has the support of Tanglewood in trying to regulate the situation, Mr. Kennedy states. He reports that Henry Cabot, president of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, called the Kennedy home when he read about the issue in the newspapers.

"He seemed anxious to have the town do something about it," Mr. Kennedy said, "as he felt it would help regulation of the same problem at Tanglewood."

BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD

AUG 27 1954

BERKSHIRES A DESERT? COME OUT AND SEE!

To the Editor of The Herald

I suppose that an answer to a letter of H. B. Cantor of Boston, is compulsory on my part. That is the one, you will recall, which suggested a grand, month-long music festival for Boston in November, using the Boston Symphony Orchestra as [illegible]eus. And your correspondent concludes that "if the Tanglewood Festival can bring 20,000 people daily to a desert, surely Boston, the cultural city, should be able to likewise."

Even though my job, as executive director of the Berkshire Hills Conference, an agency which is dedicated to the proposition that the Berkshires shall get more than their share of the tourist dollar, calls for a certain feeling of disgust at Mr. Cantor's description of our hill country, I can muster only sympathy. You see, for the first 30 years of my life, I lived in Boston. I was born and brought up in the Jeffries Point section of East Boston, and as I look back, I hide my head in shame to say that I probably lived in the same state of blissful ignorance as Mr. Cantor and many another Bostonian.

Mr. Cantor's description of the verdant Berkhires as a "desert" is, however, something new in the hit parade of epithets that I have heard hurled by inhabitants of Boston's asphalt jungle.

Fortunately, we do have some more articulate, more appreciative and more objective critics in Boston than Mr. Cantor. I refer you to your own Mr. Elie, who takes in not only the concerts at Tanglewood but the surroundings in which the music is played. Another Bostonian who will defend our physical and cultural atmosphere is Arthur T. Lyman, the state's commissioner of natural resources, who a couple years ago came back to Boston after being treated to the azalea display at the Pittsfield State Forest, and demanded that several girls in his office drink in the display. He furnished the wherewithal out of his own pocket. I might add that it was the first time that several veteran employees of the state's conservation agency had seen our hills.

And, of course, my best reference might well be not only the management, but the membership, of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the organization which Mr. Cantor would make the nucleus for his November festival in Boston. He'll find that this "desert" is not only a healthful tonic for the orchestra's members, but a financial one, too. There are no deficits to make up for the BSO's concerts out this way.

Finally, I have to point out somewhat sorrowfully — that Mr. Cantor is way off when he credits the festival at Tanglewood with an attendance of 20,000 daily, the correct total attendance for the series of 24 concerts in 1954 being 135,000.

JOHN F. DOWNING,
Pittsfield.

According to Marion Bauer

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood

MARION BAUER

Spending the summer in Massachusetts has the advantage of being not too far away from Lenox and Stockbridge where Tanglewood has rapidly grown to be one of America's leading summer music centers. Just 20 years ago the first Berkshire Symphonic Festival was founded and conducted by Henry Hadley in a concert played by members of the Philharmonic-Symphony in the horse-show ring of the Dan Hanna farm in Stockbridge. Illness forced Dr. Hadley to resign following the second season. Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, president of the association, then approached Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, with the result that after two more seasons, Tanglewood became the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the enthusiasm, vision, and genius of Koussevitzky erected a living monument to his memory in the annual Berkshire Festival.

Olin Downes in an editorial in the New York Times of July 4, described what is known as the "$100,000 thunderstorm," because due to the noise of a severe storm that "out-roared" the playing of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, a movement was put on foot by Miss Robinson Smith and her colleagues to raise enough for the building of the Music Shed, the vast fan-shaped auditorium with overhead roof and open sides, that houses the symphony concerts that have this season grown to twelve in number. In 1946 the Music Shed became the property of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, as presented to them by the directors of the Berkshire Festival, who had been largely responsible for raising funds for its completion.

In 1940 another of Dr. Koussevitzky's dreams came true with the establishing of the Berkshire Music Center, the school which, as he foresaw, has become a valuable training center for America's gifted young musicians. Following Serge Koussevitzky's death Charles Munch became the Music Director of the Berkshire Festival and of the Music Center, with Aaron Copland as Assistant Director and Ralph Berkowitz of the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia as Dean. In addition to a large and distinguished staff of teachers, this year Gregor Piatigorsky is guest teacher in chamber music, and, following the tradition of having one outstanding composer in residence, Ernst Toch is guest teacher in composition.

This season's program is materially enlarged, as the full orchestra is in action for six weeks instead of three and there is a new grouping of week-end programs. There are six concerts by members of the Symphony in the Theatre-Concert Hall on Friday evenings. Every Wednesday evening a chamber music concert is given as a part of the Festival. These concerts are in memory of Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge through whose beneficence the Wednesday evening concerts had taken place. The proceeds of this series will be devoted to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund.

• • •

A Berlioz Festival

In recognition of the 150th anniversary of the birth of the great and too-little recognized French genius, Hector Berlioz, Charles Munch arranged a series of Berlioz concerts at Tanglewood, opening the first Shed concert on July 10, with the Dramatic Legend, Op. 24, "The Damnation of Faust" presented in its entirety, which is rarely done. Some of the numbers are almost too well-known while others are practically novelties. Berlioz picked out eight scenes from Goethe's "Faust" as his Op. 1. These he added to in later years, connecting the scenes with dialogue and other versified sections, so as to make four parts: the solitary Faust; Mephistopheles appears and dominates the scene; Marguerite and Faust meet; their love develops and they are torn apart, Faust's pact with the Devil is claimed and Marguerite is saved.

The effect of the music as a whole, the magnificent performance, the enthusiasm of Munch, the fine singing of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society (G. Wallace Woodworth, conductor), and the superb work of the soloists and orchestra, made the occasion an unforgettable experience. Berlioz seems to inspire the best Munch has to give, and he is one of the best interpreters of Berlioz music today. The music is impressive, touching, dramatic, lyrical, in turn. The conductor was inspired and inspiring, and he was fortunate in his choice of soloists. David Poleri has both the lyric quality and dramatic force for the role of Faust. Martial Singher's polished style, diction, and true artistry, as well as his complete understanding of the French composer's individuality made an interpretation that will long be remembered and praised. Eleanor Steber was a sympathetic Marguerite with the right kind of vocal quality for the part. Donald Gramm scored a definite success in a role of short duration. The opera gives much to the chorus and its music is beautiful. It is good to know that a record of this performance will soon be available.

• • •

Monteux Conducts Beethoven Program

Beethoven is in the "best-seller" class these days. Pierre Monteux had hardly shaken the Stadium dust off his shoes (and I understand that there was plenty of it on the night of July 14) where he had opened his annual appearance in New York with a Beethoven program, then he appeared in the first Sunday afternoon concert at the Shed in a Beethoven program. A seasoned concertgoer might hardly relish the idea of going all the way to the Berkshires to hear a performance of the Fifth Symphony. But to hear Monteux conduct it is another matter and is worth the long trip! Also to hear the sheer sound of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the perfect acoustics of the Music Shed is something worth while too. Over 11,000 people heard it. These included the audience seated inside the Shed and those outside. Monteux' playing of Beethoven has become a legend. His suave, quiet, controlled beat is individual and personal. His musicianship and artistry are individual too, and his understanding of the Beethoven idiom is a part of his own mentality.

It is nice to remember that way back in my student days in Paris, I was in an ensemble class that he taught in the studio of an assistant of the French pianist, Raoul Pugno. He played the violin and I played Mozart and Grieg for his criticism and interpretation. At that time he was conducting a series of Beethoven concerts with an orchestra. It was before America had discovered Monteux!

The rest of the program at Tanglewood on July 11 included the Third Leonore Overture, and the Emperor Concerto with Claudio Arrau as piano soloist. It was a brilliant well-integrated performance. The audience was loud in its approval of both pianist and conductor, who received an ovation at the close of the concert.

• • •

Opera Evening at Tanglewood

The Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center, assisted by the Orchestra of Department I, presented the first program of the season on July 27 in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood. The Department under the direction of Frederic Cohen of the Juilliard School of Music prepared a group of three short operas of comic character. The first, of particular historic interest, is discussed in every history of music, in fact it antedates opera. It is listed as a madrigal comedy that had its premiere in 1954 before the day of the dramma per musica of the Florentine Camerata. "L'Amfiparnaso" by Orazio Vecchi was an experimental work in which an attempt was made to use the madrigal form for dramatic purposes. It is not really known whether it was ever staged or merely sung a cappella as a madrigal cycle for 5 voices. A few years ago, Miss Dessoff and her choirs gave a performance of this "comedia harmonica a 5voci" as a concert piece. Mr. Cohen and his associates, Elsa Kahl and Morton Siegel, worked it out with two madrigal groups which supplied the vocal accompaniment, and a group of pantomimists whose work was conceived in the style of the Comedia dell'Arte. Hugh Ross entered into the spirit of the fun and appeared in costume perhaps of a choir leader of the period, conducting his well-trained groups of singers and achieving artistic as well as amusing results. The colorful robes of the singers, the humorous pantomime of the actors, the simple means of stage settings, all combined to create something old and something new that might well be used as the basis for a modern ballet. True the action was farce comedy that may have made some forget to concentrate on the very lovely madrigal singing, but it was all good fun and was excellently carried out by all the students of the Opera Department.

The second offering, "There and Back" or "Hin und Zurueck" was Hindemith's amusing

---

DAVENPORT, IOWA
DEMOCRAT & TIMES
AU[illegible] 1954

Catching The Beat In The Music World

By INA WICKHAM

"How many of us ever stop to think
Of music as a wondrous magic link
"With God, taking sometimes the place of prayer —
"When words have failed us 'neath the weight of care.
"Music, that knows no country, race or creed,
"But gives to each, according to his need"!
—Anonymous

The Boston symphony orchestra, with Charles Munch conducting, has ended the 17th Berkshire music festival, the 15th since the Boston orchestra has participated, with the greatest attendance and the largest receipts in its history. In six weeks from July 7 through Aug. 15, the concert attendance totaled 135,775; the audience at the 20 student concerts was 30,800. The six Saturday morning public rehearsals of the Boston orchestra, for which admission was charged, drew 12,510 persons and receipts of $11,274.25 and "Tanglewood on Parade" the annual benefit attracted more than 10,000 persons, an all time record, for receipts of more than $24,000.

THE INCREASED

. . . schedule of the Berkshire festival this season saw the full 104 piece orchestra give 12 concerts in the music shed, instead of nine as in former years. The six Saturday night Shed concerts had a total of 55,550 persons and the six Sunday afternoon Shed concerts drew 54,825, a total of 110,375 for the 12 concerts, an average of 9,197 per concert. More than 3,000 persons per concert heard the symphony outside of the 6,000 capacity auditorium.

THE STUDENT BODY

. . . at the Berkshire Music center also mounted. There were 375 students chosen from some 1,500 applicants. There were 259 full time students from 35 states and 12 foreign countries. New York led with 100. There were foreign students from Canada, Cuba, France, South Africa, Holland, Japan, Venezuela, Haiti, Israel, Hungary and Greece. Most of the students had high school diplomas and college degrees and many were former students returning for further work.

MUSICAL LEADER
CHICAGO, ILL.
AUG - 1954

According to Marion Bauer

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood

MARION BAUER

Spending the summer in Massachusetts has the advantage of being not too far away from Lenox and Stockbridge where Tanglewood has rapidly grown to be one of America's leading summer music centers. Just 20 years ago the first Berkshire Symphonic Festival was founded and conducted by Henry Hadley in a concert played by members of the Philharmonic-Symphony in the horse-show ring of the Dan Hanna farm in Stockbridge. Illness forced Dr. Hadley to resign following the second season. Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, president of the association, then approached Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, with the result that after two more seasons, Tanglewood became the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the enthusiasm, vision, and genius of Koussevitzky erected a living monument to his memory in the annual Berkshire Festival.

Olin Downes in an editorial in the New York Times of July 4, described what is known as the "$100,000 thunderstorm," because due to the noise of a severe storm that "out-roared" the playing of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, a movement was put on foot by Miss Robinson Smith and her colleagues to raise enough for the building of the Music Shed, the vast fan-shaped auditorium with overhead roof and open sides, that houses the symphony concerts that have this season grown to twelve in number. In 1946 the Music Shed became the property of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, as presented to them by the directors of the Berkshire Festival, who had been largely responsible for raising funds for its completion.

In 1940 another of Dr. Koussevitzky's dreams came true with the establishing of the Berkshire Music Center, the school which, as he foresaw, has become a valuable training center for America's gifted young musicians. Following Serge Koussevitzky's death Charles Munch became the Music Director of the Berkshire Festival and of the Music Center, with Aaron Copland as Assistant Director and Ralph Berkowitz of the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia as Dean. In addition to a large and distinguished staff of teachers, this year Gregor Piatigorsky is guest teacher in chamber music, and, following the tradition of having one outstanding composer in residence, Ernst Toch is guest teacher in composition.

This season's program is materially enlarged, as the full orchestra is in action for six weeks instead of three and there is a new grouping of week-end programs. There are six concerts by members of the Symphony in the Theatre-Concert Hall on Friday evenings. Every Wednesday evening a chamber music concert is given as a part of the Festival. These concerts are in memory of Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge through whose beneficence the Wednesday evening concerts had taken place. The proceeds of this series will be devoted to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund.

• • •

A Berlioz Festival

In recognition of the 150th anniversary of the birth of the great and too-little recognized French genius, Hector Berlioz, Charles Munch arranged a series of Berlioz concerts at Tanglewood, opening the first Shed concert on July 10, with the Dramatic Legend, Op. 24, "The Damnation of Faust" presented in its entirety, which is rarely done. Some of the numbers are almost too well-known while others are practically novelties. Berlioz picked out eight scenes from Goethe's "Faust" as his Op. 1. These he added to in later years, connecting the scenes with dialogue and other versified sections, so as to make four parts: the solitary Faust; Mephistopheles appears and dominates the scene; Marguerite and Faust meet; their love develops and they are torn apart, Faust's pact with the Devil is claimed and Marguerite is saved.

The effect of the music as a whole, the magnificent performance, the enthusiasm of Munch, the fine singing of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society (G. Wallace Woodworth, conductor), and the superb work of the soloists and orchestra, made the occasion an unforgettable experience. Berlioz seems to inspire the best Munch has to give, and he is one of the best interpreters of Berlioz music today. The music is impressive, touching, dramatic, lyrical, in turn. The conductor was inspired and inspiring, and he was fortunate in his choice of soloists. David Poleri has both the lyric quality and dramatic force for the role of Faust. Martial Singher's polished style, diction, and true artistry, as well as his complete understanding of the French composer's individuality made an interpretation that will long be remembered and praised. Eleanor Steber was a sympathetic Marguerite with the right kind of vocal quality for the part. Donald Gramm scored a definite success in a role of short duration. The opera gives much to the chorus and its music is beautiful. It is good to know that a record of this performance will soon be available.

• • •

Monteux Conducts Beethoven Program

Beethoven is in the "best-seller" class these days. Pierre Monteux had hardly shaken the Stadium dust off his shoes (and I understand that there was plenty of it on the night of July 14) where he had opened his annual appearance in New York with a Beethoven program, then he appeared in the first Sunday afternoon concert at the Shed in a Beethoven program. A seasoned concertgoer might hardly relish the idea of going all the way to the Berkshires to hear a performance of the Fifth Symphony. But to hear Monteux conduct it is another matter and is worth the long trip! Also to hear the sheer sound of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the perfect acoustics of the Music Shed is something worth while too. Over 11,000 people heard it. These included the audience seated inside the Shed and those outside. Monteux' playing of Beethoven has become a legend. His suave, quiet, controlled beat is individual and personal. His musicianship and artistry are individual too, and his understanding of the Beethoven idiom is a part of his own mentality.

It is nice to remember that way back in my student days in Paris, I was in an ensemble class that he taught in the studio of an assistant of the French pianist, Raoul Pugno. He played the violin and I played Mozart and Grieg for his criticism and interpretation. At that time he was conducting a series of Beethoven concerts with an orchestra. It was before America had discovered Monteux!

The rest of the program at Tanglewood on July 11 included the Third Leonore Overture, and the Emperor Concerto with Claudio Arrau as piano soloist. It was a brilliant well-integrated performance. The audience was loud in its approval of both pianist and conductor, who received an ovation at the close of the concert.

• • •

Opera Evening at Tanglewood

The Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center, assisted by the Orchestra of Department I, presented the first program of the season on July 27 in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood. The Department under the direction of Frederic Cohen of the Juilliard School of Music prepared a group of three short operas of comic character. The first, of particular historic interest, is discussed in every history of music, in fact it antedates opera. It is listed as a madrigal comedy that had its premiere in 1954 before the day of the dramma per musica of the Florentine Camerata. "L'-Amfiparnaso" by Orazio Vecchi was an experimental work in which an attempt was made to use the madrigal form for dramatic purposes. It is not really known whether it was ever staged or merely sung a cappella as a madrigal cycle for 5 voices. A few years ago, Miss Dessoff and her choirs gave a performance of this "comedia harmonica a 5voci" as a concert piece. Mr. Cohen and his associates, Elsa Kahl and Morton Siegel, worked it out with two madrigal groups which supplied the vocal accompaniment, and a group of pantomimists whose work was conceived in the style of the Comedia dell'Arte. Hugh Ross entered into the spirit of the fun and appeared in costume perhaps of a choir leader of the period, conducting his well-trained groups of singers and achieving artistic as well as amusing results. The colorful robes of the singers, the humorous pantomime of the actors, the simple means of stage settings, all combined to create something old and something new that might well be used as the basis for a modern ballet. True the action was farce comedy that may have made some forget to concentrate on the very lovely madrigal singing, but it was all good fun and was excellently carried out by all the students of the Opera Department.

The second offering, "There and Back" or "Hin und Zurueck" was Hindemith's amusing

---

DAVENPORT, IOWA
DEMOCRAT & TIMES
AUG 29 1954

Catching The Beat In The Music World

By INA WICKHAM

"How many of us ever stop to think
Of music as a wondrous magic link
"With God, taking sometimes the place of prayer —
"When words have failed us 'neath the weight of care.
"Music, that knows no country, race or creed.
"But gives to each, according to his need"!
—Anonymous

The Boston symphony orchestra, with Charles Munch conducting, has ended the 17th Berkshire music festival, the 15th since the Boston orchestra has participated, with the greatest attendance and the largest receipts in its history. In six weeks from July 7 through Aug. 15, the concert attendance totaled 135,775; the audience at the 30 student concerts was 30,800. The six Saturday morning public rehearsals of the Boston orchestra, for which admission was charged, drew 12,510 persons and receipts of $11,274.25 and "Tanglewood on Parade" the annual benefit attracted more than 10,000 persons, an all time record, for receipts of more than $24,000.

THE INCREASED

. . . schedule of the Berkshire festival this season saw the full 104 piece orchestra give 12 concerts in the music shed, instead of nine as in former years. The six Saturday night Shed concerts had a total of 55,550 persons and the six Sunday afternoon Shed concerts, drew 54,825, a total of 110,375 for the 12 concerts, an average of 9,197 per concert. More than 3,000 persons per concert heard the symphony outside of the 6,000 capacity auditorium.

THE STUDENT BODY

. . . at the Berkshire Music center also mounted. There were 375 students chosen from some 1,500 applicants. There were 259 full time students from 35 states and 12 foreign countries. New York led with 100. There were foreign students from Canada, Cuba, France, South Africa, Holland, Japan, Venezuela, Haiti, Israel, Hungary and Greece. Most of the students had high school diplomas and college degrees and many were former students returning for further work.

MUSICAL AMERICA
NEW YORK, N. Y.
AUG - 1954

BERLIOZ AT TANGLEWOOD

French composer's works and opera bill are high points of seventeenth Berkshire Festival

Gus Manos

Scene from Vecchi's madrigal opera "L'Amfiparnaso", (1594), staged by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center. From the left, Lorenzo Malfatti (on floor), Antonio Giardino, Naomi Farr, and Thomas Stewart

By MILES KASTENDIECK

Lenox, Mass.

AUGMENTING its concert programs from three to six weekends in the Music Shed, the Berkshire Festival entered on July 9 a new phase in its twenty-year history. The first weekend opened with a chamber-music concert in the Theater-Concert Hall on Friday night, then progressed to the regular programs with the full Boston Symphony on Saturday night and Sunday afternoon. The new scheme drew a total audience of 21,350 people, thereby justifying the enlargement of the scope of the festival, which a year ago had broken all previous attendance records.

Charles Munch conducted the first two programs, devoted to Bach and Berlioz, respectively. Pierre Monteux took over the third concert, likewise centered on one composer, Beethoven.

Whether the alignment was intentional or not, Berlioz became one of "the three B's" on this occasion. Since the programs of the festival take cognizance of the 150th anniversary of his birth, his inclusion under these circumstances might be both understood and pardoned. There is a possibility that the emphasis placed on his music during the festival will call for some kind of re-evaluation of his position, on the part of American audiences.

Bach and Berlioz

The Bach program consisted of five of the six "Brandenburg" Concertos. By presenting Nos. 1, 3, and 2 before the intermission and Nos. 6 and 5 after it, Mr. Munch allowed for agreeable balance and contrast. That there proved to be less balance and more contrast in the performances may be attributed to his unpredictable approach to these works, and possibly to Bach himself.

The conductor drove through the First and Third Concertos in too virile a fashion and with too emphatic a beat. The playing sounded needlessly rough, and altogether too rugged. The Second fared much more comfortably because the tempos and dynamics were much better controlled.

Under the circumstances, the soloists offered the compensating values in the first half of the concert. Roger Voisin played his special "Bach" trumpet most skillfully in the Second Concerto, though it sounded at times too much like a child's toy instrument. The flute playing of Doriot Anthony and the oboe playing of Ralph Gomberg appealed, especially for tone quality and musicianship; the violin of Richard Burgin, for his reliability.

The Sixth and Fifth Concertos found Mr. Munch much better adjusted to the music. The performance of the Fifth was enhanced by the piano playing of Lukas Foss, who built a fine crescendo in the first movement and generally distinguished himself throughout the work. Though a whole evening of "Brandenburg" Concertos might have proved too much, it turned out to be just enough.

Mr. Munch could have found no better opening of his celebration in behalf of Berlioz than the composer's dramatic legend "The Damnation of Faust". Uncut performances of it are rare events, and a memorable hearing even rarer. Suited by temperament to this kind of music, the French conductor evinced, through the two hours and a half of music, an increasing ardor and eloquence. It is no wonder that the 8,500 who heard it remained to cheer in spite of the lateness of the hour. The work had fired their imaginations, just as Goethe's story had fired that of the composer. To many, familiar only with various excerpts, of which the Rakoczy March is almost too well known, the entire score became a revelation.

Responding to their conductor's inspiration, the Boston musicians excelled themselves as they progressed in the performance. The soloists were a definite asset. As Mephistopheles, Martial Singher gave the most polished performance for style and diction. Eleanor Steber, as Marguerite, caught the emotional quality of her role, after some initial difficulty in warming up her exceptional voice. David Poleri, as Faust, found the music enhanced the natural beauty of his voice and sang remarkably well. Donald Gramm as Brander and McHenry Boatright as the Voice of the Earth offered excellent support. Though the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society sang earnestly, their numbers were too few to meet the fullness of tone needed in the choral passages.

Philharmonic Opening On Closed-Circuit TV

THE New York Philharmonic-Symphony Society has signed contracts with the Dor Theater Television for the closed-circuit theater television of its opening concert of the season, on Oct. 7 in Carnegie Hall. It will be the first time an orchestra has been televised in this fashion.

Dumont Television's production facilities will be utilized in the project, which will reach such cities as Los Angeles, Chicago, Philadelphia, Richmond, Minneapolis, San Francisco, Miami, Houston, Dallas, Pittsburgh, Indianapolis, Detroit, Boston, Omaha, Albany, Asbury Park, Salt Lake City, Milwaukee, Washington, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Dayton, and Toledo. Average price to the theatergoer is expected to be $2.

Dimitri Mitropoulos will conduct the televised program, which will include a concert version of Act I of Wagner's "Die Walküre", with Astrid Varnay, Ramon Vinay, and Lubomir Vichegonov as the soloists.

Pierre Monteux appeared to be on unusually good terms with Beethoven for the Sunday afternoon concert. Whether it was his admirable sense of proportion, his musical authority, or his wisdom and understanding that led to such memorable interpretations, he conducted with the simplicity so characteristic of him. The program opened with the "Leonore" Overture No. 3, included the "Emperor" Concerto, with Claudio Arrau as piano soloist, and ended with the Fifth Symphony. The occasion marked the thirtieth anniversary of Mr. Arrau's first appearance with the Boston Symphony, made under Mr. Monteux's direction.

The pianist played with his well-known technical mastery and commanding effectiveness. His performance was admirable in execution, but less satisfying in those intangible qualities that reveal the heart of Beethoven. It remained for Mr. Monteux to penetrate to the core and present the essence of this master in all his glory, especially in the performance of the Fifth Symphony.

The second weekend opened with a Bach program at the Theater-Concert Hall on July 16. Hugh Ross led the cantata, No. 93, "Wer nur den lieben Gott lässt walten", with the chorus composed of students at the Berkshire Music Center, and with solo parts expressively sung by Teresa Green, soprano; Beatrice Krebs, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and McHenry Boatwright, baritone. Charles Munch conducted two Bach suites—No. 1, in C major, and No. 4, in D—with vivacity and power, as played by the Boston Symphony's excellent string section, augmented by wind, brass and percussion. So warm was the applause that the final movement of the Fourth Suite was repeated.

On Saturday evening in the Music Shed, Pierre Monteux conducted Debussy's "La Mer" and excerpts from "Le Martyre de Saint Sebastien" with the full complement of the Boston Symphony, giving a brilliant and compelling reading of the French works. Vera Franceschi was the soloist in César Franck's "Les Djinns", symphonic poem for piano and orchestra. This rarely heard score created considerable interest though it is a difficult one to convey effectively. The audience was estimated at more than 7,500.

On Sunday afternoon, July 18, Mr. Munch led Debussy's "Iberia" in an atmospheric rendition. Leo Smit was the soloist in Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto, dating from 1926, which, with its jazz influences, provided a dynamic vehicle for Mr. Smit's assured performance. The finale came with Berlioz's "Fantastic Symphony", a highly graphic interpretation. Mr. Copland shared bows with the conductor and soloist after his work.

—A. R.

The third week of concerts at Tanglewood got under way on Friday evening, July 23, with a program devoted to works by Handel and Haydn. It was played, like the others in this Friday series, by a chamber orchestra composed of Boston Symphony players.

The first half of the program, which held Handel's Concerto Grosso for Strings, Op. 6, No. 4, and Haydn's "Military" Symphony, was conducted by Charles Munch. Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, took up the baton for the second half to lead the orchestra and student chorus in Haydn's "Nelson" Mass. In the pleasant, intimate atmosphere of the Theater-Concert Hall, these works sounded well, and the reduced ensemble played with the full tone and gusto of a large orchestra. Its performance under Mr. Munch, however, was plodding and stylistically diffuse. The conductor's beat was for the most part inflexible, and his conception of the symphony was notably lacking in humor and excitement.

"Nelson" Mass Heard

Haydn's colorful "Nelson" Mass, under Mr. Ross's direction, changed the picture entirely. Its devotional and festive aspects were given their equal due in a spirited performance that was finished in every detail. The orchestra seemed more enthusiastic than it had during the first half of the evening and gave firm support to the excellently trained chorus.

The four soloists—Naomi Farr, Beatrice Krebs, Marvin Worden, and Thomas Stewart—were also uniformly good. Miss Farr started out rather tentatively in the "Kyrie", where she had some taxing passages that might have been more easily handled by a coloratura, but she delivered her solo in the "Benedictus" with considerable warmth and fluency. Her colleagues had generally less difficult or extensive assignments. (Chorus directors should remember that this work requires little of the tenor part.) But Miss Krebs's singing of the opening solo in the "Agnus Dei" and Mr. Stewart's "Qui tollis" were among the outstanding vocal contributions.

Tanglewood

(Continued from page 3)

After such a balanced, winsome program as this, Saturday evening's fare in the Shed was somewhat disappointing. Prokofieff's Sixth Symphony, Liszt's Piano Concerto No. 1, Strauss's "Don Juan", and Elgar's "Enigma Variations" made up the catch-all program. Jean Morel's conducting of it, though, was distinguished on all counts. Elgar's Variations, which tend to ramble on in a disjointed fashion, received Mr. Morel's closest attention, and by effecting striking contrasts in orchestral color from section to section, he made them quite listenable from beginning to end. He was joined in the Liszt concerto by Nicole Henriot, whose playing was brittle and technically facile but lacked some of the bold heroics that make this work "sound".

Sunday's program turned again to celebrate the Berlioz centennial. Mr. Munch, the composer's ablest champion today, led the orchestra in his "Beatrice and Benedict" Overture and the "Harold in Italy", with William Primrose as viola soloist in the latter. Mr. Munch's devotion to this music was at all times apparent, and his readings of these two scores revealed more of their musical invention and lyric inspiration than any this listener has heard. Mr. Primrose played the role of protagonist in "Harold" with confidence and appropriate Byronic flair. Ernst Toch's Symphony No. 2, which received its American premiere in Los Angeles last season, and was performed later in New York, completed the program, bringing the weekend to a rousing finale.

—C. B.

On Tuesday, July 27, the students of the Berkshire Music Center opera department offered a triple bill containing Paul Hindemith's "There and Back" ("Hin und zurück"), Ernst Toch's "The Princess and the Pea", and "L'Amfiparnaso", a madrigal opera by the sixteenth-century Italian composer Orazio Vecchi. The Vecchi work, which received its first staged performance in the United States on this occasion, was presented in commedia dell' arte style under the musical direction of Hugh Ross, who was outfitted in period costume along with the singers. The cast included two madrigal groups and one of pantomimic dancers.

While "L'Amfiparnaso" was sung in its original Italian, the remaining operas were given in English adaptations. Hindemith's ten-minute operetta, presented under the title "There and Back", deals amusingly with a husband who shoots his wife and commits suicide. The merriment derives from the fact that the action goes forward and then backward. The principal roles in this performance were sung by Bernard Barr, Ann Tierney, and Helen Zimbler. Samuel Krachmalnick conducted.

The evening ended with Toch's "Princess and the Pea", which, with the Hindemith work, received its premiere in Baden-Baden, in 1927, and is based on the Hans Christian Andersen story. The principals were John Horner, Emelina DeVita, Robert Simpson, and Evelyn Lear. Paul Vermel was the conductor. The three operas were staged, at the Theater-Concert Hall, by Frederic Cohen, Elsa Kahl, and Morton Siegel. Settings and lighting were by John Blankenship, and the costumes by Leo van Witsen, both regulars at Tanglewood. Marion Farquhar prepared the English translations of the German operas.

1—2A

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

to ~~get~~ put this Whole a scrapbook!

USIC

Requiem at Tanglewood

To Hector Berlioz, the ideal orchestra consisted of 242 strings, 30 grand pianos, 30 harps, legions of wind-players and (according to 19th century wags) a few heavy mortars. He was never able to command such an aggregation, but several times he came close, notably in his most magnificent score, the Grande Messe des Morts (Requiem). That opus calls for a 210-member chorus, full symphony orchestra, four separate brass choirs (labeled according to the points of the compass), plus a battery of 16 kettledrums. Few of today's symphonies can afford to stage the work. At Tanglewood, Mass. last week, Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra undertook the task, and the result was some of the loveliest (and loudest) music that ever echoed through the Berkshire hills.

Heavenly Gesture. The performance was not only a resounding windup for Tanglewood's most successful season in its 17 years; it was a special victory for Composer Berlioz (1803-69). The respectable musical world has long regarded him as the giant who never grew up, an uneven talent full of romantic excesses ("Berlioz," mocked his fellow composer Franz Liszt, "liked to fancy himself draining Death's chalice to the dregs in a gloomy cavern, surrounded by Italian bandits, and gasping out a final curse upon mankind"). But slowly the critical tide has been turning. This year, following the 150th anniversary of his birth, orchestras across the U.S. have played more Berlioz than ever before. Tanglewood alone performed eight compositions—including the huge choral Te Deum and the Romeo and Juliet symphony—before the Requiem.

Historical

COMPOSER BERLIOZ
The giant grew up.

In Tanglewood's huge, open-sided Music Shed last week, before a crowd of nearly 9,000, Conductor Munch touched his knuckles in a gesture of supplication, and gave the downbeat for what Berlioz called a "musical cataclysm."

The first of the ten movements is a prayer for eternal peace, full of heartfelt sighs and dazzling sunbursts. The second (Dies Irae) begins with an insistent, plodding motif in the chorus, building up to a break-off point when the four brass bands join in. At the work's first performance (so Berlioz claimed), the conductor stopped at that point and had a pinch of snuff, while Berlioz himself leaped to the podium to save the performance. Conductor Munch last week took no chance on faulty entrances, had his warning arm pointing straight toward heaven four bars ahead. The brass bands broke loose (two were placed in the auditorium, giving a kind of stereophonic effect); they sounded for all the world like the trumps of doom.

Cathedral Hush. Everything following might be expected to be anticlimactic, but Berlioz achieves perhaps his greatest effects in the quieter passages that grip the heart after all the thunder. The superb Sanctus calls for a tenor solo in which, by a dazzling piece of orchestration, the single, defenseless human voice is set off against the relentless clash of cymbals; and in the sweet, concluding Agnus Dei, there are chilling traces of jagged pagan rhythms (later used by Stravinsky). Conductor Munch tenderly and forcefully drove toward the end, spinning out the Amen with a loving final touch. A cathedral hush hung beneath the bare steel rafters; then the crowd leaped up and cheered.

It was not the first time that the Requiem stirred an audience. When it happened in France 50 years ago, the conductor finally turned to the crowd and said sternly: "There can be no encores on the Day of Judgment."

TIME, AUGUST 30, 1954

PORTLAND, ORE.
OREGON JOURNAL
SEP 5 1954

Records Broken

The Boston Symphony, under its director, Charles Munch, closed the 17th Berkshire festival this year with the greatest attendance and the largest receipts on record.

WATERBURY, CONN.
REPUBLICAN
SEP 13 1954

2,000 Enjoy Violinist At Tanglewood

(Special to The Republican)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 12—One of the finest concerts in more than 15 years of listening at Tanglewood, home of the Berkshire Music Festival, was given by Zino Francescatti, violinist, with Arthur Balsam, pianist, before 2,000 listeners Wednesday evening.

The two artists presented Brahms' "Violin Sonata in A Major" and his "Violin Sonata in D Minor" with such beauty that the audience in the little concert hall with some 700 music-lovers scattered about the grounds was speechless and sat as though glued to their seats.

The most spectacular and memorable part of the evening, though, was the performance of Francescatti in the Bach "Suite in C major" (unaccompanied). This was one of the most brilliant performances ever heard at Tanglewood. Mr. Francescatti's tone was flawless, his fingering was something to watch from the fifth row where we sat. Brought back again and again at its completion by an audience which included Fritz Kreisler this was an incredible performance. At times we had to look at the artist to make sure we were not listening to an orchestra's whole string section. His tone was rich and deep and drawn as thin as gossamer.

The "braves" at the conclusion of the performance were well deserved by both artists. It was minutes before any one in the audience so much as stirred.

Mr. Francescatti's performance last evening followed close upon a thrilling performance he gave on Sunday when he played with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the shed before an audience of 12,700.

Friday night the annual Tanglewood-on-Parade concert will be presented for the benefit of the musician's pension fund. Saturday and Sunday the last concerts of this season will be presented.

SM.

NASHUA, N. H.
TELEGRAPH
SEP 16 1954

Name Business Manager of Hub Symphony

Boston, Sept 16 (AP) — A Michigan-born Yale man whose hobby is tinkering with "vintage" automobiles has become business manager of one of the world's greatest musical institutions — the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Thomas Doane Perry Jr., a native of Grand Rapids and a 1935 graduate of Yale, took over the biggest task of its kind in the American orchestral world yesterday. The 104-member orchestra has an annual budget of more than a million dollars.

The youthful-appearing, pipe-smoking Perry succeeds retired George E. Judd, who managed the orchestra for 40 years. Perry, a Navy corpsman in World War II, was associated with concert management at the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia before coming to Boston.

Perry was manager of New England Mutual Hall here and later became Judd's assistant. Perry's wife is an amateur sculptress and they have two sons.

One of the new business manager's major tasks will be handling the Boston Symphony's forthcoming Saturday night NBC coast-to-coast radio broadcasts, replacing the NBC Symphony formerly led by Arturo Toscanini.

HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM
SEP 16 1954

Hub Symphony Selects Perry

BOSTON (AP)— A Michigan-born Yale man whose hobby is tinkering with vintage automobiles has become business manager of one of the world's greatest musical institutions— the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Thomas Doane Perry Jr., a native of Grand Rapids and a 1935 graduate of Yale, took over the biggest task of its kind in the American orchestral world yesterday. The 104-member orchestra has an annual budget of more than a million dollars.

The youthful - appearing, pipe-smoking Perry succeeds retired George E. Judd, who managed the orchestra for 40 years. Perry, a Navy corpsman in World War II was associated with concert management at the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia before coming to Boston.

Perry was manager of New England Mutual Hall here and later became Judd's assistant. Perry's wife is an amateur sculptress and they have two sons.

One of the new business manager's major tasks will be handling the Boston Symphony's forthcoming Saturday night NBC coast-to-coast radio broadcasts, replacing the NBC Symphony formerly led by Arturo Toscanini.

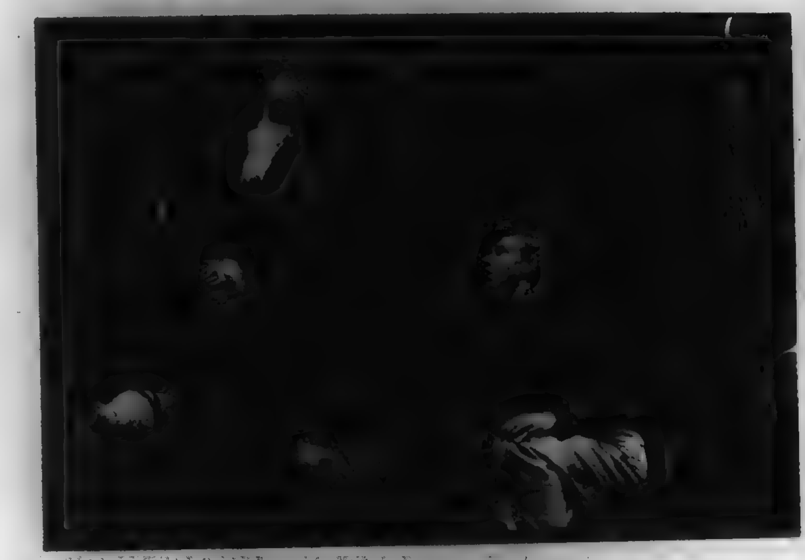
Seventeen - Aug 1954

Hitting a New Note

Community opera workshops provide fun for both singers and audiences

Punch Opera opened its New York City season with a trilogy of musical one-acters, "Murder in Three Keys"

Nearly one quarter of a million young people study singing in the United States today. Many hope to sing professionally; most will eventually teach. Today's students receive opera workshop training at many colleges and conservatories. Few of the hundreds who come to New York City hoping for jobs can be chosen by the major opera companies. But local community opera workshops offer as much excitement for singers as summer stock groups do for dramatic students. Punch Opera, a three-year-old summer opera workshop in New York City, offers aspiring singers operatic apprenticeships and entertains its audiences by experimenting with new operas.



Indiana University in Bloomington specializes in premières. Here, Benjamin Britten's "Billy Budd"

In Rochester, New York, Eastman School of Music offers Menotti's "Amahl and the Night Visitors"

More on page 58

BIDDEFORD, ME.
JOURNAL
SEP 16 1954

Boston Orchestra Has New Manager

BOSTON (AP) — A Michigan-born Yale man whose hobby is tinkering with "vintage" automobiles has become business manager of one of the world's greatest musical institutions—the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Thomas Doane Perry, Jr., a native of Grand Rapids and a 1935 graduate of Yale, took over the biggest task of its kind in the American orchestra world yesterday. The 104-member orchestra has an annual budget of more than a million dollars.

The youthful-appearing, pipe-smoking Perry succeeds retired George E. Judd, who managed the orchestra for 40 years.

to ~~get~~ put this whole scrapbook!

USIC

Requiem at Tanglewood

To Hector Berlioz, the ideal orchestra consisted of 242 strings, 30 grand pianos, 30 harps, legions of wind-players and (according to 19th century wags) a few heavy mortars. He was never able to command such an aggregation, but several times he came close, notably in his most magnificent score, the Grande Messe des Morts (Requiem). That opus calls for a 210-member chorus, full symphony orchestra, four separate brass choirs (labeled according to the points of the compass), plus a battery of 16 kettledrums. Few of today's symphonies can afford to stage the work. At Tanglewood, Mass. last week, Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra undertook the task, and the result was some of the loveliest (and loudest) music that ever echoed through the Berkshire hills.

Heavenly Gesture. The performance was not only a resounding windup for Tanglewood's most successful season in its 17 years; it was a special victory for Composer Berlioz (1803-69). The respectable musical world has long regarded him as the giant who never grew up, an uneven talent full of romantic excesses ("Berlioz," mocked his fellow composer Franz Liszt, "liked to fancy himself draining Death's chalice to the dregs in a gloomy cavern, surrounded by Italian bandits, and gasping out a final curse upon mankind"). But slowly the critical tide has been turning. This year, following the 150th anniversary of his birth, orchestras across the U.S. have played more Berlioz than ever before. Tanglewood alone performed eight compositions—including the huge choral Te Deum and the Romeo and Juliet symphony—before the Requiem.

Historical

COMPOSER BERLIOZ
The giant grew up.

In Tanglewood's huge, open-sided Music Shed last week, before a crowd of nearly 9,000, Conductor Munch touched his knuckles in a gesture of supplication, and gave the downbeat for what Berlioz called a "musical cataclysm."

The first of the ten movements is a prayer for eternal peace, full of heartfelt sighs and dazzling sunbursts. The second (Dies Irae) begins with an insistent, plodding motif in the chorus, building up to a break-off point when the four brass bands join in. At the work's first performance (so Berlioz claimed), the conductor stopped at that point and had a pinch of snuff, while Berlioz himself leaped to the podium to save the performance. Conductor Munch last week took no chance on faulty entrances, had his warning arm pointing straight toward heaven four bars ahead. The brass bands broke loose (two were placed in the auditorium, giving a kind of stereophonic effect); they sounded for all the world like the trumps of doom.

Cathedral Hush. Everything following might be expected to be anticlimactic, but Berlioz achieves perhaps his greatest effects in the quieter passages that grip the heart after all the thunder. The superb Sanctus calls for a tenor solo in which, by a dazzling piece of orchestration, the single, defenseless human voice is set off against the relentless clash of cymbals; and in the sweet, concluding Agnus Dei, there are chilling traces of jagged pagan rhythms (later used by Stravinsky). Conductor Munch tenderly and forcefully drove toward the end, spinning out the Amen with a loving final touch. A cathedral hush hung beneath the bare steel rafters; then the crowd leaped up and cheered.

It was not the first time that the Requiem stirred an audience. When it happened in France 50 years ago, the conductor finally turned to the crowd and said sternly: "There can be no encores on the Day of Judgment."

TIME, AUGUST 30, 1954

PORTLAND, ORE.
OREGON JOURNAL

SEP 5 1954

Records Broken

The Boston Symphony, under its director, Charles Munch, closed the 17th Berkshire festival this year with the greatest attendance and the largest receipts on record.

WATERBURY, CONN.
REPUBLICAN

SEP 13 1954

2,000 Enjoy Violinist At Tanglewood

(Special to The Republican)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 12—One of the finest concerts in more than 15 years of listening at Tanglewood, home of the Berkshire Music Festival, was given by Zino Francescatti, violinist, with Arthur Balsam, pianist, before 2,000 listeners Wednesday evening.

The two artists presented Brahms' "Violin Sonata in A Major" and his "Violin Sonata in D Minor" with such beauty that the audience in the little concert hall with some 700 music-lovers scattered about the grounds was speechless and sat as though glued to their seats.

The most spectacular and memorable part of the evening, though, was the performance of Francescatti in the Bach "Suite in C major" (unaccompanied). This was one of the most brilliant performances ever heard at Tanglewood. Mr. Francescatti's tone was flawless, his fingering was something to watch from the fifth row where we sat. Brought back again and again at its completion by an audience which included Fritz Kreisler this was an incredible performance. At times we had to look at the artist to make sure we were not listening to an orchestra's whole string section. His tone was rich and deep and drawn as thin as gossamer.

The "bravos" at the conclusion of the performance were well deserved by both artists. It was minutes before any one in the audience so much as stirred.

Mr. Francescatti's performance last evening followed close upon a thrilling performance he gave on Sunday when he played with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the shed before an audience of 12,700.

Friday night the annual Tanglewood-on-Parade concert will be presented for the benefit of the musician's pension fund. Saturday and Sunday the last concerts of this season will be presented.

SM.

NASHUA, N. H.
TELEGRAPH

SEP 16 1954

Name Business Manager of Hub Symphony

Boston, Sept 16 (AP) — A Michigan-born Yale man whose hobby is tinkering with "vintage" automobiles has become business manager of one of the world's greatest musical institutions — the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Thomas Doane Perry Jr., a native of Grand Rapids and a 1935 graduate of Yale, took over the biggest task of its kind in the American orchestral world yesterday. The 104-member orchestra has an annual budget of more than a million dollars.

The youthful-appearing, pipe-smoking Perry succeeds retired George E. Judd, who managed the orchestra for 40 years. Perry, a Navy corpsman in World War II, was associated with concert management at the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia before coming to Boston.

Perry was manager of New England Mutual Hall here and later became Judd's assistant. Perry's wife is an amateur sculptress and they have two sons.

One of the new business manager's major tasks will be handling the Boston Symphony's forthcoming Saturday night NBC coast-to-coast radio broadcasts, replacing the NBC Symphony formerly led by Arturo Toscanini.

HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM

SEP 16 1954

Hub Symphony Selects Perry

BOSTON (AP)— A Michigan-born Yale man whose hobby is tinkering with vintage automobiles has become business manager of one of the world's greatest musical institutions— the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Thomas Doane Perry Jr., a native of Grand Rapids and a 1935 graduate of Yale, took over the biggest task of its kind in the American orchestral world yesterday. The 104-member orchestra has an annual budget of more than a million dollars.

The youthful - appearing, pipe smoking Perry succeeds retired George E. Judd, who managed the orchestra for 40 years. Perry, a Navy corpsman in World War II, was associated with concert management at the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia before coming to Boston.

Perry was manager of New England Mutual Hall here and later became Judd's assistant. Perry's wife is an amateur sculptress and they have two sons.

One of the new business manager's major tasks will be handling the Boston Symphony's forthcoming Saturday night NBC coast-to-coast radio broadcasts, replacing the NBC Symphony formerly led by Arturo Toscanini.

Seventeen - Aug 1954

Hitting a New Note

Community opera workshops provide fun for both singers and audiences

Punch Opera opened its New York City season with a trilogy of musical one-acters, "Murder in Three Keys"

Nearly one quarter of a million young people study singing in the United States today. Many hope to sing professionally; most will eventually teach. Today's students receive opera workshop training at many colleges and conservatories. Few of the hundreds who come to New York City hoping for jobs can be chosen by the major opera companies. But local community opera workshops offer as much excitement for singers as summer stock groups do for dramatic students. Punch Opera, a three-year-old summer opera workshop in New York City, offers aspiring singers operatic apprenticeships and entertains its audiences by experimenting with new operas.

Indiana University in Bloomington specializes in premières. Here, Benjamin Britten's "Billy Budd"

In Rochester, New York, Eastman School of Music offers Menotti's "Amahl and the Night Visitors"

More on page 58

BIDDEFORD, ME.
JOURNAL

SEP 16 1954

Boston Orchestra Has New Manager

BOSTON (AP) — A Michigan-born Yale man whose hobby is tinkering with "vintage" automobiles has become business manager of one of the world's greatest musical institutions—the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Thomas Doane Perry, Jr., a native of Grand Rapids and a 1935 graduate of Yale, took over the biggest task of its kind in the American orchestra world yesterday. The 104-member orchestra has an annual budget of more than a million dollars.

The youthful-appearing, pipe-smoking Perry succeeds retired George E. Judd, who managed the orchestra for 40 years.

HITTING A NEW NOTE

BEGINS ON PAGE 56

SHARON ELMER

In Columbia, Missouri, Stephens College Opera Workshop revives "The Involuntary Thief" by Rossini

JOHN BROOK

At the noted Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Massachusetts: Grétry's "Richard Coeur-de-Lion"

FRANK DONATO—IMPACT

Juilliard School of Music, New York City, performs "Capriccio," a one-act comic opera by Richard Strauss

SC PHOTO

U. of Southern California gives "Volpone," opera by George Antheil adapted from Ben Jonson's play

---

PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE

SEP 16 1954

Perry Starts New Job as BSO Manager

BOSTON—Thomas D. Perry Jr., Yale '35, a native of Grand Rapids, Mich., yesterday officially took over the duties of business manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

He succeeds George E. Judd, who is retiring to his farm in Cannonsville, N.Y. after almost 40 years of service.

The job Mr. Perry is stepping into is rated as the biggest business task of its kind in the American orchestral world. The BSO budget exceeds a million dollars, the orchestra is one of the busiest of all big orchestras, and the manager's job also includes running the Berkshire Music Center school at Tanglewood.

Mr. Perry served as a Navy hospital corpsman during World War II. He was associated with the concert management at the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia before coming to Boston as New England Mutual Hall manager. In 1946, he became assistant manager to Mr. Judd.

SEP 23 1954

Tanglewood Quartet to Mark Community Concert Debut

Famed Vocal Group Will Appear at LHS Auditorium Saturday Night

LOWELL—The first program of the season for the Lowell Community Concert association will be the Tanglewood Vocal quartet, appearing at the Lowell high school auditorium Saturday evening at 8 o'clock.

Founded by the late Serge Koussevitzky, the Berkshire music center near Lenox, Mass., or "Tanglewood" as it is popularly known, attracts students from all over the world who come to work with the members of the Boston Symphony and the leading contemporary composers.

Marvin Worden

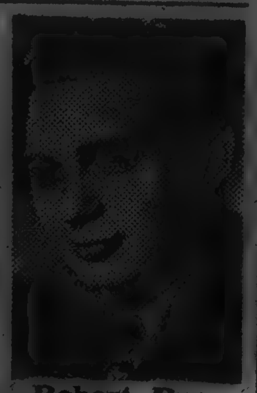
Janice Moudry

This well known quartet is composed of artists of individual renown, and includes Saramae Endich, soprano; Janice Moudry, contralto; Marvin Worden, tenor; and Robert Rue, baritone.

Outstanding

Miss Endich has won outstanding successes in opera and in concert work with the Boston Symphony orchestra during the last two seasons at Tanglewood, as well as from her appearances in recital and with chorus throughout the country. Her early activities culminated in a scholarship award to the Berkshire music center. From there her triumphs led to her engagement by Boris Goldowsky to sing the leading soprano role in Debussy's "Pelleas and Melisande" with the New England Opera theater in Boston.

Saramae Endich



Robert Rue

The voice of Miss Moudry has been called "probably the best of her register" by music critics, after she gave a repeat recital in Town Hall, New York, last season. She has been in constant demand as an orchestral soloist, and made a hit last season in her debut with the San Francisco opera both at home and on tour, appearing in "The Barber of Seville", "Mephistopheles", "Boris Godounoff", "Othello", "Electra" and "Die Walkuere".

Marvin Worden, as leading tenor of the Denver Grand opera company for three seasons, sang opposite such stars as Bidu Sayao, Dorothy Kirsten and Francesco Valentino. He has concertized extensively in New England, singing leading roles at Tanglewood and on cross-country tour of Gilbert and Sullivan.

Music has long been a hobby with Robert Rue, since his first voice teacher suggested that he consider it seriously as a career. Rue pursued his musical studies, first at Louisiana university, then at the New England conservatory where he worked with the New England Opera theater, and later at the Julliard School of Music. His recent major engagements include appearance in "The Rake's Progress" when Stravinsky conducted it in Boston, and the role of the Count in "Capriccio" at Julliard last season. He has appeared at Tan-

---

RECORDER GAZETTE

SEP 16 1954

Perry Becomes Boston Symphony's Manager

BOSTON (AP)— A Michigan-born Yale man whose hobby is tinkering with "vintage" automobiles has become business manager of one of the world's greatest musical institutions —the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Thomas Doane Perry Jr., a native of Grand Rapids and a 1935 graduate of Yale, took over the biggest task of its kind in the American orchestral world yesterday. The 104-member orchestra has an annual budget of more than a million dollars.

The youthful - appearing, pipe-smoking Perry succeeds retired George E. Judd, who managed the orchestra for 40 years. Perry, a Navy corpsman in World War II, was associated with concert management at the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia before coming to Boston.

Perry was manager of New England Mutual Hall here and later became Judd's assistant. Perry's wife is an amateur sculptress and they have two sons.

One of the new business manager's major tasks will be handling the Boston Symphony's forthcoming Saturday night NBC coast-to-coast radio broadcast, replacing the NBC Symphnyo formerly led by Arturo Toscanini.

MILFORD, MASS.
NEWS

SEP 18 1954

"MUSICAL CAMPER" FROM MILFORD — At the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, in Lenox (the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with its Berkshire Festival), seven of the students prefer camping out on the shores of neighboring Lake Mah-Kee-Nach over dormitory life. Albert Duffy (left, 566 King street, Littleton, and Lloyd McCausland, right, 80 South Main street, Milford, both percussionists in the orchestra, are two of the campers.

ATHOL, MASS.
NEWS

SEP 16 1954

Lover Of 'Vintage' Autos Will Manage Boston Symphony

Boston — A Michigan - born Yale man whose hobby is tinkering with "vintage" automobiles has become business manager of one of the world's greatest musical institutions — the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Thomas Doane Perry Jr., a native of Grand Rapids and a 1935 graduate of Yale, took over the biggest task of its kind in the American orchestral world yesterday. The 104 - member orchestra has an annual budget of more than a million dollars.

The youthful - appearing, pipe-smoking Perry succeeds retired George E. Judd, who managed the orchestra for 40 years. Perry, a Navy corpsman in World War II, was associated with concert management at the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia before coming to Boston.

Perry was manager of New England Mutual Hall here and later became Judd's assistant. Perry's wfe is an amateur sculptress and they have two sons.

One of the new business manager's major tasks will be handling the Boston Symphony's forthcoming Saturday night NBC coast - to - coast radio broadcasts, replacing the NBC Symphony formerly led by Arturo Toscanini.

[84]

HITTING A NEW NOTE

BEGINS ON PAGE 56

SHARON ELSER

In Columbia, Missouri, Stephens College Opera Workshop revives "The Involuntary Thief" by Rossini

JOHN BROOK

At the noted Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Massachusetts: Grétry's "Richard Coeur-de-Lion"

FRANK DONATO—IMPACT

Juilliard School of Music, New York City, performs "Capriccio," a one-act comic opera by Richard Strauss

SC PHOTO

U. of Southern California gives "Volpone," opera by George Antheil adapted from Ben Jonson's play

---

PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE

1954

Perry Starts New Job as BSO Manager

BOSTON—Thomas D. Perry Jr., Yale '35, a native of Grand Rapids, Mich., yesterday officially took over the duties of business manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

He succeeds George E. Judd, who is retiring to his farm in Cannonsville, N.Y. after almost 40 years of service.

The job Mr. Perry is stepping into is rated as the biggest business task of its kind in the American orchestral world. The BSO budget exceeds a million dollars, the orchestra is one of the busiest of all big orchestras, and the manager's job also includes running the Berkshire Music Center school at Tanglewood.

Mr. Perry served as a Navy hospital corpsman during World War II. He was associated with the concert management at the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia before coming to Boston as New England Mutual Hall manager. In 1946, he became assistant manager to Mr. Judd.

LOWELL, MASS.
SUN

SEP 29 1954

Tanglewood Quartet to Mark Community Concert Debut

Famed Vocal Group Will Appear at LHS Auditorium Saturday Night

LOWELL—The first program of the season for the Lowell Community Concert association will be the Tanglewood Vocal quartet, appearing at the Lowell high school auditorium Saturday evening at 8 o'clock.

Founded by the late Serge Koussevitzky, the Berkshire music center near Lenox, Mass., of "Tanglewood" as it is popularly known, attracts students from all over the world who come to work with the members of the Boston Symphony and the leading contemporary composers.

Marvin Worden Janice Moudry

This well known quartet is composed of artists of individual renown, and includes Saramae Endich, soprano; Janice Moudry, contralto; Marvin Worden, tenor; and Robert Rue, baritone.

Outstanding

Miss Endich has won outstanding successes in opera and in concert work with the Boston Symphony orchestra during the last two seasons at Tanglewood, as well as from her appearances in recital and with chorus throughout the country. Her early activities culminated in a scholarship award to the Berkshire music center. From there her triumphs led to her engagement by Boris Goldowsky to sing the leading soprano role in Debussy's "Pelleas and Melisande" with the New England Opera theater in Boston.

Saramae Endich Robert Rue

The voice of Miss Moudry has been called "probably the best of her register" by music critics, after she gave a repeat recital in Town Hall, New York, last season. She has been in constant demand as an orchestral soloist, and made a hit last season in her debut with the San Francisco opera both at home and on tour, appearing in "The Barber of Seville", "Mephistopheles", "Boris Godounoff", "Othello", "Electra" and "Die Walkuere".

Marvin Worden, as leading tenor of the Denver Grand opera company for three seasons, sang opposite such stars as Bidu Sayao, Dorothy Kirsten and Francesco Valentino. He has concertized extensively in New England, singing leading roles at Tanglewood and on cross-country tour of Gilbert and Sullivan.

Music has long been a hobby with Robert Rue, since his first voice teacher suggested that he consider it seriously as a career. Rue pursued his musical studies, first at Louisiana university, then at the New England conservatory where he worked with the New England Opera theater, and later at the Julliard School of Music. His recent major engagements include appearance in "The Rake's Progress" when Stravinsky conducted it in Boston, and the role of the Count in "Capriccio" at Julliard last season. He has appeared at Tan-

---

GREENFIELD, MASS.
RECORDER-GAZETTE

SEP 16 1954

Perry Becomes Boston Symphony's Manager

BOSTON (AP)— A Michigan-born Yale man whose hobby is tinkering with "vintage" automobiles has become business manager of one of the yorld's greatest musical institutions —the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Thomas Doane Perry Jr., a native of Grand Rapids and a 1935 graduate of Yale, took over the biggest task of its kind in the American orchestral world yesterday. The 104-member orchestra has an annual budget of more than a million dollars.

The youthful - appearing, pipe-smoking Perry succeeds retired George E. Judd, who managed the orchestra for 40 years. Perry, a Navy corpsman in World War II, was associated with concert management at the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia before coming to Boston.

Perry was manager of New England Mutual Hall here and later became Judd's assistant. Perry's wife is an amateur sculptress and they have two sons.

One of the new business manager's major tasks will be handling the Boston Symphony's forthcoming Saturday night NBC coast-to-coast radio broadcast, replacing the NBC Symphnyo formerly led by Arturo Toscanini.

MILFORD, MASS.
NEWS

SEP 18 1954

"MUSICAL CAMPER" FROM MILFORD — At the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, in Lenox (the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with its Berkshire Festival), seven of the students prefer camping out on the shores of neighboring Lake Mah-Kee-Nach over dormitory life. Albert Duffy (left, 566 King street, Littleton, and Lloyd McCausland, right, 80 South Main street, Milford, both percussionists in the orchestra, are two of the campers.

ATHOL, MASS.
NEWS

SEP 16 1954

Lover Of 'Vintage' Autos Will Manage Boston Symphony

Boston — A Michigan - born Yale man whose hobby is tinkering with "vintage" automobiles has become business manager of one of the world's greatest musical institutions — the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Thomas Doane Perry Jr., a native of Grand Rapids and a 1935 graduate of Yale, took over the biggest task of its kind in the American orchestral world yesterday. The 104 - member orchestra has an annual budget of more than a million dollars.

The youthful - appearing, pipe-smoking Perry succeeds retired George E. Judd, who managed the orchestra for 40 years. Perry, a Navy corpsman in World War II, was associated with concert manaement at the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia before coming to Boston.

Perry was manager of New England Mutual Hall here and later became Judd's assistant. Perry's wfe is an amateur sculptress and they have two sons.

One of the new business manager's major tasks will be handling the Boston Symphony's forthcoming Saturday night NBC coast - to - coast radio broadcasts, replacing the NBC Symphony formerly led by Arturo Toscanini.

[84]

Trenton. N. J. 1954 aug. 26.

GÖRBE TÜKÖR

Irja: LUKÁCS ERNŐ

VAKÁCIÓS ÉLMÉNYEIM.

Erdélyország szülöttje vagyok. Gyermekkoromat és ifju éveimet a Királyhágó bérceinek tövében töltöttem; nemcsoda, hogy imádója vagyok az erdős, hegyes vidéknek, ellentétben Petőfivel, aki gyönyörü versében igy kiált fel: Mit nekem te zordon Kárpátoknak fenyvesekkel vadregényes tája?! Tán csodállak, ám — de nem szeretlek...!

A géniusz Petőfi Sándor a nagy magyar Alföldön született. Az ő csapongó lelkét a sikság és a rónaság vonzotta. Jómagam mindég megcsodáltam a titokzatos délibábot ezt az alföldi tüneményt, de azért csak a hegyes-völgyes erdőséggel koszoruzott vidéket tudtam szeretni. Érthető, ha vakációmat ilyen környezetben szeretem eltölteni.

* * *

Egy Y.M.C.A. tagtársam kellemes nyitott kocsiján csodás szerpentin utakon 5 és fél órai élvezetes utazással jutottunk el az Uristen minden szépségével megáldott a 2800 láb tündéri magaslaton elterülő évszázados fenyvesekkel körülövezett Toppesfield Manor nevü nyaralóhelyre, ahol négyheti tartózkodásunk ideje alatt sok kedves uj barátokkal lettünk gazdagabbak.

Elsősorban érdemel emlitést a hat láb magas tulaj és talajdonos Kende András, akinek minden törekvése az, hogy a vendégei minél jobban érezzék magukat. Ebben az igyekezetében hü munkatársa volt a kedves felesége és a szolgálatkész udvarias személyzete.

A vendégek között volt a bájos Mrs. Feldman a gazdag washingtoni vigözvegy és "siker" testvére Elsie. A két hölgy szépségénél csak a szellemességük volt feltünőbb. Klára "kegyelmesasszony" vadonatuj áramvonalas Cadillac kocsiján mentünk a tanglewoodi Music Festivalra, ahol Debussy és Berlioz világhirü alkotásaiban gyönyörködtünk. E két francia zenegéniusz müveit ugyan ki más dirigálhatta, mint a kiváló francia karmester Pierre Monteux. Egyébként egy másik vasárnapunkat is a berkshirei Music Centernek szenteltük, mely alkalommal kizárólag Beethoven programot élveztünk végig, a világhires chilei Claudio Arrau zongoraművész közreműködése mellett. A Boston Symphony Orchestra nem szorul az én dicséretemre, csak szerényen megállapitom, hogy valahányszor gyönyörködöm benne — felejthetetlen élményt jelent számomra.

THE DANCE - Sept/1954

Charles Munch, director of Tanglewood Music Festival, welcomes to a Festival concert Margaret Morris and her Celtic Ballet, and Ted Shawn, paying a visit from the nearby Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival. (Photo by Gus Manos)

Trenton, N. J., 1954 aug. 26.

GÖRBE TÜKÖR

Irja:
LUKÁCS ERNŐ

VAKÁCIÓS ÉLMÉNYEIM.

Erdélyország szülöttje vagyok. Gyermekkoromat és ifju éveimet a Királyhágó bérceinek tövében töltöttem; nemcsoda, hogy imádója vagyok az erdős, hegyes vidéknek, ellentétben Petőfivel, aki gyönyörü versében igy kiált fel: Mit nekem te zordon Kárpátoknak fenyvesekkel vadregényes tája?! Tán csodállak, ám — de nem szeretlek...!

A géniusz Petőfi Sándor a nagy magyar Alföldön született. Az ő csapongó lelkét a sikság és a rónaság vonzotta. Jómagam mindég megcsodáltam a titokzatos délibábot ezt az alföldi tüneményt, de azért csak a hegyes-völgyes erdőséggel koszoruzott vidéket tudtam szeretni. Érthető, ha vakációmat ilyen környezetben szeretem eltölteni.

* * *

Egy Y.M.C.A. tagtársam kellemes nyitott kocsiján csodás szerpentin útakon 5 és fél órai élvezetes utazással jutottunk el az Uristen minden szépségével megáldott a 2800 láb tündéri magaslaton elterülő évszázados fenyvesekkel körülövezett Toppesfield Manor nevü nyaralóhelyre, ahol négyheti tartózkodásunk ideje alatt sok kedves uj barátokkal lettünk gazdagabbak.

Elsősorban érdemel emlitést a hat láb magas tulaj és talajdonos Kende András, akinek minden törekvése az, hogy a vendégei minél jobban érezzék magukat. Ebben az igyekezetében hü munkatársa volt a kedves felesége és a szolgálatkész udvarias személyzete.

A vendégek között volt a bájos Mrs. Feldman a gazdag washingtoni vigözvegy és "siker" testvére Elsie. A két hölgy szépségénél csak a szellemességük volt feltünőbb. Klára "kegyelmesasszony" vadonatuj áramvonalas Cadillac kocsiján mentünk a tanglewoodi Music Festivalra, ahol Debussy és Berlioz világhirü alkotásaiban gyönyörködtünk. E két francia zenegéniusz müveit ugyan ki más dirigálhatta, mint a kiváló francia karmester Pierre Monteux. Egyébként egy másik vasárnapunkat is a berkshirei Music Centernek szenteltük, mely alkalommal kizárólag Beethoven programot élveztünk végig, a világhires chilei Claudio Arrau zongoramüvész közremüködése mellett. A Boston Symphony Orchestra nem szorul az én dicséretemre, csak szerényen megállapitom, hogy valahányszor gyönyörködöm benne — felejthetetlen élményt jelent számomra.

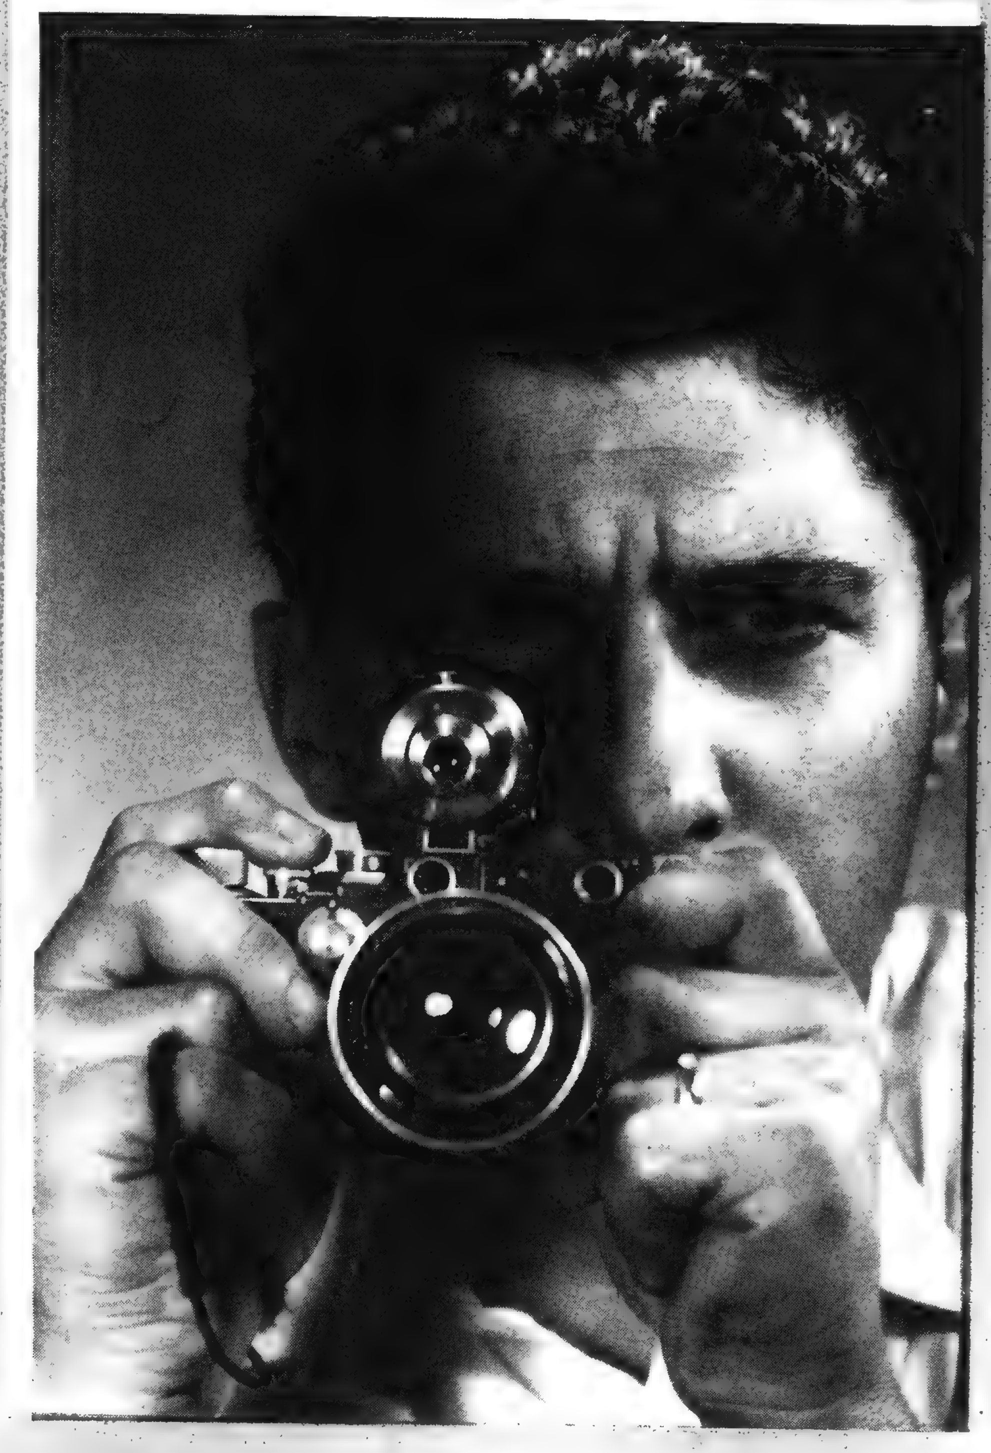
THE DANCE - Sept/1954

Charles Munch, director of Tanglewood Music Festival, welcomes to a Festival concert Margaret Morris and her Celtic Ballet, and Ted Shawn, paying a visit from the nearby Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival. (Photo by Gus Manos)

NEW JERSEY
Music and ARTS

Featured in this issue—

- MAPLEWOOD GIRL MAKES MET
- LIST LAUTER CONCERT SERIES
- MUSIC MENU AT TANGLEWOOD
- WHO'S NEW AT MET OPERA



A. JOHN GERACI
Photographer Who Paints with a Camera

(Article on Page Eleven)

---

wood to partake of great music in the summer seasons ahead.

To make that possible, something must be added to Tanglewood, no matter how nearly perfect it already is, musically speaking. Our advice to Symphony Hall is simply this:

"Let Arthur Fiedl[illegible] and true members of the Bosto[illegible] phony Orchestra appear every week at Tanglewood, for at least one if not two concerts, and there'll be no deficits at year-end for the good folks of Boston to offset by their generosity!"

That will not seem a brash suggestion to anyone who was at Tanglewood this August 13 just gone by. It will not seem far-fetched to anyone who can recall the 1953 Tanglewood on Parade at which young conductor Leonard Bernstein and the Boston Symphony Orchestra thrilled a record crowd with an offering of Act II, Scenes 1 & 2 from George Gershwin's Porgy & Bess. Soprano Leontyne Price and Baritone William Warfield made Porgy & Bess vibrate through the great Shed. Not one of the Great Masters of Symphonic Music dared to wave a bony finger in protest.

Two years in a row ought to prove something. Box-office and turnstile equipment proved in hard facts that Tanglewood on Parade is a potent mixture for the really big crowds, the "mostest" kinds of people who enjoy music with all of their five senses and not by cerebral devotion alone.

Conductor Fiedler's programming was on the target, full center, and the crowds roared their approval. Look at what he offered them, before it became time for encores:

John Phillip Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever" March, as an opener, followed by a suite from the lively operetta music of Jacques Offenbach, culled for the ballet "Gaite Parisienne" After that came Maurice Ravel's ever popular "Bolero."

Two Fiedler specialties completed the announced part of the program, a symphonic arrangement by Hayman of well-known television commercials, called "TViana"; and the Merrick-Bennett "Look Sharp-Be Sharp" Gillette razor theme of radio and TV. The encores were of the type that have endeared audiences for 70 years to the Boston Pops.

Apart from the Pops program which Mr. Fiedler conducted as the second half of the Music Shed concert, the Tanglewood on Parade concert program included Thomas Schippers conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Bizet's Symphony in C and soprano Brenda Lewis singing the final scene from Richard Strauss' "Salome."

Arthur Fiedler

Brenda Lewis

Tanglewood on Parade began at 4:00 p.m. with a performance of opera by the students of the Berkshire Music Center in the Tanglewood formal gardens. Afterwards, there were simultaneous sessions of orchestra, opera and chamber music—at 6:00 p.m., with a concert of the chorus at 7:00 p.m. on the steps of the Main House. The Lawn Party and picnic at 7:15 were followed by the gala concert in the Shed. Drawings for door prizes and waltzing on the lawn until midnight climaxed a happy day and a gay evening for thousands who will not be fully satisfied with anything less wonderful than the Pops Symphony concerts in the years ahead.

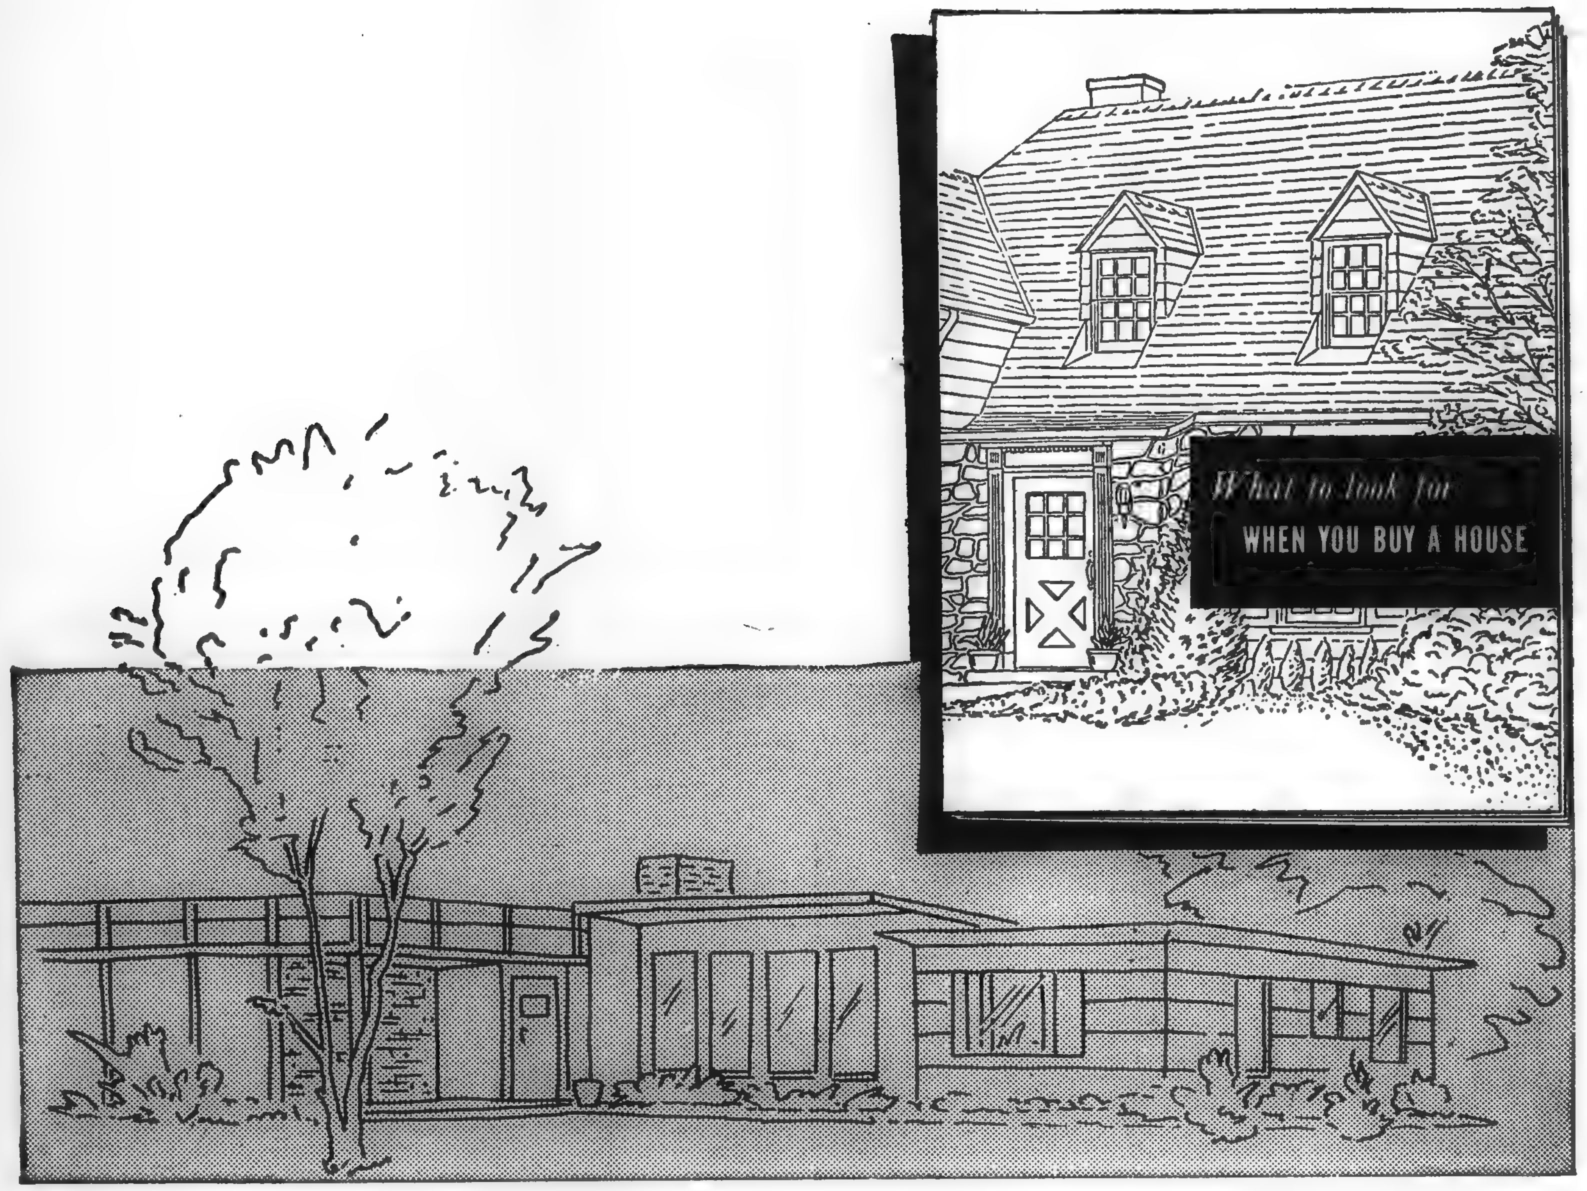
"Broadway came to the Berkshires" on this memorable August evening when Brenda Lewis sang with the Boston Symphony. Star of Broadway's recent musical, "The Girl in Pink Tights," Miss Lewis also starred in "The Merry Widow" with Jan Kiepura, "Secret du Suzanne," as Birdie in Marc Blitzstein's opera, "Regina," and toured the nation in the Strauss operetta, "The Gypsy Baron." She has achieved outstanding successes in operatic roles in Rio de Janeiro, Cuba and Canada. She has starred in light opera in St. Louis and appeared in summer music theatres in Kansas City, Dallas, Memphis, Birmingham and Chicago.

When she stood in the discreet spotlight on the stage of The Shed in the gala Tanglewood on Parade concert, she sang the final scene from Richard Strauss' "Salome", which she sang with the New York Opera Sompany at Manhattan's City Center. On that occasion the New York press gave her unanimous praise. As the New York Times summed it up, "She held the audience breathless."

That she did at Tanglewood and the B.S.O.'s able press relations director, Walter Alford could feel satisfied that he had summed it up just right when he said:

"Broadway came to the Berkshires."

The last note now belongs to eternity and it's "Hail and farewell" for 1954



What to look for
WHEN YOU BUY A HOUSE

You'll Want to Read This Book

It tells you the things to check when you're considering buying a house. It tells you how to get a mortgage and gives you an idea of what it all will cost. It describes the conveniences and luxuries a house could have. Why not send for a free copy?

Public Service Electric and Gas Company
Room 8311, 80 Park Place, Newark, N. J.

Please send me a copy of your book, "What to Look for When You Buy a House".

Name..

Address...

....

A-167-54

PUBLIC SERVICE

wood to partake of great music in the summer seasons ahead.

To make that possible, something must be added to Tanglewood, no matter how nearly perfect it already is, musically speaking. Our advice to Symphony Hall is simply this:

"Let Arthur Fiedler and 92 good and true members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra appear every week at Tanglewood, for at least one if not two concerts, and there'll be no deficits at year-end for the good folks of Boston to offset by their generosity!"

That will not seem a brash suggestion to anyone who was at Tanglewood this August 13 just gone by. It will not seem far-fetched to anyone who can recall the 1953 Tanglewood on Parade at which young conductor Leonard Bernstein and the Boston Symphony Orchestra thrilled a record crowd with an offering of Act II, Scenes 1 & 2 from George Gershwin's Porgy & Bess. Soprano Leontyne Price and Baritone William Warfield made Porgy & Bess vibrate through the great Shed. Not one of the Great Masters of Symphonic Music dared to wave a bony finger in protest.

Two years in a row ought to prove something. Box-office and turnstile equipment proved in hard facts that Tanglewood on Parade is a potent mixture for the really big crowds, the "mostest" kinds of people who enjoy music with all of their five senses and not by cerebral devotion alone.

Conductor Fiedler's programming was on the target, full center, and the crowds roared their approval. Look at what he offered them, before it became time for encores:

John Phillip Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever" March, as an opener, followed by a suite from the lively operetta music of Jacques Offenbach, culled for the ballet "Gaite Parisienne" After that came Maurice Ravel's ever popular "Bolero."

Two Fiedler specialties completed the announced part of the program, a symphonic arrangement by Hayman of well-known television commercials, called "TViana"; and the Merrick-Bennett "Look Sharp-Be Sharp" Gillette razor theme of radio and TV. The encores were of the type that have endeared audiences for 70 years to the Boston Pops.

Apart from the Pops program which Mr. Fiedler conducted as the second half of the Music Shed concert, the Tanglewood on Parade concert program included Thomas Schippers conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Bizet's Symphony in C and soprano Brenda Lewis singing the final scene from Richard Strauss' "Salome."

Arthur Fiedler

Brenda Lewis

Tanglewood on Parade began at 4:00 p.m. with a performance of opera by the students of the Berkshire Music Center in the Tanglewood formal gardens. Afterwards, there were simultaneous sessions of orchestra, opera and chamber music—at 6:00 p.m., with a concert of the chorus at 7:00 p.m. on the steps of the Main House. The Lawn Party and picnic at 7:15 were followed by the gala concert in the Shed. Drawings for door prizes and waltzing on the lawn until midnight climaxed a happy day and a gay evening for thousands who will not be fully satisfied with anything less wonderful than the Pops Symphony concerts in the years ahead.

"Broadway came to the Berkshires" on this memorable August evening when Brenda Lewis sang with the Boston Symphony. Star of Broadway's recent musical, "The Girl in Pink Tights," Miss Lewis also starred in "The Merry Widow" with Jan Kiepura, "Secret du Suzanne," as Birdie in Marc Blitzstein's opera, "Regina," and toured the nation in the Strauss operetta, "The Gypsy Baron." She has achieved outstanding successes in operatic roles in Rio de Janeiro, Cuba and Canada. She has starred in light opera in St. Louis and appeared in summer music theatres in Kansas City, Dallas, Memphis, Birmingham and Chicago.

When she stood in the discreet spotlight on the stage of The Shed in the gala Tanglewood on Parade concert, she sang the final scene from Richard Strauss' "Salome", which she sang with the New York Opera Sompany at Manhattan's City Center. On that occasion the New York press gave her unanimous praise. As the New York Times summed it up, "She held the audience breathless."

That she did at Tanglewood and the B.S.O.'s able press relations director, Walter Alford could feel satisfied that he had summed it up just right when he said:

"Broadway came to the Berkshires."

The last note now belongs to eternity and it's "Hail and farewell" for 1954

Tanglewood! — A Tremendous Experience

MONTCLAIR MEMBER OF STUDY GROUP DESCRIBES LIFE BEHIND SCENES OF THE BERKSHIRE MUSIC FESTIVAL AT LENOX, MASS.

by Nan Day

Bach for breakfast, Lalo for lunch, Debussy for dinner— served up (to complete the metaphor) by orchestra, choral, composition, opera or Study Group department, whichever suits your taste, or talent! Such is a Summer at Tanglewood, where one quite literally eats, sleeps and lives with music for a solid six weeks.

Famous Music Shed at Tanglewood.

And the metaphor is not quite so far-fetched as it may seem; as the conversation, mealtime and otherwise, quite inevitably rolled around to the vagaries of the Stravinsky quartet played the evening before, the charm of Jean Morel's conducting, Ruth Posselt's brilliant rendition of the Khatchaturian violin concerto—or some chorus member would start humming a tricky passage from Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet."

Music was literally everywhere. Sounds of aspiring violin, flute or English horn players, or rising Blanche Theboms and Ezio Pinzas, came from dormitories and Music Center practice rooms alike, and from "shed" studios located about the grounds and nicely concealed by the shrubbery. This writer had quite a time finding a quiet spot to study her music—finally settling on a nice silent hayfield! Even the local drugstore in Lenox served up a Beethoven symphony or Puccini's "La Boheme" with the coffee.

All Play and No Work. . . ?

"Especially designed for the teacher and the musician, professional or amateur, who is reasonably proficient in reading and performing . . ." describes the Tanglewood Study Group, listed in the Berkshire Music Center catalog as Department Five. In addition to getting a close-up of Tanglewood activities, the Study Group performs various vocal and instrumental music of all periods—with the pleasure and enrichment of the participants as the primary aim rather than polished renditions. Two- and four-week enrollments in this department make musical vacations at Tanglewood possible for the lawyer-bassoonist and the secretary-soprano, not to mention the housewife - music enthusiast.

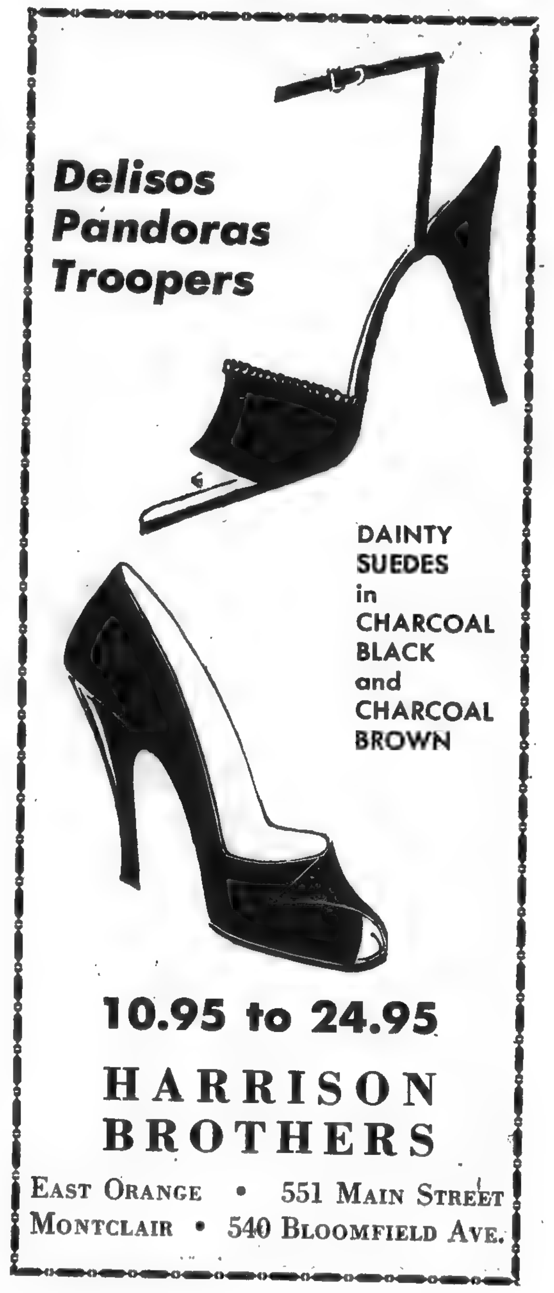
Performing sessions, minus an audience and under the direction of Karl Kohn, were usually held two to three hours a day, and included a generous sprinkling of works from Conductus right on up to Stravinsky. There was particular merriment over Gibbons' "Street Cries of London" fantasia and comparing it with John Cobb's canon "These Are the Cries of London Town," Purcell's catch "I gave her the cakes," William Byrd's canon "Hey, Ho to the Greenwood" and Paul Hindemith's "Plon Day Cantata;" while more sober moments were spent with Josquin des Pres' "Cueurs Desolez," Gluck's "De Profundis," Schutz' "Give Ear, O Lord" and Stravinsky's "Ave Maria" as compared with the Gumpelzheimer canon "Ave Maria."

Many compositions were perfored by singers and instrumentalists together. Separate sessions of the instrumentalists (the "Reading Orchestra") were held a few hours a week in addition to chamber music classes to peruse vast quantities of concerti grossi, symphonies, sonatas, suites, concertos and overtures, with plenty of chances to hit on someone's favorite.

Other diverse activities characterized the work of the Study Group. At one session a Study Group student gave a talk and demonstration on his recorder. At another session rudiments of choral and orchestral conducting were discussed. After a series of three classes with composer Lukas Foss, the members were ready to join ASCAP on the strength of their group composition for flute, oboe and 'cello, duly performed.

Performing for Public

For those desiring the full "do-mi-sol" treatment, there were classes in solfege three hours a week. And of course the Study Group's one public appearance cannot be overlooked. With Lukas Foss conducting, members of the Boston Symphony supplying orchestration, the opera department contributing soloists, and students from nearby Indian Hill filling in the crevices, the Study Group actively participated in the eighteenth program of the 1954 Berkshire Music Festival, performing excerpts from the early Mozart



Delisos
Pandoras Troopers

DAINTY SUEDES
in CHARCOAL
BLACK
and CHARCOAL
BROWN

10.95 to 24.95

HARRISON BROTHERS

EAST ORANGE • 551 MAIN STREET
MONTCLAIR • 540 BLOOMFIELD AVE.

---

ces-to vife
:hat of for son

the and ern ich-and ing tan and gle-

1954

---

wood to partake of great music in the summer seasons ahead.

To make that possible, something must be added to Tanglewood, no matter how nearly perfect it already is, musically speaking. Our advice to Symphony Hall is simply this:

"Let Arthur Fiedler and 92 good and true members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra appear every week at Tanglewood, for at least one if not two concerts, and there'll be no deficits at year-end for the good folks of Boston to offset by their generosity!"

That will not seem a brash suggestion to anyone who was at Tanglewood this August 13 just gone by. It will not seem far-fetched to anyone who can recall the 1953 Tanglewood on Parade at which young conductor Leonard Bernstein and the Boston Symphony Orchestra thrilled a record crowd with an offering of Act II, Scenes 1 & 2 from George Gershwin's Porgy & Bess. Soprano Leontyne Price and Baritone William Warfield made Porgy & Bess vibrate through the great Shed. Not one of the Great Masters of Symphonic Music dared to wave a bony finger in protest.

Two years in a row ought to prove something. Box-office and turnstile equipment proved in hard facts that Tanglewood on Parade is a potent mixture for the really big crowds, the "mostest" kinds of people who enjoy music with all of their five senses and not by cerebral devotion alone.

Conductor Fiedler's programming was on the target, full center, and the crowds roared their approval. Look at what he offered them, before it became time for encores:

John Phillip Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever" March, as an opener, followed by a suite from the lively operetta music of Jacques Offenbach, culled for the ballet "Gaite Parisienne" After that came Maurice Ravel's ever popular "Bolero."

Two Fiedler specialties completed the announced part of the program, a symphonic arrangement by Hayman of well-known television commercials, called "TViana"; and the Merrick-Bennett "Look Sharp-Be Sharp" Gillette razor theme of radio and TV. The encores were of the type that have endeared audiences for 70 years to the Boston Pops.

Apart from the Pops program which Mr. Fiedler conducted as the second half of the Music Shed concert, the Tanglewood on Parade concert program included Thomas Schippers conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Bizet's Symphony in C and soprano Brenda Lewis singing the final scene from Richard Strauss' "Salome."

Arthur Fiedler

Brenda Lewis

Tanglewood on Parade began at 4:00 p.m. with a performance of opera by the students of the Berkshire Music Center in the Tanglewood formal gardens. Afterwards, there were simultaneous sessions of orchestra, opera and chamber music—at 6:00 p.m., with a concert of the chorus at 7:00 p.m. on the steps of the Main House. The Lawn Party and picnic at 7:15 were followed by the gala concert in the Shed. Drawings for door prizes and waltzing on the lawn until midnight climaxed a happy day and a gay evening for thousands who will not be fully satisfied with anything less wonderful than the Pops Symphony concerts in the years ahead.

"Broadway came to the Berkshires" on this memorable August evening when Brenda Lewis sang with the Boston Symphony. Star of Broadway's recent musical, "The Girl in Pink Tights," Miss Lewis also starred in "The Merry Widow" with Jan Kiepura, "Secret du Suzanne," as Birdie in Marc Blitzstein's opera, "Regina," and toured the nation in the Strauss operetta, "The Gypsy Baron." She has achieved outstanding successes in operatic roles in Rio de Janeiro, Cuba and Canada. She has starred in light opera in St. Louis and appeared in summer music theatres in Kansas City, Dallas, Memphis, Birmingham and Chicago.

When she stood in the discreet spotlight on the stage of The Shed in the gala Tanglewood on Parade concert, she sang the final scene from Richard Strauss' "Salome", which she sang with the New York Opera Sompany at Manhattan's City Center. On that occasion the New York press gave her unanimous praise. As the New York Times summed it up, "She held the audience breathless."

That she did at Tanglewood and the B.S.O.'s able press relations director, Walter Alford could feel satisfied that he had summed it up just right when he said:

"Broadway came to the Berkshires."

The last note now belongs to eternity and it's "Hail and farewell" for 1954

opera "Idomeneo."

Included in the Study Group's main course were such high-sounding sessions as "Harmonic Analysis" and "Musicianship." Many of us had heard Brahms' Third Symphony at one time or another—but who had really gotten down to brass tacks and scrutinized his use of the diminished seventh chord in that work? Or wondered at the harmonic rhythms in Berlioz' "Te Deum" (later performed by the Festival Chorus)

Many of us had been charmed many times by Beethoven's lovely Sixth Symphony, the "Pastoral"—but who of us had really been aware of the fact that Beethoven was not interested in painting actual pastoral scenes, as giving suggestions of same by the use of certain effects produced by certain instruments—for example, the clarinet or oboe sounding like a shepherd's horn. Who had thought of the strings as commenting on the bird-like connotations at the end of the second movement? Or had thought of how other composers handled thunderstorms akin to the one of his fourth movement?

For the Tanglewood student body at large—and faculty members and friends of the Berkshire Music Center swelling the crowd—there were one-hour lectures given twice a week under the heading "Aspects of Music." This Summer the bill of fare included such meaty subjects as: "The Outlook for Music," "Survival of the Cantus Firmus Ideal," "Current Trends in Modern European Music" and "Rebirth or Last Gasp?" One afternoon Aaron Copland gave a revealing talk on his opera "The Tender Land" in particular, and opera-writing in America in general. Other speakers included Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Music Center, and Karl Kohn of the Study Group faculty.

Sing For Your Supper

"Eee-yaha-eee-yoho-eee-yoohoohoo!" "Get that rib cage up—hold it there! Loosen up those muscles now—In! Out!" Such jibberish and bestirring injunctions indicated Monday, Wednesday or Friday morning and another two-to-three-hour rehearsal of the Festival Chorus. Such vocal exercise in breathing and sustaining the tone vibrato helped to successfully put over the rapid passages in Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet" and the sonorous choral sections in his "Te Deum" and "Requiem."

The Festival Chorus—comprised of Department Two (otherwise known as the specialized "small chorus"), some opera associates, and most of the Study Group membership—was in for a real singing experience in concentrated form under James Aliferis, Lorna Cooke DeVaron and Hugh Ross, head of the Choral Department and conductor of the Festival Chorus. "You can't compete with trumpets, horns and the whole Boston Symphony by sustaining those notes. Attack each one separately," warned Mr. Ross during a rehearsal of the "Te Deum."

Or another time, in his clipped British accent: "The sopranos are singing as though they were eating Cream of Wheat!" and in the Dies Irae section of the "Requiem" the altos appeared to be singing with a "lost-little-boy quality." Throughout it all a persistent urging to watch, and stop looking at "those everlasting books!" But such coaching ended in rewarding performances for the Festival Chorus. Certainly one of the greatest thrills was standing on those risers in the famous Music Shed, the whole Boston Symphony Orchestra on stage below you; and out front, a great musician and reknowned conductor, Charles Munch. And when it was all over, that terrific moment of silence, then release, and the tumultuous applause of thousands for Mr. Munch, for the Boston Symphony—and for you.

... And for Dessert?

A Wednesday evening and visiting firemen in the Theater—Concert Hall (the Zimbler Sinfonietta, Kroll String Quartet, or Zino Franciscatti) —the student orchestra Thursday evenings in the Shed—Friday evening stage seats in back of members of the Boston Symphony and in front of Charles Munch or Jean Morel—a Saturday afternoon organ recital by E. Power Biggs—Saturday evening or Sunday afternoon Boston Symphony concerts—they were all part of the tremendous experience called Tanglewood.

Where in the World Are You Going?

No matter where or how,
we can arrange it.

KARL J. OLSON TRAVEL AGENCY

335 MAIN ST. EAST ORANGE, N. J.

ORange 4-2085

Agents for all steamship lines, transcontinental and international airlines. Hotel reservations, travel and baggage insurance, Travelers' cheques.

Sail away from winter. Reserve now for Fall and Winter cruises. No service charge.

Incidents and occasions to remember: The sudden Saturday evening rainstorm that made Mr. Munch halt the Boston Symphony in the middle of the Queen Mab Scherzo in "Romeo and Juliet" while the "lawn-sitting audience" (phrase coined by Lukas Foss) rushed into the Shed for cover ... The time Ruth Posselt's violin string snapped in the middle of the highly technical Khatchaturian concerto, with Boston Symphony violinist George Zazofsky quickly handing her his instrument so that seemingly not a note was lost; he had the string changed by the end of the movement ... The invasion of the dignified Music Shed by the Boston "Pops" as the highlight of "Tanglewood on Parade," and the "Parade" itself, with all Music Center departments going at once in Shed, Theater-Concert Hall, Chamber Music Hall and Formal Gardens . . . Those opera marathons, including such one-act productions as the highly entertaining Hindemith "Hin und Zuruck" (There and Back)—the Back part being a complete reversal of the action in There, the jilted hero popping back in the window from whence he had jumped in despair, the heroine pouring her cup of coffee back into the pot!

Down to Earth ...

With a suitcase full of Boston Symphony programmes and a steno pad full of lecture notes, this writer has reluctantly come back down to earth, as it were; but somehow "earth" is more abundant with such an experience to remember. Furthermore, one's naivete about it all finds justification in part of an address made by Charles Munch himself, director of the Music Center, at the beginning of this summer: "Never forget that the aim of music is above all to elevate us beyond our miserable human condition. Music will reward us a hundredfold if we try to hear its message with all our hearts and to listen to it with a kind of wonder reflected in the clear and innocent eyes of a child dazzled by the lights of a Christmas tree."

Of Tanglewood itself, Lukas Foss perhaps summed it up the best at the closing session of the Study Group: "It's not a school, not a camp—it's Tanglewood."

---

wood to partake of great music in the summer seasons ahead.

To make that possible, something must be added to Tanglewood, no matter how nearly perfect it already is, musically speaking. Our advice to Symphony Hall is simply this:

"Let Arthur Fiedler and 92 good and true members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra appear every week at Tanglewood, for at least one if not two concerts, and there'll be no deficits at year-end for the good folks of Boston to offset by their generosity!"

That will not seem a brash suggestion to anyone who was at Tanglewood this August 13 just gone by. It will not seem far-fetched to anyone who can recall the 1953 Tanglewood on Parade at which young conductor Leonard Bernstein and the Boston Symphony Orchestra thrilled a record crowd with an offering of Act II, Scenes 1 & 2 from George Gershwin's Porgy & Bess. Soprano Leontyne Price and Baritone William Warfield made Porgy & Bess vibrate through the great Shed. Not one of the Great Masters of Symphonic Music dared to wave a bony finger in protest.

Two years in a row ought to prove something. Box-office and turnstile equipment proved in hard facts that Tanglewood on Parade is a potent mixture for the really big crowds, the "mostest" kinds of people who enjoy music with all of their five senses and not by cerebral devotion alone.

Conductor Fiedler's programming was on the target, full center, and the crowds roared their approval. Look at what he offered them, before it became time for encores:

John Phillip Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever" March, as an opener, followed by a suite from the lively operetta music of Jacques Offenbach, culled for the ballet "Gaite Parisienne" After that came Maurice Ravel's ever popular "Bolero."

Two Fiedler specialties completed the announced part of the program, a symphonic arrangement by Hayman of well-known television commercials, called "TViana"; and the Merrick-Bennett "Look Sharp-Be Sharp" Gillette razor theme of radio and TV. The encores were of the type that have endeared audiences for 70 years to the Boston Pops.

Apart from the Pops program which Mr. Fiedler conducted as the second half of the Music Shed concert, the Tanglewood on Parade concert program included Thomas Schippers conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Bizet's Symphony in C and soprano Brenda Lewis singing the final scene from Richard Strauss' "Salome."

Arthur Fiedler

Brenda Lewis

Tanglewood on Parade began at 4:00 p.m. with a performance of opera by the students of the Berkshire Music Center in the Tanglewood formal gardens. Afterwards, there were simultaneous sessions of orchestra, opera and chamber music—at 6:00 p.m., with a concert of the chorus at 7:00 p.m. on the steps of the Main House. The Lawn Party and picnic at 7:15 were followed by the gala concert in the Shed. Drawings for door prizes and waltzing on the lawn until midnight climaxed a happy day and a gay evening for thousands who will not be fully satisfied with anything less wonderful than the Pops Symphony concerts in the years ahead.

"Broadway came to the Berkshires" on this memorable August evening when Brenda Lewis sang with the Boston Symphony. Star of Broadway's recent musical, "The Girl in Pink Tights," Miss Lewis also starred in "The Merry Widow" with Jan Kiepura, "Secret du Suzanne," as Birdie in Marc Blitzstein's opera, "Regina," and toured the nation in the Strauss operetta, "The Gypsy Baron." She has achieved outstanding successes in operatic roles in Rio de Janeiro, Cuba and Canada. She has starred in light opera in St. Louis and appeared in summer music theatres in Kansas City, Dallas, Memphis, Birmingham and Chicago.

When she stood in the discreet spotlight on the stage of The Shed in the gala Tanglewood on Parade concert, she sang the final scene from Richard Strauss' "Salome", which she sang with the New York Opera Sompany at Manhattan's City Center. On that occasion the New York press gave her unanimous praise. As the New York Times summed it up, "She held the audience breathless."

That she did at Tanglewood and the B.S.O.'s able press relations director, Walter Alford could feel satisfied that he had summed it up just right when he said:

"Broadway came to the Berkshires."

The last note now belongs to eternity and it's "Hail and farewell" for 1954

Broadway Comes To Tanglewood

By Herbert Moore

It was Friday the 13th of August, 1954, and lucky for music lovers who drove, flew or hitched hiked to Tanglewood, at Lenox, Mass., where Tanglewood on Parade, had another "first" to be proud of and glad about....

It was the first appearance at Tanglewood of Arthur Fiedler with the Boston Pops Orchestra! How about that for the star attraction?

The "Tales of Tanglewood, 1954 edition" (with apologies to Nathaniel Hawthorne) may not yet be ready and no author is yet lined up, but the story of what's going to make the Berkshire Festival even greater—and vastly more popular—could be dimly seen through the events of the lucky Friday the 13th of August.

If that sounds like "beating around the bush", it can be put more forthrightly, in these words:

Pops Symphony concerts are what's needed at Tanglewood to make it a 250,000 summer box-office jamboree! With the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra under Director Charles Munch, and the various units of chamber music, opera, renowned soloists and celebrities, Tanglewood has the world's finest array of summer music, with masterpiece standards throughout, but the average person (call him a musical illiterate, if necessary) has not yet been enticed to Tanglewood and for him and his wife and family, Pops is the magic elixir that will overflow the beautiful hilltop of outdoor summer music.

Music for the millions? At least, for a quarter-million in one summer season of 6 or preferably 8 weeks. With the new Thruway to connect Boston and Western Massachusetts with Western America, and improved highways reaching down through Connecticut and N.Y. State's own Thruway nearing completion, the greater metropolitan areas of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania can be brought to Tanglewood to partake of great music in the summer seasons ahead.

To make that possible, something must be added to Tanglewood, no matter how nearly perfect it already is, musically speaking. Our advice to Symphony Hall is simply this:

"Let Arthur Fiedler and 92 good and true members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra appear every week at Tanglewood, for at least one if not two concerts, and there'll be no deficits at year-end for the good folks of Boston to offset by their generosity!"

That will not seem a brash suggestion to anyone who was at Tanglewood this August 13 just gone by. It will not seem far-fetched to anyone who can recall the 1953 Tanglewood on Parade at which young conductor Leonard Bernstein and the Boston Symphony Orchestra thrilled a record crowd with an offering of Act II, Scenes 1 & 2 from George Gershwin's Porgy & Bess. Soprano Leontyne Price and Baritone William Warfield made Porgy & Bess vibrate through the great Shed. Not one of the Great Masters of Symphonic Music dared to wave a bony finger in protest.

Two years in a row ought to prove something. Box-office and turnstile equipment proved in hard facts that Tanglewood on Parade is a potent mixture for the really big crowds, the "mostest" kinds of people who enjoy music with all of their five senses and not by cerebral devotion alone.

Conductor Fiedler's programming was on the target, full center, and the crowds roared their approval. Look at what he offered them, before it became time for encores:

John Phillip Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever" March, as an opener, followed by a suite from the lively operetta music of Jacques Offenbach, culled for the ballet "Gaite Parisienne" After that came Maurice Ravel's ever popular "Bolero."

Two Fiedler specialties completed the announced part of the program, a symphonic arrangement by Hayman of well-known television commercials, called "TViana"; and the Merrick-Bennett "Look Sharp-Be Sharp" Gillette razor theme of radio and TV. The encores were of the type that have endeared audiences for 70 years to the Boston Pops.

Apart from the Pops program which Mr. Fiedler conducted as the second half of the Music Shed concert, the Tanglewood on Parade concert program included Thomas Schippers conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Bizet's Symphony in C and soprano Brenda Lewis singing the final scene from Richard Strauss' "Salome."

Arthur Fiedler

Brenda Lewis

Tanglewood on Parade began at 4:00 p.m. with a performance of opera by the students of the Berkshire Music Center in the Tanglewood formal gardens. Afterwards, there were simultaneous sessions of orchestra, opera and chamber music—at 6:00 p.m., with a concert of the chorus at 7:00 p.m. on the steps of the Main House. The Lawn Party and picnic at 7:15 were followed by the gala concert in the Shed. Drawings for door prizes and waltzing on the lawn until midnight climaxed a happy day and a gay evening for thousands who will not be fully satisfied with anything less wonderful than the Pops Symphony concerts in the years ahead.

"Broadway came to the Berkshires" on this memorable August evening when Brenda Lewis sang with the Boston Symphony. Star of Broadway's recent musical, "The Girl in Pink Tights," Miss Lewis also starred in "The Merry Widow" with Jan Kiepura, "Secret du Suzanne," as Birdie in Marc Blitzstein's opera, "Regina," and toured the nation in the Strauss operetta, "The Gypsy Baron." She has achieved outstanding successes in operatic roles in Rio de Janeiro, Cuba and Canada. She has starred in light opera in St. Louis and appeared in summer music theatres in Kansas City, Dallas, Memphis, Birmingham and Chicago.

When she stood in the discreet spotlight on the stage of The Shed in the gala Tanglewood on Parade concert, she sang the final scene from Richard Strauss' "Salome", which she sang with the New York Opera Sompany at Manhattan's City Center. On that occasion the New York press gave her unanimous praise. As the New York Times summed it up, "She held the audience breathless."

That she did at Tanglewood and the B.S.O.'s able press relations director, Walter Alford could feel satisfied that he had summed it up just right when he said:

"Broadway came to the Berkshires."

The last note now belongs to eternity and it's "Hail and farewell" for 1954

FIRST RESORTS & LAST WORDS

Summer, 1954 has produced several records and indicated a new kind of vacation pattern is emerging. It seems clear enough that the generation of young people who grew up during Total War and now have their first and second children, are not taking the old-fashioned kind of vacation which their parents took in July and August. Two-week vacations, except for young city girls and fellows in search of real romance, are going out the window. Even the amputated one-week vacation is becomming rarer. It used to be a compromise by which those who could not afford two full weeks, spent one at home and rushed off to New England for a quickie.

This summer it seemed that young married couples with children "stood in" the city, except for week-end jaunts in their new, high compression autos. In-laws could at least care for the children on weekends. This factor of changing vacation habits is causing some resort operators to change their setup, so as to accommodate young families with children.

Another factor which held many people back in Manhattan was the big Summer Festival in New York City. It offered a powerful counter-attraction to Eastern centers of summer music and ballet. Staying at home in the city was also less painful because it happened to be a coldish summer.

But, on the positive side, there was the record turnout at Tanglewood for the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer festival. In six weeks the Berkshire Festival concert attendance totalled 135,775 as compared with 117,950 in 1953 and 104,875 in 1952. Total paid admissions were $330,033 compared with $311,600 for 1953.

Significantly, Broadway came to Tanglewood in the gala "Tanglewood on Parade" Concert (see page 22) when a record attendance of 10,050 turned out to enjoy the Pops Concert by Conductor Arthur Fiedler and soprano Brenda Lewis.

And down in Newtown, Conn., at the Newtown Country Club, golf was played with brooms, to produce one of the funniest summer diversions!

HOW THE B.S.O. SOLVED A 1,650-MILE PROBLEM

by Walter Alford

At the close of the July 8 Esplanade Concert which Arthur Fiedler conducts on the embankment of the Charles River in Boston, 65 members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra began "Operation Shuttle", a weekly commuting to Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., for weekend concerts by the Boston Symphony in the Berkshire Festival, under the baton of Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra, and guest conductors Pierre Monteux, Jean Morel and Richard Burgin.

When Conductor Charles Munch conceived the new plan for six weekends of Music Shed concerts by the full 104-man Boston Symphony Orchestra, he gave Tanglewood music lovers nine instead of 12 Shed Concerts, but thereby has created a problem how to have so many players of the Boston Symphony in two places at once. In past years, with the Esplanade concerts ending the last week of July, and Tanglewood Shed concerts not starting until the final three weeks of the Berkshire Festival, there was no overlapping. But this year the popular Esplanade Concerts, were extended to August 11, and Tanglewood's first Shed concert was Saturday, July 10, its final one, Sunday, August 15.

In effect, the Boston Symphony Orchestra solved its problem by having no less than three orchestras:

Orchestra "A" is the Chamber Orchestra of some 30-40 players, some twenty of whom, first chair players, are on the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood. They perform in the Friday night chamber orchestra programs, known popularly as the "Bach-Mozart concerts", rehearsing Wednesdays and Thursdays for their Friday performances, which commenced July 9 with Mr. Munch conducting an all-Bach program of Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 1, 2, 3, 5 and 6, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist.

Orchestra "B" is the Esplanade orchestra of 84 players, who gave their first concert on July 5, perform Tuesday morning for children, Tuesday evenings and Wednesday evenings. When the Wednesday concerts fin- [illegible] players traveled to Tanglewood, either by train, bus, in individual automobiles, or in car pools, arriving in time for rehearsals for the weekend's Festival concerts on Thursday afternoons.

Orchestra "C", or the full 104-man Boston Symphony, rehearsed Thursday afternoons and Friday mornings, and gave a public rehearsal at 10 a.m. each Saturday morning, at $1.00 for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund.

The Shed concerts commenced with the first Tanglewood presentation, on July 10 of Hector Berlioz' massive "The Damnation of Faust", with Charles Munch conducting, with the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society, and soloists Eleanor Steber, soprano; David Poleri, tenor; Martial Singher, baritone; Donald Gramm, bass-baritone; and on Sunday (July 11), guest conductor Pierre Monteux led the orchestra in an all-Beethoven program, including the Overture to "Leonore" No. 3, the Fifth Symphony, and the "Emperor" Concerto, with Chilean pianist Claudio Arrau as soloist.

Thereupon the 65 "shuttling" members of the Boston Symphony returned to Boston, either Sunday afternoon or evening, or Monday morning, in time for Monday's (July 12) Esplanade concert. Some of the orchestra members moved their families to Tanglewood for the summer and joined them there; others kept their houses in the Boston area intact until the orchestra personnel takes its vacation in late August and September before the commencement of the 73rd season in Boston in October.

In all, the "shuttle" operation involved six Thursday trips to Tanglewood and five Monday returns to Boston, or approximately 1,650 miles apiece for each of the 65 traveling musicians.

Members of BSO entering Tanglewood gates.

Seventy-Fourth Season

1954–1955

Boston Symphony Orchestra

CHARLES MUNCH,
Music Director

Concerts in

BOSTON (Symphony Hall)
(Oct. 8–April 30)
24 Friday Afternoons
24 Saturday Evenings
9 Tuesday Evenings
6 Sunday Afternoons

CAMBRIDGE (Sanders Theatre)
6 Tuesday Evenings

PROVIDENCE
(Veterans Auditorium)
5 Tuesday Evenings

NEW YORK (Carnegie Hall)
5 Wednesday Evenings
5 Saturday Afternoons

BROOKLYN (Academy of Music)
5 Friday Evenings

Washington (4), New Haven (2), Hartford, New London, Northampton, Newark, Philadelphia, New Brunswick, Columbus, Detroit, Ann Arbor, East Lansing, Kalamazoo

To receive later announcements leave your name and address at the ticket office, or address Ticket Office, Symphony Hall, Boston

---

FIVE FESTIVALS THIS SUMMER FOR CONDUCTOR MUNCH

The fifth season of Charles Munch as Conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra came to a close on May 2, with Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Within a few hours he flew to conduct the Orchestra Nationale and the orchestra at the opera in Paris. He conducted in the Festival at Bordeaux, and presented Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ" in the cathedral in his native city of Strasbourg.

Returning to America, Mr. Munch opened the Berkshire Festival in Lenox, Mass. on July 10 with Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust". After the conclusion of the Festival on August 15, he will return to Europe to conduct at Besancon and at the Edinburgh Festival.

He will open the 74th season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Symphony Hall on October 8. The Saturday night concerts next season will be broadcast on the NBC network, replacing the Toscanini series.

Charles Munch

In addition to his activities as Conductor, Charles Munch has found time to write a book which will shortly be published in French and subsequently in English. It is entitled, "Je suis chef d'orchestre" ("I Am a Conductor").

A resume of the Boston Symphony programs through the five years under the directorship of Mr. Munch shows 408 performances of works by 104 composers. Of these, 36 works have been by 23 composers American by birth or long residence. These five years have included this orchestra's first tour of Europe in the spring of 1952, and its first transcontinental tour in the spring of 1953.

The Boston Symphony Orch[illegible] probably the [illegible] in the [illegible] Its total [illegible] the season 1953-54, including [illegible] concerts and outdoor Esplanade concerts in Boston (conducted by Arthur Fiedler) is 217; the over-all season, 45 weeks.

INTENTIONAL SECOND EXPOSURE

FIRST RESORTS & LAST WORDS

Summer, 1954 has produced several records and indicated a new kind of vacation pattern is emerging. It seems clear enough that the generation of young people who grew up during Total War and now have their first and second children, are not taking the old-fashioned kind of vacation which their parents took in July and August. Two-week vacations, except for young city girls and fellows in search of real romance, are going out the window. Even the amputated one-week vacation is becomming rarer. It used to be a compromise by which those who could not afford two full weeks, spent one at home and rushed off to New England for a quickie.

This summer it seemed that young married couples with children "stood in" the city, except for week-end jaunts in their new, high compression autos. In-laws could at least care for the children on weekends. This factor of changing vacation habits is causing some resort operators to change their setup, so as to accommodate young families with children.

Another factor which held many people back in Manhattan was the big Summer Festival in New York City. It offered a powerful counter-attraction to Eastern centers of summer music and ballet. Staying at home in the city was also less painful because it happened to be a coldish summer.

But, on the positive side, there was the record turnout at Tanglewood for the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer festival. In six weeks the Berkshire Festival concert attendance totalled 135,775 as compared with 117,950 in 1953 and 104,875 in 1952. Total paid admissions were $330,033 compared with $311,600 for 1953.

Significantly, Broadway came to Tanglewood in the gala "Tanglewood on Parade" Concert (see page 22) when a record attendance of 10,050 turned out to enjoy the Pops Concert by Conductor Arthur Fiedler and soprano Brenda Lewis.

And down in Newtown, Conn., at the Newtown Country Club, golf was played with brooms, to produce one of the funniest summer diversions!

HOW THE B.S.O. SOLVED A 1,650-MILE PROBLEM

by Walter Alford

At the close of the July 8 Esplanade Concert which Arthur Fiedler conducts on the embankment of the Charles River in Boston, 65 members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra began "Operation Shuttle", a weekly commuting to Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., for weekend concerts by the Boston Symphony in the Berkshire Festival, under the baton of Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra, and guest conductors Pierre Monteux, Jean Morel and Richard Burgin.

When Conductor Charles Munch conceived the new plan for six weekends of Music Shed concerts by the full 104-man Boston Symphony Orchestra, he gave Tanglewood music lovers nine instead of 12 Shed Concerts, but thereby has created a problem how to have so many players of the Boston Symphony in two places at once. In past years, with the Esplanade concerts ending the last week of July, and Tanglewood Shed concerts not starting until the final three weeks of the Berkshire Festival, there was no overlapping. But this year the popular Esplanade Concerts, were extended to August 11, and Tanglewood's first Shed concert was Saturday, July 10, its final one, Sunday, August 15.

In effect, the Boston Symphony Orchestra solved its problem by having no less than three orchestras:

Orchestra "A" is the Chamber Orchestra of some 30-40 players, some twenty of whom, first chair players, are on the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood. They perform in the Friday night chamber orchestra programs, known popularly as the "Bach-Mozart concerts", rehearsing Wednesdays and Thursdays for their Friday performances, which commenced July 9 with Mr. Munch conducting an all-Bach program of Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 1, 2, 3, 5 and 6, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist.

Orchestra "B" is the Esplanade orchestra of 84 players, who gave their first concert on July 5, perform Tuesday morning for children, Tuesday evenings and Wednesday evenings. [illegible] the Wednesday concerts fin- [illegible] sixty-five players traveled to Tanglewood, either by train, bus, in individual automobiles, or in car pools, arriving in time for rehearsals for the weekend's Festival concerts on Thursday afternoons.

Orchestra "C", or the full 104-man Boston Symphony, rehearsed Thursday afternoons and Friday mornings, and gave a public rehearsal at 10 a.m. each Saturday morning, at $1.00 for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund.

The Shed concerts commenced with the first Tanglewood presentation, on July 10 of Hector Berlioz' massive "The Damnation of Faust", with Charles Munch conducting, with the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society, and soloists Eleanor Steber, soprano; David Poleri, tenor; Martial Singher, baritone; Donald Gramm, bass-baritone; and on Sunday (July 11), guest conductor Pierre Monteux led the orchestra in an all-Beethoven program, including the Overture to "Leonore" No. 3, the Fifth Symphony, and the "Emperor" Concerto, with Chilean pianist Claudio Arrau as soloist.

Thereupon the 65 "shuttling" members of the Boston Symphony returned to Boston, either Sunday afternoon or evening, or Monday morning, in time for Monday's (July 12) Esplanade concert. Some of the orchestra members moved their families to Tanglewood for the summer and joined them there; others kept their houses in the Boston area intact until the orchestra personnel takes its vacation in late August and September before the commencement of the 73rd season in Boston in October.

In all, the "shuttle" operation involved six Thursday trips to Tanglewood and five Monday returns to Boston, or approximately 1,650 miles apiece for each of the 65 traveling musicians.

Members of BSO entering Tanglewood gates.

Seventy-Fourth Season

1954–1955

Boston Symphony Orchestra

CHARLES MUNCH,

Music Director

Concerts in

BOSTON (Symphony Hall)
(Oct. 8–April 30)
24 Friday Afternoons
24 Saturday Evenings
9 Tuesday Evenings
6 Sunday Afternoons

CAMBRIDGE (Sanders Theatre)
6 Tuesday Evenings

PROVIDENCE
(Veterans Auditorium)
5 Tuesday Evenings

NEW YORK (Carnegie Hall)
5 Wednesday Evenings
5 Saturday Afternoons

BROOKLYN (Academy of Music)
5 Friday Evenings

Washington (4), New Haven (2), Hartford, New London, Northampton, Newark, Philadelphia, New Brunswick, Columbus, Detroit, Ann Arbor, East Lansing, Kalamazoo

To receive later announcements leave your name and address at the ticket office, or address Ticket Office, Symphony Hall, Boston

FIVE FESTIVALS THIS SUMMER FOR CONDUCTOR MUNCH

The fifth season of Charles Munch as Conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra came to a close on May 2, with Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Within a few hours he flew to conduct the Orchestra Nationale and the orchestra at the opera in Paris. He conducted in the Festival at Bordeaux, and presented Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ" in the cathedral in his native city of Strasbourg.

Returning to America, Mr. Munch opened the Berkshire Festival in Lenox, Mass. on July 10 with Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust". After the conclusion of the Festival on August 15, he will return to Europe to conduct at Besancon and at the Edinburgh Festival.

He will open the 74th season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Symphony Hall on October 8. The Saturday night concerts next season will be broadcast on the NBC network, replacing the Toscanini series.

Charles Munch

In addition to his activities as Conductor, Charles Munch has found time to write a book which will shortly be published in French and subsequently in English. It is entitled, "Je suis chef d'orchestre" ("I Am a Conductor").

A resume of the Boston Symphony programs through the five years under the directorship of Mr. Munch shows 408 performances of works by 104 composers. Of these, 36 works have been by 23 composers American by birth or long residence. These five years have included this orchestra's first tour of Europe in the spring of 1952, and its first transcontinental tour in the spring of 1953.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra is probably the most active in the country. Its total number of concerts for the season 1953-54, including the Pops concerts and outdoor Esplanade concerts in Boston (conducted by Arthur Fiedler) is 217; the over-all season, 45 weeks.

TIGHT BINDING

Cir. (D 96,447)

This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES

FEB 12 1955

Munch Features Beethoven for Summer Festival

THE Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, will present most of the principal works of Beethoven at this Summer's Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., through six weekends from July 6 to Aug. 14.

The Shed concerts will include the nine symphonies, the "Missa Solemnis", a concert performance of "Fidelio" (Act II), concertos and overtures.

The plan for 1955 lists concerts each Friday evening, Saturday evening, and Sunday afternoon. The first two weekends will be devoted to the Bach-Mozart concerts in the Theater and the last four weekends will consist of twelve concerts by the full orchestra in the Music Shed.

* * *

GUEST CONDUCTORS at the Festival will be Pierre Monteux, who will then have passed his 80th birthday; Leonard Bernstein, returning to Tanglewood after a sabbatical year; and Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra and a former conducting student of Serge Koussevitzky at Tanglewood. Charles Munch will conduct two concerts each week, a third to be under the direction of a guest conductor.

In addition to the pianists, Rudolf Serkin and Eugene Istomin, Leonard Bernstein will appear as pianist, conducting from the keyboard. Other soloists will be Isaac Stern, violinist; Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist, and the singers, Margaret Harshaw, Jennie Tourel, and Leontyne Price.

The Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, G. Wallace Woodworth, conductor, will appear in a performance of Bach's Mass in B minor in the Bach-Mozart series. The Berkshire Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, will perform several choral works.

* * *

THE FIRST WEEK of the Bach-Mozart concerts (July 8, 9, 10), Charles Munch will conduct Bach's Mass in B minor and Thor Johnson will conduct a concert. In the second week (July 15, 16, 17), Leonard Bernstein will conduct an all-Mozart program, playing a piano concerto.

Through the four weeks of the Shed concerts to follow, Charles Munch will conduct two concerts each week; Pierre Monteux in the first, second and fourth weeks; Leonard Bernstein in the third.

* * *

SHED CONCERT programs are listed here in part: First week (July 22, 23, 24), Beethoven's Symphonies 1, 4, 6, and 7 will be played and the Violin Concerto (Isaac Stern).

Second week (July 29, 30, 31): The "Erocia" Symphony, the "Emperor" Concerto (Rudolf Serkin), Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard" (soloist, Leontyne Price).

Third week (August 5, 6, 7): Beethoven's Symphonies 2, 5, 8, the second act of "Fidelio" (Margaret Harshaw), Fourth Piano Concerto (Eugene Istomin), "Missa Solemnis" (to be conducted by Leonard Bernstein in memory of Serge Koussevitzky).

Final week (August 12, 13, 14): Mr. Monteux will conduct a Brahms program. Gregor Piatigorsky will appear as soloist in Bloch's "Schelomo". Charles Munch will close the festival with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Subscriptions for all series are now available at Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

* * *

CHAMBER MUSIC concerts six Wednesday evenings in the Theater-Concert Hall by well-known chamber music groups will feature the quartets, trios and sonatas by Beethoven.

The Berkshire Music Center, the Summer school at Tanglewood maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will have its 13th session from July to

---

Cir. (D 47,836)

This Clipping From
HACKENSACK, N. J.
BERGEN RECORD

FEB 19 1955

Beethoven Emphasis

Plans have been drawn for this summer's Tanglewood festival with Charles Munch, Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein and Thor Johnson directing the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the emphasis will be emphatically on Beethoven. All the symphonies, the "Missa Solemnis", many of the overtures and concerti will be offered. Soloists will include Rudolf Serkin and Eugene Istomin, pianists, Issac Stern, violinist, and Gregor Pitaigorsky, cellist.

This Clipping From
NEW HAVEN CONN.
REGISTER

FEB 27 1955

Berkshire Auditions Scheduled March 9 In New York City

Instrumental auditions for admission to The Berkshire Music Center will be held while the Boston Symphony Orchestra is in New York on its final trip of the season. The auditions are scheduled for March 9 from 1 to 5 in Carnegie Recital Hall, New York City as follows: Strings 1 to 2:30 p. m., Woodwinds 2:30 to 3:30 p. m., Brass 3:30 to 5 p. m. Harp, Tympani and Percussion auditions will be held backstage at 7 p. m. The audition committee consists of the principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The Berkshire Music Center, Charles Munch, director, is the school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass. This summer marks the 13th session and will extend from July 4 to August 14.

All students accepted for the orchestra are eligible for tuition grants from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund.

The school's newest department, the Tanglewood Study Group, will be under the direction of Ingolf Dahl. It accepts enrollment for two, four or six weeks.

Applicants planning to attend these auditions should, if possible, notify Miss E. Bossler, Registrar, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

Application forms may be obtained at the time of audition, or by writing to the Registrar.

Cir. (D 287,116)

This Clipping From
BUFFALO, N. Y.
NEWS

FEB 12 1955

Most of the principal works of Beethoven—the nine symphonies, "Missa Solemnis," a concert performance of "Fidelio" (Act II), concertos and overtures—will be presented at this Summer's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony, Charles Munch, music director announces. The first two week-ends of the festival will be devoted to Bach-Mozart concerts. Guest conductors will be Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein, and Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony and a former conducting student of Koussevitzky at Tanglewood.

Cir. (D 192,249) (S 211,152)

This Clipping From PORTLAND, ORE.
OREGON JOURNAL

FEB 13 1955

Beethoven Played

The Boston Symphony, under Charles Munch, will present most of the principal works of Beethoven at this summer's Berkshire music festival through six week ends from July 6 to August 14.

Cir. (D 6,481)

This Clipping From
GREENWICH, CONN.
TIME

FEB 23 1955

Berkshire Auditions . .

Instrumental auditions for admission to The Berkshire Music Center will be held while the Boston Symphony Orchestra is in New York on its final trip of the season. The auditions are scheduled for March 9 from 1 to 5 in Carnegie Recital Hall, New York City as follows: Strings 1 to 2:30 p.m. Woodwinds 2:30 to 3:30 p.m. Brass 3:30 to 5:00 p.m. Harp, Tympani and Percussion auditions will be held backstage at 7:00 p.m. The audition committee consists of the principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The Berkshire Music Center, Charles Munch, Director, is the school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass. This summer marks the thirteenth session and will extend from July 4 to August 14.

All students accepted for the orchestra are eligible for tuition grants from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund.

Applicants planning to attend these auditions should, if possible, notify Miss E. Bossler, Registrar, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass. Application forms may be obtained at the time of audition, or by writing to the Registrar.

Cir. (D 124,110) (S 382,056)

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE

FEB 13 1955

Munch to Feature Beethoven Music at Berkshire Festival Next Summer

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, will present most of the principal works of Beethoven at this Summer's Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Lenox, through six weekends from July 6 to Aug. 14. The Music Shed concerts will include the nine symphones, the Missa Solemnis, a concert performance of "Fidelio" (Act II), concertos and overtures.

The plan for 1955 lists concerts each Friday evening, Saturday evening, and Sunday afternoon. The first two weekends will be devoted to the Bach-Mozart concerts in the Theatre Concert Hall and the last four weekends will consist of 12 concerts by the full orchestra in the Music Shed.

Guest conductors will be Pierre Monteux, who will then have passed his 80th birthday. Leonard Bernstein, returning to Tanglewood after a sabbatical year; and Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, and a former conducting student of Serge Koussevitzky at Tanglewood. Charles Munch will conduct two concerts each week, a third to be under the direction of a guest conductor.

In addition to pianists Rudolf Serkin and Eugene Istomin, Leonard Bernstein will appear as pianist, conducting from the keyboard. Other soloists will be Isaac Stern, violinist; Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist, and the singers, Margaret Harshaw, Jennie Tourel and Leontyne Price. The Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, G. Wallace Woodworth, conductor, will appear in a performance of Bach's Mass in B Minor in the Bach-Mozart series. The Berkshire Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, will perform several choral works. Further soloists will be announced later.

During the first week of the Bach-Mozart concert (July 8, 9, 10), Charles Munch will conduct Bach's Mass in B Minor and Thor Johnson will conduct a concert. In the second week (July 15, 16, 17), Leonard Bernstein will conduct an all-Mozart program, playing a piano concerto.

Through the four weeks of the Music Shed concerts to follow, Charles Munch will conduct two concerts each week; Pierre Monteux in the first, second and fourth weeks; Leonard Bernstein in the third. A partial list of programs follow:

In the first week of Shed concerts (July 22, 23, 24), Beethoven's symphonies 1, 4, 6, and 7 will be played and the Violin Concerto (Isaac Stern). The second week (July 29, 30, 31): "Eroica" Symphony, "Emperor" Concerto (Rudolf Serkin), Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard" (soloist, Leontyne Price). The third week (August 5, 6, 7): Beethoven's symphonies 2, 5, 8, the second act of "Fidelio" (Margaret Harshaw), Fourth Piano Concerto (Eugene Istomin), Missa Solemnis (to be conducted by Leonard Bernstein in memory of Serge Koussevitzky).

The final week (August 12, 13, 14) Mr. Monteux will conduct a Brahms program. Gregor Piatigorsky will appear as soloist in Bloch's "Schelomo." Mr Munch will close the Festival with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Subscriptions for all series are now available at Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

The quartets, trios, and sonatas by Beethoven will be featured in six chamber music concerts on Wednesday evening of each week in the Theatre-Concert Hall by well-known chamber music groups.

The Berkshire Music Center, the Summer school at Tanglewood maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will have its 13th session from July 4 to August 14.

Cir. (D 138,[illegible]) (S [illegible]919)

This Clipping From
CHARLOTTE, N. C.
OBSERVER

FEB 27 1955

Tanglewood To Emphasize Beethoven

BOSTON, Mass., Feb. 26 — The Boston Symphony Orchestra will present most of the principal work of Beethoven at this summer's Berkshire Festival in Tangelwood Lenox, Mass.

Charles Munch will service as music director. Guest conductors include Thor Johnson, of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra and a former conducting student of Serge Koussevitsky; Pierre Monteux and Leonard Bernstein.

The Shed concerts will include all nine Beethoven symphonies, the "Missa Solemnis," a conert performance of "Fidelio" (Act II) and various concerti and overtures.

The season begins July 6 and continues through August 14.

(The Boston Symphony will appear in Charlotte Oct. 11 as the opening attraction of the Community Concert series.)

Cir. (D 131,670) (S 258,529)

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD

FEB 13 1955

Beethoven Feature of 1955 Berkshire Fete

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, will present most of the principal works of Beethoven at this summer's Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Lenox, through six weekends from July 6 to Aug. 14. The Shed concerts will include the nine symphonies, the "Missa Solemnis," a concert performance of "Fidelio" (Act II), concertos and overtures, it was announced today.

The plan for 1955 lists concerts each Friday evening, Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon. The first two weekends will be devoted to the "Bach-Mozart" concerts in the Theatre and the last four weekends will consist of 12 concerts by the full orchestra in the Music Shed.

Guest conductors at the Festival will be Pierre Monteux, who will then have passed his 80th birthday; Leonard Bernstein, returning to Tanglewood after a sabbatical year; and Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra and a former conducting student of Serge Koussevitzky at Tanglewood. Charles Munch will conduct two concerts each week, a third to be under the direction of a guest conductor.

In addition to the pianists, Rudolf Serkin and Eugene Istomin, Leonard Bernstein will appear as pianist, conducting from the keyboard. Other soloists will be Isaac Stern, violinist; Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist, and the singers, Margaret Harshaw, Jennie Tourel, and Leontyne Price. The Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, G. Wallace Woodworth, conductor, will appear in a performance of Bach's Mass in B minor in the "Bach-Mozart" series. The Berkshire Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, will perform several choral works. Further soloists will be announced later.

During the first week of the "Bach-Mozart" concerts (July 8, 9, 10), Charles Munch will conduct Bach's Mass in B minor and Thor Johnson will conduct a concert. In the second week (Jul 15, 16, 17), Leonard Bernstei will conduct an all-Mozart program, playing a piano concerto.

Through the four weeks of the Shed concerts to follow, Charle Munch will conduct two concert each week; Pierre Monteux i the first, second and fourt weeks; Leonard Bernstein i the third.

A partial list of programs: I the first week of Shed concert (July 22, 23, 24), Beethoven' Symphonies 1, 4, 6 and 7 will b played and the Violin Concert (Isaac Stern). The second wee (July 29, 30, 31): The "Eroica Symphony, the "Emperor" Concerto (Rudolf Serkin), Barber' "Prayers of Kierkegaard" (soloist, Leontyne Price. The thir week (Aug. 5, 6, 7): Beethoven' Symphonies 2, 5, 8, the secon act of "Fidelio" (Margaret Harshaw), Fourth Piano Concerto (Eugene Istomin), "Missa Solemnis" (to be conducted by Leonard Bernstein in memory of Serge Koussevitzky). The final week (Aug. 12, 13, 14): Mr. Monteux will conduct a Brahms program. Gregor Piatigorsky will appear as soloist in Bloch's "Schelomo." Charles Munch will close the Festival with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Subscriptions for all series are now available at Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

TIGHT BINDING

Cir. (D 96,447)

This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES

[illegible] 1955

Munch Features Beethoven for Summer Festival

THE Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, will present most of the principal works of Beethoven at this Summer's Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., through six weekends from July 6 to Aug. 14.

The Shed concerts will include the nine symphonies, the "Missa Solemnis", a concert performance of "Fidelio" (Act II), concertos and overtures.

The plan for 1955 lists concerts each Friday evening, Saturday evening, and Sunday afternoon. The first two weekends will be devoted to the Bach-Mozart concerts in the Theater and the last four weekends will consist of twelve concerts by the full orchestra in the Music Shed.

* * *

GUEST CONDUCTORS at the Festival will be Pierre Monteux, who will then have passed his 80th birthday; Leonard Bernstein, returning to Tanglewood after a sabbatical year; and Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra and a former conducting student of Serge Koussevitzky at Tanglewood. Charles Munch will conduct two concerts each week, a third to be under the direction of a guest conductor.

In addition to the pianists, Rudolf Serkin and Eugene Istomin, Leonard Bernstein will appear as pianist, conducting from the keyboard. Other soloists will be Isaac Stern, violinist; Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist, and the singers, Margaret Harshaw, Jennie Tourel, and Leontyne Price.

The Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, G. Wallace Woodworth, conductor, will appear in a performance of Bach's Mass in B minor in the Bach-Mozart series. The Berkshire Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, will perform several choral works.

* * *

THE FIRST WEEK of the Bach-Mozart concerts (July 8, 9, 10), Charles Munch will conduct Bach's Mass in B minor and Thor Johnson will conduct a concert. In the second week (July 15, 16, 17), Leonard Bernstein will conduct an all-Mozart program, playing a piano concerto.

Through the four weeks of the Shed concerts to follow, Charles Munch will conduct two concerts each week; Pierre Monteux in the first, second and fourth weeks; Leonard Bernstein in the third.

* * *

SHED CONCERT programs are listed here in part: First week (July 22, 23, 24), Beethoven's Symphonies 1, 4, 6, and 7 will be played and the Violin Concerto (Isaac Stern).

Second week (July 29, 30, 31): The "Erocia" Symphony, the "Emperor" Concerto (Rudolf Serkin), Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard" (soloist, Leontyne Price).

Third week (August 5, 6, 7): Beethoven's Symphonies 2, 5, 8, the second act of "Fidelio" (Margaret Harshaw), Fourth Piano Concerto (Eugene Istomin), "Missa Solemnis" (to be conducted by Leonard Bernstein in memory of Serge Koussevitzky).

Final week (August 12, 13, 14): Mr. Monteux will conduct a Brahms program. Gregor Piatigorsky will appear as soloist in Bloch's "Schelomo". Charles Munch will close the festival with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Subscriptions for all series are now available at Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

* * *

CHAMBER MUSIC concerts six Wednesday evenings in the Theater-Concert Hall by well-known chamber music groups will feature the quartets, trios and sonatas by Beethoven.

The Berkshire Music Center, the Summer school at Tanglewood maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will have 13th session from July [illegible] to

---

This Clipping From
NEW HAVEN CONN.
REGISTER

FEB 27 1955

Berkshire Auditions Scheduled March 9 In New York City

Instrumental auditions for admission to The Berkshire Music Center will be held while the Boston Symphony Orchestra is in New York on its final trip of the season. The auditions are scheduled for March 9 from 1 to 5 in Carnegie Recital Hall, New York City as follows: Strings 1 to 2:30 p. m., Woodwinds 2:30 to 3:30 p. m., Brass 3:30 to 5 p. m. Harp, Tympani and Percussion auditions will be held backstage at 7 p. m. The audition committee consists of the principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The Berkshire Music Center, Charles Munch, director, is the school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass. This summer marks the 13th session and will extend from July 4 to August 14.

All students accepted for the orchestra are eligible for tuition grants from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund.

The school's newest department, the Tanglewood Study Group, will be under the direction of Ingolf Dahl. It accepts enrollment for two, four or six weeks.

Applicants planning to attend these auditions should, if possible, notify Miss E. Bossler, Registrar, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

Application forms may be obtained at the time of audition, or by writing to the Registrar.

Cir. (D 47,836)

This Clipping From
HACKENSACK, N. J.
BERGEN RECORD

FEB 19 1955

Beethoven Emphasis

Plans have been drawn for this summer's Tanglewood festival with Charles Munch, Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein and Thor Johnson directing the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the emphasis will be emphatically on Beethoven. All the symphonies, the "Missa Solemnis", many of the overtures and concerti will be offered. Soloists will include Rudolf Serkin and Eugene Istomin, pianists, Issac Stern, violinist, and Gregor Pitaigorsky, cellist.

Cir. (D 124,110) (S 382,056)

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE

FEB 13 1955

Munch to Feature Beethoven Music at Berkshire Festival Next Summer

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, will present most of the principal works of Beethoven at this Summer's Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Lenox, through six weekends from July 6 to Aug. 14. The Music Shed concerts will include the nine symphones, the Missa Solemnis, a concert performance of "Fidelio" (Act II), concertos and overtures.

The plan for 1955 lists concerts each Friday evening, Saturday evening, and Sunday afternoon. The first two weekends will be devoted to the Bach-Mozart concerts in the Theatre Concert Hall and the last four weekends will consist of 12 concerts by the full orchestra in the Music Shed.

Guest conductors will be Pierre Monteux, who will then have passed his 80th birthday. Leonard Bernstein, returning to Tanglewood after a sabbatical year; and Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, and a former conducting student of Serge Koussevitzky at Tanglewood. Charles Munch will conduct two concerts each week, a third to be under the direction of a guest conductor.

In addition to pianists Rudolf Serkin and Eugene Istomin, Leonard Bernstein will appear as pianist, conducting from the keyboard. Other soloists will be Isaac Stern, violinist; Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist, and the singers, Margaret Harshaw, Jennie Tourel and Leontyne Price. The Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, G. Wallace Woodworth, conductor, will appear in a performance of Bach's Mass in B Minor in the Bach-Mozart series. The Berkshire Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, will perform several choral works. Further soloists will be announced later.

During the first week of the Bach-Mozart concert (July 8, 9, 10), Charles Munch will conduct Bach's Mass in B Minor and Thor Johnson will conduct a concert. In the second week (July 15, 16, 17), Leonard Bernstein will conduct an all-Mozart program, playing a piano concerto.

Through the four weeks of the Music Shed concerts to follow, Charles Munch will conduct two concerts each week; Pierre Monteux in the first, second and fourth weeks; Leonard Bernstein in the third. A partial list of programs follow:

In the first week of Shed concerts (July 22, 23, 24), Beethoven's symphonies 1, 4, 6, and 7 will be played and the Violin Concerto (Isaac Stern). The second week (July 29, 30, 31): "Eroica" Symphony,, "Emperor" Concerto (Rudolf Serkin), Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard" (soloist, Leontyne Price). The third week (August 5, 6, 7): Beethoven's symphonies 2, 5, 8, the second act of "Fidelio" (Margaret Harshaw), Fourth Piano Concerto (Eugene Istomin), Missa Solemnis (to be conducted by Leonard Bernstein in memory of Serge Koussevitzky).

The final week (August 12, 13, 14) Mr. Monteux will conduct a Brahms program. Gregor Piatigorsky will appear as soloist in Bloch's "Schelomo." Mr Munch will close the Festival with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Subscriptions for all series are now available at Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

The quartets, trios, and sonatas by Beethoven will be featured in six chamber music concerts on Wednesday evening of each week in the Theatre-Concert Hall by well-known chamber music groups.

The Berkshire Music Center, the Summer school at Tanglewood maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will have its 13th session from July 4 to August 14.

Cir. (D 138,[illegible]) (S 1[illegible],919)

This Clipping From
CHARLOTTE, N. C.
OBSERVER

FEB 27 1955

Tanglewood To Emphasize Beethoven

BOSTON, Mass., Feb. 26 — The Boston Symphony Orchestra will present most of the principal work of Beethoven at this summer's Berkshire Festival in Tangelwood Lenox, Mass.

Charles Munch will service as music director. Guest conductors include Thor Johnson, of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra and a former conducting student of Serge Koussevitsky; Pierre Monteux and Leonard Bernstein.

The Shed concerts will include all nine Beethoven symphonies, the "Missa Solemnis," a conert performance of "Fidelio" (Act II) and various concerti and overtures.

The season begins July 6 and continues through August 14.

(The Boston Symphony will appear in Charlotte Oct. 11 as the opening attraction of the Community Concert series.)

Cir. (D 287,116)

This Clipping From
BUFFALO, N. Y.
NEWS

FEB 12 1955

Most of the principal works of Beethoven—the nine symphonies, "Missa Solemnis," a concert performance of "Fidelio" (Act II), concertos and overtures—will be presented at this Summer's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony, Charles Munch, m[illegible]or announces. The first two week-ends of the festival will be devoted to Bach-Mozart concerts. Guest conductors will be Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein, and Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony and a former conducting student of Koussevitzky at Tanglewood.

Cir. (D 192,249) (S 211,152)

This Clipping From PORTLAND, ORE.
OREGON JOURNAL

FEB 13 1955

Beethoven Played

The Boston Symphony, under Charles Munch, will present most of the principal works of Beethoven at this summer's Berkshire music festival through six week ends from July 6 to August 14.

Cir. (D 6,481)

This Clipping From
GREENWICH, CONN.
TIME

[illegible]B 23 1955

Berkshire Auditions . .

Instrumental auditions for admission to The Berkshire Music Center will be held while the Boston Symphony Orchestra is in New York on its final trip of the season. The auditions are scheduled for March 9 from 1 to 5 in Carnegie Recital Hall, New York City as follows: Strings 1 to 2:30 p.m. Woodwinds 2:30 to 3:30 p.m. Brass 3:30 to 5:00 p.m. Harp, Tympani and Percussion auditions will be held backstage at 7:00 p.m. The audition committee consists of the principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The Berkshire Music Center, Charles Munch, Director, is the school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass. This summer marks the thirteenth session and will extend from July 4 to August 14.

All students accepted for the orchestra are eligible for tuition grants from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund.

Applicants planning to attend these auditions should, if possible, notify Miss E. Bossler, Registrar, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass. Application forms may be obtained at the time of audition, or by writing to the Registrar.

Cir. (D 131,670) (S 258,529)

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD

FEB 13 1955

Beethoven Feature of 1955 Berkshire Fete

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, will present most of the principal works of Beethoven at this summer's Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Lenox, through six weekends from July 6 to Aug. 14. The Shed concerts will include the nine symphonies, the "Missa Solemnis," a concert performance of "Fidelio" (Act II), concertos and overtures, it was announced today.

The plan for 1955 lists concerts each Friday evening, Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon. The first two weekends will be devoted to the "Bach-Mozart" concerts in the Theatre and the last four weekends will consist of 12 concerts by the full orchestra in the Music Shed.

Guest conductors at the Festival will be Pierre Monteux, who will then have passed his 80th birthday; Leonard Bernstein, returning to Tanglewood after a sabbatical year; and Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra and a former conducting student of Serge Koussevitzky at Tanglewood. Charles Munch will conduct two concerts each week, a third to be under the direction of a guest conductor.

In addition to the pianists, Rudolf Serkin and Eugene Istomin, Leonard Bernstein will appear as pianist, conducting from the keyboard. Other soloists will be Isaac Stern, violinist; Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist, and the singers, Margaret Harshaw, Jennie Tourel, and Leontyne Price. The Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, G. Wallace Woodworth, conductor, will appear in a performance of Bach's Mass in B minor in the "Bach-Mozart" series. The Berkshire Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, will perform several choral works. Further soloists will be announced later.

During the first week of the "Bach-Mozart" concerts (July 8, 9, 10), Charles Munch will conduct Bach's Mass in B minor and Thor Johnson will conduct a concert. In the second week (July 15, 16, 17), Leonard Bernstein will conduct an all-Mozart program, playing a piano concerto.

Through the four weeks of the Shed concerts to follow, Charles Munch will conduct two concerts each week; Pierre Monteux in the first, second and fourth weeks; Leonard Bernstein in the third.

A partial list of programs: In the first week of Shed concerts (July 22, 23, 24), Beethoven's Symphonies 1, 4, 6 and 7 will be played and the Violin Concerto (Isaac Stern). The second week (July 29, 30, 31): The "Eroica" Symphony, the "Emperor" Concerto (Rudolf Serkin), Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard" (soloist, Leontyne Price. The third week (Aug. 5, 6, 7): Beethoven's Symphonies 2, 5, 8, the second act of "Fidelio" (Margaret Harshaw), Fourth Piano Concerto (Eugene Istomin), "Missa Solemnis" (to be conducted by Leonard Bernstein in memory of Serge Koussevitzky). The final week (Aug. 12, 13, 14): Mr. Monteux will conduct a Brahms program. Gregor Piatigorsky will appear as soloist in Bloch's "Schelomo." Charles Munch will close the Festival with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Subscriptions for all series are now available at Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

Cir. (D 146,820) (S 298,053)

This Clipping From
BUFFALO, N. Y.
COURIER-EXPRESS
FEB 13 1955

In the Realm of Music—By Kenneth Gill

Boston Symphony to Offer Beethoven Works in Berkshire Series This Sum

Beethoven will be featured by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Conductor Charles Munch at this summer's Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood. Six weekends from July 6 to Aug. 14 will include concerts listing the nine symphonies, the "Missa Solemnis," a concert performance of Act II of "Fidelio" and the concertos and overtures.

Charles Munch

Plans for 1955 list concerts each Friday evening, Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon, with the first two weekends devoted to "Bach-Mozart" concerts in the theater and the last four weekends having the full orchestra in the Music Shed.

Munch will conduct two concerts each week with the third to fall to his guests, Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein and Thor Johnson. Soloists are to be Rudolf Serkin, Eugene Istomin and Bernstein, pianists; Isaac Stern, violinist; Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist; Margaret Harshaw, Jennie Tourel and Leontyne Price, singers.

Bach's "B Minor Mass" will be presented with the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society assisting. Hugh Ross will direct the Berkshire Festival Chorus in several other works. Quartets, trios and sonatas by Beethoven will be presented in six chamber music concerts on Wednesday evenings in the Theater-Concert Hall by well-known chamber music groups.

A Brahms program will be conducted in the final week by Monteux. Bernstein will direct an all-Mozart program in the secon week.

Au Ballet

Cir. (D 21,010)

This Clipping From
WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.
REPORTER-DISPATCH
FEB 14 1955

Tanglewood Will Hear Chief Beethoven Works

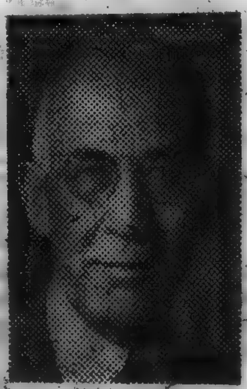
The Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch, will present most of the principal works of Beethoven at this Summer's Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Mass. The concerts will include the nine symphonies, the "Missa Solemnis", a concert performance of "Fidelio", concertos and overtures. Guest conductors will include Pierre Monteux; Leonard Bernstein, who returns to Tanglewood after a sabbatical year; and Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra.

Our Berkshires

BERKSHIRE EAGLE 2/…

Go Jump on a Grape

By Walter Prichard Eaton



EARLY IN MY professional life I became tangled in the outer meshes of musical criticism. Not that I knew anything about music, but there was so much going on in the musical world of New York that the music critic couldn't possibly attend all the operas and concerts. He had to have a leg man to keep reportorial tabs on them, and what he wanted was a reporter who knew so little about music that he wouldn't be tempted to butt in on the critic's province.

I was just the man for this job. Sometimes on a Saturday I looked in on the Manhattan Opera House, matinee and evening, at the Metropolitan matinee and evening, and at concerts matinee and evening at Mendelsohn Hall and Carnegie Hall. Almost never was I even tempted to write more than the bare report, but on one occasion I did fall.

* * *

A YOUNG VIOLINIST played at Mendelssohn Hall, and I was so fascinated that I remained in my seat for the entire recital, and wrote a flowery review. My boss, H. E. Krehbiel, was infuriated, not only by my insubordination, but by the fact that I had, he said, "stultified the paper." He would have to go to the young fiddler's next recital, and set the record right.

He did go, and later towered over my desk, glared at me with all the malevolence he could summon to his sweet old German countenance, and thundered, "God damn it, you were right."

That young fiddler is now a summer resident of the Berkshires. His name is Fritz Kreisler.

* * *

I NEVER AGAIN was tempted out of my proper sphere, to venture into the deep, dark waters of musical criticism. I could never hope for such good luck again. But for more than a decade I knew all the New York music critics—fascinating men they were, too—and listened to their talk in the press room at the Opera House. I must confess that their talk was generally more entertaining than their printed criticisms.

One night James Huneker was going on at great rate about Mary Garden in "Pelleas et Melisande."

"But what about the music, Jimmy?" demanded Henderson of the Sun.

"The music? Oh, the music didn't bother me," Jimmy replied.

(It's been quite a while since it has bothered any of us, hasn't it?)

* * *

OF COURSE the talk would have been even better if Phil Hale hadn't refused to leave Boston. Phil was not exactly inhibited, even in what he wrote. It was in a Boston paper that he announced the exits in the new Symphony Hall should be labeled, "Exit in case of Brahms," and it was in a Boston paper that he reviewed a song recital by Emma Eames and remarked, "Madam Eames sang 'Who is Sylvia?' as if Sylvia were not on her calling list." I have always considered this one of the prize one-line criticisms of all time, matching Cal Coolidge's one-line review of Rupert Hughes' debunking life of Washington, which Mark Sullivan found him reading and asked what he thought of it.

"Well," said Cal, looking across the White House lawn, "the monument's still there."

* * *

ALAS, WE have no Phil Hales any more, or if we do I don't see their stuff. A vast deal of symphonic music is played around the country now, far more than there used to be, but when I chance to read what this, that or the other critic says about it I find myself bogged down in a welter of adulatory adjectives and roiling adverbs, with now and then some technical phrase thrown in for good measure, and all I really learn from the review is that the New Marlboro Symphony Orchestra, under the "inspired" direction of Timotheus Sokolski, played the Brahms' Second Symphony in such a way as to cause the audience to applaud wildly and to bring the critic's vocabulary to a boil.

After a good many years of concert going I have reluctantly reached the conclusion that music is an art directed at the emotions of most people, and since no two of them will respond to it in the same way a great bulk of so-called music criticism is waste motion. Of course, if we had new, experimental music offered to us, the critics could guide and explain, and really be critics. But since 90 per cent of all our programs are endless repetitions of the same old pieces, what is there to say? Anybody beyond the grade of a moron knows Mozart's "Night music" is lovely. So is the evening star in a pale green sky. Listen, or look, and be content.

* * *

BUT WHAT I started to write about was Robert Ruark as a music critic. I hope you read his piece about jazz in The Eagle two weeks ago. Seems that in March the Philharmonic is going to play a piece by a Swiss composer called "Concerto for jazz band and symphony orchestra." The idea annoys Ruark and he backs his objection to a Swiss composer's dolling up our jazz, by quoting the remark made by Eddie Condon in a controversy with the French over what they called "le jazz hot."

"Look," said Eddie, "do we go over to France and tell you guys how to jump on a grape?"

* * *

OF COURSE, our composers have been taking ideas from the Europeans for years, and if a Swiss wants to use jazz why shouldn't he? All depends on what he makes of it. But when the Philharmonic plays the piece in Carnegie Hall in March, I would like to see Eddie Condon employed by the N.Y. Times to cover the event. It might liven up the columns of that paper no little.

WORLD OF MUSIC: WAL

Feb 13 N.Y. TIMES

By ROSS PARMENTER

WILLIAM WALTON'S "Troilus and Cressida," which had its world première last December in London's Covent Garden, will be played for the first time in the United States in October during the regular season of the San Francisco Opera. The company will perform the work four times in its home city and once in Los Angeles. Erich Leinsdorf is expected to conduct, and there is a possibility that Dorothy Kirsten will sing Cressida.

'Troilus' Premiere Fixed For West—Beethoven At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD: Charles Munch, who centered last year's Berkshire Festival on Berlioz, will pivot this year's on Beethoven. All nine of his symphonies will be played in the concerts of the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Shed. In addition, there will be a concert performance of the second act of "Fidelio," and a performance of the "Missa Solemnis." The "Emperor" Concerto will be played by Rudolf Serkin, the fourth Piano Concerto by Eugene Istomin and the Violin Concerto by Isaac Stern. In the Wednesday evening chamber music concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall the performers will play Beethoven quartets, trios and sonatas.

Last year concerts by the full symphony orchestra were spread over the whole six-week period of the festival. This year the festival is veering back toward the former pattern. There will be concerts in the Shed for only four week-ends, and the first two week-ends will again be devoted to Bach-Mozart programs in the Theatre-Concert Hall. The festival will run from July 6 to Aug. 14. The Berkshire Music Center will open two days earlier and then run concurrently.

Mr. Munch will conduct most of the concerts, but he will have three guest conductors to assist in the schedule. Pierre Monteux will conduct concerts in the Shed during the first, second and fourth week-ends there. Leonard Bernstein will conduct at the Shed in the third week-end, and will appear as pianist-conductor in an all-Mozart program in the smaller hall.

Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony, will lead one of the Bach-Mozart programs. Mr. Johnson led student orchestras at Tanglewood while he was studying at the center, but this will be his first engagement for the festival proper.

Frederick Gersten, baritone.

MUSIC AUDITIONS MARCH 9

Boston Symphony Players to Judge Applicants for School

Members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will audition instrumentalists for the Berkshire Music Center on March 9 during the orchestra's next visit to New York.

Most of the auditions will be held at Carnegie Recital Hall. String players will be heard from 1 to 2:30 P. M.; woodwind players from 2:30 to 3:30, and brass players from 3:30 to 5. Auditions for harpists, percussionists and tympani players will be held backstage at Carnegie Hall at 7 P. M.

The Berkshire Music Center at Lenox, Mass., is a school run concurrently with the Berkshire Music Festival. Students who are accepted for the center's orchestra will be eligible for tuition grants from the Tanglewood Revolving Sscholarship Fund.

GLOBE 2/16

Berkshire Music Center Announces Thirteenth Season, Opening July 4

Boston Symphony Orchestra announces plans for its Summer School of Music, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, which will open on July 4 for a six-week session, its 13th. Charles Munch, the conductor of the Boston Symphony will again serve as director. Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the orchestra, will serve as assistant director while Aaron Copland is in Europe on leave of absence, his first since the school was founded in 1940.

Boris Blacher, the German composer and director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin will come to this country for the first time to teach composition. Roger Sessions, the distinguished American composer will be associated with him in the composition department. Each of these composers has received a commission for a work to celebrate the orchestra's 75th anniversary in the season of 1955-56.

The Berkshire Music Center student orchestra, for which auditions are now being held, and the conducting class will be directed by Leonard Bernstein with the help of Seymour Lipkin. Orchestra sections and chamber music will be under the direction of the principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Richard Burgin and William Kroll head the chamber music department with Jean Bedetti, Ruth Posselt and members from the Boston Symphony.

Hugh Ross will again head the choral department. Boris Goldovsky will return to head the opera department, assisted by Sarah Caldwell, Paul Ulanowsky, Ludwig and Laura Zirner, and others. Ingolf Dahl will also return to Tanglewood to head the Tanglewood Study Group, assisted by Karl Kohn and Florence Dunn.

Chamber music in this group will be coached by Vladimir Resnikoff and Einar Hansen. The Study Group offers a course of general music study for those active in community music, for music educators and for amateurs. Members of the Study Group take part in the Festival Chorus which participates in the Boston Symphony concerts at Tanglewood. The Study Group accepts students for two, four or six weeks.

The Berkshire Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra are a central part of the Music Center studies, and all students may attend the concerts as well as rehearsals. Catalog and applications for admission can be secured from Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

Cir. (D 146,820) (S 298,053)

This Clipping From
BUFFALO, N. Y.
COURIER-EXPRESS

FEB 13 1955

In the Realm of Music—By Kenneth Gill

Boston Symphony to Offer Beethoven Works in Berkshire Series This Sum concerto with Grant Johannesen

Charles Munch

Beethoven will be featured by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Conductor Charles Munch at this summer's Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood. Six weekends from July 6 to Aug. 14 will include concerts listing the nine symphonies, the "Missa Solemnis," a concert performance of Act II of "Fidelio" and the concertos and overtures.

Plans for 1955 list concerts each Friday evening, Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon, with the first two weekends devoted to "Bach-Mozart" concerts in the theater and the last four weekends having the full orchestra in the Music Shed.

Munch will conduct two concerts each week with the third to fall to his guests, Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein and Thor Johnson. Soloists are to be Rudolf Serkin, Eugene Istomin and Bernstein, pianists; Isaac Stern, violinist; Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist; Margaret Harshaw, Jennie Tourel and Leontyne Price, singers.

Bach's "B Minor Mass" will be presented with the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society assisting. Hugh Ross will direct the Berkshire Festival Chorus in several other works. Quartets, trios and sonatas by Beethoven will be presented in six chamber music concerts on Wednesday evenings in the Theater-Concert Hall by well-known chamber music groups.

A Brahms program will be conducted in the final week by Monteux. Bernstein will direct an all-Mozart program in the secon week.

Au Ballet

Cir. (D 21,010)

This Clipping From
WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.
REPORTER-DISPATCH

FEB 14 1955

Tanglewood Will Hear Chief Beethoven Works

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch, will present most of the principal works of Beethoven at this Summer's Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Mass. The concerts will include the nine symphonies, the "Missa Solemnis", a concert performance of "Fidelio", concertos and overtures. Guest conductors will include Pierre Monteux; Leonard Bernstein, who returns to Tanglewood after a sabbatical year; and Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra.

Our Berkshires

BERKSHI EAGLE

Go Jump on a Grape

By Walter Prichard Eaton

EARLY IN MY professional life I became tangled in the outer meshes of musical criticism. Not that I knew anything about music, but there was so much going on in the musical world of New York that the music critic couldn't possibly attend all the operas and concerts. He had to have a leg man to keep reportorial tabs on them, and what he wanted was a reporter who knew so little about music that he wouldn't be tempted to butt in on the critic's province.

I was just the man for this job. Sometimes on a Saturday I looked in on the Manhattan Opera House, matinee and evening, at the Metropolitan matinee and evening, and at concerts matinee and evening at Mendelsohn Hall and Carnegie Hall. Almost never was I even tempted to write more than the bare report, but on one occasion I did fall.

* * *

A YOUNG VIOLINIST played at Mendelssohn Hall, and I was so fascinated that I remained in my seat for the entire recital, and wrote a flowery review. My boss, H. E. Krehbiel, was infuriated, not only by my insubordination, but by the fact that I had, he said, "stultified the paper." He would have to go to the young fiddler's next recital, and set the record right.

He did go, and later towered over my desk, glared at me with all the malevolence he could summon to his sweet old German countenance, and thundered, "God damn it, you were right."

That young fiddler is now a summer resident of the Berkshires. His name is Fritz Kreisler.

* * *

I NEVER AGAIN was tempted out of my proper sphere, to venture into the deep, dark waters of musical criticism. I could never hope for such good luck again. But for more than a decade I knew all the New York music critics—fascinating men they were, too—and listened to their talk in the press room at the Opera House. I must confess that their talk was generally more entertaining than their printed criticisms.

One night James Huneker was going on at great rate about Mary Garden in "Pelleas et Melisande."

"But what about the music, Jimmy?" demanded Henderson of the Sun.

"The music? Oh, the music didn't bother me," Jimmy replied.

(It's been quite a while since it has bothered any of us, hasn't it?)

* * *

OF COURSE the talk would have been even better if Phil Hale hadn't refused to leave Boston. Phil was not exactly inhibited, even in what he wrote. It was in a Boston paper that he announced the exits in the new Symphony Hall should be labeled, "Exit in case of Brahms," and it was in a Boston paper that he reviewed a song recital by Emma Eames and remarked, "Madam Eames sang 'Who is Sylvia?' as if Sylvia were not on her calling list." I have always considered this one of the prize one-line criticisms of all time, matching Cal Coolidge's one-line review of Rupert Hughes' debunking life of Washington, which Mark Sullivan found him reading and asked what he thought of it.

"Well," said Cal, looking across the White House lawn, "the monument's still there."

* * *

ALAS, WE have no Phil Hales any more, or if we do I don't see their stuff. A vast deal of symphonic music is played around the country now, far more than there used to be, but when I chance to read what this, that or the other critic says about it I find myself bogged down in a welter of adulatory adjectives and roiling adverbs, with now and then some technical phrase thrown in for good measure, and all I really learn from the review is that the New Marlboro Symphony Orchestra, under the "inspired" direction of Timotheus Sokolski, played the Brahms' Second Symphony in such a way as to cause the audience to applaud wildly and to bring the critic's vocabulary to a boil.

After a good many years of concert going I have reluctantly reached the conclusion that music is an art directed at the emotions of most people, and since no two of them will respond to it in the same way a great bulk of so-called music criticism is waste motion. Of course, if we had new, experimental music offered to us, the critics could guide and explain, and really be critics. But since 90 per cent of all our programs are endless repetitions of the same old pieces, what is there to say? Anybody beyond the grade of a moron knows Mozart's "Night music" is lovely. So is the evening star in a pale green sky. Listen, or look, and be content.

* * *

BUT WHAT I started to write about was Robert Ruark as a music critic. I hope you read his piece about jazz in The Eagle two weeks ago. Seems that in March the Philharmonic is going to play a piece by a Swiss composer called "Concerto for jazz band and symphony orchestra." The idea annoys Ruark and he backs his objection to a Swiss composer's dolling up our jazz, by quoting the remark made by Eddie Condon in a controversy with the French over what they called "le jazz hot."

"Look," said Eddie, "do we go over to France and tell you guys how to jump on a grape?"

* * *

OF COURSE, our composers have been taking ideas from the Europeans for years, and if a Swiss wants to use jazz why shouldn't he? All depends on what he makes of it. But when the Philharmonic plays the piece in Carnegie Hall in March, I would like to see Eddie Condon employed by the N.Y. Times to cover the event. It might liven up the columns of that paper no little.

WORLD OF MUSIC: WAL

Feb 13 N.Y. TIMES

By ROSS PARMENTER

'Troilus' Premiere Fixed For West—Beethoven At Tanglewood

WILLIAM WALTON'S "Troilus and Cressida," which had its world première last December in London's Covent Garden, will be played for the first time in the United States in October during the regular season of the San Francisco Opera. The company will perform the work four times in its home city and once in Los Angeles. Erich Leinsdorf is expected to conduct, and there is a possibility that Dorothy Kirsten will sing Cressida.

TANGLEWOOD: Charles Munch, who centered last year's Berkshire Festival on Berlioz, will pivot this year's on Beethoven. All nine of his symphonies will be played in the concerts of the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Shed. In addition, there will be a concert performance of the second act of "Fidelio," and a performance of the "Missa Solemnis." The "Emperor" Concerto will be played by Rudolf Serkin, the fourth Piano Concerto by Eugene Istomin and the Violin Concerto by Isaac Stern. In the Wednesday evening chamber music concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall the performers will play Beethoven quartets, trios and sonatas.

Last year concerts by the full symphony orchestra were spread over the whole six-week period of the festival. This year the festival is veering back toward the former pattern. There will be concerts in the Shed for only four week-ends, and the first two week-ends will again be devoted to Bach-Mozart programs in the Theatre-Concert Hall. The festival will run from July 6 to Aug. 14. The Berkshire Music Center will open two days earlier and then run concurrently.

Mr. Munch will conduct most of the concerts, but he will have three guest conductors to assist in the schedule. Pierre Monteux will conduct concerts in the Shed during the first, second and fourth week-ends there. Leonard Bernstein will conduct at the Shed in the third week-end, and will appear as pianist-conductor in an all-Mozart program in the smaller hall.

Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony, will lead one of the Bach-Mozart programs. Mr. Johnson led student orchestras at Tanglewood while he was studying at the center, but this will be his first engagement for the festival proper.

Frederick Gersten, baritone.

MUSIC AUDITIONS MARCH 9

Boston Symphony Players to Judge Applicants for School

Times Feb

Members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will audition instrumentalists for the Berkshire Music Center on March 9 during the orchestra's next visit to New York.

Most of the auditions will be held at Carnegie Recital Hall. String players will be heard from 1 to 2:30 P. M.; woodwind players from 2:30 to 3:30, and brass players from 3:30 to 5. Auditions for harpists, percussionists and tympani players will be held backstage at Carnegie Hall at 7 P. M.

The Berkshire Music Center at Lenox, Mass., is a school run concurrently with the Berkshire Music Festival. Students who are accepted for the center's orchestra will be eligible for tuition grants from the Tanglewood Revolving Sscholarship Fund.

GLOBE 2/6

Berkshire Music Center Announces Thirteenth Season, Opening July 4

Boston Symphony Orchestra announces plans for its Summer School of Music, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, which will open on July 4 for a six-week session, its 13th. Charles Munch, the conductor of the Boston Symphony will again serve as director. Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the orchestra, will serve as assistant director while Aaron Copland is in Europe on leave of absence, his first since the school was founded in 1940.

Boris Blacher, the German composer and director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin will come to this country for the first time to teach composition. Roger Sessions, the distinguished American composer will be associated with him in the composition department. Each of these composers has received a commission for a work to celebrate the orchestra's 75th anniversary in the season of 1955-56.

The Berkshire Music Center student orchestra, for which auditions are now being held, and the conducting class will be directed by Leonard Bernstein with the help of Seymour Lipkin. Orchestra sections and chamber music will be under the direction of the principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Richard Burgin and William Kroll head the chamber music department with Jean Bedetti, Ruth Posselt and members from the Boston Symphony.

Hugh Ross will again head the choral department. Boris Goldovsky will return to head the opera department, assisted by Sarah Caldwell, Paul Ulanowsky, Ludwig and Laura Zirner, and others. Ingolf Dahl will also return to Tanglewood to head the Tanglewood Study Group, assisted by Karl Kohn and Florence Dunn.

Chamber music in this group will be coached by Vladimir Resnikoff and Einar Hansen. The Study Group offers a course of general music study for those active in community music, for music educators and for amateurs. Members of the Study Group take part in the Festival Chorus which participates in the Boston Symphony concerts at Tanglewood. The Study Group accepts students for two, four or six weeks.

The Berkshire Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra are a central part of the Music Center studies, and all students may attend the concerts as well as rehearsals. Catalog and applications for admission can be secured from Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

Cir. (D 98,860)

This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN

FEB 13 1955

Three Guest Conductors Engaged for Tanglewood

Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein and Thor Johnson to Assist Charles Munch; Principal Works Of Beethoven to Be Heard; Soloists Named

Boston, Feb. 12—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch music director, will present most of the principal works of Beethoven at this summer's Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Lenox, through six week ends from July 6 to Aug. 14. The Shed concerts will include the nine symphonies, the "Missa Solemnis," a concert performance of "Fidelio" (Act II), concertos and overtures.

The plan for 1955 lists concerts each Friday evening, Saturday evening, and Ssunday afternoon. The first two week ends will be devoted to the "Bach-Mozart" concerts in the Theater and the last four week ends will consist of 12 concerts by the full orchestra in the Music Shed.

Guest Conductors

Guest conductors at the festival will be Pierre Monteux, who will then have passed his 80th birthday; Leonard Bernstein, returning to Tanglewood after a sabbatical year; and Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra and a former conducting student of Serge Koussevitzky at Tanglewood. Charles Munch will conduct two concerts each week, a third to be under the direction of a guest conductor.

In addition to the pianists, Rudolf Serkin and Eugene Istomin, Leonard Bernstein will appear as pianist, conducting from the keyboard. Other soloists will be Isaac Stern, violinist; Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist; and the singers, Margaret Harshaw, Jennie Tourel, and Leontyne Price.

The Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, G. Wallace Woodworth, conductor, will appear in a performance of Bach's Mass in B minor in the "Bach-Mozart" series. The Berkshire Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, will perform several choral works. Further soloists will be announced later.

Programs Arranged

During hte first week of the "Bach-Mozart" concerts (July 8, 9, 10), Charles Munch will conduct Bach's Mass in B minor and Thor Johnson will conduct a concert. In the second week (July 15, 16, 17), Leonard Bernstein will conduct an all-Mozart program, playing a piano concerto.

Through the four weeks of the Shed concerts to follow, Charles Munch will conduct tw concerts each week; Pierre Monteux in the first, second and fourth weeks; Leonard Bernstein in the third.

A partial list of programs is here given: In the first week of Shed concerts (July 22, 23, 23), Beethoven's Symphonies 1, 4, 6, and 7, will be played and the violin concerto (Isaac Stern). The second week (July 29, 30, 31): The "Eroica" Symphony, the "Emperor" Concerto (Rudolf Serkin), Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard" (soloist, Leontyne Price). The third week (Aug. 5, 6, 7): Beethoven's Symphonies 1, 4. 6, the secnd act of "Fidelio" (Margaret Harshaw), fourth piano concerto (Eugene Istomin) "Missa Solemnis" (to be conducted by Leonard Bernstein in memory of Serge Koussevitzky).

The final week (Aug. 12, 13, 14): Mr. Monteux will conduct a Brahms Choral Symphony program. Gregor Piatigorsky will appear as soloist in Bloch's "Schelomo." Charles Munch will close the festival with a performance of Beethoven's ninth symphony. Subscriptions for all series are now available at Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

The quartets, trios and sonatas by Beethoven will be featured in six chamber music concerts on Wednesday evening of each week in the Theater-Concert Hall by well-known chamber music groups. The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school at Tanglewood maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will have its 13th session from July 4 to Aug. 14.

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE

FEB 13 1955

Tanglewood To Feature Beethoven

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

Berlioz was last year's featured composer in the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.; this summer it will be Beethoven. The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play his symphonies, concertos and overtures, in addition to the "Missa Solemnis" and a concert performance of Act II of "Fidelio." The guests who will share the podium with Charles Munch are Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein and Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony.

The festival will run as usual for six weeks, July 6 to Aug. 14, but the schedule has again been changed, and now represents a combination of last summer's revision and the arrangement of previous years. The Bach-Mozart series with a chamber orchestra will be held on the first two Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons in the Theater-Concert Hall, and the full Boston Symphony will play on the remaining Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays in the Music Shed. Chamber music will again be offered on the six Wednesday nights with programs including Beethoven's quartets, trios and sonatas.

Last summer the Shed concerts and the chamber orchestra series were spread over the entire festival period; the former on Saturdays and Sundays and the latter on Fridays. Previously the chamber orchestra programs were played on the first three Saturdays and Sundays, and the Shed concerts during the last three weeks.

Complete programs have not yet been announced, but the first week end (July 8, 9, 10) will include Bach's B minor Mass under Mr. Munch and a concert under Mr. Johnson. A Mozart program with Mr. Bernstein doubling as conductor and soloist will be a feature of the second week (July 15, 16, 17). In the Shed series Mr. Munch will conduct two concerts each week, with Mr. Monteux as guest in the first, second and fourth weeks and Mr. Bernstein as the third. Features of the Shed concerts will be:

July 22, 23, 24: Beethoven, Symphonies Nos. 1, 4, 6, 7; Violin Concerto (Isaac Stern). July 29, 30, 31: Beethoven, "Eroica" Symphony, "Emperor" Concerto (Rudolf Serkin); Samuel Barber, "Prayers of Kierkegaard (Leontyne Price). Aug. 5, 6, 7: Beethoven, Symphonies Nos. 2, 5, 8, "Fidelio," Act II (Margaret Harshaw); Piano Concerto No. 4 (Eugene Istomin) and "Missa Solemnis" (Mr. Bernstein conducting). Aug. 12, 13, 14: Brahms program (Mr. Monteux conducting); Ernest Bloch, "Schelomo" (Cello soloist, Gregor Piatigorsky); Beethoven, Symphony No. 9.

Jennie Tourel will also be a soloist. The Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society will sing in the Bach Mass, and the Berkshire Festival chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, will be heard in other works. Information about tickets may be obtained from Symphony Hall, Boston, Mass. The Berkshire Music Center will hold its thirteenth session July 4 to Aug. 14.

• • •

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
EVE. NEWS

FEB 12 1955

FESTIVAL WILL FEATURE MUSIC OF BEETHOVEN

Programs, Guest Conductors, Soloists Announced for Tanglewood Season

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, will present most of the principal works of Beethoven at this summer's Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Lenox, through six week ends from July 6 to Aug. 14. The Shed concerts will include the nine symphonies, the "Missa Solemnis," a concert performance of "Fidelio" (Act II), concertos and overtures.

LEONARD BERNSTEIN

The plan for 1955 lists concerts each Friday evening, Saturday evening, and Sunday afternoon. The first two week ends will be devoted to the "Bach-Mozart" concerts in the theater and the last four week ends will consist of 12 concerts by the full orchestra in the Music Shed.

Guest Conductors

Guest conductors at the Festival will be Pierre Monteux, who will then have passed his 80th birthday; Leonard Bernstein, returning to Tanglewood after a sabbatical year; and Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra and a former conducting student of Serge Koussevitzky at Tanglewood. Charles Munch will conduct two concerts each week, a third to be under the direction of a guest conductor.

Soloists

In addition to the pianists, Rudolf Serkin and Eugene Istomin, Leonard Bernstein will appear as pianist, conducting from the keyboard. Other soloists will be Isaac Stern, violinist; Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist; and the singers, Margaret Harshaw, Jennie Tourel, and Leontyne Price. The Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, G. Wallace Woodworth, conductor, will appear in a performance of Bach's Mass in B minor in the "Bach-Mozart" series. The Berkshire Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, will perform several choral works. Further soloists will be announced later.

Programs

During the first week of the "Bach-Mozart" concerts (July 8, 9, 10), Charles Munch will conduct Bach's Mass in B minor and Thor Johnson will conduct a concert. In the second week (July 15, 16, 17), Leonard Bernstein will conduct an all-Mozart program, playing a piano concerto.

Through the four weeks of the Shed concerts to follow, Charles Munch will conduct two concerts each week; Pierre Monteux in the first, second and fourth weeks; Leonard Bernstein in the third.

A partial list of programs is here given: In the first week of Shed concerts (July 22, 23, 24), Beethoven's symphonies 1, 4, 6, and 7 will be played and the violin concerto (Isaac Stern). The second week (July 29, 30, 31): The "Eroica" Symphony, the "Emperor" Concerto (Rudolf Serkin), Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard" (soloist, Leontyne Price). The third week (Aug. 5, 6, 7): Beethoven's Symphonies 2, 5, 8, the second act of "Fidelio" (Margaret Harshaw), Fourth Piano Concerto (Eugene Istomin), "Missa Solemnis" (to be conducted by Leonard Bernstein in memory of Serge Koussevitzky). The final week (Aug. 12, 13, 14): Mr. Monteux will conduct a Brahms program. Gregor Piatigorsky will appear as soloist in Bloch's "Schelomo." Charles Munch will close the Festival with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Subscriptions for all series are now available at Symphony Hall, Boston 15.

The quartets, trios, and sonatas by Beethoven will be featured in six chamber music concerts on Wednesday evening of each week in the theater-concert hall by well-known chamber music groups.

The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school at Tanglewood maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will have its 13th session from July 4 to Aug. 14.

Cir. (S 277,442)

This Clipping From
NEW ORLEANS, LA.
TIMES-PICAYUNE-STATES

FEB 27 1955

Beethoven to Be Featured at Tanglewood

BOSTON, Mass.—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, will present most of the principal works of Beethoven at this summer's Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., through six week ends from July 6 to Aug. 14. The Shed concerts will include the nine symphonies, the "Missa Solemnis," a concert performance of "Fidelio" (Act II), concertos and overtures.

The plan for 1955 lists concerts each Friday night, Saturday night and Sunday afternoon. The first two week ends will be devoted to the "Bach-Mozart" concerts in the theater and the last four week ends will consist of 12 concerts by the full orchestra in the Music Shed.

Guest conductors at the festival will be Pierre Monteux, who will then have passed his 80th birthday; Leonard Bernstein, returning to Tanglewood after a sabbatical year; and Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra and a former conducting student of Serge Koussevitzky at Tanglewood. Charles Munch will conduct two concerts each week, a third to be under the direction of a guest conductor.

Cir. (D 643,985) (S 1,124,787)

This Clipping From PHILADELPHIA, PA.
INQUIRER

FEB 13 1955

Berkshire Festival

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, will present most of the principal works of Beethoven at the 'Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., through six week-ends from July 6 to Aug. 14. The Shed concerts will include the nine symphonies, the "Missa Solemnis;" a concert performance of "Fidelio," Act 2; concertos and overtures.

With concerts each Friday evening, Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon, the first two week-ends will be devoted to "Bach-Mozart" and the last four week-ends will consist of twelve concerts by the full orchestra.

Guest conductors will be Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein and Thor Johnson. Munch will conduct two concerts each week, the third to be under a guest conductor. Soloists will include Rudolf Serkin, Eugene Istomin and Leonard Bernstein, pianists; Isaac Stern, violinist; Gregor Piatigorsky, 'cellist; Margaret Harshaw, Jennie Tourel and Leontyne Price, singers.

[92]

This Clipping From VARIETY
NEW YORK, N. Y.

MAR 2 - 1955

Boston Orch Preps 18th Berkshire Fest Season

Boston, March 1.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will present the 18th season of its Berkshire Festival at Lenox, Mass., this summer, July 6 to April 14. This year's will be a Beethoven fest mainly, with all the nine symphonies, concertos, overtures, "Missa Solemnis" and a concert performance of "Fidelio" (Act 2) listed. First two weekends will be devoted to Bach-Mozart concerts in the theatre, and last four weekends to 12 concerts in the Music Shed.

Charles Munch will conduct, with Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein and Thor Johnson as guest maestros. Soloists will include Bernstein (as pianist), Rudolf Serkin, Eugene Istomin, Isaac Stern, Gregor Piatigorsky, Margaret Harshaw, Jennie Tourel and Leontyne Price.

NORWALK HOUR ~~CONN.~~
MARCH 2, 1955
TWELVE

FAMOUS MUSIC CENTER TO OPEN 13TH SEASON AT TANGLEWOOD JULY 4

Boston Symphony Orchestra announces plans for its Summer School of Music, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, which will open on July 4 for a six-week session, its 13th. Charles Munch, the conductor of the Boston Symphony will again serve as director. Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate Conductor of the orchestra, will serve as assistant director while Aaron Copland is in Europe on leave of absence, his first since the school was founded in 1940. Boris Blacher, the German composer and director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin will come to this country for the first time to teach composition, Roger Sessions, the distinguished American composer will be associated with him in the composition department. Each of these composers has received a commission for a work to celebrate the orchestra's 75th anniversary in the season of 1955-56.

The Berkshire Music Center student orchestra, for which auditions are now being held, and the conducting class will be directed by Leonard Bernstein with the help of Seymour Lipkin. Orchestra sections and chamber music will be under the direction of the principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Richard Burgin and William Kroll head the chamber music department with Jean Bedetti, Ruth Posselt and members from the Boston Symphony. Hugh Ross will again head the choral department. Boris Goldovsky will return to head the opera department, assisted by Sarah Caldwell, Paul Ulanowsky, Ludwig and Laura Zirner, and others. Ingolf Dahl will also return to Tanglewood to head the Tanglewood Study Group, assisted by Karl Kohn and Florence Dunn. Chamber music in this group will be coached by Vladimir Resnikoff and Einar Hansen. The study group offers a course of general music study for those active in community music, for music educators and for amateurs. Members of the study group take part in the festival chorus which participates in the Boston Symphony concerts at Tanglewood. The study group accepts students for two, four or six weeks. The Berkshire Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra are a central part of the Music Center studies, and all students may attend the concerts as well as rehearsals. Catalogue and applications for admission can be secured from Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

Cir. (D 20,402) (S 41,868)

This Clipping From
WATERBURY, CONN.
REPUBLICAN
MAR 3 - 1955

Tanglewood Season Set To Open July 4

Boston Symphony Orchestra announces plans for its Summer School of Music, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, which will open July 4 for a six-week session, its 13th. Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony, will again serve as director. Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the orchestra, will serve as assistant director while Aaron Copland is in Europe on leave of absence, his first since the school was founded in 1940.

NEW MILFORD TIMES

3/3/55

Berkshire Festival Features Beethoven

New Milford lovers of classical music will be happy to know that this year the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will feature the principal orchestral and choral works of Beethoven, as well as his chamber music. Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has announced.

All of the nine Beethoven symphonies will be given by the full orchestra in the Music Shed concerts, as well as the Violin Concerto, with Isaac Stern, soloist; the Fourth and Fifth Piano Concertos, with soloists Eugene Istomin and Rudolph Serkin, respectively, and the Missa Solemnis, conducted by Leonard Bernstein in memory of Serge Koussevitsky, founder of the Festival

The concerts in the Music Shed start on Friday, July 22 and continue through Sunday, August 14.

Preceding the Music Shed concerts and starting July 6, chamber music recitals will be given each Wednesday evening in the Concert Theatre. These will be devoted to the music of Beethoven.

Bach and Mozart will be featured in the first two weekends of the Festival, beginning Friday, July 8, by an orchestra of chamber proportions in the Theatre.

Tickets and informations about the Festival may be obtained by writing the Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

SHARON, CONN
NEWS
3/3/55

BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER AUDITIONS

Instrumental auditions for admission to The Berkshire Music Center will be held while the Boston Symphony Orchestra is in New York on its final trip of the season. The auditions are scheduled for March 9 from 1 to 5 in Carnegie Recital Hall, New York City as follows: Strings 1 to 2:30 p. m., Woodwinds 2:30 to 3:30 p. m., Brass 3:30 to 5:00 p. m. Harp, Tympani and Percussion auditions will be held backstage at 7:00 p. m. The audition committee consists of the principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

MILLERTON, N.Y
NEWS
3/3/55

BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER AUDITIONS

Instrumental auditions for admission to The Berkshire Music Center will be held while the Boston Symphony Orchestra is in New York on its final trip of the season. The auditions are scheduled for March 9 from 1 to 5 in Carnegie Recital Hall, New York City as follows: Strings 1 to 2:30 p. m., Woodwinds 2:30 to 3:30 p. m., Brass 3:30 to 5:00 p. m. Harp, Tympani and Percussion auditions will be held backstage at 7:00 p. m. The audition committee consists of the principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Cir. (D 12,308)

This Clipping From
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE

MAR 4 1955

Music Center At Tanglewood Opens July 4

Boston Symphony Orchestra announces plans for its Summer School of Music, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, which will open on July 4 for a six-week session, its 13th, Charles Munch, the conductor of the Boston Symphony will again serve as director. Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the orchestra, will serve as assistant director while Aaron Copland is in Europe on leave of absence, his first since the school was founded in 1940. Boris Blacher, the German composer and director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin will come to this country for the first time to teach composition. Roger Sessions, the distinguished American composer will be associated with him in the composition department. Each of these composers has received a commission for a work to celebrate the orchestra's 75th anniversary in the season of 1955-56.

The Berkshire Music Center student orchestra, for which auditions are now being held, and the conducting class will be directed by Leonard Berstein with the help of Seymour Lipkin. Orchestra Sections and Chamber Music will be under the direction of the principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Richard Burgin and William Kroll head the chamber music department with Jean Bedetti, Ruth Posselt and members from the Boston Symphony. Hugh Ross will again head the choral department. Boris Goldovsky will return to head the opera department, assisted by Sarah Caldwell. Paul Ulanowsky, Ludwig and Laura Zirner, and others. Ingolf Dahl will also return to Tanglewood to head the Tanglewood Study Group, assisted by Karl Kohn and Florence Dunn. Chamber music in this group will be coached by Vladimir Resnikoff and Einar Hansen. The study group offers a course of general music study for those active in community music, for music educators and for amateurs. Members of the study group take part in the festival chorus which participates in the Boston Symphony concerts at Tanglewood. The study group accepts students for two, four or six weeks. The Berkshire Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra are a central part of the music center studies, and all students may attend the concerts as well as rehearsals.

Cir. (D 130,147)

This Clipping From
SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-JOURNAL
MAR 4 1955

Berkshire Center To Open July 4 in 'Tanglewood'

BERKSHIRE MUSIC Center's 13th summer session in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., will open July 4 under direction of Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. While Aaron Copland is in Europe, on leave of absence, (his first since the founding of the school), Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the Orchestra will serve as assistant director.

Boris Blacher, German composer and director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin will come to the States for the first time to teach composition. Roger Sessions, distinguished American composer, will be assisted with Herr Blacher in the composition department. Each of these composers has received a commission for a work to celebrate the Boston Symphony's 75th anniversary in the 1955-56 season.

Sessions

BOSTON MASS.
GLOBE
MAR 6 - 1955

Berkshire Music Center Announces Thirteenth Season, Opening July 4

Boston Symphony Orchestra announces plans for its Summer School of Music, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, which will open on July 4 for a six-week session, its 13th. Charles Munch, the conductor of the Boston Symphony will again serve as director. Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the orchestra, will serve as assistant director while Aaron Copland is in Europe on leave of absence, his first since the school was founded in 1940.

Boris Blacher, the German composer and director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin will come to this country for the first time to teach composition. Roger Sessions, the distinguished American composer will be associated with him in the composition department. Each of these composers has received a commission for a work to celebrate the orchestra's 75th anniversary in the season of 1955-56.

The Berkshire Music Center student orchestra, for which auditions are now being held, and the conducting class will be directed by Leonard Bernstein with the help of Seymour Lipkin. Orchestra sections and chamber music will be under the direction of the principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Richard Burgin and William Kroll head the chamber music department with Jean Bedetti, Ruth Posselt and members from the Boston Symphony.

Hugh Ross will again head the choral department. Boris Goldovsky will return to head the opera department, assisted by Sarah Caldwell, Paul Ulanowsky, Ludwig and Laura Zirner, and others. Ingolf Dahl will also return to Tanglewood to head the Tanglewood Study Group, assisted by Karl Kohn and Florence Dunn.

Chamber music in this group will be coached by Vladimir Resnikoff and Einar Hansen. The Study Group offers a course of general music study for those active in community music, for music educators and for amateurs. Members of the Study Group take part in the Festival Chorus which participates in the Boston Symphony concerts at Tanglewood. The Study Group accepts students for two, four or six weeks.

The Berkshire Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra are a central part of the Music Center studies, and all students may attend the concerts as well as rehearsals. Catalog and applications for admission can be secured from Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

Cir. (D 13,210)

This Clipping From
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
MAR 5 - 1955

Summer Music School At Tanglewood Opens July 4 for Six Weeks

The Boston Symphony orchestra today announced plans for its summer school of music, at the Berkshire Music center at Tanglewood, Lenox, which will open July 4 for a six-week session, its 13th.

Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston symphony will again serve as director. Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the orchestra, will serve as assistant director while Aaron Copland is in Europe on leave of absence, his first since the school was founded in 1940. Boris Blacher, the German composer and director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin, will come to this country for the first time to teach composition. Roger Sessions, American composer will be associated with him in the composition department. Each of these composers has received a commission for a work to celebrate the orchestra's 75th anniversary in the season of 1955-56.

The Berkshire Music center student orchestra, for which auditions are now being held, and the conducting class will be directed by Leonard Bernstein with the help of Seymour Lipkin. Orchestra sections and chamber music will be under the direction of the principals of the Boston Symphony orchestra. Richard Burgin and William Kroll head the chamber music department with Jean Bedetti, Ruth Posselt and members from the Boston symphony. Hugh Ross will again head the choral department. Boris Goldovsky will return to head the opera department, assisted by Sarah Caldwell, Paul Ulanowsky, Ludwig and Laura Zirner, and others. Ingolf Dahl will also return to Tanglewood to head the Tanglewood Study group, assisted fy Karl Kohn and Miss Florence Dunn of Williamstown. Chamber music in this group will be coached by Vladimir Resnikoff and Einar Hansen. The Study group offers a course of general music study for those active in community music, for music educators and for amateurs. Members of the Study group take part in the festival chorus which participates in the Boston symphony concerts at Tanglewood. The Study group accepts students for two, four and six weeks.

The Berkshire festival concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra are a central part of the Music center studies, and all students may attend the concerts as well as rehearsals.

This Clipping From
Springfield Mass.
Republican

MAR 6 1955

THREE FILMS ON FINAL PROGRAM

'Tanglewood Story' to Be Shown Friday

"Instruments of the Orchestra," "Symphony Under the Pines" and "The Tanglewood Story" will be shown at the final film program at the William Pynchon Memorial building, Friday, at 3.30 p. m. and 8 p. m. This program is being presented by the City Library and the Connecticut Valley Historical Museum and should be especially interesting to young people who are playing in orchestras.

"Instruments of the Orchestra" is a British film which features the members of the London Symphony Orchestra as each of 26 instruments is introduced. "Symphony Under the Pines," in color, presents the Nationa High School Orchestra playing in Kresge Assembly Hall, Interlochen, Mich. The young people present a performance of "Romeo and Juliet" by Tschaikovsky.

The third film was made to acquaint people in this country and foreign countries with the program of classes and concerts given at Tanglewood in Lenox each summer. It includes a performance by the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Serge Koussevitsky. The program is free and the public is cordially invited.

This Clipping From

Berkshire Auditions

Members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will hold auditions for instrumentalists wishing to study this summer at the Berkshire Music Center this afternoon. Players of stringed, woodwind and brass instruments will be heard at 1. 2:30 and 3:30 p. m., respectively, in the Carnegie Recital Hall. Harpists, tympanists and percussionists will be heard backstage in Carnegie Hall at 7 p. m.

This Clipping From VARIETY
NEW YORK, N. Y.

MAR 2 - 1955

Boston Orch Preps 18th Berkshire Fest Season

Boston, March 1.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will present the 18th season of its Berkshire Festival at Lenox, Mass., this summer, July 6 to April 14. This year's will be a Beethoven fest mainly, with all the nine symphonies, concertos, overtures, "Missa Solemnis" and a concert performance of "Fidelio" (Act 2) listed. First two weekends will be devoted to Bach-Mozart concerts in the theatre, and last four weekends to 12 concerts in the Music Shed.

Charles Munch will conduct, with Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein and Thor Johnson as guest maestros. Soloists will include Bernstein (as pianist), Rudolf Serkin, Eugene Istomin, Isaac Stern, Gregor Piatigorsky, Margaret Harshaw, Jennie Tourel and Leontyne Price.

NORWALK HOUR ~~CONN.~~
MARCH 2, 1955

TWELVE

FAMOUS MUSIC CENTER TO OPEN 13TH SEASON AT TANGLEWOOD JULY 4

Boston Symphony Orchestra announces plans for its Summer School of Music, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, which will open on July 4 for a six-week session, its 13th. Charles Munch, the conductor of the Boston Symphony will again serve as director. Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate Conductor of the orchestra, will serve as assistant director while Aaron Copland is in Europe on leave of absence, his first since the school was founded in 1940. Boris Blacher, the German composer and director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin will come to this country for the first time to teach composition. Roger Sessions, the distinguished American composer will be associated with him in the composition department. Each of these composers has received a commission for a work to celebrate the orchestra's 75th anniversary in the season of 1955-56.

The Berkshire Music Center student orchestra, for which auditions are now being held, and the conducting class will be directed by Leonard Bernstein with the help of Seymour Lipkin. Orchestra sections and chamber music will be under the direction of the principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Richard Burgin and William Kroll head the chamber music department with Jean Bedetti, Ruth Posselt and members from the Boston Symphony. Hugh Ross will again head the choral department. Boris Goldovsky will return to head the opera department, assisted by Sarah Caldwell, Paul Ulanowsky, Ludwig and Laura Zirner, and others. Ingolf Dahl will also return to Tanglewood to head the Tanglewood Study Group, assisted by Karl Kohn and Florence Dunn. Chamber music in this group will be coached by Vladimir Resnikoff and Einar Hansen. The study group offers a course of general music study for those active in community music, for music educators and for amateurs. Members of the study group take part in the festival chorus which participates in the Boston Symphony concerts at Tanglewood. The study group accepts students for two, four or six weeks. The Berkshire Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra are a central part of the Music Center studies, and all students may attend the concerts as well as rehearsals. Catalogue and applications for admission can be secured from Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

Cir. (D 20,402) (S 41,868)

This Clipping From
WATERBURY, CONN.
REPUBLICAN

MAR 3 - 1955

Tanglewood Season Set To Open July 4

Boston Symphony Orchestra announces plans for its Summer School of Music, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, which will open July 4 for a six-week session, its 13th. Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony, will again serve as director. Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the orchestra, will serve as assistant director while Aaron Copland is in Europe on leave of absence, his first since the school was founded in 1940.

NEW MILFORD TIMES
3/3/55

Berkshire Festival Features Beethoven

New Milford lovers of classical music will be happy to know that this year the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will feature the principal orchestral and choral works of Beethoven, as well as his chamber music. Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has announced.

All of the nine Beethoven symphonies will be given by the full orchestra in the Music Shed concerts, as well as the Violin Concerto, with Isaac Stern, soloist; the Fourth and Fifth Piano Concertos, with soloists Eugene Istomin and Rudolph Serkin, respectively, and the Missa Solemnis, conducted by Leonard Bernstein in memory of Serge Koussevitsky, founder of the Festival

The concerts in the Music Shed start on Friday, July 22 and continue through Sunday, August 14.

Preceding the Music Shed concerts and starting July 6, chamber music recitals will be given each Wednesday evening in the Concert Theatre. These will be devoted to the music of Beethoven.

Bach and Mozart will be featured in the first two weekends of the Festival, beginning Friday, July 8, by an orchestra of chamber proportions in the Theatre.

Tickets and informations about the Festival may be obtained by writing the Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

SHARON, CONN
NEWS
3/3/55

BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER AUDITIONS

Instrumental auditions for admission to The Berkshire Music Center will be held while the Boston Symphony Orchestra is in New York on its final trip of the season. The auditions are scheduled for March 9 from 1 to 5 in Carnegie Recital Hall, New York City as follows: Strings 1 to 2:30 p. m., Woodwinds 2:30 to 3:30 p. m., Brass 3:30 to 5:00 p. m. Harp, Tympani and Percussion auditions will be held backstage at 7:00 p. m. The audition committee consists of the principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

MILLERTON, N.Y
NEWS
3/3/55

BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER AUDITIONS

Instrumental auditions for admission to The Berkshire Music Center will be held while the Boston Symphony Orchestra is in New York on its final trip of the season. The auditions are scheduled for March 9 from 1 to 5 in Carnegie Recital Hall, New York City as follows: Strings 1 to 2:30 p. m., Woodwinds 2:30 to 3:30 p. m., Brass 3:30 to 5:00 p. m. Harp, Tympani and Percussion auditions will be held backstage at 7:00 p. m. The audition committee consists of the principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Cir. (D 12,308)

This Clipping From
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE

MAR 4 1955

Music Center At Tanglewood Opens July 4

Boston Symphony Orchestra announces plans for its Summer School of Music, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, which will open on July 4 for a six-week session, its 13th. Charles Munch, the conductor of the Boston Symphony will again serve as director. Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the orchestra, will serve as assistant director while Aaron Copland is in Europe on leave of absence, his first since the school was founded in 1940. Boris Blacher, the German composer and director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin will come to this country for the first time to teach composition. Roger Sessions, the distinguished American composer will be associated with him in the composition department. Each of these composers has received a commission for a work to celebrate the orchestra's 75th anniversary in the season of 1955-56.

The Berkshire Music Center student orchestra, for which auditions are now being held, and the conducting class will be directed by Leonard Berstein with the help of Seymour Lipkin. Orchestra Sections and Chamber Music will be under the direction of the principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Richard Burgin and William Kroll head the chamber music department with Jean Bedetti, Ruth Posselt and members from the Boston Symphony. Hugh Ross will again head the choral department. Boris Goldovsky will return to head the opera department, assisted by Sarah Caldwell. Paul Ulanowsky, Ludwig and Laura Zirner, and others. Ingolf Dahl will also return to Tanglewood to head the Tanglewood Study Group, assisted by Karl Kohn and Florence Dunn. Chamber music in this group will be coached by Vladimir Resnikoff and Einar Hansen. The study group offers a course of general music study for those active in community music, for music educators and for amateurs. Members of the study group take part in the festival chorus which participates in the Boston Symphony concerts at Tanglewood. The study group accepts students for two, four or six weeks. The Berkshire Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra are a central part of the music center studies, and all students may attend the concerts as well as rehearsals.

Cir. (D 130,147)

This Clipping From
SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-JOURNAL

MAR 4 1955

Berkshire Center To Open July 4 in 'Tanglewood'

BERKSHIRE MUSIC Center's 13th summer session in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., will open July 4 under direction of Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. While Aaron Copland is in Europe, on leave of absence, (his first since the founding of the school), Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the Orchestra will serve as assistant director.

Boris Blacher, German composer and director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin will come to the States for the first time to teach composition. Roger Sessions, distinguished American composer, will be assisted with Herr Blacher in the composition department. Each of these composers has received a commission for a work to celebrate the Boston Symphony's 75th anniversary in the 1955-56 season.

Sessions

BOSTON MASS.
GLOBE

MAR 6 - 1955

Berkshire Music Center Announces Thirteenth Season, Opening July 4

Boston Symphony Orchestra announces plans for its Summer School of Music, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, which will open on July 4 for a six-week session, its 13th. Charles Munch, the conductor of the Boston Symphony will again serve as director. Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the orchestra, will serve as assistant director while Aaron Copland is in Europe on leave of absence, his first since the school was founded in 1940.

Boris Blacher, the German composer and director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin will come to this country for the first time to teach composition. Roger Sessions, the distinguished American composer will be associated with him in the composition department. Each of these composers has received a commission for a work to celebrate the orchestra's 75th anniversary in the season of 1955-56.

The Berkshire Music Center student orchestra, for which auditions are now being held, and the conducting class will be directed by Leonard Bernstein with the help of Seymour Lipkin. Orchestra sections and chamber music will be under the direction of the principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Richard Burgin and William Kroll head the chamber music department with Jean Bedetti, Ruth Posselt and members from the Boston Symphony.

Hugh Ross will again head the choral department. Boris Goldovsky will return to head the opera department, assisted by Sarah Caldwell, Paul Ulanowsky, Ludwig and Laura Zirner, and others. Ingolf Dahl will also return to Tanglewood to head the Tanglewood Study Group, assisted by Karl Kohn and Florence Dunn.

Chamber music in this group will be coached by Vladimir Resnikoff and Einar Hansen. The Study Group offers a course of general music study for those active in community music, for music educators and for amateurs. Members of the Study Group take part in the Festival Chorus which participates in the Boston Symphony concerts at Tanglewood. The Study Group accepts students for two, four or six weeks.

The Berkshire Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra are a central part of the Music Center studies, and all students may attend the concerts as well as rehearsals. Catalog and applications for admission can be secured from Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

Cir. (D 13,210)

This Clipping From
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT

MAR 5 - 1955

Summer Music School At Tanglewood Opens July 4 for Six Weeks

The Boston Symphony orchestra today ~~announced~~ plans for its summer school of music, at the Berkshire Music center at Tanglewood, Lenox, which will open July 4 for a six-week session, its 13th.

Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston symphony will again serve as director. Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the orchestra, will serve as assistant director while Aaron Copland is in Europe on leave of absence, his first since the school was founded in 1940. Boris Blacher, the German composer and director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin, will come to this country for the first time to teach composition. Roger Sessions, American composer will be associated with him in the composition department. Each of these composers has received a commission for a work to celebrate the orchestra's 75th anniversary in the season of 1955-56.

The Berkshire Music center student orchestra, for which auditions are now being held, and the conducting class will be directed by Leonard Bernstein with the help of Seymour Lipkin. Orchestra sections and chamber music will be under the direction of the principals of the Boston Symphony orchestra. Richard Burgin and William Kroll head the chamber music department with Jean Bedetti, Ruth Posselt and members from the Boston symphony. Hugh Ross will again head the choral department. Boris Goldovsky will return to head the opera department, assisted by Sarah Caldwell, Paul Ulanowsky, Ludwig and Laura Zirner, and others. Ingolf Dahl will also return to Tanglewood to head the Tanglewood Study group, assisted fy Karl Kohn and Miss Florence Dunn of Williamstown. Chamber music in this group will be coached by Vladimir Resnikoff and Einar Hansen. The Study group offers a course of general music study for those active in community music, for music educators and for amateurs. Members of the Study group take part in the festival chorus which participates in the Boston symphony concerts at Tanglewood. The Study group accepts students for two, four and six weeks.

The Berkshire festival concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra are a central part of the Music center studies, and all students may attend the concerts as well as rehearsals.

This Clipping From
Springfield Mass.
Republican

MAR 6 1955

THREE FILMS ON FINAL PROGRAM

'Tanglewood Story' to Be Shown Friday

"Instruments of the Orchestra," "Symphony Under the Pines" and "The Tanglewood Story" will be shown at the final film program at the William Pynchon Memorial building, Friday, at 3.30 p. m. and 8 p. m. This program is being presented by the City Library and the Connecticut Valley Historical Museum and should be especially interesting to young people who are playing in orchestras.

"Instruments of the Orchestra" is a British film which features the members of the London Symphony Orchestra as each of 26 instruments is introduced. "Symphony Under the Pines," in color, presents the Nationa High School Orchestra playing in Kresge Assembly Hall, Interlochen, Mich. The young people present a performance of "Romeo and Juliet" by Tschaikovsky.

The third film was made to acquaint people in this country and foreign countries with the program of classes and concerts given at Tanglewood in Lenox each summer. It includes a performance by the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Serge Koussevitsky. The program is free and the public is cordially invited.

This Clipping From

Berkshire Auditions

Members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will hold auditions for instrumentalists wishing to study this summer at the Berkshire Music Center this afternoon. Players of stringed, woodwind and brass instruments will be heard at 1, 2:30 and 3:30 p. m., respectively, in the Carnegie Recital Hall. Harpists, tympanists and percussionists will be heard backstage in Carnegie Hall at 7 p. m.

[93]

TIGHT BINDING

PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE

MAR 5 1955

usic Center Plans

Leonard Bernstein Returning; Copland Going to Europe

he Boston Symphony Orchestra
ay announced plans for its sum-r school of music, the Berkre Music Center at Tanglewood, ich will open its 13th season
y 4 for a six-week session.
arles Munch, conductor of the ston Symphony, will again serve director. Richard Burgin, con-rtmaster and associate conduct-of the Orchestra, will serve as sistant director while Aaron Copd is in Europe on leave of sence, his first since the school s founded in 1940.

Boris Blacher, the German com-ser and director of the Hochhule fur Musik in Berlin will me to this country for the first me to teach composition. Roger ssions, the American composer, ll be associated with him in the mposition department. Each of ese composers has received a mmission for a work to celebrate e orchestra's 75th anniversary the season of 1955-56.

The Berkshire Music Center stunt orchestra, for which auditions e now being held, and the concting class will be directed by onard Bernstein with the help Seymour Lipkin. Orchestra sec-ns and chamber music will be der the direction of the principals the Boston Symphony Orchestra.
chard Burgin and William Kroll ad the chamber music depart-ent with Jean Bedetti, Ruth Pos-lt and members from the Boston mphony. Hugh Ross again will ad the choral department. Boris ldovsky will return to head the era department, assisted by Sar-Caldwell, Paul Ulanowsky, Ludg and Laura Zirner, and others.
golf Dahl also will return to nglewood to head the Tangle-od study group, assisted by Karl hn and Florence Dunn. Chamber usic in this group will be coached Vladimir Resnikoff and Einar

Richard Burgin
Assistant Director

Hansen. The study group offers a course of general music study for those active in community music, for music educators and for amateurs. Members of the study group take part in the Festival chorus which participates in the Boston Symphony concerts at Tanglewood. The study group accepts students for two, four or six weeks. The Berkshire Music Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra are a central part of the Music Center studies, and all students may attend the concerts as well as rehearsals. Catalogue and applications for admission can be secured from Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Massachusetts.

This Clipping From
Springfield Mass.
Republican

MAR 6 1955

New Instructors Announced At Berkshire Music Center

Boston, March 5—The Boston Symphony Orchestra has announced plans for its Summer School of Music, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, which will open on July 4 for a six-week session, its 13th. Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony, will again serve as director. Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor, will serve as assistant director Aaron Copland is in Europe on leave of absence, his first since the school was founded in 1940.

Boris Blacher, German composer and director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin, will come to this country for the first time to teach composition. Roger Sessions, distinguished American composer, will be associated with him in the composition department. Each of these composers has received a commission for a work to celebrate the orchestra's 75th anniversary in the season of 1955-56.

Student Orchestra

The Berkshire Music Center student orchestra, for which auditions are now being held, and the conduction class will be directed by Leonard Bernstein with the help of Séymour Lipkin. Orchestra sections and chamber music will be under the direction of the principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Richard Burgin and William Droll head the chamber music department with Jean Bedetti, Ruth Posselt and members from the Boston Symphony.

Hugh Ross will again head the choral department. Boris Goldovsky will return to head the opera department, assisted by Sarah Caldwell, Paul Ulanowsky, Ludwig and Laura Zirner, and others. Ingolf Dahl will also return to Tanglewood to head the Tanglewood Study Group, assisted by Karl Kohn and Florence Dunn. Chamber music in this group will be coached by Vladimir Resnikoff and Einar Hansen.

The study group offers a course of general music study for those active in community music, for music educators and for amateurs, and its members take part in the festival chorus which participates in the Boston Symphony concerts at Tanglewood. The study group accepts students for two, four or six weeks. The Berkshire Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra are a central part of the Music Center studies, and all students may attend the concerts as well as rehearsals. Catalogue and applications for admission can be secured from Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

CINCINNATI, OHIO
ENQUIRER

MAR 13 1955

CSO Maestro Directs BSO

THOR JOHNSON, musical director of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, has accepted an invitation to be guest conductor at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, July 9. The festival, under the direction of Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, offers a six weeks' program, from July 6 to August 14, with performances on Friday evenings, Saturday evenings, and Sunday afternoons.

★ ★ ★

THE FIRST two weekends will consist of "Bach-Mozart" concerts, to be given in the Theater-Concert Hall, by a chamber orchestra from the Boston Symphony. The concert to be conducted by Dr. Johnson falls on the Saturday evening at 8:30 p. m. Dr. Johnson will direct the following works:

Concerto Grosso, No. 12 in B Minor ....Handel
Sinfonia Concertante, B-flat Minor ....Haydn
Der Schwanendreher ....Paul Hindemith
Symphony No. 98, in B-flat Major ....Haydn

The concerts of the last four weekends will be given by the full Boston Symphony in the Music Shed.

★ ★ ★

THIS YEAR'S festival program, as planned by Mr. Munch, is largely dedicated to the music of Beethoven. Selected from the Beethoven repertoire for performance are the nine symphonies, "Fidelio" (Act II) in concert performance, the violin concerto, two piano concertos, and the principal overtures.

★ ★ ★

GUEST ARTISTS include Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein, and Thor Johnson, guest conductors; pianists, Rudolf Serkin (Emperor Concerto), Eugene Istomin, and Leonard Bernstein (Mozart); Isaac Stern, violinist; 'Cellist, Gregor Piatigorsky (Brahms), and singers, Margaret Harshaw, Jennie Tourel, and Leontyne Price (Barber's "Prayers Of Kierkegaard").

★ ★ ★

THE BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL will close August 14 with Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, Charles Munch conducting. A later release of the programs in full will be issued by the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, Inc.

Cir. (D 10,237)

This Clipping From
GENEVA, N. Y.
TIMES

MAR 10 1955

Berkshire Music Center To Open Session July 4

The Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will open its 13th summer session on July 4. The session will continue for six weeks.

Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, again will serve as director of the center. Richard Burgin, concertmaster and assistant conductor of the orchestra, will serve as assistant director in place of Aaron Copland. Mr. Copland will be in Europe on leave of absence, his first since the summer music school was founded in 1940.

Boris Blacher, German composer and director of the Huchschule fuer Musik in Berlin, will make his first visit to this country to teach composition at the Berkshire Music Center. Associated with him will be Roger Sessions, the American composer. Both composers have received commissions for new works to celebrate the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 75th anniversary, which will be observed during the 1955-56 season.

The Berkshire Music Center Student Orchestra, for which auditions are now being held, and the conducting class will be directed by Leonard Bernstein, assisted by Seymour Lipkin. Richard Burgin and William Kroll head the chamber music department, assisted by Jean Bedetti, Ruth Posselt and members of the Boston Symphony.

Hugh Ross again will head the choral department, and Boris Goldovsky will direct the opera department, assisted by Sarah Caldwell, Paul Ulanowsky and Ludwig and Laura Zimmer. Ingolf Dahl will heal the Tanglewood Study Group, assisted by Karl Kohn and Florence Dunn.

Catalogues and applications for admission to the Berkshire Music Center may be obtained from Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

This Clipping From NEW YO

USIC AT LENOX TO BEGIN JULY 4

erkshire Center Schedules 13th Summer Program—Munch to Direct Again

The Berkshire Music Center
t Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., ill open its thirteenth summer ession on July 4. The session ill continue for six weeks.

Charles Munch, conductor of
he Boston Symphony Orchestra, gain will serve as director of he center. Richard Burgin, conertmaster and assistant conduc-or of the orchestra, will serve s assistant director in place of aron Copland. Mr. Copland ill be in Europe on leave of ab-ence, his first since the summer usic school was founded in 940.

Boris Blacher, German com-oser and director of the Huch-hule fuer Musik in Berlin, will ake his first visit to this coun-y to teach composition at the erkshire Music Center. Assoated with him will be Roger essions, the American com-oser. Both composers have re-ived commissions for new orks to celebrate the Boston ymphony Orchestra's seventyfth anniversary, which will be bserved during the 1955-56 sea-on.

The Berkshire Music Center
tudent Orchestra, for which uditions are now being held, nd the conducting class will be rected by Leonard Bernstein, ssisted by Seymour Lipkin.
ichard Burgin and William roll head the chamber music epartment, assisted by Jean edetti, Ruth Posselt and mem-rs of the Boston Symphony.

Hugh Ross again will head the oral department, and Boris oldovsky will direct the opera department, assisted by Sarah Caldwell, Paul Ulanowsky and Ludwig and Laura Zirner. Ingolf Dahl will head the Tanglewood Study Group, assisted by Karl Kohn and Florence Dunn.

Catalogues and applications for admission to the Berkshire Music Center may be obtained from Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

Cir. (D 192,249) (S 211,152)

This Clipping From PORTLAND, ORE.
OREGON JOURNAL

MAR 13 1955

■ ■

School Opens July 4

The Boston Symphony has announced plans for its summer music school at the Berkshire music festival. The school opens July 4 for a six-week session. Charles Munch will serve as director. Composition teachers include Boris Blacher, German composer, and the American, Roger Sessions. Catalogue of the school and applications for admission can be secured from Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

---

* * *

Berkshire Center

Boris Blacher, prominent German composer, will come to this country for the first time this summer to teach in the thirteenth six-week session of the Berkshire Music Center, which opens July 4 at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Roger Sessions will also be in the Center's composition department, Charles Munch conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, returns as director. Richard Burgin, its concert-master, will be assistant director in place of Aaron Copland, who will be in Europe.

Leonard Bernstein will direct the student orchestra and conducting class. Hugh Ross will head the choral department, and Boris Goldovsky returns to head the opera department. The chamber music department will be directed by Mr. Burgin and William Kroll. Ingolf Dahl will head the Study Group for amateurs, educators and those who are active in community music. Full information may be obtained from the Center's office at Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

* * *

Prades Festival

Bach, Beethoven and Brahms are the composers who will be represented in Pablo Casals' sixth annual festival, to be held at Prades in southern France from July 2 to 18. The Bach Aria Group will be among the famous seventy-eight-year-old cellist's associates in this series of eleven concerts. Others who will take part are Yehudi Menuhin and Sandor Vegh, violinists; Eugene Istomin and Mieczyslaw

---

ALBANY, N. Y.
KNICKERBOCKER NEWS
MAR 7 1955

Berkshire Music Festival To Feature Beethoven

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will present most of the principal works of Beethoven at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood this summer.

Plans for the season include concerts Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons, from July 8 to Aug. 14. The first two weekends will be devoted to "Bach-Mozart" concerts in the theater, and the program for the last four weekends will consist of 12 concerts by the full orchestra in the Music Shed.

The nine Beethoven symphonies, the "Missa Solemnis," and a concert performance of "Fidelio" (Act II), concertos and overtures will be offered in the shed programs.

Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra, will conduct two concerts each week and a third will be under the direction of a guest conductor.

Appearing as the guest conductors will be Pierre Monteaux, Leonard Bernstein and Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Bernstein returns to Tanglewood after a sabbatical year.

In the "Bach-Mozart" series the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, directed by G. Wallace Woodworth, will perform Bach's Mass in B Minor.

Two of the piano soloists for the concerts will be Rudolph Serkin and Eugene Istomin. Mr Bernstein will appear as pianist, conducting from the keyboard.

Other soloists will be Isaac Stern, violinist; Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist, and singers Margaret Harshaw, Jennie Tourel and Leontyne Price.

INFORMATION OBSCURED

INFORMATION OBSCURED

[redacted]

Cir. (D 643,765) (S 1,124,767)

This Clipping From PHILADELPHIA, PA.
INQUIRER

MAR 13 1955

Bostonians Plan School

Boston Symphony Orchestra announces its 13th summer school of music, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, which will open July 4 for six weeks. Charles Munch will again serve as director, with Richard Burgin as assistant director while Aaron Copland is in Europe on leave of absence.

Boris Blacher, director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin, will teach composition with Roger Sessions. Both composers have received commissions for works to mark the Orchestra's 75th anniversary in 1955-56.

The Berkshire Music Center student orchestra, for which auditions are now being held, and the conducting class will be directed by Leonard Bernstein and Seymour Lipkin. Orchestra sections and chamber music will be led by principals of the Boston Symphony. Hugh Ross will again head the choral department; Boris Goldovsky, the opera department.

Ingolf Dahl, will again head the Tanglewood Study Group, which offers general music study for those active in community music, for music educators and amateurs. Members of the Study Group take part in the Festival Chorus and may enroll for two, four or six weeks. They attend the Festival concerts as well as rehearsals.

Catalogue and applications for admission can be secured from Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

Cir. (D 81,111) (S 88,210)

This Clipping From
GREENSBORO, N. C.
NEWS
MAR 21 1955

MUSIC

BY HENRY S. WOOTTON JR.

BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER: The Boston Symphony Orchestra has announced plans for its Summer School of Music, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood. The school will open on July 4 for a six-week session, its thirtieth. Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony, will again serve as the Director. Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the orchestra, will serve as Assistant Director while Aaron Copland is in Europe on leave of absence, his first since the school was founded in 1940. Boris Blacher, the German composer and Director of the Hochschule for Musik in Berlin will come to this country for the first time to teach composition. Roger Sessions, the distinguished American composer will be associated with him in the composition department. Each of these composers has received a commission for a work to celebrate the orchestra's 75th anniversary in the season of 1955-56.

The Berkshire Music Center student orchestra, for which auditions are now being held, and the conducting class will be directed by Leonard Bernstein with the help of Seymour Lipkin. Orchestra sections and Chamber Music will be under the direction of the Principals of the Boston Symphony. Richard Burgin and William Kroll head the Chamber Music Department with Jean Bedetti, Ruth Posselt and members from the orchestra. Hugh Ross will again head the Choral Department. Boris Goldovsky will return to head the Opera Department, assisted by Sarah Caldwell and Paul Ulanowsky.

Ingolf Dahl will also return to Tanglewood to head the Study Group, assisted by Karl Kohn and Florence Dunn. The Study Group offers a course of general music study for those active in community music, for music educators and for amateurs. Members of the Study Group take part in the Festival Chorus which participates in the Boston Symphony concerts at Tanglewood. The Study Group accepts students for two, four or six weeks. The Berkshire Festival concerts are a central part of the Music Center studies, and all students may attend the concerts as well as rehearsals. Catalogue and applications for admission can be secured from Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Massachusetts.

SHARON, CONN
NEWS
3/17/55

BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER 13TH SESSION OF SCHOOL AT TANGLEWOOD

Boston Symphony Orchestra announces plans for its Summer School of Music, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, which will open on July 4 for a six-week session, its thirteenth. Charles Munch, the Conductor of the Boston Symphony will again serve as Director. Richard Burgin, Concertmaster and Associate Conductor of the Orchestra, will serve as Assistant Director while Aaron Copland is in Europe on leave of absence, his first since the school was founded in 1940. Boris Blacher, the German composer and Director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin will come to this Country for the first time to teach composition. Roger Sessions, the distinquished American composer will be associated with him in the composition department. Each of these composers has received a commission for a work to celebrate the Orchestra's 75th anniversary in the season of 1955-56.

The Berkshire Music Center student orchestra, for which auditions are now being held, and the conducting class will be directed by Leonard Bernstein with the help of Seymour Lipkin. Orchestra Sections and Chamber Music will be under the direction of the Principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

This Clipping From QUINCY, MASS.
PATRIOT LEDGER
MAR 23 1955

Music Festival Of MSFWC At N.E. Mutual

Mrs. Arthur L. Thayer of Everett Street, Rockland, chairman of the division of music of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs, announces that the annual music festival will be held at New England Mutual Hall, Boston, tomorrow from 10:30 until 3:30 o'clock.

This festival is open to the public. The program will open with a lecture on, "Music Training in America and the Responsibilities Involved" by Harrison Keller, president of the New England Conservatory of Music. This will be followed by a program of vocal and instrumental music given by the scholarship winners; the Federation Choral Society, under the direction of Mrs. Thayer; and a talk by Thomas Perry Jr., manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on, "The Symphony in it's Community."

In addition to the musical program in the afternoon, Gilbert Merrill, assistant director of education at the Museum of Science in Boston, will speak on, "The Science of Sound;" Miss Iva Dee Hiatt, choral director of Smith College, Northampton, will speak on "Music in the Air—The story of college girls who sang their way from London to Istanbul;" and Judge Vincent Mottola of Boston, president of the New England Conservatory of Music Alumni Association, will speak on, "Music and it's Many Influences."

The session will close with a 20-minute concert by members of the Belmont High School a cappella choir.

❧ ❧ ❧

[redacted]

Cir. (D 296,991) (S 352,103)

This Clipping From
ST. LOUIS, MO.
GLOBE-DEMOCRAT

MAR 25 1955

IN OUR TOWN

By BOB GODDARD

WHEN ARTUR RUBINSTEIN, who'll be piano soloist with our symphony orchestra this week-end, moved his family to America and Hollywood, motion picture companies began beating a fast path to his door. For his first film he received the record sum of $85,000 for the three days it took to put Rachmaninoff's Second Piano Concerto on the sound track of "I've Always Loved You." Subsequently Rubinstein also recorded the Leith Stevens Concerto for "Night Song" and in "Song of Love" played all the selections coming from the fingers of Paul Henreid in the role of Robert Schumann. This week-end's concerts, which mark the close of the orchestra's diamond anniversary season, are tomorrow night and Sunday afternoon in Kiel Opera House.

★

Teen Tunes: Frank Sinatra, accompanied by the Nuggets, has a rhythm ball with "Two Hearts" (Capitol), paired with "From the Bottom to the Top." . . . And you'd better keep your ears on Steve Clayton, a vocal newcomer, who makes a fine ballad debut on the Columbia label with "Aladdin's Lamp" and "Where You Go, Go I." . . . The Stargazers have a lot of good old-fashioned fun, 1920 vintage, with "Somebody" and "No More" (London), on which they're backed up by a banjo orchestra, of all things! . . . Betty Madigan hasn't had a big hit since her "Joey" last year, but she may have it now with "Wheels of Love" (MGM). Flip is "A Salute." . . . Lorry Raine's "Talk It Over With Your Heart" and "Show Me the Way to Forget You" (Dot) are pretty as a picture. You'll be hearing 'em. . . Album Corner: Tony Bennett, who's usually in a rhythmic groove on his single platters, switches to a mellow ballad mood on "Cloud Seven" (Columbia), limelighting a fine collection of standards, including "Darn That Dream" and "My Reverie."

★

THOUGHT FOR TODAY: A bachelor never gets around to getting married—he just gets around.

★

Add Snappy Dressers in Our Town: Richard Quinn of Allen Industries . . . Charles E. Abele of C. T. Corporation System . . . Audrey King of Marsh Stencil Co., Belleville . . . Jim Deiters of Union Electric.

★

NOTE IN VARIETY magazine that Las Vegas is not the only place that pays outlandish night club salaries. Kay Starr will get $12,500 a week for a two-week engagement at the new Fontainebleau Hotel in Miami Beach, Fla., starting Monday.

★

Floor shows are no more at the Zodiac stop the Chase, at least for a while. Straight Dixieland will now prevail, and to do it up right Joe Schirmer has augmented his group, now known as the Bourbon Street Seven.

★

INTERESTING HOW big things come of ideas which start quietly and in a small way. Back in 1946 a little girl named Fern Waldman died of leukemia at St. Louis Children's Hospital. Fern's mother, Mrs. Meyer Waldman, 5762 Kingsbury, determined to do what she could to provide for research in this form of cancer affecting children. She began by getting her friends together for a benefit card party. The idea caught on and in nine years Mrs. Waldman's annual card parties have been the means of collecting $23,886 for research which is carried on at St. Louis Children's Hospital under the direction of Dr. Jean V. Cooke. Some of the money goes, too, to care needed by indigent children with cancer. This year's benefit all games party for the Fern Waldman Memorial Fund is slated for Monday at 1 p. m. at the Kings-Way. A contribution of $1 gets you a ticket, as everything for the party is being donated. If you can't go, maybe you'd like to send in a contribution anyway to Mrs. Waldman.

★

Add Look-Alikes: Bob Hope and Floyd Friedman of Clayton.

★

Poetic thought from localite Don Fanetti: "The eyes that over cocktails seem so sweet may be less alluring over shredded wheat."

★

TIP TO TALENT: For serious young musicians there's still time to send in an application to compete for the $300 Tanglewood scholarship that's awarded each year by the Women's Association of the Symphony Society. The scholarship includes room and board and a six-week course at the Berkshire Music Center. Requirements for entering: You must be a resident of Greater St. Louis, between the ages of 18 and 25, with a general education and with plans to make music your profession. It's for orchestral instruments only. Send your application to Mrs. Kenneth M. Davis, [illegible] Wydown, by Monday.

★

PLACES TO GO: Fish fry today from 5 to 8 p.m. at Sacred Heart School cafeteria, Jefferson and St. Denis, Florissant . . . Biblical drama, "The Prodigal Son," tonight at 7:30 at Brother Ben's Church, 3610 Grandel sq. . . . Variety Show and dance tomorrow at 8 p.m. at Wellston Legion Post, Idadale and Kienlen . . . Old-fashioned country auction starting at 6:30 p.m. tomorrow at Holy Name Society of St. Francis of Assisi Parish Hall, Telegraph and Yaeger roads . . . Spring show by Choral Club of North St. Louis Gymnastic Society today and tomorrow at 8 p.m. at their auditorium, Twentieth and Salisbury . . . Play, "January Thaw," tonight at 8 at Belleville, Ill., Township High School.

Boston Symphony's Tanglewood Bill

TRIBUNE MAR 27

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

The Boston Symphony Orchestra has announced full details of its eighteen concerts in this summer's Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. All will be held on Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons under Charles Munch and guest conductors. The first six will be played by a chamber orchestra in the Theater-Concert Hall, offering the following programs:

Friday, July 8: Sinfonia from Easter Cantata and Suite No. 2, Bach; Orpheus, Stravinsky; "Prague" Symphony, Mozart. Saturday, July 9, Thor Johnson conducting: Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12, Handel; Symphonie Concertante, Haydn; "Der Schwanendreher," Hindemith; Symphony No. 86, Haydn. Sunday, July 10: Mass in B minor, Bach, with Harvard and Radcliffe choruses.

Friday, July 15, Mozart program with Leonard Bernstein as conductor and pianist: "Don Giovanni" Overture, "Linz" Symphony, Piano Concerto (K. 453), arias (Jennie Tourel). Saturday, July 16: "Anacreon" Overture, Cherubini; Cello Concerto, Boccherini (Samuel Mayes); Concerto Grosso for Four Violins and Gloria (with chorus), Vivaldi. Sunday, July 17: Suite from "Dardanus," Rameau; "Pelleas et Melisande" Suite, Faure; Pavane, Faure; Serenade, Milhaud; Symphony No. 4, Honegger.

The full orchestra will play the following twelve programs during the remaining four festival week ends in the Music Shed:

Friday, July 22: Beethoven program: "Coriolanus" Overture, Violin Concerto (Isaac Stern), Symphony No. 7. Saturday, July 23: Pierre Monteux conducting: Passacaglia, Bach-Respighi; Symphony No. 2, Beethoven; "Black Maskers" Suite, Sessions; Death and Transfiguration, Strauss. Sunday, July 24: Beethoven, Symphonies Nos. 1, 4 and 6.

Friday, July 29: Water Music, Handel; Symphony No. 4, Schumann; "Prayers of Kierkegaard," Barber (soloist, Leontyne Price); Symphony No. 4, Brahms. Saturday, July 30: Beethoven, "Egmont" Overture, "Emperor" Piano Concerto (Rudolf Serkin), Symphony No. 3. Sunday, July 31, Mr. Monteux conducting: Brahms, Academic Overture, Double Concerto (Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky), Symphony No. 1.

Friday, Aug. 5, Leonard Bernstein conducting: Beethoven, Missa Solemnis, in memory of Serge Koussevitzky. Saturday, Aug. 6: "Fidelio," Act II, Beethoven; "Goetterdaemmerung" excerpts, Wagner (Margaret Harshaw and other soloists). Sunday, Aug. 7: Beethoven, Symphonies Nos. [illegible] and [illegible], Piano Concerto No. 4 (Eugene Istomin).

Friday, Aug. 12—Haydn Variations, Brahms; "Schelomo," Bloch (Piatigorsky); La Mer, Debussy; "Daphnis et Chloe" Suite No. 2, Ravel. Saturday, Aug. 13, Mr. Monteux conducting—"Flying Dutchman" Overture, Wagner; Symphony No. 3, Brahms; Three Nocturnes, Debussy; "Rosenkavalier" Suite, Strauss. Sunday, Aug. 14—Beethoven, "Leonore" Overture No. 3, Symphony No. 9, with chorus and soloists.

Chamber music concerts largely devoted to Beethoven, will be given on the festival's six Wednesday nights, beginning July 6. As usual, the Berkshire Music Center will give one or more opera productions and concerts by various student ensembles during this period. Full information about festival tickets and about the center may be obtained from the Festival Office at Symphony Hall, Boston 15.

• • •

Monteux' 80th Birthday

Pierre Monteux will celebrate his eightieth birthday on April 4 by conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra that evening in a pension fund benefit concert in Boston's Symphony Hall. He will introduce two works composed in honor of the occasion, Igor Stravinsky's "Greeting Prelude" and Darius Milhaud's "Pensee Amicale." The rest of the program will be devoted to Beethoven, with Leon Fleisher contributing his services as piano soloist.

• • •

Cir. (D 503,999) (S 1,096,738)

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES

MAR 30 1955

TANGLEWOOD GROUPS TO OFFER BEETHOVEN

The six Wednesday night chamber music concerts of the Berkshire Festival will be given over to Beethoven in the summer. Thus they will intensify the concentration on that composer, for six of the orchestral concerts also will be all-Beethoven.

The Kroll String Quartet will give the first of those chamber music concerts on July 6. The quartets it will play will be Op. 18, No. 4; Op. 95, and Op. 131. On July 13 the Beaux Arts Trio will play the trios Op. 1, No. 3; Op. 70, No. 1, and Op. 97, the "Archduke."

On July 20 Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin will play the violin and piano sonatas Op. 12, No. 2; the "Spring," and Op. 30, No. 2. On July 27 the New Music String Quartet will play the quartets Op. 18, No. 2; Op. 127, and Op. 132.

On Aug. 3 Rudolf Serkin will play the piano sonatas Op. 10, Nos. 2 and 3, and Op. 106, the "Hammerklavier." On Aug. 10 Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz will play the five 'cello and piano sonatas.

INFORMATION OBSCURED

Cir. (D 643,985) (S 1,124,787)

This Clipping From PHILADELPHIA, PA.
INQUIRER

MAR 13 1955

Bostonians Plan School

Boston Symphony Orchestra announces its 13th summer school of music, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, which will open July 4 for six weeks. Charles Munch will again serve as director, with Richard Burgin as assistant director while Aaron Copland is in Europe on leave of absence.

Boris Blacher, director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin, will teach composition with Roger Sessions. Both composers have received commissions for works to mark the Orchestra's 75th anniversary in 1955-56.

The Berkshire Music Center student orchestra, for which auditions are now being held, and the conducting class will be directed by Leonard Bernstein and Seymour Lipkin. Orchestra sections and chamber music will be led by principals of the Boston Symphony. Hugh Ross will again head the choral department; Boris Goldovsky, the opera department.

Ingolf Dahl, will again head the Tanglewood Study Group, which offers general music study for those active in community music, for music educators and amateurs. Members of the Study Group take part in the Festival Chorus and may enroll for two, four or six weeks. They attend the Festival concerts as well as rehearsals.

Catalogue and applications for admission can be secured from Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

Cir. (D 81,111) (S 88,210)

This Clipping From
GREENSBORO, N. C.
NEWS

MAR 21 1955

MUSIC

BY HENRY S. WOOTTON JR.

BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER: The Boston Symphony Orchestra has announced plans for its Summer School of Music, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood. The school will open on July 4 for a six-week session, its thirtieth. Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony, will again serve as the Director. Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the orchestra, will serve as Assistant Director while Aaron Copland is in Europe on leave of absence, his first since the school was founded in 1940. Boris Blacher, the German composer and Director of the Hochschule for Musik in Berlin will come to this country for the first time to teach composition. Roger Sessions, the distinguished American composer will be associated with him in the composition department. Each of these composers has received a commission for a work to celebrate the orchestra's 75th anniversary in the season of 1955-56.

The Berkshire Music Center student orchestra, for which auditions are now being held, and the conducting class will be directed by Leonard Bernstein with the help of Seymour Lipkin. Orchestra sections and Chamber Music will be under the direction of the Principals of the Boston Symphony. Richard Burgin and William Kroll head the Chamber Music Department with Jean Bedetti, Ruth Posselt and members from the orchestra. Hugh Ross will again head the Choral Department. Boris Goldovsky will return to head the Opera Department, assisted by Sarah Caldwell and Paul Ulanowsky.

Ingolf Dahl will also return to Tanglewood to head the Study Group, assisted by Karl Kohn and Florence Dunn. The Study Group offers a course of general music study for those active in community music, for music educators and for amateurs. Members of the Study Group take part in the Festival Chorus which participates in the Boston Symphony concerts at Tanglewood. The Study Group accepts students for two, four or six weeks. The Berkshire Festival concerts are a central part of the Music Center studies, and all students may attend the concerts as well as rehearsals. Catalogue and applications for admission can be secured from Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Massachusetts.

SHARON, CONN
NEWS
3/17/55

BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER 13TH SESSION OF SCHOOL AT TANGLEWOOD

Boston Symphony Orchestra announces plans for its Summer School of Music, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, which will open on July 4 for a six-week session, its thirteenth. Charles Munch, the Conductor of the Boston Symphony will again serve as Director. Richard Burgin, Concertmaster and Associate Conductor of the Orchestra, will serve as Assistant Director while Aaron Copland is in Europe on leave of absence, his first since the school was founded in 1940. Boris Blacher, the German composer and Director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin will come to this Country for the first time to teach composition. Roger Sessions, the distinquished American composer will be associated with him in the composition department. Each of these composers has received a commission for a work to celebrate the Orchestra's 75th anniversary in the season of 1955-56.

The Berkshire Music Center student orchestra, for which auditions are now being held, and the conducting class will be directed by Leonard Bernstein with the help of Seymour Lipkin. Orchestra Sections and Chamber Music will be under the direction of the Principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

This Clipping From QUINCY, MASS.
PATRIOT LEDGER

MAR 23 1955

Music Festival Of MSFWC At N.E. Mutual

Mrs. Arthur L. Thayer of Everett Street, Rockland, chairman of the division of music of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs, announces that the annual music festival will be held at New England Mutual Hall, Boston, tomorrow from 10:30 until 3:30 o'clock.

This festival is open to the public. The program will open with a lecture on, "Music Training in America and the Responsibilities Involved" by Harrison Keller, president of the New England Conservatory of Music. This will be followed by a program of vocal and instrumental music given by the scholarship winners; the Federation Choral Society, under the direction of Mrs. Thayer; and a talk by Thomas Perry Jr., manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on, "The Symphony in it's Community."

In addition to the musical program in the afternoon, Gilbert Merrill, assistant director of education at the Museum of Science in Boston, will speak on, "The Science of Sound;" Miss Iva Dee Hiatt, choral director of Smith College, Northampton, will speak on "Music in the Air—The story of college girls who sang their way from London to Istanbul;" and Judge Vincent Mottola of Boston, president of the New England Conservatory of Music Alumni Association, will speak on, "Music and it's Many Influences."

The session will close with a 20-minute concert by members of the Belmont High School a cappella choir.

* * *

Cir. (D 296,991) (S 352,103)

This Clipping From
ST. LOUIS, MO.
GLOBE-DEMOCRAT

MAR 25 1955

IN OUR TOWN

By BOB GODDARD

WHEN ARTUR RUBINSTEIN, who'll be piano soloist with our symphony orchestra this week-end, moved his family to America and Hollywood, motion picture companies began beating a fast path to his door. For his first film he received the record sum of $85,000 for the three days it took to put Rachmaninoff's Second Piano Concerto on the sound track of "I've Always Loved You." Subsequently Rubinstein also recorded the Leith Stevens Concerto for "Night Song" and in "Song of Love" played all the selections coming from the fingers of Paul Henreid in the role of Robert Schumann. This week-end's concerts, which mark the close of the orchestra's diamond anniversary season, are tomorrow night and Sunday afternoon in Kiel Opera House.

★

Teen Tunes: Frank Sinatra, accompanied by the Nuggets, has a rhythm ball with "Two Hearts" (Capitol), paired with "From the Bottom to the Top." . . . And you'd better keep your ears on Steve Clayton, a vocal newcomer, who makes a fine ballad debut on the Columbia label with "Aladdin's Lamp" and "Where You Go, Go I." . . . The Stargazers have a lot of good old-fashioned fun, 1920 vintage, with "Somebody" and "No More" (London), on which they're backed up by a banjo orchestra, of all things! . . . Betty Madigan hasn't had a big hit since her "Joey" last year, but she may have it now with "Wheels of Love" (MGM). Flip is "A Salute." . . . Lorry Raine's "Talk It Over With Your Heart" and "Show Me the Way to Forget You" (Dot) are pretty as a picture. You'll be hearing 'em. . . Album Corner: Tony Bennett, who's usually in a rhythmic groove on his single platters, switches to a mellow ballad mood on "Cloud Seven" (Columbia), limelighting a fine collection of standards, including "Darn That Dream" and "My Reverie."

★

THOUGHT FOR TODAY: A bachelor never gets around to getting married—he just gets around.

★

Add Snappy Dressers in Our Town: Richard Quinn of Allen Industries. . . Charles E. Abele of C. T. Corporation System. . . Audrey King of Marsh Stencil Co., Belleville. . Jim Delters of Union Electric.

★

NOTE IN VARIETY magazine that Las Vegas is not the only place that pays outlandish night club salaries. Kay Starr will get $12,500 a week for a two-week engagement at the new Fontainebleau Hotel in Miami Beach, Fla., starting Monday.

★

Floor shows are no more at the Zodiac atop the Chase, at least for a while. Straight Dixieland will now prevail, and to do it up right Joe Schirmer has augmented his group, now known as the Bourbon Street Seven.

★

INTERESTING HOW big things come of ideas which start quietly and in a small way. Back in 1946 a little girl named Fern Waldman died of leukemia at St. Louis Children's Hospital. Fern's mother, Mrs. Meyer Waldman, 5762 Kingsbury, determined to do what she could to provide for research in this form of cancer affecting children. She began by getting her friends together for a benefit card party. The idea caught on and in nine years, Mrs. Waldman's annual card parties have been the means of collecting $23,806 for research which is carried on at St. Louis Children's Hospital under the direction of Dr. Jean V. Cooke. Some of the money goes, too, to care needed by indigent children with cancer. This year's benefit all games party for the Fern Waldman Memorial Fund is slated for Monday at 1 p. m. at the Kings-Way. A contribution of $1 gets you a ticket, as everything for the party is being donated. If you can't go, maybe you'd like to send in a contribution anyway to Mrs. Waldman.

★

Add Look-Alikes: Bob Hope and Floyd Friedman of Clayton.

★

Poetic thought from localite Don Fanetti: "The eyes that over cocktails seem so sweet may be less alluring over shredded wheat."

★

TIP TO TALENT: For serious young musicians there's still time to send in an application to compete for the $300 Tanglewood scholarship that's awarded each year by the Women's Association of the Symphony Society. The scholarship includes room and board and a six-week course at the Berkshire Music Center. Requirements for entering: You must be a resident of Greater St. Louis, between the ages of 18 and 25, with a general education and with plans to make music your profession. It's for orchestral instruments only. Send your application to Mrs. Kenneth M. Davis, 6866 Wydown, by Monday.

★

PLACES TO GO: Fish fry today from 5 to 8 p.m. at Sacred Heart School cafeteria, Jefferson and St. Denis, Florissant . . . Biblical drama, "The Prodigal Son," tonight at 7:30 at Brother Ben's Church, 3610 Grandel sq. . . . Variety Show and dance tomorrow at 8 p.m. at Wellston Legion Post, Idadale and Kienlen . . . Old-fashioned country auction starting at 6:30 p.m. tomorrow at Holy Name Society of St. Francis of Assisi Parish Hall, Telegraph and Yaeger roads . . . Spring show by Choral Club of North St. Louis Gymnastic Society today and tomorrow at 8 p.m. at their auditorium, Twentieth and Salisbury . . . Play, "January Thaw," tonight at 8 at Belleville, Ill., Township High School.

Boston Symphony's Tanglewood Bill

TRIBUNE MAR 27

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

The Boston Symphony Orchestra has announced full details of its eighteen concerts in this summer's Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. All will be held on Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons under Charles Munch and guest conductors. The first six will be played by a chamber orchestra in the Theater-Concert Hall, offering the following programs:

Friday, July 8: Sinfonia from Easter Cantata and Suite No. 2, Bach; Orpheus, Stravinsky; "Prague" Symphony, Mozart. Saturday, July 9, Thor Johnson conducting: Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12, Handel; Symphonie Concertante, Haydn; "Der Schwanendreher," Hindemith; Symphony No. 8, Haydn. Sunday, July 10; Mass in B minor, Bach, with Harvard and Radcliffe choruses.

Friday, July 15, Mozart program with Leonard Bernstein as conductor and pianist: "Don Giovanni" Overture, "Linz" Symphony, Piano Concerto (K. 453), arias (Jennie Tourel). Saturday, July 16: "Anacreon" Overture, Cherubini; Cello Concerto, Boccherini (Samuel Mayes); Concerto Grosso for Four Violins and Gloria (with chorus), Vivaldi. Sunday, July 17: Suite from "Dardanus," Rameau; "Pelleas et Melisande" Suite, Faure; Pavane, Faure; Serenade, Milhaud; Symphony No. 4, Honegger.

The full orchestra will play the following twelve programs during the remaining four festival week ends in the Music Shed:

Friday, July 22: Beethoven program: "Coriolanus" Overture, Violin Concerto (Isaac Stern), Symphony No. 7. Saturday, July 23; Pierre Monteux conducting: Passacaglia, Bach-Respighi; Symphony No. 2, Beethoven; "Black Maskers" Suite, Sessions; Death and Transfiguration, Strauss. Sunday, July 24; Beethoven, Symphonies Nos. 1, 4 and 6.

Friday, July 29: Water Music, Handel; Symphony No. 4, Schumann; "Prayers of Kierkegaard," Barber (soloist, Leontyne Price); Symphony No. 4, Brahms. Saturday, July 30: Beethoven, "Egmont" Overture, "Emperor" Piano Concerto (Rudolf Serkin), Symphony No. 3. Sunday, July 31, Mr. Monteux conducting: Brahms, Academic Overture, Double Concerto (Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky), Symphony No. 1.

Friday, Aug. 5, Leonard Bernstein conducting: Beethoven, Missa Solemnis, in memory of Serge Koussevitzky. Saturday, Aug. 6: "Fidelio," Act II, Beethoven; "Goetterdaemmerung" excerpts, Wagner (Margaret Harshaw and other soloists). Sunday, Aug. 7; Beethoven, Symphonies Nos. 5 and 8, Piano Concerto No. 4 (Eugene Istomin).

Friday, Aug. 12 — Haydn Variations, Brahms; "Schelomo," Bloch (Piatigorsky); La Mer, Debussy; "Daphnis et Chloe" Suite No. 2, Ravel. Saturday, Aug. 13, Mr. Monteux conducting — "Flying Dutchman" Overture, Wagner; Symphony No. 3, Brahms; Three Nocturnes, Debussy; "Rosenkavalier" Suite, Strauss, Sunday, Aug. 14 —Beethoven, "Leonore" Overture No. 3, Symphony No. 9, with chorus and soloists.

Chamber music concerts largely devoted to Beethoven, will be given on the festival's six Wednesday nights, beginning July 6. As usual, the Berkshire Music Center will give one or more opera productions and concerts by various student ensembles during this period. Full information about festival tickets and about the center may be obtained from the Festival Office at Symphony Hall, Boston 15.

• • •

Monteux' 80th Birthday

Pierre Monteux will celebrate his eightieth birthday on April 4 by conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra that evening in a pension fund benefit concert in Boston's Symphony Hall. He will introduce two works composed in honor of the occasion, Igor Stravinsky's "Greeting Prelude" and Darius Milhaud's "Pensee Amicale." The rest of the program will be devoted to Beethoven, with Leon Fleisher contributing his services as piano soloist.

Cir. (D 503,999) (S 1,096,738)

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES

MAR 30

TANGLEWOOD GROUPS TO OFFER BEETHOVEN

The six Wednesday night chamber music concerts of the Berkshire Festival will be given over to Beethoven in the summer. Thus they will intensify the concentration on that composer, for six of the orchestral concerts also will be all-Beethoven.

The Kroll String Quartet will give the first of those chamber music concerts on July 6. The quartets it will play will be Op. 18, No. 4; Op. 95, and Op. 131. On July 13 the Beaux Arts Trio will play the trios Op. 1, No. 3; Op. 70, No. 1, and Op. 97, the "Archduke."

On July 20 Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin will play the violin and piano sonatas Op. 12, No. 2; the "Spring," and Op. 30, No. 2. On July 27 the New Music String Quartet will play the quartets Op. 18, No. 2; Op. 127, and Op. 132.

On Aug. 3 Rudolf Serkin will play the piano sonatas Op. 10, Nos. 2 and 3, and Op. 106, the "Hammerklavier." On Aug. 10 Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz will play the five 'cello and piano sonatas.

Cir. (D 503,999) (S 1,096,738)

This Clipping From
NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES

MAR 27 [illegible]

BERKSHIRE LISTS MUSIC SCHEDULE

Six All-Beethoven Programs Will Be Played at Fete—First Takes Place July 22

Six of the programs to be played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival this summer will be devoted wholly to Beethoven.

To give further emphasis to Beethoven, a seventh program will consist of a concert version of Act II of his "Fidelio" and excerpts from Wagner's "Goetterdaemmerung" with Margaret Harshaw.

The first all-Beethoven program, on July 22, will consist of the "Coriolan" Overture, the Violin Concerto played by Isaac Stern and the Seventh Symphony. The second, on July 24, will consist of the First, Fourth and Sixth Symphonies. The third, on July 30, will include the "Egmont" Overture, the Fifth Piano Concerto played by Rudolph Serkin and the "Eroica" Symphony.

The fourth will consist of a performance Aug. 5 of the "Missa Solemnis" in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, who was the guiding spirit of the festival for many years. The memorial will be led by Leonard Bernstein.

At the fifth Beethoven program on Aug. 7 the works will be the Fifth and Eighth Symphonies and the Fourth Piano Concerto played by Eugene Istomin. The sixth will close the festival on Aug. 14. It will consist of the "Leonore" Overture No. 3 and the Ninth Symphony.

The chamber orchestra concerts of July 8, 9, 10, 15, 16 and 17 will include Stravinsky's "Orpheus," Hindemith's "Der Schwanendreher" Honegger's Fourth Symphony and Milhaud's Serenade among its contemporary selections. There also will be a performance of Bach's B minor Mass, Mozart's "Linz" and "Prague" Symphonies, an all-Italian program and works by Haydn, Handel, Rameau and Fauré.

Non-Beethoven works in the full symphony concerts in the Shed will include Sessions' "Black Maskers," Strauss' "Death and Transfiguration," Handel's "Water Music," Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," Brahms' First and Fourth Symphonies and his Double Concerto with Mr. Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as the soloists, Debussy's "La Mer" and Ravel's "Daphnis et Chloe."

Cir. (D [illegible])

This Clipping From
WORCESTER, MASS.
GAZETTE

MAR 26 1955

Symphony Orch. Schedule For Tanglewood

There will be six weekends of concerts next Summer by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival, at Tanglewood, Lenox.

Charles Munch announces that the concerts will be on Friday and Saturday evenings and on Sunday afternoons from July 8 to Aug. 14. There will be recitals of chamber music on the previous Wednesday evenings, beginning July 6.

These recitals will be devoted to the music of Beethoven and the concerts in the Music Shed by the full orchestra will encompass the principal orchestral and choral works for Beethoven.

The first two weekends will be devoted to the "Bach-Mozart" concerts by an orchestra of chamber proportions in the theater as follows:

Friday, July 8: Bach—Sinfonia from the "Easter" Cantata; Bach — Suite No. 2 for Flute and Strings; Stravinsky—"Orpheus"; Mozard— "Prague" Symphony.

Saturday, July 9: Handel—Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12; Haydn—Symphonie Concertante; Hindemith—"Der Schwanendreher"; Haydn—Symphony No. 98; Guest Conductor, Thor Johnson.

Sunday, July 10: Bach—Mass in B minor, with the choruses from Harvard and Radcliffe.

Friday, July 15: Mozart program, including "Don Giovanni" Overture, "Linz" Symphony, Piano Concerto, K. 453, and arias sung by Jennie Tourel, Leonard Bernstein, Guest Conductor and piano soloist.

Saturday, July 16: Program of Italian music, including Cherubini — "Anacreon" Overture; Boccherini—Cello Concerto (Samuel Mayes); Vivaldi—Concerto Grosso for Four Violins; Vivaldi—Gloria (with chorus).

Sunday, July 17: French program including Rameau Suite from "Dardanus," Faure—"Pelleas and Melisande" Suite; Faure—Pavane; Milhaud—Serenade; Honegger—Fourth Symphony.

The concerts in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra:

Friday, July 22: Beethoven—Overture to "Coriolan," violin concerto (Isaac Stern), and Seventh Symphony.

Saturday, July 23: Bach-Respighi—Pasacaglia; Beethoven—Second Symphony; Sessions—Suite from "The Black Maskers"; Strauss — "Death and Transfiguration"; guest conductor—Pierre Monteux.

Sunday, July 24: Beethoven—First, Fourth and Sixth Symphonies.

Friday, July 29: Handel — "Water Music"; Schumann — Fourth Symphony; Barber — "Prayers of Kierkegaard" with Leontyne Price; Brahms — Fourth Symphony.

Saturday, July 30: Beethoven—"Egmont" Overture, Fifth Piano Concerto" (Rudolf Serkin) and "Eroica Symphony.

Sunday, July 31: Brahms — Academic Overture, Concerto for Violin and Cello (Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky), Symphony No. 1; Guest Conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Friday, Aug. 5: Beethoven—Missa Solemnis, conducted by Leonard Bernstein in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

Saturday, Aug. 6, Beethoven—Fidelio, Act II: Wagner—Excerpts from "The Dusk of the Gods" (soloists to include Margaret Harshaw).

Sunday, Aug. 7: Beethoven Fifth and Eighth Symphonies and Fourth Piano Concerto (Eugene Istomin).

Friday, Aug. 12: Brahms—Haydn Variations; Bloch—"Schelomo" (Piatigorsky); Debussy—"La Mer"; Ravel—"Daphnis and Chloe," Second Suite.

Saturday, Aug. 13: Wagner—"Flying Dutchman" Overture; Brahms—Third Symphony; Debussy —Three Nocturnes; Strauss — "Der Rosenkavalier" Suite; Guest Conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Sunday, Aug. 14: Beethoven—Overture, "Leonore," No. 3 and Ninth Symphony (with chorus and soloists).

Ticket information or information about the Berkshire Music Center, this orchestra's music school at Tanglewood, may be obtained at the Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

Cir. (D 13,210)

This Clipping From
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT

MAR 24 1955

Smith Glee Club Head Named to Tanglewood

Miss Iva Dee Hiatt, who will direct the Smith college Glee club in a combined concert with the Williams Glee club Sunday afternoon at 3 in Chapin hall, has been appointed to the staff of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, for this summer. The Williams Glee club is directed by Walter L. Nollner, assistant professor of music.

Miss Hiatt will be one of three staff members of the choral department at Tanglewood. One of the other members will be Hugh Ross, conductor of the Schola Cantorum in New York city, and for some time head of the choral department at Tanglewood.

Miss Hiatt and her two colleagues will prepare choruses for performances of large works with the Boston Symphony orchestra.

In addition, Miss Hiatt will be busy coaching student choral conductors, and conducting a small expert choir for a number of Tanglewood performances.

Miss Hiatt was graduated with honors from the University of California, after having studied with Ernst Bloch, Roger Sessions and Manfred Bukofzer. Randall Thompson selected her as first chorister of the University of California chorus, and later she became its first student conducting under Edward Lawton.

Cir. (D 26,991)

This Clipping From
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE

MAR 26 1955

Beethoven Festival

Festival Program Released; Bernstein, Monteux Coming

Charles Munch today announced the programs in full for the Berkshire Festival to be given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, next summer.

The Festival will consist of six weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from July 8 to August 14, each weekend preceded by a recital of chamber music on the previous Wednesday evening, beginning July 6. These recitals will be devoted to the music of Beethoven and the concerts in the Music Shed by the full orchestra will encompass the principal orchestral and choral works of Beethoven.

The first two weekends will be devoted to the Bach-Mozart concerts by an orchestra of chamber proportions in the theatre as follows:

Fri., July 8: Bach—Sinfonia from the "Easter" Cantata; Bach—Suite No. 2 for Flute and Strings; Stravinsky — "Orpheus"; Mozart—"Prague" Symphony.

Sat., July 9: Handel — Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12; Haydn—Symphonie Concertante; Hindemith—"Der Schwanendreher"; Haydn—Symphony No. 98; Guest Conductor, Thor Johnson.

Sun., July 10: Bach—Mass in B minor, with the choruses from Harvard and Radcliffe.

Fri., July 15: Mozart program, including "Don Giovanni" Overture, "Linz" Symphony, Piano Concerto, K. 453, and arias sung by Jennie Tourel; Leonard Bernstein, guest conductor and piano soloist.

Sat., July 16: Program of Italian music, including Cherubini—"Anacreon" Overture; Boccherini—Cello Concerto (Samuel Mayes); Vivaldi—Concerto Grosso for Four Violins; Vivaldi—Gloria (with chorus).

Sun., July 17: French program including Rameau Suite from "Dardanus," Faure—"Pelleas and Melisande" Suite; Faure — Pavane; Milhaud — Serenade; Honegger — Fourth Symphony.

Music Shed Concerts

The concerts in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra:

Fri., July 22: Beethoven—Overture to "Coriolan," Violin Concerto (Isaac Stern), and Seventh Symphony.

Sat., July 23: Bach-Respighi — Passacaglia; Beethoven — Second Symphony; Sessions — Suite from "The Black Maskers"; Strauss — "Death and Transfiguration"; guest conductor — Pierre Monteux.

Sun., July 24: Beethoven — First Fourth and Sixth Symphonies.

Fri., July 29: Handel — "Water Music"; Schumann — Fourth Symphony; Barber—"Prayers of Kierkegaard" (with Leontyne Price); Brahms — Fourth Symphony.

Sat., July 30: Beethoven — "Egmont" Overture, Fifth Piano Concerto (Rudolf Serkin) and "Eroica" Symphony.

Sun., July 31: Brahms — Academic Overture, Concerto for Violin and Cello (Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky), Symphony No. 1; guest conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Fri., Aug. 5: Beethoven — Missa Solemnis, conducted by Leonard Bernstein in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

Sat., Aug. 6: Beethoven—Fidelio, Act II; Wagner — Excerpts from "The Dusk of the Gods' (soloists to include Margaret Harshaw).

Sun., Aug. 7: Beethoven Fifth and Eighth Symphonies and Fourth Piano Concerto (Eugene Istomin).

Fri., Aug. 12: Brahms — Haydn Variations; Bloch — "Schelomo" (Piatigorsky); Debussy — "La Mer"; Ravel — "Daphnis and Chloe," Second Suite.

Sat., Aug. 13: Wagner — "Flying Dutchman" Overture; Brahms — Third Symphony; Debussy — Three Nocturnes; Strauss — "Der Rosenkavalier" Suite; guest conductor Pierre Monteux.

Sun., Aug. 14: Beethoven — Overture, "Leonore," No. 3 and Ninth Symphony (with chorus and soloists).

Cir. (D 131,670) (S 258,529)

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD

MAR 27 1955

Complete Listing Of Berkshire Music

Charles Munch announces the progra[illegible] full for the Berkshire Festival to be given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., next summer. The Festival will consist of six weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from July 8 to August 14, each weekend preceded by a recital of chamber music on the previous Wednesday evening, beginning July 6.

The first two weekends will be devoted to the "Bach-Mozart" concerts by an orchestra of chamber proportions in the Theater as follows:

FRIDAY, JULY 8: Bach—Sinfonia from the Easter Cantata; Bach—Suite No. 2 for Flute and Strings; Stravinsky—"Orpheus;" Mozart— "Prague" Symphony.

SATURDAY, JULY 9: Handel—Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12; Haydn— Symphonie Concertante; Hindemith—"Der Schwanendreher;" Haydn— Symphony No. 98; Guest Conductor, Thor Johnson.

SUNDAY, July 15: Bach—Mass in B minor, with the choruses from Harvard and Radcliffe.

FRIDAY, JULY 15: Mozart program, including "Don Giovanni" Overture, "Linz" Symphony, Piano Concerto, K. 453, and arias sung by Jennie Tourel; Leonard Bernstein, Guest Conductor and piano soloist.

SATURDAY, JULY 16: Program of Italian music, including Cherubini — "Anacreon" Overture; Boccherini—Cello Concerto (Samuel Mayes); Vivaldi—Concerto Grosso for Four Violins; Vivaldi—Gloria (with chorus).

SUNDAY, JULY 17: French program including Rameau Suite from "Dardanus," Faure—"Pelleas and Melisande" Suite; Faure—Pavane; Milhaud—Serenade; Honegger—fourth Symphony.

The concerts in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra:

FRI., JULY 22: Beethoven—Overture to "Coriolan," Violin Concerto (Issac Stern), and Seventh Symphony.

SAT., JULY 23: Bach-Respighi—Passacaglia; Beethoven—Second Symphony; Sessions—Suite from "The Black Maskers..; Strauss — "Death and Transfiguration"; Guest Conductor—Pierre Monteux.

SUN., JULY 24: Beethoven—First, Fourth and Sixth Symphonies.

FRI., JULY 29: Handel—"Water Music"; Schumann—Fourth Symphony, Barber—"Prayers of Kierkegaard" with Leontyne Price); Brahms—Fourth Symphony.

SAT., JULY 30: Beethoven—"Egmont" Overture, Fifth Piano Concerto (Rudolf Serkin) and "Eroica" Symphony.

SUN., JULY 31: Brahms—Academic Overture, Concerto for Violin and Cello (Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky), Symphony No. 1; Guest Conductor, Pierre Monteux.

FRI., AUGUST 5: Beethoven: Missa Solemnis, conducted by Leonard Bernstein in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

SAT., AUGUST 6: Beethoven—Fidelio, Act II: Wagner—Excepts from "The Dusk of the Gods" (soloists to include Margaert Harshaw).

SUN., AUGUST 7: Beeehoven Fifth and Eighth Symphonies and Fourth Piano Concerto (Eugene Istomin).

FRI., AUGUST 12: Brahms—Hadyn Variations; Bloch—"Schelomo" (Piatigorsky); Debussy—"La Mer"; Ravel—Daphanis and Chloe", Second Suite.

SAT., AUGUST 13: Wagner—"Flying Dutchman" Overture; Brahms—Third Symphony; Debussy — Three Nocturnes;; Strauss—"Der Rosenkavalier" Suite; Guest Conductor, Pierre Monteux.

SUN., AUGUST 14: Beethoven—Overture, "Leonore", No. 3 and Ninth Symphony (with chorus and soloists).

Cir. (D 98,860)

This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN

MAR 27 1955

Beethoven Works Featured On Tanglewood Programs

Berkshire Festival Bookings Announced by Munch For Music Shed Concerts July 22-Aug. 14, Following Theater Events Starting July 8

Boston, March 26—Charles Munch announces the programs in full for the Berkshire Festival to be given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, next summer. The festival will consist of six week ends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from July 8 to Aug. 14, each week end preceded by a recital of chamber music on the previous Wednesday evening, beginning July 6.

These recitals will be devoted to the music of Beethoven and the concerts in the Music Shed by the full orchestra will encompass Beethoven's principal orchestral and choral works. The first two week ends will be devoted to the Bach-Mozart concerts by an orchestra of chamber proportions in the Theater as follows:

Theater Concerts

Fri., July 8: Bach—Sinfonia from the "Easter" Cantata; Bach—Suite No. 2 for Flute and Strings; Stravinsky—"Orpheus"; Mozart—"Prague" Symphony.

Sat., July 9: Handel—Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12; Haydn—Symphonie Concertante; Hindemith—"Der Schwanendreher"; Haydn—Symphony No. 98; guest conductor, Thor Johnson.

Sun. July 10: Bach—Mass in B minor, with the choruses from Harvard and Radcliffe.

Fri., July 15: Mozart program, including "Don Giovanni" Overture, "Linz" Symphony, Piano Concerto, K. 453, and arias sung by Jennie Tourel; Leonard Bernstein, guest conductor and piano soloist.

Sat., July 16: Program of Italian music, including Cherubini—"Anacreon" Overture; Boccherini—Cello Concerto (Samuel Mayes); Vivaldi Concerto Grosso for Four Violins; Vivaldi—Gloria (with chorus).

Sun., July 17: French program including Rameau Suite from "Dardanus," Faure—"Pelleas and Melisande" Suite; Faure—Pavane; Milhaud—Serenade; Honegger—Fourth Symphony.

Music Shed Concerts

Fri., July 22. Beethoven—Overture to "Coriolan," Violin Concerto (Isaac Stern). and Seventh Symphony.

Sat., July 23: Bach—Respighi—Passacaglia; Beethoven—Second Symphony; Sessions—Suite from "The Black Maskers"; Strauss—"Death and Transfiguration; Guest Conductor—Pierre Monteux.

Sun., July 24: Beethoven—First, Fourth and Sixth Symphonies.

Fri., July 29: Handel—"Water Music"; Schumann—Fourth Symphony; Barber—"Prayers of Kierkegaard" with Leontyne Price); Brahms—Fourth Symphony.

Sat., July 30: Beethoven—"Egmont" Overture, Fifth Piano Concerto (Rudolf Serkin) and "Eroica" Symphony.

Sun., July 31: Brahms—Academic Overture, Concerto for Violin and Cello (Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky), Symphony No. 1; guest conductor, Pierre Monteux.

August Events

Fri., Aug. 5: Beethoven—Missa Solemnis, conducted by Leonard Bernstein in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

Sat., Aug. 6: Beethoven—Fidelio, Act II; Wagner—Excerpts from "The Dusk of the Gods" (soloists to include Margaret Harshaw).

Sun., Aug. 7: Beethoven Fifth and Eighth Symphonies and Fourth Piano Concerto (Eugene Istomin).

Fri., Aug. 12: Brahms—Haydn Variations; Bloch—"Schelomo" (Piatigorsky); Debussy — "La Mer"; Ravel—"Daphnis and Chloe," Second Suite.

Sat., Aug. 13: Wagner—"Flying Dutchman" Overture; Brahms—Third Symphony; Debussy—Three Nocturnes; Strauss—"Der Rosenkavalier" Suite; guest conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Sun., Aug. 14: Beethoven—Overture, "Leonore," No. 3 and Ninth Symphony (with chorus and soloistts).

For ticket information or information about the Berkshire Music Center, this orchestra's music school at Tanglewood, address the Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

Cir. (D 46,023) (S 174,898)

This Clipping From
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
JOURNAL

MAR 27 1955

Tanglewood to Stress Beethoven

BEETHOVEN will be the featured composer of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., July 8 to Aug. 14, succeeding Berlioz who was top man there last summer.

Among the Beethoven works will be the "Missa Solemnis," to be performed in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, and a concert version of the second act of "Fidelio."

Assisting Charles Munch as guest conductors will be Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein and Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony. Soloists will include Margaret Harshaw, Leontyne Price, Jennie Tourel, Leonard Bernstein, Samuel Mayes, Isaac Stern, Gregor Piatigorsky, Rudolf Serkin and Eugene Istomin.

Some revisions have been made in the order of the concerts combining last summer's arrangements and those of previous sessions. The schedule will contain six weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturdays evenings and Sunday afternoons and a Wednesday night chamber recital. The full orchestra plays in the Music Shed, the chamber orchestra in the Theater-Concert Hall.

The first two weekends will be "Bach-Mozart" chamber proportion music starting July 8 with the following program:

Sinfonia from the "Easter" Cantata, Bach; Suite No. 2 for Flute and Strings, Bach; "Orpheus," Stravinsky; "Prague" Symphony, Mozart.

July 9—Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12, Handel; Symphonie Concertante, Haydn; "Der Schwanendreher," Hindemith; Symphony No. 98, Haydn; Thor Johnson, guest conductor.

July 10—Mass in B Minor, Bach; Harvard and Radcliffe choruses.

July 15—Mozart program including "Don Giovanni" Overture, "Linz" Symphony, Piano Concerto, K.453, and arias by Jennie Tourel; Leonard Bernstein, guest conductor and piano soloist.

July 16—Italian music "Anacreon" Overture, Cherubini; Cello Concerto, Boccherini, Samuel Mayes, soloist; Concerto Grosso for Four Violins, "Gloria," Vivaldi.

July 17—French program, Suite from "Dardanus," Rameau; "Pelleas and Melisande" Suite, Faure; Pavane, Faure; Serenade, Milhaud; Fourth Symphony, Honegger.

Concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed are announced as follows:

July 22—Overture to "Coriolan," Violin Concerto (Isaac Stern), Seventh Symphony, Beethoven.

July 23—Passacaglia, Bach-Respighi; Second Symphony, Beethoven; Suite from "The Black Maskers," Sessions; "Death and Transfiguration," Strauss. Pierre Monteux, guest conductor.

July 24—First, Fourth and Sixth Symphonies, Beethoven.

July 29—"Water Music," Handel; Fourth Symphony, Schumann; "Prayers of Kierkegaard" (Leontyne Price), Barber; Fourth Symphony, Brahms.

July 30—"Egmont" Overture, Fifth Piano Concerto (Rudolf Serkin) "Eroica" Symphony, Beethoven.

July 31—"Academic" Overture, Concerto for Violin and 'Cello (Isaac Stern, Gregor Piatigorsky), Symphony No. 1, Brahms.

Aug. 5—"Missa Solemnis," Beethoven, Leonard Bernstein, guest conductor.

Aug. 6—Act II, "Fidelio," Beethoven; excerpts from "The Dusk of the Gods," Wagner soloists include Margaret Harshaw.

Aug. 7—Fifth and Eighth Symphonies, Fourth Piano Concerto (Eugene Istomin), Beethoven.

Aug. 12—Haydn Variations, Brahms "Schelomo" (Piatigorsky), Bloch; "La Mer," Debussy; "Daphnis and Chloe," Second Suite, Ravel.

Aug. 13—"The Flying Dutchman" Overture, Wagner; Third Symphony, Brahms; Three Nocturnes, Debussy; "Der Rosenkavalier" Suite, Strauss Pierre Monteux, guest conductor.

Aug. 14—Overture, "Leonore," No. 3, Ninth Symphony, Beethoven.

BURLINGTON, VT.
FREE PRESS

MAR 28 1955

Works of Beethoven to Be Featured At Berkshire Festival This Summer

The choral and orchestral works of Beethoven will be featured at this summer's season of the Berkshire Festival to be given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood.

The festival will consist of six weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from July 8 to Aug. 14, each weekend preceded by a recital of chamber music on the previous Wednesday evening, beginning July 6.

The first two weekends will be devoted to the "Bach-Mozart" concerts by an orchestra of chamber proportions in the Theatre as follows:

Friday, July 8: Bach - Sinfonia from the "Easter" Cantata; Bach Suite No. 2 for Flute and Strings; Stravinsky ; "Orpheus"; Mozart-"Prague" Symphony.

Saturday, July 9: Handel, Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12; Haydn - Symphonie Concertante; Hindemith, "Der Schwanendreher" Haydn - Symphony No. 98; guest conductor, Thor Johnson.

Sunday, July 10: Bach, Mass in B minor, with the choruses from Harvard and Radcliffe.

Friday, July 15: Mozart program, including "Don Giovanni" Overture, "Linz" Symphony, Piano Concerto, K. 453, and arias sung by Jennie Tourel; Leonard Bernstein, guest conductor and piano soloist.

Saturday, July 16: Program of Italian music, including Cherubini, "Anacreon" Overture: Boccherini, Cello Concerto (Samuel Mayes); Vivaldi-Concerto Grosso for Four Violins; Vivaldi - Gloria (with chorus.)

Sunday, July 17: French program including Rameau Suite from "Dardanus," Faure - "Pelleas and Milisande" Suite; Faure - Pavanae; Milhaud - Serenade; Honegger-Fourth Symphony.

The concerts in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra:

Friday, July 22: Beethoven, Overture to "Coriolan," Violin Concerto (Isaac Stern), and Seventh Symphony.

Saturday, July 23 Bach-Respighi Passacaglia; Beethoven - Second Symphony; Sessions - Suite from "The Black Maskers"; Strauss — - "Death and Transfiguration," guest conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Sunday, July 24 : Beethoven, First, Fourth and Sixth Symphonies.

Friday, July 29: Handel, "Water Music;" Schumann, Fourth Symphony; Barber, "Prayers of Kierkegaard," with Leontyne Price; Brahms, Fourth Symphony.

Saturday, July 30: Beethoven, "Egmont" Overture, Fifth Piano Concerto (Rudolf Serkin) and "Eroica" Symphony.

Sunday, July 31: Brahms - Academic Overture, Concerto for Violin and Cello (Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatiforsky), Symphony No. 1; guest conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Friday, August 5: Beethoven, Missa Solemnis, conducted by Leonard Bernstein in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

Saturday, Aug. 6: Beethoven, Fidelio, Act II: Wagner - Excerpts from "The Dusk of the Gods" (soloists to include Margaret Harshaw).

Sunday, Aug. 7: Beethoven, Fifth and Eighth Symphonies and Fourth Piano Concerto (Eugene Istomin).

Friday, Aug. 12: Brahms, Haydn Variations; Bloch, "Schelomo," (Piatigorsky); Debussy, "La Mer"; Ravel, "Daphnis and Chloe," Second Suite.

Saturday, Aug. 13: Wagner, "Flying Dutchman; Overture; Brahms, Third Symphony; Debussy, Three Nocturnes; Strauss, "Der Rosenkavalier" Suite; guest conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Sunday, Aug. 14: Beethoven Overture, "Leonore," No. 3 and Ninth Symphony (with chorus and soloists).

Cir. (D 78,153)

This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION

MAR 30 1955

Noted Chamber Groups to Play At Tanglewood

Wednesday Night Concerts Will Feature Works Of Beethoven

Lenox, March 29—Famous chamber groups are announced for a series of six Wednesday evening concerts in the Theater at Tanglewood as part of the Berkshire Festival to be given there next summer, July 6 - August 14, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director. The programs for the festival will not only include the larger works of Beethoven, but will have these six programs of his chamber music.

List of Programs

They will be as follows:

Kroll String Quartet on Wednesday, July 6—Beethoven Quartets: Op. 18, No. 4; Op. 95 (Serioso); Op. 131 (C sharp minor).

Beaux Arts Trio on July 13—Trios: Op. 1, No. 3; Op. 70, No. 1 ("Ghost"); Op. 97 ("Archduke").

Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin on July 20 — Violin Sonatas: Op. 12, No. 2; Op 24 ("Spring"); Op. 30, No. 2.

New Music String Quartet on July 27 — String Quartets: Op. 18, No. 2; Op 127; Op. 132.

Rudolph Serkin on August 3—Piano Sonatas: Op. 10, Nos. 2 and 3; Op. 106 ("Hammerklavier").

Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz on August 10—The Five Cello Sonatas: Op. 5, Nos. 1 and 2; Op. 69; Op. 102, Nos. 1 and 2.

These Wednesday concerts, representing the music of Beethoven in smaller forms, will precede concerts each week on Friday evening, Saturday evening, and Sunday afternoon; the first two weeks in the Theater, the last four weeks in the great Music Shed. Inquiries should be addressed to the Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston.

Cir. (D 172,699)

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
Christian Science Monitor

APR 2 1955

Complete Berkshire Programs

Charles Munch announces the programs in full for the Berkshire Festival, to be given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this summer.

The Festival will consist of six week ends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from July 8 to Aug. 14, each week end preceded by a recital of chamber music on the previous Wednesday evening, beginning July 6. These recitals will be devoted to the music of Beethoven. The concerts in the Music Shed by the full orchestra will encompass the principal orchestral and choral works of Beethoven.

The first two week ends will be devoted to the "Bach-Mozart" concerts by an orchestra of chamber proportions in the theater as follows:

Friday, July 8—Bach's Sinfonia from the "Easter" Cantata; Bach's Suite No. 2 for Flute and Strings; Stravinsky's "Orpheus"; Mozart's "Prague" Symphony.

Saturday, July 9—Handel's Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12; Haydn's Symphonie Concertante; Hindemith's "Der Schwanendreher"; Haydn's Symphony No. 98; guest conductor, Thor Johnson.

Sunday, July 10—Bach's Mass in B minor, with the choruses from Harvard and Radcliffe.

Friday, July 15—Mozart program, including "Don Giovanni" Overture, "Linz" Symphony, Piano Concerto, K. 453, and arias sung by Jennie Tourel; Leonard Bernstein, guest conductor and piano soloist.

Saturday, July 16—Program of Italian music, including Cheubini's "Anacreon" Overture; Boccherini's Cello Concerto (Samuel Mayes); Vivaldi's Concerto Grosso for Four Violins; Vivaldi's Gloria (with chorus).

Sunday, July 17—French program, including Rameau Suite from "Dardanus"; Fauré's "Pelléas and Mélisande" Suite; Fauré's Pavane; Milhaud's Serenade; Honegger's Fourth Symphony.

The concerts in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra:

Friday, July 22—Beethoven's Overture to "Coriolan," Violin Concerto (Isaac Stern), and Seventh Symphony.

Saturday, July 23—Bach-Respighi: Passacaglia; Beethoven: Second Symphony; Sessions' Suite from "The Black Maskers"; Strauss's "Death and Transfiguration"; guest conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Sunday, July 24—Beethoven's First, Fourth, and Sixth Symphonies.

Friday, July 29—Handel's "Water Music"; Schumann's Fourth Symphony; Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard" (with Leontyne Price); Brahms' Fourth Symphony.

Saturday, July 30—Beethoven's "Egmont" Overture, Fifth Piano Concerto (Rudolf Serkin), and "Eroica" Symphony.

Sunday, July 31—Brahms' Academic Overture, Concerto for Violin and Cello (Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky), Symphony No. 1; guest conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Friday, Aug. 5—Beethoven's Missa Solemnis, conducted by Leonard Bernstein in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

Saturday, Aug. 6—Beethoven's Fidelio, Act II; Wagner's Excerpts from "The Dusk of the Gods" (soloists to include Margaret Harshaw).

Sunday, Aug. 7—Beethoven's Fifth and Eighth Symphonies and Fourth Piano Concerto (Eugene Istomin).

Friday, Aug. 12—Brahms' Haydn Variations; Bloch's "Schelomo" (Piatigorsky); Debussy's "La Mer"; Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe," Second Suite.

Saturday, Aug. 13—Wagner's "Flying Dutchman" Overture Brahms' Third Symphony; Debussy's Three Nocturnes; Strauss's "Der Rosenkavalier" Suite; guest conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Sunday, Aug. 14—Beethoven's Overture, "Leonore," No. 3; and Ninth Symphony (with chorus and soloists).

For ticket information or information about the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's music school at Tanglewood, please address the Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

Cir. (D 287,116)

This Clipping From
BUFFALO, N. Y.
NEWS

APR 2 1955

Berkshire Festival Program Announced

COMPLETE PROGRAM for the Berkshire Music Festival of the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., next Summer has been announced by Charles Munch, music director. The festival will consist of six week-ends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from July 8 to Aug. 14. Each week-end will be preceded by a recital of chamber music on the preceding Wednesday evening, beginning July 6. The recitals will be devoted to the music of Beethoven and the concerts in the Music Shed by the full orchestra will include the composer's principal orchestral and choral works.

The six Wednesday evening programs will be given by the Kroll String Quartet, July 6; Beaux Arts Trio, July 13; Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin, July 20; New Music String Quartet, July 27; Rudolf Serkin, Aug. 3; Gregor Piatogorsky and Ralph Berkowitz, Aug. 10.

Programs for the concerts in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are as follows:

Fri., July 22: Beethoven—Overture to Coriolan; Violin Concerto (Mr. Stern), and Seventh Symphony.

Sat., July 23: Bach-Respighi Passacaglia; Beethoven's Second Symphony; Sessions' Suite from "The Black Maskers;" Strauss' "Death and Transfiguration." Guest conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Sun., July 24: Beethoven's Fourth and Sixth Symphonies.

Fri., July 29: Handel's Water Music; Schumann's Fourth Symphony; Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," with Leontyne Price; Brahams' Fourth Symphony.

Sat., July 30: Beethoven's "Egmont" Overture, Fifth Piano Concerto (Mr. Serkin) and "Eroica" Symphony.

Sun., July 31: Brahams' Academic Overture, Concerto for Violin and Cello (Mr. Stern and Mr. Piatigorsky), Symphony No. 1. Guest conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Fri., Aug. 5: Beethoven's Missa Solemnis, conducted by Leonard Bernstein in memory of Serge Koussevitsky.

Sat., Aug. 6: Beethoven's "Fidelio" (Act II); excerpts from Wagner's "The Dusk of the Gods," (soloists to include Margaret Harshaw).

Sun., Aug. 7: Beethoven's Fifth and Eight Symphonies and Fourth Piano Concerto (Eugene Istomin).

Fri., Aug. 12: Brahams' Hydn Variations; Bloch's "Schelomo" (Mr. Piatigorsky); Debussy's "La Mer;" Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" (second suite).

Saturday, August 13: Wagner's "Flying Dutchman" Overture; Brahms' Third Symphony, Debussy's Three Nocturnes; Strauss' "Der Rosenkavalier" Suite. Guest conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Sunday, August 14: Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3 and Ninth Symphony (with chorus and soloists).

Ticket information or information about the Berkshire Center, the Boston orchestra's music school at Tanglewood, may be obtained by writing the Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

DETROIT, MICH.
FREE PRESS

APR 10 1955

Beethoven To Rule at Tanglewood

Special to the Free Press

BOSTON — Famous chamber music groups will participate in the series of six Wednesday evening concerts in the Theater at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., as part of the Berkshire Festival.

The concerts will be devoted entirely to the music of Beethoven and will be as follows:

Kroll String Quartet, July 6, playing the quartets Opus 18, No. 4; Opus 95 and Opus 131; Beaux Arts Trio, July 13, Opus 1, No. 3; Opus 70, No. 1 (Ghost) and Opus 97 (Archduke).

* * *

ISAAC STERN and Alexander Slakin, July 20 in the Violin Sonatus Opus 12, No. 2; Opus 24 (Spring) and Opus 30, No. 2; New Music String Quartet, July 27, in the quartets Opus 18, No. 2, Opus 127 and Opus 132.

Rudolf Serkin, Aug. 3 in the Piano Sonatus Opus 10, Nos. 2 and 3, and Opus 106 (Hammerklavier); Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz, Aug. 10, in the five cello sonatas, Opus 5, Nos. 1 and 2; Opus 69 and 102, Nos. 1 and 2.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES

APR 15 1955

Berkshire Auditions Slated

Final auditions for this summer's session of the Berkshire Music Center will be held at Carnegie Hall on Saturday, April 23, and Sunday, May 1. Applicants may obtain auditions by notifying the Registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston.

BOSTON, MASS.
RECORD

APR 15 1955

TANGLEWOOD AUDITIONS

Final auditions for instrumental applicants to the Berkshire Music Center and for tuition scholarships from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship und will be held at Symphony Hall Friday, April 29, at 10 a. m. 12 noon.

Cir. (D 46,023) (S 174,898)

This Clipping From
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
JOURNAL

MAR 2 7 1955

Tanglewood to Stress Beethoven

BEETHOVEN will be the featured composer of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., July 8 to Aug. 14, succeeding Berlioz who was top man there last summer.

Among the Beethoven works will be the "Missa Solemnis," to be performed in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, and a concert version of the second act of "Fidelio."

Assisting Charles Munch as guest conductors will be Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein and Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony. Soloists will include Margaret Harshaw, Leontyne Price, Jennie Tourel, Leonard Bernstein, Samuel Mayes, Isaac Stern, Gregor Piatigorsky, Rudolf Serkin and Eugene Istomin.

Some revisions have been made in the order of the concerts combining last summer's arrangements and those of previous sessions. The schedule will contain six weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturdays evenings and Sunday afternoons and a Wednesday night chamber recital. The full orchestra plays in the Music Shed, the chamber orchestra in the Theater-Concert Hall.

The first two weekends will be "Bach-Mozart" chamber proportion music starting July 8 with the following program:

Sinfonia from the "Easter" Cantata, Bach; Suite No. 2 for Flute and Strings, Bach; "Orpheus," Stravinsky; "Prague" Symphony, Mozart.

July 9—Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12, Handel; Symphonie Concertante, Haydn; "Der Schwanendreher," Hindemith; Symphony No. 98, Haydn; Thor Johnson, guest conductor.

July 10—Mass in B Minor, Bach; Harvard and Radcliffe choruses.

July 15—Mozart program including "Don Giovanni" Overture, "Linz" Symphony, Piano Concerto , K.453, and arias by Jennie Tourel; Leonard Bernstein, guest conductor and piano soloist.

July 16—Italian music "Anacreon" Overture, Cherubini; Cello Concerto, Boccherini, Samuel Mayes, soloist; Concerto Grosso for Four Violins, "Gloria," Vivaldi.

July 17—French program, Suite from "Dardanus," Rameau; "Pelleas and Melisande" Suite, Faure; Pavane, Faure; Serenade, Milhaud; Fourth Symphony, Honegger.

Concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed are announced as follows:

July 22—Overture to "Coriolan," Violin Concerto (Isaac Stern), Seventh Symphony, Beethoven.

July 23—Passacaglia, Bach-Respighi; Second Symphony, Beethoven; Suite from "The Black Maskers," Sessions; "Death and Transfiguration," Strauss. Pierre Monteux, guest conductor.

July 24—First, Fourth and Sixth Symphonies, Beethoven.

July 29—"Water Music," Handel; Fourth Symphony, Schumann; "Prayers of Kierkegaard" (Leontyne Price), Barber; Fourth Symphony, Brahms.

July 30—"Egmont" Overture, Fifth Piano Concerto (Rudolf Serkin) "Eroica" Symphony, Beethoven.

July 31—"Academic" Overture, Concerto for Violin and 'Cello (Isaac Stern, Gregor Piatigorsky), Symphony No. 1, Brahms.

Aug. 5—"Missa Solemnis," Beethoven, Leonard Bernstein, guest conductor.

Aug. 6—Act II, "Fidelio," Beethoven; excerpts from "The Dusk of the Gods," Wagner soloists include Margaret Harshaw.

Aug. 7—Fifth and Eighth Symphonies, Fourth Piano Concerto (Eugene Istomin), Beethoven.

Aug. 12—Haydn Variations, Brahms "Schelomo" (Piatigorsky), Bloch; "La Mer," Debussy; "Daphnis and Chloe," Second Suite, Ravel.

Aug. 13—"The Flying Dutchman" Overture, Wagner; Third Symphony, Brahms; Three Nocturnes, Debussy; "Der Rosenkavalier" Suite, Strauss Pierre Monteux, guest conductor.

Aug. 14—Overture, "Leonore," No. 3, Ninth Symphony, Beethoven.

BURLINGTON, VT.
FREE PRESS
MAR 2 8 1955

Works of Beethoven to Be Featured At Berkshire Festival This Summer

The choral and orchestral works of Beethoven will be featured at this summer's season of the Berkshire Festival to be given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood.

The festival will consist of six weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from July 8 to Aug. 14, each weekend preceded by a recital of chamber music on the previous Wednesday evening, beginning July 6.

The first two weekends will be devoted to the "Bach-Mozart" concerts by an orchestra of chamber proportions in the Theatre as follows:

Friday, July 8: Bach - Sinfonia from the "Easter" Cantata; Bach Suite No. 2 for Flute and Strings; Stravinsky ; "Orpheus"; Mozart-"Prague" Symphony.

Saturday, July 9: Handel, Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12; Haydn - Symphonie Concertante; Hindemith, "Der Schwanendreher" Haydn - Symphony No. 98; guest conductor, Thor Johnson.

Sunday, July 10: Bach, Mass in B minor, with the choruses from Harvard and Radcliffe.

Friday, July 15: Mozart program, including "Don Giovanni" Overture, "Linz" Symphony, Piano Concerto, K. 453, and arias sung by Jennie Tourel; Leonard Bernstein, guest conductor and piano soloist.

Saturday, July 16: Program of Italian music, including Cherubini, "Anacreon" Overture: Boccherini, Cello Concerto (Samuel Mayes); Vivaldi-Concerto Grosso for Four Violins; Vivaldi - Gloria (with chorus.)

Sunday, July 17: French program including Rameau Suite from "Dardanus," Faure - "Pelleas and Milisande" Suite; Faure - Pavanae; Milhaud - Serenade; Honegger-Fourth Symphony.

The concerts in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra:

Friday, July 22: Beethoven, Overture to "Coriolan," Violin Concerto (Isaac Stern), and Seventh Symphony.

Saturday, July 23 Bach-Respighi Passacaglia; Beethoven - Second Symphony; Sessions - Suite from "The Black Maskers"; Strauss — - "Death and Transfiguration," guest conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Sunday, July 24 : Beethoven, First, Fourth and Sixth Symphonies.

Friday, July 29: Handel, "Water Music;" Schumann, Fourth Symphony; Barber, "Prayers of Kierkegaard," with Leontyne Price; Brahms, Fourth Symphony.

Saturday, July 30: Beethoven, "Egmont" Overture, Fifth Piano Concerto (Rudolf Serkin) and "Eroica" Symphony.

Sunday, July 31: Brahms - Academic Overture, Concerto for Violin and Cello (Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatiforsky), Symphony No. 1; guest conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Friday, August 5: Beethoven, Missa Solemnis, conducted by Leonard Bernstein in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

Saturday, Aug. 6: Beethoven, Fidelio, Act II: Wagner - Excerpts from "The Dusk of the Gods" (soloists to include Margaret Harshaw).

Sunday, Aug. 7: Beethoven, Fifth and Eighth Symphonies and Fourth Piano Concerto (Eugene Istomin).

Friday, Aug. 12: Brahms, Haydn Variations; Bloch, "Schelomo," (Piatigorsky); Debussy, "La Mer"; Ravel, "Daphnis and Chloe," Second Suite.

Saturday, Aug. 13: Wagner, "Flying Dutchman; Overture; Brahms, Third Symphony; Debussy, Three Nocturnes; Strauss, "Der Rosenkavalier" Suite; guest conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Sunday, Aug. 14: Beethoven Overture, "Leonore," No. 3 and Ninth Symphony (with chorus and soloists).

Cir. (D 78,153)

This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION

MAR 3 0 1955

Noted Chamber Groups to Play At Tanglewood

Wednesday Night Concerts Will Feature Works Of Beethoven

Lenox, March 29—Famous chamber groups are announced for a series of six Wednesday evening concerts in the Theater at Tanglewood as part of the Berkshire Festival to be given there next summer, July 6 - August 14, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director. The programs for the festival will not only include the larger works of Beethoven, but will have these six programs of his chamber music.

List of Programs

They will be as follows:

Kroll String Quartet on Wednesday, July 6—Beethoven Quartets: Op. 18, No. 4; Op. 95 (Serioso); Op. 131 (C sharp minor).

Beaux Arts Trio on July 13—Trios: Op. 1, No. 3; Op. 70, No. 1 ("Ghost"); Op. 97 ("Archduke").

Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin on July 20 — Violin Sonatas: Op. 12, No. 2; Op 24 ("Spring"); Op. 30, No. 2.

New Music String Quartet on July 27 — String Quartets: Op. 18, No. 2; Op 127; Op. 132.

Rudolph Serkin on August 3—Piano Sonatas: Op. 10, Nos. 2 and 3; Op. 106 ("Hammerklavier").

Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz on August 10—The Five Cello Sonatas: Op. 5, Nos. 1 and 2; Op. 69; Op. 102, Nos. 1 and 2.

These Wednesday concerts, representing the music of Beethoven in smaller forms, will precede concerts each week on Friday evening, Saturday evening, and Sunday afternoon; the first two weeks in the Theater, the last four weeks in the great Music Shed. Inquiries should be addressed to the Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston.

Cir. (D 172,699)

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
Christian Science Monitor

APR 2 1955

CompleteBerkshirePrograms

Charles Munch announces the programs in full for the Berkshire Festival, to be given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this summer.

The Festival will consist of six week ends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from July 8 to Aug. 14, each week end preceded by a recital of chamber music on the previous Wednesday evening, beginning July 6. These recitals will be devoted to the music of Beethoven. The concerts in the Music Shed by the full orchestra will encompass the principal orchestral and choral works of Beethoven.

The first two week ends will be devoted to the "Bach-Mozart" concerts by an orchestra of chamber proportions in the theater as follows:

Friday, July 8—Bach's Sinfonia from the "Easter" Cantata; Bach's Suite No. 2 for Flute and Strings; Stravinsky's "Orpheus"; Mozart's "Prague" Symphony.

Saturday, July 9—Handel's Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12; Haydn's Symphonie Concertante; Hindemith's "Der Schwanendreher"; Haydn's Symphony No. 98; guest conductor, Thor Johnson.

Sunday, July 10—Bach's Mass in B minor, with the choruses from Harvard and Radcliffe.

Friday, July 15—Mozart program, including "Don Giovanni" Overture, "Linz" Symphony, Piano Concerto, K. 453, and arias sung by Jennie Tourel; Leonard Bernstein, guest conductor and piano soloist.

Saturday, July 16—Program of Italian music, including Cheubini's "Anacreon" Overture; Boccherini's Cello Concerto (Samuel Mayes); Vivaldi's Concerto Grosso for Four Violins; Vivaldi's Gloria (with chorus).

Sunday, July 17—French program, including Rameau Suite from "Dardanus"; Fauré's "Pelléas and Mélisande" Suite; Fauré's Pavane; Milhaud's Serenade; Honegger's Fourth Symphony.

The concerts in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra:

Friday, July 22—Beethoven's Overture to "Coriolan," Violin Concerto (Isaac Stern), and Seventh Symphony.

Saturday, July 23—Bach-Respighi: Passacaglia; Beethoven: Second Symphony; Sessions' Suite from "The Black Maskers"; Strauss's "Death and Transfiguration"; guest conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Sunday, July 24—Beethoven's First, Fourth, and Sixth Symphonies.

Friday, July 29—Handel's "Water Music"; Schumann's Fourth Symphony; Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard" (with Leontyne Price); Brahms' Fourth Symphony.

Saturday, July 30—Beethoven's "Egmont" Overture, Fifth Piano Concerto (Rudolf Serkin), and "Eroica" Symphony.

Sunday, July 31—Brahms' Academic Overture, Concerto for Violin and Cello (Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky), Symphony No. 1; guest conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Friday, Aug. 5—Beethoven's Missa Solemnis, conducted by Leonard Bernstein in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

Saturday, Aug. 6—Beethoven's Fidelio, Act II; Wagner's Excerpts from "The Dusk of the Gods" (soloists to include Margaret Harshaw).

Sunday, Aug. 7—Beethoven's Fifth and Eighth Symphonies and Fourth Piano Concerto (Eugene Istomin).

Friday, Aug. 12—Brahms' Haydn Variations; Bloch's "Schelomo" (Piatigorsky); Debussy's "La Mer"; Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloë," Second Suite.

Saturday, Aug. 13—Wagner's "Flying Dutchman" Overture Brahms' Third Symphony; Debussy's Three Nocturnes; Strauss's "Der Rosenkavalier" Suite; guest conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Sunday, Aug. 14—Beethoven's Overture, "Leonore," No. 3; and Ninth Symphony (with chorus and soloists).

For ticket information or information about the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's music school at Tanglewood, please address the Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

Cir. (D 287,116)

This Clipping From
BUFFALO, N. Y.
NEWS

APR 2 1955

Berkshire Festival Program Announced

COMPLETE PROGRAM for the Berkshire Music Festival of the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., next Summer has been announced by Charles Munch, music director. The festival will consist of six week-ends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from July 8 to Aug. 14. Each week-end will be preceded by a recital of chamber music on the preceding Wednesday evening, beginning July 6. The recitals will be devoted to the music of Beethoven and the concerts in the Music Shed by the full orchestra will include the composer's principal orchestral and choral works.

The six Wednesday evening programs will be given by the Kroll String Quartet, July 6; Beaux Arts Trio, July 13; Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin, July 20; New Music String Quartet, July 27; Rudolf Serkin, Aug. 3; Gregor Piatogorsky and Ralph Berkowitz, Aug. 10.

Programs for the concerts in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are as follows:

Fri., July 22: Beethoven—Overture to Coriolan; Violin Concerto (Mr. Stern), and Seventh Symphony.

Sat., July 23: Bach-Respighi Passacaglia; Beethoven's Second Symphony; Sessions' Suite from "The Black Maskers;" Strauss' "Death and Transfiguration." Guest conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Sun., July 24: Beethoven's Fourth and Sixth Symphonies.

Fri., July 29: Handel's Water Music; Schumann's Fourth Symphony; Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," with Leontyne Price; Brahams' Fourth Symphony.

Sat., July 30: Beethoven's "Egmont" Overture, Fifth Piano Concerto (Mr. Serkin) and "Eroica" Symphony.

Sun., July 31: Brahams' Academic Overture, Concerto for Violin and Cello (Mr. Stern and Mr. Piatigorsky), Symphony No. 1. Guest conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Fri., Aug. 5: Beethoven's Missa Solemnis, conducted by Leonard Bernstein in memory of Serge Koussevitsky.

Sat., Aug. 6: Beethoven's "Fidelio" (Act II); excerpts from Wagner's "The Dusk of the Gods," (soloists to include Margaret Harshaw).

Sun., Aug. 7: Beethoven's Fifth and Eight Symphonies and Fourth Piano Concerto (Eugene Istomin).

Fri., Aug. 12: Brahams' Hydn Variations; Bloch's "Schelomo" (Mr. Piatigorsky); Debussy's "La Mer;" Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" (second suite).

Saturday, August 13: Wagner's "Flying Dutchman" Overture; Brahms' Third Symphony, Debussy's Three Nocturnes; Strauss' "Der Rosenkavalier" Suite. Guest conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Sunday, August 14: Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3 and Ninth Symphony (with chorus and soloists.

Ticket information or information about the Berkshire Center, the Boston orchestra's music school at Tanglewood, may be obtained by writing the Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

DETROIT, MICH.
FREE PRESS

APR [illegible]

Beethoven To Rule at Tanglewood

Special to the Free Press

BOSTON — Famous chamber music groups will participate in the series of six Wednesday evening concerts in the Theater at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., as part of the Berkshire Festival.

The concerts will be devoted entirely to the music of Beethoven and will be as follows:

Kroll String Quartet, July 6, playing the quartets Opus 18, No. 4; Opus 95 and Opus 131; Beaux Arts Trio, July 13, Opus 1, No. 3; Opus 70, No. 1 (Ghost) and Opus 97 (Archduke).

* * *

ISAAC STERN and Alexander Slakin, July 20 in the Violin Sonatus Opus 12 No. 2; Opus 24 (Spring) and Opus 30, No. 2: New Music String Quartet, July 27, in the quartets Opus 18, No. 2, Opus 127 and Opus 132.

Rudolf Serkin, Aug. 3 in the Piano Sonatus Opus 10, Nos. 2 and 3, and Opus 106 (Hammerklavier); Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz Aug 10, in the five cello sonatas, Opus 5, Nos. 1 and 2; Opus 69 and 102, Nos. 1 and 2.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES

APR 1 5 1955

Berkshire Auditions Slated

Final auditions for this summer's session of the Berkshire Music Center will be held at Carnegie Hall on Saturday, April 23, and Sunday, May 1. Applicants may obtain auditions by notifying the Registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston.

BOSTON, MASS.
RECORD

APR 1 5 1955

TANGLEWOOD AUDITIONS

Final auditions for instrumental applicants to the Berkshire Music Center and for tuition scholarships from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund will be held at Symphony Hall Friday, April 29, at 10 a. m. to 12 noon.

WAKEFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 5,603

APR 29 1955

Jazz Takes Place Beside Symphony at Famed Tanglewood

The Berkshire Music Barn, the first Summer music hall devoted to concert jazz and related music, will open July 2, at Lenox, just a mile down the road from ~~the Boston~~ Symphony's famous Music Shed.

The Music Barn, sponsored by Stephanie and Philip Barber, will be hospitable to all phases of Jazz and Folk Music. Among the musicians scheduled are Count Basie, Richard Dyer-Bennet, Dizzy Gillespie, Coleman Hawkins.

During five weeks of the Tanglewood Season, however, the emphasis will definitely be on modern jazz in the form of a modern jazz workshop. During this period, young musicians, who are endeavoring to push forward the boundaries of jazz, will be in residence at the Music Barn. Housed and fed at nearby music inn, the musicians will work creatively together on compositions and arrangements, perhaps inter-reacting with the classical musicians of the area. Thus for the first time, the Summer Boston Symphony audiences and musicians will readily be able to get a taste of some of the new developments in Jazz.

Public performances of Modern Jazz will be presented every Sunday night during the Tanglewood season, starting on July 10, with well-known modern jazz musicians featured. Among the groups already signed are Art Farmer, Thelonius Monk, Teddy Charles, Dizzy Gillespie, and The Modern Jazz Quartet.

Count Basie and his band will appear on Thursday, July 28.

On five Saturday afternoons at 4, the Berkshire Music Barn will present Richard Dyer-Bennet, America's foremost singer of English and American Folk ballads. In this series of five concerts, each one different, Mr. Dyer-Bennet will present a comprehensive sweep of songs and ballads of Europe, The British Isles and America. As far as is known, no similar opportunity to hear as wide a range of balladry has ever been available.

The Berkshire Music Barn is the direct result of the growing interest in Professor Marshall Stearns' Folk and Jazz Roundtable held annually in Lenox since 1950, and which this year will take place from Aug. 14 to Sept. 5 at the Music Barn. It will cover the repertory of American jazz and related folk music, with concerts Thursday, Saturday and Sunday evenings; and demonstrations, lectures or jam sessions on the other days. Dr. Stearns, director of the roundtable, is widely known for his pioneering courses in jazz given at New York University and the New School, and is also associated with the Newport Jazz Festival.

The Music Barn, converted from a great wagonbarn and courtyard on a countess' former estate, will seat about 700 people with possibilities for future expansion.

Manager of the Music Barn will be Robert Reisner, who for the last two years has been presenting modern jazz on Sunday nights at the Open Door in New York City, and is librarian of the Institute of Jazz Studies.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION

APR 15 1955

Music Auditions Will Be April 29

Final auditions for instrumental applicants to the Berkshire Music Center, and for tuition scholarships from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, will be at Symphony Hall, April 29, from 10 a. m. to noon.

Pianist and string players may apply for the chamber music division as a full-time activity. All applicants intending to audition should notify the registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston, for application forms and catalog.

New Milford Times
4/7/55

Auditions For Music Center To Be Held

Instrumental auditions for admission to The Berkshire Music Center will be held while the Boston Symphony Orchestra is in New York on its final trip of the season. The auditions are scheduled for March 9 from 1 to 5 in Carnegie Recital Hall, New York City as follows: Strings 1 to 2:30 p.m., Woodwinds 2:30 to 3:30 p.m., Brass 3:30 to 5:00 p.m. Harp, Tympani and Percussion auditions will be held backstage at 7:00 p.m. The audition committee consists of the principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

All students accepted for the orchestra are eligible for tuition grants from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund.

The school's newest department, the Tanglewood Study Group, will be under the direction of Ingolf Dahl. It accepts enrollment for two, four or six weeks.

Applicants planning to attend these auditions should, if possible, notify Miss E. Bossler, Registrar, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Massachusetts.

Application forms may be obtained at the time of audition, or by writing to the Registrar.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.
TIMES-HERALD

APR 4 1955

Tanglewood Auditions Set for This Month

BOSTON, Mass. — Auditions for admission to the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, will be held at Carnegie Recital Hall, New York, April 14, from one to three p. m. An accompanist will be present.

The Berkshire Music Center is the summer school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., which is in its 13th year. This summer's session will be from July fourth to Aug. 14. Applicants should notify the school office of their intention to attend the auditions by writing the Registrar, Symphony Hall, Boston, 15, Mass.

TOLEDO, OHIO
BLADE

APR 10 1955

Boston Symphony To Perform For Munch, Guest Conductors

Special to The Blade

BOSTON, April 9—Charles Munch has announced programs in full for the Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., next summer.

The festival will consist of six weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from July 8 to Aug. 14, each preceded by chamber music on the previous Wednesday evening, beginning July 6. These recitals will be devoted to the music of Beethoven and the concerts in the Music Shed by the full orchestra will encompass the principal orchestral and choral works of Beethoven.

The first two weekends will be devoted to the "Bach-Mozart" concerts by an orchestra of chamber proportions in the theater as follows:

Friday, July 8: Bach — Sinfonia from the "Easter" Cantata; Bach — Suite No. 2 for Flute and Strings; Stravinsky — "Orpheus"; Mozart — "Prague" symphony.

Saturday, July 9: Handel—Concerto Grosso, Opus 6, No. 12; Haydn—Symphonie Concertante; Hindemith — "Der Schwanendreher;" Haydn—Symphony No. 98; guest conductor, Thor Johnson.

Sunday, July 10: Bach—Mass in B Minor, with the choruses from Harvard and Radcliffe.

Friday, July 15: Mozart — "Don Giovanni" overture, "Linz" symphony, Piano Concerto in G (K. 453) and arias sung by Jennie Tourel; Leonard Bernstein, guest conductor and piano soloist.

Saturday, July 16: Program of Italian music—Cherubini "Anacreon" overture; Boccherini — 'Cello Concerto (Samuel Mayes); Vivaldi —Concerto Grosso for Four Violins; Vivaldi—"Gloria" (with chorus).

Sunday, July 17: French program Rameau, suite from "Dardanus," Faure—"Pelleas Et Melisande" suite; Faure — "Pavane;" Milhaud—Serenade; Honegger fourth symphony.

* * *

MUSIC SHED CONCERTS

Friday, July 22: Beethoven —overture to "Coriolan;" violin concerto (Isaac Stern) and seventh symphony.

Saturday, July 23: Bach-Respighi — Passacagalia; Beethoven — second symphony; Sessions — suite from "The Black Maskers;" Strauss—"Death and Transfiguration;" guest conductor — Pierre Monteux.

Sunday, July 24: Beethoven — First, fourth and sixth symphonies.

Friday, July 29: Handel — "Water Music;" Schumann —Fourth Symphony; Barber — "Prayers of Kierkegaard" (with Leontyne Price); Brahms — fourth symphony.

Saturday, July 30: Beethoven —"Egmont" overture; fifth piano concerto (Rudolf Serkin) and "Eroica" symphony.

Sunday, July 31: Brahms — "Academic Festival" overture; Concerto for Violin and 'Cello (Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky): Symphony No. 1; guest conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Friday, Aug. 5: Beethoven —"Missa Solemnis," conducted by Leonard Bernstein in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

Saturday, Aug. 6: Beethoven —"Fidelio," Act. 2; Wagner—excerpts from "The Dusk of the Gods" (soloists to include Margaret Harshaw).

Sunday, Aug. 7: Beethoven — Fifth and eight symphonies and fourth piano concerto (Eugene Istomin).

Friday, Aug. 12: Brahms— "Haydn" Variations; Bloch—"Schelomo" (Piatigorsky); Debussy — "La Mer;" Ravel — "Daphnis et Chloe," second suite.

Saturday, Aug. 13: Wagner — "Flying Dutchman" overture; Brahms — third symphony; Debussy — Three Nocturnes; Strauss — "Der Rosenkavalier" suite; guest conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Sunday, Aug. 14: Beethoven —overture, "Leonore," No. 3 and ninth symphony (with chorus and soloists).

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,468

APR 29 1955

Munch Announces Soloists For Berkshire Festival

047

Charles Munch will bring the 74th season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to a close tomorrow night in Symphony Hall with Beethoven's Fifth Symphony. Having completed his sixth year with this orchestra, Mr. Munch will fly to France early next week for two months of vacation. He will return to open on July 8 the Berkshire Festival given by his orchestra in Tanglewood, Lenox.

The principal works of Beethoven occupying a considerable part of the programs in the course of the Festival (July 6-August 14) will include the nine symphonies, choral works, concertos, and chamber works. This will require a number of soloists, both vocal and instrumental. The vocal soloists, here announced, will consist of the following quartet for Missa Solemnis, to be conducted by Leonard Bernstein on Aug. 5 in memory of Serge Koussevitzky: Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor, and Mac Morgan, bass. The Ninth Symphony, with which Mr. Munch will close the Festival, will have the following soloists: Adele Addison, Catherine Akos, David Lloyd, and Donald Gramm. Mr. Munch will also conduct the Second Act of Beethoven's "Fidelio" in concert form on Aug. 6, with the following soloists: Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd and Mac Morgan. Bach's Mass in B minor will be given on July 10 with the following soloists: Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm. Jennie Tourel, soprano, will sing airs of Mozart on July 15. Leontyne Price, soprano, will sing in Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard" on July 29.

Instrumental soloists in the "Bach-Mozart" concerts during the first two weekends in the Theatre Concert Hall will include Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute, July 8 (Bach's Suite No. 2); Joseph de Pasquale, viola, July 9 ("Der Schwanendreher"); and Samuel Mayes, July 16 (Boccherini's Cello Concerto).

The concerts in the Music Shed through the last four weekends will include Isaac Stern, July 22 (Beethoven's Violin Concerto); Rudolf Serkin, July 30 (Beethoven's Fifth Piano Concerto); Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky, July 30 (Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello); Eugene Istomin, August 7 (Beethoven's Fourth Piano Concerto); and Gregor Piatigorsky, August 12 (Bloch's "Schelomo"). Guest conductors will be Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein and Thor Johnson. The chamber music of Beethoven will be performed at six successive Wednesday evening concerts by the Kroll String Quartet, Beaux Arts Trio, Isaac Stern, the New Music String Quartet, Rudolf Serkin and Gregor Piatigorsky.

KINGSTON, N.Y
PRESS
4/7/55

Berkshire Festival Program Announced

Charles Munch, music director for the Boston Symphony Orchestra has announced the programs to be given this summer at Tanglewood.

The Festival which annually attracts many local music lovers will consist of six weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from July 8 to August 14, each weekend preceded by a recital of chamber music on the previous Wednesday evening, beginning July 6. These recitals will be devoted to the music of Beethoven and the concerts in the Music Shed by the full orchestra will encompass the principal orchestral and choral works of Beethoven.

The first two weekends will be devoted to the "Bach-Mozart" concerts by an orchestra of chamber proportions in the Theatre as follows:

FRIDAY, JULY 8: Bach—Sinfonia from the "Easter" Cantata; Bach—Suite No. 2 for Flute and Strings; Stravinsky — "Orpheus"; Mozart—"Prague" Symphony.

SATURDAY, JULY 9: Handel—Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12; Haydn — Symphonie Concertante; Hindemith — "Der Schwanendreher"; Haydn — Symphony No. 98; Guest Conductor, Thor Johnson.

SUNDAY, JULY 10: Bach — Mass in B minor, with the choruses from Harvard and Radcliffe.

This Clipping From DALLAS, TEX.
NEWS
APR 4 1955

Beethoven Only On Berkshire's Chamber Series

Special to The News

BOSTON, Mass. — Six chamber music concerts will be devoted to works of Beethoven this summer at the Berkshire Festival, in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The Kroll String Quartet will open the Wednesday series on July 6. Other ensembles include the Beaux Arts Trio and the New Music String Quartet.

Rudolf Serkin will play a program of piano sonatas, Isaac Stern will be accompanied by Alexander Zakin in violin sonatas and Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz will offer the five cello sonatas.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.
POST
APR 3 1955

Auditions for admission to the Opera department of the Berkshire Music Center—Tanglewood—will be conducted at Carnegie recital hall in New York city on Thursday, April 14, from 1 to 3 p. m. An accompanist will be present. Applicants should notify the school office of their intention to attend the audition.... Arthur Herzog, Jr., was in the city to do a bit of drum beating for the still-unreleased United Artists movie "Not As a Stranger"....The Oakdale Musical Circus in Wallingford bows for its second season on June 3 with "Guys and Dolls" ...."The Honeys," which opened in New Haven, has delayed its Broadway premiere and will stay on the road for another week....A twin movie bill that is really doing business at the box office is at the Beverly and Hi-Way—"On the Waterfront" and "Caine Mutiny." The theaters are playing to standees.

PITTSBURGH, PA.
SUN-TELEGRAPH

APR 18 1955

Auditions Set

Final auditions for admission to Berkshire Music Center and tuition scholarships from the Tanglewood Scholarship Fund, will be held in Carnegie Tech Exhibition Hall on April 29 from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m. Applicants should notify the Registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston, for forms and catalog.

Cir. (D 74,995) (S 59,910)

This Clipping From
BRIDGEPORT, CONN.
POST

APR 3 1955

Auditions for admission to the Opera department of the Berkshire Music Center—Tanglewood—will be conducted at Carnegie recital hall in New York city on Thursday, April 14, from 1 to 3 p. m. An accompanist will be present. Applicants should notify the school office of their intention to attend the audition.... Arthur Herzog, Jr., was in the city to do a bit of drum beating for the still-unreleased United Artists movie "Not As a Stranger".... The Oakdale Musical Circus in Wallingford bows for its second season on June 3 with "Guys and Dolls" ...."The Honeys," which opened in New Haven, has delayed its Broadway premiere and will stay on the road for another week.... A twin movie bill that is really doing business at the box office is at the Beverly and Hi-Way—"On the Waterfront" and "Caine Mutiny." The theaters are playing to standees.

W. 19th St., NEW YORK
Tel. CHelsea 3-8860

Cir. (D 124,110) (S 382,056)

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE

APR 3 1955

Berkshire Festival Lists Beethoven Chamber Music Series

Famous chamber groups are announced for a series of six Wednesday evenings concerts in the Theatre at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., as part of the Berkshire Festival to be given there next Summer (July 6-Aug. 14) by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Music Director. The programs for the Festival will not only include the larger works of Beethoven, but will have these six programs of his chamber music.

They will be as follows:

The Kroll String Quartet on Wednesday, July 6—Beethoven Quartets: Op. 18, No. 4; Op. 95 (Serioso); Op. 131 (C sharp minor).

Beaux Arts Trio on July 13—Trios: Op. 1, No. 3; Op. 70, No. 1 ("Ghost"); Op. 97 ("Archduke").

Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin on July 20—Violin Sonatas: Op. 12, No. 2; Op. 24 ("Spring"); Op. 30, No. 2.

New Music String Quartet on July 27—String Quartets: Op. 18, No. 2; Op. 127; Op. 132.

Rudolf Serkin on Aug. 3—Piano Sonatas: Op. 10, Nos. 2 and 3; Op. 106 ("Hammerklavier").

Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz on Aug. 10—The Five Cello Sonatas: Op. 5, Nos. 1 and 2; Op. 69; Op. 102, Nos. 1 and 2.

These Wednesday concerts, representing the music of Beethoven in smaller forms, will precede concerts each week on Friday evening, Saturday evening, and Sunday afternoon; the first two weeks in the Theatre, the last four weeks in the great Music Shed. Inquiries should be addressed to the Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston, Massachusetts.

PITTSBURGH, PA.
POST-GAZETTE

APR 19 1955

Berkshire Center Auditions April 29

Final auditions for admission to the Berkshire Music Center and for tuition scholarships from the Tanglewood revolving scholarship fund will be held Friday, April 29, from 11:30 a. m. to 2:30 p. m. in Exhibition Hall at Carnegie Tech.

Those who intend to audition should notify the registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston.

Cir. (D 131,670) (S 258,529)

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD

APR 3 - 19

Top Chamber Groups At Berkshire Fete

Famous chamber groups are announced for a series of six Wednesday evening concerts in the Theatre at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. as part of the Berkshire Festival to be given there next summer (July 6-August 14) by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Music Director. The programs for the Festival will not only include the larger works of Beethoven, but will have these six programs of his chamber music.

The Kroll String Quartet on Wednesday, July 6—Beethoven Quartet: Op. 18, No. 4; Op. 95 (Serioso); Op. 131 (C sharp minor).

Beaux Arts Trio on July 13—Trios: Op. 1, No. 3; Op. 70, No. 1 ("Ghost"); Op. 97 ("Archduke").

Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin on July 20 — Violin Sonatas: Op. 12, No. 2; Op. 24 ("Spring"); Op. 30, No. 2.

New Music String Quartet on July 27—String Quartets: Op. 18, No. 2; Op. 127; Op. 132.

Rudolf Serkin on August 3—Piano Sonatas: Op. 10, Nos. 2 and 3; Op. 106 ("Hammerklavier").

Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz on August 10—The Five Cello Sonatas: Op. 5, Nos. 1 and 2; Op. 69; Op. 109, Nos. 1 and 2.

These Wednesday concerts, representing the music of Beethoven in smaller forms, will precede concerts each week on Friday evening, Saturday evening, and Sunday afternoon; the first two weeks in the Theatre, the last four weeks in the great Music Shed. Inquiries should be addressed to the Festival Office Symphony Hall, Boston.

LAWRENCE, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 34,905

APR 29 1955

EASTERN STAR NIGHT AT "POPS" 047

Members and friends of Lawrence Chapter No. 78 Order of the Eastern Star will be welcomed by Mrs. Mary Morton, W.M., at the annual Eastern Star night at Pops at Symphony Hall in Boston, Thursday, May 26.

The floor and first balcony have been reserved until May 16, by the Grand Chapter of Massachusetts, O.E.S. This concert will benefit the benevolences of the order.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN

APR 3 - 1955

Auditions Next Week For Opera Departmen

Boston, April 2—Auditions for admission to the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, will be held at Symphony Hall here Saturday morning, the 16th, from 10 to 12 noon. An accompanist will be present. This summer will mark the 13th summer session and will extend from July 4 to Aug. 14.

Applicants should notify the school office of their intention to attend these auditions. Address the Registrar, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass. Catalog and ap-

---

PITTSBURGH, PA.
PRESS

APR 17 1955

Music Scholarship Auditions to Be Held

Final auditions for admission to the Berkshire Music Center and for tuition scholarships will be held at Carnegie Institute of Technology from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m., April 29.

Applicants must apply to the registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston, for application forms and catalog.

Cir. (D 124,110) (S 382,056)

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE

APR 3 1955

Berkshire Opera Auditions, April 16

Auditions for admission to the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, will be held at Symphony Hall, Boston, on Saturday morning, April 16 from 10 to 12 noon. An accompanist will be present.

The Berkshire Music Center is the Summer school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood—Lenox, Mass. This Summer marks the 13th session and will extend from July 4 to Aug. 14.

Applicants should notify the school office of their intention to attend these auditions. Address: The Registrar, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass. Catalogue and application forms may be obtained by writing to the above address.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN

APR 17 1955

FINAL AUDITIONS FOR TANGLEWOOD

Boston, April 16—Final auditions for instrumental applicants to the Berkshire Music Center, and for tuition scholarships from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, will be held at: Symphony Hall Friday, the 29th, 10 a. m. to 12 noon (enter back stage door).

Pianists and string players may apply for the chamber music division as a full-time activity. All applicants intending to audition should notify the registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston, for application forms and catalog.

The Berkshire Music Center is maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra as an opportunity for six weeks of music study during the summer in connection with the concerts of the Berkshire Festival. This summer from July 4 to Aug. 14, the 13 session of the school will be held. Charles Munch is the director, and a distinguished faculty includes principals and other members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

HARTFORD, CONN.
COURANT

APR 3 - 1955

Tanglewood Auditions In New York April 14

Auditions for admission to the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center — Tanglewood—will be held at Carnegie Recital Hall — New York City —on Thursday, April 14 from 1 to 3 p.m. An accompanist will be present. The Berkshire Music Center is the summer school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival—Tanglewood —Lenox, Massachusetts. This summer marks the thirteenth session and extends from July 4 to August 14. Applicants should notify the school office of their intention to attend these auditions. Address — The Registrar, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Massachusetts.

Cir. (D 103,308)

This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES

APR 2 1955

Tanglewood Opera Auditions Apr. 14

Tanglewood opera department auditions wil be held Apr. 14 from 1 to 3 p. m. in Carnegie Hall, New York. Applicants for admission to this 13th session of the Boston Symphony's Summer school of music should notify the registrar at Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass. School will run July 4 to Aug. 14 at Lenox, Mass., in connection with the Berkshire Music Festival.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.
REPORTER-DISPATCH

APR 11 1955

Down the Scale

Piano Teachers'

By RUTH K. NOLAN

(Franck); "Sonatine, Opus 13," oboe and piano (Mihalovici); and "Trio, E Flat" (Brahms).

Students will be admitted at a reduce [illegible]

Easte [illegible]
Set by [illegible]

The annual [illegible] night of the studio of [illegible] Beeson Fry will be held at the studio, 2 Orchard Parway, on Wednesday at [illegible]

Berkshire Auditions Slated for Thursday

Westchester singers who wish to take part in the auditions for admission to the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood this season may attend the auditions on Thursday from 1 to 3 P.M. at the Carnegie Recital Hall in New York. An accompanist will be present. The Center is the music school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Music Festival, which this Summer marks its 13th session and extends from July 4 to Aug. 14

Miss W

BOSTON, MASS.
AMERICAN

APR 15 1955

Final Tanglewood Auditions

Final auditions for instrumental applicants to the Berkshire Music Center and for tuition scholarships from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund will be held at Symphony Hall on Friday, April 29, from 10 a. m. to 12 noon. All applicants intending to audition should notify the Registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston, for application forms and catalog.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.
INQUIRER

APR 17 1955

Tanglewood Auditions Listed Here April 30

Final auditions for admission to the Berkshire Music Center, and for tuition scholarships from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, will be held at the Academy of Vocal Arts, 1920 Spruce st., April 30 from 1 to 4 P. M.

Applicants intending to audition should notify the Registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston, for application forms and catalog.

The Berkshire Music Center is maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra as an opportunity for six weeks of study in connection with the Berkshire Festival concerts from July 4 to Aug. 14.

Ralph Berkowitz, dean, and William Kroll, of the chamber music department, will be present for the auditions and interviews.

Auditions April 16 For Berkshire Opera

Ap 3 HERALD

Auditions for admission to the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center — Tanglewood — will be held at Symphony Hall, Boston on Saturday morning April 16 from 10 to 12 noon. An accompanist will be present. The Berkshire Music Center is the summer school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood—Lenox, Mass. This summer marks the thirteenth session and will extend from July 4 to August 14. Applicants should notify the school office of their intention to attend these auditions. Address—The Registrar, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass. Catalogue and application forms may be obtained by writing to the above address.

BURLINGTON, VT.
NEWS

APR 17 1955

Tanglewood Auditions

BOSTON —Final auditions for instrumental applicants to the Berkshire Music Center, and for tuition scholarships from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, will be held at Symphony Hall on Friday, April 29 from 10 a. m. to 12 noon.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 55,423

MAY 2 - 1955

Jazz at Tanglewood

Those eyebrows which rose at the of a jazz center near Tanglewood well go back to normal. No harm w done.

For many delightful years now, Ta wood has been making its disting record as the country's foremost S center of music. The Boston Sy and the many soloists who have app in the big Music Shed, and the sm ensembles of one kind or another w have enriched the Tanglewood pro through the years, have helped to b a great tradition. Tanglewood has a place in America's musical life, and place is secure. It is a fine memori the late Koussevitzky.

But the classics of music have monopoly claim on the Berkshire Harsh as jazz may be to some wh exclusively for Brahms and Bach, it n theless has its place, and the people now propose a jazz center this Su near Tanglewood think that place is portant. Oddly enough, there are a many music enthusiasts who like l quantities of both classics and m conventional and jazz. At Tanglewood Summer they will have a choice. T may be converts to both schools.

PITTSBURGH, PA.
SUN-TELEGRAPH

APR 18 1955

Auditions Set

Final auditions for admission to Berkshire Music Center and tuition scholarships from the Tanglewood Scholarship Fund, will be held in Carnegie Tech Exhibition Hall on April 29 from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m. Applicants should notify the Registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston, for forms and catalog.

Cir. (D 74,995) (S 59,910)

This Clipping From
BRIDGEPORT, CONN.
POST

APR 3 1955

Auditions for admission to the Opera department of the Berkshire Music Center—Tanglewood—will be conducted at Carnegie recital hall in New York city on Thursday, April 14, from 1 to 3 p. m. An accompanist will be present. Applicants should notify the school office of their intention to attend the audition.... Arthur Herzog, Jr., was in the city to do a bit of drum beating for the still-unreleased United Artists movie "Not As a Stranger".... The Oakdale Musical Circus in Wallingford bows for its second season on June 3 with "Guys and Dolls" ...."The Honeys," which opened in New Haven, has delayed its Broadway premiere and will stay on the road for another week.... A twin movie bill that is really doing business at the box office is at the Beverly and Hi-Way—"On the Waterfront" and "Caine Mutiny." The theaters are playing o standees.

---

220 W. 19th St., NEWYORK 11,...
Tel. CHelsea 3-8860

Cir. (D 124,110) (S 382,056)

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE

APR 3 1955

Berkshire Festival Lists Beethoven Chamber Music Series

Famous chamber groups are announced for a series of six Wednesday evenings concerts in the Theatre at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., as part of the Berkshire Festival to be given there next Summer (July 6-Aug. 14) by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Music Director. The programs for the Festival will not only include the larger works of Beethoven, but will have these six programs of his chamber music.

They will be as follows:

The Kroll String Quartet on Wednesday, July 6—Beethoven Quartets: Op. 18, No. 4; Op. 95 (Serioso); Op. 131 (C sharp minor).

Beaux Arts Trio on July 13—Trios: Op. 1, No. 3; Op. 70, No. 1 ("Ghost"); Op. 97 ("Archduke").

Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin on July 20—Violin Sonatas: Op. 12, No. 2; Op. 24 ("Spring"); Op. 30, No. 2.

New Music String Quartet on July 27—String Quartets: Op. 18, No. 2; Op. 127; Op. 132.

Rudolf Serkin on Aug. 3—Piano Sonatas: Op. 10, Nos. 2 and 3; Op. 106 ("Hammerklavier").

Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz on Aug. 10—The Five Cello Sonatas: Op. 5, Nos. 1 and 2; Op. 69; Op. 102, Nos. 1 and 2.

These Wednesday concerts, representing the music of Beethoven in smaller forms, will precede concerts each week on Friday evening, Saturday evening, and Sunday afternoon; the first two weeks in the Theatre, the last four weeks in the great Music Shed. Inquiries should be addressed to the Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston, Massachusetts.

Tel. CHelsea 3-8860

Cir. (D 131,670) (S 258,529)

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD

APR 3 - 195

Top Chamber Groups At Berkshire Fete

Famous chamber groups are announced for a series of six Wednesday evening concerts in the Theatre at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. as part of the Berkshire Festival to be given there next summer (July 6-August 14) by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Music Director. The programs for the Festival will not only include the larger works of Beethoven, but will have these six programs of his chamber music.

The Kroll String Quartet on Wednesday, July 6—Beethoven Quartet: Op. 18, No. 4; Op. 95 (Serioso); Op. 131 (C sharp minor).

Beaux Arts Trio on July 13—Trios: Op. 1, No. 3; Op. 70, No. 1 ("Ghost"); Op. 97 ("Archduke").

Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin on July 20 — Violin Sonatas: Op. 12, No. 2; Op. 24 ("Spring"); Op. 30, No. 2.

New Music String Quartet on July 27—String Quartets: Op. 18, No. 2; Op. 127; Op. 132.

Rudolf Serkin on August 3—Piano Sonatas: Op. 10, Nos. 2 and 3; Op. 106 ("Hammerklavier").

Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz on August 10—The Five Cello Sonatas: Op. 5, Nos. 1 and 2; Op. 69; Op. 109, Nos. 1 and 2.

These Wednesday concerts, representing the music of Beethoven in smaller forms, will precede concerts each week on Friday evening, Saturday evening, and Sunday afternoon; the first two weeks in the Theatre, the last four weeks in the great Music Shed. Inquiries should be addressed to the Festival Office Symphony Hall, Boston.

LAWRENCE, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 34,905

APR 29 1955

EASTERN STAR NIGHT AT "POPS"

647

Members and friends of Lawrence Chapter No. 78 Order of the Eastern Star will be welcomed by Mrs. Mary Morton, W.M., at the annual Eastern Star night at Pops at Symphony Hall in Boston, Thursday, May 26.

The floor and first balcony have been reserved until May 16, by the Grand Chapter of Massachusetts, O.E.S. This concert will benefit the benevolences of the order.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN

APR 3 - 1955

Auditions Next Week For Opera Departmen

Boston, April 2—Auditions for admission to the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, will be held at Symphony Hall here Saturday morning, the 16th, from 10 to 12 noon. An accompanist will be present. This summer will mark the 13th summer session and will extend from July 4 to Aug. 14.

Applicants should notify the school office of their intention to attend these auditions. Address the Registrar, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass. Catalog and ap-

---

PITTSBURGH, PA.
PRESS

APR 17 1955

Music Scholarship Auditions to Be Held

Final auditions for admission to the Berkshire Music Center and for tuition scholarships will be held at Carnegie Institute of Technology from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m., April 29.

Applicants must apply to the registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston, for application forms and catalog.

PITTSBURGH, PA.
POST-GAZETTE

APR 19 1955

Berkshire Center Auditions April 29

Final auditions for admission to the Berkshire Music Center and for tuition scholarships from the Tanglewood revolving scholarship fund will be held Friday, April 29, from 11:30 a. m. to 2:30 p. m. in Exhibition Hall at Carnegie Tech.

Those who intend to audition should notify the registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston.

Tel. CHelsea 3-8860

Cir. (D 124,110) (S 382,056)

This Clipping From
BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE

APR 3 1955

Berkshire Opera Auditions, April 16

Auditions for admission to the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, will be held at Symphony Hall, Boston, on Saturday morning, April 16 from 10 to 12 noon. An accompanist will be present.

The Berkshire Music Center is the Summer school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood—Lenox, Mass. This Summer marks the 13th session and will extend from July 4 to Aug. 14.

Applicants should notify the school office of their intention to attend these auditions. Address: The Registrar, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass. Catalogue and application forms may be obtained by writing to the above address.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN

APR 17 1955

FINAL AUDITIONS FOR TANGLEWOOD

Boston, April 16—Final auditions for instrumental applicants to the Berkshire Music Center, and for tuition scholarships from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, will be held at: Symphony Hall Friday, the 29th, 10 a. m. to 12 noon. (enter back stage door).

Pianists and string players may apply for the chamber music division as a full-time activity. All applicants intending to audition should notify the registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston, for application forms and catalog.

The Berkshire Music Center is maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra as an opportunity for six weeks of music study during the summer in connection with the concerts of the Berkshire Festival. This summer from July 4 to Aug. 14, the 13 session of the school will be held. Charles Munch is the director, and a distinguished faculty includes principals and other members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

HARTFORD, CONN.
COURANT

APR 3 - 1955

Tanglewood Auditions In New York April 14

Auditions for admission to the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center — Tanglewood—will be held at Carnegie Recital Hall — New York City —on Thursday, April 14 from 1 to 3 p.m. An accompanist will be present. The Berkshire Music Center is the summer school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival—Tanglewood —Lenox, Massachusetts. This summer marks the thirteenth session and extends from July 4 to August 14. Applicants should notify the school office of their intention to attend these auditions. Address — The Registrar, Symphony Ha" Boston 15, Massachusetts.

Cir. (D 103,308)

This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES

APR 2 1955

Tanglewood Opera Auditions Apr. 14

Tanglewood opera department auditions wil be held Apr. 14 from 1 to 3 p. m. in Carnegie Hall, New York. Applicants for admission to this 13th session of the Boston Symphony's Summer school of music should notify the registrar at Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass. School will run July 4 to Aug. 14 at Lenox, Mass., in connection with the Berkshire Music Festival.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.
REPORTER-DISPATCH

APR 11 1955

Down the Scale

Piano Teachers' I

By RUTH K. NOLAN

13d...

(Franck); "Sonatine, Opus 13," oboe and piano (Mihalovici); and "Trio, E Flat" (Brahms).

Students will be auditioned at a reduced [illegible]

Easte[illegible] Set b[illegible]

The annual East[illegible] guest night of the studio of [illegible]ne Beeson Fry will be held at the studio, 2 Orchard Parway, on Wednesday at 8 [illegible]

Berkshire Auditions Slated for Thursday

Westchester singers who wish to take part in the auditions for admission to the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood this season may attend the auditions on Thursday from 1 to 3 P.M. at the Carnegie Recital Hall in New York. An accompanist will be present. The Center is the music school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Music Festival, which this Summer marks its 13th session and extends from July 4 to Aug. 14

Miss W

BOSTON, MASS.
AMERICAN

APR 15 1955

Final Tanglewood Auditions

Final auditions for instrumental applicants to the Berkshire Music Center and for tuition scholarships from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund will be held at Symphony Hall on Friday, April 29, from 10 a. m. to 12 noon. All applicants intending to audition should notify the Registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston, for application forms and catalog.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.
INQUIRER

APR 17 1955

Tanglewood Auditions Listed Here April 30

Final auditions for admission to the Berkshire Music Center, and for tuition scholarships from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, will be held at the Academy of Vocal Arts, 1920 Spruce st., April 30 from 1 to 4 P. M.

Applicants intending to audition should notify the Registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston, for application forms and catalog.

The Berkshire Music Center is maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra as an opportunity for six weeks of study in connection with the Berkshire Festival concerts from July 4 to Aug. 14.

Ralph Berkowitz, dean, and William Kroll, of the chamber music department, will be present for the auditions and interviews.

Auditions April 16 For Berkshire Opera

Ap3
HERALD

Auditions for admission to the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center — Tanglewood — will be held at Symphony Hall, Boston on Saturday morning April 16 from 10 to 12 noon. An accompanist will be present. The Berkshire Music Center is the summer school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood—Lenox, Mass. This summer marks the thirteenth session and will extend from July 4 to August 14. Applicants should notify the school office of their intention to attend these auditions. Address—The Registrar, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass. Catalogue and application forms may be obtained by writing to the above address.

BURLINGTON, VT.
NEWS

APR 17 1955

Tanglewood Auditions

BOSTON —Final auditions for instrumental applicants to the Berkshire Music Center, and for tuition scholarships from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, will be held at Symphony Hall on Friday, April 29 from 10 a. m. to 12 noon.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 55,423

MAY 2 - 1955

Jazz at Tanglewood

Those eyebrows which rose at the of a jazz center near Tanglewood may well go back to normal. No harm will be done.

For many delightful years now, Tanglewood has been making its distinguished record as the country's foremost Summer center of music. The Boston Symphony and the many soloists who have appeared in the big Music Shed, and the smaller ensembles of one kind or another which have enriched the Tanglewood program through the years, have helped to build up a great tradition. Tanglewood has a high place in America's musical life, and that place is secure. It is a fine memorial to the late Koussevitzky.

But the classics of music have no monopoly claim on the Berkshire hills. Harsh as jazz may be to some who go exclusively for Brahms and Bach, it nevertheless has its place, and the people who now propose a jazz center this Summer near Tanglewood think that place is important. Oddly enough, there are a great many music enthusiasts who like large quantities of both classics and modern conventional and jazz. At Tanglewood this Summer they will have a choice. They may be converts to both schools.

TIGHT BINDING

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326

MAY 2 - 1955

Soloists Announced For Tanglewood Concerts by Munch

Vocal and instrumental soloists who will appear with the Boston Symphony orchestra at the Berkshire Music festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, this summer, were announced today by Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra.

Munch on Vacation

Mr. Munch, who closed the 74th Boston concert season of the orchestra Saturday night, will fly early next week to France for a two-month vacation, returning for the opening of Tanglewood July 8.

The principal works of Beethoven, including the nine symphonies choral works, concertos and chamber works, will comprise a large part of this year's festival program, requiring a large number of soloists.

A quartet for the Missa Solemnis, to be conducted by Leonard Bernstein on Aug. 5 in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, will be comprised of Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Mac Morgan, bass. The Ninth symphony, with which Mr. Munch will close the festival, will have the following soloists: Adele Addison, Catherine Akos, David Lloyd, and Donald Gramm. Mr. Munch will also conduct the second act of Beethoven's "Fidelio" in concert form Aug. 6 with the following soloists: Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd and Mac Morgan. Bach's Mass in B minor will be given July 10 with the following soloists: Adele Addison, Florence Koeleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm. Jennie Tourel, soprano, will sing airs of Mozart on July 15. Leontyne Price, soprano, will sing in Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard" on July 29.

In Small Concerts

Instrumental soloists in the "Bach-Mozart" concerts during the first two week-ends in the theater-concert hall will include Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute, July 8 (Bach's Suite No. 2); Joseph de Pasquale, viola, July 9 ("Der Schwanendreher"); and Samuel Mayes, July 16 (Boccherini's 'Cello concerto).

The concerts in the music shed through the last four week-ends will include Isaac Stern, July 22 (Beethoven's violin concerto); Rudolf Serkin, July 30 (Beethoven's Fifth piano concerto); Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky, July 31 (Brahms' concerto for violin and 'cello); Eugene Istomin, Aug. 7 (Beethoven's Fourth piano concerto); and Gregor Piatigorsky, Aug. 12 (Bloch's "Schelomo"). Guest conductors will be Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein and Thor Johnson. The chamber music of Beethoven will be performed at six successive Wednesday evening concerts by the Kroll string quartet, Beaux Arts trio, Isaac Stern, the New Music String quartet, Rudolf Serkin and Gregor Piatigorsky.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,468

MAY 1 9 1955

Scholarships Aid Summer Students At Tanglewood

More than a dozen special scholarships and tuition aids to summer music students are being offered by the Berkshire Music Center, the school of music operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, July 3-August 14, in connection with its annual Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, is the school's director; Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the orchestra, is acting assistant director; Ralph Berkowitz is dean.

The principal aid to the 400 students selected annually from applicants from all over the U.S., Canada and abroad, is the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, which in 1954 awarded grants for the tuition of 196 students. Established in 1947 by gifts from the RCA-Vivtor Division of the Radio Corporation of America, and since augmented from other sources, the fund is drawn upon each year to aid students selected as instrumentalists, conductors, singers and composers, and is reimbursed by students when they are able to do so in order that others may benefit in future school years.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 357,463

MAY 1 - 1955

Symphony Season Ends; Munch Vacations; Berkshire Festival Soloists Announced

Charles Munch brought the 74th season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to a close last night in Symphony Hall with Beethoven's Fifth Symphony. Having completed his sixth year with this orchestra, Mr. Munch will fly to France early next week for two months of vacation. He will return to open on July 8 the Berkshire Festival given by his orchestra in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The principal works of Beethoven, occupying a considerable part of the programs in the course of the Festival (July 6-August 14) will include the nine symphonies, choral works, concertos, and chamber works. This will require a number of soloists, both vocal and instrumental.

The vocal soloists, here announced, will consist of the following quartet for the Missa Solemnis, to be conducted by Leonard Bernstein on Aug. 5 in memory of Serge Koussevitzky: Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Mac Morgan, bass.

The Ninth Symphony, with which Mr. Munch will close the Festival, will have the following soloists: Adele Addison, Catherine Akos, David Lloyd, and Donald Gramm.

Mr. Munch will also conduct the second act of Beethoven's "Fidelio" in concert form on Aug. 6 with the following soloists: Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd and Mac Morgan.

Bach's Mass in B minor will be given on July 10 with the following soloists: Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm.

Jennie Tourel, soprano, will sing airs of Mozart on July 15.

Leontyne Price, soprano, will sing in Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard" on July 29.

Bach-Mozart Concerts

Instrumental soloists in the Bach-Mozart concerts during the first two week-ends in the Theatre Concert Hall will include Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute, July 8, (Bach's Suite No. 2); Joseph de Pasquale, viola, July 9 ("Der Schwanendreher"); and Samuel Mayes, July 16 (Boccherini's Cello Concerto).

Soloists for the concerts in the Music Shed through the last four week-ends will include Isaac Stern, July 22 (Beethoven's Violin Concerto); Rudolph Serkin, July 30 (Beethoven's Fifth Piano Concerto); Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky, July 31 (Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello); Eugene Istomin, Aug. 7 (Beethoven's Fourth Piano Concerto); and Gregor Piatigorsky, Aug. 12 (Bloch's "Schelomo").

Guest conductors will be Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein and Thor Johnson. The chamber music of Beethoven will be performed at six successive Wednesday evening concerts by the Kroll String Quartet, Beaux Arts Trio, Isaac Stern, the New Music String Quartet, Rudolf Serkin and Gregor Piatigorsky.

Subscription tickets are still being sold at the Subscription Office, in Symphony Hall, the season sale to end June 1.

HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 109,680

1 4 1955

Tanglewood Has Rival in Jazz

New York—(UP)—Just a mile down the road from the Boston Symphony's famous "Music Shed" at Tanglewood in the Berkshires, there will be a "Music Barn" this summer, and in this barn such musicians as Count Basie and Dizzy Gillespie will hold forth.

The "Music Shed" is the core of the long-established Berkshire Summer Festival which attracts tens of thousands of music-lovers and big-name performing musicians devoted to so-called "classical" or "serious" music.

The "Music Barn," sponsored by Stephanie and Philip Barber, plans a five-week season, beginning July 10, devoted to modern jazz, folk music, and to a "modern jazz workshop." Among the scheduled performers, in addition to Basie and Gillespie, are Coleman Hawkins and Richard Dyer-Bennet, folk singer.

American
ELLSWORTH, Me.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 2,567

MAY 1 8 1955

Music Supervisor To Study At Tanglewood

Morton Gold, music supervisor of the Ellsworth Public Schools, has been a [illegible] active student in The Coral Conducting Department at Tanglewood, Mass., and has been awarded a full scholarship to study there this summer. Tanglewood, is a center for advanced study maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and is the home of the Berkshire Music Center. At Tanglewood, Mr. Gold will work under the guidance of the internationally known conductor, High Ross.

MORTON GOLD

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 248,071

MAY 1 - 1955

Munch Ends Season, Summer Soloists Set

Charles Munch brought the 74th season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to a close last night in Symphony Hall with Beethoven's Fifth Symphony. Having completed his sixth year with this orchestra, Mr. Munch will fly to France early next week for two months vacation. He will return to open in July 8 the Berkshire Festival given by his orchestra in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The principal works of Beethoven, occupyinga a considerable part of the programs in the course of the Festival (July 6-August 14) will include the nine symphonies, choral works, concertos, and chamber works. This will require a number of soloists, both vocal and instrumental. The vocal soloists, here announced, will consist of the following quartet for the Missa Solemnis, to be conducted by Leonard Bernstein on August 5 in memory of Serge Koussevitzky: Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd tenor; and Mac Morgan, bass The Ninth Symphony, with which Mr. Munch will close the Festival, will have the following soloists: Adele Addison, Catherine Akos, David Lloyd, and Donald Gramm. Mr. Munch will also conduct the Second Act of Beethoven's "Fidelio" in concert form on August 6 with the following soloists: Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd and Mac Morgan. Bach's Mass in B minor will be given on July 10 with the following soloists: Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm. Jennie Tourel, soprano, will sing airs of Mozart on July 15. Leontyne Price, soprano, will sing in Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard" on July 29.

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 101,022

MAY 14 1955

Series of Grants to Aid Music School in Lenox

BOSTON, May 14 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer music school at Tanglewood in Lenox, will benefit from a series of grants from the Rockefeller Foundation.

Beginning this Summer, the Rockefeller Foundation will donate a sum matching money raised from other sources for the support of the Berkshire music center, the only school of music in the country maintained by a symphony orchestra. A spokesman said the five announced donations can amount to $125,000.

Grants totalling $65,000 in 1940-41 enabled the Boston Symphony to start the Summer music school. The future assistance will maintain the undertaking on a secure financial basis.

Henry B. Cabot, president of the Boston Symphony trustees, said "If the friends of the Berkshire music center will really rally to its support the future of the school is assured."

Contributions to the music school last year totalled some $2[illegible],000. This year a goal of at least $35,000 is sought.

Banner (e)
BENNINGTON, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 4,685

MAY 2 - 1955

Soloists Named For Berkshire Festival in July

BOSTON — Charles Munch brought the 74th season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to a close Saturday in Symphony Hall with Beethoven's Fifth Symphony. Having completed his sixth year with this orchestra, Mr. Münch will fly to France early next week for two months of vacation. He will return to open on July 8 the Berkshire Festival given by his orchestra in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The principal works of Beethoven, occupying a considerable part of the programs in the course of the Festival (July 6 - August 14) will include the nine symphonies, choral works, concertos, and chamber works. This will require a number of soloists, both vocal and instrumental. The vocal soloists, here announced, will consist of the following quartet for the Missa Solemnis, to be conducted by Leonard Bernstein on August 5 in memory of Serge Koussevitzky Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Mac Morgan, bass. The Ninth Symphony, with which Mr. Munch will close the Festival, will have the following soloists: Adele Addison, Catherine Akos, David Lloyd and Donald Gramm. Mr. Munch will also conduct the Second Act of Beethoven's "Fidelio" in concert form on August 6 with the following soloists: Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd and Mac Morgan. Bach's Mass in B minor will be given on July 10 with the following soloists: Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm. Jennie Tourel, soprano, will sing airs of Mozart on July 15. Leontype Price, soprano, will sing in Barber's "Prayers of Keirkegaard" on July 29.

Instrumental soloists in the "Bach - Mozart" concerts during the first two weekends in the Theatre Concert Hall will include Doriot Anthony Rwyer, flute, July 8 (Bach's Suite No. 2); Joseph de Pasquale, viola, July 9 ("Der Schwanendreher"); and Samuel Mayes, July 16 (Boccherini's Cello Concerto.)

The concerts in the Music Shed through the last four weekends will include Isaac Stern, July 22 Beethoven's Violin Concerto); Rudolph Serkin, July 30 to); Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky, July 31 (Brahm's Concerto for Violin and Cello); Eugene Istomin, August 7 (Beethoven's Fourth Piano Concerto); and Gregor Piatigorsky, August 12 (Bloch's "Schelomo"). Guest conductors will be Pierre Monteux Leonard Bernstein and Thor Johnson. The chamber music of Beethoven will be performed at six successive Wednesday evening concerts by The Kroll String Quartet, Beaux Arts Trio, Isaas Stern, the New Music String Quartet, Rudolf Serkin and Gregor Piatigorsky.

Subscription tickets are still being sold at the Subscription Office, in Symphony Hall, the season sale to end June 1.

American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 185,401

MAY 2 - 1955

Evening Concerts at Tanglewood

Famous chamber groups are announced for a series of six Wednesday evening concerts in the Theater at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. as part of the Berkshire Festival to be given there next summer (July 6-August 14) by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Music Director. The programs for the Festival will not only include the larger works of Beethoven, but will have these six programs of his chamber music.

The Kroll String Quartet on Wednesday, July 6—Beethoven Quartets: Op. 18, No. 4; Op. 95 (Serioso); Op. 131 (C sharp minor).

Beaux Arts Trio on July 13—Trios: Op. 1, No. 3; Op. 70, No. 1 ("Ghost"); Op. 97 ("Archduke").

Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin on July 20—Violin Sonatas: Op. 12, No. 2; Op. 24 ("Spring"); Op. 30, No. 2.

New Music String Quartet on July 27—String Quartets: Op. 18, No. 2; Op. 127; Op. 132.

Rudolf Serkin on Aug. 3—Piano Sonatas: Op. 10, Nos. 2 and 3; Op. 106 ("Hammerklavier").

Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz on Aug. 10—The Five Cello Sonatas: Op. 5, Nos. 1 and 2; Op. 69; Op. 102, Nos. 1 and 2.

TIGHT BINDING

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326

MAY 2 - 1955

Soloists Announced For Tanglewood Concerts by Munch

Vocal and instrumental soloists who will appear with the Boston Symphony orchestra at ~~the Berkshire Music festival~~ at Tanglewood, Lenox, this summer, were announced today by Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra.

Munch on Vacation

Mr. Munch, who closed the 74th Boston concert season of the orchestra Saturday night, will fly early next week to France for a two-month vacation, returning for the opening of Tanglewood July 8.

The principal works of Beethoven, including the nine symphonies choral works, concertos and chamber works, will comprise a large part of this year's festival program, requiring a large number of soloists.

A quartet for the Missa Solemnis, to be conducted by Leonard Bernstein on Aug. 5 in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, will be comprised of Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Mac Morgan, bass. The Ninth symphony, with which Mr. Munch will close the festival, will have the following soloists: Adele Addison, Catherine Akos, David Lloyd, and Donald Gramm. Mr. Munch will also conduct the second act of Beethoven's "Fidelio" in concert form Aug. 6 with the following soloists: Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd and Mac Morgan. Bach's Mass in B minor will be given July 10 with the following soloists: Adele Addison, Florence Koeleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm. Jennie Tourel, soprano, will sing airs of Mozart on July 15. Leontyne Price, soprano, will sing in Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard" on July 29.

In Small Concerts

Instrumental soloists in the "Bach-Mozart" concerts during the first two week-ends in the theater-concert hall will include Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute, July 8 (Bach's Suite No. 2); Joseph de Pasquale, viola, July 9 ("Der Schwanendreher"); and Samuel Mayes, July 16 (Boccherini's 'Cello concerto).

The concerts in the music shed through the last four week-ends will include Isaac Stern, July 22 (Beethoven's violin concerto); Rudolf Serkin, July 30 (Beethoven's Fifth piano concerto); Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky, July 31 (Brahms' concerto for violin and 'cello); Eugene Istomin, Aug. 7 (Beethoven's Fourth piano concerto); and Gregor Piatigorsky, Aug. 12 (Bloch's "Schelomo"). Guest conductors will be Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein and Thor Johnson. The chamber music of Beethoven will be performed at six successive Wednesday evening concerts by the Kroll string quartet, Beaux Arts trio, Isaac Stern, the New Music String quartet, Rudolf Serkin and Gregor Piatigorsky.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,468

MAY 19 1955

Scholarships Aid Summer Students At Tanglewood

More than a dozen special cholarships and tuition aids to ummer music students are being ffered by the Berkshire Music Center, the school of music operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, July ~~3-August 14,~~ in connection with its annual Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, s the school's director; Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the orchestra, is acting assistant director; Ralph Berkowitz is dean.

The principal aid to the 400 students selected annually from applicants from all over the U.S., Canada and abroad, is the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, which in 1954 awarded grants for the tuition of 196 students. Established in 1947 by gifts from the RCA-Vivtor Division of the Radio Corporation of America, and since augmented from other sources, the fund is drawn upon each year to aid students selected as instrumentalists, conductors, singers and composers, and is reimbursed by students when they are able to do so in order that others may benefit in future school years.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 357,463

MAY 1 - 1955

Symphony Season Ends; Munch Vacations; Berkshire Festival Soloists Announced

Charles Munch brought the 74th season ~~of the Boston~~ Symphony Orchestra to a close last night in Symphony Hall with Beethoven's Fifth Symphony. Having completed his sixth year with this orchestra, Mr. Munch will fly to France early next week for two months of vacation. He will return to open on July 8 the Berkshire Festival given by his orchestra in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The principal works of Beethoven, occupying a considerable part of the programs in the course of the Festival (July 6-August 14) will include the nine symphonies, choral works, concertos, and chamber works. This will require a number of soloists, both vocal and instrumental.

The vocal soloists, here announced, will consist of the following quartet for the Missa Solemnis, to be conducted by Leonard Bernstein on Aug. 5 in memory of Serge Koussevitzky: Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Mac Morgan, bass.

The Ninth Symphony, with which Mr. Munch will close the Festival, will have the following soloists: Adele Addison, Catherine Akos, David Lloyd, and Donald Gramm.

Mr. Munch will also conduct the second act of Beethoven's "Fidelio" in concert form on Aug. 6 with the following soloists: Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd and Mac Morgan.

Bach's Mass in B minor will be given on July 10 with the following soloists: Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm.

Jennie Tourel, soprano, will sing airs of Mozart on July 15.

Leontyne Price, soprano, will sing in Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard" on July 29.

Bach-Mozart Concerts

Instrumental soloists in the Bach-Mozart concerts during the first two week-ends in the Theatre Concert Hall will include Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute, July 8, (Bach's Suite No. 2); Joseph de Pasquale, viola, July 9 ("Der Schwanendreher"); and Samuel Mayes, July 16 (Boccherini's Cello Concerto).

Soloists for the concerts in the Music Shed through the last four week-ends will include Isaac Stern, July 22 (Beethoven's Violin Concerto); Rudolph Serkin, July 30 (Beethoven's Fifth Piano Concerto); Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky, July 31 (Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello); Eugene Istomin, Aug. 7 (Beethoven's Fourth Piano Concerto); and Gregor Piatigorsky, Aug. 12 (Bloch's "Schelomo").

Guest conductors will be Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein and Thor Johnson. The chamber music of Beethoven will be performed at six successive Wednesday evening concerts by the Kroll String Quartet, Beaux Arts Trio, Isaac Stern, the New Music String Quartet, Rudolf Serkin and Gregor Piatigorsky.

Subscription tickets are still being sold at the Subscription Office, in Symphony Hall, the season sale to end June 1.

HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 109,680

1 1955

Tanglewood Has Rival in Jazz

New York—(UP)—Just a mile down the road from the Boston Symphony's famous "Music Shed" at Tanglewood in the Berkshires, there will be a "Music Barn" this summer, and in this barn such musicians as Count Basie and Dizzy Gillespie will hold forth.

The "Music Shed" is the core of the long-established Berkshire Summer Festival which attracts tens of thousands of music-lovers and big-name performing musicians devoted to so-called "classical" or "serious" music.

The "Music Barn," sponsored by Stephanie and Philip Barber, plans a five-week season, beginning July 10, devoted to modern jazz, folk music, and to a "modern jazz workshop." Among the scheduled performers, in addition to Basie and Gillespie, are Coleman Hawkins and Richard Dyer-Bennet, folk singer.

American
ELLSWORTH, Me.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 2,567

MAY 18 1955

Music Supervisor To Study At Tanglewood

Morton Gold, music supervisor of the Ellsworth Public Schools,, has been a[illegible] active student in The Coral Conducting Department at Tanglewood, Mass., and has been awarded a full scholarship to study there this summer. Tanglewood, is a center for advanced study maintained by the ~~Boston Symphony~~ Orchestra, and is the home of the Berkshire Music Center. At Tanglewood, Mr. Gold will work under the guidance of the internationally known conductor, High Ross.

MORTON GOLD

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 248,071

MAY 1 - 1955

Munch Ends Season, Summer Soloists Set

Charles Munch brought the 74th season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to a close last night in Symphony Hall with Beethoven's Fifth Symphony. Having completed his sixth year with this orchestra, Mr. Munch will fly to France early next week for two months vacation. He will return to open in July 8 the Berkshire Festival given by his orchestra in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The principal works of Beethoven, occupyinga a considerable part of the programs in the course of the Festival (July 6-August 14) will include the nine symphonies, choral works, concertos, and chamber works. This will require a number of soloists, both vocal and instrumental. The vocal soloists, here announced, will consist of the following quartet for the Missa Solemnis, to be conducted by Leonard Bernstein on August 5 in memory of Serge Koussevitzky: Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd tenor; and Mac Morgan, bass The Ninth Symphony, with which Mr. Munch will close the Festival, will have the following soloists: Adele Addison, Catherine Akos, David Lloyd, and Donald Gramm. Mr. Munch will also conduct the Second Act of Beethoven's "Fidelio" in concert form on August 6 with the following soloists: Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd and Mac Morgan. Bach's Mass in B minor will be given on July 10 with the following soloists: Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm. Jennie Tourel, soprano, will sing airs of Mozart on July 15. Leontyne Price, soprano, will sing in Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard" on July 29.

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 101,022

14 1955

Series of Grants to Aid Music School in Lenox

BOSTON, May 14 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer music school at Tanglewood in Lenox, will benefit from a series of grants from the Rockefeller Foundation.

Beginning this Summer, the Rockefeller Foundation will donate a sum matching money raised from other sources for the support of the Berkshire music center, the only school of music in the country maintained by a symphony orchestra. A spokesman said the five announced donations can amount to $125,000.

Grants totalling $65,000 in 1940-41 enabled the Boston Symphony to start the Summer music school. The future assistance will maintain the undertaking on a secure financial basis.

Henry B. Cabot, president of the Boston Symphony trustees, said "If the friends of the Berkshire music center will really rally to its support the future of the school is assured."

Contributions to the music school last year totalled some $25,000. This year a goal of at least $35,000 is sought.

Banner (e)
BENNINGTON, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 4,685

MAY 2 - 1955

Soloists Named For Berkshire Festival in July

BOSTON — Charles Munch brought the 74th season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to a close Saturday in Symphony Hall with Beethoven's Fifth Symphony. Having completed his sixth year with this orchestra, Mr. Münch will fly to France early next week for two months of vacation. He will return to open on July 8 the Berkshire Festival given by his orchestra in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The principal works of Beethoven, occupying a considerable part of the programs in the course of the Festival (July 6 - August 14) will include the nine symphonies, choral works, concertos, and chamber works. This will require a number of soloists, both vocal and instrumental. The vocal soloists, here announced, will consist of the following quartet for the Missa Solemnis, to be conducted by Leonard Bernstein on August 5 in memory of Serge Koussevitzky Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Mac Morgan, bass. The Ninth Symphony, with which Mr. Munch will close the Festival, will have the following soloists: Adele Addison, Catherine Akos, David Lloyd and Donald Gramm. Mr. Munch will also conduct the Second Act of Beethoven's "Fidelio" in concert form on August 6 with the following soloists: Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd and Mac Morgan. Bach's Mass in B minor will be given on July 10 with the following soloists: Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm. Jennie Tourel, soprano, will sing airs of Mozart on July 15. Leontyne Price, soprano, will sing in Barber's "Prayers of Keirkegaard" on July 29.

Instrumental soloists in the "Bach - Mozart" concerts during the first two weekends in the Theatre Concert Hall will include Doriot Anthony Rwyer, flute, July 8 (Bach's Suite No. 2); Joseph de Pasquale, viola, July 9 ("Der Schwanendreher"); and Samuel Mayes, July 16 (Boccherini's Cello Concerto.)

The concerts in the Music Shed through the last four weekends will include Isaac Stern, July 22 Beethoven's Violin Concerto); Rudolph Serkin, July 30 to); Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky, July 31 (Brahm's Concerto for Violin and Cello); Eugene Istomin, August 7 (Beethoven's Fourth Piano Concerto); and Gregor Piatigorsky, August 12 (Bloch's "Schelomo"). Guest conductors will be Pierre Monteux Leonard Bernstein and Thor Johnson. The chamber music of Beethoven will be performed at six successive Wednesday evening concerts by The Kroll String Quartet, Beaux Arts Trio, Isaas Stern, the New Music String Quartet, Rudolf Serkin and Gregor Piatigorsky.

Subscription tickets are still being sold at the Subscription Office, in Symphony Hall, the season sale to end June 1.

American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 185,401

MAY 2 - 1955

Evening Concerts at Tanglewood

Famous chamber groups are announced for a series of six Wednesday evening concerts in the Theater at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. as part of the Berkshire Festival to be given there next summer (July 6-August 14) by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles ~~Munch, Music Director,~~ The programs for the Festival will not only include the larger works of Beethoven, but will have these six programs of his chamber music.

The Kroll String Quartet on Wednesday, July 6—Beethoven Quartets: Op. 18, No. 4; Op. 95 (Serioso); Op. 131 (C sharp minor).

Beaux Arts Trio on July 13—Trios: Op. 1, No. 3; Op. 70, No. 1 ("Ghost"); Op. 97 ("Archduke").

Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin on July 20—Violin Sonatas: Op. 12, No. 2; Op. 24 ("Spring"); Op. 30, No. 2.

New Music String Quartet on July 27—String Quartets: Op. 18, No. 2; Op. 127; Op. 132.

Rudolf Serkin on Aug. 3—Piano Sonatas: Op. 10, Nos. 2 and 3; Op. 106 ("Hammerklavier").

Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz on Aug. 10—The Five Cello Sonatas: Op. 5, Nos. 1 and 2; Op. 69; Op. 102, Nos. 1 and 2.

[100]

Springfield Republican; May 17th, 1955

Symphony Chorus Has Role In Program at Tanglewood

Group to Sing With Boston Orchestra On Aug. 14; Furnans Re-elected as President

The Springfield Symphony Chorus will participate in the Boston Symphony Orchestra's presentation of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on Aug. 14 at the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood.

Invites Group

Dr. Hugh Ross, choral director at Tanglewood, invited the group to participate last night as he addressed about 40 members of the chorus association at its annual meeting in Blake's Restaurant.

The presentation will include solos by Adele Addison, Springfield soprano; David Lloyd, tenor; Catherine Akos, contralto, and Donald Gramm, bass. Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony.

Ernest Furnans, Jr., president of the chorus, said that the invitation to the Springfield body was a great tribute to the late Dr. Alexander Leslie, who founded the local orchestra and chorus. He pointed out that the local chorus had been selected to sing at the Berkshire Festival last year in Berlioz' Requiem.

Furnans Re-elected

Dr. Ross said that he hoped more singers from Springfield would be available for the Ninth Symphony performance than were available last year. Only 50 choristers from this city participated in the presentation of the Requiem.

During the business portion of last night's meeting, Furnans was re-elected president. Others re-elected were: corresponding secretary, Mrs. Louise Folsom; treasurer, Miss Helen Zea, and assistant treasurer, Emerald F. Abbott. Newly-elected officers were vice-president, Mrs. Ruth Gebo; recording secretary, Mrs. Helen Ritscher, and librarian Leslie Bezanson.

Dr. Ross told the group that Dr. Leslie had been a brilliant man. Referring to the work accomplished by the late conductor here in Springfield, he said it was a "one-man achievement" and pointed out the difficulty in finding a man to fill Dr. Leslie's shoes.

Praises Dr. Leslie

"You need someone who can carry on your affairs both as a prophet and a missionary," said the speaker. "I have heard that you had 125 applications for the conductor's job and I'm not surprised."

Dr. Ross said that no one had expected that Dr. Leslie would do what he accomplished here in Springfield. He pointed out that the late conductor had managed to put into the same pot an orchestra, a chorus and a junior symphony.

The speaker suggested that in an attempt to increase its popularity, the chorus might bring in name musicians, vocalists or dancers to appear with it in concerts. He said that many established artists are often willing to come into a community for a small fee merely because they are interested in the artistic life of that community.

Dr. Ross hailed the upsurge of choral compositions being written by American composers. He declared, "We are living today in a rennaissance of writing for the chorus. This is particularly true in America."

During the meeting, tribute was paid by the president to both Dr. Leslie and Dr. Alfred M. Glickman, former president of the Springfield Symphony Association, who also died within the past year.

MUSIC ON TAPE

Ernest Furnans Jr., left, president of the Springfield Symphony Chorus, and Dr. Hugh Ross, choral director at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, look over several Springfield Symphony Orchestra and Chorus tape recordings at the annual meeting of chorus last night in Blake's Restaurant. Dr. Ross was the main speaker.

Lowell, Mass. Independent; May 13, 1955

MUSIC

ALFRED W. BURKE

LOWELL — The Chelmsford high school band will present its annual concert the latter part of this month. The occasion will find the band being joined by the baton twirlers, mixed choral group and guest soloist.

The band is made up of young instrumentalists who have gained much of the way of success and experience through a long series of programs of various types. For this occasion the band will play a concert list of selections well within the playing ability of advanced students.

Paul E. Bordeleau of this city is band director in Chelmsford. During the past season he has developed the group into a fine unit. Added to this has been his interest in the other musical groups connected with the music system in the town.

The newly organized dramatic club at the State Teachers college will present two performances of a famous production next Thursday and Friday evenings at the Little Theater at the college.

The Berkshire Music center, the summer school of music operated by the Boston Symphony orchestra annually since 1940 at Tanglewood, Lenox, in connection with its Berkshire festival, will benefit from a series of grants from the Rockefeller Foundation.

Over a period of five years, commencing this summer, the Rockefeller Foundation will donate a sum matching equally money raised from other sources for the support of the only school of music in this country maintained by a symphony orchestra. The five appropriations, to be made annually, can amount to $125,000.

A delightful musical was presented last Monday evening by the students of Paul E. Bordeleau. Following is the program:

"Pledging My Love"
Robey and Washington
"Melody of Love"
Glazer and Engleman
Paul Turcotte
Side By Side......Harry Woods
Angel's Serenade
Arr. by A. Small
Parade of the Wooden Soldiers
Leon Jessel
Paul Metros
Ballad of Davy Crockett
Blackburn and Burns
Moonlight Serenade
Glenn Miller
Faith Baldwin
Naila Waltz.......Leo Delibes
Allegro Ritmico...Joseph Haas
Paul Stamas
Tap Dancer ....Eckestein
Prelude .... Chopin
Romona....Arr. by G. Shearing
Mary Frances Hall
Theme from Scheherazade
Rimsky-Karsokov
Theme from 2nd Piano Concerto ....Rachmaninoff
Always ....Irving Berlin
Jean Devlin
March of Space Cadets
Paul Bordeleau
Tea for Two......V. Youmans
James King
Strike Up the Band
G. Gershwin
James King and Paul Bordeleau

The Guardian
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent

MAY 14 1955

Music Box

BY MAXINE SHAW

"Our Best" is the title of a new LP on the Clef Label. The title fits the Musical package like a glove. To Norman Granz, the Labels head man, we owe a vote of thanks. The selections and artists include: Oscar Peterson, tenderly; Lester Young, up 'N Adam; Roy Eldridge, Dale's Wail; Flip Phillips, Flying Home; Charlie Parker, Bloomido; Johnny Hodges, Castle Rock; Gene Krupa, St. Louis Blues; Billie Holiday, Yesterdays; Count Basie, Paradise Squat; Illinois Jacquet, Port of Rico; Chico O'Farrill, The Carioca; and Stan Getz, with his version of "Stars Fell On Alabama".

Stephanie and Phil Barber have lined up Coleman Hawkins, Art Farmer, Dizzy Gillespie, Teddy Charles and others for a series of jazz concerts at their Berkshires Music Barn this summer. Their club is on the same street as the Boston Symphony's music shed. For those who like the heavy types of music, go to the music shed during the Tanglewood season. If you tire of Mozart and Brahms, drop in to the Barn and hear the "Cool Sounds".

Rudy Vallee will play himself in the Vagabond Lover. The trade feels the biofilm should be a big box office draw. We know a lot of fans who agree.

David Carroll's Orchestra, under the direction of Jerry Mercer, are currently on a one nighter tour. The Mercury-Recording Ochestra is proving to be a top-draw. Their record versions of "Buck Dance", "In A Little Spanish Town" and "Gadabout" are still top sellers.

"Concert in the Sky," by Teddy Phillips and his band, is a very nice tribute to the Great Musicians of Yesterday. The Phillips crew offers impressions of Bunny Berigan, Eddy Duchin, Russ Columbo, Dave Tough, Ben Bernie, and other musical stars of bygone years. Disc Jockey Howard Miller narrates. A Decca LP.

Les Elgart and the band recently closed at the Hotel Statler in New York. The Elgart Aggregation features vocalist Don Forbes, Drummer Ted Sommers and the Alto Sax of Larry Elgart. Their is a strong possibiltdy of the crew playing the New England area this summer.

Gene Krupa and Cozy Cole are still teaching Drummers how it's done. They even have a correspondance course for those who can't make it to their New York Studio. Both are still active in recording and club dates.

NEW YORK POST, WEDNESDAY, MAY 25, 1955 76

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Berkshire Festival Opens July 6

Now that the warm, humid weather has thrust its sticky personality upon us, the thought of outdoor music under the stars and away from the city's hubbub is more than tempting.

The symphonic concerts at Lewisohn Stadium, which begin June 20th, offer us solace in this direction with little travel involved. But for those who don't mind a four-hour ride by train or car, the Berkshire Festival, which opens Wednesday, July 6, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., offers the pleasure of music mixed with cooler breezes, country atmosphere together with high hills, plus a Music Shed and Theater Concert Hall, each with a roof overhead in the event of rain.

In case I sound paradoxical about this music business under the stars, the 6,000-seat Music Shed is open on three sides, and the Theater Concert Hall, holding about 1,200, is pretty vacant too in the back and on the sides. Also, there is always the extensive grass for those with or without blankets, who yearn to sit outside for little money and have music wafted to them from a slightly longer distance.

Kroll Quartet Opens

The opening Wednesday, July 6th, chamber music concert will be played by the Kroll Quartet in the Theater Concert Hall, which will house all of the programs for the initial two weeks.

All-Beethoven will be the schedule, as follows: Quartets in C Minor, Op. 18, No. 4; in F Minor, Op. 95; in C Sharp Minor, Op. 131.

Friday night, July 8th, Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra will play the Bach Suite No. 2 for Flute and Strings with the ensemble's lady flutist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, as soloist. Mozart's "Prague" Symphony, K. 504, Stravinsky's "Orpheus," and Bach's Sinfonia from the "Easter" Cantata complete the program.

Saturday, July 9, Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony, will be guest maestro for a program which includes two works by Haydn, the Symphonie Concertante with Oboe, Bassoon, Violin and Cella; and the Symphony in B Flat, No. 98. Hindemith's "Der Schwandendreher" with Joseph de Pasquale as viola soloist, and Handel's Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12, complete the concert.

Sunday afternoon, July 10, the final event of the first week-end features the "Mass in B Minor" by Bach with the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society assisting. Soloists will be: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass.

Subscription tickets are being sold until June first at reduced rates over the single ticket price, at Symphony Hall, Boston. The Festival comprises six week-ends, ending Sunday, Aug. 14.

Music Tonight . . .

All City High School chorus and Orchestra. Carnegie Hall, 8:30.

Opera Workshop of Manhattan School of Music. "The Fatal Oath" by Boris Koutzen, world premiere. "Love Triumphant" by Cimarosa. American premiere. Hugh Ross, conductor. Hunter College Auditorium, 8:15.

Sunday Telegram
PORTLAND, Me.
Indep. Republican
Circ. 86,046

MAY 15 1955

Constance Anton, Katherine C

The Music World

Jazz Workshop To Share Scene With Symphony At Tanglewood

NEW YORK, May 14 (UP)—Just a mile down the road from the Boston Symphony's famous "Music Shed" at Tanglewood in the Berkshires, there will be a "Music Barn" this summer, and in this barn such musicians as Count Basie and Dizzy Gillespie will hold forth.

The "Music Shed" is the core of the long-established Berkshire Summer Festival which attracts tens of thousands of music-lovers and big-name performing musicians devoted to so-called "classical" or "serious" music.

The "Music Barn," sponsored by Stephanie and Philip Barber, plans a five-week season, beginning July 10, devoted to modern jazz, folk music, and to a "modern jazz workshop." Among the scheduled performers, in addition to Basie and Gillespie, are Coleman Hawkins and Richard Dyer-Bennet, folk singer.

In addition to the Dodgers Brooklyn now has a symphony orchestra. The Brooklyn Philharmonic made its debut with a series of three all-Beethoven programs on May 3, 5, and 7. It was organized under the guidance of Marks Levine, president of the National Concert and Artists Corporation and Julius Bloom, director of the Brooklyn Academy of Music.

The Philadelphia Orchestra is on its annual mid-western tour, with performances in Youngstown, O., Pittsburgh, Detroit, and Ann Arbor, Mich. Its musical director, Eugene Ormandy, was in charge and was doing most of the conducting.

Next month the orchestra sets out on a 30-day tour of Europe in which it will make 28 appearances.

Claudio Arrau, pianist, plans four New York concerts next season in which he will play all the authenticated solo piano music of Mozart. Next season marks the 200th anniversary of the birth of the composer.

Jack Buhler of Mountain View, Calif., who sells records and recording machines, has come up with a neat advertising gimmick that whets the appetite of music-lovers.

Each week Buhler makes a master tape recording of musical and religious programs and then invites owners of tape recorders for a re-recording session free of charge.

Through a "patch" system, Buhler can handle six recorders working off his master tape.

Springfield Republican; May 12th, 1955

Symphony Chorus Has Role In Program at Tanglewood

Group to Sing With Boston Orchestra On Aug. 14; Furnans Re-elected as President

The Springfield Symphony Chorus will participate in the Boston Symphony Orchestra's presentation of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on Aug. 14 at the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood.

Invites Group

Dr. Hugh Ross, choral director at Tanglewood, invited the group to participate last night as he addressed about 40 members of the chorus association at its annual meeting in Blake's Restaurant.

The presentation will include solos by Adele Addison, Springfield soprano; David Lloyd, tenor; Catherine Akos, contralto, and Donald Gramm, bass. Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony.

Ernest Furnans, Jr., president of the chorus, said that the invitation to the Springfield body was a great tribute to the late Dr. Alexander Leslie, who founded the local orchestra and chorus. He pointed out that the local chorus had been selected to sing at the Berkshire Festival last year in Berlioz' Requiem.

Furnans Re-elected

Dr. Ross said that he hoped more singers from Springfield would be available for the Ninth Symphony performance than were available last year. Only 50 choristers from this city participated in the presentation of the Requiem.

During the business portion of last night's meeting, Furnans was re-elected president. Others re-elected were: corresponding secretary, Mrs. Louise Folsom; treasurer, Miss Helen Zea, and assistant treasurer, Emerald F. Abbott. Newly-elected officers were vice-president, Mrs. Ruth Gebo; recording secretary, Mrs. Helen Ritscher, and librarian Leslie Bezanson.

Dr. Ross told the group that Dr. Leslie had been a brilliant man. Referring to the work accomplished by the late conductor here in Springfield, he said it was a "one-man achievement" and pointed out the difficulty in finding a man to fill Dr. Leslie's shoes.

Praises Dr. Leslie

"You need someone who can carry on your affairs both as a prophet and a missionary," said the speaker. "I have heard that you had 125 applications for the conductor's job and I'm not surprised."

Dr. Ross said that no one had expected that Dr. Leslie would do what he accomplished here in Springfield. He pointed out that the late conductor had managed to put into the same pot an orchestra, a chorus and a junior symphony.

The speaker suggested that in an attempt to increase its popularity, the chorus might bring in name musicians, vocalists or dancers to appear with it in concerts. He said that many established artists are often willing to come into a community for a small fee merely because they are interested in the artistic life of that community.

Dr. Ross hailed the upsurge of choral compositions being written by American composers. He declared, "We are living today in a rennaissance of writing for the chorus. This is particularly true in America."

During the meeting, tribute was paid by the president to both Dr. Leslie and Dr. Alfred M. Glickman, former president of the Springfield Symphony Association, who also died within the past year.

MUSIC ON TAPE

Ernest Furnans Jr., left, president of the Springfield Symphony Chorus, and Dr. Hugh Ross, choral director at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, look over several Springfield Symphony Orchestra and Chorus tape recordings at the annual meeting of chorus last night in Blake's Restaurant. Dr. Ross was the main speaker.

Lowell, Mass. Independent; May 13, 1955

MUSIC

ALFRED W. BURKE

LOWELL — The Chelmsford high school band will present its annual concert the latter part of this month. The occasion will find the band being joined by the baton twirlers, mixed choral group and guest soloist.

The band is made up of young instrumentalists who have gained much of the way of success and experience through a long series of programs of various types. For this occasion the band will play a concert list of selections well within the playing ability of advanced students.

Paul E. Bordeleau of this city is band director in Chelmsford. During the past season he has developed the group into a fine unit. Added to this has been his interest in the other musical groups connected with the music system in the town.

The newly organized dramatic club at the State Teachers college will present two performances of a famous production next Thursday and Friday evenings at the Little Theater at the college.

The Berkshire Music center, the summer school of music operated by the Boston Symphony orchestra annually since 1940 at Tanglewood, Lenox, in connection with its Berkshire festival, will benefit from a series of grants from the Rockefeller Foundation.

Over a period of five years, commencing this summer, the Rockefeller Foundation will donate a sum matching equally money raised from other sources for the support of the only school of music in this country maintained by a symphony orchestra. The five appropriations, to be made annually, can amount to $125,000.

A delightful musical was presented last Monday evening by the students of Paul E. Bordeleau. Following is the program:

"Pledging My Love"
Robey and Washington
"Melody of Love"
Glazer and Engleman
Paul Turcotte
Side By Side......Harry Woods
Angel's Serenade
Arr. by A. Small
Parade of the Wooden Soldiers
Leon Jessel
Paul Metros
Ballad of Davy Crockett
Blackburn and Burns
Moonlight Serenade
Glenn Miller
Faith Baldwin
Naila Waltz.......Leo Delibes
Allegro Ritmico...Joseph Haas
Paul Stamas
Tap Dancer ....Eckestein
Prelude .... Chopin
Romona....Arr. by G. Shearing
Mary Frances Hall
Theme from Scheherazade
Rimsky-Karsokov
Theme from 2nd Piano Concerto ....Rachmaninoff
Always ....Irving Berlin
Jean Devlin
March of Space Cadets
Paul Bordeleau
Tea for Two......V. Youmans
James King
Strike Up the Band
G. Gershwin
James King and Paul Bordeleau

The Guardian
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent

MAY 14 1955

Music Box

BY MAXINE SHAW

"Our Best" is the title of a new LP on the Clef Label. The title fits the Musical package like a glove. To Norman Granz, the Labels head man, we owe a vote of thanks. The selections and artists include: Oscar Peterson, tenderly; Lester Young, up 'N Adam; Roy Eldridge, Dale's Wail; Flip Phillips, Flying Home; Charlie Parker, Bloomido; Johnny Hodges, Castle Rock; Gene Krupa, St. Louis Blues; Billie Holiday, Yesterdays; Count Basie, Paradise Squat; Illinois Jacquet, Port of Rico; Chico O'Farrill, The Carioca; and Stan Getz, with his version of "Stars Fell On Alabama".

Stephanie and Phil Barber have lined up Coleman Hawkins, Art Farmer, Dizzy Gillespie, Teddy Charles and others for a series of jazz concerts at their Berkshires Music Barn this summer. Their club is on the same street as the ~~Boston Symphony's music~~ shed. For those who like the heavy types of music, go to the music shed during the Tanglewood season. If you tire of Mozart and Brahms, drop in to the Barn and hear the "Cool Sounds".

Rudy Vallee will play himself in the Vagabond Lover. The trade feels the biofilm should be a big box office draw. We know a lot of fans who agree.

David Carroll's Orchestra, under the direction of Jerry Mercer, are currently on a one nighter tour. The Mercury-Recording Ochestra is proving to be a top-draw. Their record versions of "Buck Dance", "In A Little Spanish Town" and "Gadabout" are still top sellers.

"Concert in the Sky," by Teddy Phillips and his band, is a very nice tribute to the Great Musicians of Yesterday. The Phillips crew offers impressions of Bunny Berigan, Eddy Duchin, Russ Columbo, Dave Tough, Ben Bernie, and other musical stars of bygone years. Disc Jockey Howard Miller narrates. A Decca LP.

Les Elgart and the band recently closed at the Hotel Statler in New York. The Elgart Aggregation features vocalist Don Forbes, Drummer Ted Sommers and the Alto Sax of Larry Elgart. Their is a strong possibiltdy of the crew playing the New England area this summer.

Gene Krupa and Cozy Cole are still teaching Drummers how it's done. They even have a correspondance course for those who can't make it to their New York Studio. Both are still active in recording and club dates.

NEW YORK POST, WEDNESDAY, MAY 25, 1955 76

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Berkshire Festival Opens July 6

Now that the warm, humid weather has thrust its sticky personality upon us, the thought of outdoor music under the stars and away from the city's hubbub is more than tempting.

The symphonic concerts at Lewisohn Stadium, which begin June 20th, offer us solace in this direction with little travel involved. But for those who don't mind a four-hour ride by train or car, the Berkshire Festival, which opens Wednesday, July 6, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., offers the pleasure of music mixed with cooler breezes, country atmosphere together with high hills, plus a Music Shed and Theater Concert Hall, each with a roof overhead in the event of rain.

In case I sound paradoxical about this music business under the stars, the 6,000-seat Music Shed is open on three sides, and the Theater Concert Hall, holding about 1,200, is pretty vacant too in the back and on the sides. Also, there is always the extensive grass for those with or without blankets, who yearn to sit outside for little money and have music wafted to them from a slightly longer distance.

Kroll Quartet Opens

The opening Wednesday, July 6th, chamber music concert will be played by the Kroll Quartet in the Theater Concert Hall, which will house all of the programs for the initial two weeks.

All-Beethoven will be the schedule, as follows: Quartets in C Minor, Op. 18, No. 4; in F Minor, Op. 95; in C Sharp Minor, Op. 131.

Friday night, July 8th, Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra will play the Bach Suite No. 2 for Flute and Strings with the ensemble's lady flutist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, as soloist. Mozart's "Prague" Symphony, K. 504, Stravinsky's "Orpheus," and Bach's Sinfonia from the "Easter" Cantata complete the program.

Saturday, July 9, Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony, will be guest maestro for a program which includes two works by Haydn, the Symphonie Concertante with Oboe, Bassoon, Violin and Cella; and the Symphony in B Flat, No. 98. Hindemith's "Der Schwandendreher" with Joseph de Pasquale as viola soloist, and Handel's Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12, complete the concert.

Sunday afternoon, July 10, the final event of the first week-end features the "Mass in B Minor" by Bach with the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society assisting. Soloists will be: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass.

Subscription tickets are being sold until June first at reduced rates over the single ticket price, at Symphony Hall, Boston. The Festival comprises six week-ends, ending Sunday, Aug. 14.

Music Tonight . .

All City High School chorus and Orchestra. Carnegie Hall, 8:30.

Opera Workshop of Manhattan School of Music. "The Fatal Oath" by Boris Koutzen, world premiere. "Love Triumphant" by Cimarosa. American premiere. Hugh Ross, conductor. Hunter College Auditorium. 8:15.

Sunday Telegram
PORTLAND, Me.
Indep. Republican
Circ. 86,046

stance Anton, Katherine C

The Music World

Jazz Workshop To Share Scene With Symphony At Tanglewood

NEW YORK, May 14 (UP)—Just a mile down the road from the Boston Symphony's famous "Music Shed" at Tanglewood in the Berkshires, there will be a "Music Barn" this summer, and in this barn such musicians as Count Basie and Dizzy Gillespie will hold forth.

The "Music Shed" is the core of the long-established Berkshire Summer Festival which attracts tens of thousands of music-lovers and big-name performing musicians devoted to so-called "classical" or "serious" music.

The "Music Barn," sponsored by Stephanie and Philip Barber, plans a five-week season, beginning July 10, devoted to modern jazz, folk music, and to a "modern jazz workshop." Among the scheduled performers, in addition to Basie and Gillespie, are Coleman Hawkins and Richard Dyer-Bennet, folk singer.

In addition to the Dodgers Brooklyn now has a symphony orchestra. The Brooklyn Philharmonic made its debut with a series of three all-Beethoven programs on May 3, 5, and 7. It was organized under the guidance of Marks Levine, president of the National Concert and Artists Corporation and Julius Bloom, director of the Brooklyn Academy of Music.

The Philadelphia Orchestra is on its annual mid-western tour, with performances in Youngstown, O., Pittsburgh, Detroit, and Ann Arbor, Mich. Its musical director, Eugene Ormandy, was in charge and was doing most of the conducting.

Next month the orchestra sets out on a 30-day tour of Europe in which it will make 28 appearances.

Claudio Arrau, pianist, plans four New York concerts next season in which he will play all the authenticated solo piano music of Mozart. Next season marks the 200th anniversary of the birth of the composer.

Jack Buhler of Mountain View, Calif., who sells records and recording machines, has come up with a neat advertising gimmick that whets the appetite of music-lovers.

Each week Buhler makes a master tape recording of musical and religious programs and then invites owners of tape recorders for a re-recording session free of charge.

Through a "patch" system, Buhler can handle six recorders working off his master tape.

..y knows what."

Berkshire Festival Program Announced

Charles Munch, music director for the Boston Symphony Orchestra has announced the programs to be given this summer at Tanglewood.

The Festival which annually attracts many local music lovers will consist of six weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from July 8 to August 14, each weekend preceded by a recital of chamber music on the previous Wednesday evening, beginning July 6. These recitals will be devoted to the music of Beethoven and the concerts in the Music Shed by the full orchestra will encompass the principal orchestral and choral works of Beethoven.

The first two weekends will be devoted to the "Bach-Mozart" concerts by an orchestra of chamber proportions in the Theatre as follows:

FRIDAY, JULY 8: Bach—Sinfonia from the "Easter" Cantata; Bach—Suite No. 2 for Flute and Strings; Stravinsky—"Orpheus"; Mozart—"Prague" Symphony.

SATURDAY, JULY 9: Handel—Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12; Haydn—Symphonie Concertante; Hindemith—"Der Schwanendreher"; Haydn—Symphony No. 98; Guest Conductor, Thor Johnson.

SUNDAY, JULY 10: Bach—Mass in B minor, with the choruses from Harvard and Radcliffe.

..AN, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., JUNE 19, 1955

SO. BERKSHIRE RESORTS HOPE FOR BUSY YEAR

Hotel Owners Predict Good Summer Season Ahead

By ROSS LAFONTANA

Great Barrington, June 18—June is the month when hotel and lodging house proprietors in the Southern Berkshire area, begin in earnest to prepare their places for the summer resort season, for with the closing of schools, families become free to either go to their country camp or home, or spend a vacation in one of the area's vacation spots.

Many Activities

Southern Berkshire, steeped in historical lore, has always been the vacationland for metropolitan visitors for several generations. Its scenic views, quiet drives, and typical small New England villages lends an air of relaxation and enchantment. Its numerous lakes and streams enables water enthusiasts to enjoy boating, fishing or swimming. And then on the cultural side there is music, dance and drama.

What will the season of 1955 be like in this area? Resort owners are hopeful that it will be a good one, although some hotels this season didn't open as early as in times past. Mrs. William O. Brusie, secretary of the Southern Berkshire Chamber of Commerce when asked for a comparison with other years remarked that the inquiries thus far haven't been as heavy as in other years, but added that in many cases, former visitors make reservations for the next season, after booking them through the local bureau in the first place. Thus it is impossible to ascertain what the correct figure is regarding the number of visitors vacationing in the area.

Reservations Ahead

James J. Joyce, landlord of the Berkshire Inn, in Great Barrington, is quite optimistic about this season's business. He said that he has received more inquires this year than he did last. Last season the Inn wasthe scene of many conventions, which began early in May and continued throughout the summer. This year, the bookings in this respect haven't been as heavy, but Mr. Joyce said, inquiries for other accommodations have been very satisfactory. The Inn by the way opened for its 115th season last week.

George E. Turain owner, and manager of the Curtis Hotel in Lenox, one of the oldest and best known establishments in the Western Massachusetts area, is looking forward to a good year. The Curtis opened last week Friday for the 1955 session. Mr. Turain has several conventions booked at his establishments and the Curtis, during the peak of the music festival season, is filled with music lovers who make the hotel their headquarters.

The two best known hosteleries in Stockbridge which had been in the Treadway family for over 90 years changed hands recently when the Heaton Hall, was sold to Mr. and Mrs. John Rock, and the Red Lion Inn, sold to Byrne Bauer.

Mr. and Mrs. Rock, had managed Heaton Hall for several seasons, before buying it this spring. Mr. Bauer, the new owner of the Red Lion Inn, plans to keep his establishment open on a year-round basis.

Entertainment at Home

Four places in the area offer a full program of entertainment for its guests right at the place. They include Eastover in Lenox, the Oak 'N Spruce in South Lee, the G. Bar S. in Great Barrington, and the Jug End Barn in South Egremont. These places open all year round offer a variety of programs for its guests, and in this way enjoy a good patronage 12 months of the year.

Two new motels were erected in Great Barrington recently, giving indications of their owners optimism in the future. The motels are the "Wigwam," owned by Malcolm Shove, and the "Monument Mountain" motel, owned by Paul K. Blum. Both are located on the road leading from Great Barrington to Stockbridge. The two make a total of four such places located in Great Barrington, the others being the Berkshire Chalet Motel on the Sheffield Road, and the Berkshire Chalet Inn Motel on Maple Avenue, both owned by Albert C. Hammer.

Numerous Inns

Visitors won't be lacking in accommodations in the Berkshire, for besides the larger hotels, there are numerous other inns and private homes which cater to the visitor during the peak of the resort season.

Getting back to the variety of programs offered for the visitor's enjoyment, there is the main feature of the summer season, the six weeks of the music festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, featuring the Boston Symphony orchestra under the direction of Dr. Charles Munch. Also, another old established summer resort attraction is Jacob's Pillow, the studio of the dance in Becket, operated by Ted Shawn, who this season is bringing back many of the old favorites which have enjoyed great popularity with the Berkshire audiences. Then of course, for the theater lover there is the Stockbridge Playhouse, with its varied program as offered by Williams Miles, the director.

For nature lovers, there will be the annual laurel festival on Mount Washington this month. The laurel at the Mount Everett reservation in Mount Washington has for years been one of the main attractions for nature lovers in the area. Last year, the Sheffield Grange spearheaded a move to conduct a laurel festival, with other organizations co-operating. It met with such fine response that it will be an annual event from now on.

Charles K. Freeman
Westchester Group Newspapers

THE BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL, which is a dynamo of musical energy and has made Lenox, Mass. a center of national attraction, goes into high gear for its season commencing July 3rd and continuing through August 14th in the six weeks of music Beethoven will be given preference and a feats of the composer's works has been planned.

The Berkshire music Center, the summer school of music operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra annually since 1940 will benefit this season from a series of grants from the Rockefeller Foundation. This largesse in the next five seasons will amount to $125,000 in five annual appropriations.

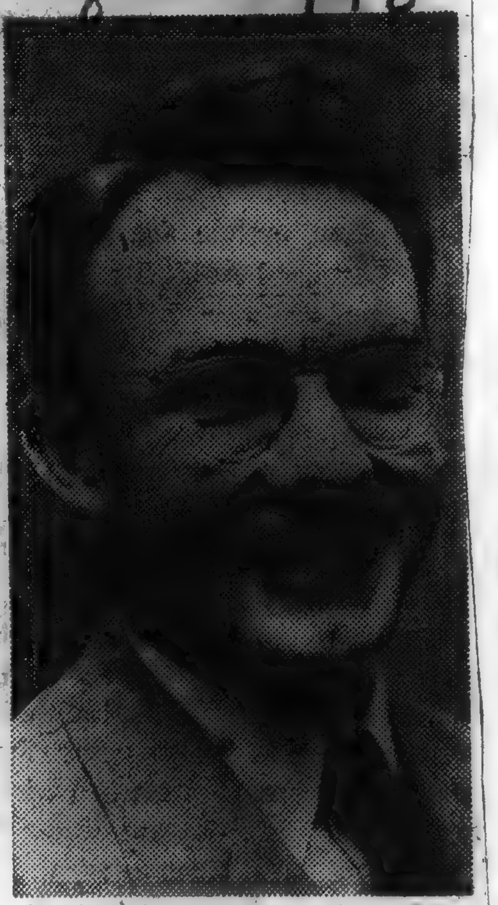
Also more than a dozen special scholarships and tuition aids to summer music students are being offered by the Berkshire Music Center, the school of music which has Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony, as the school director. The principal aid to the 400 students selected annually from applicants all over the U.S., Canada and abroad, is the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship fund, which in 1954 awarded grants for the tuition of 196 students. Leonard Bernstein as head of the orchestra conducting departments works with equally top music men to lend their knowledge and beat to the students.

* * *

1955 Festival Subscriptions Exceed All Previous Records

Eagle 6/18

TANGLEWOOD — Subscriptions for the 1955 Berkshire Festival series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for concerts held on four Friday evenings, July 22-Aug. 12; four Saturday evenings, July 23-Aug. 13; and four Sunday afternoons, July 24-Aug. 14 in the Music Shed, have surpassed all previous records, Manager Thomas D. Perry Jr. announces. The six-week festival of 1954 saw an all time record attendance of 135,775 persons.



Thomas D. Perry Jr.

All remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the box office, open Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The box office will also be open on Sundays, commencing July 3, with the start of the 13th session of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with the Festival concerts. Mail orders for single concerts are also filled on receipt. Checks and money orders should be payable to the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Inc. and accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope for return of tickets. Telephone orders are accepted.

This year's pattern of Shed concerts by the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, which Music Director Charles Munch conducts, with Pierre Monteux and Leonard Bernstein as guest conductors, calls for four weekends, featuring much of Beethoven's music, including all nine symphonies, the second act of "Fidelio," the "Missa Solemnis," the violin concerto, two piano concertos, and three overtures.

Soloists Coming

Among the Shed season's noted vocal soloists are Metropolitan Opera soprano Margaret Harshaw, Leontyne Price, Adele Addison, Catherine Akos, Donald Gramm, David Lloyd, Mac Morgan. Other soloists are Rudolf Serkin, Eugene Istomin, pianists; Isaac Stern, violinist; Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist.

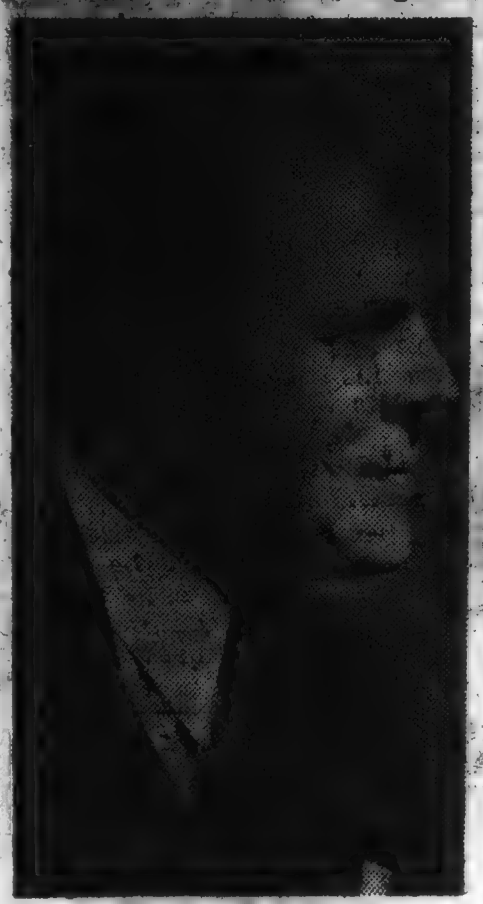
The Berkshire Festival Shed series is preceded this year by two weekends of performances by the chamber section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Bach-Mozart concerts which are given in the 1,200-seat Theater-Concert Hall, under the direction of Charles Munch, with Leonard Bernstein, Thor Johnson and Hugh Ross as guest conductors. Seats for these two weekends, July 8, 9, 10 and July 15, 16, 17, are already scarce, with Mr. Bernstein's all-Mozart concert of Friday, July 15, with the conductor doubling as piano soloist and Jennie Tourel as soprano soloist, almost sold out. Other soloists in this preliminary series are vocalists Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum, Donald Gramm; and from the first chairs of the Boston Symphony, Joseph de Pasquale, violist, Samuel Mayes, cellist, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flutist.

Six Wednesday evening chamber music concerts, to be held in the Theater-Concert Hall, proceeds going to the Berkshire Music Center's Revolving Scholarship Fund, are all devoted to Beethoven's chamber music, including string quartets, trios, and violin, piano and cello sonatas. Rudolf Serkin, Isaac Stern (accompanied by Alexander Zakin), Gregor Piatigorsky (accompanied by Ralph Berkowitz), the Kroll String Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio, and the New Music String Quartet are the performers.

Eagle June 28

Music Center Enrollment 375; School To Open Over Weekend

TANGLEWOOD—Enrollment of students for the 13th annual session of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music, has now passed 375, according to Miss Edith A. Bossler, registrar.



Richard Burgin

Full enrollment for the six-week session, starting this weekend is expected to be about 400.

Scholarship grants have been awarded to 174 students, including 102 members of the student symphony orchestra. So far, Miss Bossler reports, 18 students have declined scholarship tuitions.

Foreign students registered in the music school number 28, including nine Canadians, three Japanese and two each from France and Hawaii.

Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, is acting as assistant director of the school this summer, in the absence of Aaron Copland. Charles Munch, music director of the BSO, will again act as director of the Music Center. Ralph Berkowitz is dean; Gail W. Rector, executive secretary.

Ingolf Dahl is in charge of Department V, the Tanglewood Study Group, with which 88 of the 375 students are registered. This department offers advanced students a chance of spending periods of from two to six weeks playing works for chamber orchestra and unusual combinations of instruments.

Other departments are orchestra playing and conducting, under Leonard Bernstein; chamber music, with first-chair members of the BSO; choral singing and conducting, under Hugh Ross; composition, with Roger Sessions and Boris Blacher; and opera, with instruction from Boris Goldovsky.

Eagle June 28

. . . New manager Byrne Bauer of Stockbridge's Red Lion Inn would seem to be making a wise move in lining up a full schedule of mid-week entertainment to be offered guests throughout the summer. With Tanglewood in session, the problem isn't to get people to the Berkshires weekends but to keep them here after the Sunday concert is over . . . A belated happy birthday to the town of Florida, which has just observed the 150th anniversary of its incorporation. At this late date we won't quibble about the logic of naming the coldest and most mountainous town in the Berkshires after the hottest and flattest state in the union . . .

Eagle June 28

Pops Orchestra Will Revive Ravel's 'Jazz'

BOSTON (UP)—Maurice Ravel's jazzy Piano Concerto in G will be returning home when Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra play it in Symphony Hall Wednesday night.

Ravel came here in 1928 to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of his own serious works. But after the concert he asked musician Boaz Piller to take him on a tour of Boston night spots.

The two musicians headed for the Hotel Brunswick's Brazilian Room where Leo Reisman and his orchestra were playing "polite jazz" for the edification of Boston Brahmins.

Ravel returned to France with the swingy strains of Reisman's music pounding in his ear. Three years later, Ravel wrote his first piano concerto, and in the final section included reminiscences of the Reisman tunes.

The concerto received a double premiere in 1932 — by Serge Koussevitzky and the Boston Symphony Orchestra and by the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra.

Bernard Kritzman, a Boston University student, will play the work under Fiedler's direction Wednesday night. It will be the second performance of the concerto in Boston in 10 years.

...nly knows what."

[illegible]

Berkshire Festival Program Announced

Charles Munch, music director for the Boston Symphony Orchestra has announced the programs to be given this summer at Tanglewood.

The Festival which annually attracts many local music lovers will consist of six weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from July 8 to August 14, each weekend preceded by a recital of chamber music on the previous Wednesday evening, beginning July 6. These recitals will be devoted to the music of Beethoven and the concerts in the Music Shed by the full orchestra will encompass the principal orchestral and choral works of Beethoven.

The first two weekends will be devoted to the "Bach-Mozart" concerts by an orchestra of chamber proportions in the Theatre as follows:

FRIDAY, JULY 8: Bach—Sinfonia from the "Easter" Cantata; Bach—Suite No. 2 for Flute and Strings; Stravinsky — "Orpheus"; Mozart—"Prague" Symphony.

SATURDAY, JULY 9: Handel—Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12; Haydn — Symphonie Concertante; Hindemith — "Der Schwanendreher"; Haydn — Symphony No. 98; Guest Conductor, Thor Johnson.

SUNDAY, JULY 10: Bach — Mass in B minor, with the choruses from Harvard and Radcliffe.

AN, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., JUNE 19, 1955

SO. BERKSHIRE RESORTS HOPE FOR BUSY YEAR

Hotel Owners Predict Good Summer Season Ahead

By ROSS LAFONTANA

Great Barrington, June 18—June is the month when hotel and lodging house proprietors in the Southern Berkshire area, begin in earnest to prepare their places for the summer resort season, for with the closing of schools, families become free to either go to their country camp or home, or spend a vacation in one of the area's vacation spots.

Many Activities

Southern Berkshire, steeped in historical lore, has always been the vacationland for metropolitan visitors for several generations. Its scenic views, quiet drives, and typical small New England villages lends an air of relaxation and enchantment. Its numerous lakes and streams enables water enthusiasts to enjoy boating, fishing or swimming. And then on the cultural side there is music, dance and drama.

What will the season of 1955 be like in this area? Resort owners are hopeful that it will be a good one, although some hotels this season didn't open as early as in times past. Mrs. William O. Brusie, secretary of the Southern Berkshire Chamber of Commerce when asked for a comparison with other years remarked that the inquiries thus far haven't been as heavy as in other years, but added that in many cases, former visitors make reservations for the next season, after booking them through the local bureau in the first place. Thus it is impossible to ascertain what the correct figure is regarding the number of visitors vacationing in the area.

Reservations Ahead

James J. Joyce, landlord of the Berkshire Inn, in Great Barrington, is quite optimistic about this season's business. He said that he has received more inquires this year than he did last. Last season the Inn wasthe scene of many conventions, which began early in May and continued throughout the summer. This year, the bookings in this respect haven't been as heavy, but Mr. Joyce said, inquiries for other accommodations have been very satisfactory. The Inn by the way opened for its 115th season last week.

George E. Turain owner, and manager of the Curtis Hotel in Lenox, one of the oldest and best known establishments in the Western Massachusetts area, is looking forward to a good year. The Curtis opened last week Friday for the 1955 session. Mr. Turain has several conventions booked at his establishments and the Curtis, during the peak of the music festival season, is filled with music lovers who make the hotel their headquarters.

The two best known hosteleries in Stockbridge which had been in the Treadway family for over 90 years changed hands recently when the Heaton Hall, was sold to Mr. and Mrs. John Rock, and the Red Lion Inn, sold to Byrne Bauer.

Mr. and Mrs. Rock, had managed Heaton Hall for several seasons, before buying it this spring. Mr. Bauer, the new owner of the Red Lion Inn, plans to keep his establishment open on a year-round basis.

Entertainment at Home

Four places in the area offer a full program of entertainment for its guests right at the place. They include Eastover in Lenox, the Oak 'N Spruce in South Lee, the G. Bar S. in Great Barrington, and the Jug End Barn in South Egremont. These places open all year round offer a variety of programs for its guests, and in this way enjoy a good patronage 12 months of the year.

Two new motels were erected in Great Barrington recently, giving indications of their owners optimism in the future. The motels are the "Wigwam," owned by Malcolm Shove, and the "Monument Mountain" motel, owned by Paul K. Blum. Both are located on the road leading from Great Barrington to Stockbridge. The two make a total of four such places located in Great Barrington, the others being the Berkshire Chalet Motel on the Sheffield Road, and the Berkshire Chalet Inn Motel on Maple Avenue, both owned by Albert C. Hammer.

Numerous Inns

Visitors won't be lacking in accommodations in the Berkshire, for besides the larger hotels, there are numerous other inns and private homes which cater to the visitor during the peak of the resort season.

Getting back to the variety of programs offered for the visitor's enjoyment, there is the main feature of the summer season, the six weeks of the music festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, featuring the Boston Symphony orchestra under the direction of Dr. Charles Munch. Also, another old established summer resort attraction is Jacob's Pillow, the studio of the dance in Becket, operated by Ted Shawn, who this season is bringing back many of the old favorites which have enjoyed great popularity with the Berkshire audiences. Then of course, for the theater lover there is the Stockbridge Playhouse, with its varied program as offered by Williams Miles, the director.

For nature lovers, there will be the annual laurel festival on Mount Washington this month. The laurel at the Mount Everett reservation in Mount Washington has for years been one of the main attractions for nature lovers in the area. Last year, the Sheffield Grange spearheaded a move to conduct a laurel festival, with other organizations co-operating. It met with such fine response that it will be an annual event from now on.

Charles K. Freeman
(Westchester Group Newspapers)

THE BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL, which is a dynamo of musical energy and has made Lenox, Mass. a center of national attraction, goes into high gear for its season commencing July 3rd and continuing through August 14th in the six weeks of music Beethoven will be given preference and a feats of the composer's works has been planned.

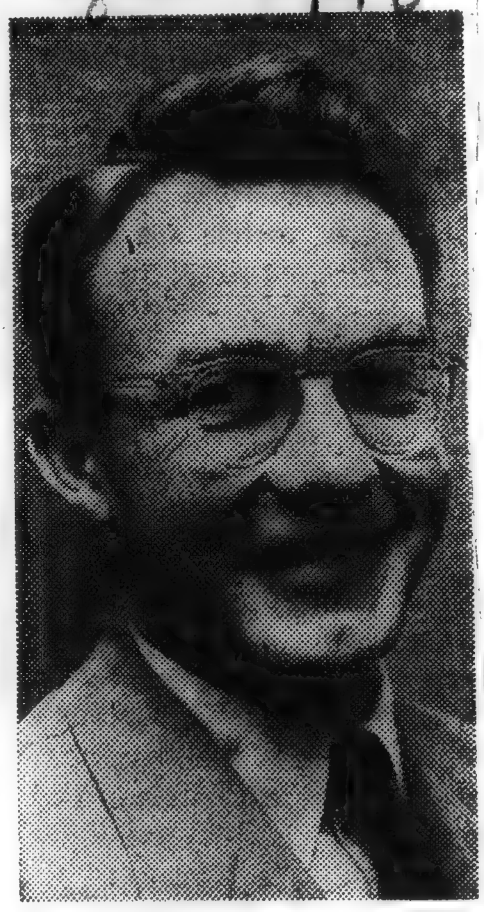
The Berkshire music Center, the summer school of music operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra annually since 1940 will benefit this season from a series of grants from the Rockefeller Foundation. This largesse in the next five seasons will amount to $125,000 in five annual appropriations.

Also more than a dozen special scholarships and tuition aids to summer music students are being offered by the Berkshire Music Center, the school of music which has Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony, as the school director. The principal aid to the 400 students selected annually from applicants all over the U.S., Canada and abroad, is the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship fund, which in 1954 awarded grants for the tuition of 196 students. Leonard Bernstein as head of the orchestra conducting departments works with equally top music men to lend their knowledge and beat to the students.

* * *

1955 Festival Subscriptions Exceed All Previous Records

Eagle 6/18



Thomas D. Perry Jr.

TANGLEWOOD — Subscriptions for the 1955 Berkshire Festival series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for concerts held on four Friday evenings, July 22-Aug. 12; four Saturday evenings, July 23-Aug. 13; and four Sunday afternoons, July 24-Aug. 14 in the Music Shed, have surpassed all previous records, Manager Thomas D. Perry Jr. announces. The six-week festival of 1954 saw an all time record attendance of 135,775 persons.

All remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the box office, open Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The box office will also be open on Sundays, commencing July 3, with the start of the 13th session of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with the Festival concerts. Mail orders for single concerts are also filled on receipt. Checks and money orders should be payable to the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Inc. and accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope for return of tickets. Telephone orders are accepted.

This year's pattern of Shed concerts by the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, which Music Director Charles Munch conducts, with Pierre Monteux and Leonard Bernstein as guest conductors, calls for four weekends, featuring much of Beethoven's music, including all nine symphonies, the second act of "Fidelio," the "Missa Solemnis," the violin concerto, two piano concertos, and three overtures.

Soloists Coming

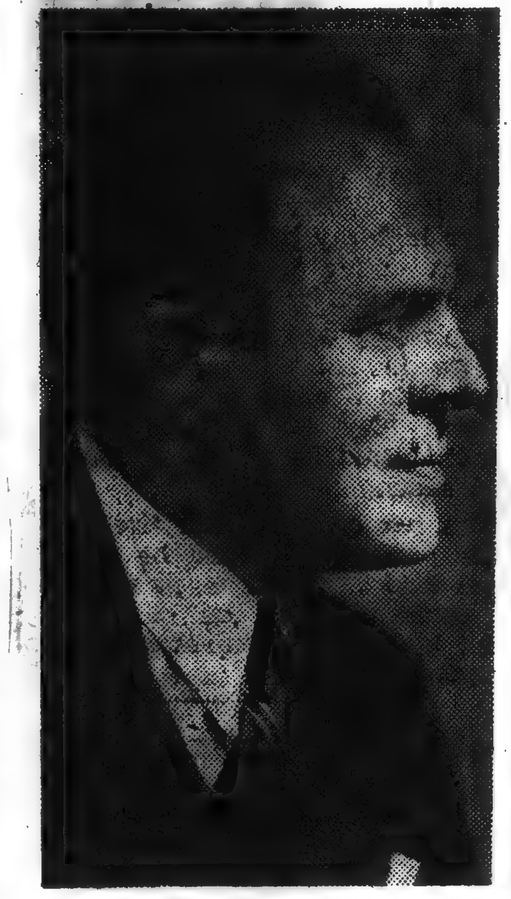
Among the Shed season's noted vocal soloists are Metropolitan Opera soprano Margaret Harshaw, Leontyne Price, Adele Addison, Catherine Akos, Donald Gramm, David Lloyd, Mac Morgan. Other soloists are Rudolf Serkin, Eugene Istomin, pianists; Isaac Stern, violinist; Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist.

The Berkshire Festival Shed series is preceded this year by two weekends of performances by the chamber section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Bach-Mozart concerts which are given in the 1,200-seat Theater-Concert Hall, under the direction of Charles Munch, with Leonard Bernstein, Thor Johnson and Hugh Ross as guest conductors. Seats for these two weekends, July 8, 9, 10 and July 15, 16, 17, are already scarce, with Mr. Bernstein's all-Mozart concert of Friday, July 15, with the conductor doubling as piano soloist and Jennie Tourel as soprano soloist, almost sold out. Other soloists in this preliminary series are vocalists Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum, Donald Gramm; and from the first chairs of the Boston Symphony, Joseph de Pasquale, violist, Samuel Mayes, cellist, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flutist.

Six Wednesday evening chamber music concerts, to be held in the Theater-Concert Hall, proceeds going to the Berkshire Music Center's Revolving Scholarship Fund, are all devoted to Beethoven's chamber music, including string quartets, trios, and violin, piano and cello sonatas. Rudolf Serkin, Isaac Stern (accompanied by Alexander Zakin), Gregor Piatigorsky (accompanied by Ralph Berkowitz), the Kroll String Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio, and the New Music String Quartet are the performers.

Music Center Enrollment 375; School To Open Over Weekend

TANGLEWOOD—Enrollment of students for the 13th annual session of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music, has now passed 375, according to Miss Edith A. Bossler, registrar.



Richard Burgin

Full enrollment for the six-week session, starting this weekend is expected to be about 400.

Scholarship grants have been awarded to 174 students, including 102 members of the student symphony orchestra. So far, Miss Bossler reports, 18 students have declined scholarship tuitions.

Foreign students registered in the music school number 28, including nine Canadians, three Japanese and two each from France and Hawaii.

Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, is acting as assistant director of the school this summer, in the absence of Aaron Copland. Charles Munch, music director of the BSO, will again act as director of the Music Center. Ralph Berkowitz is dean; Gail W. Rector, executive secretary.

Ingolf Dahl is in charge of Department V, the Tanglewood Study Group, with which 88 of the 375 students are registered. This department offers advanced students a chance of spending periods of from two to six weeks playing works for chamber orchestra and unusual combinations of instruments.

Other departments are orchestra playing and conducting, under Leonard Bernstein; chamber music, with first-chair members of the BSO; choral singing and conducting, under Hugh Ross; composition, with Roger Sessions and Boris Blacher; and opera, with instruction from Boris Goldovsky.

Eagle June 28

. . .

New manager Byrne Bauer of Stockbridge's Red Lion Inn would seem to be making a wise move in lining up a full schedule of mid-week entertainment to be offered guests throughout the summer. With Tanglewood in session, the problem isn't to get people to the Berkshires weekends but to keep them here after the Sunday concert is over . . . A belated happy birthday to the town of Florida, which has just observed the 150th anniversary of its incorporation. At this late date we won't quibble about the logic of naming the coldest and most mountainous town in the Berkshires after the hottest and flattest state in the union . . .

Eagle June 28

Pops Orchestra Will Revive Ravel's 'Jazz'

BOSTON (UP)—Maurice Ravel's jazzy Piano Concerto in G will be returning home when Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra play it in Symphony Hall Wednesday night.

Ravel came here in 1928 to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of his own serious works. But after the concert he asked musician Boaz Piller to take him on a tour of Boston night spots.

The two musicians headed for the Hotel Brunswick's Brazilian Room where Leo Reisman and his orchestra were playing "polite jazz" for the edification of Boston Brahmins.

Ravel returned to France with the swingy strains of Reisman's music pounding in his ear. Three years later, Ravel wrote his first piano concerto, and in the final section included reminiscences of the Reisman tunes.

The concerto received a double premiere in 1932 — by Serge Koussevitzky and the Boston Symphony Orchestra and by the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra.

Bernard Kritzman, a Boston University student, will play the work under Fiedler's direction Wednesday night. It will be the second performance of the concerto in Boston in 10 years.

June 26 Spring'f'ld Rep.

Heavy Student Registrations At Berkshire Music Center

Most of Expected 400 Already Enrolled at Tanglewood, Many From Foreign Countries

Lenox, June 25—Student registration at the Berkshire Music Center, the six-week summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the annual Berkshire Festival concerts, has passed the 375 mark, Miss Edith A. Bossler, registrar, reports, with additional applications being processed daily, until the full enrollment of some 400 is reached.

Students from most of the 48 states, Canada and many foreign countries will arrive in the hills of Western Massachusetts for the opening of the 13th session of the school on Sunday, July 3, when they will be welcomed by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in hiis capacity as director of the Berkshire Music Center.

Ahead of 1954

While composer Aaron Copland, assistant director of the school is on leave of absence this summer, his post is being filled by Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the orchestra. Ralph Berkowitz is dean of the school; and Gail W. Rector is executive secretary.

Enrollment is ahead of last year, when 350 students had registered at this time. The 375 students to date have been chosen from 635 applications, which resulted from some 1500 inquiries, of which 927 were new this year. Berkshire Music Center scholarship grants have been awarded to 174, including 102 who comprise members of the student symphony orchestra. This year, Miss Bossler reports, so far 18 students have declined scholarship tuitions, although eligible for them, twelve in the orchestra, two in composition, four in opera dramatics.

The 375 students to date include 88 with the three-year-old Dept. 5, the Tanglewood Study Group, 40 of whom are registered for the full six weeks, 15 for four weeks, two for three weeks, 31 for two weeks. Dept. 5 offers advanced students of music, professional or amateur, an opportunity to spend their vacations in extensive chamber orchestra reading and practice also in early compositions for unusual ensemble. Ingolf Dahl returns to Tanglewood to head this increasingly popular department this summer.

Twenty-eight foreign students have registered in the music school, nine from Canada, three from Japan, two from Hawaii and France, one each from Chile, Puerto Rico, Israel, Greece, New Zealand, Mexico, Argentina, Iran, Brazil, Netherlands-Antilles, Austria and Finland. The Tanglewood Study Group includes four of the Canadians, one of the Hawaiians, and the student from Brazil.

Eagle June 28

Tanglewood Tales

Staff Discusses Plans For Handling Visitors

Plans for handling visitors to Tanglewood and Berkshire Festival crowds were discussed at a dinner meeting at the Country Club of Pittsfield recently. Guests were staff assistants, section heads of the Music Shed ushering staff and principal ticket-takers, who are under the general supervision of Willard M. Sistare of Pittsfield. Gail W. Rector, assistant manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Stoddard G. Spader, who is in charge of visitors to Tanglewood and who heads the staff of college guides, represented the Berkshire Music Center.

* * *

Harvard, Radcliffe Group To Be Heard July 10

The Boston Symphony chamber orchestra will perform Bach's Mass in B minor on the first Sunday afternoon, July 10, of its Bach-Mozart series in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, with the assistance of some 80 members of the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society, trained under the direction of G. Wallace Woodworth.

The Harvard-Radcliffe singers have been invited to Tanglewood to participate in the concert, because it is scheduled too soon after the opening of the Berkshire Music Center for the Festival Chorus, made up of students from the choral, opera and Tanglewood Study Group departments, to learn and rehearse the massive work. The housing of the 80 young people, who will arrive Wednesday for rehearsals, over four days, will be solved through the generosity of Pittsfield and area residents. Those who can open their homes to the Harvard and Radcliffe students are invited to contact D. Ross Edman, South Street, Pittsfield, a Harvard student and former Tanglewood staff member, who has volunteered to help in housing arrangements.

* * *

Lukas Foss To Conduct Four Weeks in Europe

A Tanglewood faculty member on leave of absence is Lukas Foss, young American composer-pianist-conductor, who writes from his home in Beverly Hills, Calif.:

"This year I find I have taken on more commitments than I am able to handle. I have been teaching at the University of California in Los Angeles; directing the university orchestra; conducting my own orchestra, the Los Angeles Chamber Symphony; conducting a pair of concerts with the St. Louis Symphony; conducting the Los Angeles Philharmonic at home and on tour; performing my piano concerto with Fritz Reiner in Chicago."

Mr. Foss puts in about six hours of composition daily, working on an orchestral composition commissioned by the Albert Schweitzer Foundation which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform next season, its 75th anniversary; a fairy-tale opera, "Griffelkin," which the Television Opera Department of the National Broadcasting Co. will premiere Oct. 30; the Psalm, "I Lift Up Mine Eyes Unto the Hills" for the Stockbridge Bowl Assn.; a commission from the Juilliard School of Music and one from the Koussevitzky Music Foundation. The composer declined five weeks of St. Louis summer concerts, but plans to leave for Europe in November for four weeks of guest conducting.

* * *

Thor Johnson Returns For Concert July 9

Thor Johnson, a Tanglewood student of conducting in the Berkshire Music Center's first two sessions, 1940 and 1941, and since 1947 music director of the Cincinnati Symphony, returns to his alma mater here this summer, as guest conductor of the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra in its first Saturday evening Bach-Mozart concert, July 9 in the Theater-Concert Hall. Mr. Johnson has just returned from the Far East where he conducted concerts by the touring Symphony of the Air. June 21 he opened the third American Moravian music festival at Winston-Salem, B.C. Mr. Johnson is the son o fa Moravian pastor.

* * *

Barber's Composition Scheduled July 29

Samuel Barber's "Players of Kierkegaard" to which the Boston Symphony Orchestra gave a world premiere last season, will be performed for the first time at Tanglewood this summer, on Charles Munch's concert of Friday, July 29, with soprano Leontyne Price (a former Berkshire Music Center student and a guest at Tanglewood on Parade in 1953) as soloist. This newest composition by the noted American composer, who was the Berkshire Music Center's guest teacher of composition in the summer of 1947, has recently been heard in Europe with performances in Vienna and London led by Massimo Freccia. Next season Herbert von Karajan will conduct it in Berlin, Rome and Turin.

* * *

Serkin Plays July 30

Rudolf Serkin, the noted pianist who will perform Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto, No. 5, with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Munch conducting, at the Berkshire Festival concert of Saturday July 30 in Tanglewood's Music Shed, performed the same work at the opening concert of New York's Lewisohn Stadium summer series June 21 with Dimitri Mitropolous conducting.

* * *

Students Take Part In Milhaud's Opera

At the recent festival of creative arts of Brandeis University in Waltham, an opera and ballet were presented by French composer Darius Milhaud, guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center in 1948. In the cast of his opera, "Medea," which Izler Solomon conducted, were three young singers who will be Berkshire Festival soloists this summer: Eunice Alberts, contralto, who will sing in the Beethoven "Missa Solemnis" under Leonard Bernstein's direction on Aug. 5; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, who both sing in the Bach Mass in B minor, Sunday afternoon July 10, Mr. Munch conducting.

Berkshire Festival to Feature Boston Symphony Under Munch

Beginning early in July and continuing through mid-August, thousands of music lovers from throughout the world will pour into the beautiful Berkshire hills of Western Massachusetts for the world famous Berkshire Music Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood.

World-famous conductors and artists will participate in the six-weeks long music festival including Charles Munch, Pierre Monteux, Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky.

Situated on a large estate near the little town of Lenox, the festival grounds will resound weekly to the music of the masters. Concerts of the Boston Symphony are held in the acoustically perfect shed, which has a capacity of 6,000.

In previous summers up to 4,000 more concert-goers have been accommodated on the spacious lawns which surround the shed. Chamber music concerts are held in the Theatre-concert Hall which seats 1,500. Like the shed concerts, though, many bring their blankets or folding chairs and enjoy the music from the lawn around the auditorium.

Additional music is in store for those who become 'friends' of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra to provide an opportunity for music study at Tanglewood in connection with the Berkshire Festival Concerts. By supporting the school through a contribution, a "friend' is invited to the concerts presented by the students of the Center — their programs of opera, orchestra, chorus, student compositions and chamber music.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony has announced the concert schedule for the 1955 Berkshire Festival, which begins its season July 6.

This year's Festival will feature the music of Ludwig van Beethoven. In addition to all nine of Beethoven's symphonies, the Festival will present the Missa Solemnis, the Emperor Concerto, and the Violin Concerto. Until August 14 there will be twenty-five festival concerts on the Tanglewood grounds and an equal number of student programs.

Chamber groups to be heard in the chamber music series include the Kroll Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio, and the New Music Quartet. Also included in the chamber music series will be sonata recitals by Isaac Stern, Rudolf Serkin, and Gregor Piatigorsky.

Conductors who will appear in the chamber orchestra and Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts are Charles Munch, music director of Leonard Bernstin, and Thor Johnson. Soloists for the festival include Jennie Tourel, Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price, Gregor Piatigorsky, Rudolf Serkin, Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd, and Eugene Istomin.

The Festival performances, together with activities of the Berkshire Music Center, make concerts at Tanglewood an almost daily occurrence. A brochure with complete information is available by writing the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts.

Charles Munch Conducts Boston Symphony Orchestra at Bershire Festival

Columbia, S.C. State.

Eagle June 24

Tanglewood Tales

Physical Changes

Tanglewood is moving into second gear these days, in preparation for the arrival of its 400 summer music students of the Berkshire Music Center on Sunday, July 3, and for the opening of the Berkshire Festival on Wednesday, July ges will be this season. the Boston s carpenter, den have been office under the ines, near the gate, for manager Thomas D. Perry Jr., who is expected from Boston next week with his wife and sons. Near the press gate a new office has been built for Rosario Mazzeo, personnel manager of the orchestra, and new quarters have been installed for the telephone switchboard.

61 on Staff

Although the opening is still a week away, all departments are operating. The Berkshire Music Center, with Dean Ralph Berkowitz, executive secretary Gail Rector, and register Edith Bossler, is processing student applications; finding them housing at the Lenox School, Wheatleigh and in Lenox and area homes; and arranging schedules for classes and student concerts. The office of the Friends of the Music School, through contributions to which the public may attend the more than 25 student performances listed this summer, is again under the direction of Mrs. Lucy Putnam, assisted by Roger Hinman, of Lenox, Miss Margo Miller of Pittsfield, Miss Josephine Swan of Boston, and joined next week by Michael d'Amelio of New York. Joseph LaPlante is preparing the book store where students and the public may buy scores, music books and records, assisted by Relly Raffman of Worcester, Celia Salata of Boston, and William Verner of Princeton. Photographer Gus Manos of Columbia, S.C., arrives next week. The press office, under the direction of Walter Alford of New York, is staffed this year by Martin Bookspan of, Boston, radio and television co-ordinator; Gerhard Kemper of New York, and Walter Howard of Tyringham and Yale University. Allan Smith is assisted in the boxoffice by Richard D. Sawyer of the Lenox School, Leon W. Bills, Mrs. Priscilla Chase of Pittsfield, Gordon Simpson, Bob Edwards and Richard Berry. Katherine Mealey and Jan Bookspan man the switchboard. Ten college student guides will arrive next week, to be under the direction of Stoddard G. Spader. Victor Alpert, librarian, and his assistants, James E. Whitaker and Betty Burnett, will be on hand next week, as will Arthur Kerr, lifeguard at the Stockbridge Bowl lake front, and Ralph Pottle. Other arrivals soon will be James Brosnahan, treasurer; Robin Brooks and Dorothy Sullivan, bookkeepers; John N. Burk, program annotator, and his secretary, Corinne Paul; Leonard Burkat, secretary to music director Charles Munch; Margaret Burk, secretary to Rosario Mazzeo; Mary Smith, secretary to Thomas Perry; Irene MacKenzie, secretary to Mr. Brosnahan. Altogether Tanglewood's 1955 staff comprises 61 persons.

69 Pianos Being Installed

Sixty-nine new Baldwin pianos for Festival concerts and rehearsals, for lessons and practice by students, including 14 grands on which such soloists will perform as Rudolf Serkin, Eugene Istomin, Leonard Bernstein, Ralph Berkowitz, Alexander Zakin, 55 upright pianos, and an electric organ, are being installed at Tanglewood. Shipped overland from Cincinnati, they are being installed by Harvey Genereux, Boston Symphony Orchestra stage manager, and his assistant, Rodman Henry, under the supervision of John Ortiz, of New York, artists' manager for the Baldwin Piano Co.

Orchestra Men Busy

Prior to the Tanglewood season a number of well-known members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra have been far afield. First horn player James Stagliano journeyed to the Far East with New York's Symphony of the Air, the former NBC Symphony which Arturo Toscanini conducted. First violist Joseph de Pasquale recently returned from a tour of Europe with the Philadelphia Orchestra; Eugene Ormandy's orchestra gave its first performance abroad in the same Paris Opera House where Mr. de Pasquale performed in May, 1952, as a member of the BSO. Oboist Ralph Gomberg and bassoonist Sherman Walt were delegates to the recent national meeting of the Symphony Orchestra League in Evansville, Ind., and delivered a symposium on woodwinds.

Tours With Piatigorsky

Dean Ralph Berkowitz of the Berkshire Music Center, who will be paired with the celebrated cellist Gregor Piatigorsky in a Berkshire Festival chamber music concert on Aug. 10 at Tanglewood, accompanied Mr. Piatigorsky on a tour of some 15 concerts last season in England, Italy and Israel; vacationed in Rome for two months; then gave a number of recitals in Scandinavia with violinist Eudice Shapiro of California. A noted modern painter, Mr. Berkowitz has recent samples from his palette in his Tanglewood office.

Copland in Europe

The American composer Aaron Copland, who is on leave of absence this summer from his duties as assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center and head of its composition department, is in Europe. He attended the concert by the traveling Philadelphia Orchestra, recently performed in Paris, where a number of his songs were sung by baritone William Warfield, who was a Berkshire Festival soloist in 1953. In an interview with the Paris Herald Tribune's Art Buchwald, Mr. Copland said there are about 350 composers of serious music in the U.S. "The American composer is a member of a badly publicized society," the Pulitzer Prize winner said. "Our incomes have never caused any excitement at the Internal Revenue Department. There are only about ten of us who can make a living at it . . . But we are making headway. American opera is being produced all over the country thanks to Menotti, and American symphony orchestras are playing our music. But we have the devil of a time being heard in Europe. The European public thinks the only music we have to offer from America is jazz. They are reluctant to admit we can write serious music. They say: 'You make the bathtubs and automobiles, but we'll keep the arts'."

THE SPRINGFIELD SUNDAY REPUBLICAN. SPRINGFIELD, MASS., JUNE 26, 1955

Outdoor Music Class at Tanglewood

Typical of the music studies at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, soon to open for the summer season, is this outdoor class in flute playing, conducted by Doriot Anthony Dwyer (left), first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Some 400 students, from most of the 48 states and many foreign countries, are expected to attend the six-week summer school this year.

Tanglewood Topics

BY WALTER ALFORD

Lenox, June 25—Tanglewood is moving into second gear these days, in preparation for the arrival of its 400 summer music students of the Berkshire Music Center on Sunday, July 3, and for the opening of the Berkshire Festival on Wednesday, July 6. Some physical changes will be noted on the grounds this season.

Under the direction of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's carpenter, Harry Porter, workmen have been constructing a new office under the Hawthorne Pines, near the main gate, for manager Thomas D. Perry, Jr., Who is expected from Boston next week with his wife and sons. Near the press gate a new office has been built for Rosario Mazzeo, personnel manager of the orchestra, and new quarters have been installed for the telephone switchboard.

* * *

Departments Open

Although the opening of Tanglewood is still a week away, all departments are operating. The Berkshire Music Center, with dean Ralph Berkowitz, executive secretary Gail Rector, and registrar Edith Bossler is processing student applications; finding them housing at the Lenox School, Wheatleigh and in Lenox and nearby homes; and arranging scedules for classes and student concerts. The office of the Friends of the music school, through contributions to which the public may attend the more than 25 student performances listed this summer, is again under the direction of Mrs. Lucy Putman, assisted by Roger Hinman of Lenox, Miss Margo of Pittsfield, Miss Josephine Swan of Boston, and joined next week by Michael d'Amelio of New York.

Joseph LaPlante is preparing the book atore where students and the public may buy scores, music book store where studnets and Relly Raffman of Worcester, Celia Salata of Boston, and William Verner of Princeton. Photographer Gus Manos, of Columbia, S.C., arrives next week. The press office under the direction of Walter Alford of New York, is staffed this year by Martin Bookspan, of Boston, radio and television coordinator; Gerhard Kemper, of New York; and Walter Howard, of Tyringham and Yale University.

Allan Smith is assisted in the box office by Richard D. Sawyer of the Lenox School, Leon W. Bills, Mrs. Priscilia Chase of Pittsfield, Gordon Simpson, Bob Edwards and Richard Berry. Katherine Mealey and Jan Bookspan man the switchboard. Ten college student guides will arrive next week, to be under the direction of Stoddard G. Spader. Victor Alpert, librarian, and his assistants James E. Whitaker and Betty Burnett will be on hand next week, as will Arthur Kerr, lifeguard at the Stockbridge Bowl lake front, and Ralph Pottle.

Other arrivals soon will be James Brosnahan, treasurer; Robin Brooks and Dorothy Sullivan, bookkeepers; John N. Burk, program annotator and his secretary corinne Paul; Leonard Burkat, secretary to music director Charles Munch; Margaret Burk, secretary to Rosario Mazzeo; Mary Smith, secretary to Thomas Perry; Irene MacKenize, secretary to Mr. Brosnahan. Altogether Tanglewood's 1955 staff comprises 61 persons.

* * *

69 New Pianos

Sixth-nine Baldwin pianos for Festival concerts and rehearsals, for lessons and practice by students, all new instruments, including 14 grands on which such soloists will perform as Rudolf Serkin, Eugene Istomin, Leoard Bernstein, Ralph Berkowitz, Alexander Zakin; 55 upright pianos and an electric organ, are being installed at Tanglewood, upon their overland shipment from Cincinnati, by Harvey Genereux, Boston Symphony Orchestra stage manager and his assistant Rodman Henry, under the supervision of John Ortiz, of New York, artists' manager for the Baldwin Piano Co.

* * *

Prior to the Tanglewood season a number of well-known members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra have been far afield. First horn player James Stagliano journeyed to the Far East with New York's Symphony of the Air, the former NBC Sumphony which Arturo Toscanini conducted. First violist Joseph de Pasquale has recently returned from a tour of Europe with the Philadelphia Orchestra: Eugene Ormandy's orchestra gave its first performance abroad in the same Paris Opera House where Mr. de Pasquale performed in May, 1952, as a member of the BSO. Oboist Ralph Gomberg and bassoonist Sherman Walt were delegates to the recent national meeting of the Symphony Orchestra League in Evansville, Ind., and delivered a symposium on woodwinds.

* * *

Back From Iceland

Seven members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra have just returned from Reykjavik, Iceland, where they performed without pay as a chamber orchestra, assisting noted organist E. Power Biggs in organ concertos and other instrumental works, a number of them by American composers. The musicians' trip was sponsored by the International Exchange Program of the Tmerican National Theater and Academy and the U..S State Department, and was designed to demonstrate the culture of the western world to Iceland, a democratic country of 160,000, about equal to the population of Springfield, to offset a cultural "cold war" by Russia, which during June planned to send a ballet troupe, an opera company and many other musicians to "sell" the little country on the benefits of communism.

From the Boston Symphony the following members traveled by air to Iceland for the concerts with Mr. Biggs: Rosario Mazzeo, bass clarinetist; Emil Kornsand, violinist; Louis Speyer, English horn player; cellist Alfred Zighera; French horn player Roger Voisin; violist George Humphrey; and concertmaster Richard Burgin.

* * *

Dean Ralph Berkowitz of the Berkshire Music Center, who will be paired with the celebrated cellist Gregor Piatigorsky in a Berkshire Festival chamber music concert on aAug. 10 at Tanglewood, accompanied Piatigorsky on a tour of some 15 concerts last season in England, Italy and Israel; vacationed in Rome for two months; then gave a number of recitals in Scandinavia with violinist Eudice Shapiro of California. A noted modern painter, Mr. Berkowitz has recent samples from his pallette in his Tanglewood office.

Copland and Foss

* * *

Distinguished American composer Aaron Copland, who is on leave of absence this summer from his duties as assistant director of ony,more more motre more more the Berkshire Music Center and head of its composition department, is in Europe. He attended the concert by the traveling Philadelphia Orchestra, recently performed in Paris, where a number of his songs were sung by baritone William Warfield, who was a Berkshire Festival soloist in 1953.

Another Tanglewood faculty member on leave of absence will be missed this summer is Lukas Foss, young American composer-pianist-conductor, who writes from his home in Beverly Hills, Cal., "This year I find I have taken on more committments than I am able to handle. I have been teaching at the University of California in Los Angeles; directing the University orchestra; conducting my own orchestra, the Los Angeles Chamber Symphony; conducting a pair of concerts with the St. Louis Symphony; conducting the Los Angeles Philharmonic at home and on tour; performing my piano concerto with Fritz Reiner in Chicago."

Foss puts in about six hours of composition daily. One piece he is working on an orchestral composition commissioned by the Albert Schweitzer Foundation which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform next season, its 75th aniverary.

[104]

THE SPRINGFIELD SUNDAY REPUBLICAN.

Outdoor Music Class at Tanglewood

Typical of the music studies at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, soon to open for the summer season, is this outdoor class in flute playing, conducted by Doriot Anthony Dwyer (left), first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Some 400 students, from most of the 48 states and many foreign countries, are expected to attend the six-week summer school this year.

Tanglewood Topics

BY WALTER ALFORD

Lenox, June 25—Tanglewood is moving into second gear these days, in preparation for the arrival of its 400 summer music students of the Berkshire Music Center on Sunday, July 3, and for the opening of the Berkshire Festival on Wednesday, July 6. Some physical changes will be noted on the grounds this season.

Under the direction of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's carpenter, Harry Porter, workmen have been constructing a new office under the Hawthorne Pines, near the main gate, for manager Thomas D. Perry, Jr., Who is expected from Boston next week with his wife and sons. Near the press gate a new office has been built for Rosario Mazzeo, personnel manager of the orchestra, and new quarters have been installed for the telephone switchboard.

* * *

Departments Open

Although the opening of Tanglewood is still a week away, all departments are operating. The Berkshire Music Center, with dean Ralph Berkowitz, executive secretary Gail Rector, and registrar Edith Bossler is processing student applications; finding them housing at the Lenox School, Wheatleigh and in Lenox and nearby homes; and arranging scedules for classes and student concerts. The office of the Friends of the music school, through contributions to which the public may attend the more than 25 student performances listed this summer, is again under the direction of Mrs. Lucy Putman, assisted by Roger Hinman of Lenox, Miss Margo of Pittsfield, Miss Josephine Swan of Boston, and joined next week by Michael d'Amelio of New York.

Joseph LaPlante is preparing the book atore where students and the public may buy scores, music book store where studnets and Relly Raffman of Worcester, Celia Salata of Boston, and William Verner of Princeton. Photographer Gus Manos, of Columbia, S.C., arrives next week. The press office under the direction of Walter Alford of New York, is staffed this year by Martin Bookspan, of Boston, radio and television coordinator; Gerhard Kemper, of New York; and Walter Howard, of Tyringham and Yale University.

Allan Smith is assisted in the box office by Richard D. Sawyer of the Lenox School, Leon W. Bills, Mrs. Priscilia Chase of Pittsfield, Gordon Simpson, Bob Edwards and Richard Berry. Katherine Mealey and Jan Bookspan man the switchboard. Ten college student guides will arrive next week, to be under the direction of Stoddard G. Spader. Victor Alpert, librarian, and his assistants James E. Whitaker and Betty Burnett will be on hand next week, as will Arthur Kerr, lifeguard at the Stockbridge Bowl lake front, and Ralph Pottle.

Other arrivals soon will be James Brosnahan, treasurer; Robin Brooks and Dorothy Sullivan, bookkeepers; John N. Burk, program annotator and his secretary corinne Paul; Leonard Burkat, secretary to music director Charles Munch; Margaret Burk, secretary to Rosario Mazzeo; Mary Smith, secretary to Thomas Perry; Irene MacKenize, secretary to Mr. Brosnahan. Altogether Tanglewood's 1955 staff comprises 61 persons.

* * *

69 New Pianos

Sixth-nine Baldwin pianos for Festival concerts and rehearsals, for lessons and practice by students, all new instruments, including 14 grands on which such soloists will perform as Rudolf Serkin, Eugene Istomin, Leoard Bernstein, Ralph Berkowitz, Alexander Zakin; 55 upright pianos and an electric organ, are being installed at Tanglewood, upon their overland shipment from Cincinnati, by Harvey Genereux, Boston Symphony Orchestra stage manager and his assistant Rodman Henry, under the supervision of John Ortiz, of New York, artists' manager for the Baldwin Piano Co.

* * *

Prior to the Tanglewood season a number of well-known members of the Boston Synphony Orchestra have been far afield. First horn player James Stagliano journeyed to the Far East with New York's Symphony of the Air, the former NBC Sumphony which Arturo Toscanini conducted. First violist Joseph de Pasquale has recently returned from a tour of Europe with the Philadelphia Orchestra: Eugene Ormandy's orchestra gave its first performance abroad in the same Paris Opera House where Mr. de Pasquale performed in May, 1952, as a member of the BSO. Oboist Ralph Gomberg and bassoonist Sherman Walt were delegates to the recent national meeting of the Symphony Orchestra League in Evansville, Ind., and delivered a symposium on woodwinds.

* * *

Back From Iceland

Seven members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra have just returned from Reykjavik, Iceland, where they performed without pay as a chamber orchestra, assisting noted organist E. Power Biggs in organ concertos and other instrumental works, a number of them by American composers. The musicians' trip was sponsored by the International Exchange Program of the Tmerican National Theater and Academy and the U..S State Department, and was designed to demonstrate the culture of the western world to Iceland, a democratic country of 160,000, about equal to the population of Springfield, to offset a cultural "cold war" by Russia, which during June planned to send a ballet troupe, an opera company and many other musicians to "sell" the little country on the benefits of communism.

From the Boston Symphony the following members traveled by air to Iceland for the concerts with Mr. Biggs: Rosario Mazzeo, bass clarinetist; Emil Kornsand, violinist; Louis Speyer, English horn player; cellist Alfred Zighera; French horn player Roger Voisin; violist George Humphrey; and concertmaster Richard Burgin.

* * *

Dean Ralph Berkowitz of the Berkshire Music Center, who will be paired with the celebrated cellist Gregor Piatigorsky in a Berkshire Festival chamber music concert on aAug. 10 at Tanglewood, accompanied Piatigorsky on a tour of some 15 concerts last season in England, Italy and Israel; vacationed in Rome for two months; then gave a number of recitals in Scandinavia with violinist Eudice Shapiro of California. A noted modern painter, Mr. Berkowitz has recent samples from his pallette in his Tanglewood office.

Copland and Foss

* * *

Distinguished American composer Aaron Copland, who is on leave of absence this summer from his duties as assistant director of ony,more more motre more more the Berkshire Music Center and head of its composition department, is in Europe. He attended the concert by the traveling Philadelphia Orchestra, recently performed in Paris, where a number of his songs were sung by baritone William Warfield, who was a Berkshire Festival soloist in 1953.

Another Tanglewood faculty member on leave of absence will be missed this summer is Lukas Foss, young American composer-pianist-conductor, who writes from his home in Beverly Hills, Cal., "This year I find I have taken on more committments than I am able to handle. I have been teaching at the University of California in Los Angeles; directing the University orchestra; conducting my own orchestra, the Los Angeles Chamber Symphony; conducting a pair of concerts with the St. Louis Symphony; conducting the Los Angeles Philharmonic at home and on tour; performing my piano concerto with Fritz Reiner in Chicago."

Foss puts in about six hours of composition daily. One piece he is working on an orchestral composition commissioned by the Albert Schweitzer Foundation which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform next season, its 75th aniverary.

Eagle June 24

Tanglewood Tales

Physical Changes

Tanglewood is moving into second gear these days, in preparation for the arrival of its 400 summer music students of the Berkshire Music Center on Sunday, July 3, and for the opening of the Berkshire Festival on Wednesday, July 6. Some physical changes will be noted on the grounds this season. Under the direction of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's carpenter, Harry Porter, workmen have been constructing a new office under the Hawthorne Pines, near the gate, for manager Thomas D. Perry Jr., who is expected from Boston next week with his wife and sons. Near the press gate a new office has been built for Rosario Mazzeo, personnel manager of the orchestra, and new quarters have been installed for the telephone switchboard.

61 on Staff

Although the opening is still a week away, all departments are operating. The Berkshire Music Center, with Dean Ralph Berkowitz, executive secretary Gail Rector, and register Edith Bossler, is processing student applications; finding them housing at the Lenox School, Wheatleigh and in Lenox and area homes; and arranging schedules for classes and student concerts. The office of the Friends of the Music School, through contributions to which the public may attend the more than 25 student performances listed this summer, is again under the direction of Mrs. Lucy Putnam, assisted by Roger Hinman, of Lenox, Miss Margo Miller of Pittsfield, Miss Josephine Swan of Boston, and joined next week by Michael d'Amelio of New York. Joseph LaPlante is preparing the book store where students and the public may buy scores, music books and records, assisted by Relly Raffman of Worcester, Celia Salata of Boston, and William Verner of Princeton. Photographer Gus Manos of Columbia, S.C., arrives next week. The press office, under the direction of Walter Alford of New York, is staffed this year by Martin Bookspan of, Boston, radio and television co-ordinator; Gerhard Kemper of New York, and Walter Howard of Tyringham and Yale University. Allan Smith is assisted in the boxoffice by Richard D. Sawyer of the Lenox School, Leon W. Bills, Mrs. Priscilla Chase of Pittsfield, Gordon Simpson, Bob Edwards and Richard Berry. Katherine Mealey and Jan Bookspan man the switchboard. Ten college student guides will arrive next week, to be under the direction of Stoddard G. Spader. Victor Alpert, librarian, and his assistants, James E. Whitaker and Betty Burnett, will be on hand next week, as will Arthur Kerr, lifeguard at the Stockbridge Bowl lake front, and Ralph Pottle. Other arrivals soon will be James Brosnahan, treasurer; Robin Brooks and Dorothy Sullivan, bookkeepers; John N. Burk, program annotator, and his secretary, Corinne Paul; Leonard Burkat, secretary to music director Charles Munch; Margaret Burk, secretary to Rosario Mazzeo; Mary Smith, secretary to Thomas Perry; Irene MacKenzie, secretary to Mr. Brosnahan. Altogether Tanglewood's 1955 staff comprises 61 persons.

69 Pianos Being Installed

Sixty-nine new Baldwin pianos for Festival concerts and rehearsals, for lessons and practice by students, including 14 grands on which such soloists will perform as Rudolf Serkin, Eugene Istomin, Leonard Bernstein, Ralph Berkowitz, Alexander Zakin, 55 upright pianos, and an electric organ, are being installed at Tanglewood. Shipped overland from Cincinnati, they are being installed by Harvey Genereux, Boston Symphony Orchestra stage manager, and his assistant, Rodman Henry, under the supervision of John Ortiz, of New York, artists' manager for the Baldwin Piano Co.

Orchestra Men Busy

Prior to the Tanglewood season a number of well-known members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra have been far afield. First horn player James Stagliano journeyed to the Far East with New York's Symphony of the Air, the former NBC Symphony which Arturo Toscanini conducted. First violist Joseph de Pasquale recently returned from a tour of Europe with the Philadelphia Orchestra; Eugene Ormandy's orchestra gave its first performance abroad in the same Paris Opera House where Mr. de Pasquale performed in May, 1952, as a member of the BSO. Oboist Ralph Gomberg and bassoonist Sherman Walt were delegates to the recent national meeting of the Symphony Orchestra League in Evansville, Ind., and delivered a symposium on woodwinds.

Tours With Piatigorsky

Dean Ralph Berkowitz of the Berkshire Music Center, who will be paired with the celebrated cellist Gregor Piatigorsky in a Berkshire Festival chamber music concert on Aug. 10 at Tanglewood, accompanied Mr. Piatigorsky on a tour of some 15 concerts last season in England, Italy and Israel; vacationed in Rome for two months; then gave a number of recitals in Scandinavia with violinist Eudice Shapiro of California. A noted modern painter, Mr. Berkowitz has recent samples from his palette in his Tanglewood office.

Copland in Europe

The American composer Aaron Copland, who is on leave of absence this summer from his duties as assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center and head of its composition department, is in Europe. He attended the concert by the traveling Philadelphia Orchestra, recently performed in Paris, where a number of his songs were sung by baritone William Warfield, who was a Berkshire Festival soloist in 1953. In an interview with the Paris Herald Tribune's Art Buchwald, Mr. Copland said there are about 350 composers of serious music in the U.S. "The American composer is a member of a badly publicized society," the Pulitzer Prize winner said. "Our incomes have never caused any excitement at the Internal Revenue Department. There are only about ten of us who can make a living at it . . . But we are making headway. American opera is being produced all over the country thanks to Menotti, and American symphony orchestras are playing our music. But we have the devil of a time being heard in Europe. The European public thinks the only music we have to offer from America is jazz. They are reluctant to admit we can write serious music. They say: 'You make the bathtubs and automobiles, but we'll keep the arts'."

Second Thoughts in Music

Spfld Rep 6/19

Concerts in Music Shed Rich in Beethoven Works

Munch, Monteux and Bernstein to Conduct Symphony Orchestra in Series Starting July 22; Adele Addison Soloist On Three Programs

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Last summer at Tanglewood we were treated to a goodly portion of the works of Hector Berlioz. As many of these works are not heard often, the "Te Deum" for example, there was considerable interest in these programs, with the performance of the "Requiem" quite the finest we had heard.

This summer, Charles Munch is turning to Beethoven for the major portion of the Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. It will be interesting to see just what interest will bring thousands of people to Tanglewood to hear what they are able to hear most any time during the winter season. Mr. Munch is not recognized as a superior interpreter of the works of Beethoven. However, the works speak for themselves and if one lets the music do the interpreting the results are usually well worth hearing.

Shed Concerts

The concerts in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra start Friday night, July 22, The program will open with Beethoven's overture to "Coriolan." Isaac Stern will be heard in the violin concerto and the program will conclude with the seventh symphony.

Saturday night, July 23, Pierre Monteux will conduct the orchestra in the following program: Bach-Respighi's "Passacaglia"; Beethoven's second symphony; Sessions' suite from "The Black Maskers" and Strauss' "Death and Transfiguration."

Sunday afternoon, July 24, Mr. Munch will conduct a performance of the Bach Mass in B minor, using the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society. Adele Addison, Springfield soprano, will be one of the solo quartet.

The week end opening Friday, July 29, finds Charles Munch opening the program with Handel's "Water Music" suite. Then follows Schumann's fourth symphony and Samuel Barber's "Players of Kierkegaard," with Jennie Tourel as soloist. The program will conclude with the fourth symphony of Brahms.

Serkin Soloist

On Saturday night, July 30, Mr. Munch will devote the program to Beethoven's overture to "Egmont," the fifth piano concerto, with Rudolf Serkin as soloist and the third symphony.

Sunday afternoon, Pierre Monteux will take over a Brahms program opening with the "Academic Festival" Overture and including the violin and cello concerto, played by Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatagorsky. The first symphony will conclude the program.

The third week end, opening Aug. 5, will open with a performance of Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" by the Festival chorus and soloists, among them Adele Addison. This performance is in memory of Serge Koussevitzky and will be conducted by Leonard Bernstein.

Saturday night Mr. Munch will direct a performance of the second act of Beethoven's opera "Fidelio." Margaret Harshaw, soprano, will be heard in this and also in the Immolation Scene from "Gotterdammerung." Other excerpts from the "Gotterdammerung" will be "Siegfried's Rhine Journey" and the "Death Music."

Istomin at Piano

Sunday afternoon will again turn to Beethoven, including on the program the fifth and eighth symphonies and the fourth piano concerto with Eugene Istomin as soloist.

Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist, will be be featured in the Bloch "Schelomo on the Friday, Aug. 12, program. Mr. Munch will also include the Brahms "Variations on a Theme by Haydn"; "La Mer" by Debussy and Ravel's "Daphnis et Chloe," the second Suite.

Pierre Monteux will conduct Saturday, Aug. 13. The program will open with the overture to "The Flying Dutchman" by Wagner, and include the third symphony of Brahms, Debussy's "Three Nocturnes" and the Strauss "Rosenkalier" suite.

The final program, Aug. 14, finds Mr. Munch opening the program with the Overture "Leonore" No. 3, and then directing a performance of Beethoven Sympony No. 9 in D minor. Miss Addison will also be soprano soloist in this work.

Eagle 6/22

Music Center Adds New Faculty Members

Assistants Named For Summer School At Tanglewood

Arthur Schoep Miss Iva Dee Hiatt John Kreuger

TANGLEWOOD — There will be a number of new faces on the Tanglewood campus this summer. Four of the five departmental assistants are former Berkshire Music Center students, who have joined the teaching staff for the first time.

Miss Iva Dee Hiatt

Miss Iva Dee Hiatt, assistant professor of music at Smith College, Northampton, will assist Hugh Ross in the school's department of choral music. Miss Hiatt studied choral conducting under Mr. Ross at Tanglewood in 1947, and was the first woman to conduct a work for chorus and orchestra in the Music Shed. Miss Hiatt graduated from the University of California in 1948, receiving both B.A. and M.A. degrees. She became the first student conductor of the University of California Chorus, and gave West Coast premieres to compositions by Copland, Britten and Stravinsky. At Smith College, where she directs choral music, she founded the Smith College Chamber Singers, an ensemble which has made three successful tours of Europe. During 1953-54, she was associate conductor of the Cecilia Society of Boston.

John Kreuger

John Krueger, of Youngstown, Ohio, will also be an assistant to Hugh Ross this summer. He is a former Berkshire Music Center student (1951) of choral and orchestra conducting. Patrons of Tanglewood student concerts will recall his conducting a Bartok suite in a choral concert, and a Bach cantata on that year's Koussevitzky Memorial Concert. Born in Wisconsin, Mr. Krueger received his degree in music from the Cincinnati Conservatory in 1943, took his M.A. in composition at Colorado College in 1948. A member of the faculty of the University of Tennessee from then until 1951, he conducted the Oak Ridge Community Chorus for two seasons, and the Knoxville Civic Opera in 1951. That year also he founded the Youngstown Philharmonic Orchestra, and the following year the Youngstown Community Chorus. His composition studies have been with Roy Harris and Hugh Ross.

Goldovsky's Assistants

Boris Goldovsky will have three new assistants in the opera department, two of them from Tanglewood students. Arthur Schoep and Robert Gay, both alumni, will serve as assistant stage directors to Sarah Caldwell. Mr. Schoep studied at the University of South Dakota, the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N.Y., and the New England Conservatory in Boston. He attended summer sessions at Tanglewood, was active in major opera productions in 1946, 1948, 1952 and 1953. For some time he was a teacher at several Texas colleges, and, winner of a Fulbright scholarship, sang in Holland and Germany. In the U.S. he has sung with opera companies in the South, with the Rochester Civic Opera, and since 1946 with Boris Goldovsky's New England Opera Theater. Mr. Schoep recently sang the role of Pelleas in Debussy's "Pelleas and Melisande" at the Theatre Royale de la Monnale in Brussels, under the baton of Pierre Monteux. He has assisted Boris Goldovsky in opera workshops in Pittsburgh and Wheeling, W.Va.

Robert Gay

Robert Gay, as a student in Tanglewood's opera department in 1946, sang in the American premiere of Benjamin Britten's "Peter Grimes." He was in the first production of Menotti's "The Old Maid and the Thief" and the first English performance in the U.S. of "Pelleas and Melisande." Born in Chicago, he studied at Northwestern University, the Curtis Institute of Music, Mannes College of Music and Boston University. From 1938 to 1942 he was with the Philadelphia Opera Company, and was soloist with the Philadelphia Orchestra during those years. In 1941 he was at the Memphis Open Air Theater, and since 1946 has been with the New England Opera Theater.

Replacing John Blankenchip as the opera department's stage designer this summer is David Hays, who spent last winter as a teaching fellow at Boston University, designing, lighting and costuming productions for the university theater. Mr. Hays was assistant to the designer at the Brattle Theater in Boston from 1949 to 1952, the year he took his B.A. from Harvard. He won a Fulbright scholarship in 1952, and worked for designers at the famed Old Vic Theater in London during 1952-53. After a winter at the Yale University Theater, he worked as a designer at Green Mansions, N.Y., summer of 1954.

Berkshire Festival Now In 16th Season

Spfld Rep 6/25

The Boston Symphony Orchestra is preparing these days for its huge annual Operation Tanglewood. For the sixteenth summer in which the Boston Symphony Orchestra has participated, music will be presented in the hills of Western Massachusetts. Since 1937, this orchestra has played in Tanglewood, where Nathaniel Hawthorne walked a century ago, on the plateau-like estate where the American author was a guest and where he told his "Tanglewood Tales."

Since 1938 when the huge pie-shaped Music Shed, designed by Finnish architect Eliel Saarinen, was erected on the spacious lawns of Tanglewood, open on three sides so the music might spill out to the thousands who listen to it, at night under the stars or in Sunday sunshine, the Berkshire eFstival has attracted crowds from all over the world.

In 1954—Music Director Charles Munch's fourth summer with the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood—all attendance records were broken. In the six weeks from early July to mid-August, the Festival concert attendance totaled 135,775 (as compared with 117,950 in 1953), and total paid admissions were $330,033 (in 1953 $311,600). Attendance at Six Chamber Music Concerts in the 1,152-seat capacity Theater-Concert Halls was 8,750, an average of 1,358. Attendance at the six "Bach-Mozart" concerts by members of the Boston Symphnoy Orchestra in the same auditorium totaled 16,50, an average of 2,275. Twelve concerts by the full orchestra given in the Music Shed, capacity 6,000 persons, attracted audiences of 129,925, an average of 9,197.

In addition, 30,800 persons attended the 30-odd concerts and lemonstrations by students of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by e Boston Symphony Orchestra in njunction with the Festival, and e school's annual benefit, "Tanwood On Parade," drew an alle record of 10,050.

BSO Box Office At Tanglewood Is Now Open

LENOX—The box office and the administrative department of the Boston Symphony Orchestra opened this week at Tanglewood. Allan Smith is in charge of the ticket office which will be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Gail W. Rector, assistant manager of the BSO, arrived in Lenox last week. In the Music Center office, Miss Edith Bossler, the registrar, is now taking applications for music students. Two secretaries, Miss Josephine Testa and Miss Mary Parsons, are now working in the offices.

Berkshire Music Center Signs Up 375 Students

Spfld Un 6/23

Lenox, June 22—Student registration at the Berkshire Music Center, the six-week summer music school maintained by the Boston Symphony in connection with the annual Berkshire Festival concerts, has passed the 375 mark, Miss Edith A. Bossler, registrar, reports. The full enrollment will be 400.

The school will be held July 3 to August 14. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, is director of the center and Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the orchestra, will act as assistant director.

Students at the center will study orchestra playing and conducting, choral singing and conducting, composition, opera or chamber music.

Enrollment at the school may be for a two, four or six week period.

NY Times / 6/27

. . . More people have bought subscription tickets for the forthcoming Berkshire Music Festival than subscribed for the festival last summer. . . In the purple blur . . . The report that Tanglewood's advance ticket orders point to a probable all-time record attendance this summer is fine news both for Berkshire businessmen and for the Boston Symphony management, which always approaches this annual June barometer with considerable trepidation . .

---

Spfd 6/20

$325,000 Potential

Eagle

Tanglewood School Gets Big Rockefeller Grant

LENOX — The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will benefit from a series of grants which can amount to $125,000 from the Rockefeller Foundation, it was announced today.

To Match Funds

Over a period of five years, commencing this summer, the Rockefeller Foundation will donate a sum equal to money raised from other sources for the support of the only school of music in this country maintained by a symphony orchestra. The appropriations will be made annually.

This is the second time the Rockefeller Foundation has come to the support of the Berkshire Music Center. Grants amounting to $65,000 in 1940 and 1941 to the Boston Symphony Orchestra enabled the orchestra to start its music school.

Commenting on the grant today, Henry B. Cabot, president of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's trustees, said "the future of the school is assured if the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center will really rally to its support."

Goal $35,000 This Year

In 1954 contributions to the music center totaled about $25,000. This year a goal of at least $35,000 is being sought, BSO officials revealed.

Donations are made by music lovers who each summer attend the concerts by the 400 students who are enrolled at the school, as well as by individuals and organizations who assist the center through tax-exempt donations to the organization. Through the Rockefeller Foundation grants, it was explained, the Berkshire Music Center will benefit annually by twice the amount raised through the Friends, in excess of $15,000 annually.

$325,000 Potential

The five-year matching grants will be paid into the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, established in 1949 largely from a series of gifts from the RCA Victor division of the Radio Corp. of America. The original capital of $50,000, while drawn upon annually to assist the 4,575 students from all parts of the U.S. and many foreign lands who have been enrolled in the school during its 12 sessions, has been increased substantially each year through contributions and the monies raised by the Friends. Under the terms of the Rockefeller Foundation grant, the potential gain to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund by the end of 1959 is estimated at $325,000.

The Berkshire Music Center commences its 13th session at Tanglewood July 4. Its five departments are: Instrumental music, with Leonard Bernstein as head of orchestra conducting, Richard Burgin and William Kroll heads of chamber music; choral music, with Hugh Ross in charge; composition, with composers Roger Sessions (U.S.A.) and Boris Blacher (Germany) this year's guest teachers; opera, headed by Boris Boldovsky; and the new Tanglewood Study Group, aimed at lovers of music on a non-professional basis which Ingolf Dahl heads. Charles Munch is director of the Berkshire Music Center; Aaron Copland, assistant director; Ralph Berkowitz, dean.

Berkshire Festival To Have 24 Concerts

Tanglewood Series Will Run July 6 - August 11

The Boston Symphony Orchestra is preparing these days for its huge annual Operation Tanglewood. For the 16th summer in which the Boston Symphony Orchestra has participated, music will be presented in the hills of western Massachusetts. Since 1937, this orchestra has played in Tanglewood, at Lenox, where Nathaniel Hawthorne walked a century ago, on the plateau-like estate, and where he told his "Tanglewood Tales".

Since 1938 when the huge pie-shaped Music Shed, designed by Finnish architect Eliel Saarinen, was erected on the spacious lawns of Tanglewood, open on three sides so the music might spill out to the thousands who listen to it, the Berkshire Festival has attracted crowds from all over the world.

The Berkshire Festival will consist of 24 concerts, commencing Wednesday evening, July 6, with the first of six Wednesday concerts of Beethovens chamber music by noted aggregations and soloists. The two weeks preceding the appearance of the full orchestra in the Music Shed will be devoted to the "Bach-Mozart" Concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons in the Theatre-Concert Hall, commencing Friday, July 8.

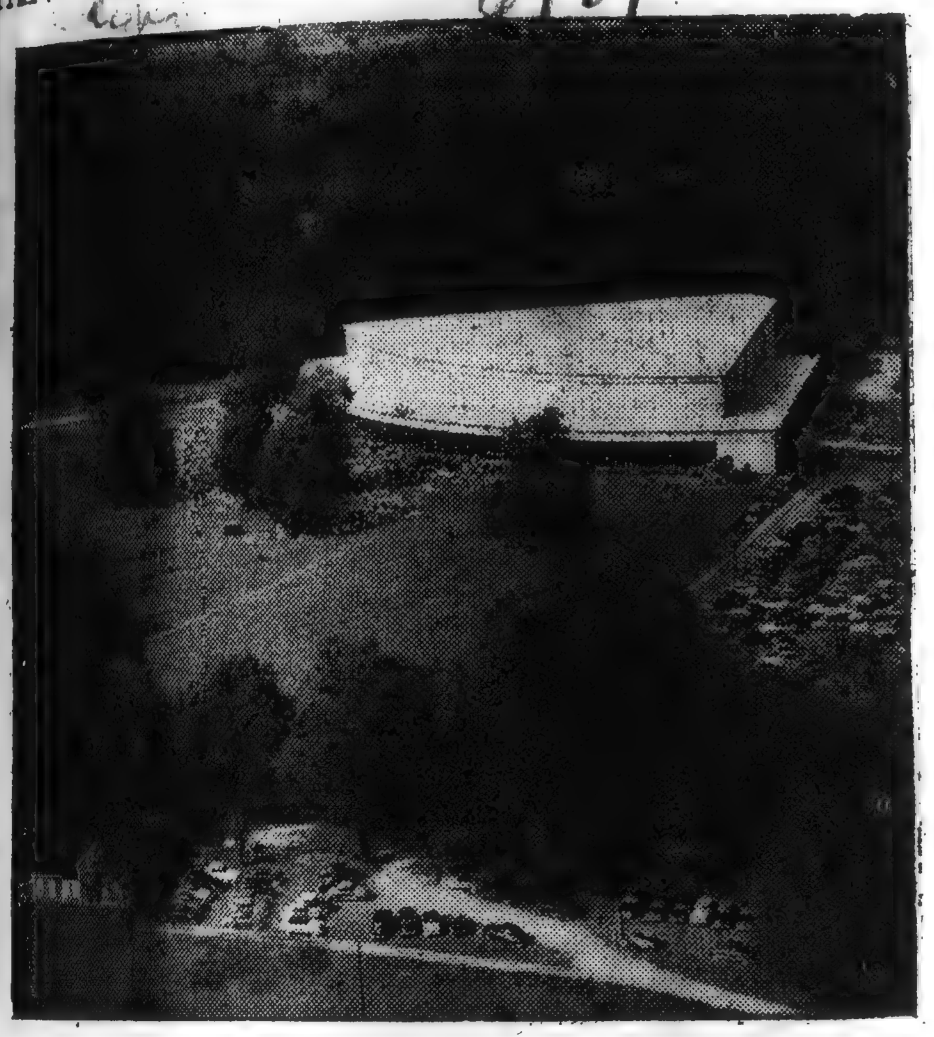
The concert on the afternoon of July 10 will have the assistance of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society and soloists (Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm), in the presentation of Bach's Mass in B Minor. July 15 will welcome Leonard Bernstein back to Tanglewood, after a year's sabbatical, in an all-Mozart program: the young conductor will also be soloist in the Concerto in G Major, and Jenr Tourel, mezzo-soprano, will heard in three arias.

Charles Munch, with the assistance of Pierre Monteux and Leonard Bernstein, will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 12 Music Shed concerts, on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons, commencing Friday, July 22, and concluding Sunday, August 14. Soloists include Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price, Rudolf Serkin, Gregor Piatigorsky, Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd, Eugene Istomin, Adele Addison, Eunice Alberts, Catherine Akos, Mac Morgan and Donald Gramm.

The Festival concerts for 1955, as planned by Mr Munch, will feature the music of Beethoven, including all nine symphonies, "Fidelio" (Act II) in concert performance, the violin concerto, two piano concertos, three overtures and the "Missa Solemnis", in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

TANGLEWOOD SEASON AT HAND!

(6/21)



Scene Outside the Shed at a recent Concert

The Boston Symphony Orchestra is preparing these days for its huge annual "Operation Tanglewood". For the sixteenth summer its music will be presented in an idyllic setting near Lenox, Mass. Since 1937, this orchestra has played in Tanglewood, where Nathaniel Hawthorne walked a century ago, on the plateau-like estate where the American author was a guest and where he told his "Tanglewood Tales".

Since 1938 when the huge pie-shaped Music Shed, designed by Finnish architect Eliel Saarinen, was erected on the spacious lawns of Tanglewood, open on three sides so the music might spill out to the thousands who listen to it, at night under the stars or in Sunday sunshine, the Berkshire Festival has attracted crowds from all over the world. Last Summer (Music Director Charles Munch's fourth with the 104-piece Boston Symphony) all attendance records were broken.

Music lovers, indeed, have shown their increasing awareness of the Berkshire Festival's accessibility from the Connecticut, Mohawk and Hudson valleys by expressway, state highway, bus, train, airplane, and shown also a welcome for the plan inaugurated last year to increase the number of concerts within the Festival's six-week scope.

A voluntary contribution to the tax-exempt organization known as the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center admits music-lovers to the student concerts which take place almost every day and are of comparable interest to the professional Festival concerts.

Ticket sale for the Berkshire Festival concerts has been opened. Programs and ticket information may be obtained by writing to the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., or by telephoning Lenox 600.

MISS HIATT BACK AS CHORAL TEACHER

Lenox, June 25 — Miss Iva D. Hiatt, assistant professor of music at Smith College, Northampton, will assist Hugh Ross in the Berkshire Music Center's department of choral music this summer. Miss Hiatt studied choral conducting under Mr. Ross at Tanglewood in 1947, and was the first woman to conduct a work for chorus and orchestra in the Music Shed. Miss Hiatt graduated from the University of California in 1948, receiving both B. A. and M. A. degrees.

She became the first student conductor of the University of California Chorus, and gave West Coast premieres to compositions by Copland, Britten and Stravinsky. At Smith, where she directs choral music, she founded the Smith College Chamber Singers, an ensemble which has made three successful tours of Europe. During 1953-4, she was associate conductor of the Cecilia Society of Boston.

June 16, 1955 The New Milford Times Sect. 3 Pg. 3

Berkshire Festival Concerts To Open At Lenox, July 6

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this year will consist of twenty-four concerts, commencing Wednesday evening, July 6, with the first of six Wednesday concerst of Beethoven's chamber music by such noted aggregations as the Kroll String Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio, the New Music String Quartet, and recitals by Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin, Rudolf Serkin, and Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz.

The two weeks preceding the appearance of the full orchestra in the Music Shed will be devoted to the "Bach-Mozart" Concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Given Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons in the Theatre-Concert Hall, commencing Friday, July 8, the six concerts will also present the works of Stravinsky, Handel, Hindemith, Vivaldi, Boccherini, Haydn, Ravel, Rameau, Milhaud, Honegger, Faure.

The concert on the afternoon of July 10 will have the assistance of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society and soloists (Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm), in the presentation of Bach's Mass in B Minor.

Bernstein Conducts

July 15 will welcome Leonard Bernstein back to Tanglewood, after a year's sabbatical, in an all-Mozart program: the young conductor will also be soloist in the Concerto in G Major, and Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, will be heard in three arias.

Thor Johnson, Music Director of the Cincinnati Symphony, and a former Tanglewood student, will lead one of these programs on July 9. Three first desk members of the Orchestra will appear as soloists in this series; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute, on July 8, Joseph de Pasquale, viola, on July 9, and Samuel Mayes, 'cello, on July 16. Also on July 16, Hugh Ross, Director of th Berkshire Music Center's choral department, will conduct the Orchestra and chorus in a performance of Vivaldi's "Gloria."

Charles Munch, with the assistance of Pierre Monteux (three concerts), and Leonard Bernstein (one), will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the twelve Music Shed concerts, also on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons, commencing Friday, July 22, and concluding Sunday, August 14. Soloists include Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price, Rudolf Serkin, Gregor Piatigorsky, Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd, Eugene Istomin, Adele Addison, Eunice Alberts, Catherine Akos, Mac Morgan and Donald Gramm.

Premieres

Tanglewood premieres- music given for the first time by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Berkshire hills- will include this summer: Bach, "Sinfonia from the Easter Oratorio"; Stravinsky, "Orpheus", Hindemith,

---

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

JUL 1 1955

Festival Concerts Open Next Week

Symphony, choral and chamber music comes again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening at Tanglewood, Lenox, of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by its music director, Charles Munch. For the 16th summer since the Boston Symphony Orchestra has participated concerts will be given for six weeks, July 6 to August 14, on the estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

The 1955 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts commences on Wednesday evening (July 6) with an all Beethoven program by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening (July 8), Charles Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in a program of Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart, with the orchestra's first flutist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, as soloist. The Saturday evening chamber orchestra concert of Handel, Haydn and Hindemith, with Boston Symphony Orchestra's first violist, Joseph de Pasquale, as soloist, will have at its helm Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, who was a student of conducting in 1940 and 1941 at Tanglewood's Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of Symphony in conjunction with music maintained by the Boston its Berkshire Festival concerts. On Sunday afternoon (July 10), Charles Munch will lead the chamber orchestra in Bach's Mass in B minor, with the Harvard glee club and Radcliffe Choral Society and the following soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

The above concerts and those of the following week, July 13-15-16-17, will all be given in the intimate 1,200 seat theatre concert hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30, Sunday afternoons at 2:30.

As in 1954, an all-time record attendance year at the Berkshire Festival, when it became necessary to accommodate its growing crowds of music lovers with more concerts within the six-week framework of the Festival, the 1955 Berkshire Festival again consists of 24 concerts. Six Wednesday evenings are devoted to the chamber music of Beethoven, with performances by noted ensembles and soloists. Following the first two weekends of chamber orchestra concerts, the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra moves to Tanglewood for the Berkshire Festival's final four weekends, July 22-August 14, when 12 weekend concerts are held in the 6,000 seat Music Shed, erected in 1938, and open on three sides so the thousands extra who attend may hear the orchestra on the spacious lawns of Tanglewood, at night under the stars or in Sunday sunshine.

Elm Court Guests

David H. Wood, resident manager of Elm Court, today announced that the following guests associated with the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be guests this summer: Dr. Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony; Gregor Piatigorsky, on the advisory staff of Music Department 1 and guest cellist with the orchestra this summer; Isaac Stern, a former student at Tanglewood and guest violinist for three concerts; and Pierre Monteux, who will be a guest conductor at Tanglewood.

Other guests include Mrs. Sarah Backer, owner of the Hotel Berkshire in New York City, and her daughter, Mrs. Milton Heller.

Mr. Wood said that Elm Court will open its dining room and cocktail lounge to the public.

B. E. Eagle
June 30, /55

Tourist Booth Opens Tomorrow

LEE—The Lee Chamber of Commerce announced today that its information booth will open tomorrow for the summer season. In charge of the booth for the sixth consecutive year will be Mrs. Kathryn G. Ford of Housatonic Street. The booth will be in operation until Labor Day.

Persons interested in registering rooms for tourists are requested to contact Mrs. Ford as soon as possible so that a complete listing of accommodations will be available. Mrs. Ford urged early registration to derive the full benefit of this service.

The booth has been supplying information to summer tourists here since before World War II. It was originally started by a group of public-minded citizens and later taken over by the Chamber of Commerce. The fee for registering a single room is $1.25 and to register a double room, $2.50 for the season. Fee is to be paid in advance. Hours for the booth will be Monday through Thursday, 12 noon to 7 p.m., Friday and Saturday, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. This schedule will be in force until concerts start in the Shed on Friday, July 22. The hours the booth will be open will be increased at that time.

TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • JULY 6 to AUG. 14

Berkshire Festival

BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

SINGLE TICKETS NOW!

Fri. & Sat. Eves. & Sun. Afts. through 6 weeks

First 2 week-ends (Jul. 8-17)—"Bach-Mozart" concerts—Tickets $4 and [illegible]

Last 4 week-ends (Jul. 22-Aug. 14)—Shed concerts—Tickets $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50 (Box Seats $6.50)

Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

For programs and ticket information apply:

TICKET OFFICE, Tanglewood; Lenox, Mass. • Phone Lenox 600

ART

NY Times June 13

[106]

Berkshire Festival To Have 24 Concerts

Tanglewood Series Will Run July 6 - August 11

The Boston Symphony Orchestra is preparing these days for its huge annual Operation Tanglewood. For the 16th summer in which the Boston Symphony Orchestra has participated, music will be presented in the hills of western Massachusetts. Since 1937, this orchestra has played in Tanglewood, at Lenox, where Nathaniel Hawthorne walked a century ago, on the plateau-like estate, and where he told his "Tanglewood Tales".

Since 1938 when the huge pie-shaped Music Shed, designed by Finnish architect Eliel Saarinen, was erected on the spacious lawns of Tanglewood, open on three sides so the music might spill out to the thousands who listen to it, the Berkshire Festival has attracted crowds from all over the world.

The Berkshire Festival will consist of 24 concerts, commencing Wednesday evening, July 6, with the first of six Wednesday concerts of Beethovens chamber music by noted aggregations and soloists. The two weeks preceding the appearance of the full orchestra in the Music Shed will be devoted to the "Bach-Mozart" Concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons in the Theatre-Concert Hall, commencing Friday, July 8.

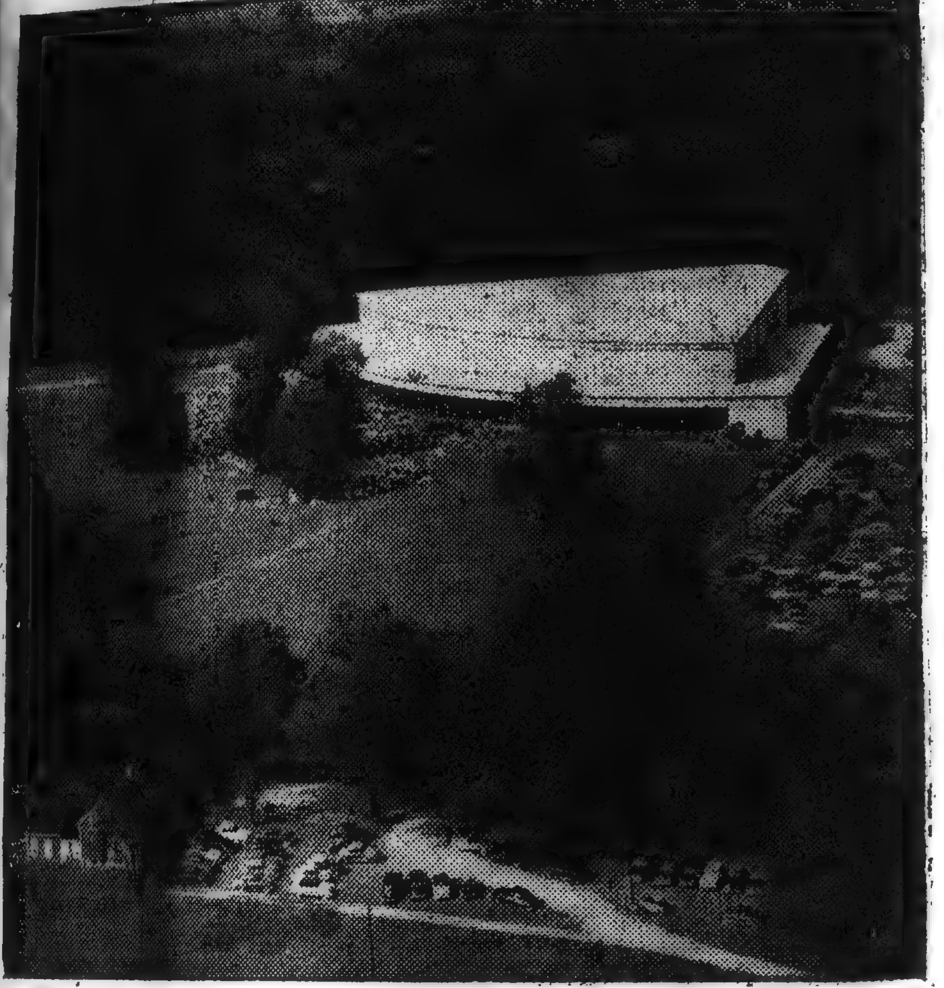
The concert on the afternoon of July 10 will have the assistance of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society and soloists (Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm), in the presentation of Bach's Mass in B Minor. July 15 will welcome Leonard Bernstein back to Tanglewood, after a year's sabbatical, in an all-Mozart program: the young conductor will also be soloist in the Concerto in G Major, and Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, will be heard in three arias.

Charles Munch, with the assistance of Pierre Monteux and Leonard Bernstein, will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 12 Music Shed concerts, on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons, commencing Friday, July 22, and concluding Sunday, August 14. Soloists include Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price, Rudolf Serkin, Gregor Piatigorsky, Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd, Eugene Istomin, Adele Addison, Eunice Alberts, Catherine Akos, Mac Morgan and Donald Gramm.

The Festival concerts for 1955, as planned by Mr Munch, will feature the music of Beethoven, including all nine symphonies, "Fidelio" (Act II) in concert performance, the violin concerto, two piano concertos, three overtures and the "Missa Solemnis", in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

TANGLEWOOD SEASON AT HAND!

6/21



Scene Outside the Shed at a recent Concert

The Boston Symphony Orchestra is preparing these days for its huge annual "Operation Tanglewood". For the sixteenth summer its music will be presented in an idyllic setting near Lenox, Mass. Since 1937, this orchestra has played in Tanglewood, where Nathaniel Hawthorne walked a century ago, on the plateau-like estate where the American author was a guest and where he told his "Tanglewood Tales".

Since 1938 when the huge pie-shaped Music Shed, designed by Finnish architect Eliel Saarinen, was erected on the spacious lawns of Tanglewood, open on three sides so the music might spill out to the thousands who listen to it, at night under the stars or in Sunday sunshine, the Berkshire Festival has attracted crowds from all over the world. Last Summer (Music Director Charles Munch's fourth with the 104-piece Boston Symphony) all attendance records were broken.

Music lovers, indeed, have shown their increasing awareness of the Berkshire Festival's accessibility from the Connecticut, Mohawk and Hudson valleys by expressway, state highway, bus, train, airplane, and shown also a welcome for the plan inaugurated last year to increase the number of concerts within the Festival's six-week scope.

A voluntary contribution to the tax-exempt organization known as the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center admits music-lovers to the student concerts which take place almost every day and are of comparable interest to the professional Festival concerts.

Ticket sale for the Berkshire Festival concerts has been opened. Programs and ticket information may be obtained by writing to the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., or by telephoning Lenox 600.

MISS HIATT BACK AS CHORAL TEACHER

Lenox, June 25 — Miss Iva D. Hiatt, assistant professor of music at Smith College, Northampton, will assist Hugh Ross in the Berkshire Music Center's department of choral music this summer. Miss Hiatt studied choral conducting under Mr. Ross at Tanglewood in 1947, and was the first woman to conduct a work for chorus and orchestra in the Music Shed. Miss Hiatt graduated from the University of California in 1948, receiving both B. A. and M. A. degrees.

She became the first student conductor of the University of California Chorus, and gave West Coast premieres to compositions by Copland, Britten and Stravinsky. At Smith, where she directs choral music, she founded the Smith College Chamber Singers, an ensemble which has made three successful tours of Europe. During 1953-4, she was associate conductor of the Cecilia Society of Boston.

---

mes June 16, rd Times Sect. 3 Pg. 3

Berkshire Festival Concerts To Open At Lenox, July 6

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this year will consist of twenty-four concerts, commencing Wednesday evening, July 6, with the first of six Wednesday concerst of Beethoven's chamber music by such noted aggregations as the Kroll String Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio, the New Music String Quartet, and recitals by Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin, Rudolf Serkin, and Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz.

The two weeks preceding the appearance of the full orchestra in the Music Shed will be devoted to the "Bach-Mozart" Concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Given Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons in the Theatre-Concert Hall, commencing Friday, July 8, the six concerts will also present the works of Stravinsky, Handel, Hindemith, Vivaldi, Boccherini, Haydn, Ravel, Rameau, Milhaud, Honegger, Faure.

The concert on the afternoon of July 10 will have the assistance of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society and soloists (Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm), in the presentation of Bach's Mass in B Minor.

Bernstein Conducts

July 15 will welcome Leonard Bernstein back to Tanglewood, after a year's sabbatical, in an all-Mozart program: the young conductor will also be soloist in the Concerto in G Major, and Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, will be heard in three arias.

Thor Johnson, Music Director of the Cincinnati Symphony, and a former Tanglewood student, will lead one of these programs on July 9. Three first desk members of the Orchestra will appear as soloists in this series; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute, on July 8, Joseph de Pasquale, viola, on July 9, and Samuel Mayes, 'cello, on July 16. Also on July 16, Hugh Ross, Director of th Berkshire Music Center's choral department, will conduct the Orchestra and chorus in a performance of Vivaldi's "Gloria."

Charles Munch, with the assistance of Pierre Monteux (three concerts), and Leonard Bernstein (one), will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the twelve Music Shed concerts, also on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons, commencing Friday, July 22, and concluding Sunday, August 14. Soloists include Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price, Rudolf Serkin, Gregor Piatigorsky, Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd, Eugene I stomin, Adele Addison, Eunice Alberts, Catherine Akos, Mac Morgan and Donald Gramm.

Premieres

Tanglewood premieres- music given for the first time by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Berkshire hills- will include this summer: Bach, "Sinfonia from the Easter Oratorio"; Stravinsky, "Orpheus", Hindemith, "Der Schwanendreher"; Haydn, Symphony in B flat, No. 98; Mozart, Overture to "Don Giovanni"; Boccherini, Concerto for Cello; Vivaldi, Concerto Grosso in B minor, Op. 3, No. 10 and "Gloria" (with chorus); Faure, "Pavane"; Milhaud, "Serenade"; Honegger, Symphony No. 4; Sessions, Suite from "The Black Maskers"; Barber, "Prayers of Kierkegaard"; Beethoven, "Fidelio" Act II; Bloch, "Schelomo"; Strauss, Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier."

Elm Court Guests

David H. Wood, resident manager of Elm Court, today announced that the following guests associated with the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be guests this summer: Dr. Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony; Gregor Piatigorsky, on the advisory staff of Music Department 1 and guest cellist with the orchestra this summer; Isaac Stern, a former student at Tanglewood and guest violinist for three concerts; and Pierre Monteux, who will be a guest conductor at Tanglewood.

Other guests include Mrs. Sarah Backer, owner of the Hotel Berkshire in New York City, and her daughter, Mrs. Milton Heller.

Mr. Wood said that Elm Court will open its dining room and cocktail lounge to the public.

B.E. Eagle
June 30/55

Tourist Booth Opens Tomorrow

LEE—The Lee Chamber of Commerce announced today that its information booth will open tomorrow for the summer season. In charge of the booth for the sixth consecutive year will be Mrs. Kathryn G. Ford of Housatonic Street. The booth will be in operation until Labor Day.

Persons interested in registering rooms for tourists are requested to contact Mrs. Ford as soon as possible so that a complete listing of accommodations will be available. Mrs. Ford urged early registration to derive the full benefit of this service.

The booth has been supplying information to summer tourists here since before World War II. It was originally started by a group of public-minded citizens and later taken over by the Chamber of Commerce. The fee for registering a single room is $1.25 and to register a double room, $2.50 for the season. Fee is to be paid in advance. Hours for the booth will be Monday through Thursday, 12 noon to 7 p.m., Friday and Saturday, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. This schedule will be in force until concerts start in the Shed on Friday, July 22. The hours the booth will be open will be increased at that time.

TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • JULY 6 to AUG. 14

Berkshire Festival

BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

SINGLE TICKETS NOW!

Fri. & Sat. Eves. & Sun. Afts. through 6 weeks

First 2 week-ends (Jul. 8-17)—"Bach-Mozart" concerts—Tickets $4 and $[illegible]

Last 4 week-ends (Jul. 22-Aug. 14)—Shed concerts—Tickets $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50 (Box Seats $6.50)

Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

For programs and ticket information apply:

TICKET OFFICE, Tanglewood; Lenox, Mass. • Phone Lenox 600

NY Times June 13

ART

[106]

1955 THE TANGLEWOOD TIMES

Rudolph Serkin, Greatest Living Pianist

Pittsfield Lady Made U. S. Debut Possible

SERKIN

"He is the greatest living pianist, equalled by no other pianist and by no interpretive musician except Arturo Toscanini," Jerome D. Bohm of the New York Herald Tribune has written.

During the 1950 summer Bach Festival at Prades under the direction of the great Pablo Casals, Time Magazine reported: "With perfectionist Casals sitting before him in the audience Rudolph Serkin played thru Bach's Golden Variations with a power and a precision that transfigured Casals' face."

The NY Times commented: "Starting with Bach's Chromatic Fantasy and Fugue and proceeding to the Italian Concerto, he brought the audience to one of the peaks of the Festival in which the altitude has been consistently near the stratosphere."

— 8 IN A ROOM —

The object of this lavish praise was born of Russian parents 52 years ago in Eger, Bohemia. His musically wise father coached him and when only 4 was playing and reading music at sight. Following his debut at 12 with the Vienna Symphony he became something of a celebrity and was besieged with offers, but his father said "no," feeling the lad needed more preparation. Besides, he didn't want a wonderkind in the family, even though the family needed money desperately and, in fact, was so poor at one time that it lived 8 in a room. Wisely the father held the son back until his mid-teens when he began his concert career in earnest, meanwhile studying piano with Richard Robert and composition with Arnold Schoenberg.

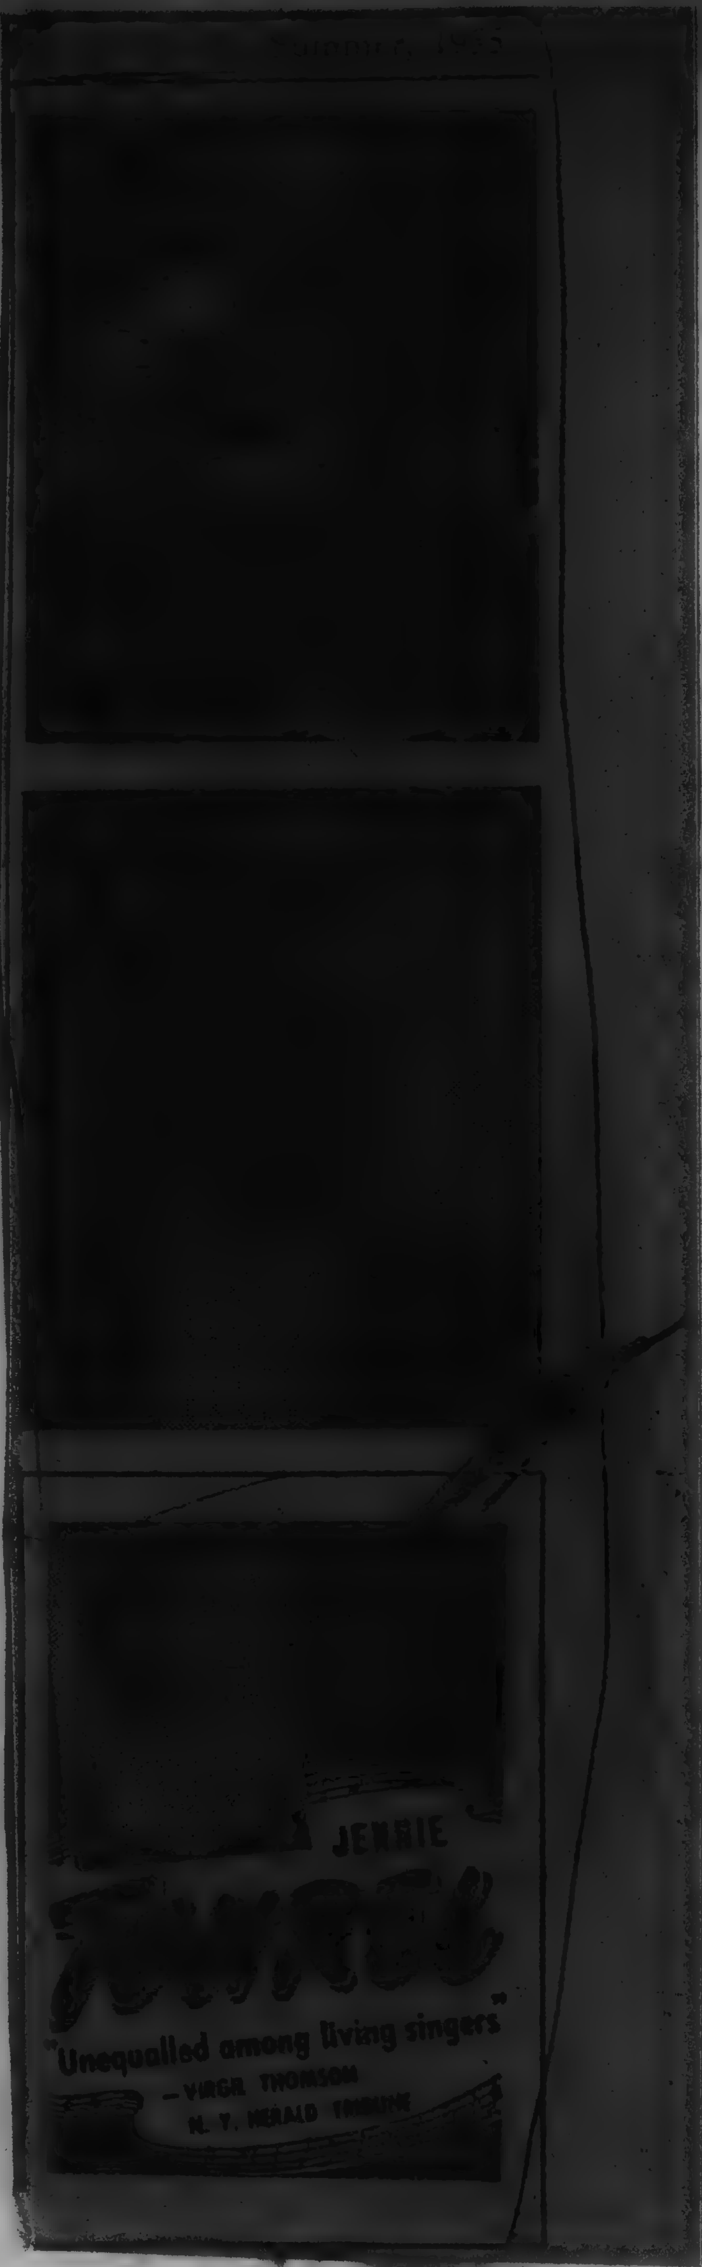
After the advent of mad Hitler, Serkin and the Adolf Busch family, with whom he had been living, went to Switzerland. Incidentally, Irene, the oldest daughter of violinist Busch, when she was 4 and Serkin, 15, announced she was going to marry him. "I told her I would wait and I did," Serkin says.

In 1939 the Serkins made their home on a 125 acre farm in Marlboro, Vt., and became U.S. Citizens. It is of interest to note that Pittsfield Eagle music critic Jay Rosenfeld's commentary has been incorporated in the notes of one of Serkin's albums.

Serkin first played in this country thru the invitation of Pittsfield's "mother of music", Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, at a private Coolidge Festival in the nation's capital; and he made his first public U.S. debut in 1936 when Toscanini invited him to be soloist with the N.Y. Philharmonic.

"A busy life makes for a full man," says Serkin. What with his concerts, his wife and five children, his farm (and he does farm), and his summer music school at Marlboro College, he is leading a life that proves this maxim to be true.

We highly recommend Serkin's Columbia Masterworks Records of the CASALS FESTIVAL with Pablo Casals, cellist . . . Beethoven's Sonatas 1 thru 5. Ditto, Serkin's Columbia Master Records of Brahms Concerto No. 2 with Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra, and Brahms Quartet No. 1 with members of the Busch Quartet.



Hi-Fi July '55

NOTED WI

Contin

tip connecto [illegible] just what we [illegible] know if any [illegible] interested in [illegible] needed item. [illegible] connection can be made [illegible] half-second without any solderi[illegible]ssary.

There you are [illegible]facturers. Now you have no excuse not to make life a little easier for us.

Michael Byrd of Inglewood, Cal., writes that he has a temporary solution to the problem of no handles on the pin plugs: "There may be obtained from many hardware stores and occasionally in some radio parts stores a little 'washer,' 'gromet,' 'eyelet'—call it what you may—which is ordinarily used behind the screws on many panel mountings, behind knobs, etc., in furniture. Just drop this over the back end of the plug and apply a drop of solder, and there, presto! you have a handle. It's best to do this before hooking it up."

Erratum

In our May "Noted With Interest," we took great pleasure in announcing Collins Audio's brand new tuner kit, the "Custom Special." Now, with pleasure (at the thought of saving you some soldering work) and no small amount of chagrin, we must tell you that it is not a kit, but a completely assembled and wired affair ready to be plugged in. It is pictured in Collins' ad in the June issue.

Tanglewood

It's that time again in the Berkshires when the residents of the communities and towns surrounding the Berkshire Festival have to park four-deep in front of the post office, try to avoid Saturday shopping, and try not to have to cross the main thoroughfare on foot or make a U-turn in their car. We growl and grumble about the traffic, the crowded dining places, the practically impossible task of finding lodging for a visiting fireman or friend of a friend. But if you hear our grumbles, don't believe them. We're actually happy as a [illegible] see the town wake up after its [illegible] cold winter, and being in th[illegible] [illegible] business, sort of, we're nat[illegible] thrilled to death to Co[illegible] on next page

OVER

Tanglewoodite

He gulped his lunch
To hear Monsieur Munch,
Late meal for Bernstein,
At "half" ate sardine,
Time for Pete Monteux,
Drank qt. of vin bleu,
And what about Thor?
Had he[illegible]

SOLOISTS FOR AUG. 5 AND 14

Tanglewood soloists for Aug. 5, the Koussevitzky Memorial, are: Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor, and Mac Morgan, bass. For the last concert, Aug. 14: Besides Miss Addison and Mr. Lloyd, Catherine Akos, contralto, and Donald Gramm, bass.

TANGLEWOOD FEVER

I must down to Tanglewood again, to the rolling hills and the sky,
And all I ask is immortal music and one to lead it by,
And the baton's whirl and the muses' play and the great shed's shaking,
And the white clouds in the blue sky and a gay day making.

I must down to Tanglewood again, for the call of the festival
Is a strong call and a strange call that may not be denied,
And all I ask is a sunny day with a light breeze blowing,
And the flung throng and the grass green, and the music flowing.

I must down to Tanglewood again to a gay festive sight,
To the horn's way and the strings' way where the song's like a fragrant night;
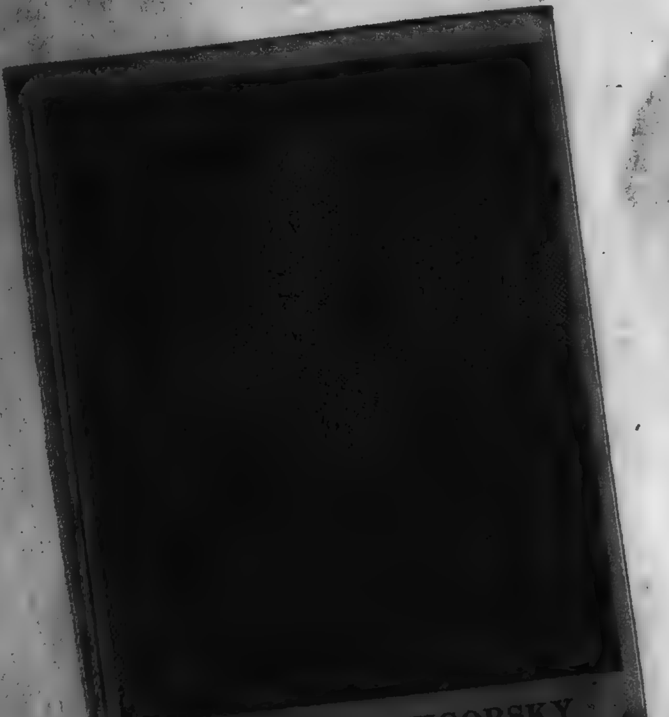
And all I ask is a merry time and the famed orchestra playing,
And a calm sleep and a fair dream when the last concert's over.

(MARCUS LIRA With Thanks To JOHN MASEFIELD)

IN THE COUNTRY

Berkshire Festival—Opening performance of the season, which will run through Sunday, Aug. 14—Wednesday, July 6, at 8:30: The first in a series of six programs of Beethoven's chamber music, this one played by the Kroll String Quartet. . . . ¶ Friday, July 8, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting a chamber orchestra, made up of members of the Boston Symphony. . . . ¶ Saturday, July 9, at 8:30: Thor Johnson conducting the chamber orchestra. . . . ¶ Sunday, July 10, at 2:30: Charles Munch directing Bach's Mass in B Minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society. (Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.)



GREGOR PIATIGORSKY

Cellist Gregor Piatigorsky, perennial favorite at Tanglewood, recently was awarded an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters by Temple University.

New Yorker July 2

Herald News
FALL RIVER, MASS.
Independent
Circ. [illegible]
JUL 1 1955

Munch Returns From Vacation In Europe

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, arrives in New York today by plane from his home in Paris.

He will drive to his Summer residence at Lenox to prepare for his Summer duties as conductor of the Berkshire Festival.

Munch will give his first concert July 8 with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the Theatre-Concert Hal at Tanglewood.

The program will be music by Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart, with Doriot A. Dwyer, the Boston Symphony's first flutist, as soloist.

Munch has a heavy schedule in this country during the coming season, which marks the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony. During his past two months abroad, Munch accepted no engagements.

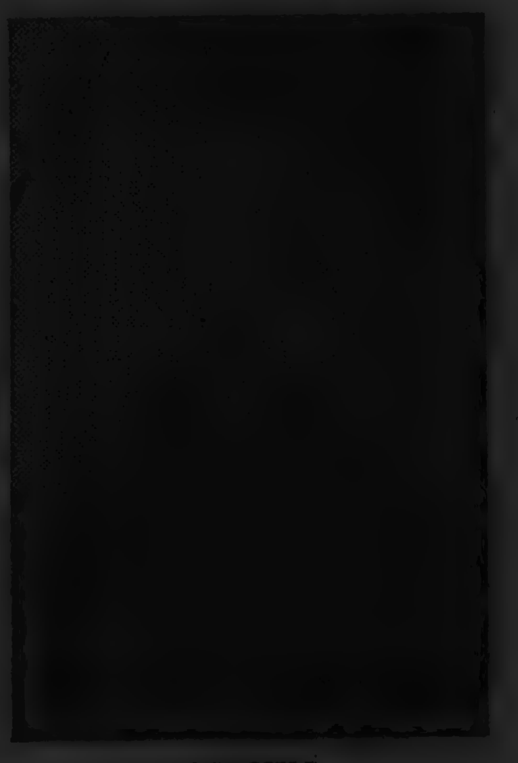
In France, he visited his family in Strasbourg and spent some time at his own home in Paris, but for the most part he vacationed on the Riviera.

He interrupted this vacation at the beginning of June to make a flying visit to Boston and receive an honorary degree of Doctor of Music from Boston University.

1956 THE TANGLEWOOD TIMES

Rudolph Serkin, Greatest Living Pianist

Pittsfield Lady Made U. S. Debut Possible



SERKIN

"He is the greatest living pianist, equalled by no other pianist and by no interpretive musician except Arturo Toscanini," Jerome D. Bohm of the New York Herald Tribune has written.

During the 1950 summer Bach Festival at Prades under the direction of the great Pablo Casals, Time Magazine reported: "With perfectionist Casals sitting before him in the audience Rudolph Serkin played thru Bach's Golden Variations with a power and a precision that transfigured Casals' face."

The NY Times commented: "Starting with Bach's Chromatic Fantasy and Fugue and proceeding to the Italian Concerto, he brought the audience to one of the peaks of the Festival in which the altitude has been consistently near the stratosphere."

— 8 IN A ROOM —

The object of this lavish praise was born of Russian parents 52 years ago in Eger, Bohemia. His musically wise father coached him and when only 4 was playing and reading music at sight. Following his debut at 12 with the Vienna Symphony he became something of a celebrity and was besieged with offers, but his father said "no," feeling the lad needed more preparation. Besides, he didn't want a wonderkind in the family, even though the family needed money desperately and, in fact, was so poor at one time that it lived 8 in a room. Wisely the father held the son back until his mid-teens when he began his concert career in earnest, meanwhile studying piano with Richard Robert and composition with Arnold Schoenberg.

After the advent of mad Hitler, Serkin and the Adolf Busch family, with whom he had been living, went to Switzerland. Incidentally, Irene, the oldest daughter of violinist Busch, when she was 4 and Serkin 18, announced she was going to marry him. "I told her I would wait and I did," Serkin says.

In 1939 the Serkins made their home on a 125 acre farm in Marlboro, Vt., and became U.S. Citizens. It is of interest to note that Pittsfield Eagle music critic Jay Rosenfeld's commentary has been incorporated in the notes of one of Serkin's albums.

Serkin first played in this country thru the invitation of Pittsfield's "mother of music", Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, at a private Coolidge Festival in the nation's capital; and he made his first public U.S. debut in 1936 when Toscanini invited him to be soloist with the N.Y. Philharmonic.

"A busy life makes for a full man," says Serkin. What with his concerts, his wife and five children, his farm (and he does farm), and his summer music school at Marlboro College, he is leading a life that proves this maxim to be true.

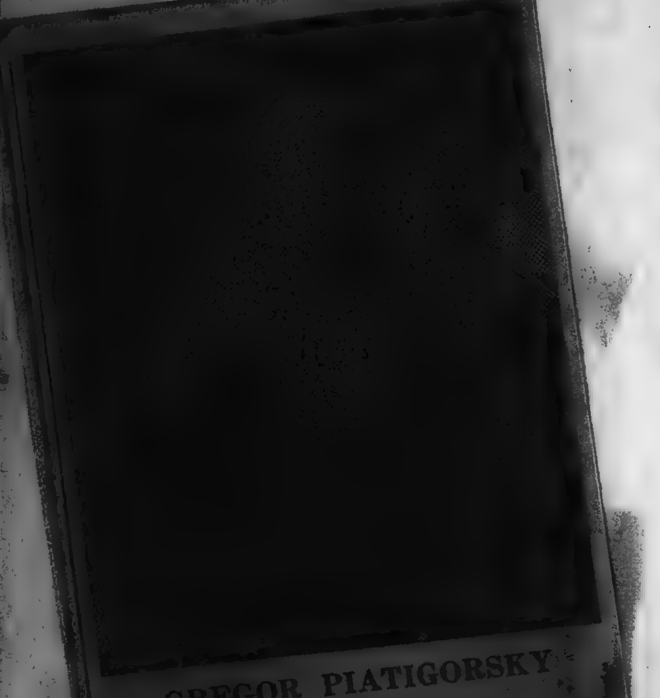
We highly recommend Serkin's Columbia Masterworks Records of the CASALS FESTIVAL with Pablo Casals, cellist . . . Beethoven's Sonatas 1 thru 5. Ditto, Serkin's Columbia Master Records of Brahms Concerto No. 2 with Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra, and Brahms Quartet No. 1 with members of the Busch Quartet.

Tanglewoodite

He gulped his lunch
To hear Monsieur Munch;
Late meal for Bernstein
At "half" ate sardine;
Time for Pete Monteux,
Drank qt. of vin bleu;
And what about Thor [illegible]
Had hour, sipped [illegible]

SOLOISTS FOR AUG. 5 AND 14

Tanglewood soloists for Aug. 5, the Koussevitzky Memorial, are: Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor, and Mac Morgan, bass. For the last concert, Aug. 14: Besides Miss Addison and Mr. Lloyd, Catherine Akos, contralto, and Donald Gramm, bass.



GREGOR PIATIGORSKY

Cellist Gregor Piatigorsky, perennial favorite at Tanglewood, recently was awarded an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters by Temple University.

JENNIE
TOUREL
"Unequalled among living singers"
—VIRGIL THOMSON
N. Y. HERALD TRIBUNE

TANGLEWOOD FEVER

I must down to Tanglewood again, to the rolling hills and the sky,
And all I ask is immortal music and one to lead it by,
And the baton's whirl and the muses' play and the great shed's shaking,
And the white clouds in the blue sky and a gay day making.

I must down to Tanglewood again, for the call of the festival
Is a strong call and a strange call that may not be denied,
And all I ask is a sunny day with a light breeze blowing,
And the flung throng and the grass green, and the music flowing.

I must down to Tanglewood again to a gay festive sight,
To the horn's way and the strings' way where the song's like a fragrant night;
And all I ask is a merry time and the famed orchestra playing,
And a calm sleep and a fair dream when the last concert's over.

(MARCUS LIRA With Thanks To JOHN MASEFIELD)

IN THE COUNTRY

Berkshire Festival—Opening performances of the season, which will run through Sunday, Aug. 14: Wednesday, July 6, at 8:30: The first in a series of six programs of Beethoven's chamber music, this one played by the Kroll String Quartet. . . . ¶ Friday, July 8, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting a chamber orchestra, made up of members of the Boston Symphony. . . . ¶ Saturday, July 9, at 8:30: Thor Johnson conducting the chamber orchestra. . . . ¶ Sunday, July 10, at 2:30: Charles Munch directing Bach's Mass in B Minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society. (Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.)

New Yorker July 2

[illegible]
FALL RIVER, [illegible]
Independent
Circ. [illegible]

JUL 1 1955

Munch Returns From Vacation In Europe

Charles Munch, music director of the ~~Boston Symphony Orches-~~tra, arrives in New York today by plane from his home in Paris.

He will drive to his Summer residence at Lenox to prepare for his Summer duties as conductor of the Berkshire Festival.

Munch will give his first concert July 8 with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the Theatre-Concert Hal at Tanglewood.

The program will be music by Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart, with Doriot A. Dwyer, the Boston Symphony's first flutist, as soloist.

Munch has a heavy schedule in this country during the coming season, which marks the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony. During his past two months abroad, Munch accepted no engagements.

In France, he visited his family in Strasbourg and spent some time at his own home in Paris, but for the most part he vacationed on the Riviera.

He interrupted this vacation at the beginning of June to make a flying visit to Boston and receive an honorary degree of Doctor of Music from Boston University.

Hi-Fi July '55

NOTED WITH INTEREST

Continued from preceding page

know that these cars crammed with visitors are heading, for the most part, to hear real, live, excellent music and, in turn, support the Festival and assure its continuance.

And don't think it doesn't need your support! The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music which is operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and directed by its conductor, Charles Munch, at Tanglewood, is dependent to a large extent on scholarship donations. About fifty percent of its students each year are able to study under the guidance of our leading composers, conductors, and musicians due to the generosity of persons and groups who give annually to the scholarship fund. A season's tuition—six weeks—is $150, plus living expenses. (An interesting feature of the scholarship system is that a student who attends the Berkshire music school on scholarship must promise that, when and if he is financially able, he will repay the scholarship loan so that another, later, will be able to take advantage of it. This revolving plan works, too!)

This year the big news from the music school is that the Rockefeller Foundation will donate, over a period of five years, up to $125,000. But the Music Center's got to work for it. The terms of the grant are such that scholarship donations normally received will be equaled with a Rockefeller grant. Thus, in order to be able to take advantage of the Rockefeller Foundation's entire generous grant, the school must find donations to equal an average of $25,000 a year for five years.

How can you help? Make a donation to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, at, simply, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., whether you plan to visit Tanglewood this year or not. If you do plan to attend some of the concerts, a donation to the Friends entitles you to attend any of the forty or so student concerts, operas, etc., which are given during the July 3 through August 14 season this year. Send $5 or $5,000, or 50 cents, and you'll know that it's being equaled by the Rockefeller Foundation.

Binaural Broadcasts

Stereophonic broadcasting has hit the big times with the inauguration of regular AM-FM binaural broadcasts

HIGH FIDELITY MAGAZINE

Hi-F

1955 THE TANGLEWOOD TIMES

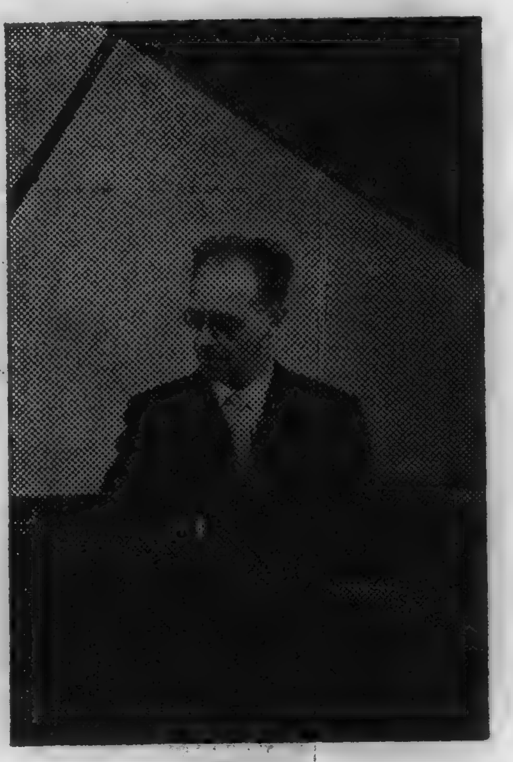
Rudolph Serkin, Greatest Living Pianist

Pittsfield Lady Made U. S. Debut Possible

"He is the greatest living pianist, equalled by no other pianist and by no interpretive musician except Arturo Toscanini," Jerome D. Bohm of the New York Herald Tribune has written.

During the 1950 summer Bach Festival at Prades under the direction of the great Pablo Casals, Time Magazine reported: "With perfectionist Casals sitting before him in the audience Rudolph Serkin played thru Bach's Golden Variations with a power and a precision that transfigured Casals' face."

The NY Times commented: "Starting with Bach's Chromatic Fantasy and Fugue and proceeding to the Italian Concerto, he brought the audience to one of the peaks of the Festival in which the altitude has been consistently near the stratosphere."



SERKIN

— 8 IN A ROOM —

The object of this lavish praise was born of Russian parents 52 years ago in Eger, Bohemia. His musically wise father coached him and when only 4 was playing and reading music at sight. Following his debut at 12 with the Vienna Symphony he became something of a celebrity and was besieged with offers, but his father said "no," feeling the lad needed more preparation. Besides, he didn't want a wunderkind in the family, even though the family needed money desperately and, in fact, was so poor at one time that it lived 8 in a room. Wisely the father held the son back until his mid-teens when he began his concert career in earnest, meanwhile studying piano with Richard Robert and composition with Arnold Schoenberg.

After the advent of mad Hitler, Serkin and the Adolf Busch family, with whom he had been living, went to Switzerland. Incidentally, Irene, the oldest daughter of violinist Busch, when she was 4 and Serkin, 18, announced she was going to marry him. "I told her I would wait and I did," Serkin says.

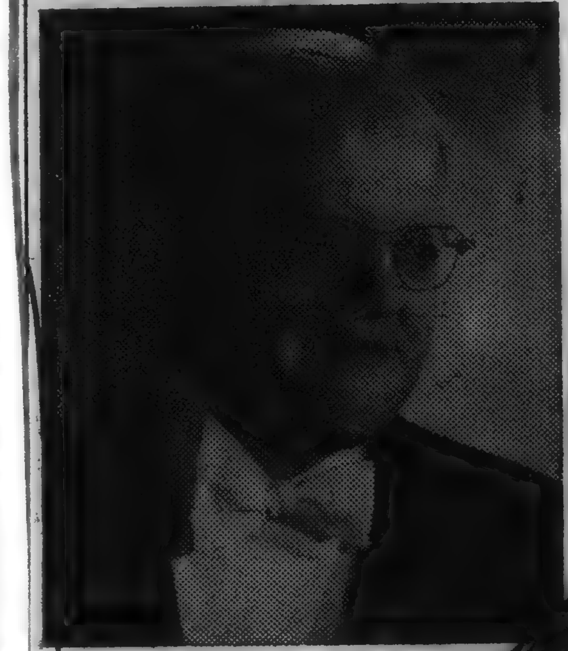
In 1939 the Serkins made their home on a 125 acre farm in Marlboro, Vt., and became U.S. Citizens. It is of interest to note that Pittsfield Eagle music critic Jay Rosenfeld's commentary has been incorporated in the notes of one of Serkin's albums.

Serkin first played in this country thru the invitation of Pittsfield's "mother of music", Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, at a private Coolidge Festival in the nation's capital; and he made his first public U.S. debut in 1936 when Toscanini invited him to be soloist with the N.Y. Philharmonic.

"A busy life makes for a full man," says Serkin. What with his concerts, his wife and five children, his farm (and he does farm), and his summer music school at Marlboro College, he is leading a life that proves this maxim to be true.

We highly recommend Serkin's Columbia Masterworks Records of the CASALS FESTIVAL with Pablo Casals, cellist . . . Beethoven's Sonatas 1 thru 5. Ditto, Serkin's Columbia Master Records of Brahms Concerto No. 2 with Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra, and Brahms Quartet No. 1 with members of the Busch Quartet.

Summer, 1955



JENNIE
TOUREL
"Unequalled among living singers"
—VIRGIL THOMSON
N. Y. HERALD TRIBUNE

NOTED WITH INTEREST

Continued from preceding page

know that these cars crammed with visitors are heading, for the most part, to hear real, live, excellent music and, in turn, support the Festival and assure its continuance.

And don't think it doesn't need your support! The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music which is operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and directed by its conductor, Charles Munch, at Tanglewood, is dependent to a large extent on scholarship donations. About fifty percent of its students each year are able to study under the guidance of our leading composers, conductors, and musicians due to the generosity of persons and groups who give annually to the scholarship fund. A season's tuition — six weeks — is $150, plus living expenses. (An interesting feature of the scholarship system is that a student who attends the Berkshire music school on scholarship must promise that, when and if he is financially able, he will repay the scholarship loan so that another, later, will be able to take advantage of it. This revolving plan works, too!)

This year the big news from the music school is that the Rockefeller Foundation will donate, over a period of five years, up to $125,000. But the Music Center's got to work for it. The terms of the grant are such that scholarship donations normally received will be equaled with a Rockefeller grant. Thus, in order to be able to take advantage of the Rockefeller Foundation's entire generous grant, the school must find donations to equal an average of $25,000 a year for five years.

How can you help? Make a donation to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, at, simply, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., whether you plan to visit Tanglewood this year or not. If you do plan to attend some of the concerts, a donation to the Friends entitles you to attend any of the forty or so student concerts, operas, etc., which are given during the July 3 through August 14 season this year. Send $5 or $5,000, or 50 cents, and you'll know that it's being equaled by the Rockefeller Foundation.

Binaural Broadcasts

Stereophonic broadcasting has hit the big times with the inauguration of regular AM-FM binaural broadcasts

HIGH FIDELITY MAGAZINE

Tanglewoodite

He gulped his lunch
To hear Monsieur Munch;
Lost meal for Bernstein,
At "half" ate sardine;
Time for Pete Monteux,
Drank qt. of vin bleu;
And what about Thor?
Had hour, sipped more.

SOLOISTS FOR AUG. 5 AND 14

Tanglewood soloists for Aug. 5, the Koussevitzky Memorial, are: Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor, and Mac Morgan, bass. For the last concert, Aug. 14: Besides Miss Addison and Mr. Lloyd, Catherine Akos, contralto, and Donald Gramm, bass.

TANGLEWOOD FEVER

I must down to Tanglewood again, to the rolling hills and the sky,
And all I ask is immortal music and one to lead it by,
And the baton's whirl and the muses' play and the great shed's shaking,
And the white clouds in the blue sky and a gay day making.

I must down to Tanglewood again, for the call of the festival
Is a strong call and a strange call that may not be denied,
And all I ask is a sunny day with a light breeze blowing,
And the flung throng and the grass green, and the music flowing.

I must down to Tanglewood again to a gay festive sight,
To the horn's way and the strings' way where the song's like a fragrant night;
And all I ask is a merry time and the famed orchestra playing,
And a calm sleep and a fair dream when the last concert's over.

(MARCUS LIRA With Thanks To JOHN MASEFIELD)

IN THE COUNTRY

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Opening performance of the season, which will run through Sunday, Aug. 14—Wednesday, July 6, at 8:30: The first in a series of six programs of Beethoven's chamber music, this one played by the Kroll String Quartet. . . . ¶ Friday, July 8, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting a chamber orchestra, made up of members of the Boston Symphony. . . . ¶ Saturday, July 9, at 8:30: Thor Johnson conducting the chamber orchestra. . . . ¶ Sunday, July 10, at 2:30: Charles Munch directing Bach's Mass in B Minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society. (Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.)

New Yorker July 2

Herald News (e)
FALL RIVER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 39,447

JUL 1 1955

Munch Returns From Vacation In Europe

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, arrives in New York today by plane from his home in Paris.

He will drive to his Summer residence at Lenox to prepare for his Summer duties as conductor of the Berkshire Festival.

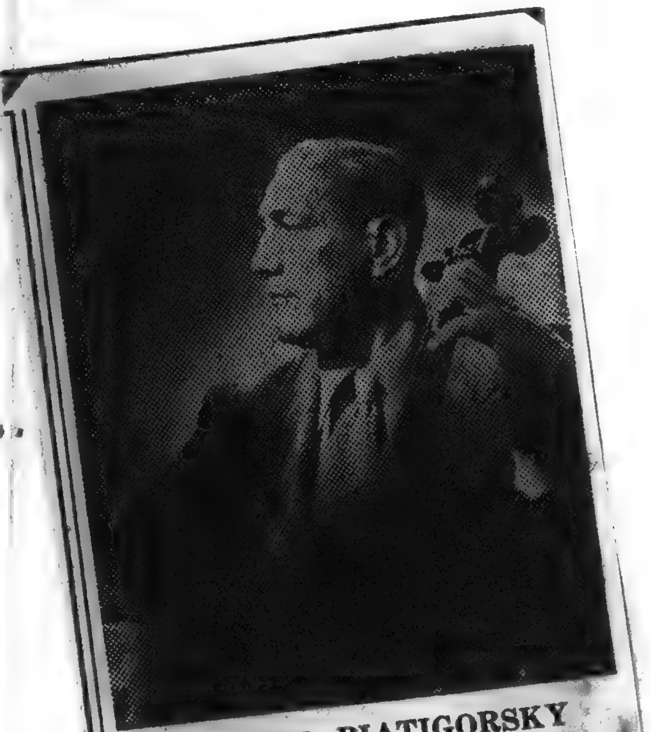
Munch will give his first concert July 8 with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the Theatre-Concert Hal at Tanglewood.

The program will be music by Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart, with Doriot A. Dwyer, the Boston Symphony's first flutist, as soloist.

Munch has a heavy schedule in this country during the coming season, which marks the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony. During his past two months abroad, Munch accepted no engagements.

In France, he visited his family in Strasbourg and spent some time at his own home in Paris, but for the most part he vacationed on the Riviera.

He interrupted this vacation at the beginning of June to make a flying visit to Boston and receive an honorary degree of Doctor of Music from Boston University.



GREGOR PIATIGORSKY

Cellist Gregor Piatigorsky, perennial favorite at Tanglewood, recently was awarded an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters by Temple University.

Rudolph Serkin, Greatest Living Pianist

Pittsfield Lady Made U. S. Debut Possible

SERKIN

"He is the greatest living pianist, equalled by no other pianist and by no interpretive musician except Arturo Toscanini," Jerome D. Bohm of the New York Herald Tribune has written.

During the 1950 summer Bach Festival at Prades under the direction of the great Pablo Casals, Time Magazine reported: "With perfectionist Casals sitting before him in the audience Rudolph Serkin played thru Bach's Golden Variations with a power and a precision that transfigured Casals' face."

The NY Times commented: "Starting with Bach's Chromatic Fantasy and Fugue and proceeding to the Italian Concerto, he brought the audience to one of the peaks of the Festival in which the altitude has been consistently near the stratosphere."

— 8 IN A ROOM —

The object of this lavish praise was born of Russian parents 52 years ago in Eger, Bohemia. His musically wise father coached him and when only 4 was playing and reading music at sight. Following his debut at 12 with the Vienna Symphony he became something of a celebrity and was besieged with offers, but his father said "no," feeling the lad needed more preparation. Besides, he didn't want a wunderkind in the family, even though the family needed money desperately and, in fact, was so poor at one time that it lived 8 in a room. Wisely the father held the son back until his mid-teens when he began his concert career in earnest, meanwhile studying piano with Richard Robert and composition with Arnold Schoenberg.

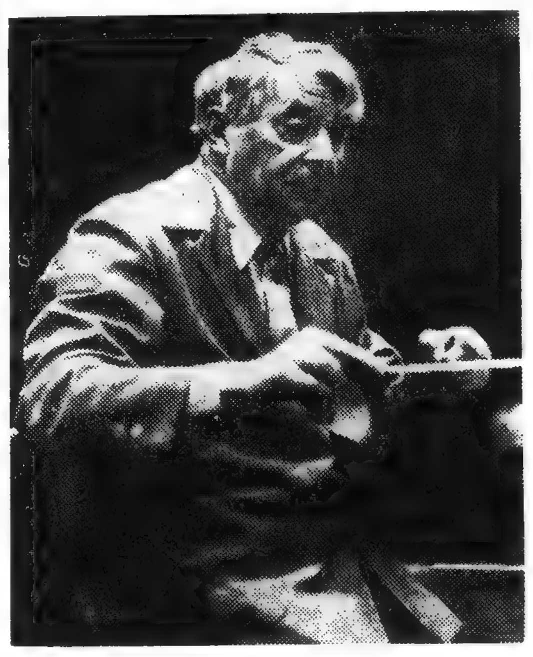
After the advent of mad Hitler, Serkin and the Adolf Busch family, with whom he had been living, went to Switzerland. Incidentally, Irene, the oldest daughter of violinist Busch, when she was 4 and Serkin, 18, announced she was going to marry him. "I told her I would wait and I did," Serkin says.

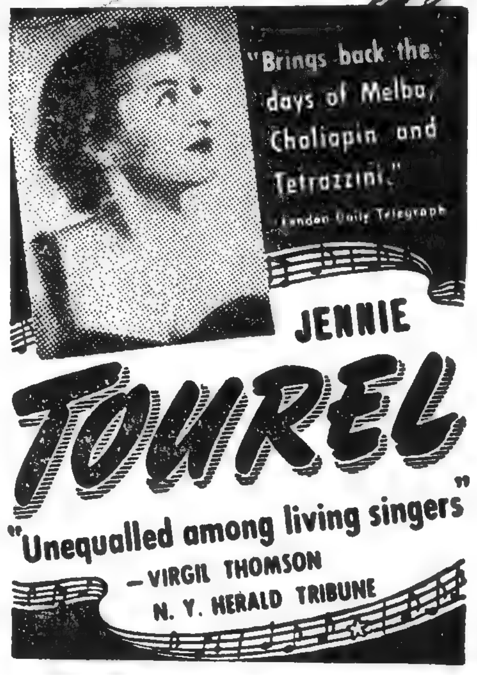
In 1939 the Serkins made their home on a 125 acre farm in Marlboro, Vt., and became U.S. Citizens. It is of interest to note that Pittsfield Eagle music critic Jay Rosenfeld's commentary has been incorporated in the notes of one of Serkin's albums.

Serkin first played in this country thru the invitation of Pittsfield's "mother of music", Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, at a private Coolidge Festival in the nation's capital; and he made his first public U.S. debut in 1936 when Toscanini invited him to be soloist with the N.Y. Philharmonic.

"A busy life makes for a full man," says Serkin. What with his concerts, his wife and five children, his farm (and he does farm), and his summer music school at Marlboro College, he is leading a life that proves this maxim to be true.

We highly recommend Serkin's Columbia Masterworks Records of the CASALS FESTIVAL with Pablo Casals, cellist . . . Beethoven's Sonatas 1 thru 5. Ditto, Serkin's Columbia Master Records of Brahms Concerto No. 2 with Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra, and Brahms Quartet No. 1 with members of the Busch Quartet.





"Brings back the days of Melba, Chaliapin and Tetrazzini."
London Daily Telegraph
JENNIE
TOUREL
"Unequalled among living singers"
—VIRGIL THOMSON
N. Y. HERALD TRIBUNE

NOTED WITH INTEREST

Continued from preceding page

know that these cars crammed with visitors are heading, for the most part, to hear real, live, excellent music and, in turn, support the Festival and assure its continuance.

And don't think it doesn't need your support! The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music which is operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and directed by its conductor, Charles Munch, at Tanglewood, is dependent to a large extent on scholarship donations. About fifty percent of its students each year are able to study under the guidance of our leading composers, conductors, and musicians due to the generosity of persons and groups who give annually to the scholarship fund. A season's tuition — six weeks — is $150, plus living expenses. (An interesting feature of the scholarship system is that a student who attends the Berkshire music school on scholarship must promise that, when and if he is financially able, he will repay the scholarship loan so that another, later, will be able to take advantage of it. This revolving plan works, too!)

This year the big news from the music school is that the Rockefeller Foundation will donate, over a period of five years, up to $125,000. But the Music Center's got to work for it. The terms of the grant are such that scholarship donations normally received will be equaled with a Rockefeller grant. Thus, in order to be able to take advantage of the Rockefeller Foundation's entire generous grant, the school must find donations to equal an average of $25,000 a year for five years.

How can you help? Make a donation to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, at, simply, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., whether you plan to visit Tanglewood this year or not. If you do plan to attend some of the concerts, a donation to the Friends entitles you to attend any of the forty or so student concerts, operas, etc., which are given during the July 3 through August 14 season this year. Send $5 or $5,000, or 50 cents, and you'll know that it's being equaled by the Rockefeller Foundation.

Binaural Broadcasts

Stereophonic broadcasting has hit the big times with the inauguration of regular AM-FM binaural broadcasts

HIGH FIDELITY MAGAZINE

Tanglewoodite

He gulped his lunch
To hear Monsieur Munch;
Lost meal for Bernstein,
At "half" ate sardine;
Time for Pete Monteux,
Drank qt. of vin bleu;
And what about Thor?
Had hour, sipped more.

TANGLEWOOD FEVER

I must down to Tanglewood again, to the rolling hills and the sky,
And all I ask is immortal music and one to lead it by,
And the baton's whirl and the muses' play and the great shed's shaking,
And the white clouds in the blue sky and a gay day making.

I must down to Tanglewood again, for the call of the festival
Is a strong call and a strange call that may not be denied,
And all I ask is a sunny day with a light breeze blowing,
And the flung throng and the grass green, and the music flowing.

I must down to Tanglewood again to a gay festive sight,
To the horn's way and the strings' way where the song's like a fragrant night;
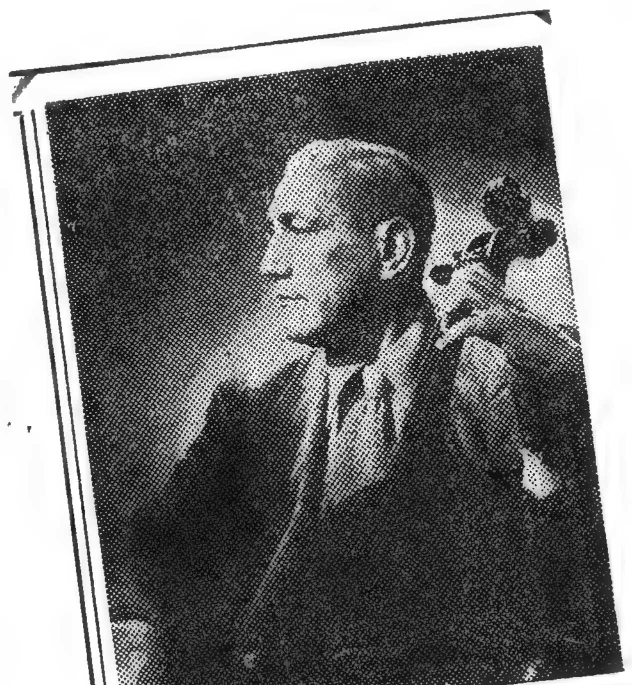
And all I ask is a merry time and the famed orchestra playing,
And a calm sleep and a fair dream when the last concert's over.

(MARCUS LIRA With Thanks To JOHN MASEFIELD)

SOLOISTS FOR AUG. 5 AND 14

Tanglewood soloists for Aug. 5, the Koussevitzky Memorial, are: Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor, and Mac Morgan, bass. For the last concert, Aug. 14: Besides Miss Addison and Mr. Lloyd, Catherine Akos, contralto, and Donald Gramm, bass.



GREGOR PIATIGORSKY

Cellist Gregor Piatigorsky, perennial favorite at Tanglewood, recently was awarded an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters by Temple University.

IN THE COUNTRY

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Opening performances of the season, which will run through Sunday, Aug. 14—Wednesday, July 6, at 8:30: The first in a series of six programs of Beethoven's chamber music, this one played by the Kroll String Quartet. . . . ¶ Friday, July 8, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting a chamber orchestra, made up of members of the Boston Symphony. . . . ¶ Saturday, July 9, at 8:30: Thor Johnson conducting the chamber orchestra. . . . ¶ Sunday, July 10, at 2:30: Charles Munch directing Bach's Mass in B Minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society. (Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.)

New York July 2

Herald News (e)
FALL RIVER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 39,447

JUL 1 1955

Munch Returns From Vacation In Europe

Charles Munch, music director of the ~~Boston Symphony Orches~~tra, arrives in New York today by plane from his home in Paris.

He will drive to his Summer residence at Lenox to prepare for his Summer duties as conductor of the Berkshire Festival.

Munch will give his first concert July 8 with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the Theatre-Concert Hal at Tanglewood.

The program will be music by Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart, with Doriot A. Dwyer, the Boston Symphony's first flutist, as soloist.

Munch has a heavy schedule in this country during the coming season, which marks the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony. During his past two months abroad, Munch accepted no engagements.

In France, he visited his family in Strasbourg and spent some time at his own home in Paris, but for the most part he vacationed on the Riviera.

He interrupted this vacation at the beginning of June to make a flying visit to Boston and receive an honorary degree of Doctor of Music from Boston University.

Herman Melville "Lives" Here

By Robert Newman

The Herman Melville Memorial Room in the Berkshire Athenaeum, Pittsfield's public library, was established in 1953 to provide a convenient center for Melville studies in Pittsfield, thereby perpetuating in a useful manner the memory of a world-famous local author.

Herman Melville's connection with Pittsfield began in the summer of 1833, when he visited his uncle, Thomas Melville, at the farm later known as "Broadhall," now the Country Club of Pittsfield. Two or three years later young Melville spent a season working as a hand on this farm. In the fall of 1837 he taught for a term in the Sikes district school. Following his marriage, Melville moved his household from New York City to Pittsfield in 1850, purchasing the property adjoining the Robert Melville farm-house. The author maintained his residence here at "Arrowhead" until 1863, enjoying the friendship of Nathaniel Hawthorne, Oliver Wendell Holmes and other Berkshire men of letters. The most notable achievement of the Pittsfield years was the writing of his masterwork, "Moby-Dick," published in 1851.

The Herman Melville Memorial Room was planned and donated by Dr. Henry A. Murray of Harvard University. Principal donors of Melville books and memorabilia, besides Dr. Murray, are Mrs. Henry K. Metcalf of Cambridge, the author's granddaughter, and the Misses Agnes Morewood of Pittsfield, Helen Gansevoort Morewood of New York City and Margaret T. Morewood of Santa Barbara, California, Melville's great-nieces. Others who have presented unique material are Mrs. Walter B. Binnian of Cohasset and Mrs. Abeel D. Osborne of Edgartown, granddaughters, and Mrs. Russell A. Hibbs of New York City, a former owner of "Arrowhead." Many individuals have graciously contributed copies of research studies in the field of Melville scholarship. In order that the room may grow in usefulness, gifts of appropriate material will be gratefully accepted.

The collection includes correspondence; first editions; personal items; furniture and framed pictures from Melville's home; family portraits, photographs and documents; books and miscellaneous writings by and about Melville, titles read by him and a group of volumes on whaling; the Willis I. Milham collection of scrimshaw and whaling material. Among special exhibits of special interest are the desk at which Melville wrote "Billy Budd, the author's passport countersigned by Nathaniel Hawthorne, and a portrait engraving of Hawthorne given to Melville by Mrs. Hawthorne.

Burl Ives, Mildred Dunnock, Ben Gazzara and Barbara Bel Geddes, in PLAYWRIGHT COMPANY'S Elia Kazan production of CAT ON A HOT TIN ROOF, instantaneous smash hit.

READ
The New York Herald Tribune
For Latest Developments on All News Fronts
Including Music and Ballet
VIRGIL THOMSON, Music — WALTER TERRY, Dance
WALTER F. KERR, Theatre
Abroad It's the Paris Edition of the Herald Tribune Distributed by Pittsfield News Company

Theatre Piece

Able, busy Louis Calhern, on leave from MGM, to star and direct Edmund Morris' THE WOODEN DISH due in NY in Nov.

In Dublin the past season Sean O'Casey's new play, THE BISHOP'S BONFIRE, received gallery hisses, but the drama apparently went over, according to the critics.

Fun to watch the bright breezy BUS STOP which deals with the loneliness of human beings dying for companionship. A big snow strands a motley crew of characters in a 3rd rate eatery, among them a cowboy (Albert Salmi) and a loose night club canary (Kim Stanley) who are really tremendous.

Good Theatre: BAD SEED; THREE FOR TONIGHT; THE DESPERATE HOURS; TONIGHT IN SAMARKAND; THE SAINT OF BLEECKER STREET; THE PAJAMA GAME; WITNESS FOR THE PROSECUTION; ANASTASIA; CAT ON A HOT TIN ROOF.

Due this fall: Shirley Booth in William Marchant's new comedy, THE DARK SET; Boris Karloff and Julie Harris in THE LARK, Lillian Hellman's adaptation of Jean Anouilh's L'ALOUETTE; G. B. Shaw's political extravaganza, THE APPLECART, with Briane Aherne; Carol Channing in DELILAH; Arthur Miller's A VIEW FROM THE BRIDGE (2 short plays) opens in New Haven Sept. 8, and in Boston Sept. 12.

Wonderful acting: Viveca Lindfors in Anastasia; Paul Muni and Ed Begley in Inherit The Wind; and Nancy Walker in Pheonix 55.

EVENT: On the same bill T. Williams' 27 WAGONS FULL OF COTTON; L. Bernstein's TROUBLE IN TAHITI and the smooth as silk dancing of Paul Draper.

The Passion Play, presented every 10 years at Oberammergau, due in 1960; originated 1634.

Young Wisconsin alumni worth watching: Robert Merriman, Sybil Trubin and Warren Enters who did the off-Broadway production of THIEVES CARNIVAL . . . also good TEACH ME HOW TO CRY by Patricia Goudry.

England with $3 million grant from Parliament launching a national theatre.

GOOD luck to the new Stratford (Conn.) Shakespear Theatre which will feature among others JULIUS CAESAR this season. Raymond Massey and Faye Emerson are among the players.

And Bon Voyage to Rosamond Gilder of Tyringham and New York, formerly editor of Theatre Arts who is now a FULLBRIGHT scholar.

Writers in this Issue

Arthur B. Waters, longtime newspaperman, knows the theatre intimately and what's more knows how to write about it expertly.

Mary Eastland, 18-year old Pittsfield poetess, appears in print for the first time; plays on basketball and softball teams when not involved in verse.

Robert Newman is librarian of Pittsfield's Berkshire Athenaeum, which has a remarkable program. Not only can one satisfy his book needs at this institution but albums from Beethoven to Menotti are available.

Robert A. Fahey is a devotee of the dance and has studied it intensively over a period of years both in New York and the Berkshires.

Marcus Lira is the pseudonym of a young man who prefers to remain annonymous.

Patrick B. McGinnis, president of the New Haven R.R., is the most progressive and dynamic railroad president in the U.S.A.

Busy Artist

Michael Como of Williamstown is a versatile young man. Besides being salesmanager and TV promotion man for DANCE magazine he is the leading male dancer for the Beatrice Stronstorff Modern dance group, has appeared on radio with the WORLD THEATRE and toured with Claire Tree Major's Shakespearean Theatre. He is currently involved with TV dance films. Last winter he appeared with the winter stock company at Dobbs Ferry, N.Y.

THE CRITERION MOTEL
Pittsfield-Lenox Road Telephone 9249
Pittsfield, Massachusetts

C. L. HALVORSON, Tree Service
PRUNING — SPRAYING — FEEDING
LARGE TREE PLANTING
Pittsfield, Massachusetts Telephone 2-6000

New Tanglewood Tales

By Raymond Librizzi

Charles Munch's "I Am A Conductor" (Oxford Univ. Press) is a slim modest book that takes the man in the street behind the scenes and into the "mind" of a conductor. Monsieur Munch says conducting is not a profession but a sacred calling, sometimes a priesthood and often even a disease, a disease from which the only escape is death. Among other things he says there are 2 ways of communicating with the orchestra: By facial expression and gesture; rehearsal means work and more work; one should interpret music as he feels it. In short, conducting is rough, spine-cracking work.

Cellist Gregor Piatigorsky, who has played there before, the past season played 15 times before sell-out houses in Israel.

27-year old Soprano Leontyne Price acclaimed by her hometown, Laurel, Miss. in March with a mammouth parade and jammed auditorium for her concert, which raised more than $2,500 in the little community to help build a Negro Hospital. Last summer she sang Salome at Tanglewood.

Leonard Bernstein wowed audiences at Milan's La Scala the past winter even when Bellini's FELICE ROMANI didn't get rave notices.

Hail to the octogenarians: Pierre Monteux, Fritz Kreisler, Albert Scheitzer, famed humanitarian and organist and friend of Munch, and Arturo Toscanini, who refuses to celebrate a birthday until he's 90. Long may they live. God Bless them.

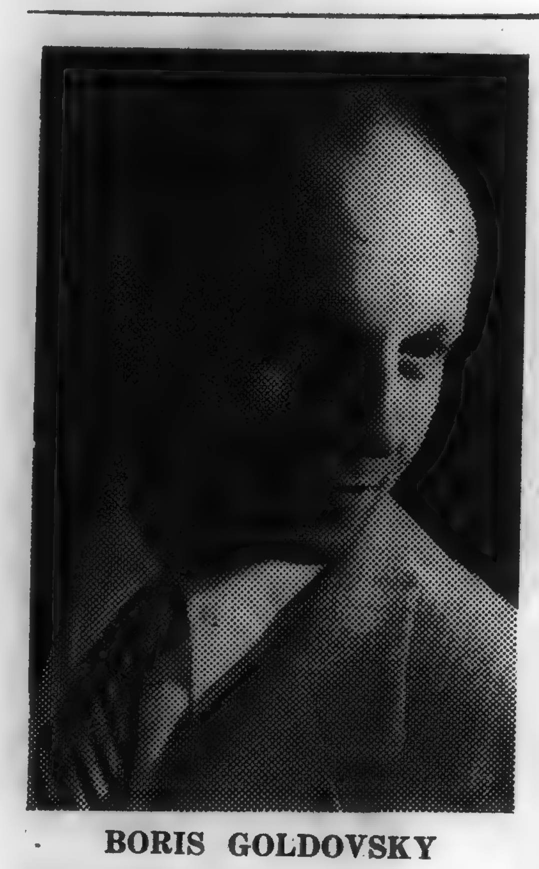
Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops will make their first transcontinental tour Jan.-March, 1956.

Met Opera wound up spring tour in Montreal in June, Verdi leading the pack with his works performed 37 times including the ballet Vittorio. Met opens its 71st season in Nov. with Pierre Monteux, who conducted Orfeo in Brussels in March.

Boris Goldovsky is back, running Tanglewood Opera. Aaron Copland is on leave of absence. A. C.'s Dirge in Woods got U.S. premiere at Carnegie Recital Hall past spring with Soprano Adele Addison singing it and works of Sessions and Ives.

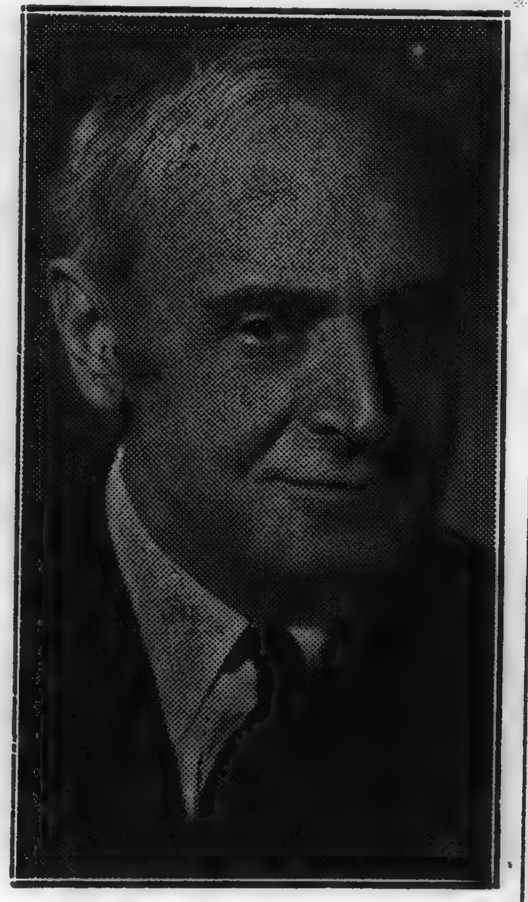
Igor Stravinsky won this year's Sibelius gold medal. Last year he won Britain's highest award, Royal Philharmonic Society's gold prize.

32-year old Thor Martin Johnson was born in Wisconsin; attended Univ. of Michigan; studied abroad; conducted WPA Orchestra; appointed Prof. of Music at Univ. of Mich.; in 1941-42 studied at Tanglewood under Koussevitzky; head of Julliard Orchestra; went to Cincinnati Symphony during 1947-48 season to become its conductor.



BORIS GOLDOVSKY

Boris Goldovsky is back again and will head the Tanglewood Opera Department. (WHITESTONE PHOTO, NEW YORK CITY and LENOX)



Serge Koussevitzky Memorial August 5

HAGYARD'S
In The Heart of Lenox DRUGS
REMO J. ZOLA, Reg. Pharm.
CANDY • SODA FOUNTAIN • TOBACCO
COMPLETE LINE OF COSMETICS

LEONARD BERNSTEIN

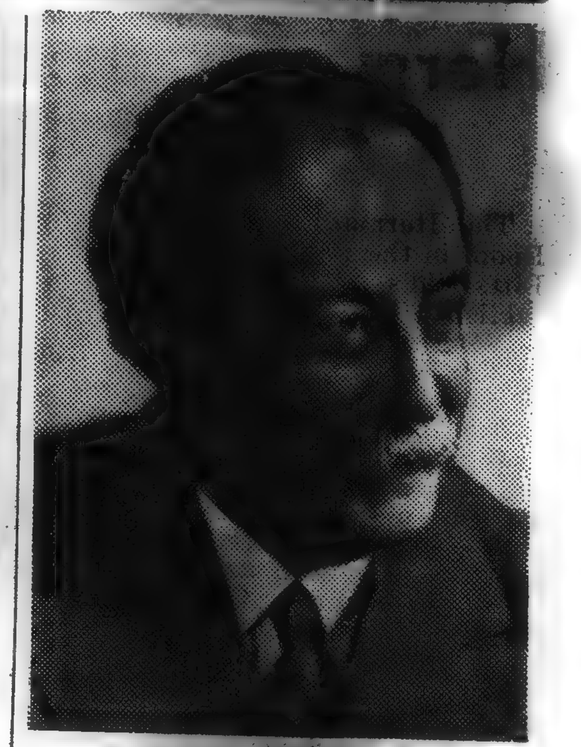
Leonard Bernstein, among other things, will conduct the Koussevitzky Memorial, (see program page). WHITESTONE PHOTO, New York City and Lenox.

MARGARET HARSHAW

Margaret Harshaw, leading soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, appears at Tanglewood this season. Besides her N.Y. operatic triumphs she has been acclaimed in Paris, Mexico, South America and Tanglewood.

ISAAC STERN

Violinist Isaac Stern, appearing at Tanglewood, just back from a concert tour thru France, England, Switzerland and Italy.



PIERRE MONTEUX

Monteux, Tanglewood guest conductor, opens MET in fall.

LEONTYNE PRICE

Famed soprano Leontyne Price appears at Tanglewood and at South Mountain (see programs pages 7 and 11)

Istomin at Keyboard at Casals Festival

PRADES, France — Among the soloists at the Prades Festival under Pablo Casals are the following: Tenor David Lloyd; pianist Eugene Istomin; violinist Yehudi Menuhin and soprano Eleanor Steber. The Festival runs from July 2 to 18 and features Bach, Brahms and Schubert. Istomin at Tanglewood August 7.)

THE TANGLEWOOD

Chamber Music - Theatre Concert Hall

All-Beethoven - Wednesday evenings at 8:30

JULY 6
THE KROLL STRING QUARTET

JULY 13
BEAUX ARTS TRIO

JULY 20
ISAAC STERN and ALEXANDER ZAKIN

JULY
NEW MUSIC STRING QUARTET

AUGUST
RUDOLF SERKIN

AUGUST
GREGOR PIATIGORSKY and RALPH BERKOWITZ

Bach-Mozart Concerts - Theatre Concert Hall

JULY 8

BACH
Sinfonia from "Easter" Cantata (No. 249)
Suite No. 2, for Flute and Strings
Soloist: Doriot Anthony Dwyer
STRAVINSKY
"Orpheus"
MOZART
"Prague" Symphony (K. 504)
(Conductor: MUNCH)

JULY 9

HANDEL
Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12
HAYDN
Symphonie Concertante with Oboe, Bassoon, Violin and Cello
HINDEMITH
"Der Schwanendreher"
Viola Solo: Joseph De Pasquale

HAYDN
Symphony in B flat, No. 98
(Conductor: JOHNSON)

JULY 10

BACH
Mass in B minor with Harvard Glee Club, Radcliffe Choral Society and Soloists
(Conductor: MUNCH)

JULY 15

MOZART
Overture to "Don Giovanni"
Symphony in C major, "Linz", (K. 425)
Arias, "Al Desio" (K.577), "Zeffiretti" ("Idomeneo")
"Non temer" ("Idomeneo")
Piano Concerto in G major (K. 453)
Soloist: Leonard Bernstein
Soloist: Jennie Tourel, Soprano
(Conductor: BERNSTEIN)

JULY 16

Italian Music

CHERUBINI
Overture to "Anacreon"
BOCCHERINI
Concerto for Cello
VIVALDI
Concerto Grosso with Four Violins, Op. 3, No. 10

VIVALDI
Gloria (with Chorus)
(Conducting: Hugh Ross)
Soloist: Samuel Mayes
(Conductor: MUNCH)

JULY 17

French Music

RAMEAU
Suite from "Dardanus"
FAURE'
Suite from "Pelleas et Melisande"
FAURE'
Pavane
MILHAUD
Seranade

HONEGGER
Symphony No. 4
(Conductor: MUNCH)

CRANE MUSEUM
Dalton, Massachusetts
Historical Exhibits of Fine Papermaking
since Revolutionary Times
Open 2 to 5 P. M.
Monday through Friday
No Admission Fee
DALTON, MASSACHU
Five Miles East Pitts

STEIN ong other Kousseprogram)
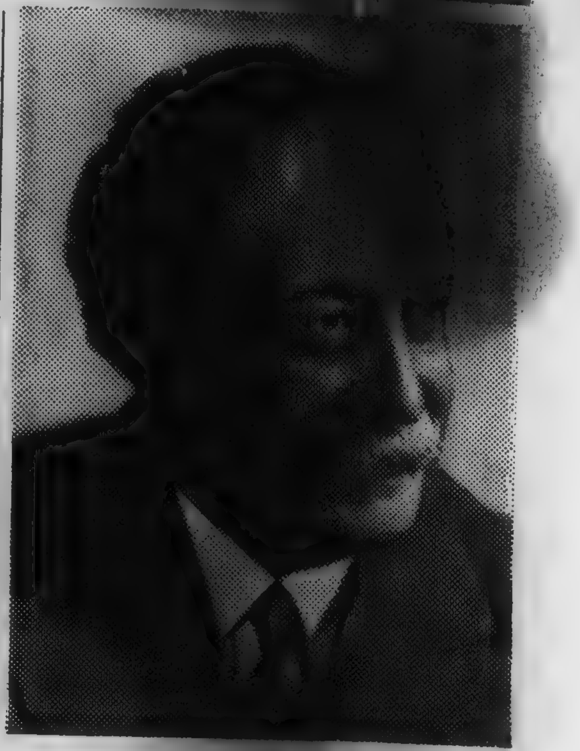
PHOTO,
Lenox.



PIERRE MONTEUX

Monteux, Tanglewood guest conductor, opens MET in fall.

LEONTYNE PRICE

Famed soprano Leontyne Price appears at Tanglewood and at South Mountain (see programs pages 7 and 11)

IAW
ling so Opera, his seaperatic claimed merica

Istomin at Keyboard at Casals Festival

PRADES, France — Among the soloists at the Prades Festival under Pablo Casals are the following: Tenor David Lloyd; pianist Eugene Istomin; violinist Yehudi Menuhin and soprano Eleanor Steber. The Festival runs from July 2 to 18 and features Bach, Brahms and Schubert. Istomin at Tanglewood August 7.)

aring rom a Eng-aly.

THE TANGLEWOOD PROGRAM - 1955

Chamber Music - Theatre Concert Hall

All-Beethoven - Wednesday evenings at 8:30

JULY 6
THE KROLL STRING QUARTET

JULY 13
BEAUX ARTS TRIO

JULY 20
ISAAC STERN and
ALEXANDER ZAKIN

JULY 27
NEW MUSIC STRING QUARTET

AUGUST 3
RUDOLF SERKIN

AUGUST 10
GREGOR PIATIGORSKY and
RALPH BERKOWITZ

Bach-Mozart Concerts - Theatre Concert Hall

JULY 8

BACH
Sinfonia from "Easter" Cantata (No. 249)
Suite No. 2, for Flute and Strings
Soloist: Doriot Anthony Dwyer

STRAVINSKY
"Orpheus"

MOZART
"Prague" Symphony (K. 504)
(Conductor: MUNCH)

JULY 9

HANDEL
Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12

HAYDN
Symphonie Concertante with Oboe, Bassoon, Violin and Cello

HINDEMITH
"Der Schwanendreher"
Viola Solo: Joseph De Pasquale

HAYDN
Symphony in B flat, No. 98
(Conductor: JOHNSON)

JULY 10

BACH
Mass in B minor with Harvard Glee Club, Radcliffe Choral Society and Soloists
(Conductor: MUNCH)

JULY 15

MOZART
Overture to "Don Giovanni"
Symphony in C major, "Linz", (K. 425)
Arias, "Al Desio" (K.577), "Zeffiretti" ("Idomeneo")
"Non temer" ("Idomeneo")
Piano Concerto in G major (K. 453)
Soloist: Leonard Bernstein
Soloist: Jennie Tourel, Soprano
(Conductor: BERNSTEIN)

JULY 16

Italian Music

CHERUBINI
Overture to "Anacreon"

BOCCHERINI
Concerto for Cello

VIVALDI
Concerto Grosso with Four Violins, Op. 3, No. 10

VIVALDI
Gloria (with Chorus)
(Conducting: Hugh Ross)
Soloist: Samuel Mayes
(Conductor: MUNCH)

JULY 17

French Music

RAMEAU
Suite from "Dardanus"

FAURE'
Suite from "Pelleas et Melisande"

FAURE'
Pavane

MILHAUD
Seranade

HONEGGER
Symphony No. 4
(Conductor: MUNCH)

CRANE MUSEUM
Dalton, Massachusetts

Historical Exhibits of Fine Papermaking
since Revolutionary Times

Open 2 to 5 P. M.
Monday through Friday

No Admission Fee

DALTON, MASSACHUSETTS

Five Miles East of Pittsfield

Boston Symphony Orchestra Music Shed

Friday and Saturday evenings at 8:30
Sunday afternoons at 2:30

JULY 22

BEETHOVEN
Overture to "Coriolan"
Violin Concerto

Symphony No. 7, in A major
Soloist: Isaac Stern
(Conductor: MUNCH)

JULY 23

BACH-RESPIGHI
Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor

BEETHOVEN
Symphony No. 2, in D major

SESSIONS
Suite from "The Black Maskers"

STRAUSS
"Death and Transfiguration"
(Conductor: MONTEUX)

JULY 24

BEETHOVEN
Symphony No. 1, in C major
Symphony No. 4, in B flat

Symphony No. 6 ("Pastorale")
(Conductor: MUNCH)

JULY 29

HANDEL
Suite, "Water Music"

SCHUMANN
Symphony No. 4, in D minor

BARBER
"Prayers of Kierkegaard"
(with Chorus)
Soloist: Leontyne Price

BRAHMS
Symphony No. 4, in E minor
(Conductor: MUNCH)

JULY 30

BEETHOVEN
Overture to "Egmont"
Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor")

Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica")
Soloist: Rudolf Serkin
(Conductor: MUNCH)

JULY 31

BRAHMS
Academic Festival Overture
Concerto for Violin and Cello

Symphony No. 1, in C minor
Soloists: Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky
(Conductor: MONTEUX)

AUGUST 5

BEETHOVEN
Missa Solemnis
(with Chorus and Soloists)
In Memory of Serge Koussevitzky
(Conductor: BERNSTEIN)

AUGUST 6

BEETHOVEN
Fidelio, Act II
(with Chorus and Soloists)

WAGNER
Excerpts from "Gotterdammerung"
Siegfried's Rhine Journey
Siegfried's Death Music
Immolation Scene
Soloist: Margaret Harshaw, Sopr.
(Conductor: MUNCH)

AUGUST 7

BEETHOVEN
Symphony No. 8, in F major
Piano Concerto No. 4, in G major

Symphony No. 5, in C minor
Soloist: Eugene Istomin
(Conductor: MUNCH)

AUGUST 12

BRAHMS
Variations on a Theme by Haydn

BLOCH
"Schelomo" for Cello and Orchestra

DEBUSSY
"La Mer"

RAVEL
"Daphnis and Chloe", Suite No. 2
Soloist: Gregor Piatigorsky
(Conductor: MUNCH)

AUGUST 13

WAGNER
Overture to "The Flying Dutchman"

BRAHMS
Symphony No. 3, in F major

DEBUSSY
Three Nocturnes

STRAUSS
Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier"
(Conductor: MONTEUX)

AUGUST 14

BEETHOVEN
Overture, "Leonore", No. 3
Symphony No. 9, in D minor
(with Chorus and Soloists)
(Conductor: MUNCH)

About the Berkshire Hills

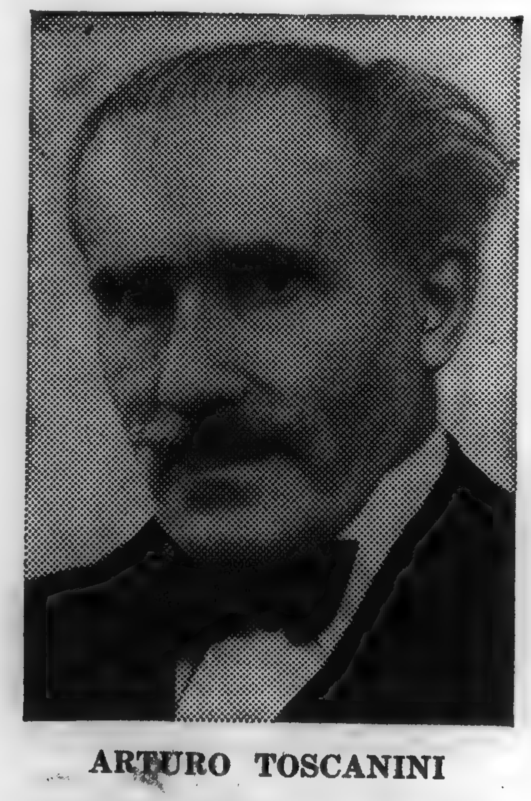
At every season of the year in the beautiful Berkshires, you will find a wide variety of things to do, places to go, sights to see. In the Fall, Berkshire foliage attracts thousands of people who come to enjoy the unsurpassed spectacle of Nature's brilliant and breath-taking array of colors.

Traditional Berkshire Hills hospitality is quickly evident when you stop at one of our many fine hotels, inns, motels or guest houses. You'll always enjoy the touch of friendly cordiality!

And for year 'round good living, hundreds of good folks who were formerly seasonal visitors have chosen the Berkshire Hills as a permanent residence.

For further details about the region, our list of real estate agents, and information on places to stay write:

BERKSHIRE HILLS CONFERENCE
County Courthouse
Pittsfield 30, Mass.



ARTURO TOSCANINI

Toscanini refuses to celebrate a birthday till he hits 90. The maestro is reported happy in retirement.

JEAN LEON DESTINE

When Destine goes into a dance he lifts you up right out of your seat. The Haitian dynamo is performing at the Pillow.

LONDON BALLET REPORT

LONDON — No one could possibly complain about the prices in London's opera houses. At Covent Garden the best seat in the house — in the centre of the Grand Tier — costs you only 22s. At Sadler's Wells the highest price is a mere 12s. 6d. — but you can see and hear excellently for far less than that.

There is opera or ballet at Sadler's Wells almost the whole year round — a No. 19 or 38 bus from Piccadilly Circus drops you outside the main door — and no music-lover visiting London should miss an evening or two at this enterprising (and satisfyingly resonant) theatre. And the Wells has been particularly enterprising this season. Not to be outdone by the two new British operas produced at the Royal Opera House (Walton's Troilus and Cressida and Tippett's The Midsummer Marriage), Sadler's Wells have emulated this achievement by presenting Berkeley's Nelson and Britten's The Turn of the Screw, and in addition have staged a much-praised production of a contemporary American opera, Menotti's The Consul. There has also been a welcome opportunity of hearing again Katya Kabanova (by the Czech composer Janacek, who died in 1928). More traditional fare in the current season's repertory includes a new production of The Magic Flute, revivals of The Bartered Bride and Don Carlos, as well as Die Fledermaus, Luisa Miller, Don Pasquale, Tosca, Traviata, and so on.

The Sadler's Wells Theatre Ballet (not to be confused with the original Sadler's Wells Ballet which performs at Covent Garden) continues to combine freshness and verve with the traditional Sadler's Wells polish. Not for them the big classical ballets (though they do a charming Coppelia) — these young dancers are seen at their best in the elegant and amusing Carte Blanche and Cafe des Sports, both recent additions to the repertory; and in the intriguing Danses Concertantes to Stravinsky's music, which had its premiere in January. Three others not to be missed are The Lady and the Fool, superbly danced to a Verdi arrangement; the lively Pineapple Poll (music by Sullivan); and Selina, to Rossini's music, a not too serious re-creation of the type of romantic nineteenth-century ballet which is traditionally associated with such grand and famous ballet companies as — dare we say it? — the senior Sadler's Wells Ballet at Covent Garden. The laugh, however, is a gentle one, and both eye and ear are pleasantly beguiled.

Poems by Mary Eastland

MARY EASTLAND

Mary Eastland, youthful Pittsfield poetess, during her spare time works at the popular Double Dip Ice Cream Parlor on First St. in Pittsfield.

THAT'S LIFE

A little bit of sunshine,
A little bit of rain,
A little bit of joy,
A little bit of pain —
that's life.

A little bit of losing,
A little bit of glory,
A little bit of nonsense,
It's the same old story —
that's life.

And a little bit of life,
Is a mighty precious thing,
When a person's growing old,
And there ain't much time
to sing —
That's life.

TO A LOCK OF HAIR

To think that once
her timid hands
had fed your soul,
caressed, held you close;

To think that you
were once her own
the same as I.

Can you feel my
lonesome fingertips?

Try, please, try.

To think that now
you lie here in my weeping palm.

I cannot bear to think that she is gone.

TIME

Time goes unnoticed for those who love and sing.

There is no need of hours for a lasting thing.

Time is torture,
pain, pity,

I do believe,

For those who watch the hours
and only grieve.

Dance Chatter

Sadler's Wells Ballet opens at the Metropolitan Opera House Sept. 11, closes Oct. 16, then goes on tour with Margot Fonteyn leading the female dancers.

The Leonide Massine Ballet Ruse Highlights tour the country this fall.

Orchids to young Anthony Mordante, not long out of NYC High School of Performing Arts, featured dancer at Radio City Music Hall.

Something to see: Pearl Primus in Living Africa, exciting and exotic; ditto the Katherine Dunham dancers in the film MAMBO.

Good Luck to the new Julliard Dance Theatre under supervision of Martha Hill and Doris Humphrey.

Composer, teacher, accompanist and critic Louis Horst given 4th annual Capezio award this year. Has coached modern dancers for about 40 years. Was with Ted Shawn and Ruth St. Danis (Denishawn Dancers) for 10 years. Horst was a big factor in the history of the modern dance, and 21 years ago founded its organ, Dance Observer.

RECOMMENDED RECORDS

We highly recommend these RCA Victor albums: Berlioz' complete DAMNATION OF FAUST by Charles Munch and the BSO plus famed soloists and the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society, (3 12" 33 1/3 new orthophonic); Ravel's LA VALSE, and Roussel's BACCUS ET ARIANE (3 12" 33 1/3 high fidelity)

The COPPELIA and SYLVIA of Delibes conducted by Pierre Monteux and members of the BSO (One 12" 33 1/3, or two 7" 45 high fidelity)

Ravel's DAPHNIS and CHLOE, and Weber's INVITATION TO THE DANCE by Toscanini and the NBC Symphony, (3 12" 33 1/3 in high fidelity)

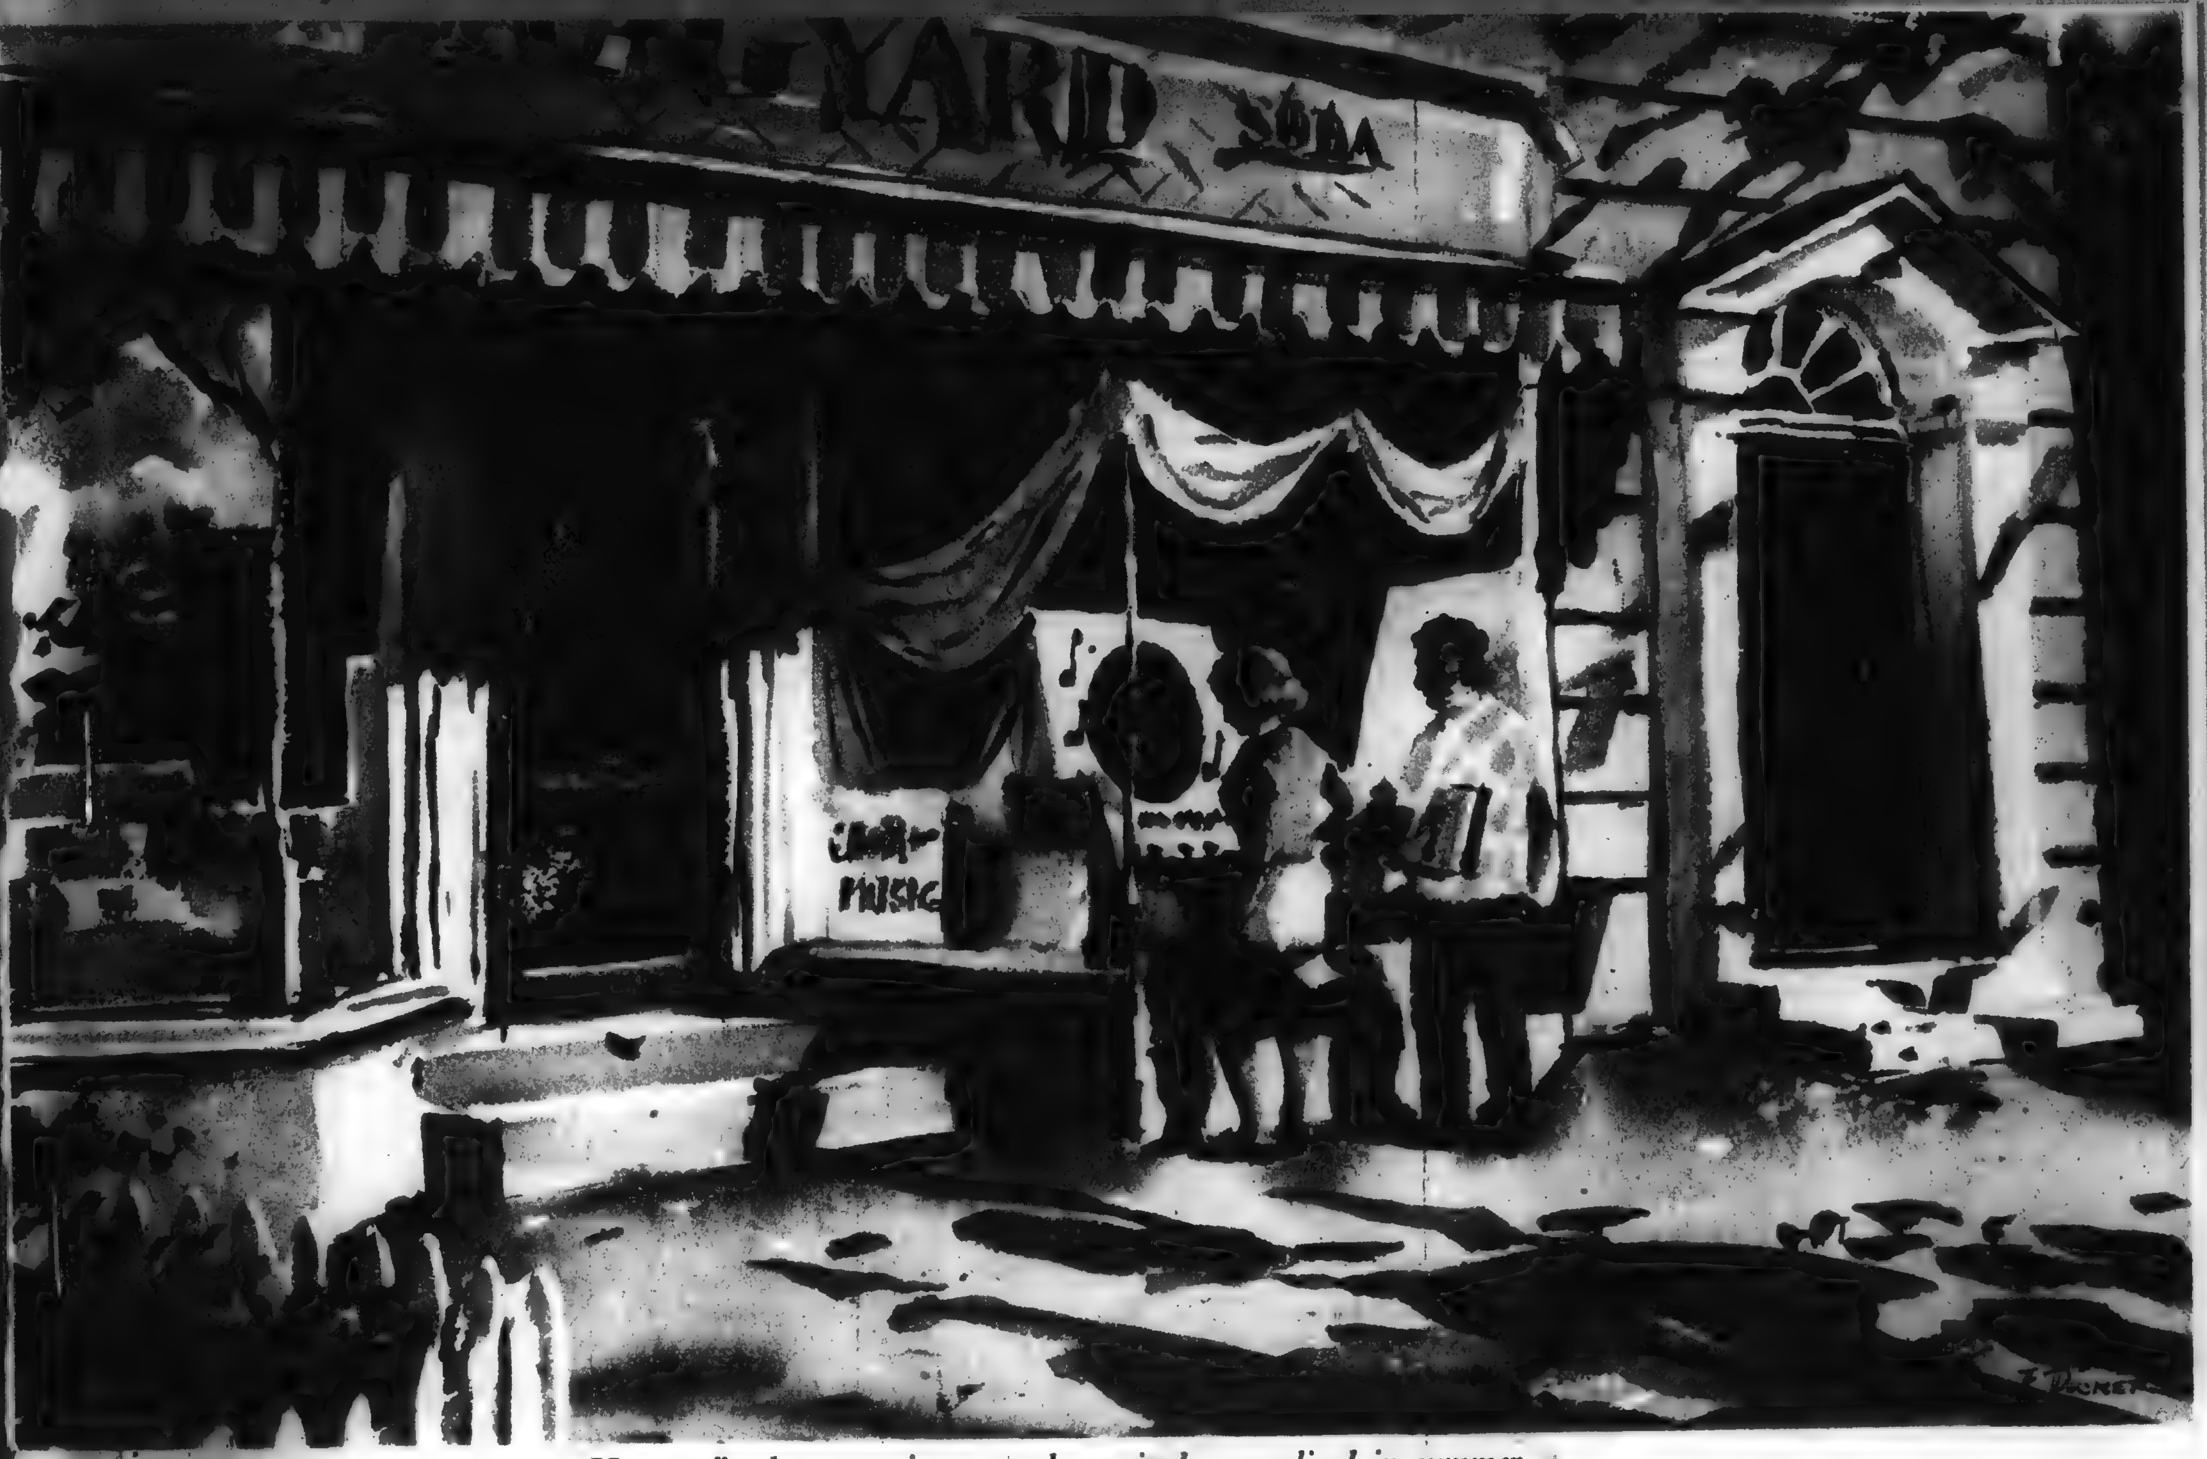
Offenbach's GAITE PARISIENNE in high fidelity by Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops.

LOOK HERE

If you must walk
during a concert,
walk on the grass,
says the big brass.

Calypso of Bermuda
REGISTERED TRADE MARK
Walker Street - Lenox, Mass.
Open Daily Except Sunday 9:30 to 5:30
DISTINCTIVE CLOTHES
for Men and Women
CASHMERES COTTONS ACCESSORIES

The ROSA RESTAURANT
154 North Street
Pittsfield's Newest and Most Modern Cocktail Lounge
Private Dining Facilities in the New England Room
For Individuals or Groups
Open 7 Days A Week . . . 'Till 1 A. M.



Hagyard's drugstore is as much musical as medical in summer

THE MUSICAL BERKSHIRES

by ROBERT MARTIN HODESH

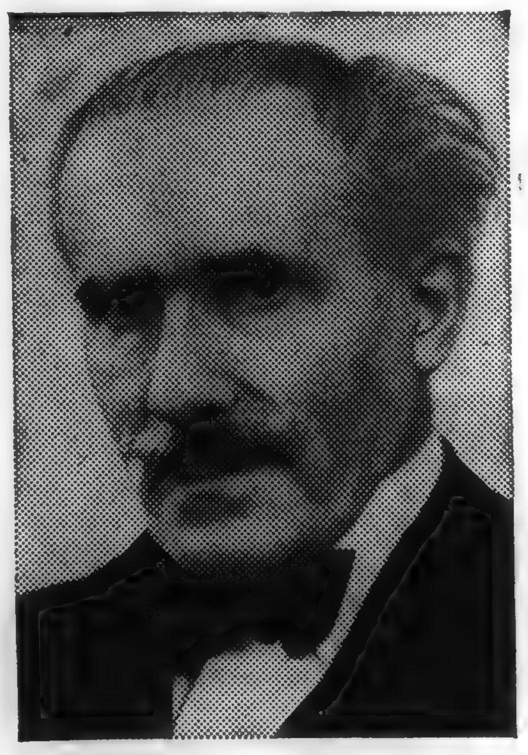
paintings by PAUL E. DECKER

ANYONE who has ever driven through the Berkshire Hills in the summer will agree that one way to learn what the region is like in that season is to observe the hitch hikers along the roads and perhaps pick up a few of them from time to time.

I once knew a man whose only impression of western Massachusetts was gained that way. He used to enjoy telling people what happened to him on a day in August when he pulled up at the main intersection in the town of Lenox, intending to stop only long enough to study the road signs and choose a route.

Before he got rolling again a boy and girl stepped off the curb and asked him for a ride to Tanglewood, which is the site of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival and the Berkshire Music Center, a school for gifted musicians. He could see no harm in driving an extra mile to help a pretty girl with a fiddle case under her arm and a boy with a sheaf of music and a clarinet, so he invited them in.

It turned out his judgment was not misplaced, but before he had taken them a hundred feet they



ARTURO TOSCANINI

Toscanini refuses to celebrate a birthday till he hits 90. The maestro is reported happy in retirement.

JEAN LEON DESTINE

When Destine goes into a dance he lifts you up right out of your seat. The Haitian dynamo is performing at the Pillow.

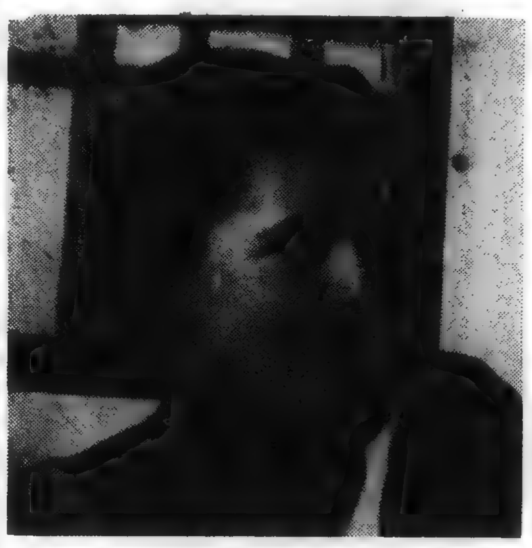
LONDON BALLET REPORT

LONDON — No one could possibly complain about the prices in London's opera houses. At Covent Garden the best seat in the house — in the centre of the Grand Tier — costs you only 22s. At Sadler's Wells the highest price is a mere 12s. 6d. — but you can see and hear excellently for far less than that.

There is opera or ballet at Sadler's Wells almost the whole year round — a No. 19 or 38 bus from Piccadilly Circus drops you outside the main door — and no music-lover visiting London should miss an evening or two at this enterprising (and satisfyingly resonant) theatre. And the Wells has been particularly enterprising this season. Not to be outdone by the two new British operas produced at the Royal Opera House (Walton's Troilus and Cressida and Tippett's The Midsummer Marriage), Sadler's Wells have emulated this achievement by presenting Berkeley's Nelson and Britten's The Turn of the Screw, and in addition have staged a much-praised production of a contemporary American opera, Menotti's The Consul. There has also been a welcome opportunity of hearing again Katya Kabanova (by the Czech composer Janacek, who died in 1928). More traditional fare in the current season's repertory includes a new production of The Magic Flute, revivals of The Bartered Bride and Don Carlos, as well as Die Fledermaus, Luisa Miller, Don Pasquale, Tosca, Traviata, and so on.

The Sadler's Wells Theatre Ballet (not to be confused with the original Sadler's Wells Ballet which performs at Covent Garden) continues to combine freshness and verve with the traditional Sadler's Wells polish. Not for them the big classical ballets (though they do a charming Coppelia) — these young dancers are seen at their best in the elegant and amusing Carte Blanche and Cafe des Sports, both recent additions to the repertory; and in the intriguing Danses Concertantes to Stravinsky's music, which had its premiere in January. Three others not to be missed are The Lady and the Fool, superbly danced to a Verdi arrangement; the lively Pineapple Poll (music by Sullivan); and Selina, to Rossini's music, a not too serious re-creation of the type of romantic nineteenth-century ballet which is traditionally associated with such grand and famous ballet companies as — dare we say it? — the senior Sadler's Wells Ballet at Covent Garden. The laugh, however, is a gentle one, and both eye and ear are pleasantly beguiled.

Poems by Mary Eastland



MARY EASTLAND

Mary Eastland, youthful Pittsfield poetess, during her spare time works at the popular Double Dip Ice Cream Parlor on First St. in Pittsfield.

THAT'S LIFE

A little bit of sunshine,
A little bit of rain,
A little bit of joy,
A little bit of pain —
that's life.

A little bit of losing,
A little bit of glory,
A little bit of nonsense,
It's the same old story —
that's life.

And a little bit of life,
Is a mighty precious thing,
When a person's growing old,
And there ain't much time
to sing —
That's life.

TO A LOCK OF HAIR

To think that once
her timid hands
had fed your soul,
caressed, held you close;

To think that you
were once her own
the same as I.

Can you feel my
lonesome fingertips?

Try, please, try.

To think that now
you lie here in my weeping palm.

I cannot bear to think that she is gone.

TIME

Time goes unnoticed for those who love and sing.

There is no need of hours for a lasting thing.

Time is torture,
pain, pity,

I do believe,

For those who watch the hours
and only grieve.

Dance Chatter

Sadler's Wells Ballet opens at the Metropolitan Opera House Sept. 11, closes Oct. 16, then goes on tour with Margot Fonteyn leading the female dancers.

The Leonide Massine Ballet Ruse Highlights tour the country this fall.

Orchids to young Anthony Mordante, not long out of NYC High School of Performing Arts, featured dancer at Radio City Music Hall.

Something to see: Pearl Primus in Living Africa, exciting and exotic; ditto the Katherine Dunham dancers in the film MAMBO.

Good Luck to the new Julliard Dance Theatre under supervision of Martha Hill and Doris Humphrey.

Composer, teacher, accompanist and critic Louis Horst given 4th annual Capezio award this year. Has coached modern dancers for about 40 years. Was with Ted Shawn and Ruth St. Danis (Denishawn Dancers) for 10 years. Horst was a big factor in the history of the modern dance, and 21 years ago founded its organ, Dance Observer.

RECOMMENDED RECORDS

We highly recommend these RCA Victor albums: Berlioz' complete DAMNATION OF FAUST by Charles Munch and the BSO plus famed soloists and the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society, (3 12" 33 1/3 new orthophonic); Ravel's LA VALSE, and Roussel's BACCUS ET ARIANE (3 12" 33 1/3 high fidelity)

The COPPELIA and SYLVIA of Delibes conducted by Pierre Monteux and members of the BSO (One 12" 33 1/3, or two 7" 45 high fidelity)

Ravel's DAPHNIS and CHLOE, and Weber's INVITATION TO THE DANCE by Toscanini and the NBC Symphony, (3 12" 33 1/3 in high fidelity)

Offenbach's GAITE PARISIENNE in high fidelity by Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops.

LOOK HERE

If you must walk
during a concert,
walk on the grass,
says the big brass.

Calypso of Bermuda
REGISTERED TRADE MARK
Walker Street - Lenox, Mass.
Open Daily Except Sunday 9:30 to 5:30
DISTINCTIVE CLOTHES
for Men and Women
CASHMERES COTTONS ACCESSORIES

The ROSA RESTAURANT
154 North Street
Pittsfield's Newest and Most Modern Cocktail Lounge
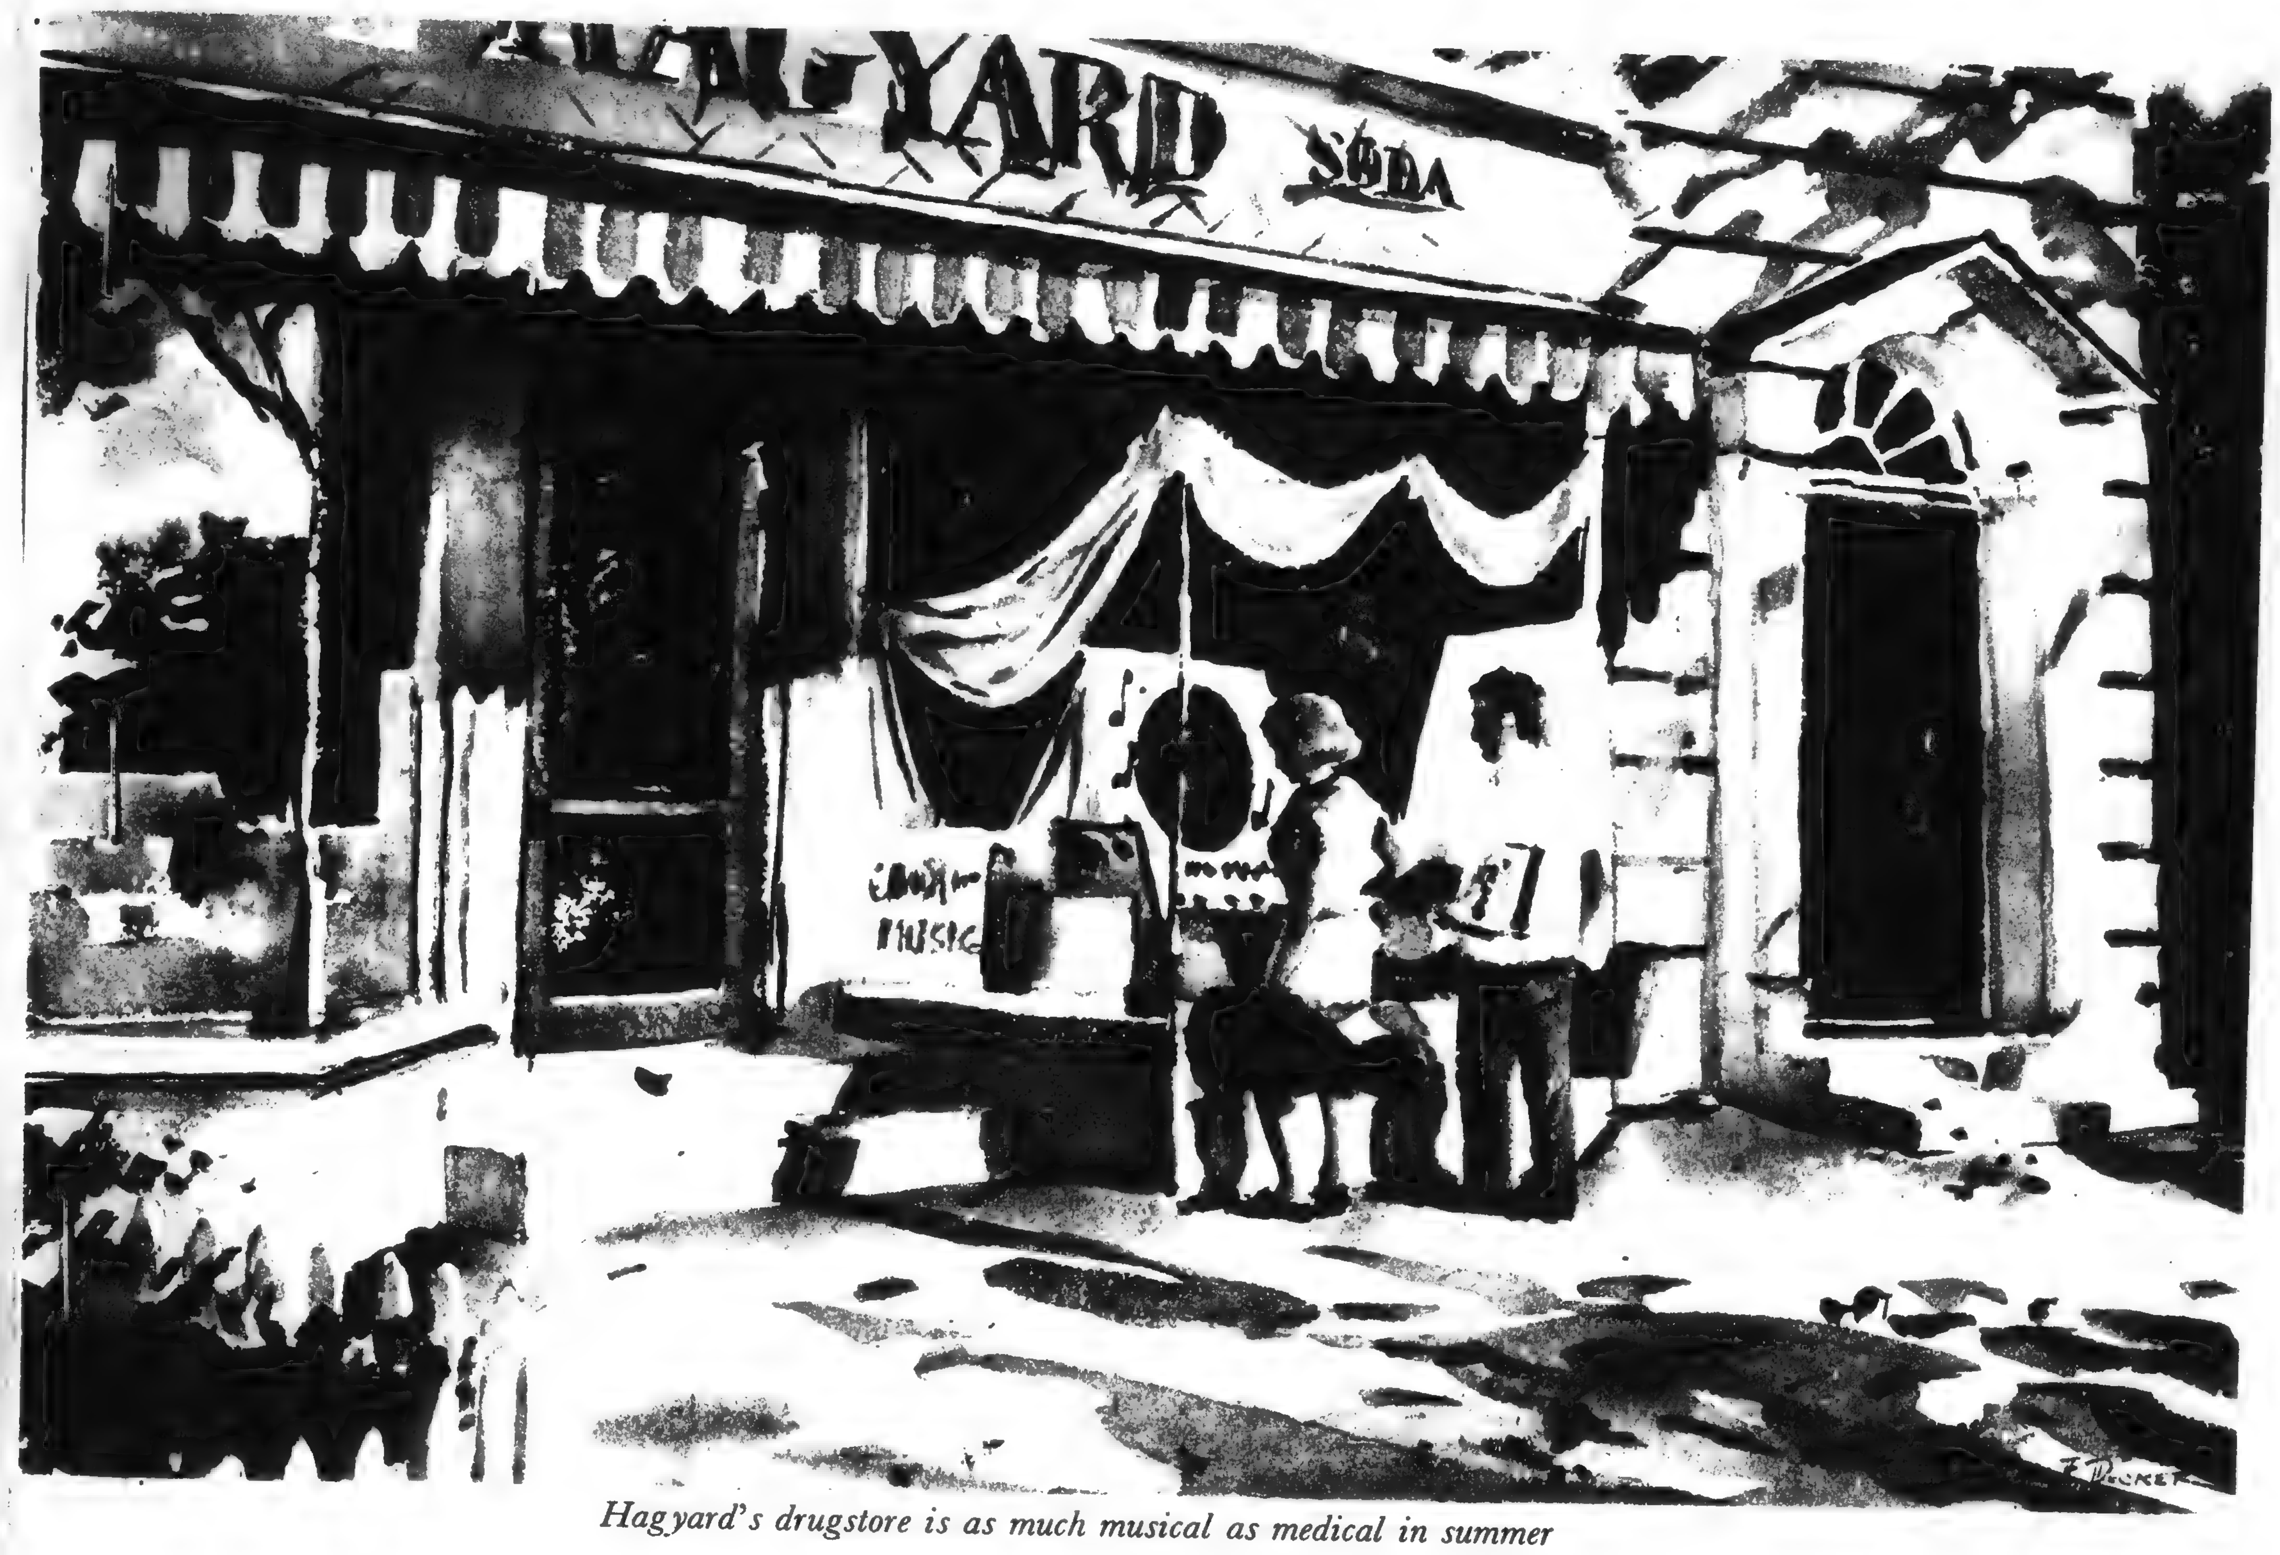
Private Dining Facilities in the New England Room
For Individuals or Groups
Open 7 Days A Week . . . Till 1 A. M.



Hagyard's drugstore is as much musical as medical in summer

THE MUSICAL BERKSHIRES

by ROBERT MARTIN HODESH

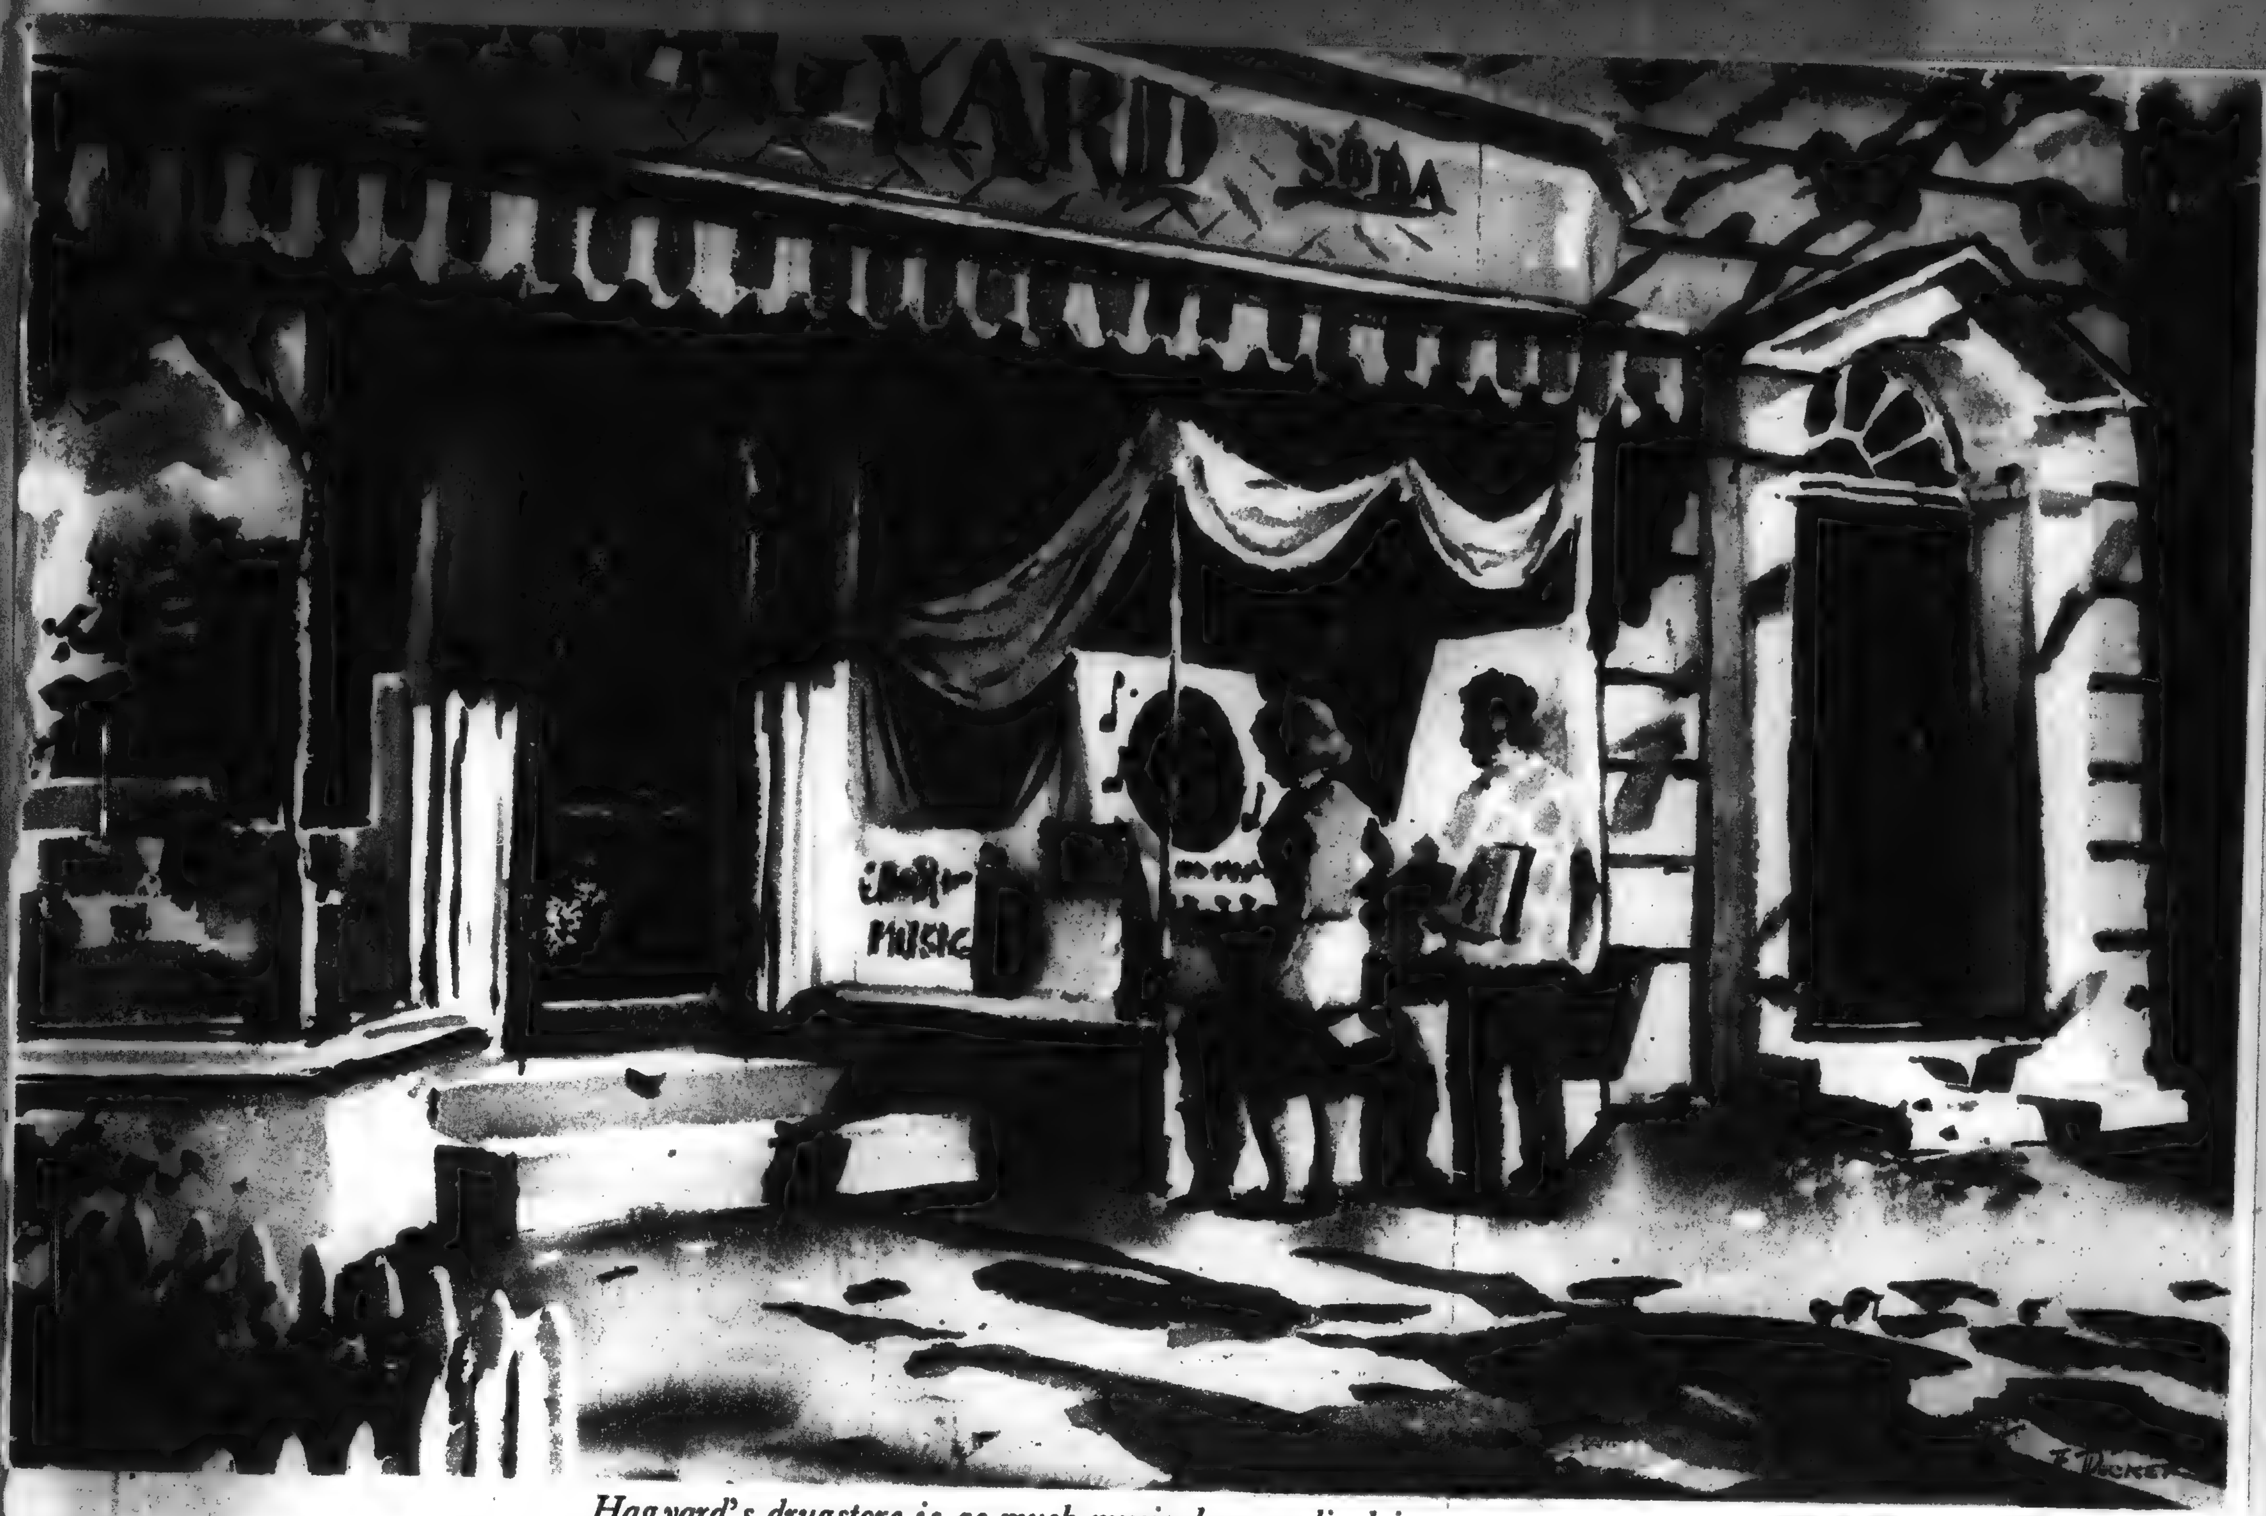
paintings by PAUL E. DECKER

ANYONE who has ever driven through the Berkshire Hills in the summer will agree that one way to learn what the region is like in that season is to observe the hitch hikers along the roads and perhaps pick up a few of them from time to time.

I once knew a man whose only impression of western Massachusetts was gained that way. He used to enjoy telling people what happened to him on a day in August when he pulled up at the main intersection in the town of Lenox, intending to stop only long enough to study the road signs and choose a route.

Before he got rolling again a boy and girl stepped off the curb and asked him for a ride to Tanglewood, which is the site of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival and the Berkshire Music Center, a school for gifted musicians. He could see no harm in driving an extra mile to help a pretty girl with a fiddle case under her arm and a boy with a sheaf of music and a clarinet, so he invited them in.

It turned out his judgment was not misplaced, but before he had taken them a hundred feet they



Hagyard's drugstore is as much musical as medical in summer

THE MUSICAL BERKSHIRES

by ROBERT MARTIN HODESH

paintings by PAUL E. DECKER

ANYONE who has ever driven through the Berkshire Hills in the summer will agree that one way to learn what the region is like in that season is to observe the hitch hikers along the roads and perhaps pick up a few of them from time to time.

I once knew a man whose only impression of western Massachusetts was gained that way. He used to enjoy telling people what happened to him on a day in August when he pulled up at the main intersection in the town of Lenox, intending to stop only long enough to study the road signs and choose a route.

Before he got rolling again a boy and girl stepped off the curb and asked him for a ride to Tanglewood, which is the site of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival and the Berkshire Music Center, a school for gifted musicians. He could see no harm in driving an extra mile to help a pretty girl with a fiddle case under her arm and a boy with a sheaf of music and a clarinet, so he invited them in.

It turned out his judgment was not misplaced, but before he had taken them a hundred feet they asked him to stop and pick up three more musical hitchhikers who were standing by the road with thumbs extended. While driving the quintet to the Tanglewood main gate, it occurred to him that he had never before been in a part of the country where he could pick two violins, a clarinet, a flute, a French horn, and plenty of music right off the shoulder. He reasoned that if he had kept right on going with them he could have set himself up with a small orchestra of sorts—the kids and Petrillo willing, of course.

← The South Mountain chamber music concerts are held in this building

Students at the Berkshire Music Center often practice out of doors →

There is another item like this in the lore of Lenox—admittedly an extreme one—but according to this tale, a boy once stood at the same Lenox intersection thumbing a ride with a bass fiddle. Naturally, the cars passed him up, but he got to Tanglewood anyway, either in a pickup truck or a horse van.

And this way of getting about isn't confined to musicians, either, for the Berkshires are alive in summer with the practitioners of every art there is. I was driving westward last year on U.S. 20 (in the Berkshires this road is called Jacob's Ladder) when I saw an array of creatures in their teens beside the road, thumbs out. Obviously this was the time to throw caution to the winds, so I stopped.

They were seven girl dancers from Jacob's Pillow, a prominent summer school of the modern dance. They were all beautiful and all gay, and it was marvelous the way they wove themselves into the car without a bit of cloth or skin sticking out. I let them off in the town of Lee after five miles of merriment.

Now, all this business of talented hitchhikers on the Berkshire roads is the merest indication of the fact that Berkshire County is the biggest summer culture foundry in the country. On July 24 last year, the Eagle, principal daily paper in the area, devoted nearly a full page to a calendar of cultural doings roundabout. This calendar, toothsomely decorated with advertisements for some of the regional restaurants, looked pretty impressive. Covering six weeks, it listed some hundred and forty events—fifty concerts, seventy-two play performances, eighteen dance recitals, and a little art and sculpture.

To an outsider this might look like plenty, but to my friend Milton Bass, columnist on the Eagle and a man of prodigious appetite for the arts, it looked a little weak. He says that if you list all the music, including jazz, all the plays, all the flower shows, all the art and sculpture, all the dancing, all the summer, the figure would run to more than nine hundred. This, of course, is beyond human capacity and human endurance to digest, though some have tried.

I can just imagine a visitor to the Berkshire Hills sitting on the porch of some good hostelry, say the Red Lion Inn at Stockbridge, willing to expose himself to the Finer Things and trying to decide just how. Before ten in the morning he would have to face hard choices. Should he drive over to Tanglewood and listen to a rehearsal of the Boston Symphony, or should he run up to Pittsfield and look at the exhibition in their notable museum? These two are by no means the only morning alternatives, a fact that could easily cause him to stay in his chair and consider the possibilities of the afternoon.

Would he go to Tanglewood and hear the students play chamber music, would he go over to the Lenox Library to see a show by local painters, would he decide to indulge in pure Berkshire scenery while driving over to the Berkshire Garden Center, or would he drive up the steep and wooded road to South Mountain for a recital of string quartets?

If the afternoon slipped away in rumination of all these choices, what about the evening? The big concert by the Boston Symphony, Jacob's Pillow to see the girls dance, or the Stockbridge Playhouse to find out how Eva LeGallienne or some other celebrated person was doing?

After one of those, surely his only choice would be sleep, but it isn't. He could then go over to Stephanie Barber's Music Inn to find out what was up with the Calypso band, the jazz artists, or the folk singers who liven the weekends up over there.

And with all that, where would our friend work in such items as Pro Musica Antiqua, the concerts of ancient music at the Lenox Town Hall, or the folk music workshop at the Lenox Library, or the special movies at the Little Cinema, or a visit to a place like the Mission House in Stockbridge, or the antiques show at Lenox?

Let us suppose, mercifully, that he didn't care a hoot about any of these manifestations of culture and wanted merely to call for some refreshment and spend a vacation on the porch. Even if he avoided hitchhikers on principle and didn't stir once except for maybe a little golf, he would still learn plenty about the Berkshires if he only opened the local papers from day to day, because in their columns are waged the heated battles that break out each summer when the culture foundry has a full head of steam.

The letters-to-the-editor section is the field of several wars, one between the classicists and the modernists after the Boston Symphony has played a really modern work. Waged in eight-point type with exclamation points for shrapnel, the columns are filled with such shots as "Vulgar!" and such counter-charges as "Mozart starved because of people like you!"

Simultaneously there is the war between the three B's on one side and the Massachusetts State Police on the other. In this one the citizens strafe the newspaper with complaints that the police are failing to funnel thousands of cars after concerts through country roads that until recently served the horse and buggy nicely. That the officers still manage to unravel the country's worst cultural traffic jams in a few hours is remarkable, because nothing about Brahms encourages attention to a traffic officer's signals.

Finally, there is the ceaseless battle of the bare legs. Once again, newspapers are caught in the crossfire, this time between the older residents who yearn for the elegance of the past and those who want to take their music in comfort. Militating against the wearing of shorts at concerts, the proponents of stateliness charge that bare legs are bad

← Serge Koussevitsky, founder of the Berkshire Festival, is buried here

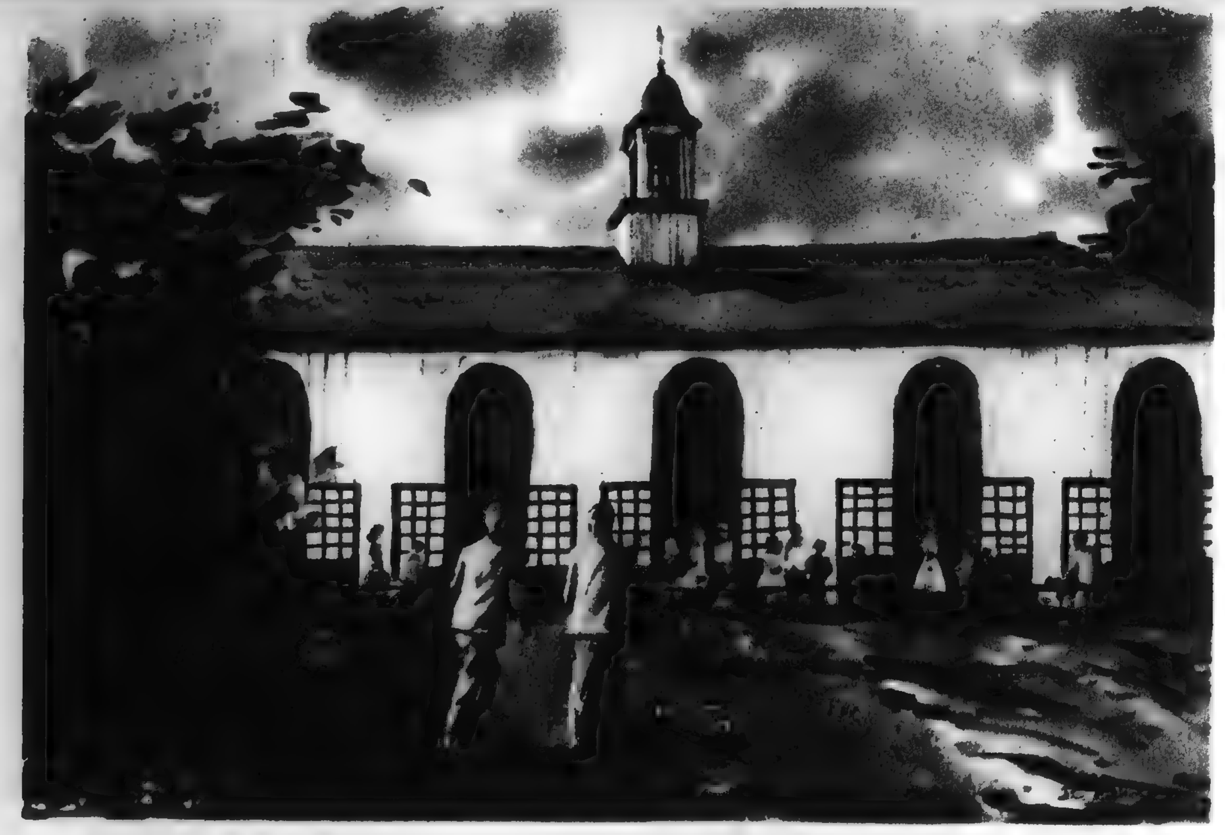
Lenox Town Hall, where the Pro Musica Antiqua recitals are held →

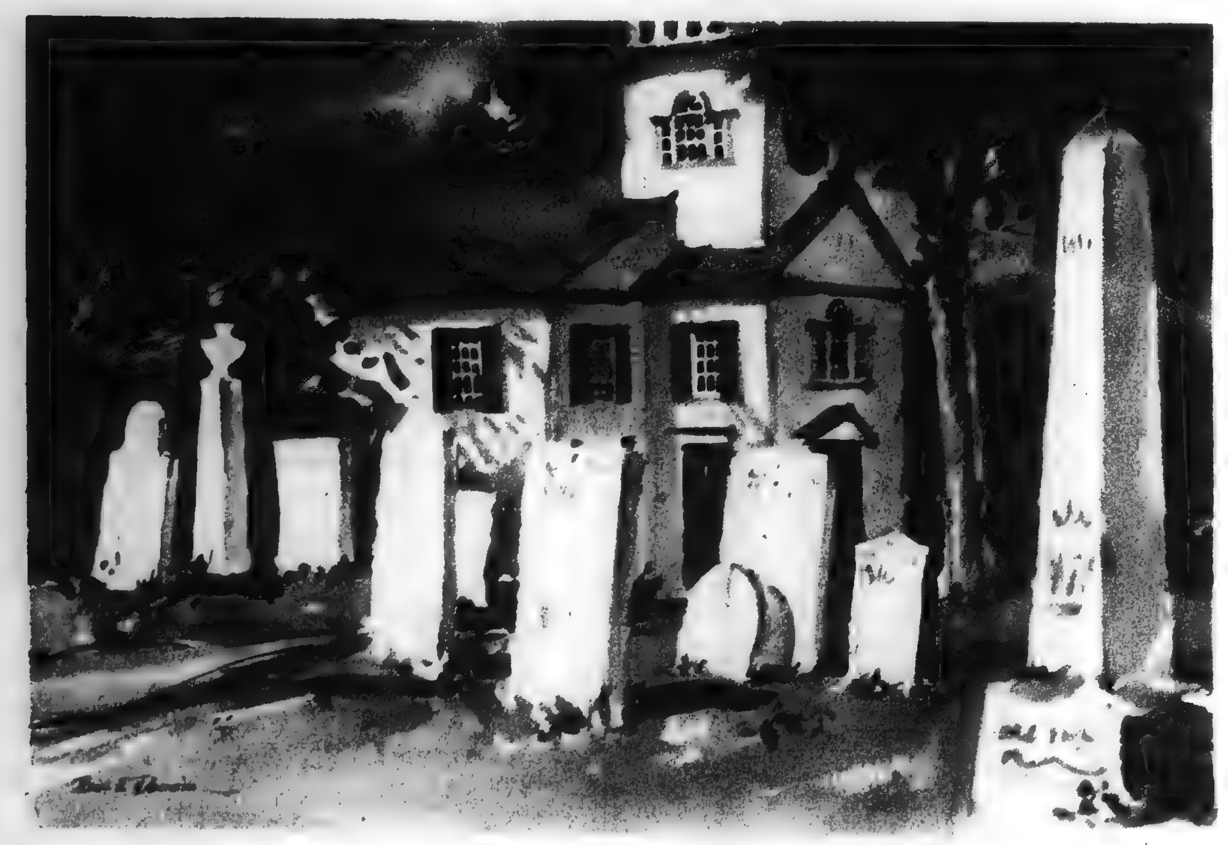


The South Mountain chamber music concerts are held in this building

asked him to stop and pick up three more musical hitchhikers who were standing by the road with thumbs extended. While driving the quintet to the Tanglewood main gate, it occurred to him that he had never before been in a part of the country where he could pick two violins, a clarinet, a flute, a French horn, and plenty of music right off the shoulder. He reasoned that if he had kept right on going with them he could have set himself up with a small orchestra of sorts—the kids and Petrillo willing, of course.

There is another item like this in the lore of Lenox—admittedly an extreme one—but according to this tale, a boy once stood at the same Lenox intersection thumbing a ride with a bass fiddle. Naturally, the cars passed him up, but he got to Tanglewood anyway, either in a pickup truck or a horse van.

And this way of getting about isn't confined to musicians, either, for the Berkshires are alive in summer with the practitioners of every art there is. I was driving westward last year on U.S. 20 (in the Berkshires this road is called Jacob's Ladder) when I saw an array of creatures in their teens beside the road, thumbs out. Obviously this was the time to throw caution to the winds, so I stopped.



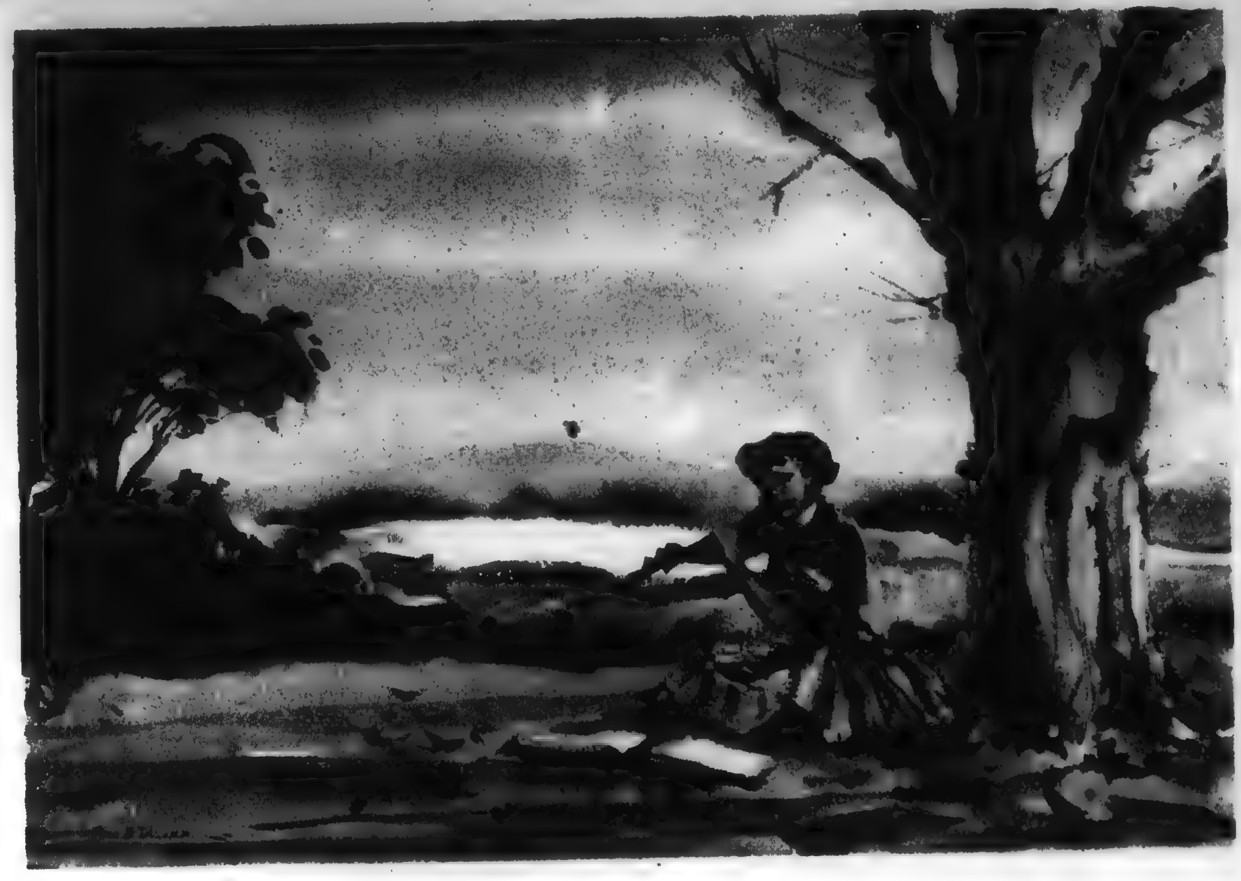
Serge Koussevitsky, founder of the Berkshire Festival, is buried here

They were seven girl dancers from Jacob's Pillow, a prominent summer school of the modern dance. They were all beautiful and all gay, and it was marvelous the way they wove themselves into the car without a bit of cloth or skin sticking out. I let them off in the town of Lee after five miles of merriment.

Now, all this business of talented hitchhikers on the Berkshire roads is the merest indication of the fact that Berkshire County is the biggest summer culture foundry in the country. On July 24 last year, the Eagle, principal daily paper in the area, devoted nearly a full page to a calendar of cultural doings roundabout. This calendar, toothsomely decorated with advertisements for some of the regional restaurants, looked pretty impressive. Covering six weeks, it listed some hundred and forty events—fifty concerts, seventy-two play performances, eighteen dance recitals, and a little art and sculpture.

To an outsider this might look like plenty, but to my friend Milton Bass, columnist on the Eagle and a man of prodigious appetite for the arts, it looked a little weak. He says that if you list all the music, including jazz, all the plays, all the flower shows, all the art and sculpture, all the dancing, all the summer, the figure would run to more than nine hundred. This, of course, is beyond human capacity and human endurance to digest, though some have tried.

I can just imagine a visitor to the Berkshire Hills sitting on the porch of some good hostelry, say the Red Lion Inn at Stockbridge, willing to expose himself to the Finer Things and trying to decide just how. Before ten in the morning he would have to face hard choices. Should he drive over to Tanglewood and listen to a rehearsal of the Boston Symphony, or should he run up to Pittsfield and look at the exhibition in their notable museum? These two are by no means the only morning alternatives, a fact that could easily cause him to stay in his chair and consider the possibilities of the afternoon.



Students at the Berkshire Music Center often practice out of doors

Would he go to Tanglewood and hear the students play chamber music, would he go over to the Lenox Library to see a show by local painters, would he decide to indulge in pure Berkshire scenery while driving over to the Berkshire Garden Center, or would he drive up the steep and wooded road to South Mountain for a recital of string quartets?

If the afternoon slipped away in rumination of all these choices, what about the evening? The big concert by the Boston Symphony, Jacob's Pillow to see the girls dance, or the Stockbridge Playhouse to find out how Eva LeGallienne or some other celebrated person was doing?

After one of those, surely his only choice would be sleep, but it isn't. He could then go over to Stephanie Barber's Music Inn to find out what was up with the Calypso band, the jazz artists, or the folk singers who liven the weekends up over there.

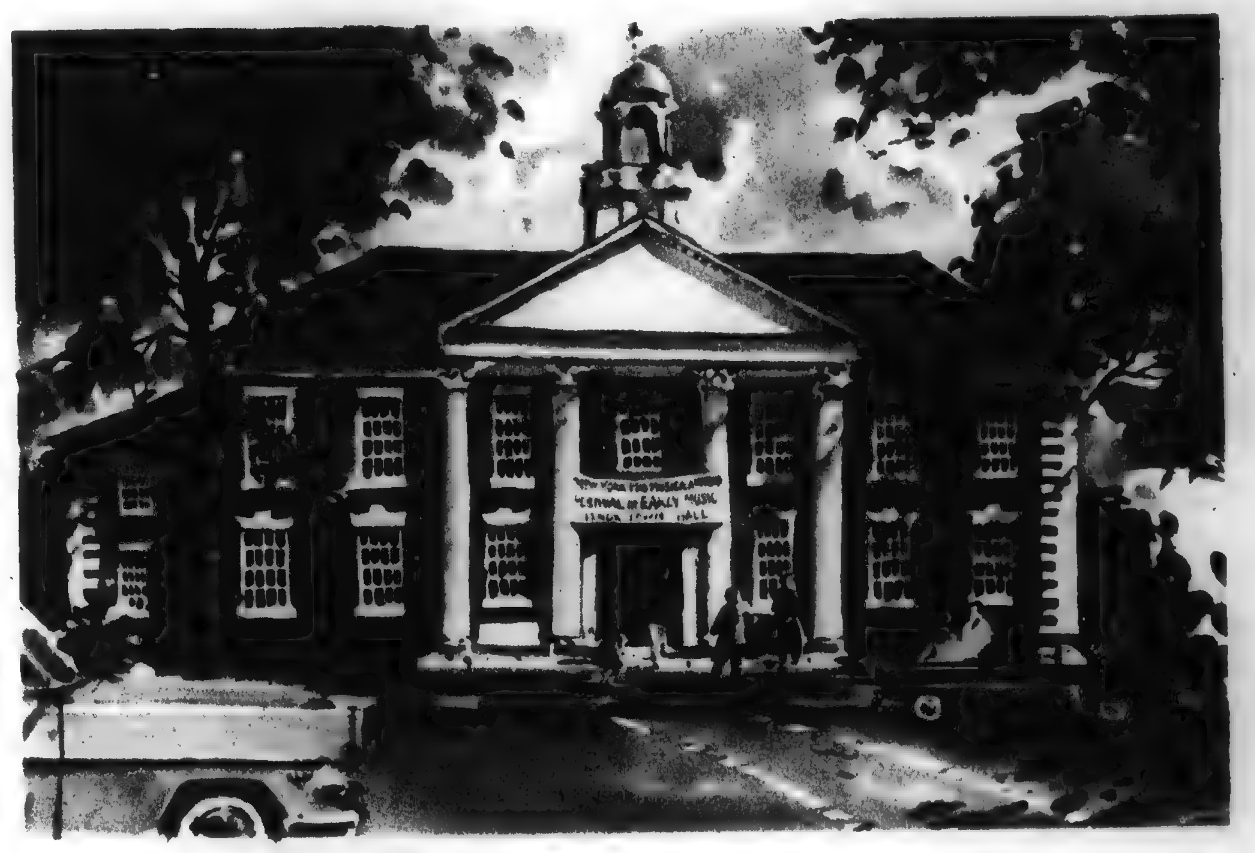
And with all that, where would our friend work in such items as Pro Musica Antiqua, the concerts of ancient music at the Lenox Town Hall, or the folk music workshop at the Lenox Library, or the special movies at the Little Cinema, or a visit to a place like the Mission House in Stockbridge, or the antiques show at Lenox?

Let us suppose, mercifully, that he didn't care a hoot about any of these manifestations of culture and wanted merely to call for some refreshment and spend a vacation on the porch. Even if he avoided hitchhikers on principle and didn't stir once except for maybe a little golf, he would still learn plenty about the Berkshires if he only opened the local papers from day to day, because in their columns are waged the heated battles that break out each summer when the culture foundry has a full head of steam.

The letters-to-the-editor section is the field of several wars, one between the classicists and the modernists after the Boston Symphony has played a really modern work. Waged in eight-point type with exclamation points for shrapnel, the columns are filled with such shots as "Vulgar!" and such counter-charges as "Mozart starved because of people like you!"

Simultaneously there is the war between the three B's on one side and the Massachusetts State Police on the other. In this one the citizens strafe the newspaper with complaints that the police are failing to funnel thousands of cars after concerts through country roads that until recently served the horse and buggy nicely. That the officers still manage to unravel the country's worst cultural traffic jams in a few hours is remarkable, because nothing about Brahms encourages attention to a traffic officer's signals.

Finally, there is the ceaseless battle of the bare legs. Once again, newspapers are caught in the crossfire, this time between the older residents who yearn for the elegance of the past and those who want to take their music in comfort. Militating against the wearing of shorts at concerts, the proponents of stateliness charge that bare legs are bad



Lenox Town Hall, where the Pro Musica Antiqua recitals are held for Beethoven, while the opponents counter with the statement that shorts are not offensive to Schumann, and that they will cover their legs as soon as the young men on Wall Street do.

Though these battles break over the editorial bows in greater or lesser degree as the summer wears on, they do not obscure the basic character of the Berkshires, which is dignified and which ultimately imposes dignity on those who visit there, regardless of temporary inroads by newcomers. Somehow the old hills seem like a very natural place to make music and listen to it. The landscape has the serenity of old oil paintings. It is elegantly cared-for, with enormous trees and thoughtfully planned shrubbery—legacies of the wealthy people who first built their grand estates throughout the county in the late 1800's.

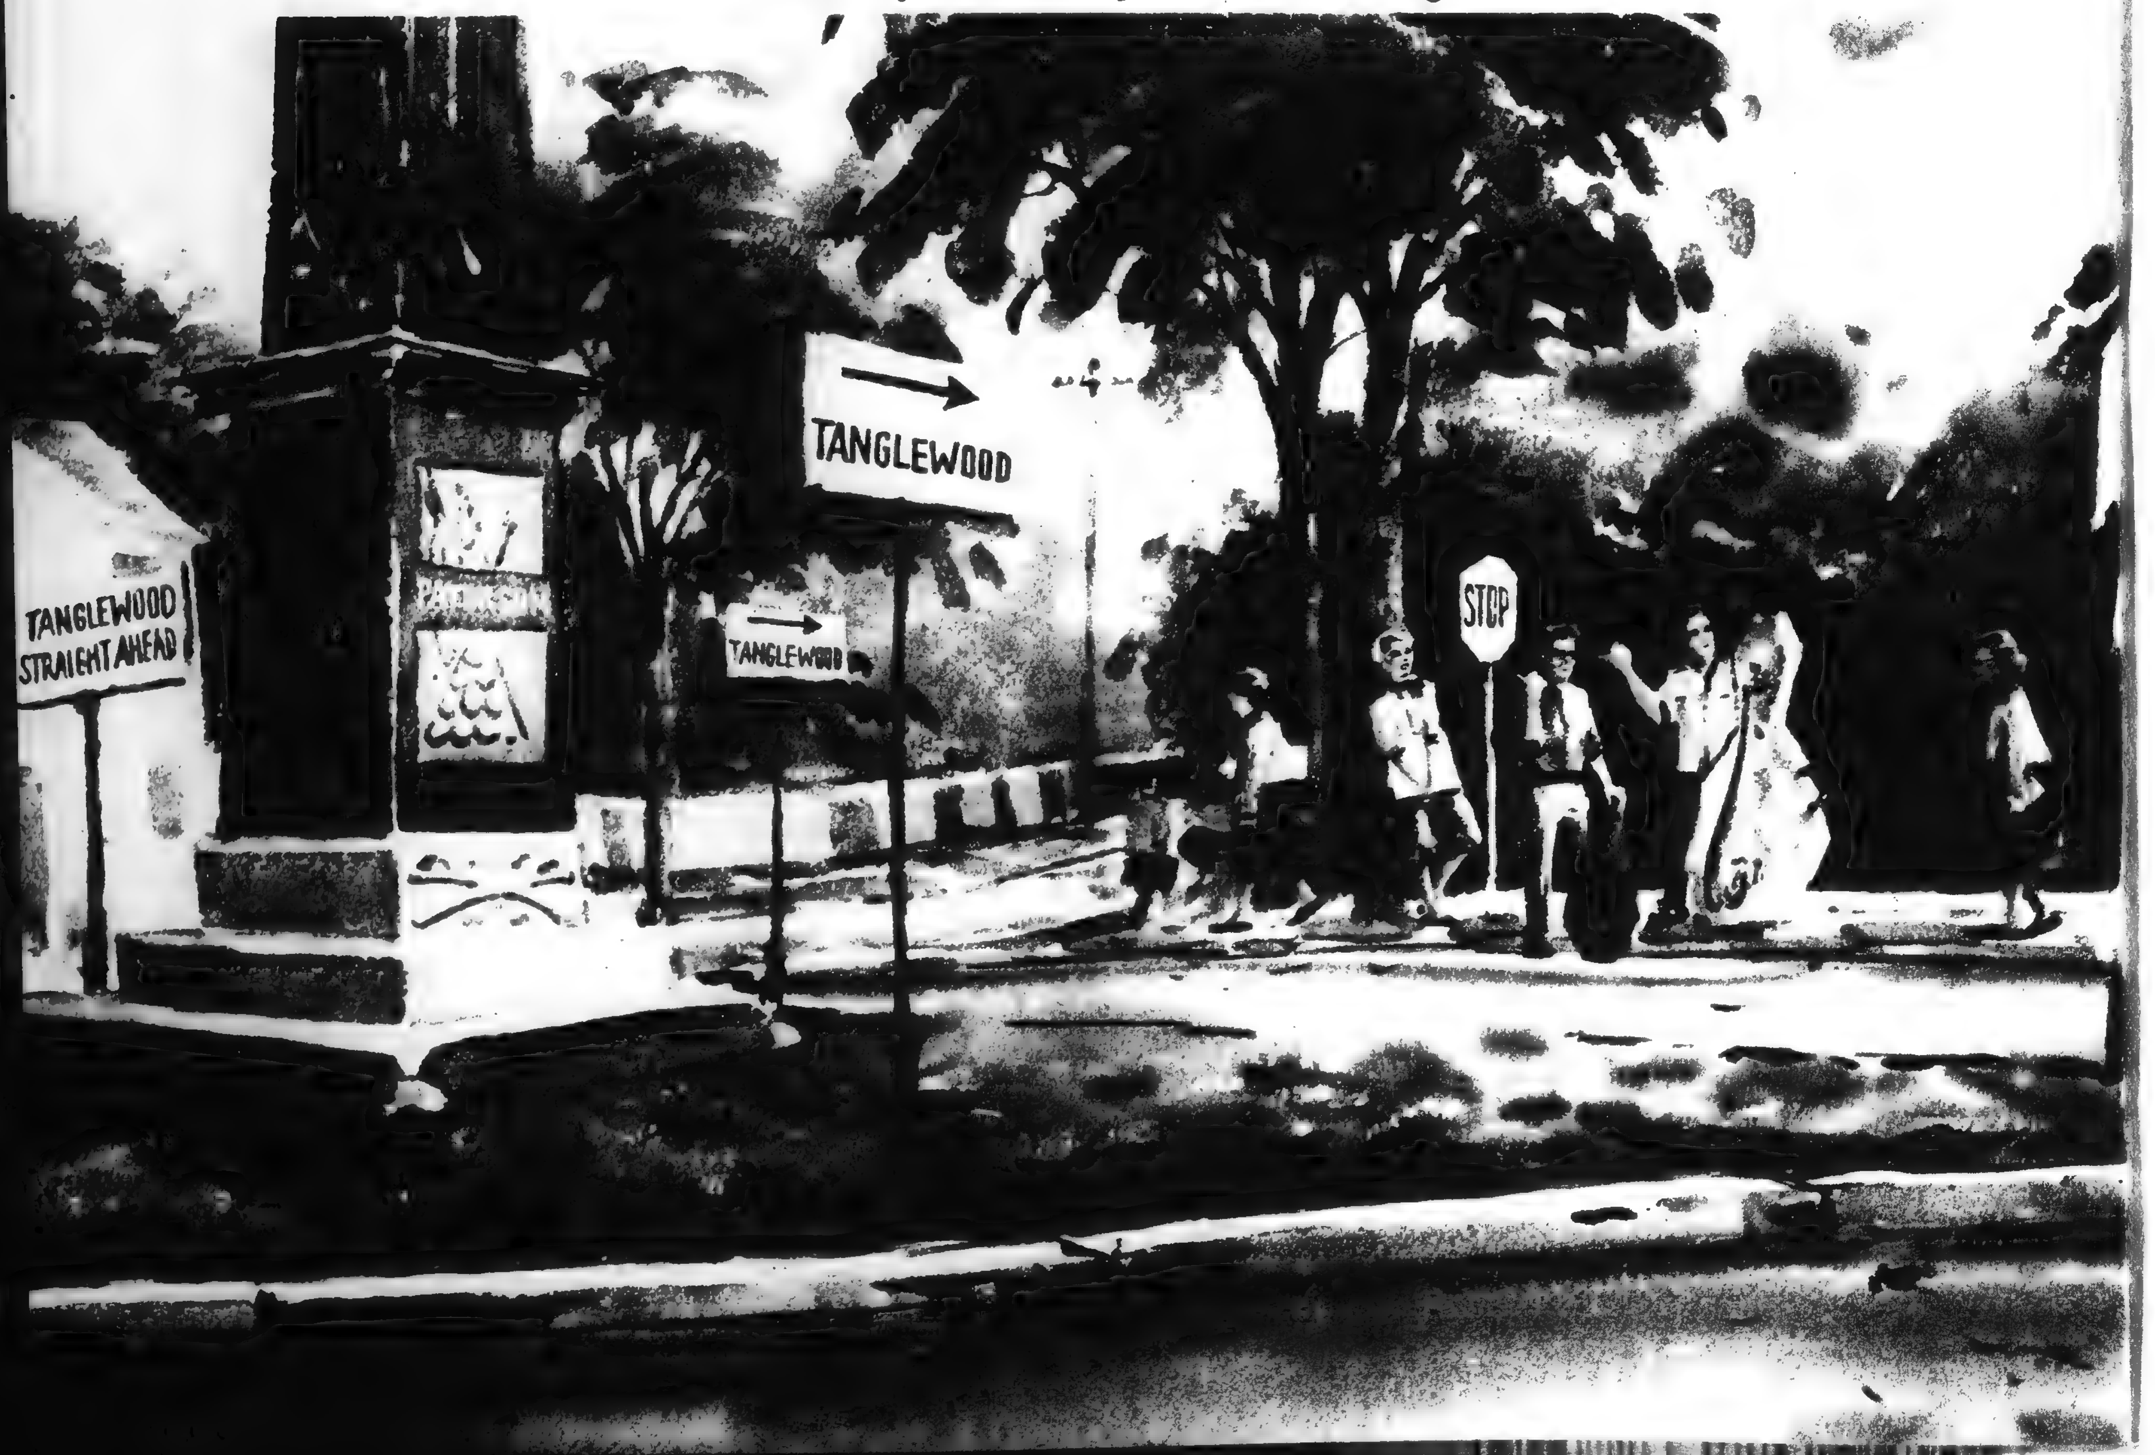
For a long time the musical soirees of the rich were private affairs, but in 1918 the late Mrs. Albert Sprague Coolidge, one of the America's great patrons of music, established the chamber music series at South Mountain. The series, which is one of the Berkshires' finest musical events, provided the core of the audiences who began to attend the Berkshire Festival when it started in 1935. The festival has grown so successful that at a single concert it has attracted a record 15,000 listeners—all taking the best of music in the outdoors with an ease and relaxation that no concert hall can offer.

All this has made the Berkshire Hills a marvelous and different place in summer. Lenox is a good case in point. Wander over to Hagyard's drugstore and look in the window. Do you see Yardley's stuff? Coty's? Heating pads or vitamin pills? No. The last time I looked there was a book called, An Anthology of Renaissance Music, an album of the symphonies of William Boyce, placards advertising various concerts, and a hi-fi audio control unit. Inside was no juke box. Instead a young man was operating a fine phonograph, and while the people dug away at chocolate sundaes they listened to Mozart in silence.

The town is neck-deep in music, as the barber around the corner found out one summer day when a boy came in, parked a fiddle case on the floor, and climbed into the seat. He didn't bother with the ancient copies of Life or Collier's. He had no time for such trivia. While his hair was being shortened he studied the musical score of The Barber of Seville.

It gave the barber of Lenox quite a turn. ■

Students often hitchhike from Lenox to Tanglewood



for Beethoven, while the opponents counter with the statement that shorts are not offensive to Schumann, and that they will cover their legs as soon as the young men on Wall Street do.

Though these battles break over the editorial bows in greater or lesser degree as the summer wears on, they do not obscure the basic character of the Berkshires, which is dignified and which ultimately imposes dignity on those who visit there, regardless of temporary inroads by newcomers. Somehow the old hills seem like a very natural place to make music and listen to it. The landscape has the serenity of old oil paintings. It is elegantly cared-for, with enormous trees and thoughtfully planned shrubbery —legacies of the wealthy people who first built their grand estates throughout the county in the late 1800's.

For a long time the musical soirees of the rich were private affairs, but in 1918 the late Mrs. Albert Sprague Coolidge, one of the America's great patrons of music, established the chamber music series at South Mountain. The series, which is one of the Berkshires' finest musical events, provided the core of the audiences who began to attend the Berkshire Festival when it started in 1935. The festival has grown so successful that at a single concert it has attracted a record 15,000 listeners—all taking the best of music in the outdoors with an ease and relaxation that no concert hall can offer.

All this has made the Berkshire Hills a marvelous and different place in summer. Lenox is a good case in point. Wander over to Hagyard's drugstore and look in the window. Do you see Yardley's stuff? Coty's? Heating pads or vitamin pills? No. The last time I looked there was a book called, An Anthology of Renaissance Music, an album of the symphonies of William Boyce, placards advertising various concerts, and a hi-fi audio control unit. Inside was no juke box. Instead a young man was operating a fine phonograph, and while the people dug away at chocolate sundaes they listened to Mozart in silence.

The town is neck-deep in music, as the barber around the corner found out one summer day when a boy came in, parked a fiddle case on the floor, and climbed into the seat. He didn't bother with the ancient copies of Life or Collier's. He had no time for such trivia. While his hair was being shortened he studied the musical score of The Barber of Seville.

It gave the barber of Lenox quite a turn. ■

Students often hitchhike from Lenox to Tanglewood field Union

July 1.1955

CHARLES MUNCH ARRIVES TODAY FOR FESTIVAL

Conductor, Back From Paris, to Speak Sunday At Tanglewood

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, arrives in New York today by Air France from his home in Paris, and will drive to Lenox this afternoon, to his summer residence.

His Fifth Summer

Mr. Munch will immediately prepare for his summer duties as conductor of the Berkshire Festival. This marks his fifth summer at Tanglewood, and as director of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in connection with the Festival.

Mr. Munch will give his first concert a week from tonight, Friday, July 8, with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood at 8:30 p. m., a program of Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart, with Doriot Anthony Dwyer, the Boston Symphony's first flutist, as soloist. On Sunday afternoon, July 10, his program with the chamber orchestra is the Bach Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass. The Saturday evening July 9 Festival concert, works by Handel, Hayden and Hindemith, with Boston Symphony first violist Joseph de Pasquale as soloist, will be conducted by Thor Johnson, music director of the Cincinnati Symphony, and a former student of conducting at the Berkshire Music Center (1940 and 1941).

Following the conclusion of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 74th season May 1, Mr. Munch remained in Boston to record with the orchestra, then Mr. Munch will address opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood this Sunday afternoon at Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," will be sung by students, Hugh Ross, head of the choral department, conducting. Tea will be served in the formal gardens.

Claremont, N.H. Eagle

Berkshire Music Festival Set For Opening Concerts

LENOX, June 30 — Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, arrives in New York tomorrow by Air France from his home in Paris.

Mr. Munch will immediately prepare for his summer duties as conductor of the Berkshire Festival. This year marks his fifth summer at Tanglewood, and as director of the Berksire Music center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in connection with the festival.

Mr. Munch will give his first concert a week from tomorrow, with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, in the Theatre-Concert hall at Tanglewood at 8:30 p. m., a program of Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart, with Doriot Anthony Dwyer, the Boston Symphony's first flutist, as soloist. On Sunday afternoon, July 10, his program with the chamber orchestra is the Bach Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee club and Radcliffe Choral society, and soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass. The Saturday evening July 9 Festival concert works by Handel, Haydn and Hindemith, with Boston Symphony first violist Joseph de Pasquale as soloist, will be conducted by Thor Johnson, music director of the Cincinnati symphony, and a former student of conducting at the Berkshire Music center.

The first student concert will be held Thursday July 7 at 8:30 p. m. in the Music shed, when the symphony orchestra of 100 students of Department I under Leonard Bernstein's tutelage, will perform Copland's "Outdoor Overture," Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun", Prokofieff's "Peter and the Wolf", and Davorak's Symphony No. 2, with Mr. Bernstein conducting the latter, and student conductors the first three selections. The first student chamber music concert will be held in the Chamber Music Hall Sunday, July 10, at 10 a. m. The public may attend these and other student concerts through contributions to the society of Friends of the Berkshire Music center.

Q and A

7/1/55

THE NEW YORK TIMES,

MUNCH IS DUE TODAY ON WAY TO FESTIVAL

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will arrive here today by plane from his home in Paris. He will drive immediately to Lenox, Mass., to prepare for his fifth season as conductor of the Berkshire Music Festival.

The festival will open next Friday evening with a concert by a chamber orchestra composed of Boston Symphony players. Doriot Anthony Dwyer, the orchestra's first flutist, will he soloist on the opening program, which will offer works of Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart.

On Sunday afternoon Mr. Munch wil conduct the Bach B minor Mass, with Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Koplef, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, as soloists. The chorus will be the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society.

The Saturday evening concert offers works by Handel, Haydn and Hindemith, with Joseph de Paquale as viola soloist. The concert will be conducted by Thor Johnson, music director of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra.

NY Herald Tribune
7/1/55

Munch Due From France

Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will arrive here from France this morning, and will drive to Lenox, Mass., this afternoon to begin his summer activities as conductor of the Berkshire Festival and director of the Berkshire Music Center. He will speak at the Center's opening exercises in Tanglewood's Theater-Concert Hall at 3:30 Sunday afternoon.

The Berkshire Festival opens with a concert by the Kroll Quartet at Tanglewood Wednesday night, July 6, followed by concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony musicians Friday and Saturday nights, July 8 and 9. On Sunday afternoon, July 10, Bach's Mass in B minor will be given under Mr. Munch's direction with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society as the choristers.

Newtown Bee 7/1/55

WEEKLY CALENDAR

A schedule of places to go and things to do in The Bee's area

Music

The Connecticut Pops presents its 8th season of "Music Under the Stars", Friday evenings, as listed below, at 8:30, at Fairfield University Field, Fairfield.

July 8: Sigmund Romberg Night, including performances of "The New Moon" and "Desert Song", Emerson Buckley conducting. The performers include Heidi Krall, soprano; Walter Cassell baritone; Jim Hawthorne, tenor; Marni Nixon, lyric-coloratura; Lee Cass, bass-baritone; David Brooks, narrator; assisted by the New Haven Chorale.

Berkshire Quartet, with guest soloists, rendition of chamber music Sunday afternoon through September 4; Music Mountain, Route 7, Falls Village. Curtain at 4 p.m.

July 3: Bruce Simonds, director Yale Summer School of Music, soloist in Faure's Quartet in C Minor with the Berkshire Quartet, Urico Rossi, Albert Lazan, David Dawson and Fritz Magg, playing Haydn's "Bird" Quartet and Mendelssohn's Quartet in E Minor.

Berkshire Festival series of 24 concerts; starts Wednesday, July 6, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

July 6, The Kroll String Quartet: Beethoven's Quartets in C Minor, Op. 18, No. 4; F Minor, Op. 95 and C Sharp Minor, Op. 131.

July 8, Charles Munch, conductor: Bach's Sinfonia from "Easter" Oratorio, Suite No. 2 for Flute and Strings with Doriet Anthony Dwyer, soloist; Stravinsky's "Orpheus"; Mozart's "Prague" Symphony, K-504.

July 9, Thor Johnson, conductor: Handel's Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12; Haydn's Symphonie Concertante with Oboe, Bassoon; violin and 'cello; Hindemith's "Der Schwanendreher"; Haydn's Symphony in B Flat, No. 98 with viola solo by Joseph DePasquale.

July 10, Charles Munch, conductor: Bach's Mass in B Minor, with Harvard Glee Club and Radcliff Choral Society, and soloists.

PAUL DECKER'S PAINTINGS SEEN AT TANGLEWOOD

Sp. Union 7/4/55

Fridricks Milts' Works at Corner House; Thomas Blagden's at Library

By WAYNE C. SMITH

Lenox, July 3—With the opening of the season at Tanglewood today, visitors and students are being provided the opportunity of seeing exhibitions of paintings around town which are really worthwhile.

Paul Decker's Works

Handy at the main gate of Tanglewood there is being presented in the reception hall for the first week of the season an exhibition of paintings by Paul E. Decker of Canaan, Conn., which has been arranged by Stuart Henry, director of the Berkshire Museum in Pittsfield. Mr. Henry also is providing weekly exhibitions for the rest of the season.

Included in this exhibition is a water color, "Clayton Barns," which seems to have an afinity to the art of the Japanese with the somewhat two-dimensional and simplified treatment of the barns and their obtuse forms and "After Carol," which through virtuosic technique, has aptly captured the power and movement of a hurricane.

Also, "Boy on the Beach" in a romantic realism vein, which has been created with an interesting technique in which rough, nobby paper seems to have been used and the paint scraped off the high portion so that the paper underneath shows as flecks of brown, and "Hilltop Barn" in which the outlines of the objects have a fuzzy, velvety quality.

B Globe 7/3

Berkshire Festival Begins This Week

Symphony, choral and chamber music comes again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by Music Director Charles Munch. For the 16th Summer since the Boston Symphony Orchestra has participated, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 6 to Aug. 14.

The Festival will begin Wednesday evening with an all-Beethoven program by the Kroll String Quartet. Friday evening, Charles Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in a program of Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart, with the Orchestra's first flutist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, as soloist.

The Saturday evening chamber orchestra concert of Handel, Haydn and Hindemith, with the Boston Symphony Orchestra's first violist, Joesph de Pasquale, as soloist, will be conducted by Thor Johnson, of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, who was a student of conducting in 1940 and 1941 at Tanglewood's Berkshire Music Center.

Sunday afternoon, July 10, Charles Munch will present Bach's Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and the following soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

Telegram-News (e)
LYNN, Mass.
Democrat
Circ. 21,071

JUL 1 1955

Miss Milhendler Chorus Leader At Berkshire Center

047

Miss Adele Milhendler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Milhendler, 85 Landon Circle, will be a chorus leader at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood this Summer, working under the leadership of Hugh Ross, noted choral director. Miss Milhendler, is one of 72 non-orchestral music students to be awarded a scholarship at the world famous music center.

The well-known soprano has for the past two years been living in New York City, where she has appeared on radio, in concert and opera. After the Tanglewood season is completed, Miss Milhendler plans to visit her family in Lynn.

Newtown Bee
7/1/55

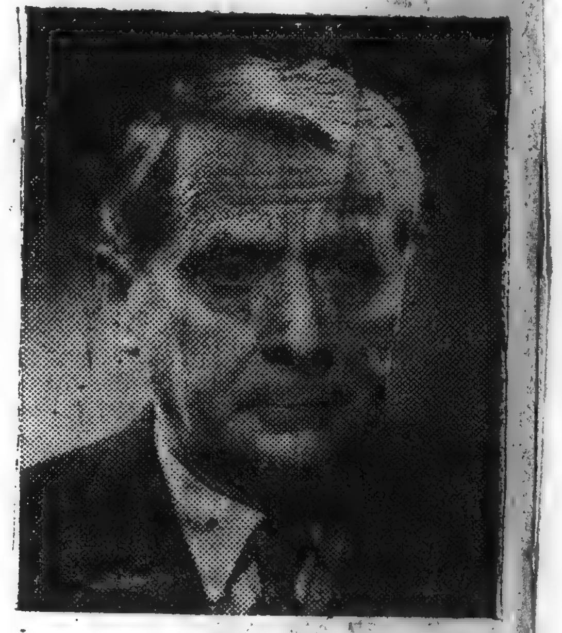
SIXTEEN

Berkshire Festival To Begin Wednesday

Chamber Music Concert Is First of 24 Events

The 1955 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts, held at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will commence on Wednesday evening, July 6, with an all Beethoven program by the Kroll String Quartet. They will play the Quartets C Minor, Opus 18, No. 4; F Minor, Opus 95; and C Sharp Minor, Opus 131.

On Friday evening, July 8, Charles Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in a program of Bach, Stravinsky, and Mozart, with the orchestra's first flutist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, as soloist. The renditions will be Bach's "Sinfonia" from the "Easter Oratorio" and his "Suite No. 2, for Flute and Strings"; Stravinsky's "Orpheus", and Mozart's "Prague" Symphony.



Charles Munch

The Saturday evening, July 9, chamber concert of Handel, Haydn and Hindemith, with Boston Symphony Orchestra's first violinist, Joseph De Pasquale, as soloist, will have at its helm Thor Johnsen, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra. The program will include Handel's Concerto Grosso, Opus 6, No. 12; Haydn's "Symphonie Concertante", with oboe and bassoon; Hindemith's "Der Schwanendreher", and Haydn's Symphony in B Flat, No. 98.

Charles Munch will lead the chamber orchestra in Bach's Mass in B Minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, on Sunday afternoon, July 10, Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass, will be soloists.

Berkshire Festival Opening This Week

B. Sunday Post 7/3/55

By TUCKER KEISER

As soon as the Berkshire Festival opens, the Boston Symphony gets down to the serious business of music making at once. Students arrive today to study at the Music Center, the Kroll Quartet gives the first concert Wednesday night, and a pocket edition of the B.S.O., made up primarily of first chair members who teach in the school, performs its first concert Friday evening in the theatre.

Three performances during the first and second week ends and held in the smaller, rustic theatre is commonly called "Bach-Mozart" concerts, although by no means devoted exclusively to Bach and Mozart. These chamber orchestra events draw increasingly larger crowds each year so that they would undoubtedly be scheduled for the vaster Shed were it not aesthetically necessary to preserve the intimate feeling provided by the smalled auditorium. The smallest audience I have seen there would pack Symphony Hall.

In addition to 18 appearances of the full Symphony there will be 25 student performances and six Wednesday evenings of chamber music. The Wednesday evening musicales include such favorites as the Kroll String Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio, Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin, Rudolf Serkin and Gregor Piatigorsky.

Student performances will include orchestral concerts under the direction of Leonard Bernstein, operatic scenes and premieres under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, and the chorus under the baton of Hugh Ross.

World Premiere

In the operatic department, Mr. Goldovsky never fails to provide considerable excitement. Louis Mennini's new opera, "The Rope," based on a one-act play by Eugene O'Neill, will receive its world premiere. The opera was the first tangible result of a new commissioning plan of the Koussevitsky Music Foundation, and was begun at Tanglewood in the summer of 1953 when the composer was in residence. Mr. Mennini worked in close collaboration with Mr. Goldovsky and other experts from choice of text and arrangement of libretto to scoring and scenic investiture.

On the same program, August 8 and 9, Mozart's "Zaide" (K. 344) will receive its first American performance. This version of a work left unfinished by the composer was prepared by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell.

Other operatic offerings include "Romeo and Juliet" by Boris Blacher, who will teach composition at Tanglewood this summer, "L'Abandon d'Ariane" by Darius Milhaud, and scenes from Berlioz' "The Trojans".

The choice of a Beethoven Festival is a somewhat peculiar one for Mr. Munch, whose forays into the domain of this great composer have been something less than felicitous. However, it is a very realistic approach to the solution of a pressing financial problem.

Ever since the Shed was built there has been a large dead spot in the centre, where, unfortunately, the most generous donors to the Bershire Centre have their seats. Both sides, far front, and far back are good listening areas, but this central area is in the acoustical doldrums, unstirred by the aural agitation all about.

This year, at considerable expense, improvements have been made and Mr. Munch scheduled major Beethoven works to help defray that expense. Beethoven is a top box-office draw and the gate receipts should be the greatest yet at Tanglewood, assuming, of course, that the weatherman doesn't wetblanket all the enthusiasm.

At the last count, over two weeks ago, subscriptions already exceeds those of 1954, which set all-time high.

WEDNESDAY

Tanglewood Theatre, Lenox, Mass. Kroll String Quartet, 8:30 p. m.

* * *

THURSDAY

Gardner Museum, Antonia Dalapas, soprano, Kenneth [illegible], pianist, Dolores Rodriguez, accompanist. 2:45 p. m. Free.

* * *

FRIDAY

Castle Hill, Ipswich. American Jazz Festival with Louis Armstrong. 8:30 p. m.

Tanglewood Theatre, Lenox, Mass. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Bach—Sinfonia from "Easter" Cantata and Suite No. 2, Stravinsky—"Orpheus," Mozart—"Prague" Symphony. 8:30 p. m.

* * *

SATURDAY

Gardner Museum, Edward Munro, tenor, Arlene Gerstenberger, pianist, Dolores Rodrigues, accompanist. 2:45 p. m. Free.

Castle Hill, Ipswich. Program same as Friday, 8:30 p. m.

Tanglewood Theatre, Lenox, Mass. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Thor Johnson conducting. Handel—Concerto Grosso, op. 6, no. 12, Haydn—Symphonie Concertaute and Symphony in B flat No. 98, Hindemith — "Der Schwahendreher." Joseph De Pasquale, viola soloist. 8:30 p. m.

Meetinghouse, Old Sturbridge Village, "Old Sturbridge Chamber Music Players" in program of 18th century music; 8:30 p. m.

* * *

SUNDAY

Gardner Museum, David Collyer, bass-baritone. 2:00 p. m. Free.

Tanglewood Theatre, Lenox, Mass. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Bach—Mass in B minor. Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Chorel Society with Adele Addison, soprano, Florence Kopleff, alto, John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. 2:30 p. m.

Munch Here To Open Season; Tanglewood Exercises Sunday

TANGLEWOOD—Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, arrived in New York today by Air France from his home in Paris, and drove to Lenox this afternoon, to his summer residence.

Mr. Munch will immediately prepare for his summer duties as conductor of the Berkshire Festival. This year marks his fifth summer at Tanglewood, and as director of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in connection with the Festival.

First Concert July 8

Mr. Munch will give his first concert Friday, July 8, with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood at 8:30 p.m., a program of Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart, with Doriot Anthony Dwyer, the Boston Symphony's first flutist, or soloist.

On Sunday afternoon, July 10, his program with the chamber orchestra is the Bach Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass. The Saturday evening July 9 [illegible]ival concert, works by Handel, [illegible]aydn and Hindemith, with Boston Symphony first violist Joseph de Pasquale as soloist, will be conducted by Thor Johnson, music director of the Cincinnati Symphony, and a former student of conducting at the Berkshire Music Center.

75th Anniversary

Following the conclusion of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 74th season May 1, Mr. Munch remained in Boston to record with the orchestra, then returned to Europe for his between-seasons vacation. On account of his heavy schedule in the U.S. during the coming season, the orchestra's 75th anniversary, the conductor has spent two months abroad, accepting no engagements during this period. In France he visited his family in Strasbourg, spent some time at his own home in Paris, but for the most part vacationed on the Riviera. There was a five-day interruption of this vacation at the beginning of June, when he made a flying visit to the U.S. to receive the honorary degree of doctor of music from Boston University. Since last summer at Tanglewood, his book, "I Am a Conductor" has been published in the U.S. by Oxford University Press.

To Speak Sunday

Mr. Munch will address opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon at 3:30, when other speakers are expected to be William Cox, chairman of the Society of Friends of the music school; Richard Burgin, acting assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center; Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Center; and George E. Judd, retired manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," composed for the opening of the school in 1940, will be sung by students, Hugh Ross, head of the choral department, conducting. Tea will be served in the formal gardens. Two trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, C. D. Jackson and Henry B. Cabot, will be present.

During the summer more than 25 concerts and demonstrations will be given by students in the school's five departments: Symphony orchestra and chamber music, composition, chorus, opera, and Tanglewood Study Group.

Student Concert Thursday

The first student concert will be held Thursday at 8:30 p.m. in the Music Shed, when the symphony orchestra of 100 students of Department I under Leonard Bernstein's tutelage, will perform Cop-

land's bussy Prok
and with latter first dent be he Sund publi stude tions
the B

Eagle 7/1/55

The musical director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, arrives in New York by plane from his vacation in Paris, to assume his duties as head of the Berkshire Music Center which opens in Lenox Sunday.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 18,826

JUL 5 1955

Charles Munch Opens Tanglewood School; Hopes for Blessing

Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, hopes that the 1955 Tanglewood festival "here in the beautiful Berkshire hills will be a blessing that may unite all—those who make music and those who listen to it—in a noble and fervent communion."

Expresses Hope

He expressed that hope in an address opening the Berkshire Music center, the school for advanced students of music at Tanglewood, Sunday afternoon.

The 405 students and several hundred members of the Friends of the Music Center, contributors to its support, were present for the opening exercises in the theater-concert hall.

William Cox, chairman of the Friends, also addressed the group, while Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony and acting assistant director of the center, and Boris Blacher, director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin, who will be guest composer in residence at the center this season, were introduced. The exercises closed with the traditional singing by the student body of Randall Thompson's "Alleluia, written especially for the Music center.

Among 405 Enrolled

Miss Christine Cardillo, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Cardillo of 149 Pleasant street, and Robert Ceeley of Williamstown are among the 405 enrolled in the school.

Miss Cardillo, winner last year of a Metropolitan Auditions of the Air scholarship, will study drama in the opera department. Mr. Ceeley will study composition.

Marcia Henderson, stage, screen, television and radio star who appeared last week in the opening play of the summer theater in her native Williamstown, was among the guests at Tanglewood Sunday. Her visit gave her the opportunity to realize an ambition of many years to meet Dr. Munch to whom she was presented. She said she had never forgotten a performance of Ravel's "Bolero" she heard him conduct in New York's Carnegie hall in 1948.

The first concert of the festival scene, a chamber music concert in the theater-concert hall, will be presented tomorrow evening at 8.30, followed by small-orchestra concerts in the same building Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

Tanglewood Tales

Eagle 7/2/55

Perrys at Lake Cottage

Boston Symphony Orchestra manager Thomas D. Perry Jr., with his wife, Helen, and their two sons, Doane and Rodney, have arrived from their home in Hingham, for the summer Berkshire Festival, and have taken a cottage at Lake Mah-kee-nac.

Mr. Perry presided at a breakfast for the 70-odd members of the summer staff at Tanglewood at Wheatleigh, the residence of male students of the Berkshire Music Center, when newcomers were introduced.

* * *

350 Students Arriving

The 350 students arriving at Tanglewood today for opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center's 13th summer session, will be guests of the music school at an informal party this evening at Wheatleigh.

* * *

Heifetz Scholarship Increased to $350

Violinist Jascha Heifetz, who established in 1949 a scholarship awarded annually to the outstanding violinist of the session of the Berkshire Music Center, has written to Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Boston Symphony's summer music school that commencing with 1955 the yearly scholarship will be increased from $250 to $350.

* * *

German Composer On First U.S. Visit

Boris Blacher, the modern German composer who shares the duties of the Berkshire Music Center's Department III with American composer Roger Sessions, during the leave of absence of Aaron Copland this summer, is making his first visit to the U.S. for this assignment. He will make his residence at Chef Karl's in Lenox. Mr. Blacher flew here directly from his home in Berlin, where since 1953 he has been director of the Hochschule fur Musik, having succeeded composer Werner Egk. Mr. Blacher is a prolific composer of opera, his latest, first staged at the Mannheim National Theater in October, 1953, is entitled "Abstrakte Oper Nr. 1" (Abstract Opera Number One), with a phonetic text by Mr. Egk. This work is a new experiment based on the idea that music and invented words can cause certain intended sensations in the listener, transmitting to him ideas such as fear, panic, love, etc. This new and bold work created quite a sensation on its first performance.

* * *

Bernstein Back After Two-Year Absence

Tanglewood will extend a welcome back this week to the eminent young composer-conductor-pianist Leonard Bernstein, who has been away from the Berkshire music campus since August, 1953, on a leave of absence. With his wife, the former Felicia Monteleagre, and their family, Mr. Bernstein has returned to his post as head of students of Department I of the Berkshire Music Center, training orchestra players and teaching conducting for the symphony of 100 students whose Thursday evening concerts attract large crowds.

Mr. Bernstein will also make two important appearances as conductor of Festival programs, the first an all-Mozart concert on Friday, July 15, with Jennie Tourel as soloist, Mr. Bernstein doubling as pianist in the Concerto in G major; the second, the Beethoven "Missa Solemnis" in memory of the Boston Symphony's late conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, under whose tutelage Mr. Bernstein started studies at Tanglewood in the first year (1940) of the Berkshire Music Center.

The season and a half since Tanglewood audiences last saw him has been a busy time for the young musician. Between September, 1953, and January, 1954, he conducted six concerts with the Orquestra Sinfonica Brasleira in Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo; led 22 concerts with the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra in Tel-Aviv, Haifa and Jerusalem; made his debut conducting opera at La Scala in Milan, with his performances of Cherubini's "Medea," starring Maria Callas; conducted concerts in Milan, Rome and Florence.

From March, 1954, he worked intermittently for a year on the composition of his first full-length opera, "Candide," from the French by Voltaire, with book by Lillian Hellman, and lyrics Mr. Bernstein shares with Miss Hellman and John Lattouche, which Ethel Linder Reiner will produce on Broadway next season. Last spring and summer he also wrote his first film music, the score for the Academy Award-winning "On the Waterfront," which also won awards for its star, Marlon Brando, and its director, Elia Kazan.

[111]

Berkshire Festival Opening This Week

B. Sunday Post 7/3/55

By TUCKER KEISER

As soon as the Berkshire Festival opens, the Boston Symphony gets down to the serious business of music making at once. Students arrive today to study at the Music Center, the Kroll Quartet gives the first concert Wednesday night, and a pocket edition of the B.S.O., made up primarily of first chair members who teach in the school, performs its first concert Friday evening in the theatre.

Three performances during the first and second week ends and held in the smaller, rustic theatre is commonly called "Bach-Mozart" concerts, although by no means devoted exclusively to Bach and Mozart. These chamber orchestra events draw increasingly larger crowds each year so that they would undoubtedly be scheduled for the vaster Shed were it not aesthetically necessary to preserve the intimate feeling provided by the smalled auditorium. The smallest audience I have seen there would pack Symphony Hall.

In addition to 18 appearances of the full Symphony there will be 25 student performances and six Wednesday evenings of chamber music. The Wednesday evening musicales include such favorites as the Kroll String Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio, Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin, Rudolf Serkin and Gregor Piatigorsky.

Student performances will include orchestral concerts under the direction of Leonard Bernstein, operatic scenes and premieres under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, and the chorus under the baton of Hugh Ross.

World Premiere

In the operatic department, Mr. Goldovsky never fails to provide considerable excitement. Louis Mennini's new opera, "The Rope," based on a one-act play by Eugene O'Neill, will receive its world premiere. The opera was the first tangible result of a new commissioning plan of the Koussevitsky Music Foundation, and was begun at Tanglewood in the summer of 1953 when the composer was in residence. Mr. Mennini worked in close collaboration with Mr. Goldovsky and other experts from choice of text and arrangement of libretto to scoring and scenic investiture.

On the same program, August 8 and 9, Mozart's "Zaide" (K. 344) will receive its first American performance. This version of a work left unfinished by the composer was prepared by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell.

Other operatic offerings include "Romeo and Juliet" by Boris Blacher, who will teach composition at Tanglewood this summer, "L'Abandon d'Ariane" by Darius Milhaud, and scenes from Berlioz' "The Trojans".

The choice of a Beethoven Festival is a somewhat peculiar one for Mr. Munch, whose forays into the domain of this great composer have been something less than felicitous. However, it is a very realistic approach to the solution of a pressing financial problem.

Ever since the Shed was built there has been a large dead spot in the centre, where, unfortunately, the most generous donors to the Bershire Centre have their seats. Both sides, far front, and far back are good listening areas, but this central area is in the acoustical doldrums, unstirred by the aural agitation all about.

This year, at considerable expense, improvements have been made and Mr. Munch scheduled major Beethoven works to help defray that expense. Beethoven is a top box-office draw and the gate receipts should be the greatest yet at Tanglewood, assuming, of course, that the weatherman doesn't wetblanket all the enthusiasm.

At the last count, over two weeks ago, subscriptions already exceeds those of 1954, which set all-time high.

WEDNESDAY

Tanglewood Theatre, Lenox, Mass. Kroll String Quartet, 8:30 p. m.

* * *

THURSDAY

Gardner Museum, Antonia Delapas, soprano, Kenneth Manzer, pianist Dolores Rodriguez, accompanist, 2:45 p. m. Free.

* * *

FRIDAY

Castle Hill., Ipswich, American Jazz Festival with Louis Armstrong. 8:30 p. m.

Tanglewood Theatre, Lenox, Mass. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Bach—Sinfonia from "Easter" Cantata and Suite No. 2, Stravinsky—"Orpheus," Mozart—"Prague" Symphony. 8:30 p. m.

* * *

SATURDAY

Gardner Museum, Edward Munro, tenor, Arlene Gerstenberger, pianist, Dolores Rodriguez, accompanist. 2:45 p. m. Free.

Castle Hill, Ipswich. Program same as Friday. 8:30 p. m.

Tanglewood Theatre, Lenox Mass. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Thor Johnson conducting. Handel—Concerto Grosso, op. 6, no. 12, Haydn—Symphonie Concertante and Symphony in B flat No. 98. Hindemith — "Der Schwanendreher." Joseph De Pasquale, viola soloist. 8:30 p. m.

Meetinghouse, Old Sturbridge Village, "Old Sturbridge Chamber Music Players" in program of 18th century music; 8:30 p. m.

* * *

SUNDAY

Gardner Museum, David Collyer, bass-baritone. 2:00 p. m. Free.

Tanglewood Theatre, Lenox, Mass. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Bach—Mass in B minor. Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Chorel Society with Adele Addison, soprano, Florence Kopleff, alto, John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. 2:30 p. m.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326

JUL 5 1955

Charles Munch Opens Tanglewood School; Hopes for Blessing

Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, hopes that the 1955 Tanglewood festival "here in the beautiful Berkshire hills will be a blessing that may unite all—those who make music and those who listen to it—in a noble and fervent communion."

Expresses Hope

He expressed that hope in an address opening the Berkshire Music center, the school for advanced students of music at Tanglewood, Sunday afternoon.

The 405 students and several hundred members of the Friends of the Music Center, contributors to its support, were present for the opening exercises in the theater-concert hall.

William Cox, chairman of the Friends, also addressed the group, while Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony and acting assistant director of the center, and Sporting Goods, 40 Marshall St. Sole Northern Berkshire dealer.

IMMEDIATE DELIVERY on Johnson Sea Horse outboard motors. All models. Also Yellow Jacket boats. C. W. Dydowicz, Maple Grove Marine Sales, Leonard St. Tel. 1308-M Adams.

MERCURY "MARK 20" OUTBOARD MOTOR—Like new. Inquire SSS Trailer Park, Mohawk Trail.

Wearing Apparel—63

A. L. POCIASK CO. is having a sale on Misses' Coats, Toppers and Suits. Sizes 7-44. 93 Summer St., Adams, Mass.

Wanted to Buy—64

A CALL PAYS CASH — All kinds of junk. Call Morris Alpert, North Adams Junk. Dial 3-3185.

SELL ME marble top furniture, picture frames, cut glass, jewelry and scrap gold. Antiques of any

---

Munch Here To Open Season; Tanglewood Exercises Sunday

TANGLEWOOD—Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, arrived in New York today by Air France from his home in Paris, and drove to Lenox this afternoon, to his summer residence.

Mr. Munch will immediately prepare for his summer duties as conductor of the Berkshire Festival. This year marks his fifth summer at Tanglewood, and as director of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in connection with the Festival.

First Concert July 8

Mr. Munch will give his first concert Friday, July 8, with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood at 8:30 p.m., a program of Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart, with Doriot Anthony Dwyer, the Boston Symphony's first flutist, or soloist.

On Sunday afternoon, July 10, his program with the chamber orchestra is the Bach Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass. The Saturday evening July 9 festival concert, works by Handel, Haydn and Hindemith, with Boston Symphony first violist Joseph de Pasquale as soloist, will be conducted by Thor Johnson, music director of the Cincinnati Symphony, and a former student of conducting at the Berkshire Music Center.

75th Anniversary

Following the conclusion of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 74th season May 1, Mr. Munch remained in Boston to record with the orchestra, then returned to Europe for his between-seasons vacation. On account of his heavy schedule in the U.S. during the coming season, the orchestra's 75th anniversary, the conductor has spent two months abroad, accepting no engagements during this period. In France he visited his family in Strasbourg, spent some time at his own home in Paris, but for the most part vacationed on the Riviera. There was a five-day interruption of this vacation at the beginning of June, when he made a flying visit to the U.S. to receive the honorary degree of doctor of music from Boston University. Since last summer at Tanglewood, his book, "I Am a Conductor" has been published in the U.S. by Oxford University Press.

To Speak Sunday

Mr. Munch will address opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon at 3:30, when other speakers are expected to be William Cox, chairman of the Society of Friends of the music school; Richard Burgin, acting assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center; Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Center; and George E. Judd, retired manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," composed for the opening of the school in 1940, will be sung by students, Hugh Ross, head of the choral department, conducting. Tea will be served in the formal gardens. Two trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, C. D. Jackson and Henry B. Cabot, will be present.

During the summer more than 25 concerts and demonstrations will be given by students in the school's five departments: Symphony orchestra and chamber music, composition, chorus, opera, and Tanglewood Study Group.

Student Concert Thursday

The first student concert will be held Thursday at 8:30 p.m. in the Music Shed, when the symphony orchestra of 100 students of Department I under Leonard Bernstein's tutelage, will perform Copland's "Outdoor Overture," Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun," Prokofieff's "Peter and the Wolf," and Dvorak's Symphony No. 2, with Mr. Bernstein conducting the latter, and student conductors the first three selections. The first student chamber music concert will be held in the Chamber Music Hall Sunday, July 10, at 10 a.m. The public may attend these and other student concerts through contributions to the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Eagle 7/1/55

The musical director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, arrives in New York by plane from his vacation in Paris, to assume his duties as head of the Berkshire Music Center which opens in Lenox Sunday.

Tanglewood Tales

Eagle 7/1/55

Perrys at Lake Cottage

Boston Symphony Orchestra manager Thomas D. Perry Jr., with his wife, Helen, and their two sons, Doane and Rodney, have arrived from their home in Hingham, for the summer Berkshire Festival, and have taken a cottage at Lake Mah-kee-nac.

Mr. Perry presided at a breakfast for the 70-odd members of the summer staff at Tanglewood at Wheatleigh, the residence of male students of the Berkshire Music Center, when newcomers were introduced.

* * *

350 Students Arriving

The 350 students arriving at Tanglewood today for opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center's 13th summer session, will be guests of the music school at an informal party this evening at Wheatleigh.

* * *

Heifetz Scholarship Increased to $350

Violinist Jascha Heifetz, who established in 1949 a scholarship awarded annually to the outstanding violinist of the session of the Berkshire Music Center, has written to Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Boston Symphony's summer music school that commencing with 1955 the yearly scholarship will be increased from $250 to $350.

* * *

German Composer On First U.S. Visit

Boris Blacher, the modern German composer who shares the duties of the Berkshire Music Center's Department III with American composer Roger Sessions, during the leave of absence of Aaron Copland this summer, is making his first visit to the U.S. for this assignment. He will make his residence at Chef Karl's in Lenox. Mr. Blacher flew here directly from his home in Berlin, where since 1953 he has been director of the Hochschule fur Musik, having succeeded composer Werner Egk. Mr. Blacher is a prolific composer of opera, his latest, first staged at the Mannheim National Theater in October, 1953, is entitled "Abstrakte Oper Nr. 1" (Abstract Opera Number One), with a phonetic text by Mr. Egk. This work is a new experiment based on the idea that music and invented words can cause certain intended sensations in the listener, transmitting to him ideas such as fear, panic, love, etc. This new and bold work created quite a sensation on its first performance.

* * *

Bernstein Back After Two-Year Absence

Tanglewood will extend a welcome back this week to the eminent young composer-conductor-pianist Leonard Bernstein, who has been away from the Berkshire music campus since August, 1953, on a leave of absence. With his wife, the former Felicia Monteleagre, and their family, Mr. Bernstein has returned to his post as head of students of Department I of the Berkshire Music Center, training orchestra players and teaching conducting for the symphony of 100 students whose Thursday evening concerts attract large crowds.

Mr. Bernstein will also make two important appearances as conductor of Festival programs, the first an all-Mozart concert on Friday, July 15, with Jennie Tourel as soloist, Mr. Bernstein doubling as pianist in the Concerto in G major; the second, the Beethoven "Missa Solemnis" in memory of the Boston Symphony's late conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, under whose tutelage Mr. Bernstein started studies at Tanglewood in the first year (1940) of the Berkshire Music Center.

The season and a half since Tanglewood audiences last saw him has been a busy time for the young musician. Between September, 1953, and January, 1954, he conducted six concerts with the Orquestra Sinfonica Brasleira in Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo; led 22 concerts with the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra in Tel-Aviv, Haifa and Jerusalem; made his debut conducting opera at La Scala in Milan, with his performances of Cherubini's "Medea," starring Maria Callas; conducted concerts in Milan, Rome and Florence.

From March, 1954, he worked intermittently for a year on the composition of his first full-length opera, "Candide," from the French by Voltaire, with book by Lillian Hellman, and lyrics Mr. Bernstein shares with Miss Hellman and John Lattouche, which Ethel Linder Reiner will produce on Broadway next season. Last spring and summer he also wrote his first film music, the score for the Academy Award-winning "On the Waterfront," which also won awards for its star, Marlon Brando, and its director, Elia Kazan.

THE NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, JULY 3, 1955.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL BEGINS CONCERT HALL SERIES

Clemens Kalischer

Charles Munch rehearses a reduced Boston Symphony for the first week-end of concerts at Tanglewood next Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

THE SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., MONDAY, JULY 4, 1955

Tanglewood Greets Munch; Hears Praise of Beethoven

Conductor Hopes for 'Fervent Communion' of Musicians, Listeners at 18th Festival; Rockefeller Foundation Aid Announced

Lenox, July 3 — Moved by the tumultuous applause and warm reception that made his appearance at the opening exercises of the 13th season of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood a triumphant return, Charles Munch — the world famous conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra — gave a moving explanation of the principal reason behind the decision to feature the works of Beethoven during the Berkshire Festival's 18th season.

"Elevating, Enabling"

Describing Beethoven's music as something that expresses everything a human can feel, the director of the music center said the famed composer expresses both happiness and suffering in his works. Dr. Munch added that "Beethoven's music is both elevating and enabling — such that it will forever be as necessary to those who love music as faith is necessary to the lovers of Christ."

Enraptured with the Beethoven theme, Dr. Munch told students and guests that it is the message of Beethoven that gives to Schiller's words "Bruder, uber, sternenzelt; muss lin lieber vater wohnen" — a significance that resounds throughout the entire world.

In closing his address, the conductor, just returned from his native France, stated, "I hope with all my heart that our festival here in the beautiful Berkshire Hills, under this guidance, will be a blessing that may unite all — those who make music and those who listen to it — in a noble and fervent communion."

Composer Present

Introduced to the group in the theater-concert hall was Boris Blacher, noted European composer of Russian birth who has long resided in Germany. Now director of the Hochschule Fur Musik in Berlin, he will be the guest composer in residence at the Berkshire Music Center this season.

Richard Burgin, popular concert master of the Boston Symphony, was introduced as the acting assistant director of the center in the absence of Aaron Copeland who is in Europe this summer on his first free season since the opening of the school on the Tanglewood grounds.

William Cox, chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, who succeeds his father-in-law, Lewis Perry, resigned after 12 years of fruitful endeavor, explained that the Rockefeller Foundation has announced it will match all gifts in excess of $15,000 for the next five years with a ceiling to the grant of $125,000. Thus with $18,000 raised already this season every dollar contributed by friends both old and new will be matched by the Foundation.

Closing the exercises in traditional style was the rendering of Randall Thompson's "Alleluia" by the 400-voice student chorus under the direction of Hugh Ross. This was a masterwork by the choral director of the center who benefited from but a single rehearsal before the program began Carried through the stately pines of Tanglewood by the gentle Berkshire breeze, the music echoed over the waters of Lake Mak-en-nac to thrill the hundreds of visitors on the grounds today.

Stars Meet

With each succeeding year new appearances in the student body of the music center point to the esteem with which Tanglewood is held the world over. And this summer is no different from previous ones. No less a personage in the music world than Jan Sibelius' own nominee for a scholarship is enrolled — a composer protege from Finland.

Of the 405 students in attendance 372 represent every state in the country, 33 are from Canada, and 18 foreign nations are represented.

Area Represented

Topping the list of Western Massachusetts enrollees at the center for advanced study is Miss Cristine Cardillo of North Adams, rising young soprano who a few years ago won the Metropolitan Auditions of the Air and last summer was featured at the Central City Opera Center in Colorado. She is studying drama in the opera department.

Others from the opera are Stephen Harbachick and Barbara Jasmin of Springfield — both enrolled in the opera department; Max Watras of Chicopee, studying the clarinet; Robert Ceeley of Williamstown, composition; and Marjorie Kember of Pittsfield, audition in the opera department and Jayn Frances Rosenfeld, of Pittsfield, enrolled in the study group.

A star in her own right — Marcia Henderson of Hollywood and television fame and a native of Williamstown — is taking the opportunity of making her initial visit to Tanglewood today and met for the first time the "star" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra who has thrilled her with his performances of Ravel's Bolero. She last saw him conduct in Carnegie Hall in New York as a guest conductor back in 1948 and since then has awaited meeting him. The chance came this afternoon in her own native county of Berkshire, now the summer home of Dr. Munch.

Berkshire Summer Calendar

Music, From Classic to Jazz, Summer Theaters and the Dance

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday
July 3 Music Mountain 4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Assisting artist, Bruce Simonds, pianist. Quartet, in C Major — Haydn Piano Quartet in C Major — Faure E Minor Quartet — Mendelssohn Music Inn 8:30—City and Country Blues, Jimmy Rushing, Myra Johnson, Sammy Price, Brownie McGee, Sonny Terry. Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse 7:00—"Time Out for Ginger"	July 4 Berkshire Playhouse 8:45—Paul Hartman in "The Remarkable Mr. Pennypacker," with Eleanor Wilson, Margaret Hamilton, Gaye Jordan, William Swan.	July 5 Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"Light Up the Sky" Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"Time Out for Ginger" (second week) Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	July 6 Tanglewood 8:30—Chamber Music, Theater-Concert Hall Kroll String Quartet String quartets — Beethoven C minor, Op. 18, No. 4 F minor, Op. 95 C sharp minor, Op. 131 Jacob's Pillow 9:00—Dancers of the Royal Danish Ballet Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.
July 10 Tanglewood 10:00—Department 1 (Friends) 2:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Conductor: Charles Munch Mass in B Minor — Bach (With Harvard Glee Club, Radcliffe Choral Society and soloists) Music Mountain 4:00—Berkshire Quartet Music Inn 8:30—Modern Jazz Workshop: Art Farmer Quartet Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00.	July 11 Tanglewood 8:30—Sedgwick Hall, Lenox. (Friends) Forum Berkshire Playhouse 8:45—"Sabrina Fair," with Gaye Jordan, William Roerick, Amy Douglass, Margaret Hamilton.	July 12 Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"Gigi" Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"Gigi" Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	July 13 Tanglewood 8:30—Chamber Music, Theater-Concert Hall Beaux Arts Trio Trios — Beethoven C minor, Op. 1, No. 3 D major, Op. 70, No. 1 ("Ghost") B flat, Op. 97 ("Archduke") Jacob's Pillow 9:00—Dancers of the Royal Danish Ballet Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater.
July 17 Tanglewood 10:00—Chamber Music Hall. Dept. 1 Chamber Music. (Friends) 4:00—Theater-Concert Hall. Conductor: Charles Munch. French Music Suite from "Dardanus" — Rameau Suite from "Pelleas et Melisande" — Faure Pavane — Faure Symphony No. 4 — Honegger 8:30—Chamber Music Hall. Dept. 3 Composers' Forum. (Friends) Music Mountain 4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Music Inn 8:30—Modern Jazz Workshop: Dizzy Gillespie Quintet. Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00.	July 18 Tanglewood 8:30—Sedgwick Hall, Lenox. Forum Berkshire Playhouse 8:45—Francesca Bruning and Eleanor Wilson in "The Old Maid."	July 19 Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"The Crucible" Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"The Fifth Season" Tanglewood 8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Dept. 2 Chorus, Small Choir. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	July 20 Tanglewood 8:30—Chamber Music, Theater-Concert Hall Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin Beethoven Violin Sonatas No. 2 in A major, Op. 12, No. 2 No. 5 in F major, Op. 24 ("Spring") No. 7 in C minor, Op. 30, No. 2 Jacob's Pillow 9:00—Mary Ellen Moylan and Erik Bruhn in classic ballet pas de deux. Myra Kinch, modern dancer, in solos. Jean Leon Destiné & Company in dances of Haiti. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.
July 24 Tanglewood 10:00—Chamber Music Hall. Department 1. (Friends) 2:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Charles Munch. Beethoven Symphony No. 1 in C major Symphony No 4 in B flat Symphony No. 6 ("Pastorale") 8:30—Chamber Music Hall. Dept. 3 Composers' Forum. (Friends) Music Mountain 4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Music Inn 8:30—Modern Jazz Workshop: Thelonius Monk Quartet. Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00	July 25 Tanglewood 8:30—Sedgwick Hall, Lenox. Forum. Berkshire Playhouse 8:45—"Reclining Figure," with Paul Lipson, John W. Austin, Martha Orrick, William Swan.	July 26 Tanglewood 8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Dept. 4 Opera Scenes. (Friends) Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"Picnic" Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"The Caine Mutiny Court Martial" Jacob's Pillow 9:00—Alicia Alonso and Erik Bruhn and leading dancers of Royal Danish Ballet. (New program) Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	July 27 Tanglewood 8:30—Chamber Music. Theater-Concert Hall. New Music String Quartet. Beethoven String Quartets. G major, Op. 18, No. 2 E flat major, Op. 127 A minor, Op. 132 Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.
July 31 Tanglewood 10:00—Chamber Music Hall, Dept. 1 Chamber Music. (Friends) 2:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Pierre Monteux. Soloists, Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky. Brahms Academic Festival Overture Concerto for Violin and Cello Symphony No. 1 in C minor 8:30—Chamber Music Hall. Dept. 3. Composers' Forum. (Friends) Music Mountain 4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Music Inn 8:30—Modern Jazz Workshop: Teddy Charles Quartet. Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00.	August 1 Tanglewood 8:30—Theater - Concert Hall. Depts. 2 and 4. Concert of Chorus and Opera. (Friends. Special tickets required) Berkshire Playhouse 8:45—"Edward My Son"	August 2 Tanglewood 8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Dept. 4 Opera Scenes. (Friends) Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"Tovarich." Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"The Caine Mutiny Court Martial." (Second week) Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	August 3 Tanglewood 8:30—Chamber Music. Theater-Concert Hall. Rudolf Serkin. Beethoven Piano Sonatas F major, Op. 10, No. 2 D major, Op. 10, No. 3 A minor, Op. 106 ("Hammerklavier") Jacob's Pillow 9:00—Mia Slavenska and Adreano Vitale, ballet pas de deux. Birgit Akesson, Swedish dancer. East Coast debut. The Dance Drama Company (Emily Frankel and Mark Ryder). New dance group works by Bolender and Maslov. Josefina Garcia, dances of Latin America. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.
August 7 Tanglewood 10:00—Chamber Music Hall. (Friends) 2:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Charles Munch. Soloist: Eugene Istomin. Beethoven Symphony No. 8 in F major Piano Concerto No. 4 in G major Symphony No. 5 in C minor Music Mountain 4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Music Inn 8:30—Modern Jazz Workshop: Modern Jazz Quartet Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00.	August 8 Music Inn 8:30—Modern Jazz Workshop: Modern Jazz Quartet. Tanglewood 8:30—Theater - Concert Hall. Dept. 4 Opera. Including premiere of Mennini's "The Rope." (Friends. Special tickets required) Berkshire Playhouse 8:45—To Be Announced.	August 9 Tanglewood 8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Dept. 4 Opera. Including Mennini's "The Rope." (Friends. Special tickets required) Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"The Late George Apley" Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"Here We Come Gathering" Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	August 10 Tanglewood 8:30—Chamber Music. Theater-Concert Hall. Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz. Beethoven The Cello Sonatas F major, Op. 5, No. 1 G minor, Op. 5, No. 2 A major, Op. 69 C major, Op. 102, No. 1 D major, Op. 102, No. 2 Jacob's Pillow 9:00—Alexandra Danilova and partner, classic ballet pas de deux. Myra Kinch & Company in modern dance group works including "Giselle's Revenge" and "Angels of Puno." Priyagopal in Manipuri dances from India. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.
August 14 Tanglewood 10:00—Theater-Concert Hall. Dept. 1 Chamber Music. (Friends) 2:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Charles Munch. Beethoven Overture, "Leonore," No. 3 Symphony No. 9 in D minor (With chorus and soloists: Adele Addison, Catherine Akos, David Lloyd, Donald Gramm) Music Mountain 4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00.	August 15 Berkshire Playhouse 8:45—"Shadow and Substance." Shepperd Strudwick and Deirdre Owens.	August 16 Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—To Be Announced. Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"Sabrina Fair" Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	August 17 Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.

[114]

NOTE: For an event listed under "Continuing," follow the week's schedule back to the nearest complete program, which will be under a head printed in This Type.

HOW TO GET THERE: TANGLEWOOD, on Route 183 between Stockbridge (via Routes 102 and 183) and Lenox (via Route 183 from center of town); SOUTH MOUNTAIN, on Route 7 just south of Pittsfield; MUSIC MOUNTAIN, off Route 7 in Falls Village, Conn.; BERKSHIRE PLAYHOUSE, off Route 7 on Route 102 near center of Stockbridge; MALDEN BRIDGE PLAYHOUSE, on Route 66 between Chatham and Pittsfield-Albany Road (Route 20); WILLIAMSTOWN SUMMER THEATER, on Main Street in Williamstown; MUSIC INN, southeast of Tanglewood between Routes 7 and 183.

Thursday	Friday	Saturday
July 7 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Dept. 1 Orchestra (Friends) Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	July 8 Tanglewood 8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Conductor: Charles Munch Sinfonia from "Easter" Cantata (No. 249) Bach Suite No. 2 for Flute and Strings Bach Soloist: Doriot Anthony Dwyer Orpheus Stravinsky "Prague" Symphony Mozart Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	July 9 Tanglewood 8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Conductor: Thor Johnson Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12 Handel Symphonie Concertante with Oboe, Bassoon, Violin and Cello Haydn "Der Schwanendreher" Hindemith Soloist: Joseph de Pasquale Symphony in B flat, No. 98 Haydn Continuing: Jacobs Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40.
July 14 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Dept. 1 Orchestra (Friends) Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	July 15 Tanglewood 8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Conductor: Leonard Bernstein. Soloist: Jennie Tourel. Mozart Overture to "Don Giovanni" Symphony in C major, "Linz" (K.425) Arias, "Al Desio" (K.577), "Zeffiretti" ("Idomeneo") "Non Temer" ("Idomeneo") Piano Concerto in G major (K.453) Soloist: Leonard Bernstein Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45 Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	July 16 Music Inn 4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet Tanglewood 8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Conductor: Charles Munch Soloist: Samuel Mayes Overture to "Anacreon" Cherubini Concerto for Cello Boccherini Concerto Grosso with Four Violins, Op. 3, No. 10 Vivaldi Gloria Vivaldi (Hugh Ross conducting) Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Theater, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40.
July 21 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Dept. 1 Orchestra. (Friends) Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	July 22 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Conductor: Charles Munch. Soloist: Isaac Stern. Beethoven Overture to "Coriolan" Violin Concerto Symphony No. 7 in A major Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	July 23 Tanglewood 10:00—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, public rehearsal. 8:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Pierre Monteux. Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor Bach-Respighi Symphony No. 2 in D major Beethoven Suite from "The Black Maskers" Sessions "Death and Transfiguration" Strauss Music Inn 4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40.
July 28 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Dept. 1 Orchestra. (Friends) Music Inn 8:30—Count Basie Orchestra. Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Theater, 8:40.	July 29 South Mountain 10:00—Young Audiences Concert. New Music String Quartet. Jacob's Pillow 4:00 and 9:00—Alicia Alonso and Erik Bruhn; Merce Cunningham & Company; Mariquita, Spanish dancer, East Coast debut. Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Conductor: Charles Munch. Suite, "Water Music" Handel Symphony No. 4 in D minor Schumann "Prayers of Kierkegaard" Barber (With chorus. Soloist: Leontyne Price) Symphony No. 4 in E minor Brahms Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	July 30 Tanglewood 10:00—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, public rehearsal. 8:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Conductor: Charles Munch. Soloist: Rudolf Serkin. Beethoven Overture to "Egmont" Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor") Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica") South Mountain 4:00—New Music String Quartet. String Quartet Boccherini String Quartet Jerome Rosen String Quartet, Op. 28 Anton von Webern String Quartet in D major Mozart Music Inn 4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40.
August 4 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Dept. 1 Orchestra. (Friends) Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 5 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Koussevitzky Memorial. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Leonard Bernstein. Missa Solemnis Beethoven (With chorus and soloists) Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 6 Tanglewood 10:00—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, public rehearsal. 3:00—Chamber Music Hall. Dept. 3 Composers' Forum. (Friends) 8:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Charles Munch. Soloist: Margaret Harshaw "Fidelio," Act 2 Beethoven Excerpts from "Gotterdammerung" Wagner Siegfried's Rhine Journey Siegfried's Death Music Immolation Scene South Mountain 4:00—Sonata Recital. George Schick, piano. Alexander Schneider Sonata in C major, K.296 Mozart Sonata in A minor, Op. 137, No. 2 Schubert Sonata in B flat, K.378 Mozart Rondo in B minor, Op. 70 Schubert Music Inn 4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet. Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40.
August 11 Tanglewood Tanglewood on Parade. (Program to be announced) Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 12 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Charles Munch. Soloist: Gregor Piatigorsky. Variations on a Theme by Haydn Brahms "Schelomo" for Cello and Orchestra Bloch "La Mer" Debussy "Daphnis and Chloe," Suite 2 Ravel Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 13 South Mountain 4:00—New York Woodwind Quintet. George Schick, piano. Sinfonia Bernard Heiden Allegro and Arioso Ingolf Dahl Quartet No. 4 in B flat G. Rossini Quintet in E flat, K.452 Mozart Quintet Hindemith Music Inn 4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet. Tanglewood 10:00—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Public rehearsal. 3:00—Shed. Dept. 1 Orchestra. (Friends) 8:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Pierre Monteux. Overture to "The Flying Dutchman" Wagner Symphony No. 3 in F major Brahms Three Nocturnes Debussy Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" Staruss Pro Musica Antiqua 8:30—Stockbridge Town Hall. French chansons and English madrigals. Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40.
August 18 Music Inn 8:30—Folk and Jazz Roundtable: Ragtime. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 19 Jacob's Pillow 4:00 and 9:00—Yvonne Patterson, Joan Van Order, Paul Sutherland in works by William Dollar; Iris Mabry, modern dancer; Ivy Kitchell, mime. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 20 South Mountain 4:00—Leontyne Price, soprano. George Schick, piano. Alexander Schneider. String Quintet and three percussions and harpsichord. Chaconne for strings Purcell Chansons Madecasses, for voice, flute, violoncello and piano Ravel Lorca Romanzen Killmayer Salve Regina Scarlatti Pro Musica Antiqua 8:30—Stockbridge Town Hall. Italian early Baroque music. Music Inn 8:30—Folk and Jazz Roundtable: Dixieland. Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.

Music Programs

Stadium Concerts

Stadium Symphony Orchestra of City College, Convent and Amsterdam Aves., 136th and 139th Sts., 8:30

Monday. Conductor, Andre Kostelanetz; soloist, Roberta Peters, soprano. Saturday Night, from "Western Symphony" (first Stadium performance), Kay; Circus, An Overture (first Stadium performance), Toch; Aria, "Caro Nome," from "Rigoletto"; Aria, "Ah! Fors' E Lui," from "Traviata," Verdi; Hudson River (first New York performance), Grofe; L'Apres Midi d'un Faune, Debussy; Wedding Suite, from the Ballet, "The Stone Flower" (first Stadium performance), Prokofieff; Aria, "O Luce di Quest' Anima," from "Linda di Chamounix," Donizetti; Bell Song, from "Lakme," Delibes. (In case of rain this program will be played the next clear night.)

Tuesday. Conductor, Andre Kostelanetz. Suite for Orchestra from "Pique Dame"; Four Excerpts from the Ballet "The Sleeping Beauty"; Symphony No. 5 in E minor, Op. 64, Tchaikovsky.

Wednesday. Conductor, Andre Kostelanetz; soloist, Vera Franceschi, pianist. Overture to "Russian and Ludmilla," Glinka; Suite, "Ma Mere l'Oye"; Bolero, Ravel; Scenario for Orchestra on Themes from "Show Boat," Kern; Concerto in G minor for Piano and Orchestra, Op. 25, No. 1, Mendelssohn.

Thursday. Conductor, Julius Rudel; soloists, Eva Likova and Madelaine Chambers, sopranos; Gloria Lane, mezzo-soprano; Robert Rounseville and Howard Fried, tenors; David Aiken, baritone. Concert version of Strauss' "The Gypsy Baron." (In case of rain this program will be played the next clear night.)

Saturday. Ballet Russe De Monte Carlo, Ivan Boutnikoff, conductor. Swan Lake (Slavenska, Moreno and others), Tchaikovsky; Grand Pas de Deux from "Don Quixote" (Novak and Danielian), Minkus; The Mikado (first New York performance) (Borowska, Moreno, Howard and others), Sullivan; Gaiete Parisienne (Chouteau, Tyven, Franklin, Danielian, Schaffenburg and others), Offenbach. (In case of rain this program will be played the next clear night).

Goldman Band

Guggenheim Memorial Concerts, Edwin Franko Goldman conducting, Central and Prospect Parks

Today, Central Park. March, Bluejackets on Parade, Goldman; Overture, In Bohemia, Hadley; Irish Tune; Shepherd's Hey, Grainger; Excerpts, from Carousel, Rodgers; Celebration Overture, Creston; A Soldier's Dream (James Burke, cornetist), Rogers; Pavane, Gould; Burlesque, MacDowell; Pan Americana, Herbert; A Southern Rhapsody, Hosmer; March, The Stars and Stripes Forever, Sousa.

Wednesday, Central Park. Overture, Academic Festival, Brahms; Overture, Mignon, Thomas; Overture, Tannhaeuser, Wagner; Overture, William Tell, Rossini; Overture, Poet and Peasant, von Suppe; Fantasie, A Soldier's Dream (James Burke, cornetist), Rogers; Merry Wives of Windsor, Nicolai; Overture, 1812, Tchaikovsky.

Thursday, Prospect Park, and Friday, Central Park. Marche Troyenne; Overture, Beatrice and Benedict; Dance of the Sylphs, from the Damnation of Faust; Menuet des Follets; March to the Scaffold, from Symphony Fantastique; Funeral and Triumphal Symphony; Recitative and Prayer (Trombone solo, John Swallow); Apotheosis; Overture, Roman Carnival; Tragic Overture, Brahms; Excerpts, Iolanthe, Sullivan; Excerpts, from Carousel, Rodgers.

Saturday, Prospect Park. Grand March, International Accord, Goldman; Overture, The Carnival of Venice, Thomas; Scherzo, Symphony No. 3, Beethoven; Requiem, Verdi; Overture, Leonore III, Beethoven-Shallitt; Eili, Eili.

Berkshire Festival

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Wednesday, 8:30. Soloists: Kroll String Quartet. Quartets in C minor, Op. 18, No. 4; in F minor, Op. 95; in C sharp minor, Op. 131, Beethoven.

Friday, 8:30. Conductor, Charles Munch. Sinfonia from "Easter" Cantata (No. 249); Suite No. 2, for Flute and Strings (soloist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer), Bach; "Orpheus," Stravinsky; "Prague" Symphony, K. 504, Mozart.

Saturday, 8:30. Conductor, Thor Johnson. Concerto Gross, Op. 6, No. 12, Handel; Symphonic Concertante with Oboe, Bassoon, Violin and Cello, Haydn; "Der Schwanendreher" (Viola Solo: Joseph De Pasquale), Hindemith; Symphony in B flat, No. 98, Haydn.

Sunday, July 10, 2:30. Conductor, Charles Munch. Bach Mass in B minor, with Harvard Glee Club; Radcliffe Choral Society and soloists, Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

Other Events

100 Summer Concerts in Berkshires

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

With nearly 100 programs from now until Labor Day, the Berkshire Hills region of western Massachusetts can be called the summer music capital of the northeastern states. At Tanglewood, near Lenox, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival and the Berkshire Music Center will offer forty-nine events. Besides the first three festival concerts, the opening week includes a student orchestra concert Thursday night under Leonard Bernstein and others and a student chamber music session next Sunday morning.

TANGLEWOOD OPENS—When the Berkshire Music Festival begins its symphonic series on Friday, Charles Munch, as usual, will be on hand to direct the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Above are three informal photos of the conductor, ranging, left to right, from a moment of comparative calm before a concert through the stress of the concert itself and, finally, the fatigue that follows its conclusion.

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 103,999

JUL 3 1955

TO AIR TANGLEWOOD CONCERTS

Concerts of the world-renowned Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., will be broadcast by WBZ-NBC radio on Monday (8.15-9 p. m.,) starting July 11. The programs will feature the Boston Symphony with distinguished vocal and instrumental soloists.

The concerts take place in the attractive setting of Tanglewood in the Berkshires. Thousands of visitors flock there each week to the many orchestral, chamber and operatic programs.

In addition to the concerts, the major activity is the Berkshire Music Center, where many young professionals complete their musical education. The Berkshire Music Center was established in 1940 by the late Serge Koussevitzky and the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Sat July 2
Eagle

WELCOME TO THE BERKSHIRE HILLS in Massachusetts

Whenever you visit the Berkshire Hills—be it summer or winter, spring or fall—you'll find a wealth of wonderful things to do, beautiful places to see! No scenic region has more varied attractions than the Berkshire Hills, home of the famous Tanglewood Music Festival, countless scenic attractions and varied outdoor sports. Whether it be a visit to a picturesque summer playhouse . . . skiing on a shimmering slope . . . golfing on a velvety green course . . . sightseeing . . . or antique hunting, you'll enjoy every minute of your visit.

The Berkshire Hills . . . and the friendly folks who live here . . . welcome you . . . and bid you an enjoyable and memorable visit!

135 MILES FROM NEW YORK
135 MILES FROM BOSTON

Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 91,501

JUL 3 1955

Charles Munch Speaks At Tanglewood

The opening ceremonies of the Berkshire Music Center this afternoon at 3:30 signals the opening of this year's Berkshire Music Festival. Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony, who arrived in New York last Friday by Air France from his home in Paris, will be the principal speaker at the opening exercises of the Tanglewood School today. Following the speaking program, Hugh Ross will conduct a student performance of Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," composed for the opening of the school in 1940.

Mr. Munch will conduct his first Festival concert of the season on Friday evening of this week when the "Bach-Mozart" series by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players will get under way. The second program of this preliminary series will be given on Saturday evening, with Thor Johnson of the Cincinnati Symphony conducting. Conductor Munch will be back on the podium for next Sunday afternoon's presentation of the Bach B minor Mass., with the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society participating.

Tanglewood Tunes Up To Open

Manos

The Theater Concert Hall at Tanglewood looms over this worker trimming the lawn along a walk. A large crew has been working daily under the Tanglewood superintendent, Ward J. Gaston, getting the grounds in shape for the opening tomorrow

Manos

This piano tuner, one of many tuning the 69 Baldwin pianos at Tanglewood, works on this spinet in the Wheatleigh dormitory.

Manos

Cleaning the 6,000 chairs in the great Music Shed at Tanglewood is one of the tasks of this workman on the Festival staff in Lenox.

Exercises Tomorrow Start Season

The Tanglewood season will get into full swing tomorrow at exercises which will mark the opening of the Berkshire Music Center, the school conducted by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Munch To Speak

Charles Munch, the center's director and conductor of the BSO, arrived in the Berkshires yesterday afternoon to prepare for his fifth season at Tanglewood and to make a short address at tomorrow's event which is scheduled to start at 3:30.

This will be the 16th summer in the Berkshires for the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Concerts will be given for six weeks from July 6 through Aug. 14.

Concerts Open Wednesday

The 1955 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts commences on Wednesday evening with an all-Beethoven program by the Kroll String Quartet. On Fridy evening, Mr. Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in a program of Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart, with the orchestra's first flutist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, as soloist. The Saturday evening chamber orchestra concert of Handel, Haydn and Hindemith, with Boston Symphony Orchestra's first violist, Joseph de Pasquale, as soloist, will have at its helm Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, who was a student of conducting in 1940 and 1941 at Tanglewood's Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

On Sunday afternoon, July 10, Mr. Munch will lead the chamber orchestra in Bach's Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and the following soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

The above concerts and those of the following week, July 13-15-16-17, will all be given in the 1,200-seat theater-concert hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30, Sunday afternoons at 2:30.

Shed Series Opens July 22

Six Wednesday evenings are devoted to the chamber music of Beethoven, with performances by noted ensembles and soloists. Following the first two weekends of chamber orchestra concerts, the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra moves to Tanglewood for the Berkshire Festival's final four weekends, July 22-Aug. 14, when 12 weekend concerts are held in the 6,000-seat Music Shed, erected in 1938.

In 1954, the Berkshire Festival, which has annually attracted crowds from all over Eastern United States and Canada, totaled an attendance of 135,775 to total paid admissions of $330,033. Chamber music concerts inaugurated last summer averaged 1,358 persons; chamber orchestra programs drew an average of 2,275, both series attracting considerably more persons than the capacity of the 1,200-seat theater-concert hall. An average crowd of 9,197, more than one-third again the capacity of the Music Shed, came to the final programs.

Beethoven Season

The Festival concerts for 1955, as planned by Mr. Munch, will feature the music of Beethoven including all nine symphonies, "Fidelio" (Act III) in concert performance, the violin concerto, two piano concertos, three overtures, the "Missa Solemnis" (in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, former conductor of the orchestra), and on the Wednesday evening series, a representative range of Beethoven's string quartets, trios and violin, piano and cello sonatas.

The first week's Berkshire Festival programs include Tanglewood premiers of the following works: Bach: Sinfonia from the "Easter" Oratorio and Stravinsky: "Orpheus" (Friday, July 8); Hindemith: "Der Schwanendreher" and Haydn: Symphony in B flat, No. 98 (Sat. July 9).

The complete opening programs are:

Wednesday, July 6, 8:30 p.m. Theater-Concert Hall, Chamber Music

Beethoven:

String Quartets: C minor, Op. 18, No. 4; F minor, Op. 95; C sharp minor, On. 131. The Kroll String Quartet (William Kroll and Louis Graeler, violins; David Mankovitz, viola; Avron Twerdowsky, cello).

Friday, July 8, 8:30 p.m. Theater-Concert Hall, Chamber Orchestra of Boston Symphony members Bach: Sinfonia from the Easter Oratorio.

Bach: Suite No. 2, for Flute and Strings.
Soloist: Doriot Anthony Dwyer.
Stravinsky: Orpheus.
Mozart: Prague Symphony (K. 504).
Charles Munch, Conductor.

Saturday, July 9, 8:30 p.m. Theater-Concert Hall, Chamber Orchestra.

Handel: Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12.
Haydn: Symphonie Concertante with Oboe, Bassoon, Violin and Cello.
Hindemith: Der Schwanendreher.
Soloist, Joseph de Pasquale.
Haydn: Symphony in B flat, No. 98.
Thor Johnson, Conductor.

Sunday, July 10, 2:30 p.m. Theater, Concert Hall, Chamber Orchestra.

Bach: Mass in B minor, with Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society.
Soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCullum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.
Charles Munch, Conductor.

The Musical Berkshires: 'Biggest Summer Culture Foundry in the Country'

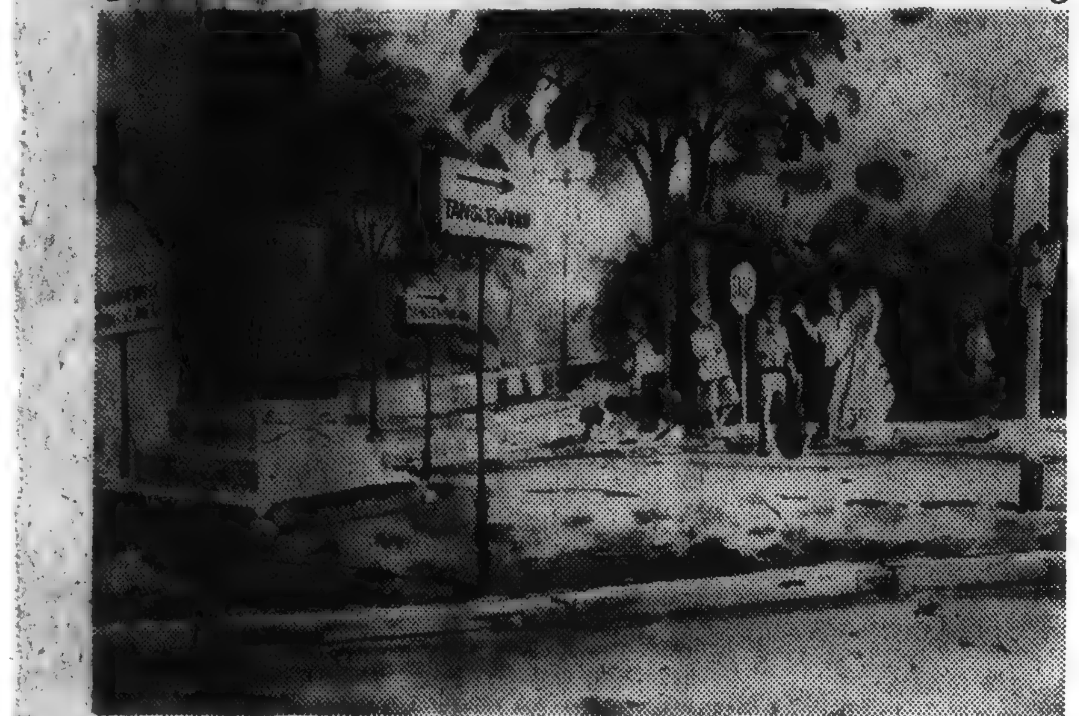
By Robert M. Hodesh

Mr. Hodesh, a native of Northampton, is associate editor of the Lincoln-Mercury Times. His article appeared in its May-June issue with six water colors by Paul E. Decker of Canaan, Conn., of which four are shown here.

ANYONE WHO has ever driven through the Berkshire Hills in the summer will agree that one way to learn what the region is like in that season is to observe the hitchhikers along the roads and perhaps pick up a few of them from time to time.



Hitchhiking from Lenox to Tanglewood

I once knew a man whose only impression of Western Massachusetts was gained that way. He used to enjoy telling people what happened to him on a day in August when he pulled up at the main intersection in the town of Lenox, intending to stop only long enough to study the road signs and choose a route.

2 Plus 3

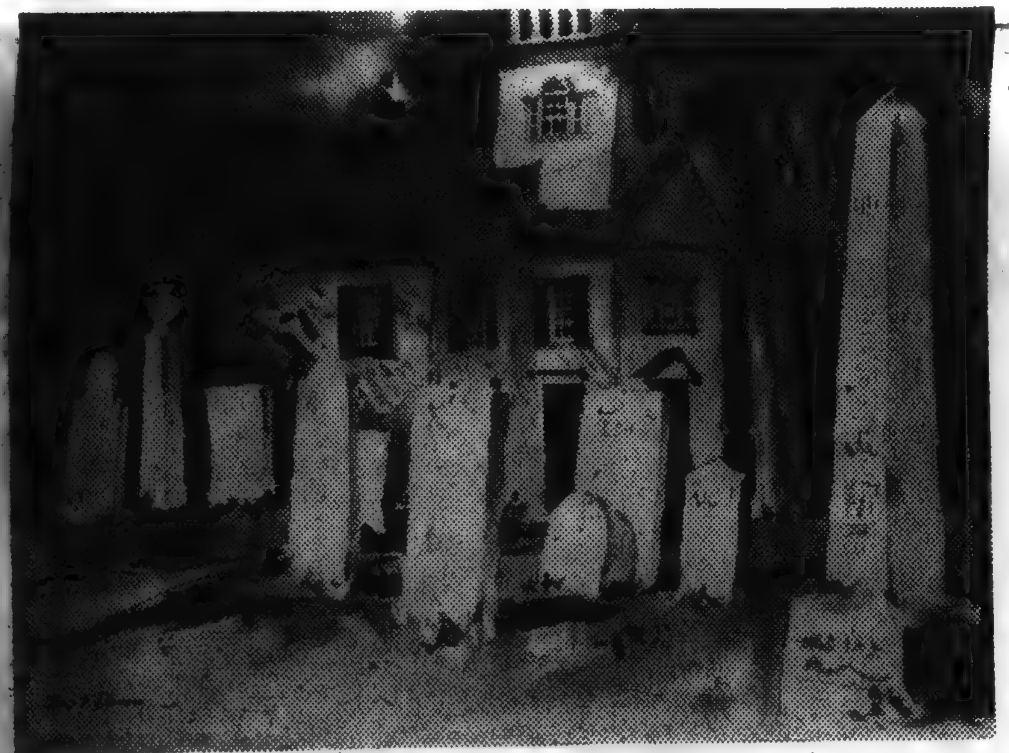
Before he got rolling again a boy and girl stepped off the curb and asked him for a ride to Tanglewood, which is the site of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival and the Berkshire Music Center, a school for gifted musicians. He could see no harm in driving an extra mile to help a pretty girl with a fiddle case under her arm and a boy with a sheaf of music and a clarinet, so he invited them in.

It turned out his judgment was not misplaced, but before he had taken them a hundred feet they asked him to stop and pick up three more musical hitchhikers who were standing by the road with thumbs extended. While driving the quintet to the Tanglewood main gate, it occurred to him that he had never before been in a part of the country where he could pick two violins, a clarinet, a flute, a French horn, and plenty of music right off the shoulder. He reasoned that if he had kept right on going with them he could have set himself up with a small orchestra of sorts—the kids and Petrillo willing, of course.

There is another item like this in the lore of Lenox—admittedly an extreme one—but according to this tale, a boy once stood at the same Lenox intersection thumbing a ride with a bass fiddle. Naturally the cars passed him up, but he got to Tanglewood anyway, either in a pickup truck or a horse van.

And this way of getting about isn't confined to musicians, either, for the Berkshires are alive in summer with the practitioners of every art there is. I was driving westward last year on U.S. 20 (in the Berkshires this road is called Jacob's Ladder) when I saw an array of creatures in their teens beside the road, thumbs out. Obviously this was the time to throw caution to the winds, so I stopped.

They were seven girl dancers from Jacob's Pillow, a prominent summer school of the modern dance. They were all beautiful and all gay, and it was marvelous the way they wove themselves into the car without a bit of cloth or skin sticking out. I let them off in the town of Lee after five miles of merriment.



Koussevitzky is buried here

Now, all this business of talented hitchhikers on the Berkshire roads is the merest indication of the fact that Berkshire County is the biggest summer culture foundry in the country. On July 24 last year, The Eagle, principal daily paper in the area, devoted nearly a full page to a calendar of cultural doings roundabout.

This calendar, toothsomely decorated with advertisements for some of the regional restaurants, looked pretty impressive. Covering six weeks, it listed some 140 events—50 concerts, 72 play performances, 18 dance recitals, and a little art and sculpture.

900 Plus

To an outsider this might look like plenty, but to my friend Milton Bass, columnist of The Eagle and a man of prodigious appetite for the arts, it looked a little weak. He says that if you list all the music, including jazz, all the plays, all the flower shows, all the art and sculpture, all the dancing, all the summer, the figure would run to more than 900. This, of course, is beyond human capacity and human endurance to digest, though some have tried.

I can just imagine a visitor to the Berkshire Hills sitting on the porch of some good hostelry, say the Red Lion Inn in Stockbridge, willing to expose himself to the Finer Things and trying to decide just how.

Before 10 in the morning he would have to face hard choices. Should he drive over to Tanglewood and listen to a rehearsal of the Boston Symphony, or should he run up to Pittsfield and look at the exhibition in their notable museum? These two are by no means the only morning alternatives, a fact that could easily cause him to stay in his chair and consider the possibilities of the afternoon.

Would he go to Tanglewood and hear the students play chamber music, would he go over to the Lenox Library to see a show by local painters, would he decide to indulge in pure Berkshire scenery while driving over to the Berkshire Garden Center, or would he drive up the steep and wooded road to South Mountain for a recital of string quartets?

If the afternoon slipped away in rumination of all these choices, what about the evening? The big concert by the Boston Symphony, Jacob's Pillow to see the girls dance, or the Stockbridge Playhouse to find out how Eva Le-Gallienne or some other celebrated person was doing?

Jazz Artists

After one of those, surely his only choice would be sleep, but it isn't. He could then go over to Stephanie Barber's Music Inn to find out what was up with the Calypso band, the jazz artists, or the folk singers who liven the weekends up over there.

And with all that, where would our friend work in such items as Pro Musica Antiqua, the concerts of ancient music at the Stockbridge Town Hall, or the folk music workshop at the Lenox Library, or the special movies at the Little Cinema, or a visit to a place like the Mission House in Stockbridge, or the antiques show at Lenox?

Let us suppose, mercifully, that he didn't care a hoot about any of these manifestations of culture and wanted merely to call for some refreshment and spend a vacation on the porch. Even if he avoided hitchhikers on principle and didn't stir once except for maybe a little golf, he would still learn plenty about the Berkshires if he only opened the local papers from day to day, because in their columns are waged heated battles that break out each summer when the culture foundry has a full head of steam.

'Mozart Starved'

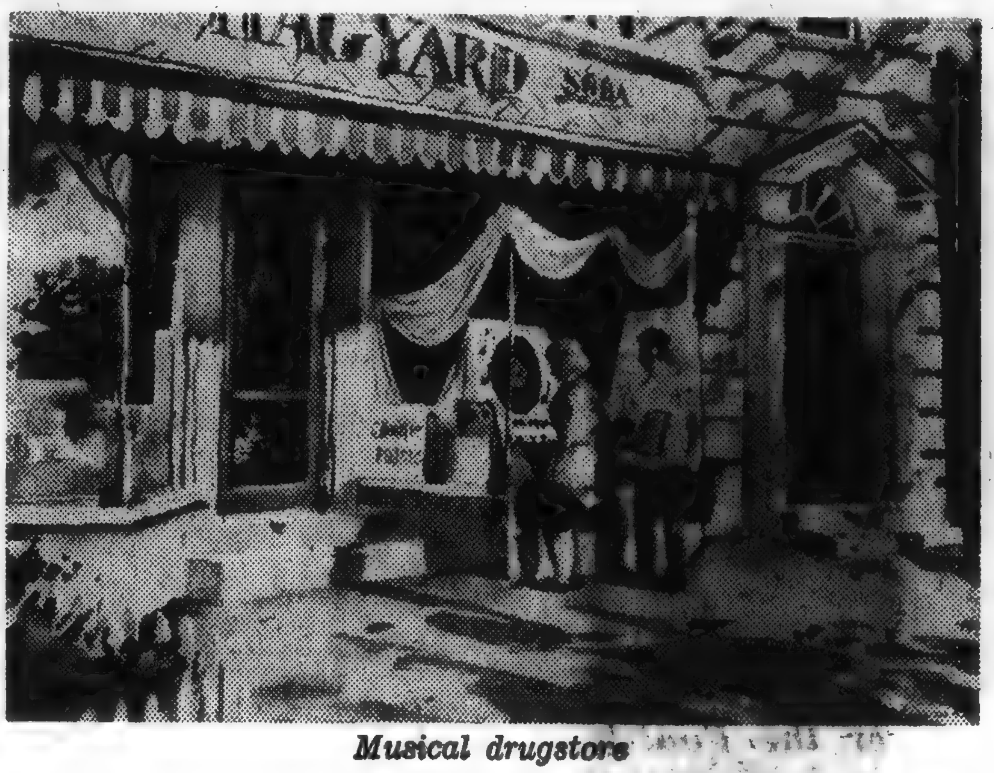
The letters-to-the-editor section is the field of several wars, one between the classicists and the modernists after the Boston Symphony has played a really modern work. Waged in eight-point type with exclamation points for shrapnel, the columns are filled with such shots as "Vulgar!" and such counter-charges as "Mozart starved because of people like you!"

Simultaneously there is the war between the three B's on one side and the Massachusetts State Police on the other. In this one the citizens strafe the newspaper with complaints that the police are failing to funnel thousands of cars after concerts through country roads that until recently served the horse and buggy nicely. That the officers still manage to unravel the country's worst cultural traffic jams in a few hours is remarkable, because nothing about Brahms encourages attention to a traffic officer's signals.

Finally, there is the ceaseless battle of the bare legs. Once again, newspapers are caught in the crossfire, this time between the older residents who yearn for the elegance of the past and those who want to take their music in comfort. Militating against the wearing of shorts at concerts, the proponents of stateliness charge that bare legs are bad for Beethoven, while the opponents counter with the statement that shorts are not offensive to Schumann, and that they will cover their legs as soon as the young men on Wall Street do.

Though these battles break over the editorial bows in greater or lesser degree as the summer wears on, they do not obscure the basic character of the Berkshires, which is dignified and which ultimately imposes dignity on those who visit there, regardless of temporary inroads by newcomers. Somehow the old hills seem like a very natural place to make music and listen to it. The landscape has the serenity of old oil paintings. It is elegantly cared-for, with enormous trees and thoughtfully planned shrubbery—legacies of the wealthy people who first built their grand estates throughout the county in the late 1800s.

For a long time the musical soirees of the rich were private affairs, but in 1918 the late Mrs. Albert Sprague Coolidge, one of America's great patrons of music, established the chamber music series at South Mountain. The series, which is one of the Berkshire's finest musical events, provided the core of the audiences who began to attend the Berkshire Festival when it started in 1935. The festival has grown so successful that at a single concert it has attracted a record 15,000 listeners—all taking the best of music in the outdoors with an ease and relaxation that no concert hall can offer.



Musical drugstore

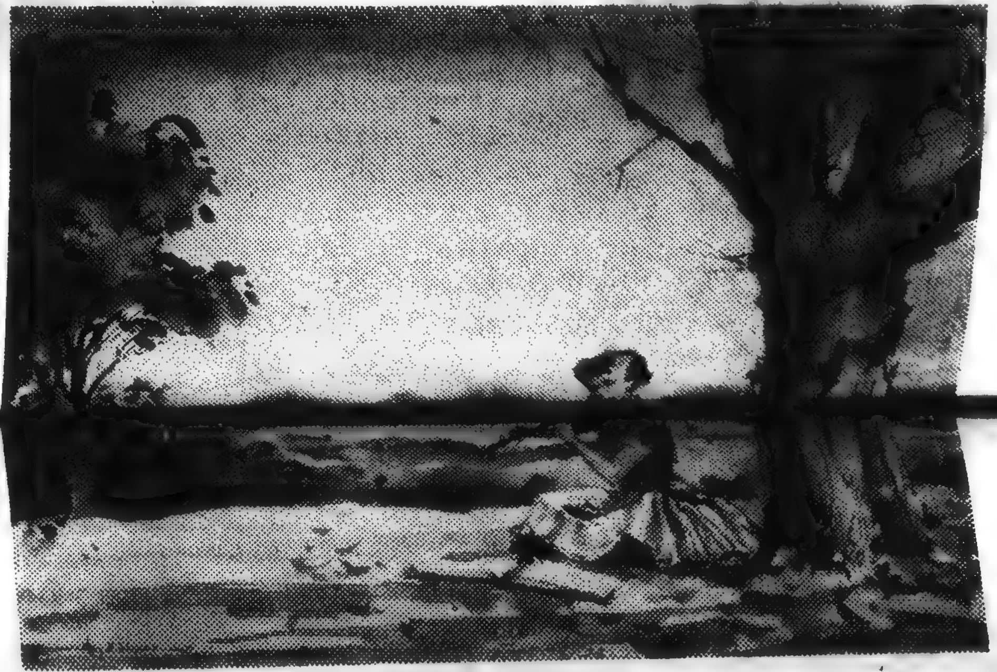
All this has made the Berkshire Hills a marvelous and different place in summer. Lenox is a good case in point. Wander over to Hagyard's drugstore and look in the window. Do you see Yardley's stuff? Coty's? Heating pads or vitamin pills? No. The last time I looked there was a book called, An Anthology of Renaissance Music, an album of the symphonies of William Boyce, placards advertising various concerts, and a hi-fi audio control unit.

Sundae Airs

Inside was no juke box. Instead a young man was operating a fine phonograph, and while the people dug away at chocolate sundaes they listened to Mozart in silence.

The town is neck-deep in music, as the barber around the corner found out one summer day when a boy came in, parked a fiddle case on the floor, and climbed into the seat. He didn't bother with the ancient copies of Life or Collier's. He had no time for such trivia. While his hair was being shortened he studied the musical score of The Barber of Seville.

It gave the barber of Lenox quite a turn.



Outdoor practice

Hills and Back Roads

Next Saturday on this page will appear the first of nine Backroad Berkshire tours, driven and reported by William S. Annin, Eagle columnist, and illustrated with maps by Vaughn Gray, Stockbridge artist, who did today's cover map. Another lover of the byways, naturalist Bartlett Hendricks, here describes Backroad Berkshire's charm and the topography which has created it.

By Bartlett Hendricks

YOU WOULDN'T KNOW IT from reading any American daily newspaper, but probably no sport today can compare, either in number of participants or in money spent, with the simple sport of scampering about the countryside in the family car.

Perhaps this explains in part the great decrease in the number of spectators watching all but the top-ranking events. People will still throng to see the best in any sport, but they would rather be doing something themselves than watch most amateur or Class B professionals.

This gradual change in American habits serves to point to one of the Berkshires' major assets, our network of roads. Among our more than 1,700 miles are about 250 miles of state highways and at least an equal length of improved town and country roads.

* * * *

BUT THE ROADS I mean, while they may occasionally be macadam, are as likely to have grass growing in the middle. And they are lined with wildflowers, not with hot-dog stands and signs.

Spend a vacation in the beautiful country to the north of Massachusetts, and within a few days you will have exhausted all the drives within a reasonable distance. But here in the Berkshires, with our far more closely woven pattern of roads, and with thousands of miles more just to the east, in northern Connecticut, southern Vermont and in nearby New York, you can enjoy a trip every day for a month, with scarcely any repetition. True, nowhere in all this 10,000 square miles will you see anything that is stupendous, awe-inspiring or even merely super-colossal. But the land is moist and green and there are thousands of memorable spots your mind will want to file away for future enjoyable contemplation.

* * * *

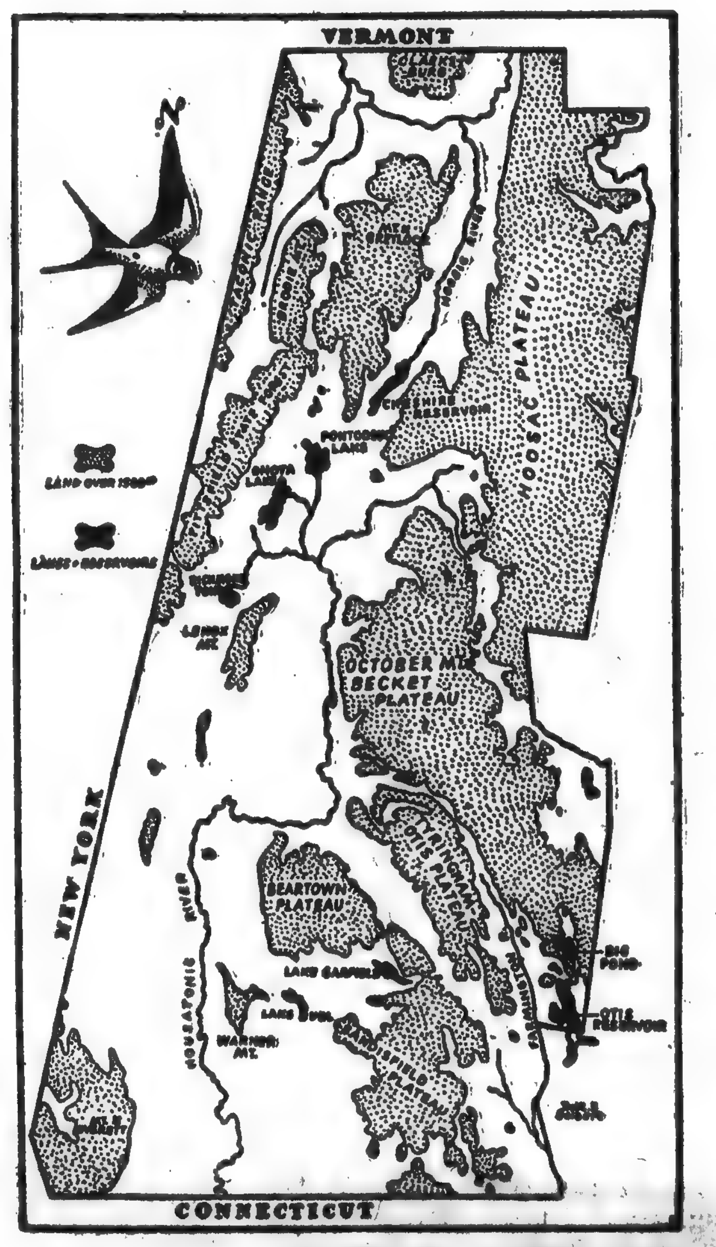
YET FAR TOO MANY of us hesitate to explore the secondary roads because we are afraid of becoming lost. No one was ever truly lost on a road, but some poor souls are so lacking in the spirit of Columbus that they cannot bring themselves to leave the numbered routes.

Regulation road maps are helpful only with a few of the more improved secondary roads, and to many people the task of trying to follow the details of the large number of U.S. Geological Survey relief maps of the region is too confusing.

And so this simple map is offered to try to make the layout of the Berkshires understandable at a glance.

* * * *

CONVENTIONAL RELIEF maps show a line for every 10 or 20 feet in elevation but this map gives only the 1,500-foot elevation. As can be guessed immediately, the average altitude for Berkshire County is close to 1,500 feet, in fact the Survey gives the average as "about 1,470 feet."



Massachusetts Audubon Society

Remember this map, and the topography of the county and the tangle of roads become far less confusing. The hills and valleys of the Berkshires cover 954 square miles, but if all the humps and dips were ironed out, the region would be as large as Kansas, or at least equal to the area of Los Angeles.

A large part of the county is drained by the meandering Housatonic, but the smaller, swifter Hoosic drains much of the northern part. The mountain barriers on the east are cut by the Farmington River, branches of the Westfield, and by the Deerfield, and on the west by several streams flowing, like the Hoosic, to the Hudson.

* * * *

THE TACONIC RANGE, on this side, is anchored at the south by the mass of 2,602-foot Mt. Everett. Then for some distance the elevations along the New York State line are under 1,500 feet, but they gradually increase until 2,800 feet is reached on Berlin Mountain in Williamstown. The Hoosac Range on the east rises suddenly from the Hoosic and Housatonic valleys to form a wide plateau with but few points dominating their neighbors. In and about the village of Florida, however, are three elevations of over 2,800 feet.

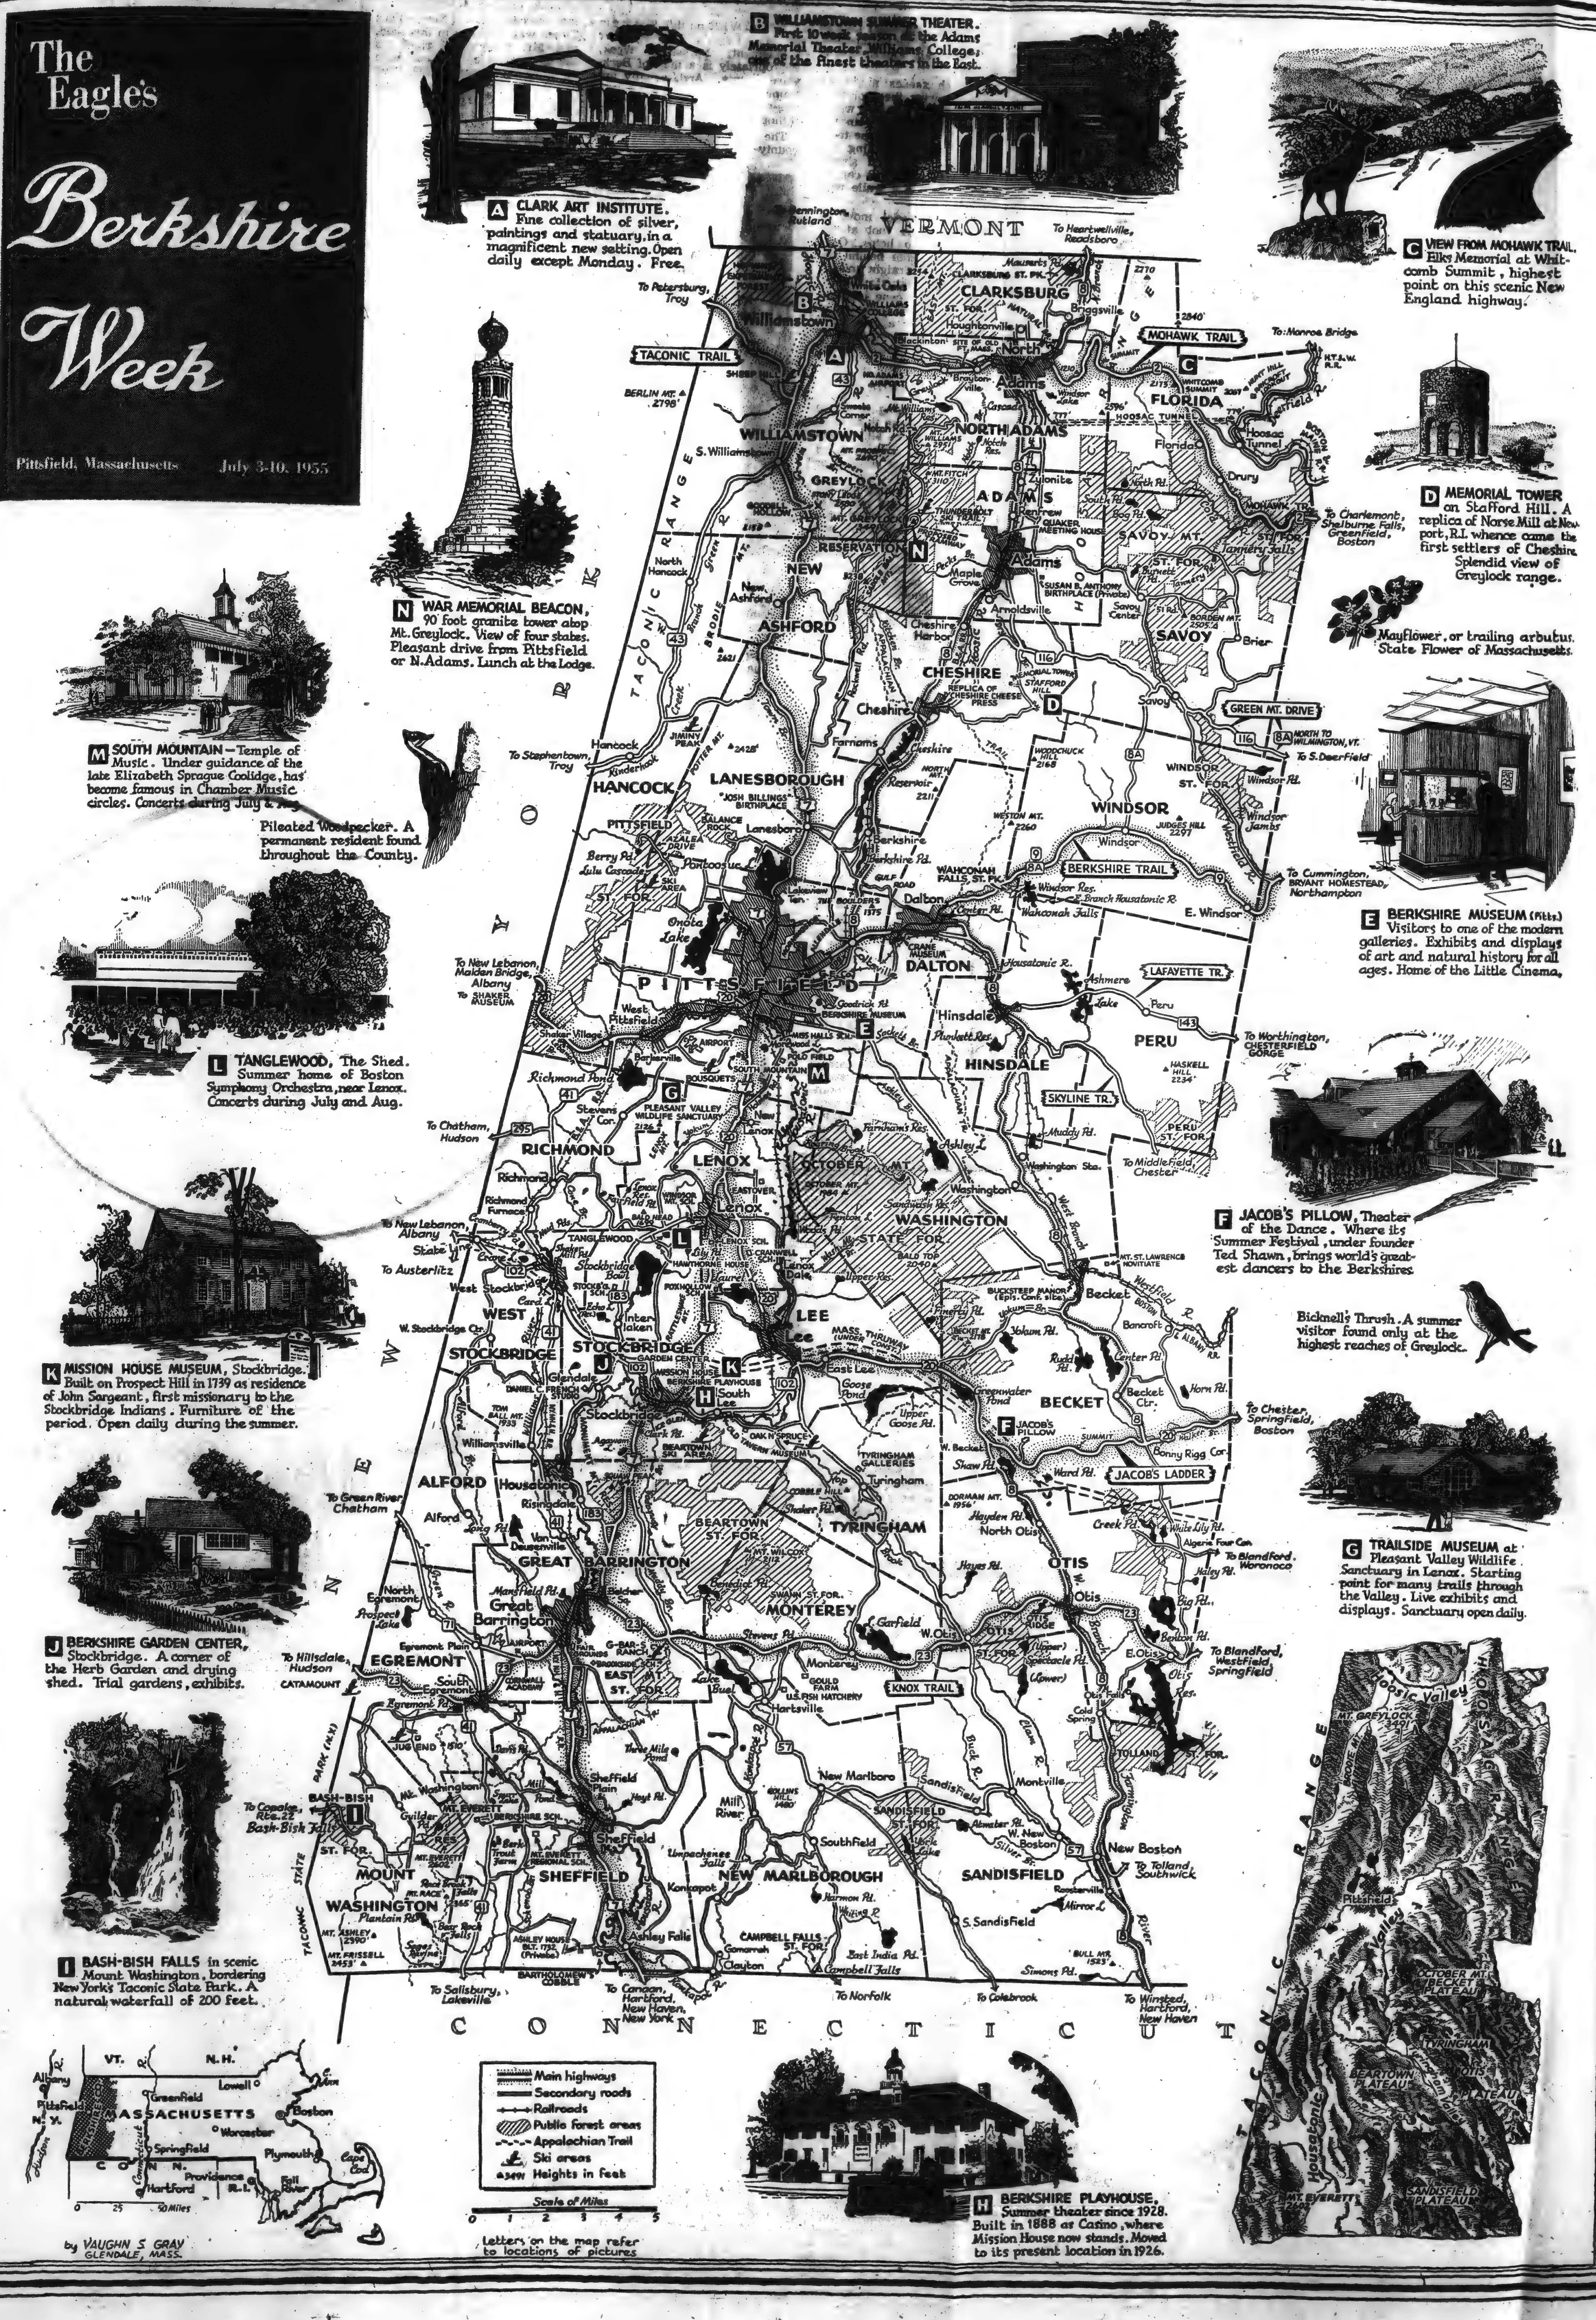
Highest point in the big October Mountain plateau is about 2,200 feet, while the fire tower on Mt. Wilcox, in the Beartown State Forest, is at 2,112 feet. There is much high land in the Tyringham-Otis-Sandisfield area.

The north-central Berkshires are split by the great bulk of Mt. Greylock, 3,491 feet, highest mountain in Massachusetts. South of Pittsfield are the elevations terminating in Lenox Mountain, 2,126 feet, and in Alford, by Tom Ball, a shapely mountain rising 1,933 feet.

[118]

The Eagle's Berkshire Week

Pittsfield, Massachusetts July 3-10, 1955



VERMONT
CONNECTICUT
NEW YORK
TACONIC RANGE
HOOSAC RANGE
CLARKSBURG
FLORIDA
WILLIAMSTOWN
NORTH ADAMS
ADAMS
GREYLOCK RESERVATION
NEW ASHFORD
SAVOY
CHESHIRE HANCOCK LANESBOROUGH WINDSOR
PITTSFIELD DALTON
HINSDALE
PERU
RICHMOND
LENOX
WASHINGTON
WEST STOCKBRIDGE
STOCKBRIDGE
LEE
BECKET
ALFORD GREAT BARRINGTON TYRINGHAM
OTIS EGREMONT
MONTEREY
MOUNT WASHINGTON
SHEFFIELD
NEW MARLBOROUGH
SANDISFIELD
TACONIC TRAIL MOHAWK TRAIL
GREEN MT. DRIVE
BERKSHIRE TRAIL
LAFAYETTE TR.
SKYLINE TR.
JACOB'S LADDER
KNOX TRAIL
Main highways
Secondary roads
Railroads
Public forest areas
Appalachian Trail
Ski areas
3491 Heights in feet
Scale of Miles
0 1 2 3 4 5
Letters on the map refer to locations of pictures VT.
N.H.
MASSACHUSETTS CONN.
R.I.
N.Y.
Albany
Pittsfield Greenfield
Lowell
Boston
Worcester
Springfield
Hartford
Providence
Plymouth
Fall River
Cape Cod
0 25 50 Miles
Hoosic Valley
MT. GREYLOCK 3491
OCTOBER MT.
BECKET PLATEAU
BEARTOWN PLATEAU
SANDISFIELD PLATEAU
TACONIC RANGE
by VAUGHN S GRAY GLENDALE, MASS.

A CLARK ART INSTITUTE. Fine collection of silver, paintings and statuary, in a magnificent new setting. Open daily except Monday. Free.

B WILLIAMSTOWN SUMMER THEATER. First 10 week season at the Adams Memorial Theater, Williams College; one of the finest theaters in the East.

C VIEW FROM MOHAWK TRAIL. Elks Memorial at Whitcomb Summit, highest point on this scenic New England highway.

D MEMORIAL TOWER on Stafford Hill. A replica of Norse Mill at Newport, R.I. whence came the first settlers of Cheshire. Splendid view of Greylock range.

Mayflower, or trailing arbutus. State Flower of Massachusetts.

E BERKSHIRE MUSEUM (Pitts.) Visitors to one of the modern galleries. Exhibits and displays of art and natural history for all ages. Home of the Little Cinema.

F JACOB'S PILLOW, Theater of the Dance. Where its Summer Festival, under founder Ted Shawn, brings world's greatest dancers to the Berkshires.

Bicknell's Thrush. A summer visitor found only at the highest reaches of Greylock.

G TRAILSIDE MUSEUM at Pleasant Valley Wildlife Sanctuary in Lenox. Starting point for many trails through the Valley. Live exhibits and displays. Sanctuary open daily.

H BERKSHIRE PLAYHOUSE, Summer theater since 1928. Built in 1888 as Casino, where Mission House now stands. Moved to its present location in 1926.

I BASH-BISH FALLS in scenic Mount Washington, bordering New York's Taconic State Park. A natural waterfall of 200 feet.

J BERKSHIRE GARDEN CENTER, Stockbridge. A corner of the Herb Garden and drying shed. Trial gardens, exhibits.

K MISSION HOUSE MUSEUM, Stockbridge. Built on Prospect Hill in 1739 as residence of John Sargeant, first missionary to the Stockbridge Indians. Furniture of the period. Open daily during the summer.

L TANGLEWOOD, The Shed. Summer home of Boston Symphony Orchestra, near Lenox. Concerts during July and Aug.

M SOUTH MOUNTAIN—Temple of Music. Under guidance of the late Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, has become famous in Chamber Music circles. Concerts during July & Aug.

Pileated Woodpecker. A permanent resident found throughout the County.

N WAR MEMORIAL BEACON, 90 foot granite tower atop Mt. Greylock. View of four states. Pleasant drive from Pittsfield or N. Adams. Lunch at the Lodge.

by VAUGHN S GRAY
GLENDALE, MASS.

Second Thoughts in Music

Opening at Tanglewood Week's Musical Feature umerous and Varied Activities on Schedule at Lenox; Recent Recordings Include Two by London Philharmonic and Two American Symphonies

By WILLARD M. CLARK

This week will find us at Lenox waiting the opening concert of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood. Living in Lenox during the festival will, we believe give us opportunity to view more closely the work of the Berkshire Music School which this year has a record pupil attendance. Its activities are numerous and its students may be heard in many unusual and worthwhile musical activities.

We look forward particularly to the chamber music concerts to be heard each Wednesday night. We shall hear such personalities as Isaac Stern, violinist; the cellist Piatigorsky and the pianist Serkin; also several ensembles including the Kroll Quartet. These chamber music concerts have really caught on since they were initiated and the Theater Shed is sure to be crowded.

Principal Conductors

Also, we are looking forward to the performances of Beethoven's ninth symphony and "Missa Solemnis," as well as the second act of his only opera "Fidelio" and to the performance of Bach's "B-Minor Mass."

Principal conductors for the concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra will be Charles Munch, the veteran Pierre Monteux and Leonard Bernstein, who will conduct the performance of the "Missa Solemnis" at the annual concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky. This should be a notable performance. Bernstein was the favorite pupil and protege of Koussevitzky and he brings to every performance he conducts something of the vitality and magic Koussevitzky used to create.

We have not yet received word of what opera the department is going to create this year. Whatever it is, it will be of interest and of good publicity value to the singers who are in the department. More than one "student" in the past who has sung a lead role in some Tanglewood opera has received further recognition, so it is probably not difficult for the Opera Department to get able singers for its lead roles.

The music of Beethoven will feature the current festival and one may expect well routined, intelligent interpretations from Munch and something rather exciting from Bernstein.

Busy Berkshires

The annual Berkshire Music Festival gets under way at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Wednesday night with the Kroll String Quartet in an all-Beethoven concert. Friday night, Charles Munch conducts a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony men in Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart. Saturday night, Thor Johnson leads the same group in Handel, Haydn and Hindemith. . . . The Berkshire Folk-Music Festival opens Tuesday at Sedgwick Hall, Lenox, Mass., and will continue through Aug. 18. . . . Jimmy Rushing, Myra Johnson, Sammy Price and Brownie McGhee sing city and country blues tonight at the Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox, Mass.

New Yk News, Sunday, July 3, 1955

Eagle 7/2/55

Berkshire.

The week saw another notable opening at Jacob's Pillow, where the Ted Shawn Theater opened with a varied dance program that included the Pillow's 120th world premiere. At Tanglewood, where nearly 400 students were enrolled at the Berkshire Music Center, the first public concerts were still a few days off; but in the meantime, music lovers with a leaning toward le jazz hot could hear Coleman Hawkins and other familiar names of the jazz world at the first of a series of weekend concerts at the new Berkshire Music Barn in Lenox.

Munch to Greet Students And Guests at Lenox Today

Lenox, July 2—The Berkshire Music Centerm the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival, opens its 13th session, a six-week course of music studies for advanced students and professionals, at Tanglewood here tomorrow. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony and director of the Berkshire Music Center, who recently returned from vacation at his home in Paris, will address students and guests at opening exercises, at 3.30 p. m. in the Theater-Concert Hall

Cox To Preside

William Cox, chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, the society whose contributions help to support the school, will preside, and the faculty of the school will be introduced by Richard Burgin, acting assistant director, and dean Ralph Berkowitz.

As at every opening of the school since its founding under the direction of the late Serge Koussevitzky in 1940, Hugh Ross, head of its choral department, will lead the students in "Alleluia", comosed for the school's spening by Randall Thompson. Tea will be served in the Tanglewood formal gardens following the exercises.

The first of some 25 concerts by students of the Berkshire Music Center, which the public may attend through membership in the Friends' society, will be given Thursday evening, July 7, in the Music Shed at 8.30 when, for the first time, the symphony orchestra of 100 students of Dept. I will play together. The program will consist of Copland's "Outdoor Overture"; Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun"; Prokofieff's "Peter and the Wolf" led by student conductors, with student soloists and narrator; and Dvorak's Symphony No. 2, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, who heads the department.

The first of six weekly chamber music concerts will be given by students of Dept. I in the Chamber Music Hall Sunday morning, July 10, at 10.

THE SPRINGFIELD SUNDAY REPUBLICAN, SPRINGFIELD, MA S, JULY 3, 195

Kroll String Quartet at Tanglewood

The Kroll String Quartet will open the 1955 Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood Wednesday night in a program of three string quartets by Beethoven. Left to right—William Kroll, violin; Louis Graeler, violin; Avron Twerdowsky, cello, and David Mankovitz, viola.

6/23/55

MILLBROOK ROUND TABLE

Record Subscriptions For Tanglewood 1955

Subscriptions for the 1955 Berkshire Festival series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., for concerts held on four Friday evenings, July 22—August 12; four Saturday evenings, July 23—August 13, and four Sunday afternoons, July 24—August 14 in the huge Music Shed, have surpassed those of the summer of 1954, Manager Thomas D. Perry, Jr., announces. The six-week festival of 1954 saw an all-time record attendance of 135,775 persons.

All remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the boxoffice, open Monday through Saturday from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. The boxoffice will also be open on Sundays, commencing July 3, with the start of the 13th session of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with the Festival concerts. Mail orders for single concerts are also filled on receipt: checks and money orders should be payable to the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Inc. and accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope for return of tickets. Telephone orders are accepted: phone Lenox, Mass. 600.

1955's pattern of Shed concerts by the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, which Music Director Charles Munch conducts, with Pierre Monteux and Leonard Bernstein as guest conductors, calls for four weekends, featuring much of Beethoven's music, including all nine symphonies, the second act of "Fidelio," the "Missa Solemnis," the violin concerto, two piano concertos, and three overtures.

For detailed Berkshire Festival programs, for a complete list of the summer's more than 25 student concerts to which the public is invited by making a voluntary contribution to the society of Friends of the music school, and for price information, write the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

First Concert Wednesday At the Berkshire Festival

Kroll String Quartet Opening Attraction as Series in Theater-Concert Hall Starts

Lenox, July 2—Symphony, choral and chamber music comes again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening next week at Tanglewood here of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by its music director, Charles Munch. For the 16th summer since the Boston Symphony Orchestra has participated, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 6 to Aug. 14, on the estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and wrote his "Tanglewood Tales."

THOR JOHNSON

Concert Wednesday

The 1955 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts commences on Wednesday evening (July 6) with an all-Beethoven program by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening (July 8), Charles Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in a program of Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart with the Orchestra's first flutist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, as soloist. The Saturday evening chamber orchestra concert of Handel, Haydn and Hindemith, with Boston Symphony Orchestra's first violist, Joseph de Pasquale, as soloist, will have at its helm Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra.

Johnson was a student of conducting in 1940 and 1941 at Tanglewood's Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. On Sunday afternoon (July 10), Charles Munch will lead the chamber orchestra in Bach's Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and the following soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

The above concerts and those of the following week, July 13, 15, 16, 17, will all be given in the intimate 1200-seat Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8.30 p. m., Sunday afternoons at 2.30 p. m.

24 Programs Listed

As in 1954, an all-time record attendance year, the Berkshire Festival again consists of 24 concerts. Six Wednesday evenings are devoted to the chamber music of Beethoven, with performances by noted ensembles and soloists. Following the first two week ends of chamber orchestra concerts, the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra moves to Tanglewood for the final four week ends, July 22-Aug. 14, when 12 week end concerts are held in the 6000-seat Music Shed.

In 1954—Charles Munch's fourth summer with the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood—the Berkshire Festival, which has annually attracted crowds from all over Eastern U. S. and Canada, totaled an attendance of 135,775 to total paid admissions of $330,03 The Festival concerts for 1955, as planned by Charles Munch, will feature the music of Beethoven.

The first week's programs:

Wednesday, July 6, 8.30 p. m., Theater-Concert Hall, Chamber Music: Beethoven: String Quartets: C minor, op. 18, No. 4; F minor, Op. 95; C sharp minor, Op 131—The Kroll String Quartet (William Kroll and Louis Graeler, violins; David Mankovitz, viola; Avron Twerdowsky, cello)

Friday, July 8, 8.30 p. m., Theater-Concert Hall, Chamber Orchestra of Boston Symphony members: Bach; sinfonia from the "Easter" Oratorio; Bach: Suite No. 2, for Flute and Strings; Soloist: Doriot Anthony Dwyer; Stravinsky: "Orpheus"; Mozart: "Prague" Symphony (K. 504); Charles Munch, Conductor.

Saturday, July 9, 8.30 p. m., Theater-Concert Hall, Chamber Orchestra: Handel: Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12; Haydn: Symphonie Concertante with Oboe, Bassoon, Violin and Cello; Hindemith: "Der Schwanendreher," soloist, Joseph de Pasquale; Haydn: Symphony in B flat, No. 98, Thor Johnson, Conductor.

Sunday, July 10, 2.30 p. m., Theater-Concert Hall, Chamber Orchestra: Bach: Mass in B minor, with Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, Soloists: Adele Addison, Soprano; Florence Kopleff, Contralto; John McCollum, Tenor; Donald Gramm, Bass. Charles Munch, Conductor.

Berkshire Festival

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Wednesday, 8:30. Soloists: Kroll String Quartet. Quartets in C minor, Op. 18, No. 4; in F minor, Op. 95; in C sharp minor, Op. 131, Beethoven.

Friday, 8:30. Conductor, Charles Munch. Sinfonia from "Easter" Cantata (No. 249); Suite No. 2, for Flute and Strings (soloist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer), Bach; "Orpheus," Stravinsky; "Prague" Symphony, K. 504, Mozart.

Saturday, 8:30. Conductor, Thor Johnson. Concerto Gross, Op. 6, No. 12, Handel; Symphonic Concertante with Oboe, Bassoon, Violin and Cello, Haydn; "Der Schwanendreher" (Viola Solo: Joseph De Pasquale), Hindemith; Symphony in B flat, No. 98, Haydn.

Sunday, July 10, 2:30. Conductor, Charles Munch. Bach Mass in B minor, with Harvard Glee Club; Radcliffe Choral Society and soloists, Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

N.Y. Herald Trib., Sun. July 3, 1955

Tanglewood Topics

By WALTER ALFORD

Lenox, July 2—Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who conducts the first chamber orchestra concert at Tanglewood on Friday, (July 8), interrupted his recent vacation in his native France to fly to Boston to accept the honorary degree of Doctor of Music from Boston University at its commencement exercises. "This honor has more than personal significance," the conductor said. "It marks a new link between two great institutions of this city. The orchestra is Boston's gift to the world of music.

"I was very proud to be called to its head almost seven years ago. The University is Boston's own great seat of learning. The two institutions work together for the same ends, for the glory of their city and country, and for the culture and peace of the entire world. I look forward to many years in Boston and to happy relations between the two."

* * *

Chamber Music Series

The Berkshire Festival opens officially on Wednesday, with the first of six Wednesday evening chamber music concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall. Until last summer only two or three public concerts of chamber music were given, through the generosity of the late Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge. In 1954 they were put on a paid basis, somewhat tentatively, at the low price of $2 and $3, but attendance totaled 8,750, or an average of 1,358 persons per concert, in all cases more than the 1,152-seat capacity of the intimate auditorium, for total receipts of $13,007. Through the generosity of the noted ensembles and solo artists who performed, the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood's summer music school, netted $7,850 of this amount.

With this season's Wednesday series devoted entirely to the music of Beethoven, string quartets and trios, cello, violin and piano sonatas, the festival management is happy to announce more than twice last summer's subscriptions and a healthy interest in single performances, indicating a firm establishment of this new feature at Tanglewood.

* * *

Pierre Monteux, former music director of the Boston Symphony, fellow countryman and close friend of its present conductor, Charles Munch, who shared with him the orchestra's triumphs on its first visit to Europe in 1952 and its transcontinental tour in 1953, and who has been a Tanglewood regular "guest" conductor for many summers, will be coming to the Berkshire for three concerts with the orchestra this summer instead of the two he has conducted during the past two seasons. Mr. Monteux, who quite characteristically observed his 80th birthday last April 4, not in relaxation at home nor in retirement, but conducting a concert in Boston's Symphony Hall of his former orchestra to benefit its pension fund, will be coming to Tanglewood first on Saturday, July 23, direct from Chicago's Ravinia open-air concert series, where he will have conducted the evening before.

Flies Atlantic

But space and time evidently no longer mean anything to the eminent maestro. Last Sunday evening, June 26, he was conducting another of his former orchestras, the Concertgebouw in Amsterdam. Twenty-four hours later he was leading the New York Philharmonic-Orchestra, several thousand miles away, in an all-Beethoven program at Lewisohn Stadium. He had caught a plane after the Holland concert, arrived in New York with Mrs. Monteux and the couple's inseparable poodle at 11 a. m., and was at the upper Manhattan stadium a little after noon, too late for the morning's scheduled rehearsal, but the concert went on nonetheless that evening, a masterful one according to New York Times music critic Olin Downes.

Since observing his 80th birthday, in fact, here has been the remarkable conductor's schedule: conducting the Metropolitan Opera's "Orfneo" and "Manon", two concerts with the London Phiharmonic, six opera performances with foru young American singers of "Orfneo" and "Pelleas and Melisande" in Brussels, recordings in Paris, concerts in Paris and Strasbourg of famous Monteux "firsts," four concerts for the Holland Music Festival, the above-mentioned concerts in New York and Chicago, one at Philadelphia's Robin Hood Dell, and in August he will be mostly at his own conductors' school in Hancock, Me.

* * *

Speaking of Robin Hood Dell, Rudolf Serkin gave a performance there the other night of Brahms' Concerto No. 2 before several thousand hardy concertgoers' in pouring rain. The concert was about to be cancelled, but the pianist refused to disappoint the crowd waiting to hear him play, and play he did, to an audience partly covered by umbrellas. The noted pianist is at Tanglewood twice this summer, performing the Beethoven "Emperor" Concerto, No 5, with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony on Saturday, July 30, and in a solo program of three Beethoven sonata on the chamber music series, Wednesday, Aug. 3.

Berustein Back

The first all-Mozart concert of the forthcoming bicentennial celebrations of the Salzburg composer, which officially won't commence anywhere until the fall musical season, will be given at Tanglewood on Friday, July 15, the occasion marking his first appearance on the podium with the Boston Symphony after a year's leave of absence of the popular young composer-conductor-pianist Leonard Bernstein, and a return to the Berkshires of the eminent mezzo-soprano Jennie Tourel.

Miss Tourel teamed with Mr. Bernstein in an electrifying reading of the Mahler Second Symphony two summers ago. Of particular interest to the present Mozart concert are reviews of a teaming of Miss Tourel and Bernstein in an all-Mozart program nearly eight years ago, when the conductor was head of the now defunct New York City Sumphony of City Center. Miss Tourel sang then two of the same arias she will sing at Tanglewood, "Al desio chi t'adora" the air appended to "Figaro," by the composer after its first production; and "Zeffiretti lusinghieri" from "Idomeneo."

Wrote critic Irving Kolodin: "You can run a swift review of all the ladies who have sung Mozart at the Metropolitan in the last epoch or two and find little to compare with Miss Tourel's breathlessly beautiful versions." Miss Tourel's third aria on the July 15 Tanglewood program is another from "Idomeneo."

* * *

Dean Ralph Berkowitz of the Berkshire Music Center announces there will be three lectures and forums by eminent musical personalities at Tanglewood, which he will moderate, on successive Monday evenings at 8:15 at Sedgwick Hall, Lenox, commencing July 12. These are open to students at Tanglewood, and to members of the society of Friends of the Berkshire-Music Center, whose contributions help support the school.

* * *

Student Soloists

Hugo Ross has chosen two students from the Berkshire Music Center to be soloists in the first performance at Tanglewood of Vivaldi's "Gloria," which he will conduct, with the chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, in the Theatre-Concert Hall on Saturday, July 16. They are Saramae Endich, soprano, twice previously enrolled in the orchestra's summer music school, in 1953 and 1953, and a soloist in the Festival presentations of Bach's Cantata No. 28 two summers ago; and Sadie Ruth McCollum, mezzo-soprano, who has sung in opera with the Cincinnati Music Drama Guild and also in Austria, and toured as soloist with the Robert Shaw Chorale.

As in past summers, 10 college students, four from Yale, two from Dartmouth, one each from Harvard, Williams, Antioch and Columbia, are spending the summer on the Berkshire Festival staff at Tanglewood, conducting visitors on guided tours of the grounds, assisting in ushering, at the lakefront, and driving busses between Tanglewood and the students' residences at Wheatleigh and the Lenox School.

Returning for a third summer is Nicholas Rizopoulos, 18, of Athens, Greece, majoring in political science and history at Yale, class of 1958. Allan Wardwell, 19, of New York, and Talbott W. Huey, 19, of Baltimore, are both Yale, class of 1957, both at Tanglewood for a second summer: Wardell an English and biology student, Huey specializing in anthropology.

New Guides

Newcomers to the guide staff are Ridgeway M. Banks, 18, of Cambridge, a student at Williams College; John Davenport Bassette, Jr., 22, of Mount Hermon, Captain of the ski team at Dartmouth College; John Allen Burgess, 20, of Pleasant Ridge, Mich., a second year student of literature and history at Antioch College; Roger W. Cogswell 19, of Weston, an English junior at Yale; Frederick Lewis Edelman, 21, of Brooklyn, N. Y., an A. B. from Princeton 1954, now attending Columbia University medical school; John D. Martz II, 21, of Bethesda, Md., who graduated from Harvard this spring in international affairs and U. S. history; and Donald C. Smith, 20, of Dartmouth College and Lebanon, N. H., who will graduate next year in music and economics.

Besides their college interests, the Tanglewood guides are a talented lot. Burgess has held down a variety of jobs from waiter to construction laborer and typist. Cogswell has been a camp counsellor. Edelman for the past four summers was a seaman on Norwegian and Swedish freighters. Martz was a typist with the Department of the Army in Washington. Wardwell has worked in Texas oil fields. Smith has been a church organist and choir director for five years and toured with the Dartmouth Glee Club.

* * *

Eminent violinist Jascha Heifetz who established in 1949 a scholarship awarded annually to the outstanding violinist of the session of the Berkshire Music Center, has written to Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Boston Symphony's summer music school that commencing with 1955 the yearly scholarship will be increased from $250 to $350.

Eagle — Tuesday July 5, 1955

Beethoven's W[illegible]ing To Music Love[illegible]unch

TANGLEWOOD — In welcoming 405 students to a summer of musical study at Tanglewood Sunday, Charles Munch, director of the Berkshire Music Center, defended his choice of Beethoven as the principal composer of the 1955 Festival.

Speaking at the opening exercises in the Theater Concert Hall, Mr. Munch explained to "those of you who may perhaps be surprised and may even reproach us for devoting a large part of the Festival concerts to the music of "Beethoven," his reasons for the programming.

"If this music, written 150 years ago, does not always seem immediate to the professional, the musician of [illegible]," he declared, "it has [illegible] to fascinate the music lovers, the general public, the me[illegible]time.

"What is the reason? Why does the public always come back to listen to the Eroica—or the Eighth Symphony? Simply because music lovers know that after having heard this music, they will not leave the hall without having gained something. They will not leave the hall without taking away something enriching, something heart warming.

This music, which is not sensual, not abstract, not dramatic in the sense of Wagner, not romantic in the sense of Schumann, not sentimental not pathetic—is all of them at once. And that is the reason why we must always live with it."

Tanglewood Opening

Special to the Herald Tribune

NY Herald Tribune - 7/6/55

LENOX, Mass., July 5.—The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood begins at 8:30 p. m. tomorrow, when the Kroll Quartet will play three quartets of Beethoven. This is the first of the festival's six Wednesday night chamber music concerts for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center's Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund. A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony musicians will play under the direction of Charles Munch and guest conductors on the next two Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons, and the entire Boston Symphony will play on the Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays from July 22 through Aug. 14.

CHAMBER MUSIC EVENT TONIGHT AT TANGLEWOOD

Sfield Union 7/6/55

Popular Wednesday Evening Concert to Open Festival Season

The opening concert of the 1955 Berkshire Festival will be given tonight in the famed Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8.30, when the Kroll String Quartet will play three quartets by Beethoven. During the course of the six-week Festival most of the principal works of Beethoven will be performed, including all nine symphonies, three concertos, Act II of the opera "Fidelio" in concert form, the "Missa Solemnis," and the five cello sonatas.

Started Last Season

Inaugurated last season, the Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts have a low admission charge and are designed to augment the three performances which in former years were donated annually by the late Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge for the benefit of the Berkshire Music enter. Last season 8750 attended the six concerts, an average of 1358 per concert, or well over the 1200 seating capacity, and the total receipts were $14,007. From this sum the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center benefitted by a total of $7850.

At tonight's concert the Kroll String Quartet, William Kroll and Louis Graeler, violins; David Mankovitz, viola; Avron Twerdowsky, cello, will play one quartet from each of Beethoven's three big periods: the Quartet No. 4 in C Minor (Early), the "Serioso" Quartet in F Minor, Opus 95 (Middle) and the great C Sharp Minor, Opus 131 (Late).

Charles Munch, Music Director for the past six years of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducts concerts by the symphony at the annual Berkshire Festival, in the hills of Western Massachusetts, during the six-week season July 6 - August 14.

Mr. Munch is also Director of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival, now in its thirteenth season.

Tickets For Tanglewood Programs In Great Demand

Subscriptions for the 1955 Berkshire Festival series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., for concerts held on four Friday evenings, July 22—August 12; four Saturday evenings, July 23—August 13; and four Sunday afternoons, July 24—August 14 in the huge Music Shed, have surpassed those of the summer of 1954, Manager Thomas D. Perry, Jr. announces. The six week festival of 1954 saw an all-time record attendance of 135,775 persons.

All remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the box office, open Monday through Saturday from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p. m. The boxoffice will also be open on Sundays, commencing July 3, with the start of the 13th season of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with the Festival concerts. Mail orders for single concerts are also filled on receipt: checks and money orders should be payable to the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Inc. and accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope for return of tickets. Telephone orders are accepted: phone Lenox, Mass. 600.

1955's pattern of Shed concerts by the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra which Music Director Charles Munch conducts, with Pierre Monteux and Leonard Bernstein as guest conductors, calls for four weekends, featuring much of Beethoven's music, including all nine symphonies, the second act of "Fidelio", the "Missa Solemnis", the violin concerto, two piano concertos, and three overtures.

For detailed Berkshire Festival programs, for a complete list of the summer's more than 25 student concerts to which the public is invited by making a voluntary contribution to the society of Friends of the music school, and for price information, write the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

[120]

Tanglewood Opens for Season

Manos

In the formal gardens at Tanglewood following opening [illegible] Sunday of the 13th summer season of the Berkshire Music Center are, left to right, Miss Marcia Henderson of Williamstown, who starred in "The Time of the Cuckoo," opening play at Adams Memorial Theater there; Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Dwight of Stockbridge; and William J. Cox, secretary of Phillips-Exeter Academy and chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. Mr. Dwight is a member of the Tanglewood Advisory Committee. More than 400 students study there.

Manos

